Officials seek details on spring plan

By Todd Schlender
General Assignment Writer

The University administration is taking steps to find out more about plans for a new spring event.

SIUC President John C. Guyon said he has not received any word from Student Programming Council about the weeklong series of non-alcoholic events scheduled to run April 23 to May 2.

"Vice president [for Student Affairs Harvey] Welch is looking into the event and plans to contact SPC directly," Guyon said.

Welch was not available for comment, but the Student Affairs office said a meeting is planned for the near future. Although there has been some initial discussion between SPC and Student Affairs, there has been no official proposal submitted.

The SPC plans include campus concerts with local bands during the days and evening events such as a hypnotist act, a comedian, a lecturer and a program geared for families. The activities are scheduled around non-SPC events such as the Southern Illinois Airport air show and the annual cardboard boat regatta.

Brad Cole, Undergraduate Student Government president, also expects to be informed of SPC's plans.

"After last year, we sent paperwork to SPC requesting that we be informed of any decision regarding future spring events," Cole said.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said after SPC voted last year to end

Springfest it agreed to inform and involve Carbondale city officials and police in any plans for future events.

Both Doherty and Chief of Police Don Strom said Tuesday they had not received yet any word from SPC.

Doherty said he and his staff have been discussing the information but he had not been officially notified by the University of any definite plans.

Edgar's pension relief short of needed funds

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

Gov. Jim Edgar's issue of $51.5 million to the state retirement fund may only be a slow half step toward the door of pension relief, a retirement official said.

Dennis Spice, executive director of the State University Retirement System, said the money issued basically is a gesture from Edgar to show he is committed to the underfunding liability situation for which the state has been criticized.

"We're moving towards a door, but we're taking half steps and we're never going to get there," he said. "It's a nice gesture, but it's basically an action just to show that he's doing something."

The $51.5 million issued by Edgar does not come close to the money needed to help out the five state pension systems. The State University Retirement System is not the only system faced with underfunded liability, Spice said.

Roger Nohl, budget analyst for the bureau of the budget, said an audit report stated the total underfunded liability of all five pension systems—the State University Retirement System, the State University Retirement System, the State Employee Retirement System, the General Assembly Retirement System and the Judges Retirement System—is $12.9 billion.

State Comptroller Dawn Clark Netchs said in a statement Jan 11, that only Massachusetts, Michigan and Louisiana have greater pension deficits than Illinois.

"While it is understandable during the current fiscal and budget crisis to want to want to cut pension funding, we must remember it was the fiscal crisis in 1982 that led to cuts in pension contributions, starting us down the road to the severe funding shortfall we now face," Netchs said in the statement.

"These obligations will not suddenly go away," she said. "They have to be paid. The governor and the legislature have been shirking this quintessential obligation for too long. For the sake of our grandchildren, who at this rate will be stuck with the bill, the time has come for responsible action."

Edgar issued the money on Jan. 25, and promised an increase in that amount every year he is governor.

Ellen Feldhausen, spokeswoman for the bureau of the budget, said the $51.5 million will be distributed with $28 million going towards the state teachers system, $13.6 million towards the state university system, $8.6 million toward the state employees system, $900,000 towards the judges system and $200,000 towards the General Assembly system, she said.

Feldhausen said those criticizing Edgar should take into consideration the financial situation of the entire state.

"I think it shows (Edgar's

Prof doubts SIUC motive to buy dorm

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

An SIUC professor interested in purchasing the Baptist Student Center is questioning the University's position in bargaining to acquire the property.

Stanley Lieber, geography professor and real estate partner in S and M Enterprises, negotiated last semester with the Illinois Baptist State Association to buy the Baptist Student Center, 701 W. Mill St., but the IBSA board voted last week to begin negotiating a sale with the University.

James Tweedy, vice president for administration, said University officials will meet with IBSA officials Friday, to negotiate an exchange for the Baptist Center.

If an exchange is worked out, the University will purchase the Baptist Center and in turn sell the IBSA a piece of campus land on which to relocate the Baptist Student Union.

Lieber is questioning the legality of the University selling land to the Baptist Center without taking bids on it.

Lieber said he and his lawyer are investigating legal issues that could prevent the sale between the University and the IBSA. At the advice of his lawyer, Lieber would not disclose the Illinois Supreme Court cases he is investigating, but

Group approves more expensive transit system

By Jeffrey Wheeler
General Assignment Writer

The chairman of a student mass transit committee expressed surprise Wednesday that the cost of a bus plan for Carbondale will have to include $600,000 for service to disabled riders.

The USG Mass Transit Advisory Committee met Wednesday to approve an amended plan that will include service to Greek Row and weekend late night routes to Warren and Pleasant Hill roads.

Dave Madlener, the committee chairman, said he did not know the total cost of the plan will be $1.6 million instead of $1 million because an optional transit service must be included for disabled riders.

