Guyon appoints acting law dean

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The appointment of an acting dean for the SIUC School of Law was announced Monday by SIUC President John Guyon.

Thomas C. Britton, former associate dean of the law school, replaces Harry J. Haynsworth IV, who left July 5.

Britton said although the announcement came ten days after

“ From my perspective, there wasn’t a delay ... Matters had to be resolved and we did it as quickly as possible. ”

Haynsworth originally planned to leave, he and Guyon had been talking about the appointment for the past couple of weeks.

“From my perspective there wasn’t a delay,” Britton said. “There wasn’t a reason for concern. Matters had to be resolved and we did it as quickly as possible.”

Britton said he is familiar with the duties he will assume.

“I worked very closely with Dean Haynsworth for the past three and a half years,” Britton said.

“It will be a short learning period.”

Britton, a graduate of the law school, has been at SIUC for 24 years, serving with the Chancellor’s office, the Board of Trustees and various positions in the university administration.

The search for a permanent dean is currently underway, and search committee member Patrick Kelley said the position should be filled by July 1, 1996.

Artists, sculptors, and iron-pourers from across the country converged on Carbondale last week and gave a new meaning to the term “heavy metal.”

Nearly 6,000 pounds of cast iron in fact, as Tom Walsh, professor in the School of Art and Design, and SIUC hosted the 10th Annual Iron Pour at the SIUC foundry.

The iron pour at SIUC is the biggest pour of its kind at any United States university. Schools in Iowa and Minnesota once had similar pours until veteran faculty retired.

More than 30 participants came from as far as New Hampshire, Texas, New Mexico, California, Washington, and Virginia. They started arriving in Carbondale last week and began building molds, made of catalyzed sand, for the weekend’s pour.

New license matter of ‘primary function’

By Rob Neff
DE Government/Politics Editor

Carbondale coffee houses do not fall under the definition of entertainment establishments, and therefore will not be governed by the new entertainment ordinance that took effect Friday, according to City Manager Jeff Doherty.

Questions about whether or not coffee houses are affected by the new ordinance were raised by Beach Bumz owner Roland Davis, who reopened Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Ave., as Carbondale’s only non-alcoholic entertainment club Friday.

Doherty said the coffee houses, which have been known to provide entertainment ranging from poetry readings to live bands, do not fit the definition of an entertainment club because entertainment is not their primary function.

“Currently, their operations do not fall under the definition of an entertainment establishment,” he said. “The question is ‘What is their primary function?’ Their primary function is not entertainment.”

Davis claimed the coffee houses in town are defined as entertainment clubs under the new ordinance, and should be required to follow all of the regulations that apply to entertainment clubs.

“Requiring Beach Bumz to comply with this ordinance and not requiring the other businesses, which are similarly situated, to comply violates our protection under the equal rights law,” Davis said.

The ordinance defines an entertainment club as “Commercial premises which are open to the public, the primary function of which is to offer patrons an opportunity to engage in social activities such as dancing, or the enjoyment of live or prerecorded music, or the enjoyment of entertainment provided by dancers or other performers. As an incidental function, an entertainment club may sell and serve food and beverages to its patrons.”

The ordinance goes on to exclude establishments licensed to serve liquor, theaters, full service restaurants, outdoor performances, non-public and non-commercial gatherings.

The new ordinance requires entertainment clubs to cater to only one of three age groups at any given time: those between 13 and 18 years of age, those 18-and-over, or those 21-and-over.

The ordinance also requires all entertainment clubs to close at 1:59 a.m.

Davis said the first teen night was held without incident, and he plans to continue to have teen nights every Friday and Saturday night until 10:45.

Those 18-and-over are welcome only on Wednesday nights and after 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday during the summer, Davis said. Davis said the club will also serve as a restaurant during the day, serving pizza, sub sandwiches and nachos.

POPE APOLOGIZES FOR PAST DISCRIMINATION —
VATICAN CITY—Pope John Paul II issued a manifesto on women's rights Monday, putting himself on the side of equal treatment and apologizing for past discrimination in the Roman Catholic Church, but reaffirming the ban on women priests. In a 19-page letter addressed to "women throughout the world," the pope went so far as to praise women's liberation as "substantially a positive" process, despite what he termed "mistakes," while holding firm to Roman Catholic dogma on issues such as priesthood and abortion that long have been bones of contention between feminists and church hierarchy.

