Students May Attend Council

The student body may be represented at the Wednesday meeting of the University Council, when reports of three groups on the future of intercollegiate athletics will be discussed.

Ralph W. Ruffner, vice president of student affairs, said Monday that requests from groups who wish to attend the meeting are to be submitted through W. Jack Moulton, dean of students.

Moulton is then to refer the requests to Ruffner and the University Council members.

Ray Lenzi, student body president, and Steve Annonaco, student body vice president, both have submitted their requests.

The University Council is composed of administrators and faculty, and student council representatives who are the highest advisory body to the president of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Obscene Books, Movies Common In Carbondale

By George M. Kullenberg

Carbondale is a wide-open city when it comes to pornographic literature and motion pictures.

Books and magazines which have been banned in other communities can be found in Carbondale stores. Movies that have been prohibited or seized elsewhere are shown at theaters here, where they want things "cleaned up."

There is presently no city ordinance or "obscenity scene" or "pornographic" literature and movies, and even in those areas where city officials feel it would be worthwhile, there is no support.

"There's a lot of smut literature and films in Carbondale," said Richard Wilhelmy, public safety director, "but I'm not about to act as a one-man censor."

"Court decisions have pretty much established the piece of literature or a movie must be against the moral code of the community before it can be banned," Wilhelmy said.

"I mean that for a piece of literature or film to be considered "obscene" by the courts, it must be shown, by public protest, to be offensive to the morality of the community," he explained.

According to Wilhelmy, it takes a dedicated group, such as a church organization, and in the case of literature or film, to rid a city of pornographic literature and motion pictures. He said he knows of several cases where communities have succeeded in their "clean up" campaigns.

Any local group that does attempt to take on a "clean up" project will probably have an ambitious job ahead of it. Wilhelmy reported that certain area stores are well-stocked with a variety of "smut" books, many dealing with lesbianism, homosexual activities, and other sexual deviances, and the "nudie" magazines which can be purchased by just about anyone, including youngsters.

The "aim" shows at local theaters have featured pictures, like "I, A Woman," which was not shown in Carbondale, as well.

Mayor David Keene said he is "appalled" by the kinds of literature and films found in Carbondale, but agreed with Wilhelmy that there is no "public concern" and requires "public action."

Gus says Carbondale's wheel tax should be profitable for all the "wheels" on campus.

Carbondale's Wheel Tax Applies To Students Living Within City

About 1,792 wheel tax decals for passenger cars have been sold in Carbondale so far this year, Mrs. Elizabeth Leighty, city clerk, said. Accrading to the clerk, everyone who lives within the Carbondale city limits must purchase and display a decal if his car is registered with the state of Illinois.

Students living outside of the city or at Southern Hills Apartments do not have to pay the wheel tax, she said.

Seyder Herrin, Jr., assistant to the city manager, said a fine of $1 per month for failure to purchase the decal before the deadline of Feb. 15 will be enforced.

After Feb. 15, a penalty goes into effect and a $1 is added each month until September; a motorist might be fined as much as $100, Herrin added.

The sticker applies to residents and parts of the University within the city's limits, Herrin said. The Wheel Tax Ordinance, which requires that the decal be placed in the lower right corner of the front window of the vehicle, may still apply to some SIU students and faculty members, Herrin added.

Students who aren't registered voters, have no ties with other cities, and don't have current valid vehicle stickers from another city, will have to purchase a wheel tax decal, Herrin said.

Some motorists who have University stickers may not have to buy a wheel tax sticker, Herrin said. "Motorists with contractor stickers will not be questioned. However, some motorists who have blue or silver decals may have to purchase a wheel tax sticker. It depends on their age or where they reside," Herrin explained.

The price of a wheel sticker is $6 for autos and trucks, and $2 per wheel for motorcycles. Motorists who purchased stickers in 1967 will not have to pay the full price, Herrin said. "They will be credited for a 1/3 on the amount of last year's decals, which aren't due to expire until May 1, 1968."

