Anti-rape transit planned

Night travel, viewed fearfully by many women, should soon be safer under a low-cost pilot program, which excludes alcohol.

The Women's Transit Authority (WTA), a group which will provide after-dark transportation for women, recently received $1,000 each from the city and University.

The program will operate a van on routes through the city and campus, charging women 50 cents.

But, Kathy Stathis of the Women's Center said women will not be denied the service if they don't have the fee.

"The charge is to help with funding," Stathis said. "If someone wants to give more, the program could sure use it.

"Marie Kingbury of the rape education committee said public interest for the nighttime transit grew out of concern voiced by women at two rape forums held last year at SU.

Both drivers for the van will be women. Kingsbury said, because male drivers would draw the public's sexual attentions. Marill also be excluded from using the transit service for the same reason, Kingsbury added.

Routes the van will travel will be publicized at a later date and women wanting to use it will be expected to walk to the route to be picked up. However, there will be no emergency telephone number women may use if they are stranded off the usual route.

Stathis cautioned that the van service is not the equivalent of a taxi cab, and that drivers would not transport more than two women traveling together.

The van will travel its evening route seven days a week. It will operate between 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday, and from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m. Sunday through Thursday—total of 35 hours a week.

Kingsbury said the rape education committee, which originated the transit program, studied similar systems in other cities. The Vermont program operates from 8 a.m. to 12 a.m. on weekdays, 12 a.m. to 12 midnight on week-end days," Kingsbury said, explaining why no transit service will be offered after 12 a.m. during the week.

"We can always expand," Kingsbury said, "if Carbondale's program shows a need for more hours.

Kingsbury expects the van to be on the route by about Feb. 1.

The program, which will last from three to four months, will be evaluated to determine whether it warrants a long-time program.

In a written recommendation, City Manager Gerald Fry proposed that a long-term approach be adopted if the pilot program is successful.

Funding sought for new study by sex-pot researcher Rubin

This is the first of a two-part series.

By Steve Krupa
Research Correspondent

Harris Rubin, whose controversial sex research was funded last year in seeking money for another study project, though he says this one will be reviewed with the byproduct of an actual sexual arousal.

"We have decided to reveal any details of the proposed study, saying that he won't reveal the project's nature until the proposal is accepted by the National Institutes of Health," Rubin said.

The only details of the proposed study are that officials in the Division of Research and Projects will devise a brief scientific summary.

The proposal, entitled "Endocrine Correlates of Psychophysiological Arousal," was submitted late last year to the National Institutes of Health (NIH) in Bethesda, Md. NIH is part of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Hawse, assistant director for the Division of Research and Projects, said that funding requested for the project at $25,000 and $100,000 a year, for a period of two or three years.

A decision on whether the project will receive funding is expected in July, Hawse said. The proposal must first be submitted to the Social Problems Research Committee of the National Institutes of Health Mental Health Council, which will make its own recommendations concerning the project, Hawse said.

The NIH program officer will then determine the project's worth and then fund them down the line usually until the money available is depleted, Hawse said.

A project summary released by Hawse states that the study will attempt to determine how normal physiological fluctuations enhance or inhibit subjective experience of human behavior. Important objectives of the study include:

-To determine how fluctuations in hormones such as testosterone, extradiol, progesterone and cortisol affect human psychophysiological reactions, or those involving mental and bodily functions.

-To determine what hormones or combinations of hormones enhance or inhibit psychophysiological reactions.

-Although methods of measuring hormone levels in the blood have increased the study of the relationships between hormones and human behavior, little is known about the effect of hormone levels on the summary state. Most studies in the area have evaluated the effects of experimentally induced hormone changes, or have been designed to evaluate the effect of hormone levels on the summary state. Most studies in the area have evaluated the effects of experimentally induced hormone changes, or have been designed to evaluate the effect of hormone levels on the summary state.

To determine if self-reported activities occurring outside an experimental environment affect hormone levels and psychophysiological reactions.

To determine how the research will be conducted is not revealed in the proposal. Neither Rubin nor Hawse would comment on the methods that would be used.

Rubin, an associate professor in the School of Medicine who specializes in sexual research, would be assisted on the study by three other faculty members from the same school.

Those researchers, as listed on the summary are, Richard E. Palco, a research assistant professor; Donald E. Nelson, visiting assistant professor; and Ronald A. Ferguson, director of the Family Practice Center, will also assist on the project if it is approved.

Carter promises tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter held out the promise of income tax cuts for 98 percent of the nation's taxpayers Thursday night in a State of the Union message that chimed Congress for an energy deadlock he said is becoming intolerable.

"On energy legislation we have failed the American people," Carter said. "Not much longer can we tolerate this stalemate.

His first address on the State of the Union produced no major surprises, nor did the 33-page written catalog of administration programs be presented to the reconvened 96th Congress.

Still, he presented a hefty agenda to an election year Congress he said he would not overload with proposals.

"Military, politically, economically, and in spirit, the state of our union is sound," Carter said in his text for a nationally "broadcast appearance at a joint session of Congress.

While saying the United States faces "no single overwhelming crisis," the president told the curtain-raising session of the 1978 Congress that, nevertheless, "profound national interests are at stake," notably in the realm of the economy.

After first again appealing for enactment of his stalled energy program, Carter sketched in broad outline a forthcoming proposal to reduce income tax cuts by more than 25 percent of the $200 billion in tax cuts promised for the tax cut the American citizens by 25 percent.

"Almost $7 billion in income tax cuts will go to individuals," he said.

"Ninety-six percent of American taxpayers will see their taxes go down. For a typical family of four this will mean an annual savings of more than $200 — a tax reduction of about 20 percent.

Cartier also said he will submit Saturday a plan to cut federal excise taxes by $3 billion, which he said would "directly reduce the rate of inflation.

In addition, he called for "strong additional incentives for business investment through substantial cuts in corporate tax rates and improvements in the investment tax credit.

Taking the wraps off the gest of a new anti-inflation program, the president raised his opposition to wage and price controls.

Touching briefly on foreign affairs, Carter said his administration "has restored a moral basis for our foreign policy" and declared, "the world must know that in support of human rights the United States will stand firm...."
Nightmares? Panel researches sleep disorders

By Karen Cagwell
Student Writer

What causes sleep disorders such as nightmares, sleep-walking and sleep-talking? When does each occur during sleep, and what physiological changes are seen in the individual? And how can each be treated?

There are a few questions Stephen Haynes, associate professor of psychology, and graduate research assistants Linda Kamens and Sheila West will study this semester in the sleep research laboratory at Life Science II. Persons who feel they are victims of such disorders may volunteer to be subjects for the research.

"You don’t have to be a student to be a subject," Kamens said. "If you feel that it would be nice to get some people in from the community to provide more variance in ages.

Two disorders they are studying data on are narcolepsy and apnea.

Narcolepsy is a condition in which individuals fall asleep suddenly during normal waking activities, Kamens said. But she added, "most people who fall asleep during class are not narcoleptic, just bored."

Apnea is a disorder in which a person awakes many times during the night to catch his breath. The person actually stops breathing, Kamens said, possibly because the muscles of the diaphragm have relaxed too much.

"No one really knows what apnea is because it’s a new area of research," West said.

"It’s difficult to detect except under the circumstances of testing the disorder are usually unaware of it and with psychomotor difficulties," Haynes described the basic goal of sleep research as a search for disorder treatment. "In order to achieve that," he added, "we have to know what causes that disorder.

In the lab the researchers get clinical proof of the physiological changes that occur during sleep, which then aid the search for effective treatment.

Since last spring, when the lab was started, data on insomnias has been collected.