Students will be asked to vote in April on whether to raise fees $20 or more to pay for a bus service.

The required paratransit system had not been included in earlier cost projections, Madlener said.

Tom Redmond, development services director for the city, said the Americans with Disabilities Act requires that accommodations for the disabled be added to any public bus system.

"Buses with lifts are not sufficient. You have to offer a van that will come to the door of the person and pick them up," Redmond said.

He added that the cost of the paratransit service cannot be more than twice what a regular rider would pay. So if the non-student fee was 50 cents, the van service could not cost more than $1.

The committee approved the plan, which will now be sent back to the consultant, with the stipulation that the firm, Parsons DeLeuw Inc. of Chicago, consider adding late night services to the Warren Road and Pleasant Hill areas. While included in the basic service area of the amended plan, these areas were left out of the new late night plans.

Some members of the committee were concerned that failure to

Super Bowl Sunday heyday or hell for gamblers

Newsday

Tuesday was the worst day of the year. The Super Bowl was over, the great day to get even had come and gone. It was Tuesday; the bookmaker wanted to collect.

The tears were apparent over the phone. "My son," the man said. "His bankbook is cleaned out, almost $1,000 gone. His credit card. I found these betting magazines. I found football betting tickets all over the house. He blew his college tuition."

Amie Wexler, executive director of the Council on Compulsive Gambling in New Jersey, has been taking these calls with a catch in his own throat for a long time. He's been a recovering gambler—putting it as a recovering alcoholic or drug abuser would—for 26 years.

Dallas' rout of Buffalo was the most widely watched Super Bowl of all time. Also probably the most widely bet Super Bowl of all time. And the Super Bowl is the biggest betting day of the year.

"The Super Bowl is the last chance to get even—it is in your head, if you're a compulsive gambler," Wexler said. "Especially when you're running around telling people how good you are."

Want to hear some horror stories? Wexler's office took 280 calls Monday and about as many Tuesday. Winners rarely call. Tuesday, a 26-year-old woman called to say her boyfriend took $400 from her purse to bet on the Super Bowl. What should she do?

Monday morning a man phoned from his car en route from Denver to Mississippi. He and his wife had split. He had lost $2,000 on the Super Bowl. He'd embezzled $250,000, cleaned all the money out of his business, had a woman pose as his wife to get a second mortgage. He was 46 years old and was thinking about killing himself.

The Super Bowl is a monster. It's the most tragic gambling event. The Final Four is getting up there, but it doesn't yet have the great buildup of Super Sunday. There are parties for it. There are two weeks of buildup to the point where the fan gets to think he knows more football than the oddsmaker, and the compulsive gambler is sure he does. But then the compulsive gambler doesn't need to think he's smarter, he just needs the rush of excitement that comes with action.

Wexler has seen the passing parade of lives out of control. People think they know more about football or basketball or baseball than horse racing, which is one

After being on the road for five consecutive games, the SIUC women's basketball team returns home to face Murray State tonight in the beginning of a five-game homestand.

The Racers, 3-13 overall and 1-7 in the Ohio Valley Conference, are coming off a 96-63 loss at the hands of Middle Tennessee State. MSU has lost five of its last six games and has yet to win away from Racer Arena (0-7).

The Racers are led by junior guard Jennifer Parker and senior center Mechelle Shelton. Parker, an All-OVC candidate, is averaging 20.5 points a game and is shooting .854 from the charity stripe. Shelton, at 6-foot-4 and one of only two seniors, is the Racer defensive wizard and most accurate shooter. She averages 6.3 rebounds a game and has 39 blocked shots. Offensively she is converting .576 from the field.

The Salukis last played at the SIU Arena on Jan. 16.

SIUC coach Cindy Scott said she is happy to be home after the disappointing road trip. The Salukis went 2-3.

"We're not very confident right now," she said. "Our shot selection is poor and defensively in the interior we need better post-defense."

Although the Salukis did not play as well as Coach Scott would have preferred, there have been some bright spots.

With the Super Bowl bringing the football season to an end across the nation Sunday, the SIUC football team has begun to build for its 1993 campaign.

The Salukis announced Tuesday the signing of 17 new recruits to help build on to next season's squad.

Saluki head coach Bob Smith said many needs have been filled by this recruiting class.

"We recruited specifically for speed and designated certain need areas for our team," he said. "This may be the first class I've had here where the first-year players become factors on the depth charts as freshman."

Leading the newest Saluki recruiting class is quarterback Jason Karnes from Du Quoin. At 6-foot-4, 205 pounds, Karnes led Du Quoin High School to the

Just can't wait to get on the road again. That is the song the SIUC men's basketball team will be singing as it starts a three-game Missouri Valley Conference road trip tonight at Indiana State.

