Art exhibit raises eyebrows at SIUC's Vergette Gallery

FORGET ME NOT: Artist causes stir by molding art from old girlfriends' love letters.

JASON ADRIAN
DE ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

The love letter might not seem like such a private order of business once people visit the art exhibit "He's So Sweet, F***ing A**hole" on display at the Vergette Gallery in the Allyn Building.

The exhibit features hundreds of mostly hand-written real love letters, which are pasted all over the walls and strewn about the floor, addressed to artist David Lohman, a senior in art and design.

The letters are from a variety of Lohman's former girlfriends from seventh grade year to his senior year in high school. The girls express the love they had for Lohman in some of the letters, while a few others are actually notes Lohman wrote to other girls asking them out or expressing his feelings toward them.

There is also an audio tape that has a collection of recordings Lohman made of the girls singing, reciting poetry and addressing such pressing topics as marriage.

As the primary focus of the exhibit, the letters have caused controversy with some students who feel the exhibit is exploiting the artist's former girlfriends.

"Obviously at the time when he had these relationships, [Lohman] felt similar to what these girls felt for him," said Angie Southworth, a sophomore in speech communication from Belleville. "And now it seems like he's making a mockery of it. It's kind of condescending toward — not necessarily just girls — but anyone who had any feelings like that."

"These girls probably thought it would be just

"Of course it's self indulgent. What art is n't?" Lohman said. "I believe it's very honest and pure. Most shows that are around are afraid to delve into this territory."

"I think it's a good thing for a person to take stock in their past and analyze what they've done wrong and what they've done right. This wasn't meant to be a malicious show."

School of Art and Design professor Joel Feldman agrees that Lohman's use of himself and his own experiences is a step forward as far as the contemporary art world is concerned.

"In contemporary art, artists sometimes choose to use themselves — in a sense of their own bodies or experiences — and take a highly autobiographical approach by using personal experience as a metaphor for society at large or a segment of between him and the paper, and now he's displaying it for everyone to see. It's like he's saying 'Look what all these girls felt for me. Ha-ha. Now it's just a piece of art for me.'"

Though the exhibit can seem like a paradigm of narcissism to some, the artist said a few of the girls in the letters know about the exhibit and are not angry with it.

He also said: it follows the basic groundwork of what art is and moves through areas not normally covered by other artists.

SILVER LINING: Carbondale school superintendent delivers keynote address.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When Eric Chappell was in grade school there were no African-American administrations to encourage him toward his goal to become a teacher.

But after listening to the Black History Month Keynote Address given by Elizabeth Lewin, the superintendent of Carbondale Grade Schools, Chappell said more people like her are needed to provide motivation for African-Americans.

"She's a black female with a Ph.D., and she's the superintendent of schools," he said. "In my lifetime I've only seen two administrators who were black and none of them were when I was in school."

Lewin addressed about 50 people about the influence that public schools and parents have on children. Her speech titled "Schools: Society's Silver Lining?" was sponsored by the Black History Month Committee.

Lewin graduated from SIUC with a degree in speech communication in 1970 and earned a master's degree in 1971. She is

Student recovering after Giant City plunge

CORINNE MANNINO
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC student Leah Reichert has been removed from the intensive care unit and is recovering in her own room at St. Francis Medical Center after a 35-foot fall at Giant City State Park Saturday, a family member says.

Reichert, a undecided sophomore from Belleville, remains at St. Francis Medical Center in Cape Girardeau, Mo., after being flown there by helicopter Saturday. Reichert's sister, Amy Jo, said Leah began speech and physical therapy Monday.

Reichert sustained a two-inch laceration to her head, swelling on her brain and a broken vertebrae in the middle of her back after losing her balance and falling 35 feet onto a ledge.

Reichert fell in an area of the park known as Devil's Stand Table. The site is near Shelter 2 and one of the two areas of the park where rock climbing is allowed.

The sister said Reichert still mostly sleeps and says that her head hurts.

"As far as any of the details she doesn't remember," Amy Jo Reichert said.

Eric A. Putnam, an undecided sophomore of Chatham, who was with Reichert when she fell, said Reichert was wearing regular running shoes at the park.

Park Superintendent Robert Kristoff said there is no marked trail in the area where the group was hiking, but her roommate, Shana K. Gleason, an undecided sophomore of Auburn, said there was a trail where they were at.

Putnam said Reichert's mother instructed him, along with the other members of the group who were with Reichert, not to answer any more questions about the incident.

Park Safety

Giant City State Park Superintendent Robert Kristoff says there are a few measures that need to be taken to ensure a safe visit to the park.

They are:

- stay on the designated trails
- stay away from the bluff tops
- wear proper shoes and clothes
- do not drink alcohol or do drugs at the park

"Do those and you won't have a problem at Giant City Park," Kristoff said.

Kristoff said the trails are clearly marked with route markers, and there are maps to show the routes that should be taken.

"You should remember that a 70-foot cliff is like a seven-story building, and falling from either of them is the same," Kristoff said.

ON THIS DATE IN 1975:

• An article appeared in the Daily Egyptian titled, "Dormitory food draws complaints." The director of housing Sam Rinella admitted that the food could use some improvement but added that students were getting a "real bargain" at a cost of only $2.43 per day.

