SIUC student charged with sexual assault

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A 22-year-old SIUC student was arrested Thursday morning on charges of criminal sexual assault that occurred on West Campus earlier that morning.

Orlando R. Rogers, of Carbondale, was charged with criminal sexual assault after a 19-year-old student told police she had been raped by Rogers around 2:45 a.m. Thursday in the West Campus area.

Rogers, who was arrested around 10:30 a.m., knew the victim, police said.

As of press time, Rogers was being held in Jackson County Jail. His bond will be set today.

Another female SIUC student reported to police around midnight Wednesday she was sexually assaulted at about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday on East Campus. The assailant is still being sought by University Police.

The sexual assaults that occurred Wednesday and Thursday are the fifth and sixth to have been reported in the Carbondale area since October.

University Police Chief Sam Jordan said an arrest is anticipated in the second assault.

"If the facts warrant that an arrest should be made, we should be able to wrap [the East Campus rape] up as quickly as the first," Jordan said.

It is likely the victim was acquainted with the suspect, according to Jordan.

"At this point and time we don't feel that it is a stranger situation," he said.

Two arrests have been made in a sexual assault that occurred on East Campus in the early morning of Dec. 3, and University Police have issued a warrant for a third arrest in that rape.

SIUC student Sammie J. Hardimon, of Peoria, and Wendell Y. Allen, of Skokie, both 18 years old, were charged with criminal sexual assault in the Dec. 3 incident.

Police do not believe the third suspect is in the area.

"It all depends on locating the person and trying to be at the right place to pick him up," Jordan said Thursday afternoon. "That takes some time."

Carbondale Police also are continuing an investigation of a sexual assault that occurred Nov. 14.

The victim in the sexual assault, which involved an SIUC sorority member and an SIUC fraternity member, shows interest in filing charges. Carbondale Police Lt. Calvin Stearns said Thursday.

"It is absolutely a certainty that [the sexual assault] will be referred to the state's attorney," he said.

Student leaders react to Ayres' resignation

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The resignation of Undergraduate Student Government President Kristie Ayres Wednesday has brought out mixed reactions from other members of student government.

Members of USG, student activists, the new USG Vice President and the Graduate and Professional Student Council all have different opinions on the situation. While some said they were surprised by Ayres' resignation, others said they had expected, or at least heard rumors, Ayres might be stepping down.

GPSC President Mike Speck, Ayres' counterpart in the graduate program, said he and Ayres had discussed the possibility late last semester of Ayres becoming academically ineligible because she was unsure whether she would be able to meet the GPA requirement. He said Ayres was concerned with her job taking away from her classes.

"She is a student first and a student leader second," Speck said.

He said he supported Ayres' decision to step down and focus on academics.

Student activist Rob Taylor, a former USG commissioner and a candidate for president in the USG elections last spring, spoke out in support of Ayres, saying USG, as a non-academic Registered Student Organization, should not have required their members to

Poshard returns to teaching realm

EDUCATING: Former Marion congressman takes position at John A. Logan College.

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Former Marion congressman Glenn Poshard expressed a desire to reinvest his energies in education shortly following a narrow defeat by Gov. George Ryan in his quest to become Illinois' first democratic governor in 22 years.

After all, before Poshard became entangled in politics, the three-degree SIUC graduate was a classroom teacher.

His doctoral degree came in administration of higher education.

Poshard followed through on his wishes Wednesday, announcing that he would join John A. Logan College in Carterville as an assistant to JALC President Ray Hancock and a classroom instructor in political science and education.

In addition, he will begin a foundation to raise money for poor and abused children state wide.

The foundation's headquarters will be at JALC.

Poshard also will assist Herb Russell, JALC director for college relations, in the public relations realm.

"Everybody here is very enthusiastic about [Poshard coming to JALC]," Russell said. "And Mr. Poshard is very energetic about it as well."

Poshard officially joined the community college Jan. 4, immediately after his last term in Congress was completed.

Almanac

THIS YEAR IN 1975:

- A 10-year study found that women with high IQs are more sexually aggressive and less sexually inhibited than women of average intelligence. Clinical psychologist Manfred F. Max-Helm was noted as saying, "Men have been looking in the wrong direction for a long time. If anything, women of high intelligence are not only as sexy as those of average intelligence but are somewhat more so." Martin found that women with high IQs "tend to have feelings of high self esteem, they seem to be more adventurous, more organizational and even more innovative in their sexual relationships. They also tend to be very well informed on matters pertaining to sex."
- Movies appearing up and around Carbondale were, "Godfather Part II," "Andy Warhol's "Dracula," "Freddie and the Bean," "Bodlens' and "James Bond 007: The Man with the Golden Gun."
- Charley Pride and Ronnie Milap appeared at the SIU Arena. The most expensive seat was $5.