President Returns

SIU President Delyte W. Morris has returned from a three-month trip to Southern's training teams abroad impressed with "the different kind of recognition and status" the University has acquired since launching Asian educational missions.

Looking tired and nursing cold at a press conference Monday, Morris said there has been no word from SIU staff members in Vietnam, "I would guess that they are being protected, but then again I would not expect to hear from them unless their situation was critical."

Any decision to pull out the SIU teams at Saigon, Ban Me Thuot, Qui Nhon and Vinh Long would come on government advice, Morris said.

SIU operates the missions under contract to the Agency for International Development (AID). In Vietnam, SIU staff members work with grade school teachers and teacher-training institutions.

Morris praised the dedication of SIU staff members in Vietnam and said Vietnamese educators are accepting the American teachers well. "Our mission in Vietnam has been very effective, and a continuing stream of Vietnamese teachers in our school comes back and is strongly influencing the educational system here," Morris said.

Morris reported that Ellisworth Bunker, U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, is well aware of SIU's presence and the importance of the mission.

Morris also visited educational missions in Nepal and Afghanistan, where University staff members operate technical institutions.

He said SIU's membership in the International Association of Universities, gained only a few years ago, is proving to be increasingly valuable.

He compared the need for technicians in Nepal and Afghanistan to the need in southern Illinois before the Vocational Technical Institute began operation down there. A lack of people to maintain and operate the machine in the technical implementation of society.

Morris held preliminary talks on the possibility of establishing faculty exchanges with universities in New Zealand and Australia. He also visited with alumni and their parents in seven countries.

No Student Senate Deficit
Budget Shows $8,025 Balance

The Student Senate currently has a balance of more than $8,000, according to Student Body President Ray Lenzi. Earlier in the year, a student newspaper story had reported that the Senate showed a budget deficit of $3,000. Although the figures used to arrive at the deficit conclusion were correct, they were misinterpreted, Lenzi said.

Actually, Lenzi said, the Senate has $8,025 available which has not been expended or committed. The 1967-68 budget allocations for Student Government, which comes from the Student Activity Fee paid by all undergraduates, was $35,797. Of this total, $27,772 has been expended.

Of the remaining funds $11,513 has been committed to specific budgetary items such as Model U.N., wages for student government personnel, student government newsletter and information pamphlets, travel funds for organizations and sports clubs and wages for the editors of the student newspaper.

This leaves $8,025 unexpended and uncommitted. The error in reporting the deficit arose from subtracting funds committed from funds available.

Students who will attend New Format Due for Library List

The target date for the appearance of the new format of Morris Library's "Current Periodicals List" is the end of February, according to Sydney E. Matthews, assistant director of Morris Library.

Some 7,200 titles will be listed in a 19-ring, hard cover looseleaf binder. Printing in a smaller type on both sides of the pages will enable the reduction of pages from 141 to about 40, Matthews said.

The ring binder will enable the addition of quarterly supplements, he said. Soft cover editions will be available for purchase in the University Book Store.

A research paper written by three SIU chemistry graduates and associate professor Boris Musulin will be presented April 7 at the American Chemical Society meeting in San Francisco.

The report is one of a series of papers originating from investigations of the detailed nature of the form of nitrates-paraffines in solution, conducted in the SIU chemistry department by Musulin’s research group.

The authors with Musulin are Jerry Drennan, Carbondale; John Wettaw, Eldorado; and Eugene McNairy, Nokomis. After earning a bachelor’s degree from SIU, Drennan received a master’s degree at the University of Wisconsin and is now in the U.S. Air Force. Wettaw won a Ph. Good To Be Dove

It's good to be a dove—at least over the past few weeks.

Hawks have found it rather frustrating—losing a ship, an embassy, having to bomb our own airfields.

The Illinois patriarch, Senator Dirksen, says the Saigon attacks were acts of desperation on the part of the Viet Cong. If they get much more desperate, we may have to recapture Hawaii.