Haynes is testing to see if insomnias and non-insomnias differ measurably in physiological changes. Also, the differences in thoughts, observations during waking hours, physical waking habits and other psychological and physiological variables of insomnia are studied.

Haynes said previous research on insomnia shows any procedure that produces a rest period or a relaxation training, seems to help relieve insomnia.

To make data available for study, subjects are given a questionnaire each night about their daytime activities, moods and physiological changes, West said.

During initial contact, the volunteer is questioned briefly about his or her habits and disturbances, then asked to come in for an interview with one of the student research assistants. During this interview the lab process is explained.

If chosen, an appointment is set up for the subject to attend a sleep lab. It is set 45 minutes earlier than usual sleep time so the subject will have time to adjust to the new environment and go to sleep.

In the morning, the subject is given another questionnaire on how he feels it slept.

Electrodes used to measure physiological changes are attached to measure brainwaves, eye movements, muscle tension and heart rate. They are then hooked into a panel near the bed that feeds the data into polygraph machines.

Because of all the wires attached to parts of the body, the subject must use an intercom near the bed to notify one of the researchers if he or she needs to get up during the night.

"We still don’t even know why people sleep at all," West said, and added that studying sleep disorders can aid scientists in the establishment of sleeping patterns.

Fligor murder still unsolved

Police are continuing their investigation into the death of Lucille Fligor, but they have no suspects or leads in the case.

Mrs. Fligor was found strangled at her home Nov. 29, on US. 41 south of Carbondale.

Don White, Jackson County sheriff, said that a $5,000 reward fund, started by friends and relatives, has grown to over $7,000 with donations from other citizens.

The reward will go to the person providing information leading to the arrest and conviction of Fligor’s murderer.

However, White went on to say that "surprisingly, the number of calls concerning the case didn’t increase after the reward was offered."

"Most of the people calling are just now wanting to know if we have thought about investigating the case in a certain way," White said.

Burylary is still considered the motive in the killing, White said. Items stolen from the Fligor residence include a German Luger, two semi-automatic rifles, ammunition and a television set.

Description of the murderer is forwarded to the Chicago Police information network. None have been recovered.

Also stolen was the Fligor’s 1975 Oldsmobile, a white, four-door car driving a car that fits the description heading toward Carbondale the morning of the murder.

Acting on a tip, Carbondale police recovered the car near 346 Hester St. on Nov. 30. It was dusty to match those in house, but police were able to link the fingerprints to an assailant.

Snow news

After a 16-inch snowfall this week, forecasters predict a chance of flurries Friday. Temperatures are expected to remain in the low 20’s the next few days, with a low of 19 on Friday afternoon, dropping to the low teens Friday night. Probability of precipitation is 30 percent.

Sill classes opened for the first time since school was closed because of snow last week, with attendance reported below normal. Most departments and offices reported all employees and officers reporting for work Thursday afternoon, with the low temperatures. School was closed last week because of a possible blizzard that could probably have reopened just before New Year’s Day. Instead, officials kept warning that the galosh could blow up part of the plant’s cooling system. So they kept the plant closed until they had figured out a way to assure themselves that the galosh had disintegrated.
Famous grads may bring elite chapter

By Ray Valek

The recent removal of an American Association of University Professors (AAUP) chapter may be the first step in the way for establishing a Phi Beta Kappa chapter here.

The AAUP, which consists of distinguished SIU professors, is being compelled by the University's petition for a chapter of the nation's oldest honorary scholastic society.

The censure, which was lifted last May, has no legal weight, but is considered a "negative mark" in higher education. SIU was censured in 1973 for its handling of the case of Douglas M. Adams, a graduate in political philosophy. Allen was denied tenure in 1974 because of his alleged antisocial activities and despite favorable recommendations from the majority of the faculty and the campus and Interim President Robert G. Layer.

The vote to expel AAUP chapter, said Tuesday the censure was probably the group's main problem. Now that the censure has been lifted, Klein said he sees no after-effects huring the group's chances when it tries again for a chapter within the next year.

"I think they should be able to get a chapter now without any trouble," Klein said, noting that SIU met all the necessary criteria.

One of the main things missing from the group is the lack of a comprehensive list of distinguished graduates, on which to document SIU's excellence.

To bolster SIU's credentials, John Geringer, a SIU grad and member of a group of Phi Beta Kappas on Illinois campuses, said he thought the inclusion of Keith Sanders, associate professor in speech communication and president of the SIU Alumni Association, in the organization's communication class. "Research Methods in Public Relations," would help prepare a list of distinguished graduates.

"The most important part of the credentials needed is a demonstration that graduates achieve status after SIU graduates. It is absolutely essential to have a comprehensive list of distinguished graduates who have been SIU students," Geringer said.

According to the SIU chapter, SIU graduates have achieved T in the late T EaT, with emphasis on comprehensive training. The initial set of activities the next year will include SIU graduates in the society.

The most recent SIU graduates is being compiled by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) chapter. The SIU chapter has named a list of distinguished graduates in the first two years of the chapter's existence. The list, which includes 775 graduates in 10 fields, is a part of a report titled "The Documentation of Excellence," which was compiled after interviewing representatives from academic departments at SIU, reviewing departmental files, scanning the "class notes" section of the Alumni, the SIU Alumni Association general news index and the SIU Alumni correspondence files, the report states.

SIU graduates listed in higher education administration totaled 135, with 12 presidents. Full professors who attended SIU totaled 17. SIU graduates who became prominent in business, industry, banking or utilities totaled 47. SIU graduates who went on to held distinguished positions in state government added to 78, while 32 graduates held important positions in national government.

Authors, editors and print journalists on the list totaled 51. Graduates making important contributions in medicine and law amounted to 12. Among the most recognized was Dr. John Pedderson. Seven athletes and seven graduates involved in the military, including one general, two admirals and an admiral.

Among celebrities named were Walt Frazier, professional basketball star with the Cleveland Cavaliers; Dick Gregory, nationally known comic, civil rights worker and author; Jim Hart, St. Louis Cardinals quarterback and Richatiend Ronstreet, star of the movie " Shaft."

Some SIU graduates are now working in foreign nations. Camille Becker, a 1952 SIU graduate in government and administration, is the director of public education in the European Economic Community Commission Market in Brussels, Belgium. Abbas Amir, a 1963 doctoral graduate in government in the executive director of the Institute for Political and Economic Studies in Tehran, Iran. Joe Hung, a 1963 master's graduate in journalism, is the managing editor of the China Post, the largest English language daily in Germany, the report stated.

Guyen said whether the censure was a factor in the Phi Beta Kappa credentials committee denial of a SIU chapter is "imponderable and pure hypothesis.

The improvement of the general scholarly atmosphere of the campus and the benefits a chapter gives students accumulating credentials for career advancement and the advantages of having a Phi Beta Kappa chapter on campus, Guyen said.

The AAUP chapter will hold its spring meeting of this year and reapply for another chance at a chapter in 1991.

University teachers’ pay falling behind other states

This is the second of a two-part series.

By Robert Re Uzser
Associated Press Writer

Some 1,300 professors in Illinois still earn more than their colleagues at half of the comparable out-of-state institutions. They have lost some ground in the past seven years.

Compensation for the other academic ranks in Illinois has increased, but it is deteriorated more substantially.

In the state, the university academic rank, followed by associate professor, assistant professor and instructor. The Board of Higher Education, armed with a pay study done by the American Association of University Professors, has recommended a 5 percent increase for next year.

The study examined pay, salary plus fringe benefits, 1970 and fiscal 1977. Illinois universities are grouped with schools in other states that have similar numbers of full-time students and growth, emphasis on graduate programs and number of doctoral programs.