Lecturer to discuss breast cancer

RESEARCH: Study links estrogen to cancer prevention.

FRANK KLIMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In the next 12 minutes, a woman will die from breast cancer.

In the same amount of time, an additional four women will be diagnosed with this disease — a disease that one out of nine U.S. women will develop in their lifetime.

According to the National Association of Breast Cancer Organizations, every woman is at risk of breast cancer.

Knowing these statistics on breast cancer, a team of five scientists at SIUC are conducting estrogen research. The team is working to develop a replacement compound for natural compounds in a woman's body that cause breast cancer.

According to scientists familiar with the research, the use of these replacement compounds could prevent breast cancer.

Dr. Stuart Adler, who works with the team, will speak today at 4 p.m. in the Van Lente Auditorium in the Neckers Building about the team's current research.

Adler's seminar, titled "Chemical and Environmental Estrogens: From Mice to Mechanisms," will focus on anti-breast cancer and the two compounds developed from research being conducted between the College of Science and the School of Medicine.

Adler, an assistant professor of biochemistry and molecular cell biology and a researcher at the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Washington University School of Medicine, has been working with Todd Winters and Cal Meyers on the research.

The team's research has been on creating replacement compounds to substitute estradiol.

Estradiol is the principal estrogen in women and is secreted by the ovary and placenta. It controls reproductive functions during the menstrual cycle.

Estradiol is a compound that has been known to cause breast cancer. By substituting estradiol with phytoestrogens, one of the replacement compounds, breast cancer could be prevented.

Phytoestrogens are replacement estrogens derived from plants that have shown to work better than natural estrogen. Winters explained these compounds could also cure prostate cancer, the leading type of cancer found in men.

Adler graduated magna cum laude from Harvard University. In 1982, he received both a doctorate in biochemistry and doctorate in medicine from Duke University.

One out of every nine women in the U.S. will develop breast cancer in her lifetime.

This is up from one out of every 14 in 1970.

Moonbeams entertain with satirical humor, music

SHINING BRIGHT: Comedy troupe watches their audience grow as they poke fun at telemarketers, TV evangelists.

THORRIE T. RAINEY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When Mona and the Moonbeams began entertaining local coffeehouses, the turnout could have been compared to a small lunar stream of light.

Now, with nine players, various props, poetry, dancing, showtunes and a piano, Mona and the Moonbeams is not just a play but a variety show that shines as intense as the noon sun.

Mona and the Moonbeams are bringing their satirical humor to Cousin Andy's Coffeehouse, 401 W. Mill St., at 8 tonight.

Starting off as a small skit a year ago, Mona and the Moonbeams made their first appearance at a benefit show. Last summer they moved their performance to the Longbranch Coffeehouse, 100 E. Jackson St. The place was so crowded that many people were unable to see the show.

"Evolution" is the second saga to this unique show. The show marries music, dance, stories, poetry, comical skits and showtunes to create a versatile experience.

Janet Donoghue, a senior in theater from Sair Hope, Ala., is the director and writer of the play and also plays the character of Mona. She said the show will give the audience more than just a good time.

Barbara Bush to visit area for literacy support

Former first lady Barbara Bush will visit the SIUC campus in March to promote literacy programs.

Bush will deliver a keynote lecture early in the afternoon March 26. The literacy conference is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, March 26 and 27.

The two-day conference will focus on combating illiteracy by mobilizing experts and volunteers.

The conference is a collaborative effort by the SIU Public Policy Institute and the National Institute for Literacy in Washington, D.C.

Bush, wife of former President George Bush, was first lady from 1989 to 1993. During her husband's term as president, Bush adopted literacy as her main project and developed the Barbara Bush Foundation for Family Literacy in 1990.

Paul Simon, director of the SIU Public Policy Institute, was the chief sponsor of the 1991 National Literacy Act.

New USG leadership should restore FAITH

Undergraduate Student Government is supposed to be the leading voice of all SIUC students. As such, USG members must be leaders. Not only should they possess positions of influence and power, but also lead by example.

So what does it say to the SIUC student body, of which USG is supposed to be representative, when its president cannot make the cut at the very same institution where she is supposed to be setting an example?

Now Kristie Ayres says she doesn't believe her grades should be "front page fodder for the press." The DAILY EGYPTIAN would like to be the first media organization to welcome Ayres to the spotlight and scrutiny in which she placed herself when she chose to run for office. Keep in mind the 2.25 grade point average is a USG self-imposed standard and that the letter "A" in Ayres' election platform, FAITH, stood for academics.

Ayres also says she believes her job wasn't any more important than any other student worker position. This would mean the USG presidency and responsibility to the student welfare is no more vital than the diligent student cafeteria worker or custodian. We all enjoy a hot meal and clean floors, but somehow that doesn't compare to being the leading student voice.