Leaving an undefeated record in Carbondale, the Salukis head for the road, where their record is 6-4, 1-3 on the road in MVC action. Since Jan. 18, visiting teams have won only two of 24 games in the MVC.

ISU will be the first pit stop for the Salukis, who are coming off a win over Bradley Monday night. ISU is returning home with a loss after being beat by Illinois State, 64-48, Tuesday night.

ISU has defeated the Salukis in the last two meetings between the two teams in Terre Haute, Ind.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said it will be a key road trip for his team.

"Right now, anybody is in the running for the conference title," he said. "But, we are still on top and we are going to play hard to stay there."

ISU senior guard Greg Thomas will be one to stop for the Sycamores, as he averages 18.3 points a game and has connected for 20 or more points in his last four games. Sophomore forward Matt Burgess is the next leading scorer for ISU, averaging 10.9 points a game.

INFLATION CAUSING PRICES TO SOAR IN IRAQ — Hunger and poverty are on the rise in Iraq, where the once well-to-do middle class finds hunting for food has become a daily nightmare as prices soar because of runaway inflation. Toyota also has signaled the possibility of such cooperation with its competitors in order to cut costs and hinted of a shake-up in the Japanese car industry.

Simon's student loan plan supported by commission

By Michael T. Kuciak
Administration Writer

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, smiled with relief when he learned that a federal commission decided Wednesday to back his yearlong plan to overhaul the nation's student loan system, his spokesman said.

The National Commission on Responsibilities for Financing Postsecondary Education endorsed Simon's plans for direct loans from the IRS and income-sensitive repayments.

Simon said the endorsement came in the nick of time.

"This is a timely counterweight to the intense lobbying that Sallie Mae (Student Loan Marketing Association) and others are mounting to kill the direct loan idea in the cradle," Simon said in a statement.

David Carle, Simon's press agent, said the direct loan plan is better for students and taxpayers.

"It would be a universal loan available to anybody with an income," he said. "Direct loans would be made with money the government gets wholesale from the IRS, rather than bank retail rates. The government could save billions of dollars."

Carle said the loan process would be streamlined if the money came straight from the IRS, and income-sensitive payments would be easier on students.

"A graduate from SIU with a teaching degree will have a lower salary than an MBA grad, but they would have the same rate of repayment under the current system," he explained. "With Simon's plan, they would repay their loans at different rates, depending on their salary."

"The government could save billions more by greatly reducing the default problem," Carle said.

Direct loans and income-sensitive payments are the future of student loan funding in Simon's opinion, and the idea is quickly gaining ground, Carle said.

"Sallie Mae is fighting direct loans every step of the way because they are in the business of profit from student loans," he said.

The Student Loan Marketing Association, which buys student loans, was unavailable for comment.

The conflict began when Simon teamed up with Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., to overcome a threatened veto of a plan to use $500 million to test-drive the direct loan idea in selected universities beginning in 1994. The veto's back was broken, and former President George Bush signed it.

Carle said the direct loan plan possibly would be a part of President Bill Clinton's national service plan for higher education.

Local business improves security after robbery

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

A local video store is changing its deposit procedures following the Saturday morning armed robbery of an employee, but few if any other businesses are making similar changes.

Police have not released any additional information on the robbery involving Jeffrey D. Smith, 22, a clerk for Carnival Video and a senior at SIUC in consumer economics.

Smith was robbed of more than $1,000 of the store's receipts in the parking lot of City National Bank, 601 E. Main St., at 12:27 a.m. when he was accosted by an individual with a handgun.

Security procedures have been changed at the Carnival store, manager Lana Bilderback said, but she declined to elaborate on the changes.

"We do feel that these procedures are safer than our old ones," Bilderback said.

Some businesses — 710 Bookstore, Wal-Mart, Quatro's Pizza — would not comment at all on their security procedures, but others said they are up to the challenge.

"When we make our deposits, we send one driver and one manager," Papa John's Pizza manager Jack Prichard said. "That way we have two cars and two people there during the deposit."

Other businesses do not deposit their receipts after closing at night.

"I wait until the banks are open for business," said Chari Maynor, who is responsible for deposits at both of Carbondale's Subway Sandwich Shops. "I'm a female, which makes me doubly afraid of making the deposits at night."

Jeremy Burkitt of Jimmy John's sandwich shops said business owners receive no special help from Carbondale Police.

"The police say they are understaffed and can't provide escorts for businesspeople carrying a lot of money," Burkitt said.

This is true, officer Kent Burns said.

"This (deposits) are everyone's own responsibility," Burns said. "With all the businesses in town,

Ban on gays echoes past discrimination

OPponents ARGUE that allowing homosexuals to serve in the military would lower morale, interfere with discipline and corrupt conduct.

If these claims sound familiar, it is because they are the same ones used to ban African Americans from the military when Harry Truman called for integration in 1948.