HUMAN RIGHTS CRUSADER IN GOOD HEALTH —
BEIJING—In a conversation carefully monitored by Chinese officials, Chinese-American human rights crusader Harry Wu told a U.S. Embassy official Monday that he is in good condition and has not been beaten or tortured during the three weeks since his arrest at a remote western China border post. Consul General Arturo Macias met Wu in the central Chinese city of Wuhan, where the 58-year-old resident of Milpitas, Calif., is being held on charges of entering China under false pretenses, obtaining state secrets and "conducting criminal activities in areas and institutions that are not open to foreign nationals."

LEADER RELEASED AFTER SIX YEARS HOUSE ARREST —
BANGKOK, Thailand—Aung San Suu Kyi, an opposition leader in Myanmar and a symbol worldwide of democracy in chains, was freed Monday by the military authorities in her native land after six years under house arrest. Rather than go out to enjoy her freedom, the 1991 Nobel Peace laureate chose to have a meeting at her lakeside home in Yangon, the capital of Myanmar, formerly known as Burma.

CONTROVERSIAL PLAQUE RETURNED TO VIEW —
HARPERS FERRY, W. Va.—Created and dedicated in controversy and kept under wraps in recent years, a monument to a free black man fatally shot by John Brown's abolitionist raiders has been returned quietly to public view. Without ceremony, preview, protest or news release, the National Park Service one morning last month removed plywood covering the monument to Heyward Shepherd erected in 1931 by the United Daughters of the Confederacy and Sons of Confederate Veterans. The Park Service placed a small interpretive plaque nearby. Shepherd had the ironic distinction of being a free black man who was the first fatal in a raid to free blacks, and the original memorial makers tried to make the most of it. To them, his death symbolized Brown's misguided challenge to the southern way of life.

NEWSPAPER RECYCLING BUSINESS IS BOOMING —
Newspaper recycling, virtually in the dumps a few years ago, is now a booming business, thanks to record newsprint prices, more paper mills and stronger market incentives. Everyone, it seems, is trying to cash in on recycling. Wood products companies have invested billions of dollars in recent years in mills designed to reprocess paper. Waste management companies, instead of dumping paper in landfills, are scrambling to acquire local recycling centers and proclaiming themselves among the world's largest recyclers. Even the Chicago Board of Trade is getting involved, planning to open this fall an electronic marketplace for trading recyclable goods.

BUSINESSES ABLE TO CHALLENGE GOVERNMENT —
WASHINGTON—The Senate agreed Monday to make it easier for small businesses to challenge government regulations as Republicans and Democrats sharpened battle lines for a contentious struggle over how far to go in curbing the powers of federal regulators. The Senate voted 60-36 to require federal agencies to analyze costs and benefits of regulations that have a "significant economic impact on a substantial number of small businesses." The bill calls for such analyses for regulations with an economic impact of $50 million or more a year. But advocates of the proposal, sponsored by Georgia Sens. Sam Nunn (D) and Paul Coverdell (R), said it was necessary to assure protection for businesses that could not reach that threshold. The Senate also approved a proposal aimed at assuring review of existing regulations that may be burdensome to small businesses.

Foulks ordered to undergo in-patient treatment

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In a hearing on Friday, a Jackson County Judge ordered Camillia Foulks to submit to in-patient treatment at the Alton Mental Health Center until she is found fit to stand trial for the fire deaths of eight children.

Foulks is charged with eight counts of involuntary manslaughter, one count of endangering the life or health of a child and one count of reckless conduct in connection with the fatal August blaze.

After Foulks was found unfit for trial January 25 and missed her February 24 and March 17 evaluation appointments, she was ordered May 5 to submit herself to the Clyde L. Choate Mental Health and Developmental Center for an evaluation.

On May 22 she was examined by psychologist Michael R. Jasmon who said the purpose of the examination was to assess Foulks' potential danger to others, escape risk, biographical information and historical information.

In court on Friday Jasmon recommended Foulks be placed at the Alton Mental Health Center, because it would be the least restrictive and most beneficial. Jasmon said he has been pleased with other patients who have gone to the Alton facility.

Jasmon said there is not a facility in Jackson County that would fit Foulks' needs, and the Alton Mental Health Center in Madison County has a specialized forensic program.