• An article appeared in the Daily Egyptian titled, "Students find 'hitching' easy," in which students explained the ease of getting a ride to class from friendly Carbondale drivers.

The policy of police at the time was just to ignore the hitchhikers as long as someone was getting them off the highway.

One student said, "It isn't even an inconvenience not having a car. I may continue to hitch even after my car gets fixed."

• The Illinois Board of Education proposed a tuition hike which would increase the fee for two semesters at SIU from $428 to $530.

• Italian Village served breakfast from 2 a.m. to 11 a.m. daily.

Corrections

• In the Wednesday story, "Speakers offer two views on liberalism," the Daily Egyptian reported about 30 people attended the symposium "Liberalism and Black America." The sponsors of the symposium reported 77 people attended the Monday night event.

• "Telewest expected to give area economy $14 million boost" in the Wednesday Daily Egyptian contained an incorrect address for the Furma C. Hayes Center. The center, 441 E. Willow St., is serving only as a temporary office for Telewest until its facility at 2311 S. Illinois Ave. is completed.

Chancellor candidate proposes cuts

SEARCH: Candidate emphasizes improved communications.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DE POLITICS EDITOR

SIUC Chancellor candidate Frederick Dobney cites improvements in campus-wide communication and cutting administrative fat as changes he would make if named chancellor.

Dobney, executive vice president and provost for Michigan Technological University, told a small crowd in the University Museum Wednesday his plans to better SIUC.

Part of his plan for better leadership would mean streamlining the University, particularly in departments he sees as too bureaucratic.

"There tends to be a bureaucracy, and Student Affairs seems to be larger than most," he said. "There is probably a lot more captains than privates in that army."

Part of his plan also involves outside help.

"I should have significant opportunities to appoint people from outside the University," he said.

Dobney said improved communication would result in several long-term positive effects, including better retention rates and more money for the University.

He compared Michigan Technological University's 83 to 87 percent retention rate, which he considered low, to SIUC's rate of 40 to 50 percent.

"It's a lot easier to get students to stay here than it is to get them to come here, or at least it should be," he said.

One of the by-products of improved communication is an increase in shared governance with students concerning University policy.

"If there isn't a statement of students rights, then is a problem," he said.

"There needs to be some recognition of students to administrators."

Dobney said with retention problems and other concerns, SIUC is facing troubled times, but he would rather work at a potential problem school because he can play an active role in resolving conflicts.

Dobney said that under his leadership the University could raise more money to provide more scholarships or stipends to students, freeing up federal money for other improvements on campus, such as better equipment for information

Police officer accused of soliciting bribe

TRAFFIC STOP: SIUC student alleges officer asked for cash.

BRIAN S. EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A formal complaint alleging an SIUC police officer solicited a bribe during a routine traffic stop last month was received by the SIUC Police Department Jan. 30 and is under investigation, police said.

SIUC police officer Charles Diggins said he learned Feb. 3 that an allegation accusing him of soliciting a bribe was under investigation.

A five-page complaint was submitted Jan. 30 by Sachiko Oishi, a senior in psychology from Japan. In her complaint Oishi alleges that Diggins pulled her vehicle over Jan. 12 at 11:30 p.m. near the intersection of South Wall Street and Route 13 East.

Oishi said officer Diggins then approached her automobile informing her she was speeding. Oishi said Diggins then informed her she could either post her license as bond, or give him $50 on the scene.

"He never mentioned the words, 'court supervision,' 'bond,' 'cash bond,' or 'driver's safety program,' when he mentioned the $50," she said.

SIUC Police Department Director Sam Jordan neither confirmed nor denied that an investigation was underway, but verified his signature on Oishi's complaint form as the receiving officer's signature.

Jordan said an incident of this nature has never been reported to the department since he took his position in 1992.

Diggins declined to comment, but said the matter was under investigation.

Oishi said she brought the matter to the attention of the Jackson County State's Attorney's office by phone where she was directed to speak to Jordan.

Oishi said she then met with Lt. Andrew Smith and officer Donna Kunce. Oishi said Lt. Smith asked her if she could have misunderstood what officer Diggins said on Jan. 12.

Oishi said she did not misunderstand Diggins comments to her on Jan. 12.

Lt. Smith declined to comment.

Jordan said the first step in handling citizen complaints is to decide the nature of the complaint or the allegation.

"We have investigations going on," he said. "And again we have those situations where a lot of times there are misunderstandings."

If the complaint involves a violation of a University policy, rules or regulations, then the SIUC Police Department generally investigates.

Complaints of a more serious nature which may result in suspensions or serious disciplinary actions are investigated by officers trained to handle those situations.

Complaints of a criminal nature against the SIUC Police Department are brought before the Jackson County State's Attorney, where they may be investigated by an outside agency such as the Illinois State Police.

NASA geologist speaking at Lawson Hall today

Dr. Ray Arvidson, chairman of the NASA Planetary Cartography and Geologic Mapping Working Group, will present "Exploring Mars with Rovers" at 4 p.m. today in Lawson Hall Room 161.