Like then, such claims have no basis in truth and are borne out of cultural myths and false stereotypes reeking with fear and prejudice.

"The old policy of exclusion and segregation was to soothe white men's fears, and they were forced to change," said Allan B. ... author of a book on homosexuals in World War II. "Now, heterosexual men's fears are being soothed, and they too, will have to change."

BUT JUST AS CHANGE did not occur easily in 1948 when Truman decreed that the races be treated equally in the military, acceptance of President Bill Clinton's decision to lift the ban on gays has been rocky at best.

Clinton's pledge within his first few weeks in office to lift the 48-year-old ban on gays resulted in a mist of controversy and ultimately a six-month compromise.

The agreement eliminates the question of sexual preference and calls for a partial moratorium on removing homosexuals.

However, the compromise also allows a commander to transfer a homosexual temporarily. Thus, opposition has cooled, but it is likely to reignite when a final executive order is issued in July.

IRONICALLY, CHIEF OPPOSITION comes from Gen. Colin Powell, the first black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Powell maintains that issues like race and sexual orientation are not synonymous.

But parallels are hard to miss, according to a column by Cynthia Tucker in the Chicago Tribune.

"Homophobes use the Old Testament to prop up their prejudices, just as racists did through the 1960s. Homophobes claim American society will collapse if gays are accorded full civil rights, just as segregationists did."

Likewise, arguments used to discriminate against gays and African Americans in the military are also used to ban women. Women were not fully integrated into the Armed Forces until 1972. As of now women can serve in every branch of the military except in combat — but not without resistance.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST GAYS in the military has resulted in a discharge of 26,638 men and women between 1971 and 1992. Countries that no longer ban homosexuals from the military include Germany, France, Japan, Canada and Australia.

As long as the U.S. military continues to focus on sexual orientation, the military is failing to concentrate on what should be the issue: sexual conduct.

Sexual advances are unwanted regardless of sexual orientation and should be the basis for which individuals are judged.

BEHIND THE SMOKE SCREEN, such arguments are without justification and reminiscent of the ones used not only to bar African Americans from the military but to oppress other minorities.

Lifting the ban will not solve all of the bigotry and ignorance that exist in the United States but it would be a step in the right direction.

If history repeats itself, then Clinton's decision will be seen as a catalyst for the future of equality in the way Truman's was 40 years ago.

Letters to the Editor

Palestine should be recognized as homeland

This letter is regarding the comments made by Mr. David Gelfrig, concerning the issue of Palestinian deportees.

Every human being has a homeland. When you live in your homeland you expect certain rights and privileges that others don't have.

Since 1948, the Israeli government has been systematically and intentionally killing, torturing and expelling Palestinians. No government took any action against the Israelis, even the United Nations. But, when Iraq did the same thing to Kuwait, the U.N. and the U.S. rushed to take action. This is what a double standard is.

Second, if you are an American and you are being deported from Canada or Japan, it wouldn't make a difference because you would just go back to the United States.

But it would be a different situation if you were deported from the U.S. Where would you go, and how would you feel? The same goes for the Palestinians. Kuwait and Syria are not their homeland. Palestine is the homeland of the Palestinians, and the Israeli government does not have the right to exile these people without even a trial.

Additionally, if you consider HAMAS a military organization, then you must consider the revolution in South Africa, and everyone who tries to implement human rights in any country a military organization. It doesn't matter if the deportation was for one day, two years or five years, the action of expelling these people without a trial violates the most basic human rights. These people belong in Palestine, not Lebanon or any other country.

Mr. Gehrig, I'm sorry to say this, but anybody with your level of education should be more wise to the fact that supporting such actions is a violation, in itself, of basic human rights. — Aiham Atey, junior, pre-major

Patriotism, not sex preference, better indicator of good soldier

This letter is in response to the Jan. 25 letter from John Vavrin about gays in the military. He recommended that readers "ask a veteran" about this subject, implying that all veteran espouse the same "homophobic" thinking.

Well, John, I'm a veteran and heterosexual, but unlike you, I want readers to know that there are many veterans who feel quite differently about this topic. I served my country for four years as an infantry officer in the U.S. Army, serving one of those years fighting in Vietnam. I witnessed many acts of bravery and selflessness by men of all types, including gays. During the Vietnam era there was little effort by military "brass" or politicians to rid the military of gays because of the constant demand for "human fodder" to feed the war effort.

Of the over 50,000 Americans who sacrificed their lives in Vietnam, I'm sure many of them were gay men and women. Do you really believe that they died with less courage and valor because they were gay?

The fact is that gays have fought and died in all the wars waged by our country. The same twisted logic and reasoning you use was applied to blacks in previous wars to segregate them into separate units.

It is obvious you have failed to learn a valuable lesson about life: that character, courage and patriotism have no relationship to race or sexual preference.

