Unsettled budget keeps costing taxpayers

By Marc Chase Administration Reporter

While state legislators are stuck in political grid-lock, taxpayers may be stuck with a bill of $28.674 to cover the cost of special sessions to determine the budget for fiscal year 1995. Some students and administrators at SIUC say this money would be better spent on academic programs scheduled for affinitiation. elimination.

Rick Davis, representative for the state comptroller's office, said for every day the legislature meets past June 30 to determine the fiscal year 1995 budget, taxpayers are charged $14,337. The legislature held two special sessions on July 1

A special session can only be funded when both the state house and the senate meet.

Disagreements between Gov. Jim Edgar and Illinois House Speaker Mike Madigan, D-Chicago, over how much money should be spent on education and delinquent medicaid bills are the cause of the special sessions.

Representatives and students from academic programs, that are scheduled to be eliminated from SIUC because of a lack of state funding, said they are angry because money is being absorbed by the special sessions that could have be used to save their programs

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended earlier this year the elimination of several academic programs at SIUC, such as the master's degree program in community development and the doctoral program in physical education, because the state legislature is cutting back on academic funding.

State leaders still disagree; blame passed onto others

By Angela Hyland

Illinois has gone almost a week without a budget and political analysts cannot predict when a budget might be approved, but one thing is for ertain: It is all the Democrats fault -- according to the Republicans.

Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar met for about 45 minutes Wednesday with House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago;

House Minority Leader Lee A. Daniels, R-Eimhurst; Senate President James "Pate" Philip, R-Wood Dale and Senate leader Emil Jones, D-Chicago.

Steve Brown, press secretary for Madigan, said the governor and the leaders failed to come to an agreement.

"We appear to be fairly close, but every time we stick a hand out, they change their mind,"

Clinton visits Baltics

Pushes for freedom from Soviets

By Ruth Marcus The Washington Post

WARSAW, Poland-President Clinton became the first American president to visit the Baltics Wednesday, bringing a joyous close to a chapter of Cold War history after a half-century in which the United States refused to recognize Russian occupation of the three Baltic nations.

Clinton met with the presidents of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia in Riga, the Latvian capital, before continuing here to meet with Polish President Lech Walesa.

In a gesture to bonor the Baltics' new-found independence. Clinton took the once-forbidden step of placing a bouquet at Riga's Freedom Monument, a rallying point for anti-Soviet protests during the 1980s.

Before a surging, cheering crowd of thousands that packed the Latvian capital's Freedom Square and stretched down the cobblestoned streets of the medieval city, Clinton underscored the administration's desire to have the remaining Russian troops out of the Baltics by Aug. 31.

"You have inspired the world, and America has kept faith with you," he said as the crowd waved American flags and held aloft return to Europe's fold, we will stand with you. We will help you ... and we will rejoice with you when the last of the foreign troops vanish from your homelands."

But as Clinton vowed to help with that effort, he also offered a pointed reminder of the need for fair treatment of the large numbers of ethnic Russians who continue to live in the Baltics. The problem is particularly acute in Latvia, where Russians make up 30.2 percent of the population but complain of discrimination in their efforts to gain citizenship.

Today I appeal to you ... never to deny to others the justice and equality you fought so hard for and earned for yourselves," Clinton said as the crowd fell silent, in dramatic contrast to its previous thunderous applause. "For freedom without tolerance is freedom

Blues saxman A.C. Reed has layed with world class musicians like Muddy Waters and Stevie Ray Vaughan, but when he lived in Carbondale in the 1940s, he had to travel to Cairo just to get a gig.

"There was nothing in Carbondale back then — nothing,"
Reed said. "There was only one hotel in town and I think it got burned down. Now you got Holiday Inns and everything — everything's changed."

Reed has played in Carbondale twice since he moved away and After Reed moved from arbondale to Chicago in the 1950s, his name became known in blues circles. He eventually went on to play with many of the biggest names in the business, like blues legends Muddy Waters, Albert Collins and Buddy Guy.

He said he got to play with the established acts of the time because he was one of the only saxophone players who did blues.

"Most of the other sax players did jazz or big band," he said. "I enjoyed playing the blues and I knew how to play it."

While in Chicago, he played the local nightclub circuit and cut albums with Muddy Waters and many other popular acts.