Arvidson, chairman of Earth and Planetary Sciences at Washington University, will talk about the Sojourner Rover that was sent to Mars in 1997, and the Rocky 7 which is a Prototype Rover that has been tested in the Mojave Desert.

Arvidson's talk is sponsored by the geology department.

Nicholas Pinter, assistant professor in geology, said Arvidson played a large part in NASA's past and planning of their future.

"He's right at the core of Mars exploration and the next generation of Rover missions," Pinter said. "I would recommend anyone who is interested in NASA and space exploration to attend this talk."

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Clinton vows to make Iraq comply with inspections

U.S. and U.N. officials call Iraq's offer to open eight new sites to arms inspectors inadequate. And President Clinton today vowed to make Baghdad comply with unrestricted inspections "one way or the other."

In Congress, Republican leaders were doing some saber-rattling of their own. House Speaker Newt Gingrich said any U.S. military attack against Iraq must be a powerful one, either removing Saddam Hussein from power or ending his weapons program for good.

Senate Majority leader Trent Lott voiced similar sentiments.

Blair visiting Washington to talk about Iraq inspections

British Prime Minister Tony Blair has opened a four-day visit to Washington for talks with President Clinton.

The two leaders are expected to focus on the crisis over U.N. weapons inspections in Iraq. During his stay in Washington, the prime minister will be right at home at Blair House.

Our Word

Take a few minutes to save lives

Imagine you are taking a bicycle ride around Carbondale. It is a nice afternoon, and out of nowhere you are struck by a vehicle. The paramedics rush you to the hospital.

The doctors are treating your injuries, but you have lost a substantial amount of blood. The doctors try to save you, but there is not enough blood to replace the blood you lost waiting for help.

Every day, accidents, surgeries and other medical procedures necessitate blood transfusions for people.

According to the American Red Cross, someone in the United States needs blood every two seconds, but less than 5 percent of all eligible American donors donate each year.

Blood supplies in Southern Illinois are reaching dangerously low levels. The Red Cross stated this area uses about 1,000 pints a day. Recently the area had less than a half-day supply of blood and had a deficit of 4,100 pints.

Not many people think about blood donation until they need it. A short supply of blood could mean the difference between life and death. That person could be a stranger, but it also could be a friend, relative or you.

There are many excuses to avoid donating. Some people have a fear of needles. The specialists at the blood drives are trained to insert needles with little or no pain to donors.

Even if there is some pain, the benefits far outweigh the minor discomfort a blood donor may feel for several minutes.

Another excuse is the lack of time. Busy schedules and engagements provide a prime reason to avoid donating blood.

Drives on campus allow donors to make appointments that fit their schedules and remain open well into the evening on several days for walk-ins.

Some could say they cannot get to the location. There are several locations to donate on campus this week. Students have to be on campus at some point during the week. It cannot be too difficult to locate a building where a blood drive is operating.

Some people may even have the conceited "What's in it for me?" attitude. Donors during the blood drive receive T-shirts and coupons for free food. Compensation should not be necessary for a simple effort that will save lives.

It is disheartening to see a blood crisis, especially around a college campus. The opportunity to save someone's life with a half-hour or hour of a student's time should be a good enough reason for students to get involved.

Take a few minutes and give blood. A well-stocked supply of blood someday may save a life — maybe yours.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

State of the Union worse in reality

As we have come to expect, President Clinton's State of the Union address was a well-received and emotional appeal to the American people. In his address, Clinton claimed America has the "smallest government in 35 years," and the "typical middle-class family will now have the lowest tax rates in 20 years."

Could this be true when federal revenues as a share of the gross domestic product are at an all-time high? According to the Department of Commerce, the federal government uses 20.8 percent of every dollar generated by the economy. That's slightly higher than the 20.7 percent in 1969 when a Vietnam War surtax was in effect.

Where taxation is concerned, the number of days the average American has to work to pay taxes — federal, state, and local — is at an all-time high, according to the non-partisan Tax Foundation. The average American works until May 9 to pay his or her share of taxes, and government at all levels takes 35.2 percent of our income.

If government is not smaller by a percentage of the GDP or tax levels, how could Clinton's statement be true? Well, there are fewer government employees now than four years ago, but this is primarily due to military downsizing, not cuts in bureaucracies.

What is equally confusing is that while Clinton claimed to support a smaller, less obtrusive government, he advocated 32 separate laws, government programs, taxes, or spending initiatives, ranging from expanding the already bankrupt Medicare system, to the rather superfluous notion of government spending to "build a better Internet."

Clinton has proposed free TV commercials for campaigning politicians. If TV commercials are going to be "free" for politicians, how will the networks make up for lost revenue? We might pay through taxes, or perhaps broadcasters will simply raise their fees for other advertisers like Wal-Mart or Reebok.

So how do Wal-Mart and Reebok cover higher advertising fees? By raising prices. When ever you hear a politician say something will be "free," it means that everyone pays for it one way or another.

Everything Clinton advocated sounds good and wholesome — something we "ought" to do. But take his proposed child care subsidies, for example. When the government had subsidized a service industry in the past, the result has been out-of-control price increases, and concurrent tax increases to pay for them. This is why Medicare is bankrupt. A tax break for families using child care is already in effect but Clinton said this is not enough, as many Americans simply cannot afford good child care.