I was fortunate enough to be raised by loving and kind parents whose humility and tolerance towards others taught me to value all humanity and to judge people individually without bias or bigotry.

Our country has lagged behind many other nations in dealing with this issue and we should be thankful to have a president with the courage to take our society a step forward. — David L. Wagner, junior, cinema and photography

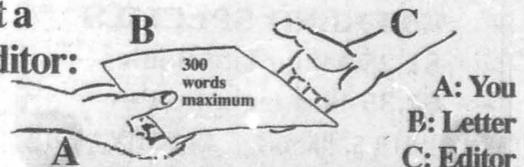

Choice of life precious option

Regarding SIU's policy of abortion: When I was younger I did not have a full view of life as I do now. I was for abortion. As I grow older I realize how precious life is. I think about my best friend, who was adopted. His natural parents decided to go along with the birth, and later he was adopted.

To some a child is a hassle, but to others it is a dream come true.

Do yourself and others a favor: Think before you have sex. Think about life. Think about what a child means to people who are unable to naturally have one. Imagine your best friend not being there because he or she was aborted. Without friends life would not be worth living. — Patrick Harper, junior, electrical engineering

Railroad shop target of theft, graffiti scrawls

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

Carbondale Police are investigating a weekend burglary in which more than 100 windows of a railroad building were broken and its walls scrawled with graffiti from the railroad's own paint. Sometime between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday, unknown individuals broke into the Illinois Central Railroad repair shop at 1200 N. Washington St., breaking a window to gain access.

Paint from the shop was stolen and used to paint graffiti around the area, and more than 150 windows at the shop were broken out. Damage is estimated at more than $800.

People with information on the burglary can call Carbondale Crime Stoppers at 549-2677.

consider these routes would cause undue inconvenience to the large number of students living in those areas.

"We want to see it broken out separately to see the actual cost, but we do not want it thrown in with the entire plan," said Linda Gladson.

The committee hopes to have a complete plan ready by March 29 so that it can be submitted to a student referendum in April.

Strom said he could make no comments on the plans until he was contacted by SPC.

Cole said he especially is concerned because the funds set aside for spring events are large.

"Approximately $9,000 is allocated for these spring events, and there are many other student organizations which could use the funds," Cole said.

William Hall, vice president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said he hopes SPC will put together a discussion soon.

"I was disappointed in last year's [SPC] leadership when they acted so quickly to cancel further plans without input from the students," Hall said.

Hall said he thinks a concerted effort from student government, Greek Row, SPC and other student organizations, as well as from the University administration and city staff and police, is needed to make any University-wide student event successful.

Hall said with the right amount of supervision and cooperation, alcohol could be included in the plans again.

"Other large universities and communities hold spring festivals with alcohol without violence," Hall said.

SPC organizer Carolyn Hansen was unavailable for comment.

SPC voted to end Springfest last April after violence marred the event and 187 arrests were made in the city.

interest in the underfunded liability) that he has promised to give this money every year that he is governor and that he has found the $50 million extra for the systems," she said.

The early retirement plan passed by the General Assembly two weeks ago may give benefits to those receiving the plan now, Spice said.

But the underfunding of the bill from the state may result in pension bankruptcy by the year 2020.

Spice said the state has failed to match its promised amount for the underfunded liability.

The missing funds stems from an action by Gov. Jim Thompson, he said.

In 1982, Thompson reduced the 100 percent funding that the pension fund previously was receiving to 60 percent, promising to pay back the 40 percent with interest and return to the 100 percent.

Since 1982, the payout never has increased to the original 100 percent, Spice said.

Spice said between 1980 and 1989, if the fund had received the normal cost funding plus interest, he could have paid off the underfunded costs.

In 1989, a Senate bill was passed by the General Assembly, recognizing that there was a serious underfunding of pension plans, Spice said.

The bill was intended to pay off the underfunded liability over the next 40 years in phaseout payments.

Spice said he has yet to see any of this money.

A lawsuit was filed last year by Spice and his department against the state for the underfunding, Spice said.

They are awaiting a date when the General Assembly will set a court date.

A representative of the Attorney General's office could not be reached to comment on the lawsuit.

he did comment on the legal issue.

"The issue is whether any state organization, which has land that it is either holding title to or in some way controlling for the public benefit, can sell that land to a particular religious organization, or in fact sell it at all, without allowing the land to be bid upon by other parties," Lieber said.

Tweedy said the University has been interested in the property for many years, rents office space and has tried in the past to purchase the building, but the efforts failed.

Lieber said he questions how the University will fund the sale this time, and in the past the University twice negotiated purchases for additional library storage facilities and both times had to back out because of insufficient funds. Lieber said this could happen with the Baptist Center.

Tweedy said authorization for the purchase will be given at the Board of Trustees meeting Feb. 11.