"Back in 1971 our universities were above average in total compensation paid. Now they're average or below."

The 1971 figures combined the faculty members at Urbana-Champaign, Champaign and Illinois-IIIinois, while the 1977 figures did not.

Chicago City, which earned $29,000 in the last fiscal year, compared with $31,700 in the last year, had the median for its ranks.

Also included on the list of 35 schools were Illinois State, Northern Illinois and Southern Illinois at Carbondale and Edwardsville. All ranks at those schools dropped off the list last year.

Instructors fared the worst. All earned less than the median of $14,000. The largest disparity was at Chicago-City, Illinois, where instructors earned $2,500 less and fell 12th in the nation.

Chicago State, Eastern Illinois and Western Illinois were in a group with 51 schools. Chicago State professors earned $24,700, the median in the nation, while the 1977 figures showed $9,000 less.

Don't forget, plates must be on Jan. 31.

You won't be able to blame it on the weather.

This year's license plates must be replaced by Jan. 31—unlike past years when that area was usually extended into February. In 1977, because of cold weather, the deadline was extended to March.

Secretary of State Alan J. Dixon has warned that absolutely no extensions will be granted as many last-minute registrations and renewals make the flow of license applications.

In Carbondale, plates may be bought at two local banks: the First National Bank and Trust Company, 509 S. University, and the University Bank of Carbondale, 1500 W. Main. Both banks are charging a $2 fee added to the license plate cost.

Pol-o' w ticket vehicles will be accepted up to Jan. 31.

This will be the final year of seven-year plates. Beginning this fall, five-year plates will be sold and only a sticker will be necessary, which will be valid each following year.

Radical head gets fine, probation

CHICAGO (AP)—One-time student radical who once was assessed a fine and placed on two years probation for his part in a 1969 anti-war demonstration was freed today by Judge John J. Moran of Circuit Court. They said the charge would be dropped and no immunity for him that had been promised be a former student who had been arrested.

Rudd, a former student at Columbia University, is a leader of the Weather Underground faction of the Students for a Democratic Society, a group that has been on the run for many years. Rudd said he was convicted of possession of explosives.

The fine was assessed him on a visit to New York City and the fine paid at a later date.

Judge Rudd said he had to make an any comment to reporters at the hearing, had pleaded guilty to battery and charges arising out of the demonstration in which he was arrested.

Judge N. H. Mann of the Connecticut Supreme Court, said the court was "deeply disturbed" over the arrest of the far-right man, the arrest of which primarily was an act of self-defense, and the arrest of which primarily was an act of self-defense.

Rudd charged that the court was "deeply disturbed" over the arrest of the far-right man, the arrest of which primarily was an act of self-defense, and the arrest of which primarily was an act of self-defense.

A report today to the state police that was received by the Illinois Department of State Police said the man was not involved in the protest and was not in violation of the law.

"Rudd noted today for the expensive spotters who bears his name, hit six points in the last 10 minutes of a game against the number one team in the nation, Michigan State."

Close utilities' swinging door at ICC

Rate increases by the Central Illinois Public Service Co. (CIPS) are fast becoming an annual tradition. But it's an unwelcome tradition that must be broken, starting with the electric rate increase request by CIPS, which is now before the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC).

CIPS is asking for a 5.6 percent gas rate increase and a 17 percent electric rate hike. CIPS requested this increase in May, less than two months after the ICC approved a 5.2 percent hike in electric rates in April. Sixty-five counties in central and southern Illinois would be affected if these latest rate hikes are okayed.

At least the ICC had enough sense to reduce the CIPS electric rate increase to 9.2 percent last April. (CIPS had originally requested a 21 percent hike.) A survey last week from the Environmental Action Foundation of Washington, D.C. showed that CIPS charges its customers higher rates than two-thirds of the country's largest power companies. That seems reason enough to persuade the ICC to refuse CIPS' latest rate increase request altogether.

Local residents and students who live off-campus have endured increase after increase from CIPS during the last three years. With tuition and fees increasing along with the CPIs hike, the CIPS hike is unneeded salt in students' financial wounds.

CIPS' latest rate hike request has sparked vigorous opposition from area consumer groups. The Illinois Public Interest Action Movement (SCAM) and the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPRIG) are fighting against this increase. SCAM member David Garner has said that the ICC grants rate hikes to utilities in Illinois too easily.

"The utilities in Illinois have a swinging door at the ICC and it is time that this practice is stopped," Garner has said. "We have learned that utilities like CIPS keep coming back again and again for more rate increases."

A look at the record shows that Garner is right. In the past three years CIPS rates went up three times.

In January, 1975, the ICC granted CIPS a 4.1 percent electric rate increase. A little over a year later, in March 1976, a 5.2 percent hike was approved. During this period, gas rates increased upward also. More was to come.

In May of 1978, when CIPS requested its whopping 21 percent electric rate hike, it told customers through advertisements that extra revenue was needed to cover the rising costs of trucks, transformers, utility poles and other equipment. CIPS spent more than $330,000 in 1976 and $468,566 in 1977 on advertising and public relations—even though it has no competitors and its customers have no option but to buy CIPS services.

In October, CIPS lobbying efforts helped bring about the defeat of the "Lifeline" bill in the state legislature. The Lifeline bill would have lowered rates for those customers—such as many elderly persons—who use low amounts of electricity.

Maybe CIPS needs a rate increase to support its growing advertising budget and its lobbying efforts against the consumers it serves. But its customers do not need it. After three years of continued rate increases, CIPS customers deserve a break. CIPS should trim its advertising budget and lobbying activities and reduce the frequency of its rate increase requests.

Until CIPS makes this effort, SCAM and IPRIG are right: New electric rate increases by CIPS, including the latest request for a 17 percent hike, must be stopped by the ICC.

Panama treaty: Early lessons may be too late

By Gary Wills

The history of the Vietnam War was written before the Vietnam War occurred—by Graham Greene. Slowly, with resistance, we have come to realize that "The Quiet American" is not only a great novel and a great analysis of America's historical attitude toward foreign policy—it also recorded our loss of Vietnam before most of us realized we had--something there which we could "lose."

We are slow learners. But even slow learners should do better the second time around. And now Greene has given us his glimpse of the possible new Vietnam on our own doorstep. Thinking Panama's General Torrijos, whom Greene knows well and admires, Greene's blend of earthy practicality and aspiration for his people, the novelist sees an inner conflict. The man who has taken a simple public position is of necessity trapped in a petty suspension of it.

One could go further and say Torrijos hates the treaty. It delays and dilutes the Panamanian rights which, he knows, his own people are demanding. Then why sign the treaty? He puts it bluntly to Greene: "To save the lives of 60,000 poor Panamanians."

And what if the American Congress rejects the draft treaty or further dilutes it? Greene sees a secret rebellious desire in Torrijos that America should do just that. "He would then be left with the simple solution of violence which has often been in his mind, with desire and apprehension balanced as in a sexual encounter." The belief of Panamanians would die. But, as the victim nation, Panama would win—just as Vietnam won. America would have been trapped into another colonial action for doomed colonial anarchisms. (In a weird way, this is the very lesson we are trying to teach the South Africans, while we fail to learn it ourselves.)

Wounding our own country, we would bestow renewed and vivid nationality on our victim conquerors, much as proud England gave us our sense of national identity in the 19th century.

Greene tells us the facts we try to blink. Torrijos has put his life in forfeit for this treaty. His own most popular course would be to denounce his own actions. Americans who do not know that know nothing about Latin America—do not know, for instance, that no Latin American ruler—not even the most pro-American one—could stand with us in a war on Panama.