Initially, this would seem to suggest government intervention. Consider, however, what the situation would be if Americans could keep more of their earnings, rather than be taxed for government programs that sometimes worsen the situation they purport to reconcile.

The reason so many more Americans are forced to place their children in child care facilities is because, in order to maintain a decent standard of living under higher and higher taxes, both parents are forced to work.

In this, and other cases, it would seem that the more collective good we try to do through government, the more collective harm results.

Research should not replace communication

Dear Editor,
This is in response to the letter to the editor, "Reducing research would hurt SIUC," printed in the Jan. 30 Daily Egyptian. Aldo D. Migone, professor of physics states, "If this change (extending professor's office hours to nine a week) does in fact occur, it will not only devalue future academic degrees from SIUC, it will also have a major negative impact on the economy of the region."

Excuse me? It seems reasonable that professors keep their offices open to the hand that feeds them. Furthermore, I certainly do not accept this incredulous offer that keeping the office door open a few more hours a week is going to devalue this University, let alone create mass destruction on our economy. I mean come on, tuition prices have risen sharply here for students in the past five years, and services from professors have stagnated — if as an undergraduate you ever see the professor who is in charge of the course you happen to be taking. In most cases, the lesson format for most of the University's "educators" is strictly lecture. This is in spite of the hammering we get over in the College of Education to make the learning interesting, which in many cases can be achieved simply by asking a few questions of the students throughout the lecture. (Heaven forbid university-level students actually get any of a professor's precious intellectual time!)

As for the apparent sub-status Mr. Migone places on community colleges, I must say I favor attendance of these "limited" underlings for the very thing left out of your most intellectual highness's argument — the students. During my student teaching and future employment, I will encourage students to seriously consider attending a community college. From personal experience, I can say that students gain numerous mentors from the personal atmosphere. In addition there are smaller class sizes, cheaper tuition and the SAME basic information taught.

Finally, I encourage SIUC's undergraduate student population to ask themselves whether or not the money they are spending is giving them the sufficient access they need to their instructors. And, if the answer is "no," to insist on this little tiny bit more of office time from their instructors. Otherwise, you may carry on with this intellectual vacuum Mr. Migone wishes you to fall into while he pursues his own selfish pursuits.

Anita D. Wilbur-Utgard,

Christianity not source of all holidays

Dear Editor,
In an article about Groundhog Day Feb. 2, there were repeated references made to "Candlemas Day" and its origins. One of these references were of clergy passing out blessed candles to people. What clergy? Christian clergy? Wouldn't some be surprised to know that Pagans were celebrating this holiday long before Christians and groundhogs!

I'd like put a radical, yet factual, idea into the public mindset — not everything was born from Christianity and not all holidays revolved around it! I am talking specifically about the ancient celebrations of the seasonal sabbats by Pagans.

"Candlemas Day" is known to Pagans, Witches and many others as simply Candlemas or Imbolc. This is the celebration of the old making way for new. This is the time of the Goddess in her Maiden form, the return of the Sun and the very beginning of the fertile season of spring.

This is an important sabbat for many Pagans including those in Southern Illinois. As candles are lit to welcome in the sun, dancing, chanting, and wishes for a good season are created within the sacred circle. This worshipping of the cycles of nature still continues in this technological age.

My point with this letter is simple. There is more out there, spiritually and religiously, than Christianity and its cousins. I feel it is important to recognize this fact and give equal acknowledgment and respect to all beliefs.

As always, I wish a prosperous turning of the wheel to all.

society at large," he said.
"In the art world, there is a tremendous precedent for what [Lohman] has done. It shows he's aware of different contemporary 'strategies.'"
Feldman added that he had seen strong work by Lohman in the past that proved he was not doing this exhibit simply because he did not have the ability to create other types of art.
The overall consensus of some of the viewers stepping into the gallery Wednesday afternoon was one of distaste similar to Southworth's.
But along with the biting criticism, Lohman is receiving his fair share of praise. Located in the center of the exhibit is a journal he used to document the day-to-day progressions of various relationships. Toward the end of the notebook is a section reserved for comments from gallery visitors.

Though many of the visitors wrote about his lack of tasteful judgment and cursed the exploitation of his former girlfriends, others applauded the way he captured a certain time period that everyone goes through as they grow up — which is what Lohman said the exhibit is about.
"It's a celebration of young love. That high school feeling that you get with your first crush and your first heartbreak," he said. "And in a lot of ways it acts as a memorial for that nostalgic feeling. It's a chapter in my life that has come and gone and it's something that I can show.

"It's getting rid of that baggage and moving on. If you can't exploit love, what else is there to exploit?"
Southworth said the exhibit shows what Lohman was like during the time period these letters were written, and that she would be angry if she were ever in the position the artist's former girlfriends are in now.
"I'd be offended that he turned it into something meaningless because you can tell these letters meant a lot to these people," she said. "Obviously this is what he was like in high school — little Mr. Player."

A Little Legal Lesson...

The Chicago law firm of Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson is said to have "written the book" on how the universities should fight employee unions. Its advice is quite simple:

- Avoid serious negotiations with new unions
- Make low-ball, unacceptable offers to the union
- Force the union to strike before it has achieved solidarity with its membership. The union dissolves; the administration retains control.