As Jackie Smith steps up from her role as vice president to fill Ayres' seat, the EGYPTIAN would like to encourage her and the remaining USG members to lead the campus with an example worthy of their elected positions.

It's not a "personal vendetta" to expect someone to do their job. An elected representative's qualifications should be available to those he or she represents, and if he or she meets the standard, then why be so defensive?

The students have put their FAITH in USG to be a guiding voice and an example in their endeavors at SIUC. We have enough officials setting bad examples in the press today. While it's human to falter every now and then, the consequences are dire for those who look to leaders for leadership. If the elected members can't do the job, then please don't disappoint us by telling us you can and then resigning before the job is done.

Haven't you realized yet? We already live in a hell on Earth

I had a hell of a New Year's Eve. I ran around downtown Chicago drinking everything I could get my frozen hands on (I think I even drank a glass of water by mistake at one point). It was a savage night. When I woke up in the morning, I was in a strange hotel room. I had a lei around my neck, a crushed white fedora on my head, a disabled liver, and misfiring brain neurons.

I parted like it was 1999 and woke up in 2002. It's true. I missed the end of the world. That is, if you believe all the millennium nuts who say there is no way the human race will make it past the big 2000 as a result of the return of God and/or massive technological disasters.

A long time ago, a short little monk named Dionysius Exiguus thought he'd do the world a favor and devise a calendar for us. He figured out the date of Jesus' birth and set that year as the year of our Lord 0.

It turns out that he was a bit off. Jesus was actually born in A.D. 4. So, if the Rapture freaks are correct in their assumption that God is going to take away the righteous 2000 years after the birth of Christ and leave the rest of us in hell, it would've already happened in 1997.

I did a little research, and I found a plethora of recent events that could substantiate the hypothesis that we have been living in hell the past three years and haven't realized it:

1. The second coming of the Volkswagen Beetle. We were supposed to have the second coming of Christ — instead we get a car synonymous with a gnaw.
2. NWO and WWF are taking over the world. Professional wrestlers are running for public office and winning. This really shouldn't be surprising. It's filled with trash talking and propaganda. The players involved are all faking and lying to the public. I'm talking about the wrestling.
3. 'N Sync and the Backstreet Boys: The New Kids on the Block were an apocalyptic warning. Why didn't we heed it?

4. Spice Girls make a movie.
 5. People have nothing better to do than watch it.
 6. The Bears record over the last four years. Everyone knew the Antichrist was coming, no one expected it to be McCaskey.
 7. Rock and fashion from the '80s are coming back. Guard yourself against this temptation. Watch MTV's "It came from the '80s."
 8. Barney (I love you, you love me) sued the San Diego Chicken. It appears that Barney didn't like the Chicken beating on his likeness during baseball games. What kind of sick world produces this? What are we teaching our children?
 9. It's safer for us to go to war than to have sex. True proof that we are living in hell.
 10. Drugs in America: This is the proof that America is on a deeper level of hell than everyone else. In just about every other civilized country, including Canada, Switzerland, and Holland (to name a few), cannabis has been decriminalized and regulated. America's answer? We implement mandatory sentencing.
- On the other hand, you could argue that if this is hell, it could be a lot worse. As Billy Joel once said, "I'd rather laugh with the sinners than cry with the saints!"
- TOOGLES!

Dressing up with (no) style

Once again we have a crisis on campus that needs to be addressed, and I think I might as well deal with it. What we have on campus is a severe case of dress code violations.

I am by no means a leader in the fashion world. I am a blue jeans, T-shirt and flannel kind of guy, but the issue of maintaining some sort of dress code on campus needs to be looked at closely. Not only do poorly dressed people irritate me and others, but they are endangering their own future.

Allow me to give a real life example — my father, in the 1970s used to wear leisure suits.

Sure, at the time they were hip, fashionable attire. He even argues that they were great because men didn't have to wear ties with them. However, now he looks back, slaps his forehead and asks, "Why the heck did I wear those stupid-looking things?" What I am attempting to do is save an entire generation from a future of forehead slapping.

I would like to address several fashion indiscretions that should be immediately discontinued.

First and possibly most severe of these fashion misgivings are enormous pants. I understand that too many people think JNCO pants are "cool," but let's be realistic about pants. If you are a men's size 32, there is no way that you need a size 60 pants. Baggy pants just aren't cool. I guarantee that one day in the future, people will look back at the enormous pants they used to wear and be disgusted with themselves. Please, buy pants that fit you.

If you are fat, then buy big pants. But if you are of a normal build, buy regular-sized pants. Do yourself and society a favor.

Another dress code violation that is annoying and bizarre is the pulling up on one pant leg. Unless you are trying to avoid having your pant leg caught in your bicycle chain, this type of fashion sense makes no sense. Frankly, this type of fashion statement says nothing except you may be just too lazy to pull down your pant leg in the morning.