The principal beneficiary of a war on Panama would not be Torrijos, or even the Panamanians, but Fidel Castro. Torrijos, a friend of Fidel, is trapped into being our last best ally against him in the matter of this treaty. No wonder Torrijos would feel a release from unpleasant duty if we rejected his compromise.

Greene wrote on Panama last year for The New York Review of Books. It returns to the subject in the current issue of the same journal—briefly, in less than 2,000 words. Read it. You are getting your history early. Yet even early lessons may come too late, as happened with Greene's teachings on Vietnam. If we cannot learn even now, we are clearly unteachable.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. Dean: The administration's decision to close the Gannett communication building on the campus of the University of Illinois is a violation of the students' right to free speech. The building is being used as a staging area for communications by the university administration. The university administration has refused to allow students to use the building for democratic purposes. This is a violation of the students' right to free speech. The beginning of the end for the Communications Building came quietly.

Snowflakes as big as giant hexagons you could hang on a Christmas tree landed softly on the roof. As the worst snowfall in 60 years blanketed the building, students and professors inside could gauge the gape on the roof by the increasing rhythm of water dripping through numerous holes in the ceiling.

Unlike the sinking of the Titanic, people in the journalism wing could see the end coming. As snow kept falling, the tempo of dripping water ominously increased.

As tension mounted, students and professors began to exhibit strange behavior. For people skilled in the art of communication, they even began to talk funny.

"Do you have any direction on what to do about the drip-drip drop problem we have here," one professor demanded of an administration member.

"We'll have it fixed by spring if you can hold on that long," the administrator answered.

In the meantime, professors used garage cans to sublime the leaks and live ocean spouts were enlisted to help absorb the steadily increasing fixed of water cascading from cracks in the roof.

During the morning tide, students got used to wearing galoshes to their classes. But as the leaks grew in size, garage cans were replaced with half-tubs and the remaining courageous students resorted to hip-waders. What did do you delineate as a solution to this drip-drip drop problem?" the disoriented professors kept demanding.

"We plan to put a giant raincoat on the building," came the answer from Anthony Hall.

"Will this decision be delayed until drip delivery?" the teachers muttered distractedly. The raingroofs, having the effect of Chinese water torture, were steadily increasing the speech problems.

"We'll get it done as soon as we can," the administrators answered them. "We just can't find a store that sells raincoats big enough."

Finally, after the ocean spigots gave up the ship and drowned, the administration knew it would have to act quickly. The students were now wearing chest-waders--the next step would be going down with the ship.

Innovation!" the administration cried.

"That will be our tactic to put up the big bar of garbage letters we would get if journalism photographe and radio TV majors started to drown themselves in their work.

That's when the recreation majors began to take over. They came with scuba gear, flippers, air tanks and diving suits.

"What do you think you're drip-drip doing?" a photography professor demanded.

We're going to seal off all the entrances at ground level and let the building fill up naturally. We'll use it as an underwater training ground for our swimming classes.

"Excellent!" cried the administrators.

"WAIT! Where's drip-drip does that leave us?" the bewildered communications professors and students cried out.

Not a word was spoken as the administrators pointed to the parking lot. An enormous gopherwood ship floated to a stop.

"All aboard!" cried the captain. "Two by two, that's the rule--a male and a female from each communication sequence."

Man of the Year:
Withdrawal is key to fighting sexual revolution

By Arthur Happ

The balloting has been concluded for our annual Man of the Year award. The final results: Awer Sabat, 1; Rensy Kabler, 0; Catherine Deneuve, 0; Seattle Slew, 0; Mahatma Gandhi, 0.

Breen's overwhelming victory for Man of the Year is somewhat overwhelming on the magnitude of his accomplishment. At his 32nd birthday party on Dec. 24 last, Breen announced to assembled friends and relatives that he was giving up sex.

The initial reaction of those present was one of deep concern. "Good God," said his 60-year-old son, Fletch, "do you have the doctor found something wrong with your old tucker or something?"

"I'm fit as a fiddle, you young whipper-snapper," cried Breen, who was dressed in a T-shirt and a pair of hip-waders.

"You always were an odd one, Herlo...I" said his sister, Harriet, with a sniff. "I suppose you've taken up some more mysterious religious like that of Mahatma Gandhi."

"Hell, no!" snapped Breen, "I just got sick and tired of reading in those dirty doctor columns that there's no reason a man of any should give up sex. That's, too, by God!"

"When I was a lad," he explained, "I voluntarily embraced for sexual combat. For years I fought the good fight, suffering all the frustrations and disappointments, the jealous rages and acute depressions, that are the inevitable wounds of the fray. I saw my duty and I did it..."

"All that kept me going was looking forward to the golden years of sexual retirement. After half a century or so of service, society promised to reward me with a picture of some gamey centenarian amassing his gums over his 90-year-old bride-to-be."

"But now? Thanks to that dammed Sexual Revolution, you can't pick up the paper without seeing a picture of some gamey centenarian amassing his gums over his 90-year-old bride-to-be."

"Thanks to the damned decision," we've vowed to a lifetime of servitude from puberty to the tomb."

"I've been betrayed, that's what. All I ask after 60 years in the trenches is an honorable withdrawal and a little peace and quiet."

While Breen's crusade piqued the nation's curiosity, most people never got off the ground. (A motion in Congress to include a mandatory sexual retirement age in Social Security legislation died for lack of a second.)

But Breen, himself, achieved his goal. The Man of the Year award was presented to him at the Deli Dell Happy Farm, to which his loved ones had him conformed. "You're a courageous man," he was congratulated. "But I'm an invalid patient except for his dammed refusal to attend the Senior Citizens Swingin Singers No-Host Mixers."

Communications Building: Abandon ship

By Marc Catalano

Buckets and cans collect dripping water in the Communications Building.

"I'm going to build a ship," said Breen, "and I'm going to name it the Ship of Love."

"What do you think you're doing?" asked the administration.

"I'm going to seal off all the entrances at ground level and let the building fill up naturally. I'll use it as an underwater training ground for our swimming classes."

"Excellent!" cried the administrators.

"WAIT! Where's the ditch-did-thats that leave us?" the bewildered communications professors and students cried out.

Not a word was spoken as the administrators pointed to the parking lot. An enormous gopherwood ship floated to a stop.

"All aboard!" cried the captain. "Two by two, that's the rule--a male and a female from each communication sequence."

"Mr. Dose, I'm running a BLOOD DRIVE at our high school. What advice would you give me?"

"You'd better ask your colleagues!" said Mr. Dose.

"They're all out of town."

"Well, don't forget," said Mr. Dose, "you'll need a bus, and where are you going to stop it?"

"I don't know," said Catsue.

"Oh, how, exactly?"

"Bowie is just outside the city!"

"What was the question again?"

"Oh, how do I keep from getting the flu?"

"Do they do it in your town?"

Man 'shocked' by $3,172 utility bill

SOUTH PEKIN, Ill. — You may think your utility bill is high but it’s probably a bargain compared with Kenneth E. Gschwend of Central Illinois Light Co.

It was $3,172.72 for five days. And his two per cent state utility tax was $63.45.

The bill for the South Pekin resident was for the period Jan. 5-10.

"I just bought the house and CILCO read the meter so they could bill the former owner for his utility bill," Gschwend said. "The real kicker to this is that I heat my house with bottled gas."

He said when he called CILCO about the high bill they told him: "Quite possibly there is a mistake.

"Blame human error this time. Not the computer."

Missionary team flies to Haiti

POINIA (AP) — A missionary team including a dentist, a doctor, a priest and a veterinarian flew to Haiti to continue an Episcopal Church project that has expanded to include parishes from throughout the Diocese of Quincy in western Illinois.