"I did three recordings with Muddy," Reed said. "Muddy was a nice fellow. Even then he was known as the 'godfather of the

GAY DOCTORS ASSOCIATION URGES ACTION —
LOS ANGELES TIMES — As Dr. Katherine O'Hanlan listened to her that no one mentioned lesbians. The meeting, held by Health and Human low access to cancer screening. African Americans, Latinos—each had poor mammography rates. But no one was mentioning gay women. Then O'Hanlan took the floor. Lesbians, she pointed out, were the least likely to highest rates of breast cancer. Several large upcoming studies, including the sweeping Women's Health Initiative, will stratify data by sexual claimed by the nation's predominant group of gay doctors—the American Association of Physicians for Human Rights—of which O'Hanlan is president.

Hating Hamlet Play adds comic relief to old story cash awards have been given to anonymous callers.

Jim Prowell, president of the Carbondale Crime Stoppers board of directors, said he helped with the organization of the program.

"The real reason this program is so important is that we cannot ask the police to take care of everything," Prowell said. "(Fighting crime) is a joint effort on all our parts.

Frank Black is treasurer for the board and Jane Hughes is secretary.

Other board members include: Sharon Hammer, Richard Johnston, Vicki Neville, Dennis Olson, Cleveland Matthews and Ron Manis.

The Crime Stoppers tip line allows callers to phone in anonymously and provide information about unsolved crimes, Prowell said. Investigators follow up on the tips and if the tip leads to arrest the Crime Stoppers board of directors considers a fair cash reward to be given the caller.

The award is given to the caller through a third party so the caller's identity remains unknown to Crime Stoppers and the police.

"It's good to have the community involved," Prowell

The board has asked the community's help to keep the program going. Cash rewards come from money donated by local businesses and individuals. However, funds are depleting and the board is asking for donations.

Donations are tax deductible.

Black said he feels the program provides an important service to the police department.

"I feel very strongly about this," he said. "I support it financially as well as serve on the board. I believe it helps our police department to be much more efficient."

Matthews said he is proud to be a member of the board and believes the program is a necessity.

Clinton should treat all refugees equally

PRESIDENT CLINTON'S ADMINISTRATION announced Tuesday that Haitians who flee their country by boat will not be allowed to seek asylum in the United States. If Haitians are judged to be political refugees, they will be sent to Panama, which is designated a safe haven. If not, they will be sent back to Haiti.

The latest change in policy came after the U.S. Coast Guard intercepted 3,247 Haitians on 70 boats fleeing their country Monday. These Haitians were packed into these small vessels risking their lives on the seas because May 8 Clinton announced that all Haitians designated as political refugees would be given asylum in the United States.

According to our government, a person designated as a political refugee is one who has a well-founded fear of persecution. However, Clinton is sending the message that if you are a Haitian, your persecution must be a little bit greater to be granted political asylum.

Clinton needs to standardize the term political refugee to insure all refugees are judged equally.
Clinton had to change his policy because our country cannot handle this huge influx of impoverished Haitians. Refugees fleeing by boat have increased dramatically since Clinton decided the best way to topple Haiti's military dictatorship was to impose tougher economic sanctions.

ALL OF THIS LEADS ONE TO BELIEVE Clinton's handling of foreign policy, in terms of Haiti, is at best inconsistent. Haitians are not the only aliens to whom our country grants political asylum to. Cubans, Nicaraguans and Panamanians are also given political asylum. However, there is a difference. For some reason, these other nationalities have an easier time proving to our government they have a well-founded fear of persecution.

If the Clinton Administration has discovered our country is not prepared to grant thousands of Haitians political asylum, then they should change our country's refugee and immigration policies for all aliens, not just Haitians. It is inconsistent and unfair for Cubans to be judged by a different standard than Haitians. If a malnourished Haitian found drowning in the ocean is not acting on a well-founded fear of persecution, then just who is?

BUT WHAT DO WE DO ABOUT THE STARVING and sick Haitians we are turning away from our shores? Should we continue to ask other Caribbean countries to provide temporary safe havens while we wait for economic sanctions to work?

The reason given for interfering in Haitian government is simple. President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was popularly elected by the people, but was exiled by military leaders who now run the country in the form of a dictatorship.

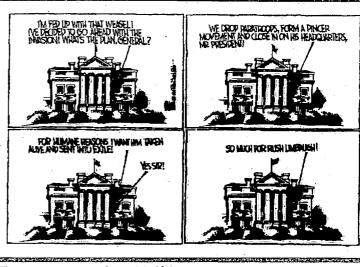

By imposing economic sanctions, it is our government's hope that the handful of wealthy elite that live in Haiti will not allow the military to continue to rule. But the wealthy are leaving Haiti behind, which is exactly what our government will not let the mass of suffering poor Haitians do. If the United States political asylum laws are too lenient for Hatians, they are too lenient for all refugees.