Chain wallets are another area of fashion that is potentially embarrassing in the future. Look people, if you must wear a chain wallet, remember, you are not wearing that thing to tow a bus. I have seen chains of a magnitude that could easily restrain King Kong. For your own future's sake, keep the chains at a minimal length.

Bleaching one's hair and combing it straight forward is not a good idea. As a matter of fact, bleaching is not always wise. If you are not happy with the color of your own hair, shave it off, if nothing else. As far as combing hair straight down, Leonard Nimoy cultivated and patented that look when Star Trek was still in its first season. After the show was canceled, he quickly dropped the look (except for the movies), so knock it off.

Finally, any and all "retro" looks are OUT! Why do you think people who used to dress like idiots in the 1960s and 1970s got dressing like that? BECAUSE THEY LOOKED RIDICULOUS! Even ex-hippies got dressing like hippies because they finally understood how moronic they appeared, though the drugs slowed that process.

I hope this column has been helpful to people with bad fashion sense. Hopefully, you will take my advice and start dressing like squares. Otherwise, I certainly hope you have left enough money in your fashion budget to buy a football helmet because you'll need one in the future when you're slapping your forehead.

Feds brag of largest cocaine bust in U.S.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Federal authorities announced one of the largest cocaine seizures in U.S. history Thursday and local Arizona police said they found a pair of tunnels under the U.S.-Mexican border that they suspect were built to sneak drugs into the Southwest.

The capture of nearly five tons of cocaine aboard a Houston-bound ship and the discovery of the tunnels in Nogales, Ariz., illustrated two of the ways U.S. land and sea borders continue to come under pressure from international drug traffickers despite interdiction efforts by U.S. law enforcement agencies.

The cocaine, totaling about 9,500 pounds, was found last week hidden under a load of iron ore aboard the Cannes, a 580-foot Greek-owned bulk carrier, after it was boarded by Coast Guard inspectors about 125 miles southwest of Jamaica, officials said. They said the load ranked among the five largest cocaine seizures recorded by U.S. authorities. Its street value was estimated at up to $186 million.

In a statement, President Clinton praised the cooperation of the Coast Guard, the Customs Service and the Drug Enforcement Administration in making the seizure and arresting five of the ship's crew members. The commissioner of Customs, Raymond W. Kelly, said it is not yet known who owned the drugs, where they were loaded onto the ship or where they were supposed to be distributed. But he cited unspecified indications that crew members might have been planning to land the cocaine in Mexico so that it could then be smuggled overland across the U.S. border in smaller loads.

The Cannes, registered in Panama but owned by a Greek shipping company, had taken on 26,000 metric tons of iron ore in Brazil last month and had subsequently stopped in Trinidad on its way to Houston. Most of its 24 crew members were from Ukraine.

After the Coast Guard escorted the ship into Houston Wednesday, Customs agents arrested its Greek captain, two Panamanians and two other ship's officers from Ukraine and Nicaragua, officials said. The rest of the crewmen were being questioned.

In Arizona, police in the border town of Nogales found the two suspects. A drug-smuggling tunnels during a search of a residence and a nearby tool shed. One of the tunnels, 300 feet long with no supports, began in a drainage ditch on the Mexican side of the border, U.S. officials said.

Authorities have not yet determined the starting point of the other tunnel, which is about 400 feet long and buttressed with cement and wooden planks.

Winters, an assistant professor in animal science and physiology, has been studying the physiological effects of phytoestrogens since 1996.

Meyers has been conducting estrogen research at SIUC since the 1970s and has the only patent for this research and these compounds.

He met Adler in 1997 through a colleague. Coincidentally, both were conducting estrogen research.

"I believe that this research is beneficial for every student on campus," said Meyers.

said the whole play is out of control. "This whole thing started with me and Janet playing around with a song, then it grew into a life of its own," Selah said.

"It (the show) is kind of crazy and off," she said. "I like to call it the wild-Broadway of Carbondale."

The show contains skits which poke fun at telemarketers, television evangelists, Sissel and Ebert and various other topics. In the Sissel and Ebert spoof, the cast rates movies in a unique way.

"We compare movies to food," Donoghue said. "If a movie is really deep and interesting we call it 'creamy' or 'pizza.' A movie that is really good we give it two spoons up."

Like the play, the characters are as diverse as the play itself.

"Mona is like a diva," Donoghue said. "She always wants to be the center of attention sometimes in her serious times she can be someone who wants to change the world."

Selah describes her character as someone who is not all there.

"She is a meta-physical being," Selah said. "She is always putting in hints that she lived in another life."

Although the show makes fun of a few social issues, it serves as a way for people to laugh at themselves.