Seyfarth, Shaw's record is well-documented. Note this excerpt from On Strike for Respect: The Clerical & Technical Workers' Strike at Yale University (1984-85):

"Sharply contrasting with (President) Giamatti's pledge to negotiate seriously with Local 34 were university actions immediately after the election. Yale dropped its local lawyers and hired the Chicago-based firm of Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson, labeled by the AFL-CIO as one of the most notorious anti-union law firms in the country. Seyfarth, Shaw had acquired its reputation by using the management-provoked strike as a weapon against newly certified unions. Its standard approach was to persuade clients to avoid serious negotiations with unions and then at the eleventh hour to make an offer known to be unacceptable to them. This tactic forced the unions to strike and risk defeat before solidifying their membership" (p.34).

Does this sound familiar?

It well might, for Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson are representing the SIUC administration in current negotiations with the Faculty Association. And the same firm was hired by the SIUC administration during the 1998 faculty organizing campaign.

international festival 98

STORY BY KAREN BLATTER

The vivid colors of the racial rainbow blended with the spicy tastes of cultural food will fill the month of February as international students are placed in the spotlight.

September marked the 50th anniversary of international students at SIUC. In honor of that, International Students at SIUC, the International Student Council, SIUC and Special Programs and Center Events are sponsoring International Festival '98. In past years this celebration of international culture was a week-long February observance, but it was expanded to honor the anniversary of the enrollment of SIUC's first international student in 1947.

The International Festival is one of the most important events sponsored and performed by international students.

Ruth Saborio, a junior in finance from Honduras and vice president of ISC, said an entire month provides a better opportunity for international students to display their different cultures.

"We are having over 20 events in a month" she said. "We are going to be able to show a piece of the international diversity that we have on campus."

SIUC presently has 1,840 international students representing 102 countries, and the University traditionally has been well known for its ability to attract those students. At one time, SIUC's international student population ranked eighth in the nation.

James Quisenberry was the director of the International Programs and Services from 1989 to 1995. He said the bulk of international students came to SIUC in the last 30 years, and he has watched the International Festival evolve as new cultures appeared on campus.

"The International Festival became a major activity while I was here because students really wanted to show their cultures," he said.

Carla Coppi, assistant director of International Students and Scholars, said those cultures add variety to the campus.

"Everywhere you look, you can see someone from a different country," she said. "We are at an extremely diverse campus."

In numerous events throughout February, international students will give SIUC and the community a taste of their various cultures starting with "A Taste of the World" at 6 p.m. Feb. 7 at the Carbondale Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave. Asian, Mediterranean, and Middle Eastern foods will spice the event, which also features entertainment from around the world.

The Chinese New Year Celebration, 6 p.m. Sunday in Student Center Ballrooms C and D, will be filled with traditional Chinese celebrations of the New Year, including a Lion Dance and colorful costumes.

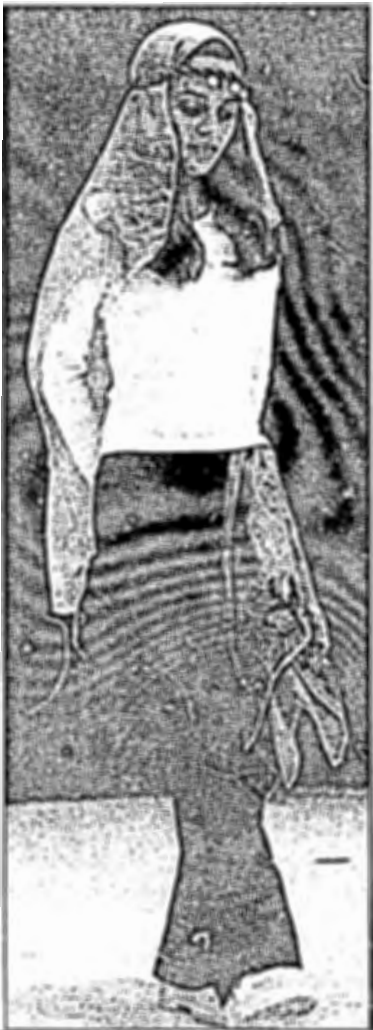

More than 400 community schoolchildren will visit campus Feb. 20 for International Exhibits, a cultural display of performances including a Japanese Tea Ceremony and the Japanese paper-folding art of origami. This event will be in the Student Center International Lounge.

To honor 50 years of international students at SIUC, the Student Recreation Center will open a Gallery of Flags Feb. 22. The gallery will feature a display of international flags provided by ISC.

The grand finale begins Feb. 27 with a large buffet in the Renaissance Room from 5 to 7 p.m. and an ISC-sponsored 50th Anniversary Reception in the Gallery Lounge from 7 to 8 p.m. These events will be followed by the International Cultural Show from 8 to 10 p.m. in Student Center Ballrooms A, B, C and D.

Bombing Iraq may mean world war

WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin warned President Clinton Wednesday that bombing Iraq could mean "world war," and he chided the American leader for performing "too loudly" in the latest Middle East crisis.