Twenty-nine volunteers from the diocese built an Episcopal education building last April at Montreux, Haiti. It is being used to train lay church leaders and to hold continuing education classes for Haitian clergy.

Bishop Donald C. Parsons said the second missionary team will stay two weeks. He said the rural people of Haiti “particularly are in need of dental, medical and veterinary help. To my knowledge no dental help has ever been provided to the people in the Montreux area, and medical care is limited to that of a visiting nurse once a month.”

Churches and other groups in Keokuk, Moline, Rock Island, Moline and Washington, Ill. also have donated to the project. All members of the staff of a Peoria dentist are making the trip at their own expense, and the widow of another Peoria dentist has donated her husband’s dental equipment.

Suspects held for shootings

DOLTON IAPI—Two men are being held for the shooting of a Schererville, Ind., man and the wounding of his wife as they were driving home early Thursday after celebrating their fourth wedding anniversary, authorities said.

They said one of the men is from Harvey and the other from Chicago Heights. Charges have not been filed, however, and the investigation is continuing.

Mark Furman, 28, and his wife, Claudia, 24, were driving home after attending the Marquette vs. De Paul basketball game in Milwaukee when their car was rammed into the rear of the Calumet Expressway south of Chicago, police said.

They opened onto the shoulder of the expressway and so did the other car.

"There was possibly an argument regarding the traffic accident preceding the shooting," but as far as we know the attack was unprovoked," a state trooper said.

Authorities said a man got out of the other car, a yellow Cadillac, pulled an automatic and fired seven shots through the window of the couple's car, killing Furman and wounding his wife, Claudia, 24.

The man then yanked open the door and shot and wounded Mrs. Furman.

Mrs. Furman, suffering wounds in the arm and shoulder and head lacerations, was reported in fair condition after surgery at St. Margaret Hospital in Hammond, Ind.

Snow hampers blood drive

The Red Cross blood drive, hampered by the heavy snowfall, collected about 260 units, far short of the goal of 450 to 500 pints. Continued Raabe, who organized the drive held in the Student Center Wednesday and Thursday, said mainly students were donors.

Despite the weather, Raabe said, we received away above what we expected. We feel the response has been remarkable.

Those donors and their families will be eligible for free blood from the Red Cross for up to one year after the date of their donation.

Small town solves snowy situation

DEARING, Kan. (AP) — When it comes to snow removal, two city councilors in the small town of Dearing have done many of their bigger city counterparts.

Gary Grewell and Melvin Folk worked three straight nights to clear the streets in this town of 500 located in southeastern Kansas near the Oklahoma border.

And on Thursday virtually every street in town was clear of snow. The area received over five inches of snow early in the week and over an inch Wednesday.

"When you live in a small town, you've got to do it yourself," said Grewell.

Grewell and Folk used a pickup truck and tractor to clear the snow.

South Africa forces blacks to move

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Black squatters racing to stay ahead of government bulldozers hurriedly dismantled their shanty homes at the Umbell shacktown Thursday. The camp that housed 30,000 blacks just a week ago was expected to be flattened by the weekend.

Before the demolition of the illegal camp began Monday, defiant squatters had vowed to stay in their shacks even when the bulldozers arrived. But on Thursday they were working with makeshift cranes to pry apart the corrugated iron, cardboard and wooden structures.

Where they failed, two huge bulldozers ploved through, leveling what had been a community complete with shops, a school, churches and a community-run police force.

Streams of cars and trucks blacked high with people, luggage and building materials crowded the few sandy routes out of the camp site to the Cape Flats area, 15 miles northeast of Cape Town.

Hundreds of others stayed behind, camping out in the open amid the rubble, huddling with their belongings and sleeping under sheets of plastic sheets.

A MacLauchlan, chief director of the Cape Peninsula's Bantu (black) Affairs Administration Board, said late Thursday that about 600 of the 2,000 shacks were still standing and would be razed by the weekend.

The Umbell Squatters Action Committee had taken a tough stand when eviction notices were first served on the squatters. But on Wednesday night the committee ordered the dismantling of the camp's school and community center.

The sight of blacks leaving of their own accord clearly pleased Brig. Jan H. van der Westhuizen, chairman of the Cape Bantu board. This shows a definite change in their attitude," he said.

The majority of the Umbell squatters are women and children unable to get official permission to live in white urban areas, even though their husbands and fathers live and work there legally.

Three Croatians plead guilty in Yugoslav mission shooting

NEW YORK (AP) — Three Croatian nationalists convicted by a federal jury of shooting their way into the Yugoslav mission last June to try to capture the ambassador pleaded guilty Thursday to state charges growing out of the same case.

The guilty pleas in burglary and weapon possession were accepted by a Manhattan state supreme court justice. Four men convicted of federal charges are awaiting trials.

The state justice, in accepting the pleas, satisfied a six-count indictment that included the possession of attempted murder.

The defendant said that when he sentenced the three men next Feb. 8, he will pass sentence on the federal cases and concurrent with the federal penalties imposed on them last Dec. 13 by a federal judge.

The Croalls, who are appealing their federal convictions, are: Marijan Bucnjak, of New Brunswick, N.J., who got seven years for assault and conspiracy to secure a foreign official; Vladimir Isazor, of Chicago, five years for conspiracy and assault; and Jos Brecale, of St. Louis, four years for conspiracy.

The three men said they invaded the mission on the eve of the international conference in Belgrade to publicize their campaign.

Records show FBI kept files on critics after JFK's death

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the years following the JFK assassination, J. Edgar Hoover found himself at the center of criticism. This reached a peak in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when FBI files began to be declassified and released to the public. The files showed that the FBI had maintained files on a number of individuals who had been critical of the government or who had expressed political views that were unpopular. The files included information on personal lives as well as political activities. The documents reflect the FBI's efforts to monitor and investigate political dissent and to maintain a record of individuals who were seen as threats to the government. The files also showed the extent to which the FBI had tried to influence public opinion and to shape the narrative of the JFK assassination. The files demonstrated the bureau's role in shaping the public's understanding of the assassination and its aftermath.
Audubon cites alumnus for annual award

The Southern Illinois Audubon Society will present its Conservationist of the Year Award to Paul Bugger, an SIU alumnus who serves as an environmental policy chief for the Illinois Highway Department. The award will be presented at the society's annual membership dinner at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 27, at the St. Francis Xavier Ballroom. Speaker will be Robert H. Mobenbrock, chairman of the Illinois Highway Department.

The society's Conservationist award is presented for exceptional involvement and extraordinary achievement in promotion and preservation of native flora and fauna and their habitats. Bugger was selected because of his contributions as a board member of both the Audubon Society and the Southern Illinois Bird Observatory and for his work as an alumnus of the environmental policy of the Bureau of Land Use and Environment of the state Highway Department.

Bugger holds a B.S. in civil engineering from the University of Illinois, a B.S. in zoology and a master's degree in biology from SIU. He was a recipient of a Federal Highway Administration research and education fellowship in 1974-75. He is a charter member of the Southern Illinois Audubon Society and has served as treasurer, president, and advisor to the president of the group. He is a member of the state Audubon Society board of directors and serves as chairman of one of its committees. He has been director of the Illinois Audubon Society annual meetings. Bugger is a co-founder of the Southern Illinois Bird Observatory and has been its research director. He is a master bird bander and has served as a Boy Scout troop leader.