"It serves as a way to release some tension of hard issues," Donoghue said. "It's about laughing at people that deserve to be made fun of."

Sky Bop Fly lands spot in Carbondale

STORY BY MATT SIENOS

It smells like a raspberry beret. Described as Nirvana-meets-Prince and acid jazz/p-funk-meets-hip-hop, Sky Bop Fly is crashing through Carbondale with a cacophony of sounds sure to please just about every listener.

Flying into the Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., Saturday night, Sky Bop Fly can expect a tumultuous crowd, according to Tim "The Worm" Lubbs, bouncer for the Hangar 9.

"They put on a great show, and they have a good following," Worm said. "I saw them recently out in Steamboat Springs (Colo.), where they rocked the house."

The band plays a wide variety of music

Hangar 9 to play funky sounds of St. Louis band Saturday night and covers a number of artists. They've been known to play '70s funk, blues, acid jazz, hip-hop, ska and alternative. They recently completed a Colorado Tour and are returning to the area for another Carbondale performance.

Voted the No. 1 band in St. Louis by the Riverfront Times reader's poll, Sky Bop Fly claims St. Louis as its hometown, and St. Louisans seem to love the band.

But St. Louis isn't the only town where the band is popular. Sky Bop Fly has accumulated quite a following, and their shows always draw large crowds, which is evident by the fact they have established a reputation nationwide.

"We've won several reader's poll awards in St. Louis (including), best dance music and best hip-hop," John Brown, lead vocalist for the band, said.

"In the last year we've toured from Key-West to Montana."

According to Brown, the group developed from a few jam sessions where the musicians became acquainted. Influenced by a combination of the music of the last seven decades, the band describes itself as entertainment for all ages.

"The guitarist and I often sharing rapping duties," Brown said. "Sky Bop is the frame around the window of your soul."

The band has received recognition for its eclectic sound recently as the band opened for Porno for Pyros. They've also been approached with several record deals in the last year.

"We've been offered deals by Arista records, Mercury records, Virgin entertainment, and Sony corporation. However, so far, the timing and the money just hasn't been right," Brown said.

The band, with high hopes for success, continues to rock on across the country.

Ryan Rogiers, another Hangar 9 employee and Sky Bop Fly fan, describes their music as "full of energy."

"They're like the Beastie Boys and Grandmaster Flash put together," he said.

International films: An alternative to the norm

STORY BY PAUL TECHO

ARE YOU TIRED OF EXPLOSIONS, MEANINGLESS SPECIAL EFFECTS, BAD THEME SONGS AND LEONARDO DICAPRIO?

Maybe you have the urge to see some classic foreign films that have influenced modern American movies. If so, you may want to check out the International Film Series this semester.

The International Film Series for Spring 1999 begins at 7 p.m. Jan. 24 and 9:30 p.m. Jan. 25 in the Student Center Auditorium. The series will begin with the legendary Spanish director Pedro Almodóvar's film "The Flower."

Films will be shown bi-weekly on Sundays and Mondays until April 25. Admission is $2 for students and the public. Students with an Honors ID get in free.

Scott Furtwengler, coordinator of the International Film Series and associate director of the Honors Program, said today's big budget commercial films rely more on special effects and melodrama than a good story, line and solid characters.

"You can go see 'Titanic' or see 'The Keeper' and 'Blood Simple,'" he said. "There are a lot of people who would rather see a good story without the explosions or special effects."

Furtwengler said the purpose of the International Film Series is to provide more benefits to honor students and to give the community an opportunity to see films they would not normally see in the theater.

"We've never been about big numbers (attendance)," he said. "We offer the films as alternatives and rewards for honor students."

Justin Holland, a senior in psychology from Manville, likes the films because they are a break from the norm.

"Big budget blockbusters get repetitive and old after a while," Holland said. "International films can offer a different perspective of storytelling."

Furtwengler said the films can show the audience how the director sees his culture.

"But you don't want to view a whole culture through one director's eyes," he said. "It does give a bit of insight about information the director receives about his or her culture."

He brought up the example of Jane Campion's "The Piano."

"In American movies, children are usually portrayed as cute or adult-like,"

Furtwengler said. "In 'The Piano,' it was not like that at all."

Furtwengler also said International Films can offer the audience a different brand of humor — for example, the movie "The Gods Must Be Crazy."

He strongly recommends students see John Woo's classic "The Killer," which will be shown in April.

"I recommend it because it has been some influential in American films, particularly the works of Quentin Tarantino and Robert Rodriguez," Furtwengler said.

Furtwengler also said "The Killer" (1990) may have been a source for Michael Mann's "Heat" (1995).

"The dynamics are very similar in the cops-and-preparator relationship that is presented in both movies," he said.