Yeltsin's statement was an alarming version of a message delivered repeatedly by his foreign policy advisers: Russia steadfastly opposes the use of force in Iraq. The reproach directed at Clinton was a new twist.

Speaking at a meeting with First Deputy Prime Minister Anatoly

Chubais, Yeltsin said that he was trying, "to somehow make Clinton understand that he might run into a world war by his actions."

"He's acting too loudly, too loudly," Yeltsin said. "You have to be more careful in a world that is saturated with all kinds of weapons, and sometimes in the hands of... terrorists. It's all very dangerous. And then to say right away, 'let's shower them with planes, then let's shower them with bombs'... no, it's not at all like Clinton, to put it frankly."

He said that if the use of force against Iraq came to a vote in the United Nations Security Council, members would vote against it.

Iraq is a test case for Moscow's effort to restore the global influence it lost after the collapse of the Soviet Union. The campaign, spearheaded by Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov, so far has been carefully calibrated to avoid conflict with the United States.

Yeltsin's spokesman, Sergei Yastrzhembsky, used an unusual method Wednesday to try to calm international nerves over the "world war" remark. Before anyone had had a chance to write a story, he blamed the press. He accused American reporters with poor linguistic skills of misinterpreting Yeltsin's remarks to mean Russia would attack the United States.

Technology.

As a result, more money for student scholarships or stipends would come directly from SIUC instead of from the federal government.

"There is no problem that money can't solve," he said. "Now if we can just find a big pot of money somewhere."

That proposed pot of gold would be additional money accumulated through an aggressive fund-raising campaign.

At Michigan Tech, he said, he has been working on a plan to raise $100 million in the next five years.

"I think with the right leadership, we can do that here," he said.

Also with the right leadership, Dobney said the issue of whether or not the SIUC faculty should unionize would have never been raised. He said "abysmally low" salaries led faculty to unionize. "I feel bad for faculty here," he said.

"It would not have happened if I was here, but it's too late in a sense."

In closing, Dobney cited his sometimes blunt candor as both a strength and a liability.

"Unfortunately, I usually say what I think," he said. "I can be persuaded that I'm wrong, but I don't think I am."

also a member of the Carbondale Chapter of the NAACP and the Carbondale Rotary Club.

Lewin said the time parents spend with their children is unequal to the hours children are in school. With a balance of parent and teacher interaction, children can be better prepared for their futures.

"Is anyone really listening to what children are saying?" she asked. "We must find some consensus, and we must find an answer."

"There are a lot of issues we have to work on with the parents. So much of that is really making that parent feel welcome. Then it will come naturally."

Lewin said programs and workshops are being designed within the school system geared toward helping teachers and parents work together effectively.

"Today's children find it difficult to find the boundaries of structure," she said. "They want the guidance. They want the [role] modeling. They want to know we love them unconditionally.

"We know there are parents who want to be in the schools, and we are at the stage now where we know this is something we need to do. When children know the parent and teacher are working together they won't act up in the classroom."

Lewin's views about improving the school system convinced Yalonda Jones choosing a career in education was the right decision.

Jones, a senior in special education from Kankakee, wanted to be a teacher since she was a child. Like Lewin, she wants to impact children's futures.

"As I listened to her speak, it seemed like she made everything personalized," she said. "I see a definite need for that. It takes someone who cares enough to get involved with the children, and if we can make things more personalized we will make a tremendous influence."

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, said Lewin's involvement with the school system benefits all students, not only African-American students.

He said her return to SIUC as the keynote speaker displays her commitment to success.

"From my perspective, we have a lot of black alumni return and share their experiences," Welch said. "And I'm pleased to welcome her here and celebrate her achievement."

Welch said Lewin's words can be expressed not only toward grade school children but toward college students as well.

"I think what she is saying is that involvement is the key — getting parents involved in the schools," he said. "On a college level, you as a student need to get involved in the class, rather than just sitting in the class. This would be an example to me of a college student getting involved. This will increase learning."

Chappell said he wants to be a part of every child's learning process.

"Overall, teachers have the largest impact on society. Like any other kid, I thought teachers knew it all. Hopefully I can have that. I can develop myself on that level so I can help children have the answers to their own questions."

FunkyTown defrosts disco at Dragon

JASGN ADRIAN

The '70s are gone — just like the '80s, '60s and '50s.

But when Funky Town takes the stage tonight at 10 at the Copper Dragon Brewing Co., 700 E. Grand Ave., the pulse of the '70s will be showing signs of some major pop culture pumping as part of a '70s Disco Party.

And as the primary source behind this '70s resurrection, Funky Town will dig deep into the realm of '70s disco when it breaks out the familiar tunes from popular glitter-day acts such as KC and the Sunshine Band, Donna Summer, the Village People and the Jackson 5.

"The songs are fun and there's something everybody can relate to," drummer Derek Dynamite said.

"I think we all grew up knowing these songs. Every song we play, everyone will know.

"There's no underground disco here."

It's easy to say each decade's music is making a comeback, but Dynamite sees an honest revival starting with the music of the '70s.

"The reason disco is coming back is that the population seems to be stale now because the newer music is not happy," Dynamite said.

"It's kind of depressing in the lyrics, and the music is not as up tempo as most of the disco.