At the hearing, Jackson County States Attorney Mike Wepsiec and Public Defender Mike Rowland told Judge David W. Watt Jr. they agreed that the Alton facility was best suited for Foulks.

Wepsiec said the Alton Mental Health Center is specially designated to help people attain fitness for court proceedings, and Rowland said he has great respect for the facility and personnel at the Alton facility.

Watt said he believes Foulks needs treatment, but said her case is unusual because she has not been incarcerated. Foulks has been free on her own recognizance since she was charged August 22.

"We probably should have done this (treatment placement) earlier," Watt said.

Watt ordered Foulks' placement at Alton to begin Monday, July 10. Rowland said Foulks' minister Rev. B. R. Hollins would drive her to Alton then.

Watt said Illinois statutes state that until placement, the person arrested is supposed to wait in jail and be transported to the place of treatment by a sheriff.

Rowland asked that Foulks be held to her bond over the weekend instead of being jailed, because he thought she might see incarceration as punishment.

Watt said he had no problem with those arrangements as long as Foulks was at the Alton Mental Health Center on Monday.

An admissions worker at the Alton Mental Health Center could not verify Foulks' arrival at the center Monday due to the Confidentiality Act.

Clinton chips away at TV violence

Los Angeles Times

NASHVILLE, Tenn.— President Clinton, saying he is seeking practical measures to curb violence in entertainment, announced Monday that he supports requiring television sets to carry a device to block violent programs and urged Hollywood to undertake "voluntary initiatives" to improve programming.

Speaking to a conference on entertainment and family values, Clinton staked out a position in calibrated contrast to Republican presidential hopeful Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who denounced the industry in May for producing "nightmares of depravity."

The president said he, too, believes that "there's too much indiscriminate violence, too much indiscriminate sex and too much sort of callous degradation of women" on television.

Yet simply denouncing Hollywood is not productive, said Clinton, who, unlike Dole, has urged cooperation with, rather than condemnation of, the entertainment industry. "The question is ... What are we all going to do about that?" he said.

Clinton said he believes offensive content on television can be brought under control through voluntary restraints on the part of the industry plus technological advances like the "v-chip," the proposed device to allow parents to block adult-rated programming.

"We need a systematic debate there about what we don't do and what we do in our regular programming," the president said.

"If we're going to change American culture, we have to somehow change the media culture—and we have to do it without finger-pointing," he said.

Clinton has long criticized the entertainment industry for excessive violence and sexual content, especially in television programs watched by children. But he has carefully sidestepped confrontation and sought to address the issue through cooperation with the industry.

Local AIDS group stages annual funding benefit

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Money will be raised to assist people in Southern Illinois who are infected with the AIDS virus through a benefit program put together by SIUC students and alumni combined with a local organization.

The Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS (SIREA) and the Speech Communications Department will host the fourth annual SIREA performance benefit July 12 and 13 at 8 p.m. in the Kleinau Theater on the second floor of the SIUC Communications Building.

C. Turner Steckline, an SIUC professor in speech communication and chairwoman of the event, said the first show will feature various types of performances.

"SIUC alumni come back from Michigan, Georgia, Missouri, and New York for the benefit, and join students to perform short stories, poetry, performance art, dance, music and singing," Steckline said. The second performance, July 13 at 8 p.m. features alumnus Craig Gingrich-Philbrook in a one person play titled "GAP (Negotiated Safety Enigma, 1994)."

Steckline said to shorten the performance this year the benefit is being held on two consecutive nights.

"It is a lot to ask for an audience to sit two and a half hours (the total length of the performances)," Steckline said. "If this arrangement works we will try it again next year."

David Newfarmer, vice-president of SIREA, said the organization was started four years ago by four men affected with the disease to provide temporary emergency financial assistance to persons living with AIDS.

Fourth Annual SIREA Performance Benefit

When: July 12 and July 13, 8 p.m.
Where: Kleinau Theater, second floor, Communications Building.
Featuring: short stories, poetry, performance art, dance, music and singing.

The benefit is free; donations will be accepted

The program is registered with the Illinois Attorney General's office and the state secretary as a non-profit organization.

Newfarmer said the Darrell Kirk Emergency Fund Performance Benefit is "really wonderful" and provides clients of SIREA with the assistance they need.