Furtwengler said he tried to coordinate the films with a special theme for each month for Black History Month or Asian American Awareness Month.

Holland said he enjoyed the unique perspective the films represent.

"The films can show you a different viewpoint," he said. "It may change how one views the world and definitely how one views movies."

Various local bands featured on cover album

STORY BY CHRIS KENNEDY

KEVIN GRAHAM SAW SOMETHING BACK IN 1992 THAT OTHERS WERE IGNORING — CARBONDALE HAD AN EXCITING BAND SCENE EXPLODING WITH TALENT.

Graham formed Reception Records, became the executive producer and cranked out the first compilation CD, Heartland Harvest, composed entirely of local bluegrass music.

The company followed that up with compilations filled with original rock songs from local bands, but some area residents thought something was missing.

"Everyone was like, 'It'd be cool to do a cover album,'" Graham said while sitting in his recording studio, 705 W. Main St.

Graham listened, and a compilation cover album, "Cover It Up," is expected to be released this spring. A cover album consists of popular songs performed by artists other than the original bands. "Cover It Up" will be composed entirely of local musicians.

Lisa Pangburn, the booking agent at Reception Records, explained why the label has been slow in undertaking this project.

"There's been a lot of pressure over the years to do a cover album," Pangburn said. "But we always thought original music helped the local scene more." Reception Records has been the driving force behind the local music scene, and many local bands are greatly indebted to them for the guiding hand Graham and his crew has given them.

Jon Rector, of Waxdolls, said his band submitted a cover of The Grateful Dead's "Friend of the Devil" and look forward to the CD.

"It makes a lot of sense," Rector said. "[Local bands] do a lot of covers. It's a very good idea."

Rector also said Reception Records has helped them mature as a band.

"They've done a lot for us," Rector said. "If they want to work with you, they work with you good."

According to Pangburn, "Cover It Up" will not be a bland, ordinary cover album.

"We're looking for people who aren't going to mimic," Pangburn said. "We want them to relay their message through the song in their own way."

Graham said they are looking for reality.

"We want interpretation," Graham said. "We're looking for bands that pick songs out of their genre."

CD followed Graham's wishes exactly. Rector said Waddolls' cover was quite different from the original.

"We're a poppy-punk, rock and roll band," Rector said. "Our version is faster and has more energy. [Reception Records] liked the way we changed it around because it sounded like us."

The Dead Musicians' Society, have also submitted a cover song for the album. Their instrumental version of Nirvana's "Something in the Way" — which also appears on their new CD "Graveyard Summer Sky" — should fit the album's concept nicely.

"We brought the song to a new level," Kevin Lucas, front man of Dead Musicians' Society, said. "We did that by expanding string orchestra and adding haunting sounds like crotales and chimes. "It's always nice to see different interpretations of original songs." Graham urges other local bands to contribute to this unique album. "The range is wide open," Graham said. "I encourage everyone to submit." About 15 songs are slated to appear on the CD. Any band can submit two songs on cassette, CD or VAT tape, for a fee of $10. Submission deadline is March 1. If selected, the band will get 10 copies of the CD. Bands included on the CD will be asked to pay $100 to cover royalties Reception Records has to indemnify for permission to use the songs. "We don't want to have a boot-leg cover album," Graham said.

maintain good academic standing. Ben Syfert, College of Agriculture senator, said the GPA requirement has been a subject of debate in the past and said it was something the senate needed to take under consideration.

Speck disagreed. "These people are our leaders," he said. "They should be held to a higher standard."

Newly appointed USG Vice President Brian Atchison agreed with Speck.

"Higher academic standards in USG ensure that these people have some qualifications to be leaders."

Speck added, although GPSC has no specific number for eligibility, members must remain in good standing within their programs. The requirements for good academic standing vary between the different graduate programs, he said.

The eligibility of members is checked by USG with assistance from Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jean Paratore.

Atchison said he saw the eligibility list Wednesday but that he does not usually see the list unless problems arise. He said, however, he did not know who generated the list.

Paratore has said she sometimes communicated eligibility information to USG via phone rather than making a list.

Information that Ayres may have been ineligible in past semesters as well could not be confirmed, with several sources declining to comment.

Ayres' resignation puts Jackie Smith in the top office, a move which several USG senators and Speck see as positive.

"Jackie has been kept up-to-date, and she's very well informed," Speck said. "I have worked closely with her in the past, and see no problems at all with her stepping up."

Willis Reynolds, a University Park senator, agreed. Smith's record as vice president made him optimistic about her promotion. College of Liberal Arts Senator Heather Cabri seconded that opinion.

"Jackie has done her job extremely well," Cabri said. Taylor said Smith faces obstacles in her new role.

"The faith in USG has been damaged," he said.

He said rebuilding USG's reputation might be a project that extended even to next year's administration.