It all seems to stretch the limits of our sense of the ridiculous.

But the crowning touch is the straight-faced assertions of the administration to the effect that we are supporting a popular government in South Vietnam.

Could the Viet Cong really move with such ease and impunity throughout the entire country if they did not have the support of vast numbers of the population?

Significantly, even the South Vietnamese army failed to respond to our pleas for assistance in recapturing the American embassy.

One of the common reasons for staying in Vietnam is that, if we pull out, we will lose face before the world.

And so we will stay in Vietnam—and look ridiculous.

Pravda's Concern

For Justice

It's hardly news that the Soviet government and its publications are hypocritical. Still, even Pravda now and then dozes itself in this line to the point where it's worthy of remark, and it set a record of sorts last week.

The Soviet Communist party organ piously denounced the indictment of Dr. Benjamin Spock and others by a United States grand jury on charges of encouraging resistance to the draft; it called the indictment a "disgraceful frameup" of people who "raised their voices in defense of their people's honor and conscience.

Pravda, of course, had had no criticism at all of the recent Moscow trial of four young intellectuals who were sentenced to terms up to 7 years, although the trial was so flagrantly rigged that it disgusted even the most faithful communist-Liners abroad and was denounced by some soviet notables at the risk of their own freedom.

The four were sentenced for contributing to an underground magazine which had, among other things, criticized the railroad operation of two soviet novelists by another official kangaroo court.

Next to Pravda's concern for American freedoms, a crocodile's tears looks mighty convincing.

Members of the University Community are invited to participate with members of the news staff in contributing items for this page with the understanding that acceptance for publication will depend upon the limitations of space and the apparent timeliness and relevance of the material. Letters must be typed, preferably typewritten, and should be no longer than 250 words. Unfounded Beliefs

To the Daily Egyptian:

In any serious learning institution such as SIU, naivete must be exposed in the interest of truth. Assuming this, we feel it is necessary to break the bubble of unfounded beliefs expressed in Donald G. Edberg's letter of Jan. 31.

As stated in his letter, he thinks that "interests outside the university are diluting education with distractions inhibiting the pursuit of truth and knowledge. Under these distractions could be included use of automobiles, housing regulations, and other small disputes all of which are in no way incumbent upon learning."

He says student rights revolve around among several or many human beings. There can be no such thing as a "collective interest of society" since actions originate only from entities and "society" is not an entity, but an abstraction.

Only individual men have interests, and only if all men in a group had the same interest would "collective interest" have any meaning. If such "collective interest" were to occur, there would be no necessity to subordinate the interest of the individual to the "collective interest," since they would be equivalent.

There is no point in dealing with the elements of determinism in the letter of these three men since determinism is a long past refuted and destined philosophical position and the suggestion in their last paragraph that the real justification for the draft is expediency should speak for itself.

Human rights are a basic requirement for non-cannibalistic group existence and they do not depend on the group for their validity; the group depends on them for its continued existence. Whether my right to life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness is violated by the Mafia or the U.S. Congress, it is what they assert is "the public interest." Makes no difference; the principle is the same. Proper government exists to protect rights, not to violate them.

Nature of Human Rights Twisted

To the Daily Egyptian:

The "Appeal to Authority" is a well-established fallacy of rationality, whether the authority to whom you appeal is Aristotle or Lyndon B. Johnson.

Therefore, I fail to see why Sfinouvides, Syngellas, or Kezizis should have any reason to expect their assertions concerning the nature and origin of human rights to be accepted by thinking men.

A "group" or "society" is simply a label applied to a conceptual abstraction which refers to some form of association existing among several or many human beings.

There can be no such thing as a "collective interest of society" since actions originate only from entities and "society" is not an entity, but an abstraction.

Lack of Sportsmanship

To the Daily Egyptian:

Spectators at last Wednesday night's basketball game witnessed two rare and rather unpleasant incidents—a Saluki home-court defeat and the pep band's consistent lack of sportsmanship.