Lieber said the University has been leasing the office space in the center to the detriment of the IBSA, and the University now is deciding to buy the property a second time. He said the leases SIUC held with IBSA for the rented office space were unprofitable leases, because expenses and maintenance for the office space were more than the University was paying for the leases.

"My presumption is that the only thing that moved the University to consider bidding on the property this time was my partnership's presence as a bidder," Lieber said.

Maurice Swinford, chairman of the IBSA board, said the University terminated the previous sale because it did not have available funds. He said the leases were mutually agreed upon by the University and the IBSA. He said the center had piled up a $411,000 debt before it began leasing office space to the University. The profit from the leases allowed the center to operate in the black the past few years and begin to pay its debt.

"Mr. Lieber did have an opinion that we [IBSA] were leasing at a lower rate than we should have," Swinford said. "Mr. Lieber is a businessman in that area and has a different opinion."

Lieber said part of the reason the center has incurred a $411,000 debt is because the University restricts the flow of information to new students who are looking for housing. He said the University will not release names of new students to University approved off-campus facilities.

Sylvan Knobloch, manager of the center, said the University refuses to release names of new students. He said new students who request off-campus housing information are sent brochures for the center through the University, but the center has no direct link to new students except through Baptist churches.

Swinford said part of the financial problems of the center is the lack of residents. He said the facility was built to house 300 residents, but the center has experienced a decline in residents and now houses around 150.

Lieber said some of the University approved off-campus housing is cheaper than the University dorms, including the Baptist Center. He said it is in the interest of the students to have information on all available housing whether they request it or not.

Lieber said he has not taken legal action against the sale of properties between the University and IBSA, but he and his lawyers will continue to investigate the situation.

SIUC student to talk trash in new class

By Angela L. Hyland
Environmental Writer

Most research papers start in the library and end up in the trash, but Patrick Glisson, former SIUC Recycling Manager, believes just as much as can be learned from studies that are conducted in reverse.

Glisson, a graduate student in Health Education and Community Health, will discuss the art and science of dumpster diving in a six-week garbology class, beginning at 6p.m. Thursday.

His class will focus not only on trash, but also on alternative disposal methods, such as recycling and composting.

In an environmental class he took several years ago, Glisson said the teacher asked a question that has stuck with him ever since.

Now, merely overhearing a student asking a friend to throw something away sometimes leads Glisson to wonder, "What is away?"

Most people never stop to think where things go after they are put in the trash, Glisson said.

But, after visiting several landfills and other waste disposal sites, Glisson knows exactly where much of our waste goes.

"If you ever actually visit 'away,' you'll find it's a very interesting place," Glisson said.

Much of what people believe about landfills are nothing more than myths, Glisson said. Although most people assume garbage dumps contain mostly disposable diapers or plastic, 60 to 80 percent of landfills consist of newspaper or white paper, he said.

Most of what Americans throw away could be either recycled or composted, Glisson said.

"I want to make people think about what they're actually throwing away," he said.

"If you look in the garbage on a Monday morning, you'd probably be surprised at all the beer cans that have been thrown away after a weekend party."

By taking the class, Glisson said students can become more aware of the impact their actions can have in society.

Even doing nothing more than recycling beer cans after a party can add up, he said.

The class, offered through the Division of Continuing Education, will be Thursdays from 6 to 8 p.m. Students interested in taking the class should contact 536-7751 by noon today.

Media concerned as White House enforces tougher ethical standards

The Washington Post

Is a lavish, black-tie press dinner different from a lavish, black-tie bash thrown by a lobbyist? Not if you work for the president.

According to new government ethics rules that went into effect Wednesday, that venerable Washington institution—the big, splashy press dinner where administration big shots and reporters mix and mingle—could be bad for your ethical health.

Since the 1987 version of the ethics rules, reporters and lobbyists have been put into the same category: "prohibited sources."

That means no freebies except for the most modest expense account lunch—and no tickets to fancy dinners.

News organizations, however, have routinely hosted executive officials at these events without any serious questions raised. But the Clinton White House, wary of an ethical embarrassment, is scrambling to avoid any appearance of conflict.

White House officials had not responded to requests to explain the new policy. However members of the media are already anticipating problems.

"We're trying to take a look at this," said Karen Hosler, president of the White House Correspondents' Association, which hosts the largest—2,000 plus—press dinner in May. "I don't know what effect this will have on the dinner, what we have to do to accommodate the ruling. I also have concerns about regulations that put journalists in the same category as lobbyists."

"Our hope is that (Chief of Staff Thomas) McLarty and (White House counsel Bernard) Nussbaum will take a closer look and determine that this doesn't apply to us."

The stakes are high: In the past two years, the White House Correspondents, the Gridiron and the Radio and Television Correspondents dinners brought to the table such top White House players as James A. Baker, John Sununu, press secretaries Marlin Fitzwater and David Beckwith, Cabinet officers Louis Sullivan, Dick Cheney and Lamar Alexander, CIA Director William Webster and Gens. Norman Schwarzkopf and Colin Powell, along with many less familiar names who are often more valuable sources.