"This is a perfect example of how political grid-lock affects citizens of Illinois," Hall said. "At a time when the nation is in need of when the nation is in local community development practitioners, the government in Springfield is spending over $14,000 a day on political grid-think if the legislature is wasting money, it will be bad for the state as a whole," Smith said. "If the state does not fund higher education properly, it will always hurt the state in the long run."

Ross Hodel, deputy director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said the $14,377 spent on each special session is not a large sum of money when put into perspective with the purposed state budget of $33 billion with $252,800,000 going to $1U.

"State legislators have acted responsibly up to this point in time in trying to reach an agreement for the budget," Hodel said. "It must the budget," Hodel said. "It must be put into perspective that legislators are dealing with a more than $33 billion budget and special sessions only cost about $14,000." Hodel said the primary concern of IBHE is that if the legislature does not agree on a budget by July 17, attacked.

Mike Bost, Republican candidate for state representative of the 115th District, said the $14,377 used for each special session could be better used to save academic programs that have been cut.

"Yes, this money could be used for better things," Bost said. "The budget could have been settled before June 30, but instead they (the state legislature) are playing politics. It's costly and it's ridiculous."

Mike Bost, R-Carbondale, who is running against Gerald Hawkins, D-DuQuoin, for state representative of the 115th district, held a news conference Wednesday at SIUC to address the budget issue.

Bost said Hawkins' decision to vote against Gov. Jim Edgar's budget proposal July budget proposal July 5 was a hamful one for Southern Illinois. The proposed budget included a $4.5 billion increase for SIU, which Bost said is being jeopardized by the stelement. the stalemate Bost said many Republicans believe by voting against the proposal, Democrats such as Hawkins are voting against their constituents.

Hawkins said Republicans are making false accusations and are resorting to scare tactics in an effort to discredit Democrats.

"That is political rhetoric," he

Hawkins said the $4.5 million increase Bost referred to has never been at risk of being cut.

Mike Cys, spokesman for Daniels, said if the budget fails to pass, state Comptroller Dawn Clark, Netsch could lack the authority to issue paychecks to state employees, including about 500 SIU employees.

"They're holding you guys hostage for whatever reason,

"You're all in danger until an agreement is reached."

According to Cys, the refusal of democrats to agree to the proposed budget could cause problems for hundreds of constituents.

"By voting against this, Hawkins has endangered the pay of all SIU employees," he said.

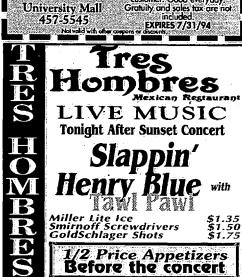

Hawkins said these accusations are hypocritical and untrue.

Currently, budget disagreements center on how much should be spent on unpaid Medicaid bills and on increases in education spending. Although Democrats would like to see additional money set aside to pay delinquent Medicaid bills and improve primary and secondary education, Hawkins said no one ever has suggested this money come from SIUC.

Sun index, awareness keys to avoiding overexposure

Know your skin. That's the first step when determining how to use the information from the National Weather Service's new ultraviolet radiation index, says Dr. Kenneth Judd, a demiatologist. The index is intended to help people avoid overexposure to the sun, which contributes 700,000 to 1 million new cases of skin cancer each year, according to the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The sun index is helpful," says Judd, who's on staff at the Greater Baltimore Medical Center, "But you need to know what type of skin you have." And how to protect it by using a combination of common sense and sunscreens.

The index ranges from minimal to very high and suggests the length of time-given different skin types—a person may stay in the sun before overexposure

For instance, a low index of 3-4 means fair-skinned people can spend 15 to 20 minutes in the sun without protection. People with darker skin can remain out for 75 to 90 minutes before facing sun damage. Parents need to take special note of how long their chil-dren are exposed, says Dr. Stephen Feldman, a Greater Baltimore Medical Center pediatrician.
"About 80 percent of all overexposure occurs before the age of 18," Feldman says, "Why? Because kids are out in the sun all of the time. People usually don't think of kids out playing baseball as sunbathing. But they are." Regardless of age, skin type or index, the sun is more dangerous at certain times, says Dr. Risa Jampel, a Baltimore-area dermatologist . "From about 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., the rays are most damaging," she says, adding that the index can change throughout the day as the weather changes.