Atchison outlined several positions where USG would see change in the near future.

"I have thought all along that I could see Jackie as a very good president," he said.

Smith could not be reached for comment on her new position Thursday.

In addition, his new position as vice president has forced him to resign from both his Internal Affairs Committee chairmanship and his senatorship with the College of Agriculture. He said he expects to have those positions filled at the next USG meeting.

Cabri and Reynolds said the resignation, tendered via e-mail to senators, came as a surprise.

Speck said he spoke to Ayres, and Ayres told Speck she was unsure if she would be able to meet the academic requirement for this semester.

Greg Henk, a College of Applied Sciences and Arts senator, said he had heard several unsubstantiated rumors of possible change within the system.

Atchison said he had seen several members of the executive staff in the USG office the night before Ayres announced her resignation and that they did not appear to have any knowledge of the impending resignation. He said he also was personally surprised by the news.

Syfert said many rumors have surfaced since news of the resignation spread and that senators were trying to determine the truth surrounding the situation.

Speck said although "there is always cause for concern when you have instability in student government," academics should be the first priority of students.

"It's a risk you take, trying to balance the demands of class with the demands of other activities," he said.

Salukis fall hard in road-trip opener

Junior center Melaniece Bardley's foul trouble leaves Salukis defenseless

PAUL WLEKINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With SIUC junior center Melaniece Bardley in foul trouble in the entire second half, the Salukis had no one to stop the Drake University's twin towers Thursday night.

The Bulldogs' junior center Tammi Blackstone and junior forward Haley Sames both posted 15 points as Drake (10-5, 6-2) defeated the Salukis (4-11, 3-4) 79-58 in Des Moines, Iowa.

Bardley picked up her third personal foul heading into halftime and quickly picked up her fourth just minutes into the second, forcing her to sit out much of the second half.

The Salukis struggled early missing six layups within the first four minutes of play. They continued to struggle through much of the game missing layups, shooting a mere 21 of 73 (29 percent) from the field for the game.

But the Salukis gave a vigorous effort in the first-half, trailing by only nine at the break.

The Bulldogs quickly pulled away in the second half with Blackstone scoring 11 of the Bulldogs' first 16 points of the half.

Sophomore forward Terica Hathaway led the Salukis with 21 points as senior forward O'Desha Proctor poured in 10 points and 10 rebounds.

Geshla Woodard stepped in for Bardley, chipping in six points.

The Salukis continue the road trip Saturday in Omaha, Neb., where they tip-off with Creighton University (9-6, 4-3) at 2:05 p.m.

The Bluejays had won three of their last four games prior to falling to the University of Evansville Thursday night.

Jets have capable replacement coach

BOB GLAUBER
NEWSDAY

The prevailing theory about New York Jets defensive coordinator Bill Belichick goes something like this: Thanks to his wondrously intricate and innovative schemes, the team's over-achieving players are capable of beating just about anyone — as long as the offense and special teams don't produce six turnovers, of course.

And without Belichick, the Jets don't stand a chance.

You would be correct on the first assessment, because Belichick is surely one of the great tacticians of this, or any other, football generation.

But on the second, you would be mistaken.

For if the Jets do lose Belichick to one of the remaining teams with a head coaching vacancy —

Kansas City and Chicago are expected to interview him by the end of the week, although the Bears indicated Wednesday they may decline — the man who would fill Belichick's shoes is more capable than you might think.

Then again, there's a chance you don't even know who would succeed Belichick, since head Coach Bill Parcells has outfitted his assistants with muzzles and thus keeps them out of the public eye.

His name is Al Groh. And for the last two seasons, Groh has been the Jets' linebackers coach and has played a major, if not widely acknowledged, role in the team's improved defensive play.

While Parcells is generally given the credit — or is it just that he's the only one taking the credit? — for every improved player over the last two years, it's just not that simple. After all, it is the assistants who tutor the players every day who are just as responsible, if not more so.

And no one on the Jets' staff has done a better job than Groh, whose resume includes seven stints as a college head coach or assistant and five as an NFL defensive coordinator or assistant.

Just look at the results:

- Mo Lewis has gone from an overweight underachiever to an All-Pro.

- Bryan Cox has gone from NFL also-ran to the heart of the Jets' defense.

- Chad Cascadden, who made the team as a free agent walk-on in 1995, improved so much over the second half of the season that the Jets changed their base defensive alignment from a 4-3 to a 3-4 to take advantage of his versatility.

Salukis get back on track Track and field teams to compete in first meet of season

ROB ALLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC track and field teams hope a week of practice acted as WD-40 to any rust that accumulated over winter break.

This Saturday, the women's team heads north to Eastern Illinois University for the EIU Mega Meet. The meet includes over 20 teams, with five from Division I-A.