"And I think everybody just wants to be happy toward the end of the decade."

There is no better way to keep people happy than to get their feet stomping and their hips shaking on the dance floor to the sounds of a funky beat.

Copper Dragon General Manager James Karayiannis said Funky Town is the perfect band to break down any reservations people might have about being out on the floor.

"It's probably the first band we've ever had here that people were dancing on the dance floor during the first song," he said. "They usually wait halfway into the first set before they get out there."

The music will be on hand to keep people dancing and make them happy on the inside. But for the aura of a full-fledged disco atmosphere, clothing must flash-back as well.

As part of the '70s Disco Party, there will be a costume contest for the best '70s era get-up. Outfits will be judged by crowd reaction and applause.

Donning the disco chains, big collars and polyester not only makes people feel fly or groovy, but it gives people an excuse to dress

New training method may help team

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC sophomore track and field distance runner Jenny Monaco and his teammates have been using a new training method to prepare for the Indiana Mid-America Invite in Bloomington, Ind. — swimming.

Monaco said the team's distance runners have been working out in the pool to stay fresh and prepare for the meet this weekend.

"Well, I think a lot of people are stepping up in our distance running," Monaco said. "Training has been a little different, and everyone has responded well to it."

"The workouts in the pool take pressure off the legs. We're just taking the easy days easy, so when we have hard practices and races we're ready."

Monaco is fresh off an eighth-place finish at the Butler Invitational in the 3,000-meter run with a time of 10 minutes and 20.25 seconds.

The other top finisher for the Salukis at Butler was the first-place distance medley relay team (12:04.40) of seniors Raina Larsen and Kelly French, sophomore Leah Nolden and freshman Becky Cox. Freshman Felicia Hill finished third in the high jump (1.72 meters) and fourth in the triple jump (11.51 meters), while sophomore Finda Fallah placed fourth in the long jump (5.41 meters).

Women's coach Don DeNoon said the 15-team meet featuring the University of North Carolina, University of Cincinnati, Indiana State University and Ohio State University should provide a unique challenge for his Salukis team.

"The meet this weekend should be very competitive," DeNoon said. "It should be good solid competition all the way through."

Monaco said the team's fresh legs do not indicate lighter practices. However, they should help throughout the duration of the meet.

"It seems like we've been doing less, but it's been real quality," Monaco said.

The men's track and field team is coming off a weekend of achieving personal bests at the Butler Invite.

Junior Jeremy Parks ran a season-best (8:30.43) in the 3,000-meter run for a first-place finish in the collegiate level and third overall.

Sophomore Matt McClelland ran the mile (4:16.16) for an eighth-place finish, while freshman Chris Owen finished 18th in the mile (4:24.28). Sophomore Noam Darsa finished 11th in the 800-meter (1:53.34). McClelland, Owen and Darsa also ran personal bests.

TRACK
•The men's and women's track and field team will be in action Friday and Saturday at the Mid-America Invite in Bloomington, Ind.

Men's coach Bill Cornell said he wants his athletes to continue improving on their conference rankings.

"Training has been going well this week," Cornell said. "We need to close the gap on the MYC (Missouri Valley Conference) rating list."

Cornell wants the team to be at its top performance by the conference tournament Feb. 27-28 in Normal.

"Hopefully, we'll stay away from any injuries or sickness," Cornell said. "We just want to get a little better each meet and try to peak at the Missouri Valley Conference meet."

Prediction: Duke won't be No. 1 when Corey's beloved Blue Devils play UNC. The Tar heels have a score to settle about who should be No. 1. It will not be pretty for Duke fans and not much fun for Corey.

Prediction: Coach K is the new Dean of the ACC. Duke passes the UNC mid-term with flying colors, before final exams in March. I suggest the Tarheels drop the class, while they still can get a refund.

Prediction: North Carolina squeezes by the Blue Devils at home, and Duke gets another scare before pulling it out at NC State. In tonight's forgotten game, Arkansas is too tough at home to fall to Ansu Sesay and his Ole Miss teammates.

Salukis defeat hapless Aces

RECORD BREAKING:
Hudson breaks 1,000 point mark in blowout at SIU Arena.

Saluki center Theia Hudson can breathe a sigh of relief after scoring her 1,000th career point at SIUC and helping her team extend a winning streak Wednesday night.

Hudson, who scored 19 points and now has 1,002 points in her career at SIUC, said she liked getting it done at home but was ready to get her 1,000th point regardless of where she was playing.

"I'm just happy to do it anywhere," Hudson said.

"I wanted it bad. I wanted to hurry and get it over with."

The Salukis crushed the University of Evansville 73-52 Wednesday night at the SIU Arena. The Salukis end a five-game losing streak at home and pick up their third consecutive win.