Consideration for the visiting team and the small group of fans that accompanied the players was nil.

There was a partial drowning out of the opposing players' introductions and later their cheers. There was a musical hint that the Saluki band and its roosters, were Mickey Mouse, and several tuba notes questioned the referee's decision. These all can be dismissed as exces sive school spirit.

However, the intentional mufiling of a horn to destroy the concentration of an opposing player at the free-throw line cannot be excused.

This conduct is highly unperso nal like and shows the visiting team's lack of respect for the opposing team's fans to be an important and disturbing concern.

China's Cultural Revolution

Some Had to Win—Some Had to Fall

By Branko Bogunovic

The Associated Press

Perhaps one of the most far-reaching results of China’s Cultural Revolution, so far as the ordinary Chinese were concerned, was the collapse of many myths and taboos.

The Cultural Revolution brought into the light many internal party manifesta tions and processes which for decades had been taboo for discussion. What of the thousands of decades had been regarded as the deepest party and state secrets, however, remained, as we might expect, in Red Guard posters on the walls of Peking, virtually unaltered. Not so long ago, Premier Chou En-lai had the Red Guards over the coals for “fighting a war,” by means of posters and small Red Guard newspapers, and, in the name of revolution, violating fundamental concepts of state secrets. This, Chou had pointed out, in the last analysis was serving the enemy.

But the important thing was that the Cultural Revolution had opened many important valves which until then had been sealed tightly. Many remain open.

The earliest shocks of the Cultural Revolution came with accusations against a long array of the most outstanding leaders of the Communist party who supposedly were no more than “hangers-on” all along with Mao Tse-tung.

Perhaps it meant little to people outside China to mention such names as Teng Hsiao-ping, Peng Chen, Ho Lung, Lu Tingyi, Lo Ju-ching, Po I-po, Yang Shan-kun, Li Ching-chuan, Yao Chou, Liu Lan-tao and dozens and dozens of others. I have purposely not included Liu Shao-chi because it is assumed that since he is president of the People’s Republic, his name is known around the world.

About the Author

Branko Bogunovic is a correspondent for the Yugoslav News Agency Tanjug, and thus presents a point of view of an East European official. That was a total of seven years inside China, “the longest post office time.” What of the period which included the time when Cultural Revolution violence was at its peak. He presents here an analysis, a philosophical review of what the upheaval may mean to the Chinese “man-in-the-street,” and what it can mean to the hero-figures of these Communist revolution itself.

But to China itself, to the 20 million members of the Communist party, to millions of other activists, and to the more than 700 million people, these names mean very much. They are personages who have “always” stood for power. “Always” enjoyed the highest honors and confidence.

To give Chou his stature almost overnight to the pillar of shame as opponent of Mao, the party and socialism could not have come to the man in the street other than as a deep shock. Only later did he begin to ask himself how such a sort of thing could have come about.

In the beginning, the ordinary man was unable to find his way about. Even today, it is not all clear to him. Was it really true that Liu Shao-chi had joined the Chinese Communist party 46 years ago with intention of restoring capitalism once the party came to power? Did Peng Chen pose as anti-revisionist No. 1, so as to hatch a plot against Mao Tse-tung with greater ease?

But what must have impressed him most at the beginning was the discovery that there was no sacrosanct authorities who were sacrosanct forever. The myths and illusions that were built up could not survive, because in the split and in the clashes between yesterday’s toppleable imposers, someone had to win and someone had to fall.

This is the most significant result of the Cultural Revolution. Whether or not even the great controversy will ever emerge from the eyes of the masses he will no longer be adorned with a halo of eternal sacrosanctancy and divinity.

Anyone who was in Peking when it was besieged by hundreds of thousands and even millions of young people from the most distant provinces could not help but observe that some really revolutionary changes were taking place among them.