SIUC Police Blotter

Reports from the SIUC Police Department Tuesday, July 5

- Nirau N. Gupta of Centralia reported his bicycle was stolen between 11:05 a.m. and 3 p.m. from a bike rack at the Student Center. The bike was valued at $850.
- An unknown suspect broke into a room at Pulliam Hall between 4:30 p.m. July 1 and 7:51 p.m. July 3 and removed computer software, keys, manuals and pictures. The loss is valued at $1,300. There are no suspects. The incident is under investigation.
- An incident was reported at 6:28 p.m. which occurred after 6:10 p.m. and before 6:28 p.m. at Pulliam Hall. A father with his daughter waited for the mother who was attending a class at Pullian, Hall. The two were waiting for the mother.

The child was laying on a bench in the hall. The father went around the corner to the stairs to check for the mother. He heard footsteps of someone walking by and stopped.

When the father came around the corner, a man was stopped in front of his daughter with his left hand down her pants.

The father yelled and chased the man, who went through the breezeway between Pulliam and Wham and disappeared.

The incident is described as aggravated criminal sexual abuse. The child was not physically injured.

The suspect is a white male, 5feet, 8-inches to 6-feet tall, between the ages of 20 and 24, with sandy He was last seen wearing a black tank top with the words L.A. Gear printed in gold on the front, black shorts and white tennis shoes.

GI Joe celebrating 30 years

Maybe it was the uniform. Maybe it was the tiny M-1 carbine he carried. Or the battle scar across his polyvinyl cheek.

. "When we were kids, we really got off on that stuff," recalled Vincent Santelmo, 33, who re-ceived his first GI Joe at age 3 and now boasts of being the nation's foremost authority on the miniature man of war. "It was the cool toy to

But it was more than a toy.

Joe, as his fans refer to him, symbolized the changing values of the time. He reeked of 1950s patriotism and yet was the first doll for boys, a socially acceptable coun-terpart to Barbie. Joe allowed boys to fuss over clothes. He allowed them to accessorize, even if it was with grenade launchers and dag-

And this summer, Joe turns 30. A reissue of the original figure will arrive at stores in late August. At the same time, thousands of fans and collectors are expected to board the U.S. aircraft carrier Intrepid in New York Harbor for a weekend convention. Christie's will mark the occasion with an auction of vintage Joe paraphemalia.

Santelmo, for his part, is finishing a commemorative book on the anniversary. As author of a previous 450-page tome, "The Complete Encyclopedia to GI Joe" (Krause Publications, 1993), he believes that the occasion calls for reflection.
"Back then," the New York City collector said, "there was this mystique about GI Joe."

The mystique originated in Hollywood. In 1962, an independent toy designer approached Hasbro Inc. about producing a figure based on a television series called "The Lieutenant." Hasbro balked at tying its fortunes to a show that could be canceled before the toy had a chance to become Hassenfeld and his top executive, a Korean War veteran named Don Levine, liked the idea of a dollsized soldier. They used a wooden sculptor's mannequin to develop an

III-inch prototype.
"The concept of doing a doll for boys in the early 1900s was a big risk," said Kirk Bozigian, a vice president at the Pawtucket, R.L. toy company, "What parent would let bis one play with a doll's. his son play with a doll?"
Hasbro executives insisted on

Skilled workers lose security

WARREN, Mich.—By its very name, the General Motors Technical Center should be the model of a high-performance workplace, a place where skills equal job security.

Guess again.

After nearly a year of negotiations and a five-day strike, GM and the United Auto Workers union have agreed to a joint study of one of the most fundamental work force ques-tions facing the nation today: Can a worker acquire enough skills to achieve job security in a world of global competition?

The short-term answer at the tech center has been "no." Last month, workers there went on strike to protest GM's practice of shifting highly skilled design jobs to lower-cost outside shops, where people work when they're needed and generally don't have benefits or job secu-

The committee is seeking solutions that both workers and management can live with. Its job is to look at both the technical process and the systems that GM uses to design its cars and trucks in an economy where ideas and parts come from around the globe and technological change is so rapid that expensive new equipment can become obsolete overnight.

All major automakers are looking for faster ways to develop new products and get them to market. Paper blueprints have all but disappeared in favor of electronic designs. which can be moved around the world in seconds.