Fast-suit service makes quality duds in just 30 minutes

CHICAGO (AP) - So you spilled spaghetti all over your suit during lunch and have an important appointment in an hour. A compassionated fast-suit service will have you in fitted, new-quality duds in about an hour. Go to Bugby & Kruthers and tell your tailor, say, a suit in regular. They put your name, birth date, weight, height, neck and waist measurements and arm length into a computer devised by Joe Silverberg, the clothing store's president. In 90 seconds, out comes an 8-by-12-inch printout of a picture of your silhouette showing all measurements in centimeters. What a size it regular to you will be found in a rack of 10 centimeter suits.

Take your pick. Try it on. It should fit. If alterations are needed, like in the waist and pants, they will be made. They can be done in 15 to 30 minutes.

You are in and out in 30 to 45 minutes, and you can't get a suit cleaned in that time, "and Silverberg. "No, really, there are measurements and alteration, and then you could come back to see what it looks like. It would take two or three weeks to get your suit. You can't get, say, a 40, size and that may be your perfect fit, but you can get the half sizes in centimeters, and that's the way we're selling our clothes."

"Also in the beginning, not the end," Silverberg said. "And we are making mechanics possible to the customer, most of whom are reducing the metric system."

Silverberg and all measurements are kept in the computer memory bank and can be brought up to and someone who is shopping for a customer. "Since Oct. 21, we've run 1,000 people through our computers," said Silverberg. "Sales of suits are up. 20 percent and sales of ties have doubled. We have merchandise in centimeter measurements in Europe and South America and we don't have to convert them into inches. The cost savings is passed on to customers from between $20 to $30 a suit."

The main saving, however, comes in the customers' time and time means big money in most of our cities," said Silverberg.
Missing radiation tubes found in junkyard debris

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — Eight stainless steel tubes holding dangerous doses of radioactive radium were found amid debris in a junkyard six days after they disappeared from a hospital.

A few hours earlier, state officials said they had been unable to track down the tubes, each of which is just inches long and holds a 10 milligram-per-gram dose of radium. They feared there had been an attempt to keep news of the missing radium from the public.

Ed Fuentez, director of the Mississippi Radiological Health Division, said an employee found the radium at a St. Louis Junk Co., according to board spokesman Sam Marby.

"All of the needles are now accounted for," Marby said.

None of the containers were discovered missing from a locked room at Jeff Anderson Memorial Hospital on Thursday. One was quietly discovered in the lot's parking lot.

The others were found after officials remembered that the hospital commonly sells scrap metal to the company and where the needles had been stored was very junky. "If you look at the place, people assume that the needles inadvertently got into the stuff that was sold to the junk company," Marby added.

Hospital administrator Chad Morgan said earlier that authorities had not left anything unattended and as far as can be determined, the person or persons removing the material have either secreted it or disposed of it.

Morgan said Mindan authorities, area physicians and health officials were notified as soon as the loss was discovered.

Radium is used in the treatment of some cancers, but can be dangerous when not controlled. The tubes, or needles, can be opened so that a small hole permits escape of the radium's radiation.

Morgan and state health officials denied they had tried to keep from the public any news of the missing radium.

"I don’t see how anyone can say we’ve been covering up on, said state health director Alan Cobb.

"That’s a simply not true," Sources who asked not to be identified had said late Tuesday that Mississippi and state health officials had withheld information about the missing radioactive material since last Thursday.

But state Sen. Sam Steckler, chairman of the Mississippi Radiation Advisory Council, also denied any cover-up.

Steckler said that he was informed of the missing radium by a Mississippi Health Board of Trustees meeting on the same day. He said there was no need for a public statement because an appropriate step had been taken to locate the material.

Steckler said his council acknowledged that health officials had taken appropriate action to ensure the safety of the hospital patients and the community.

Fire may change tentative plans for convention center

The site of a proposed city convention center may be in jeopardy because of a fire that struck four Carbondale businesses in the 200 block of S. Illinois Ave.

Owners of the Watered Store, International Fashions, Golde's Men's Store and Weisser Union Optical, set by the blaze Dec. 22, are undecided as to what to do with the buildings.

If the owners rebuild, it would cost the city more to buy back the property proposed for future conventions, said Carroll Fry, city manager.

City officials and area businessmen favor the possible development of a convention hall.

The City Council has authorized the spending of $25,000 to apply for a federal grant that would be in part finance future raising of buildings on the west of Illinois Ave. from Elm to Moore Street. That would clear the way for the convention center.

The fire, whose caused nearly $250,000 damage, started in the Watered Store at 204 S. Illinois Ave. Carbondale fire chief Charles McCaughan said a spark from an extension cord ignited a macrame decoration, and the fire spread.

International Fashions at 202 S. Illinois Ave. was also destroyed. Golde's Men's Store, at 206 S. Illinois Ave. and Weisser Union Optical, located next door, suffered little heat damage.

Rashid Michael, owner of International Fashions, said he is looking for a new location in Carbondale. "I like Carbondale," Michael said. "I want to relocate in the city."

For Richard Williams, owner of Golde's, this is the third time in five months his business has been struck by fire. Williams is also looking for another place in the city to relocate.

Applications to attend sessions planned to help students with financial aid

By Michele Rasfield
Staff Writer

Apply early for financial aid, is the word from Woody Hall, which has scheduled free aid information sessions in campus residence halls beginning Monday.

James Moore, assistant director of the Student Work and Financial Assistance Office, SWFA, said the sessions have been set up to make students aware of forms changes and possible complications in applying for aid. For those reasons, students who want aid for next year should begin applying now, Moore said.

"Many Illinois State Scholarship Committee scholarships last fall are still pending," Moore said. "By getting forms out early, the students will get the money they need.

Students also need to be aware of changes in the ACT Family Financial Statement (FFS). Moore said. The FFS can now be used to apply for the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant and the National Direct Student Loan, a process that used to require four forms.

There is a big change in applying for BEOG and NDSL. It is our intent to make students aware of changes and urge them to get those forms in," Moore said.

The sessions begin at 5 p.m. in the following places: Jan. 23, Mae Smith Hall, Wing B; Jan. 24, Schneider Hall, Wing B; Jan. 25, Lectrus Hall, Room 5; Jan. 26, Trueblood Hall, Westmore Room, and Jan. 31, Neely Hall, Wing B.

Two counselors from SWFA are scheduled to attend each session and financial aid forms will be available.

Organist Calloway played for famous; has recital tonight
Paul Calloway, who will play a visiting faculty recital at 8 p.m. Friday, has played the organ for former President Ford and Queen of England. He was also there playing the organ for Dwight Eisenhower's and Adlai Stevenson's funeral services.

When he was playing for those famous people, he was the organist and choirmaster at the Washington Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

Now retired from that position, he is a visiting lecturer at SU and also is filling in as director of the Allegan Museum while faculty member John Boe is on sabbatical. Tonight he will be playing Bach's "Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor," Mozart's "Andante for Horn in E Flat," Max Reger's "Phantasmagoria," Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme." Charles Tournemire's "L'Orgue Mystique...." Peter's "Symphony No. 1," Leo Sowerby's "Fantasy for Flute and Strings," and Franz Liszt's "Introduction and Fugue, "Awake, an Angel's Voice." The concert is free and open to the public.

Student show stars women
A classical pianist, a collector of dulcimers, and a singer-guitarist will be the stars of a broadcast by WSIU TV called "A Few Moments With... Three Women and Their Music," a program to be aired at 10 p.m. Saturday on Channel 7.

Deb McCabe, classical pianist, will perform a piece by Handel and also will talk about her training as a pianist and her thoughts on music.

Naoma Williams, who has a large collection of dulcimers and other musical instruments which are many years old will demonstrate their unique sounds.