In the first place these were changes, perhaps even explosions in miniature, in the moods and conceptions of hundreds of thousands of young people who until then had regarded their Szechuan, Yunnan, Fukien, Sinkiang, or any other of the distant provinces as the beginning and the end of the world.

In Peking they discovered quite different norms, habits, outlooks, hopes, castes and foreigners with their wonders, women wearing nylon stockings and high-heeled shoes, and other things, all as a result of keeping with their preconceptions. Perhaps the great internal party fear was that it was possible to shout “down with the government,” or to plaster the walls with thousands of cartoons deriding the president of the Republic! This must have been like discovering new worlds.

To many of these young people, it was perhaps not of first-rate importance whether every thing was true that was written against one high-placed official or in favor of another.

Until yesterday Liu Shao-chi, Teng Hsiao-ping, Peng Chen and dozens of others were what Mao Tse-tung, Lin Piao or Chou En-lai are today. Almost overnight, first the young people were said that Liu and company were not as they had been presented. The millions were spurred not only to suspect but openly to deny and tear down these values and authorities.

That was a total of seven years inside China, “the longest post office time.” What of the period which included the time when Cultural Revolution violence was at its peak. He presents here an analysis, a philosophical review of what the upheaval may mean to the Chinese “man-in-the-street,” and what it can mean to the hero-figures of these Communist revolution itself.

But to China itself, to the 20 million members of the Communist party, to millions of other activists, and to the more than 700 million people, these names mean very much. They are personages who have “always” stood for power. “Always” enjoyed the highest honors and confidence.

To give Chou his stature almost overnight to the pillar of shame as opponent of Mao, the party and socialism could not have come to the man in the street other than as a deep shock. Only later did he begin to ask himself how such a sort of thing could have come about.

In the beginning, the ordinary man was unable to find his way about. Even today, it is not all clear to him. Was it really true that Liu Shao-chi had joined the Chinese Communist party 46 years ago with intention of restoring capitalism once the party came to power? Did Peng Chen pose as anti-revisionist No. 1, so as to hatch a plot against Mao Tse-tung with greater ease?

But what must have impressed him most at the beginning was the discovery that there was no sacrosanct authorities who were sacrosanct forever. The myths and illusions that were built up could not survive, because in the split and in the clashes between yesterday’s toppleable imposers, someone had to win and someone had to fall.

This is the most significant result of the Cultural Revolution. Whether or not even the great controversy will ever emerge from the eyes of the masses he will no longer be adorned with a halo of eternal sacrosanctancy and divinity.

Anyone who was in Peking when it was besieged by hundreds of thousands and even millions of young people from the most distant provinces could not help but observe that some really revolutionar

New Library Fines in Effect

It is too early to know whether the library's new policy on reserve book fines has had its intended effect, said Robert Keel, circulation librarian at Morris Library.

According to Keel, a policy, started last week, has raised reserve book fines to 50 cents for the first hour overdue and 25 cents for each additional hour. The old rate was 25 cents for the first hour and 15 cents for each additional hour.

Keel said the new policy was designed to encourage students to return reserve books on time so the materials will be more readily accessible to all who need them.

Keel said the policy was started because students would check out reserve books just prior to tests, keep the books until they finished, and then pay the small fine causing those who could not get the books to be deprived of the information. Keel said the new fines "should hit where it will hurt the most—in the pocketbook."

"Since mid-terms are over now," said Keel, "we probably won't be able to determine the policy's effectiveness until finals week. If at that time we find that the policy does not have the desired effect, we'll try something else."

Rucker to Discuss

Coming Publication

Bryce W. Rucker, professor of journalism at SIU, will discuss his book, "The First Freedom," which examines the news media monopoly, with Edward C. Lambert on the television program Missouri Forum, February 9 on station KDMU-TV, Columbia, Mo. A former newspaperman and radio broadcaster, Rucker has degrees from the University of Kentucky and Wisconsin, and from Southern Illinois University where, during his doctoral studies, he became interested in legal matters concerning the press.