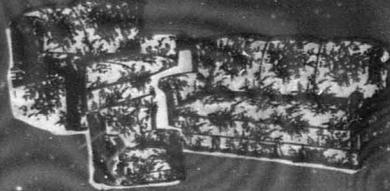

The benefits to the media are obvious: An hour schmoozing with any of these men could be invaluable.

"You have to get people to know who you are before they take your phone calls," said Hosler, of the Baltimore Sun.

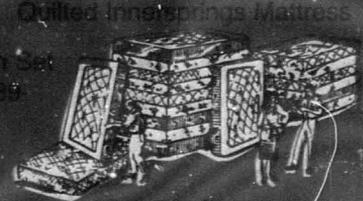

But all of these officials, depending on how one interpreted the regulations for the individual agency worked for, could have been violating the ethics code when they attended as guests of news organizations. However, the Office of Government Ethics or the White House counsel's office has never prevented them from going to such events. And the rules are not included; there are exceptions. For instance, in some cases an official may participate in "appropriate ... widely attended gatherings."

What's different as of Wednesday is a standard that all 142 executive branch agencies are expected to adhere to. (The president and vice president, Congress and the judiciary have separate ethical codes.) The new rules were ordered by George Bush in 1989 and are just now coming into force.

we would have to have two officers on duty full time just to offer that extra protection."

Businesses are not completely without resources, however, said Paul Parelio, an advocate with the Illinois' Attorney General's Office in Carbondale.

"We don't actively take a role in this, but if somebody called our office we would refer them to the right people or programs," Parelio said.

"We concentrate mostly on consumer fraud here, but we can provide assistance to people with this sort of problem."

Some business organizations offer services to help their members, however.

The University Mall Association has been offering special protection for its members for about three years, association representative Debbie Mack said.

She declined to elaborate on the nature of the services.

"We have gone to great lengths to protect our businesses and their deposits," Mack said.

She also noted some of the mall's businesses often do not take advantage of the protection services.

The suspect in Saturday's robbery is described as a Hispanic or light-skinned black male between 16 to 22, about 5'11" and 180-200 pounds wearing a dark hooded coat and dark pants.

Individuals with information regarding the robbery can call Carbondale Crime Stoppers at 549-2677.

Regionally ranked SIUC to play national slate

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

Saluki softball ranked seventh in preseason Midwest Region

What do the lucky number seven and the SIUC softball team have in common?

Hopefully for the Salukis, a lot of success in the upcoming 1993 softball season, as the Salukis are ranked as the seventh-best team in the Midwest Region, according to the NCAA Division I regional rankings that were announced Tuesday.

SIUC now has been regionally ranked in the NCAA preseason poll for four consecutive years.

Saluki head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said the ranking is an honor, but she wants her team to keep it in perspective.

"Rankings, especially preseason ones, are just a sheet of paper saying what is believed at the moment in looking at the teams," she said. "I told the players to enjoy it, but at the same time concentrate on what's ahead, because it's where you stand at the end of the season that counts."

SIUC is also preparing to face other teams among the ranks, as it is scheduled to face 10 regionally ranked teams, five of which are also nationally ranked.

In the Salukis' opener, the Southern Classic, SIUC will face nationally ranked Missouri (No. 17) and Bowling Green (20), along with regionally ranked DePaul (No. 4 — Midwest).

Following its' season opener, SIUC will head to the Sunshine State for the Florida State Invitational, where it will face nationally ranked Florida State (No. 6), Southwest Louisiana (10) and Connecticut (18).

Brechtelsbauer said she likes her team's strong schedule.

"I feel it improves our skills and puts us in more tight, pressure situations, that could help us later on in the season," he said. "It also gives us good national exposure that can help in recruiting."

SIUC pitching coach Gary Buckles said he agrees that playing the top-ranked teams can improve standings in the rankings.

"You only get ranked by playing top-ranked, competitive teams," he said.

"You won't get the reputation needed by playing teams that you can blow away."

SIUC posted a 33-25-1 record last spring, as the Salukis were the 1992 Gateway Conference runner-ups.

Brechtelsbauer said the ranking and the tough schedule says a lot about the SIUC softball program.

"We even had to turn a lot of teams away when we were setting the season schedule," she said.

"We've been ranked and had strong teams for the past three to four years now and people want to play us," she said.

The first pitch of the season will be tossed at the Southern Classic on March 6.

scored in double figures in her last six games and is averaging 15.2 points during that stretch.

Senior forward Angie Rougeau has consistently been a sparkplug, offensively and defensively, for the Salukis.

Heading into tonight's contest, the Memphis native only needs eight points to become the school's 12th 1,000-point scorer in women's basketball.