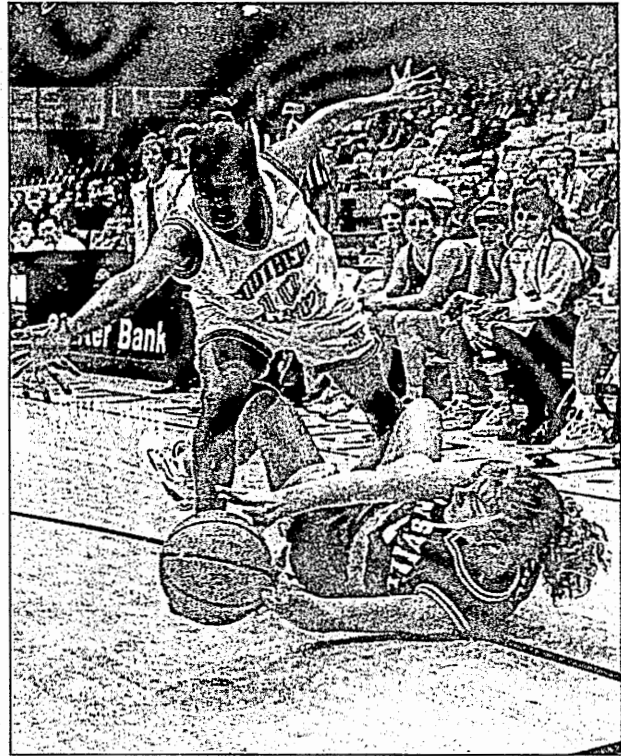

Women's head coach Cindy Scott said her team can now relax more with the home win.

"It is nice to feel like you can win at home," Scott said. "We're 1-5 at home and not feeling very comfortable here. That was a good game for us to get."

With the victory, the Salukis improve to a record of 8-12 overall and 5-7 in Missouri Valley Conference play.

The Salukis move up in the conference standings, surpassing the University of Northern Iowa, and now have seventh place to themselves. The Panthers are 4-6 in the conference and play Illinois State University at home tonight.

The Aces (5-15, 0-12) have now lost 15 games in a row and remain in the basement of the conference. A big key in the game was solid defense and overall play of freshman center Kristine Abramowski, who had six steals, three blocks, four assists and six points.

"Defensively, we had held them to their season low," Scott said. "I thought Kristine was beautiful. You look across the stats and it is not impressive, but her play is extremely impressive."

The Salukis as a team stopped the Aces on the defensive end, holding them to a dismal 37 percent from the field.

But it was not just defense that was working for the Salukis. They also shot well in both halves, shooting 60 percent from the field in the first half and 50 percent for the game.

In the final eight and a half minutes of the first half, the Salukis went on a 24-7 run and took a 10-point lead with them at the intermission, never looking back.

The Salukis opened the second half with six straight points to take a 41-25 lead. The rest of the game was catch up for the Aces as the Salukis continued to add to their lead.

Freshman forward Courtney Smith was right behind Hudson with 18 points to complement her 12 boards. Sophomore forward O'Desha Proctor also added 12 points.

ON THE ROAD: Salukis hoping to rebound from last Saturday's loss at home, as forward may be key to success.

SIUC's Abel Schrader may be only a freshman, but that does not mean he is willing to let his inexperience limit his play.

Schrader, a 6-foot-4 forward for the Saluki men's basketball team, often takes it upon himself to give the Salukis an offensive spark.

He has spent most of the season backing up senior Rashad Tucker. But when given the chance to show his capabilities, he is ready and willing to live up to his first name.

"I try to create stuff when I'm out there," Schrader said. "Maybe I probably do it too much. They told me if I'm in the game and I get a shot, take it."

Schrader did plenty of scoring before coming to SIUC. As a senior at Okawville High School, he averaged 28 points per game, earning him All-State honors.

As a collegian, he has not nearly come close to equaling his point productivity in high school, scoring 3.6 a game. With the Salukis preparing for tonight's game at the Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., Schrader knows his time will come.

"Now, everybody's quicker and jumps higher than I can," said Schrader, who has a career high of 16 points this season. "I just need to get my confidence up."

Schrader and Carbonada's native Joshua Cross are the only freshmen on the team, and the two are not strangers to one another. Both played in the IBCA All-Star game last summer and have developed a close relationship on and off the court.

"As a freshman, you're going to hang out together a little bit," Schrader said. "You go into school with both of us not knowing too much about college. You've got to kind of feed off together."

After completing the season sweep over Southwest Missouri State University Monday, the Salukis look to rebound from Saturday's 63-61 setback to the Blue Jays at the SIU Arena.

Creighton forward Rodney Buford hit the game-winning jump shot for the Blue Jays, who are 14-6 overall and 8-4 in the Missouri Valley Conference. SIUC enters tonight at 9-11 overall, 4-6 in the MVC.

Saluki assistant coach Virgil Molsinger said a solid start to the game could produce a different outcome. The last time the two teams met, Creighton jumped out to a 13-point halftime lead before holding off the Salukis.

"We dug a hole and couldn't get out of it very quickly," Molsinger said. "Basically, what it boiled down to was they played better than us in the first half, and we played better than them in second half. But it wasn't good enough to overcome the first half."

In the defeat, SIUC did manage to hold Buford, the MVC's scoring leader to five points below his average. Buford finished with 13 points on 5-of-17 shooting.

Schrader was impressed with Buford's ability, but does not have any doubts of the Salukis extending their winning streak.

"I don't think there is any reason we can't beat Creighton," Schrader said. "It's at their place and it will be a little tougher, but if we play well I think we can beat them."