In 1967, the Department of Justice and the U.S. Senate subcommittee on antitrust and monopoly requested his opinions on matters before them. Learning of Rucker's interest in monopoly and chain trends, lawyer-author Morris Ernst asked him to update the 1946 edition of Ernst's book, "The First Freedom."

To cover all current aspects of communications and their impact on the press and its audience, Rucker wrote an entirely new volume, utilizing both Congressional and trade reports.

The book, published by SIU Press, is the first in a series edited by Howard R. Long, chairman of the SIU journalism department, a Missouri graduate and former member of the University of Missouri journalism department.

Johnson Proposes Travel Tax

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Johnson administration proposed Monday a graduated travel tax with tax exemptions on travel expenses of $7 a day outside the Western Hemisphere and a $5 per cent levy on overseas plane and ship tickets.

The new proposal would replace the current system of tax exemp­tions for frequent travelers. It would set up a graduated federal travel tax with tax exemp­tions for business, education and government travel.

President Johnson announced the new proposal in a message to Congress. He said the new tax would save $1.75 billion a travel spending, on average, and $4 billion when all business and pleasure travel is considered.

The President's annual educational message to Congress placed major emphasis on financial aid for students in higher education and called for expenditures for education at all levels and guaranteed loans for individuals remain­ing in this country and any tax due would be paid at that time. This return would be processed also with a person's regular income tax return for any audit initiated by IRS.

Aid for Students, Building Cuts Urged in Education Message

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson proposed Monday increased federal assistance for college and university students and recommended a sharp cut in construction aid for institutions of higher learning.

The President's annual educational message to Congress placed major emphasis on financial aid for students in higher education and called for appro­priations for this purpose of $1.75 million for fiscal year 1969. That's an increase of $53 million over the present year.

At the same time, $375 million would be cut from higher-education construction aid.

Johnson proposed a modest increase in federal spending for education at all levels and his message basically reflects a reshuffling of priorities, for example federal outlays for the new fiscal year begin­ning next July will total about 13 per cent of the total cost of education in this country. This is approximately the same as the present level of federal spending for educa­tion.

Officials emphasized that while the new education message was submitted within the framework of a tight overall budget, all major programs would be cut back.

Chicago Students Wounded

In High School Violence

CHICAGO (AP)—Two pupils were wounded by shotgun blasts Friday at Dunbar senior high school and were evaluated to a closed state at the hospital.

Police said the shooting at the Bowser High School on the South Side was the culmina­tion of a dispute between two groups known as the Egyptian Lords and the Dirty Nose Gangs.

Humphrey Moore, 16, was struck in the back by 18 shotgun pellets and Ernestine Anderson, 16, was shot beside him, was wounded in the ankle. Moore was report­ed in fair condition in a hospital.

Several youths were taken to a police station for ques­tioning.

Authorities said the demonstra­tion at the Dunbar Vocational High School on the South Side was in protest a­gainst removal of a teacher and also against the shop­ly the reports that some vocational courses would be dropped.

Principal Albert W. Briggs of Dunbar told the demonstra­tors over the school loud speaker system that the teach­er was not fired but had been transferred to another school. He also denied that the school's vocational courses would be cut back.

Automation Improves University Telephones

By Greg Stannar

The days of the frantic telephone operator trying to put the right plugs in the proper holes are gone, at least at SIU, according to Carlton F. Rasche, director of Auxiliary and Foreign Duty.

The disappearance of this prototype operator symbolizes the automation that has gone into the more than 4,000-unit telephone system on campus.

The main switchboard, located in University Center, still uses one or two operators 24 hours a day, but this number has decreased considerably from 10 years ago, despite the University's growth.

Girls' Dorm Manager Creates Antique Dolls

By Jo-An Leber

Managing a girls' dorm is a big job—but it's only part of a busy day for Mrs. Kidd, a short, energetic blonde.