Kate Tedd will perform songs in the style of blues, ballad and folk which she has written about her feelings and observations on life.

The show was produced by Linda Fast, and directed by Susan Tartowski, both students in the Radio-Television department. One segment of the program was filmed by Pat Kay and Elaine Smukla, recent graduates of the Choral and Photography department.

'Soundstage' will premiere on Channel 8

Soundstage," the television show that features the nation's leading musicians in concert, will begin its run at Colgate at 9 p.m. on Channel 8.

Jesse Winchester and Michael Murphy will open the series with a concert at Red Rocks, the natural arena, on Saturday, Nov. 18. Other headliners in the 1978 season are Hank Williams Jr., Dr. John and his band, The Doobie Brothers, and Phil Proctor and Peter Bergman from the cast of "The Odd Couple." What's more, special guests from past series will also be shown with stars Barry Manilow, Melissa Manchester, Judy Jackson, Wayne, Blood, Sweat and Tears.

"Soundstage" will also have some unique combinations of talent such as Hank Williams Jr., and Van Halen, together in one show, and classic vocalists Ethel Perlman and country fiddler Doug Kershaw in another.

Comedy will be introduced to "Soundstage" when Phil Proctor and Peter Bergman take a look at working and being funny in America's musical comedies. Hello, My Name is Clark Wintergreen.

Dave Brubeck will appear with his three sons, Darin, Chris, and Danny in piano performance, in rehearsal at his home in Connecticut, in solo tribute to the late Paul Desmond, and in the Brubeck-composed and orchestrated ballet "Glanciess."

Pooch Hall will also make a rare television appearance with music by George Gershwin and Paul Simon. Burton Cummings and Randy Bachman, composers of a string of hits in the late '60's, are reunited on "Soundstage," to perform the best of their "old" and new best-selling tunes.

David Geissenger, French horn virtuoso with the Chicago Symphony, swings from classic to jazz mimicking. He is one of the few horn players with a symphony orchestra who also works with a jazz improvisational group.

Soundstage also features the production of "Craziest" by WTTW-Chicago and is transmitted nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Washington (AP) - The Congress that approved emergency disaster relief last year is coming back to town Thursday, but with tax cuts and job bills added to the agenda.

And a major item on the Senate agenda is the role on Panama Canal treaty giving control of the waterway back to Panama by year 2000.

As the 95th Congress gets down to its second and final session, House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill noted reporters "I am taking the liberty" of assigning first priority to legislation for economic stabilization and reduction of unemployment. That would include, he said, a tax cut designed to stimulate the economy as well as public works and other job-creating measures.

The Senate majority leader Sen. Robert F. Byrd, D.W.Va., seemed to indicate a somewhat different order of importance, with agreement on an energy bill "our first major priority." But Byrd also listed economic measures as having high priorities.

O'Neill rejected suggestions that the Senate-House conferences trying to break the impasse on the key issue of natural gas pricing might throw up their hands and go home.

"We will keep their feet to the fire," he said. "I think there will be a more amicable feeling toward both sides." The Senate conferences are expected to meet next week to see if they can arrive at a unified position to take to the full conference.

Speaking against a background of conferences with President Carter, O'Neill told reporters he expects to see enacted a tax reduction large enough not only to offset the Social Security tax increases already enacted and the expected energy taxes but beyond that to give the economy a "measurable boost." "Some tax reform" also will be in the bill, he said.

The Humphrey-Hawkins bill to commit the government to full employment definitely is part of the economic stimulus package, O'Neill said, "and I think we can pass it.

Byrd listed among high priority items consideration of the Panama Canal treaties, a special Senate responsibility, jobs and tax legislation and a measure to curb the rise in hospital costs. Other possibilities, he said, are welfare reform and a nuclear arms limitation treaty, if negotiations succeed.

There actually are two Panama Canal treaties but they are considered indivisible.

Speaker: Import tax hurts farmers

Champaign, Ill. (AP) - Farmers and consumers are being hurt because U.S. policy discriminates against imports from the Soviet Union, a farmer assistant agriculture secretary said Thursday.

Carol Brumhaver, who was an assistant in the farmer's Agriculture secretary Earl Butz from 1972 to 1974, spoke to the annual meeting of the Land of Lincoln Sycamore Association.

If we are not for a discriminatory tax on Soviet imports, the Russians might buy between three and five million metric tons of U.S. soybeans this year, Brumhaver said.

However, he said the Soviets are not likely to be in the U.S. if they have not developed a fair trade policy.

Humphrey's wife possible candidate for husband's post

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) - Gov. Rudy Perpich plans to meet soon with Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey, wife of the late Sen. Robert H. Humphrey, and may offer her an appointment to fill her husband's Senate seat for 10 months, an aide to Perpich said Wednesday.

However, Bob Aronson said Wednesday that Perpich expected the woman to make her decision in a "fairly short time.

Mrs. Humphrey, who will be 65 Sunday, has given widespread support among Minnesota citizens and political leaders.

Under Minnesota law, the governor is entitled to temporary appointment until a special election can be held within seven months. The winner of that election will serve out the remaining four years as a Humphrey successor.

Perpich was in no rush at his May 30 announcement, as the Minneapolis Star and Tribune announced St. Paul and Perpich met within hours of the announcement. Mrs. Humphrey may be interested in the Senate seat, where Democratic Rep. Digby Field and state Sen. Nick J. Coleman of St. Paul.

Gymnasts have meet cancelled, extra practices fill open dates

By Sara Conran
Staff Writer

Gymnastics coaches don’t enjoy the thought of canceling out of a contest and losing some practice time. But sometimes, even coaches have to cancel meet weekends because of the hazardous weather.

On this Friday, the Saluki’s meet was canceled because of Wednesday’s blizzard. Their gym became an ice palace and the university had to shut down because of the hazardous weather.

Earlier in the cancellation of Wednesday’s meet because we just never know what can happen in practice.” said Vogel and followed the postponement of the team’s meet against Southeast Missouri State.

“We would like to have more time. We’re not by any means where we want to be yet. It’s a matter of trying to get along and the idea of individual development.

The team was strengthened recently with the addition of two new women, freshman Linda Port and sophomore Maureen Hennessey. According to Vogel, the two are fitting in well with the rest of the team just fine.

“They slipped right into the group.” Vogel said before his team took off for its next meet, the Northwestern Invitational in Chicago. Northwestern is the closest school to the other girls, they have been competed by the team because they were the same kind of girls.

“Right now we have third or fourth girl on the uneven bars and Port is doing very strong as an all-rounder.”

Vogel is very pleased about how the team is setting up. Some of the meet allow up to eight girls from each team to compete in each event. Vogel wants all eight members on the team to get in a lot of work. He hopes his team will finish No. 1 out of the 22 entries.

“At least in the past year we knew one of our highest scores of the year,” he said. Last year, Saluki’s finished second with a team total of 142.5 points behind by Linda Newton’s all-around championship with a score of 38.85.

“We are hoping to rank at least that close or even a little bit higher right now then when we competed in the nationals last year. The girls competing the girls are much better. We’ve had to drop in the team this year. Vogel explained. “Not to knock their high schools, but many schools didn’t have the equipment or the coaches and the girls potential is high.

Another minor problem Vogel mentioned was that of consistency. One of two girls in each event every meet have been outstanding performances. But each meet different people have come through for the Salukis and Vogel believes that everyone must participate the same time for the Salukis to become contenders for the national title.

“There is a point of no return,” he said. “We will have to start winning some meets and building up some higher scores. We are running out of time.”

(There are just 12 meets left before the State College Qualifications start March.)