India wants equal limits on nukes

Students find selling books back stressful

By Sam House Special Assignment Reporter

For most students at SIUC, the most stressful time of the semester isn't during finals, it is when they try to get money back for their books. To alleviate this stress, it is helpful to understand the buy back procedures of the bookstore, according to one bookstore manager,

"The price for buy back is determined by several factors," said Randy Johnson, 710 Book-store's Textbook manager.

The major factor is whether the book is being used again at SIUC which is a factor primarily deter-mined by the instructor, Johnson

The instructor has to order the book for the next semester, otherwise any bookstore cannot offer more than wholesale price.

Wholesale price is determined by national supply and demand. Johnson said.

The campus order list for the books needed the next semester has to be available by the bookstore before more than wholesale price can be given. Johnson said.

If students attempt to sell back a book before the list is out, then they will only receive wholesale price. said University Bookstore Assistant Manager Jim Booziotis said.

'It depends on whether the instructor will use the book or not." Booziotis said. "If the instructor will use the book, then we will pay up to half-price."

If a student wants to sell a book back at the end of the summer semester and it won't be used again until the following spring semester, then a wholesale price will be

The University Bookstore's buy back dates for the summer is Aug. 3. 4 and 5, and 710 Bookstore buys books daily.

In particular, India regards as "absurd" a proposal by the United States that China—its nuclear-armed neighbor and rival— be asked to join a regional agreement as a "guarantor" of Pakistan's commitments, a senior Indian official said.

PGA golfer hit by stray bullet

SYLVANIA Objo-The red wound on the left side of Bethesda, Md., golfer Kim Williams' neck is no more than half an inch long. The purple bruise, the size of a fist and mostly hidden by her white blouse, spreads out toward her throat from just below her right collarbone.

These are the spots where a bullet sliced into her body Saturday might and where it remains today,

"Obviously, I feel lucky," Williams said Tuesday at a news conference at the Ladies Professional Golf Association's Jamie Farr Toledo Classic, which she said she intends to play this "There's really no explanation for it. It's pretty much of a miracle that a bullet can go through murace that a builet can go inrough your neck and not hit anything."

Williams, 31, was shot as she walked toward a Phar-Mor drug store in Niles, Ohio, while playing in the Youngstown-Warren LPGA Classic last weekend

Police originally believed they were investigating a drive-by shooting, but according to has told authorities he might have shot Williams as he and a friend were target shooting on his property in Howland, Ohio, ninetenths of a mile from the drug store. No arrests have been made.
"The caliber bullet that is in me

(9 millimeter) is what he was shooting," Williams said.

She said doctors told her they would leave the bullet where it is, lodged against her esophagus, because it could cause more damage to take it out.

Less than three days after the shooting, Williams has two decidedly different views of the horrifying incident.

As a religious person, she said she feels lucky to be alive, to be able to walk, to be able to discuss playing in this week's $500,000 tour event, even though she is still so sore from the shooting and weak from her medication that she hasn't tried one practice swing.

But she also is bitter. She was 4under par and only two shots off the lead in Youngstown when play was suspended because of thunderstorms Saturday afternoon.

second round, and the final 18 holes to go on Sunday, she said she thought she was going to win the tournament, or at least "make a very big check."

That would have been very important to Williams.

More than halfway through the 1994 season, Williams, a six-year tour veteran with no tournament victories, has earned just $23,077. barely enough to pay expenses, and about half of what she needs to earn the right to compete for another year.

So it's not simply an act of heroism to try to tee it up Friday in the Toledo Classic. It's also a matter of getting back to work.

"I'm not wealthy, I don't have a lot of money, I need to work," she said. "I have bills I have to pay, especially after last week. I have a ry high deductible (at least $3,000, she said) on my health insurance. I really don't have the leisure to not work, nor do I have the desire. I don't really want to go home and sit around.

So I haven't watched enough soccer to know what's good and what's not. I haven't watched a thousand games and absorbed the infinite subtlenes of kick-or-be-kicked at midfield, 50 yards from the goal.

So does getting to know soccer mean taking medicine. Whos! You're not going to like taking his but it's going to make you better I don't think so.

The U.S. team played its stripes out Monday and managed to hold the great Brazil team to form the great sharft darn to a 1-0 vectory. almost everything we do involves hand-eye coordination and in soccer you can't use your hands? Sounds like something from Monty Pythop: Wot, fight a duel with hands tied behind your back?