Mrs. Kidd's theory of life is "to keep busy," According to her, "There's no excuse for anyone being idle." To keep herself busy, Mrs. Kidd paints, sews, and makes dolls, in addition to managing Egyptian Sands North, an off-campus dorm. She serves as public director for Carbondale Arts and Crafts and has made several TV appearances in connection with these projects.

Mrs. Kidd's current project is the production of corn-cob dolls which she refers to affectionately as "Granny." She is impressed by the old way of life and has a particular fascination for books. By reading antique magazines—she used to own an antique shop—her style of work. The patterns for the workmanship of the dolls is that of the old time, Mrs. Kidd's own design. It is a tedious and time-consuming hobby. Due to the varying sizes and shapes of the cobs, each doll becomes a "personality," and costumes must be made by one woman. Her main problem is finding corn cobs. Most of the cobs are obtained from people who have heard about or seen the dolls and just want to help. Manager of the Sandle for the past two years, Mrs. Kidd enjoys her job and her "family." "You just feel younger when you're with younger people," she said.
Timid Spider Proves Nasty If Threatened

The brown recluse spider does inflict poisonous bites yet it is seldom considered dangerous, according to Joseph A. Beatty, instructor of Zoology, Illinois Natural History Survey.

Survey scientists have identified the little-known poisonous spider in 10 counties in southern Illinois, in five counties in the east-central part of the state and one county in the west-central section of the state as well as in Cook County in the northeast.

Beatty said the spider is not much more abundant than in previous years, but people are just beginning to realize the spider is in this part of the state.

The spider, inflicting bites resulting in larger and slow-to-heal wounds, has been found at institutions in Missourr and Arkansas as well as schools in the Central part of Illinois and has lead to the fear of a serious spider menace.

The brown recluse, according to Beatty, is quiet, timid and avoids light. It prefers to hide in dark places such as attics, closets, storerooms, barns, abandoned buildings and houses.

The spider is apt to bite one only when it is disturbed and feels threatened. This occurs when it is disturbed and comes in contact with humans. The spider may be particularly objectionable when it is hiding in clothing or bedding and is squeezed hard.

The spider is also found outdoors at the bases of rock ledges in parks such as at Giant City and Pine Hills.

Beatty described the spider as being of a brownish-red color and about 3/8 to 1 inch long, with long slender brown legs that appear to be reddish at the ends, a characteristic distinguishing feature being a dark, violin-like mark extending part way down the back.

Beatty said he knew of only one death due to a brown recluse bite and that the victim suffered from complications.

Both the Jackson County Health Department and the University Health Service said they have had no reports involving a brown recluse bite.

The dance group, under the direction of W. Grant Gray, assistant professor in the Department of Theater, will present a three-part performance. The entire production is directed by Gray and employs modern innovations in staging and music.

Part one of the performance is entitled "Brute-as in 'A'" and depicts how life changes abruptly with no warning or reason, but with logic or absurdity. Part two is divided into three scenes dealing with life's abstractions, predictions, dilemmas and enigmas.

The fourth and final scene of part three of the production, entitled "Finnale—Tw68—An American," presents a montage of contemporary events and things that are close and recognizable to every American, according to Gray.

The company of 30 dancers and additional stage managers and assistants is composed of interested students on campus, Gray explained that the group, which was organized last quarter, does not require that participants have majors in the Departments of Theater or Physical Education.

Physicist Says Obscure Dentist Was Original Inventor of Radio

An SIU physicist has declared that 19th century American dentist Malcom Loomis was the rightful discoverer of radio and that scientists should urge "the long past due recognition to which he is justly entitled."

Speaking at the annual meeting of the American Association of Physics Teachers, Otto B. Young said ample evidence exists that Malcom Loomis, a Washington, D.C., dentist, sent the first wireless signals before Guglielmo Marconi was born. Loomis demonstrated two-way aerial communication in October, 1886, Young said. Marconi has been credited with the invention in 1895.