Coach Scott said this is a game the Salukis can win and should afford them the opportunity to work out some wrinkles in their game.

Earlier in the season, the Salukis traveled to Racer Arena and thrashed MSU, 94-75. In that game, SIUC rolled up season highs in points scored and rebounds (51).

have to consider is putting the Sycamores on the line. ISU leads the nation in free-throw percentage at 80 percent and is getting to the line more frequently, making 300 tosses from the charity stripe, while their foes have attempted just 256.

reason why horse racing is in trouble. They also find that 30 minutes between races is too long. Now those other games have all sorts of exotic betting.

Bet which team will score first or who will fumble first, or bet the over-under scoring. And when Buffalo got so far behind, the gambler who thought he could save his whole gambling season by betting the Bills with the points, had to pull out his afternoon or pull the heart out of his chest. Maybe his bookmaker would bet on the last quarter.

Wexler said there were 100 different bets on the Super Bowl, "anything the bookmaker will allow."

The wise guys this year thought this was the time to bet the Bills. "Think of the great locks, the sure things, of the last several years," Wexler said. "The Orioles playing the Mets, the Colts playing the Jets and the 1954 Giants playing the Cleveland Indians with those great pitchers in the World Series. They all lost."

"The gambler will sit up all night and go to the track with a horse he knows can't lose. The guy in front of him picks a different horse, so he switches. He's been betting favorites with his bookmaker and losing, so to change his luck, he bets long shots. He hasn't had a winner in weeks so he'll bet every horse in the race: just to cash a ticket."

Dokes feeling 'stupendous' while awaiting title shot against champion

Newsday

NEW YORK—Michael Dokes' side of the dinner table is littered with empty glass vials, about a dozen of them. The small kind, easy to slip into a pocket or a sock or down a pair of pants. Easy to flip out of a car window. No sooner does he devour the contents of one than he pops open another and downs it.

He pushes four of them across the table. "Try these," he says. "They'll make you feel great. Like new. Make you feel like you can knock over a w2."

His companion accepts the offer. The contents are soft and sweet and easy to take. Nothing happens.

"Give it time." Not to worry. Dokes, an addictive personality, is now hooked on vitamins and exotic training supplements the way he once had an obsession for cocaine. The vials contain ginseng extract, Dokes' latest obsession.

"Now when you buy this stuff, you got to go down to Chinatown or Delancey Street," he says. "That's where you get the real thing. Cheaper, too."

He is delivering his spiel in a slow, lockjawed style that could make it tough to tell, for a first-time listener, whether he is punch-drunk, string-out, exhausted or a little of all three. But when a fan comes over to the table to wish Dokes well in his fight Saturday night against heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe at Madison Square Garden, a broad smile spreads over his broad, flattened face.

"How you feelin', champ?" the fan asks.

"Stupendous, man," Dokes says, drawing the word out to what seems like six syllables. "Absolutely... stupendous."

And why shouldn't he? In two days, he will step into the ring with Bowe, before a near-sellout crowd and with more money in the till than was brought in by either of the Ali-Frazier fights at the Garden. Dokes, 34, is guaranteed $750,000, more money than he has made for a fight in years.

"He (Karnes) has a good throwing arm, strength and a knowledge of the game and is a coachable player who can make adjustments on the field."

Smith said he like the different playing abilities of Karnes.

"Karnes is important because he fits the mold of the quarterbacks we have had here in the past," he said.

"Plus he has the added dimension of being a kicker."

Karnes was all-Southwest Egyptian in four positions (safety, quarterback, punter and placekicker), and a member of the Chicago Sun-Times all-state team.

SIUC may also start a new trend of recruiting, finding that warm sunshine and sprawling beaches is a good setting to find football players.

Among the 17 recruits, 12 hail from Florida or California.

Illinois, Tennessee and North Carolina produced the rest of the Saluki recruits.

The Salukis recruited evenly on both sides of the line as they signed nine defensive players and eight offensive.

Among the standouts are tight end/defensive end J.D. Woolm and outside linebacker Brody Hayes, both hailing from Cypress High School in Ft. Meyers, Fla.

Both were all-Southwest Florida and all-Lee County selections, as Woolm grabbed 14 passes for 240 yards, while Hayes recorded 45 assted tackles, 21 solo hits and three sacks.

One of the talented offensive prospects is 5-9, 165-pound wide receiver Reggie Fowler from Dixie Hollins High School in St. Petersburg, Fla.

An all-state and conference selection, Fowler caught 28 passes for 490 yards and seven touchdowns his senior year. SIUC coaches compare Fowler to another St. Petersburg standout—current Saluki receiver Billy Swain.

Smith said he has to credit recruiting coordinator Tom Seward on the promising class.

"Tom did a great job of leading the recruiting effort with our coaching staff," he said. "I think all of the hard work has paid off with this talented group."