Vogel, in summarizing his team’s strengths and where he sees the team’s strongest event has been vaulting, the most improved has been floor exercise, the most inconsistent has been the balance beam and that it needed the most work on the uneven bars.

“I’m leaping we are probably stronger than most teams,” he said. “All of our girls will be doing double somersaults off their vaults while most teams have just one or two girls that are able to.”

“We have been putting six girls in the floor exercise event lately. They have been performing better each meet.”

“We need a lot more consistency on the balance beam. We have to learn to stay on the damn thing. And we still need a lot of work on the uneven bars. We are developing into contenders for the national championship.”

Salukis set for SEMO;
Hartzog stresses effort

By George Coulak
Staff Writer

The 11-inch Hoard that hit Carbondale just forced indoor track Coach Lew Harst to borrow racers from the team in New York and walk to Wednesday’s scheduled invitational meet with ILU at Normal.

The team cancelled the meet with the RoadHawks to get his team in shape for the Special Olympics against Southeast Missouri State (SEMO) Cape Girardeau. However, the snow has hindered any of his hopes of extensive workouts in the Arena.

These extra few days have helped, but it hasn’t helped much. Harst said. I’m成员ing my fingers being home from SEMO without any injuries, we’ll be in shape for the first invitational Saturday.

We usually run outside and if we can get outside, I can run the guys here. But now, we’re forced to run up stairs in the Arena and keep all the teams who are working out. It makes it tough.

The indoor track is a facility that should get the runners in shape before the first invitational. It also leas equals one mile. If you run a four minute mile in a good time.” Harst said, “but it gives you the heart that good workout. too, so it will be good.”

Hartzog said that runners like Mike Sawyer, Mike Blincoe, and Paul Craig will be run as much as possible and added that it will be the same with all of the others who make the trip.

“We’re going to take everybody who can walk—this will be a good meet for the freshmen to get some experience.” Hartzog evetually 50-50 to expect decent performances. Although we had a few last year about this time.”

The team won’t be going to any other invitational as far as the wealth is concerned. Cause received as much snow as Carbondale and the temperature was just as cold. The indoor track at SEMO is not heated and Hartzog recalled last year when the Salukis ran the meet before a large crowd and the temperature was only about 20 degrees.

Long jumper Ken Laraway will not compete in the meet because he still has a tender leg, so Hartzog said he plans to use freshman Lance Peeler and sophomore Tracy Meredith in the long jump. He also added that he will take all seven of the pole vaulters along.

“I’m not worried about the meet,” Hartzog said. I feel that we’re a stronger team than SEMO, but I’m going to work the hell out of us to get them in shape. We’ve got to.”

Pardee quits as Bears' coach

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Jack Pardee of the Chicago Bears abruptly resigned Thursday to seek the coaching position of the Washington Redskins, the Chicago National Football League club announced.

Pardee, who was negotiating a new contract with the Bears, met with General Manager Jim Finks after George Allen was fired as coach of the Washington club.

"I called for the meeting to offer Jack a new contract here in Chicago," Finks said. "Nobody has underestimated Jack's role with the Bears in the past three years. We wish him well whether he gets the Redskins job or not."

In a statement issued by the Bears, Pardee said, "I have mixed emotions about this whole thing. I love Chicago and this team. These are the same emotions I have for Washington. I have to go with the flow."

"A club spokesman was asked if that meant Pardee would not be returning to the Bears, even if he fails to get the Washington job. "I think that's what he says," said the spokesman, Ted Harasz.

Indiana State is no longer unbeaten

Steele: Cincy will be tough on tankers

By George Csokay
Sports Writer

If the Cincinnati swim team somehow manages to funnel its way through the sweep (Syracuse) for the scheduled meet with the Salukis Saturday at the Recreation Building pool, it should be as close a dual meet as the SU-Wichita State dual held Dec. 2.

The Salukis beat the Badgers in that meet, 63-58, and the 2 p.m. meet against the Bearcats should be just as close. It’s going to be a tougher meet than at 1st expected,” Coach Bob Steele said. His Saluki squad is 5-1 in dual meets on the season. “On paper, it looks like we could win the meets against Edwardsville and the 200 butterfly—three out of 12 events. Everything else is tough.

The Salukis, who are coming off their 5th of other state teams in the Missouri Intercollegiates (SUW won by more than 100 points) seem to have the Bearcats number over the years and duals meet. SUW has won and lost two including last year’s 9-53 setback at Cincy.

Steele was quick to point out that the Bearcats have a new coach (Terry Carlisle) which may inspire the team a bit more this season.

Road trip to take Salukis to Creighton, Wichita State

By Bud Vanderschapp
Sports Editor

When Coach Paul Lambert first saw the Missouri Valley basketball schedule for this season, he probably wondered what his crime was because the Salukis were sentenced to three games in five days with Indiana State, Creighton and Wichita State.

The Indiana State game is over, but the Salukis just now embark on the road segment of their mission. The Bearcats will play Creighton at 2:35 p.m. Saturday at the Omaha Civic Auditorium and then travel south to Wichita for a game with Wichita State at 8 p.m. Monday at Henry Lewitt Arena.

The game with Creighton will mark the renewal of a series that has been idle since the 1975-76 season. The two teams were rivals when both were independents, but they have not met since SU joined the Valley in the 1975-76 campaign.

Creighton is a new kid on the Valley block, as this is the first year it is eligible for the league crown. The Bluejays took a 31 Valley record and an 8-3 overall mark into Thursday night’s home game with Drake. Saturday’s game will be the third home contest of the week for the Bluejays, and Coach Tom Apke says his team is in the Civic Auditorium is a welcome site. He had probably forgotten what it looked like.

“We realized after last Saturday’s game with West Texas State that we had played only one home game in 46 days,” Apke said. “We haven’t played all that well, but maybe that is a contributing factor. Playing at home provides positive reinforcement and gives a team a chance to enjoy.

“We need a victory like the Cleveland State game Tuesday night (which Creighton won 94-62). I hope that game can get us going. We have little to play for in the conference.” Apke also is a 3-2 Mark in 24 years as head coach at his alma mater, said he enjoys competing in a conference. Creighton has long been known as a hotbed of basketball interest, but Apke said interest is now at its peak.

“In the past fans have been concerned with our ballclub,” Apke said, “but now they are watching for scores of other games and talking about other players. This is a new development that we had not had before.” The Bearcats have a 5-4 Valley record and an 8-3 overall average. He fanned in his points on a variety of shoots—jump hooks, bank shots and outside jumpers. He had gamned his first half-high of the game at 38.

Gibbons scored 14 points, but only two in the second half as SUW’s 3-2 zone defense shut down the 6-7 senior to just 10. He added two points and Jim Smith scored 10.

Creighton’s Twin Towers, a team and a great win for the MVC, “Larry noted that’s not the way Indiana State in their first year of the Valley all defended.

The Salukis were not to be denied, an escatic Lambert comment.

Abrams and Wilson gave the appeci- 35
tive crowd a preview of coming attractions - before the second half.

After Grant scored the first basket on a jump hook both Abrams and Wilson scored on flying slams after the Salukis stole the ball. The stuffs drove the Arena crowd into a frenzy and the crowd lifted SUW’s spirits throughout the game with several standing ovations. In fact, for the first time, the Saluki fans, who stand and cheer until the last second of the game to ask for a standing ovation after the game.

SUW stayed on fire for the first 10 minutes building a 12-3 lead at 9:43 left it never relinquished. Minutes later Webster poached the ball and drained a three but the two layups and SUW was up by eight.

The game was all but over as a way as he handled the ball brilliantly, in the four corners offense. SUW hit its last eight free throws after moving to the offense.