A little creakiness was evident last Saturday as the women, who had not practiced as a team in five weeks, finished third in the 10-team Saluki Booster Invitational in Carbondale.

"The other teams (Mississippi State University and Georgia Tech University) were in school and had a week of training that we didn't have," coach Don DeNoon said.

The Salukis were able to finish third primarily because of a strong performance from their field athletes, and two of the team's usual standouts led the way. Junior Felicia "F" took second in the high jump, and sophomore Caryn Poliquin continued a strong season in the weight throw.

DeNoon is confident that after a week of practice, his runners are ready to turn in a few top times.

"Our sprinters look quicker, and our distance runners got some interval training in this week," said DeNoon, adding with a chuckle, "I'm hoping coaching has some affect on the outcome."

DeNoon sees the meet as a chance to pick up some high finishes as well as the opportunity to put together a successful team effort.

"The competition will be good," he said.

"I have two primary goals — win the meet and see if we can have six events that we can end up winning."

The men weren't as hampered by the lengthy lay-off—they won their meet. That doesn't mean coach Bill Cornell will not be looking for improvement this weekend.

The Salukis are going a little further north Saturday to Champaign for the Illini Classic. The meet features the always powerful University of Illinois and Ball State University. North Central College, a Division III national powerhouse, will be competing as well.

"Illinois is always good up there," Cornell said. "They have a really good track that should be conducive to good performances."

This is certainly good news for senior sprinter Orlando McKee, who is quickly making quite a name for himself in the 200-meter dash. McKee was named Missouri Valley Conference Track Athlete of the Week for his SIUC record-setting and NCAA qualifying time of 21.44 seconds Saturday. According to "TrackWire" magazine, McKee's time is fourth best in the nation this season.

In addition to a full week of practice, Cornell said the team also had extra incentive to train hard.

"We have 37 on the team, and we only travel with 28," Cornell said, "so practice is kind of competitive."

The team's aim this weekend will be to keep building on what they've already accomplished in the short season.

"We had a good week's work," Cornell said. "Obviously, we want to go out and have better performances each week."

Defense looks to shine against powerful Shockers

ROAD WARRIORS: Underdog Salukis prepare for game at Wichita State.

Something just isn't right.

When Bruce Weber was hired as SIUC men's basketball coach, he distinctly said he wanted to "get the ball out and go" offensively.

Didn't he?

"We want to push the ball," Weber said Oct. 15 at Saluki basketball media day. "We want to score a lot of points."

Their 64.3-point per game average, way down from last year's 75.2 that ranked them ninth in the Missouri Valley Conference, should prove that has yet to happen. But Weber has drastically improved another area after just 16 games.

The Salukis (9-7, 4-4) are holding their opponents to 63.1 points per game — a 13-point improvement from last season and second only to Bradley University in the league.

Solid play on the defensive end has been a vital part of the Salukis' recent success. They have won four of their last six games and ride a two-game win streak heading into Saturday night's 6:05 date with Wichita State University (9-9, 3-5) at Levitt Arena in Wichita, Kan.

Weber said he has emphasized to his players to have "vision, communication and awareness" while defending, and the Shockers don't know if they have an answer.

"In SIUC, there's not a lot we can do," WSU assistant coach Fred Andrews said. "SIUC does a great job of defending. That's one of Coach Weber's trademarks. He does a great job of taking people out of what they want to do."

And the players are starting to understand that defense has become more important than offense. On Jan. 13, the first meeting between these two teams, senior guard Monte Jenkins and sophomore Abel Schrader did an excellent job of defending one of the better tandems in the Valley in Shocker forward Maurice Evans — the nation's eighth-leading scorer at 22.8 ppg — and guard Jason Perez (15.6).

Jenkins, who is the team's leading scorer (13.4), scored only four points that night, but he held Perez to nine points. Schrader limited Evans to nine as well.

"Two or three weeks ago, if Monte doesn't score, he doesn't guard either," Weber said after his team won that game 67-55 in the SIUC Arena. "That's what I'm saying — guys have bought in. You can't score every night, but you can play hard and defend."

Schrader said guarding Evans was a task he shared success in with his teammates.

"I know I was guarding probably or at least one of the best players in the league," Schrader said. "But like I said, it was a team effort. Everybody contributed in the effort."

As far as things go, the Salukis plan to do the same thing in Wichita. The Shockers are 9-0 at home this season and are coming off a 94-88 win over Southwest Missouri State University Monday to halt a four-game skid.

"If we step up the defense on the road, everything else will kind of take its place," Jenkins said.

Junior forward Chris Thunell and senior guard Monte Jenkins (23) put pressure on Drake guard Matt Wodley forcing a turnover Monday night at the SIUC Arena. The Salukis won the ballgame 69-52. SIUC is now 9-7 on the season.