Now, they're trying to sell the game in the U.S. of A. and well, you should know that the World Cup customarily goes by the press custom of the host matton. Except for this one. The rest of the world media does reviews, not interviews.

Sometimes coaches go to postgame interviews players do not. Instead a covering newspaper gets one access to what they call the mixed zone. Players may or may not be there—and bring your own language

In fact, Callahan said when he was hired for the job at Eastern, he moved to the Charleston area a month before the position took effect to work road construction while recruiting at night.

"I've never been out worked or out hustled by anyone," he said. "I'm not afraid to beat the bushes, make a home visit, go to a game or bring a kid on campus." Callahan did not describe himself as a strict disciplinarian and said his players can leave 'getting into umpires faces to him.' But Salukis wearing the maroon and white under the new coach can count on obeying a couple simple policies at

"My two biggest rules are to be on time, give me 100-percent and the rest of the things can take care of themselves," he said. "There has to be some flexibility from a players point and a coaches point." SIUC interim head coach Ken Henderson was set to meet with Callahan Wednesday night in hopes of keeping the temporary Saluki skipper as the team's first assistant coach. Henderson took over the reigns of the SIUC squad after Sam Riggleman resigned the position at mid-season and guided the Salukis to its first winning record in three years.

"I do not sense any problems (with kepping Henderson on as coach)," Callahan said. "I think he and I need to sit down and talk some things over. I look at the situation as an asset more than a hinderance."

Callahan did not offer the name of candidates for the third coaching position, but said he does have three potential prospects in

Callahan steps up to plate for SIUC

The faces atop SIUC athletics continued to change Wednesday as Dan Callahan was named head coach of the Saluki baseball team after heading the Eastern Illinois program for the past six seasons.

Callahan joins first-year Saluki football coach Shawn Watson to point two of SIUC's high profile athletic squads in a different direction this fall.

"I want to bring Saluki baseball back to respectability." Callahan said. "My goal is to bring things back to at, or, near the ton."

The 35-year-old Callahan is a baseball journeyman that boasts experience ranging from being a pitcher in the San Diego Padres and Seattle Mariners organizations to assistant coaching for the Red Sox and A's in the Cape Cod Baseball League.

A native of Springfield, H., Callahan

A native of springitery, it. After earning his M.S. in position before being chosen from four finalists for the SIUC job.

"It is nice to be back," Callahan said, "I know that is something one should say when accepting a job, but this time I really mean it. I was flattered to be one of the four finalists, but in this instance, second place was not what I wanted.

"I've never been out-worked or out-hustled by anyone. I'm not afraid to beat the bushes, make a home visit, go to a game or bring a kid on campus.

-Dan Callahan

Callahan edged Saluki interim head coach Ken Henderson, John A. Logan's Jerry Halstead and Austin Peay State's Gary McClure for the position.

SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart said all four finalists were capable of getting the job done, but returning someone who helped 1985-1988 under the legendary coach Jones is a plus.

"We had a great search,
from 50 or 60 applicants down to the final four," he said, "It was a difficult decision and we feel realfortunate and proud to bring someone back who here under Itchy

Callahan said he learned more from Itchy in three years than any one person and returning to the Missouri Valley Con-ference will give him the opportunity to utilize the opportunities offered by a

One of the first tasks facing Callahan will be to try and sign some of the blue-chip prospects that have yet to commit to a major collegiate program.

"When you talk about the MVC, you talk about Dan Callahan becomes new head baseball coach at SIUC the SEC and Pac10 conferences too," he said, "That's good school. Recruiting, though, is something Callahan said he will not leave up to school. Recruiting, though, is something Callahan said he will not leave up to his assistant coaches alone.

So I may not know art: I know what I like. So who am I to tell them what's wrong with soccer? This is the world's game, the real sport of kings, and the World Cup is the wouldn't begin to tell the world it's mistaken.

So I may not know soccer, I know what I like. This is the world's favorite game except mine. I don't get it.

I have sat next to fellow Newsday reporter John Jeansonne in the Rose Bowl in broiling sun. I have enjoyed talking soccer with him over dinner. I have read the works of George Vecsey, who used to work at this place. They like soccer, Jeansonne said I should have seen the Romania, Argentina game; it was the best thing he'd ever seen. And he has seen stuff I really liked.

I have interviewed American players; they seem to be a decent lot, pretty much like players in any sport I've covered. They did a good job of establishing themselves as in the same league as the titans of the game.

An official from Armenia told me that the