Young, who has been campaigning for years in behalf of Loomis, said the first wireless communications feat took place between two Virginia Blue Ridge Mountain peaks. Loomis, he said, sent upkites carrying wires of copper gauge, grounded by trailing wires through a key to a coil placed in wet earth 600 feet below. A galvanometer—a simple instrument which responds to electric current passing through it—alleged was wirelessly energized by each circuit on the peaks 20 miles apart.

When one key was open, electricity in the atmosphere charged the kite wire. When it was closed, the system was discharged and an electromagnetic—radio—wave was sent from one peak to the other.

Loomis wrote in his journal, Young said, that the signals deflected the galvanometer needle "with more the vigor and precision as if it had been attached to an ordinary battery."

"There is no question that Loomis was the original discoverer of radio," Young declared, "and the dictionary definition of the word, was the 'inventor' of radio. Marconi did more than any other person to develop it and deserves his place in history as the 'inventor,' not the developer, of his evidence, and last year some U.S. encyclopedias and almanacs for the first time credited Loomis along with Marconi as radio's inventor."

Keene's 22-Point Output Surprises All But Coach

By Dave Palermo

SIU Coach Jack Harmann may have been the only one in the SIU Arena who wasn't surprised Saturday night when Howard Keene hit 22 of the 28 points against Kansas State. Harmann said Keene hit his own personal record (23) all by himself. "Howard's always been a good shooter," said Harmann. "In fact both our centers (Keene and Bruce Burchko) are good shooters from out there. But just that-Burchko was saving a little trouble and when I brought in Keene he found the range."

"As everyone knew our strategy was to try and move the big guy (Kansas State's 7-1 center Nick Pino) out from underneath and Keene did the job well."

"When a kid gets in the game and begins playing well, you let him lose and that's what we did with Keene," added Harmann.

Keene, who hails from Georgia, went into Saturday's action in season total of 32 points, and averaging only 2.9 per game. But Saturday night was a different story.

Burdened with the responsibility of guarding the giant Pino, Keene moved out to the key and began bombing away with the field basket.

After connecting from the outside Pino went out after the hot-shooting Keene only to be left flat-footed on several occasions.

Of his 22 points, 16 came in the second half when the going got tough.

The Wildcats, leading 33-32 at the half, stretched the lead to seven, 41-34, when Keene connected for two baskets to narrow the margin to three, 41-38.

The lead was widened to nine with 7:12 remaining in the game when the Salukis outscored the visitors 11-2 with six of the points attributed to Keene, and the game was tied 59-59, with a little over four minutes to go.

Kansas State came back and, after a basket by reserve center Rock Becker tied the score once more at 61-64, scored six straight points and won the contest 68-67.

Will Keene be in the starting lineup when the Salukis meet Duke at Madison Square Garden? Saturday night? "We'll have to see how things are working out in practice," said Harmann. "The starting lineup isn't that important. Both Burchko and Keene will see a lot of action."

Frazier Jump Shot Ends Losing Spree

Walt Frazier connected on a 15-foot jump shot with 35 seconds remaining Sunday afternoon to give New York a 110-108 win over Boston in the National Basketball Association.

The climactic basket ended a 25-game losing streak for the Knicks and their fans, who had spanned a six-year period dating back to the 1962-63 season.

The ex-SIU star scored a total of 27 points, 16 in the second half, while leading both teams in scoring. His teammate, Walt Bellamy, followed closely behind with 26.

With the Knicks trailing by eight points early in the fourth period, rookie Billy Bradley came in and sank three key baskets to put his team on top for the first time, 98-97.

The Knicks built their advantage to 102-99, but the Celtics bounced back to regain the lead, 105-102.

With the game knotted up at 107-107, Frazier hit the deciding basket with 35 seconds showing. On the next trip downcourt, he batted a pass away from Celtics play-coach Bill Russell to prevent a return basket.

New York is currently in fifth place in the Eastern Division of the NBA. The Knicks have 28 while losing 31 and are 14-1/2 games out of first place.