"We want to come in and help our clients," Newfarmer said. "It could be a lengthy process to sign up for disability or social security and people may not be able to go back to work."

In addition to the benefit concert, Newfarmer said SIREA has other events to raise money.

"We are funded by cooperative and private donations, and fund-raisers," he said. "Also we have a FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) grant from Jackson County. We plan to apply for the same grant in other counties."

The organization has approximately 45 volunteers who work as buddies, case managers, drivers, clerical workers, grant writers, and the director's board, Newfarmer said.

The benefit is free, donations can be made at the door or mailed to SIREA, P.O. Box 1403, Carbondale, IL 62903-1403.

Women beat men in graduation rates

SIUC'S ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT HAS HAD some good news recently — it is graduating more of its student athletes than most other schools in the NCAA. In fact, according to the numbers, SIUC is graduating more athletes than the average of SIUC itself overall. But the numbers deserve closer examination, because there is a reason the graduation rates are so high. That reason is the women athletes of SIUC.

The recently released graduation percentages place SIUC's athletic department at the top of the class when it comes to getting its athletes to finish what they've started, with 69 percent of the Saluki athletes graduating. The national average is 58 percent. SIUC's overall average is 44 percent. The male athlete graduation rate sits at a modest 55 percent. This is still higher than SIUC's average, and it is even two percent higher than the national male average.

But in almost every category (with the exception of football, for which there is no women's team) the women far outdistance the men. The women athletes' overall graduation rate sits at 84 percent, nearly a 30-percent lead on the men. And it gets better. If you look at individual sports, there is even more for which the women Salukis should be proud. Women's basketball is an even 30 percent higher than the men's, with an 80 percent graduation rate to the men's 50 percent. Special praise should go to the women's cross-country and track team. Their graduation rate rests at 88 percent. The men's team? Well, it is hovering at 33 percent.

THE DISPARITY BETWEEN THE TWO MAY BE there for many reasons. One may be the fact that male athletes have more to look forward to professionally in sports after college. (You know, the NBA or NFL drafts and such) Women don't. But this reason would be easier to accept if SIUC athletes were in as high demand as other schools' athletes. There is the occasional Chris Carr, but this reason doesn't hold the water boy's jock. It could be the women are held to higher academic standards than the men, but so far, the graduation rates are the only proof of that. Maybe the men are so competitive on the field or court they don't have time to be competitive in the classroom. Or maybe, as one athletic department administrator said, "The women are just smarter than the men."

Whatever the reasons may be for the disparity, it should be noted that when the athletic department is judged, it will be judged as a whole unit. The male athletes deserve some congrats too, because they are above the overall SIUC and NCAA average graduation rates. Not by much, but they are. But credit should be given where credit is due. Past trends show the women have always led the men in graduation rates, but never more so than this year. Yes, there are more male athletes here at SIUC than there are women athletes. (a little more than 100) But the 30 percent difference this year is enough of one to make up for any proportional differences in the size of the programs.

Congratulations women. And the men? Nice job to you too. By the way, how does it feel to be beaten by a bunch of women?

Commentary

Congress targets abortions

The Los Angeles Times

Following the Supreme Court's decision last year clearly upholding the legal right of women to obtain an abortion, the strategy this time around in Congress is different. Anti-abortion activists are pursuing an incrementalist approach, steadily curbing access to the procedure here, defunding it there. But their objective is the same as always: Make the procedure difficult to obtain, prohibitively expensive for poor women and physically risky for physicians and women alike.

Much damage has already been done. Three weeks ago the House amended its huge defense reauthorization bill to deny abortion services at U.S. military hospitals to women stationed overseas— even when paid for with their own money. This measure would reverse President Clinton's 1993 executive order permitting female service personnel and military spouses to obtain these services at their own expense. Such access is crucial; before Clinton acted, women facing unintended pregnancies often were forced to seek abortions privately at great cost and great risk in countries where the procedure is illegal. The Senate Armed Services Committee last week defeated a similar amendment, but it will be brought up again on the Senate floor.

A bill barring federal health care plans from covering abortions for federal employees passed a key House subcommittee last month. Some members of Congress also hope to reimpose a gag rule on federally funded family planning clinics, barring personnel there from counseling women with unintended pregnancies on their full range of options, including abortion. Abortion opponents are even threatening the GOP's own welfare reform proposals through their fear that eliminating cash grants to teen-age mothers could have the effect of encouraging them to seek abortions.

Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., joined by seven colleagues in the Senate and others in the House, wants to halt this continuing erosion of a legal right of women. She has introduced a bill that would safeguard the right to an abortion by codifying existing court rulings and executive orders.

Her bill faces long odds but makes sense: Unwanted pregnancies, unfortunately, remain a fact of life.

The sooner Americans stop fighting the endlessly divisive abortion battle, the sooner we can use the energy saved by that truce to take on the social problems everyone agrees need fixing.

Probe discovers Waco mistakes

The Washington Post

In anxious anticipation of congressional hearings on the Waco disaster, Secretary of the Treasury Robert Rubin warns of possible misunderstandings of the record in this case.

Rubin says that the department and its Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms welcome the opportunity "once again" to answer questions about Waco but nonetheless worry that some may use these hearings to erode public support for firearms legislation and undermine public confidence in law-enforcement organizations.

The secretary is right to recall that the events in Waco already have been investigated. The media covered the story, the Justice Department conducted an internal investigation and issued a report and the Treasury went further by including outsiders in its investigative process.

The Treasury report led to the retirement of the ATF director and the disciplining of agents who led the raid. Secretary Rubin fairly points out that there have been "extensive changes ... improved training" and "new policies" at the ATF.

These past probes in fact revealed terrible mistakes of judgment by law-enforcement personnel, failures of communication and a craven attempt by ATF raid leaders to put the blame for their own failure on an innocent agent. But none of the mistakes of the past should be used as an excuse to challenge the worth of laws that regulate the use and possession of firearms or the basic integrity of the nation's law-enforcement agencies.

It was not wrong for the local sheriff or the ATF to investigate information that David Koresh was stockpiling weapons at his compound in the first place. It was the manner of proceeding that was so devastating.

One result has been to feed and seem to confirm the animosities and fears of various militia groups and others who believe in a huge, malign federal conspiracy on the part of law-enforcement agents.

There is probably only a limited amount that can be done to assuage such fears, since these tend to be durable, in large measure irrational and beyond the reach of either reason or proof.

Police Blotter

Carbondale Police

Carbondale police said a burglary occurred at 402 S. Graham apt. 3 between 9 p.m. and 10:05 p.m. June 9. Police said Neflusa L. Hawkins, 20, and Natasha D. Fulwyle reported that a Sony CD player, receiver and speakers were stolen from their residence after someone removed a screen and entered through an unlocked window. The estimated loss is $1040.

Rickard L. Neil, 22, of 300 S. Dixon, was arrested on the 200 block of East Oak Street at 6:28 p.m. July 8 on a Jackson County warrant for failure to appear. Neil was taken to Jackson County Jail, where he posted bond and was released.

Police said Eddie L. Williams, 62, of Colp, was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol at the intersection of Walnut Street and Birch Lane at 2:22 a.m. July 3. Police said Williams was seen drifting through lanes of traffic and failed to pass a breathalyzer. Williams posted his drivers license and was released on recognizance.

University Police

Police said Carl E. Leslie, 39, of Carbondale, was arrested for driving under the influence on the 800 block of South Illinois Avenue at 1:50 a.m. July 8. Leslie was released on recognizance.

Police said Hector G. Sanchez, 18, of Carbondale, was arrested for possession of a fraudulent drivers license at 11:34 a.m. July 8. Sanchez failed to post bond and was taken to Jackson County Jail. Sanchez was still in custody Monday.

Paul L. Dean 23, of Olmstead, was arrested at 2:53 a.m. July 9 on a Union County warrant for domestic battery. Dean was released on bond.

Police said Fama M. Abbed, 22, of Carbondale, was arrested for driving with a suspended license and driving under the influence of alcohol on July 10. Abbed was taken to Jackson County Jail, posted bond and was released.

Iron

participants aligned their molds in two lines of about 10 each and began melting iron around 9:00 a.m. The iron used came from the tops of old radiators. The same process was conducted on Saturday.

Approximately 120 sculptures, mostly abstract, were poured over the two day period.

The mechanism used to melt the iron was a tall, thin furnace-like structure called the cupula.

After the metal is melted in the cupula, it drains out of a spout. Groups of two hold a cauldron with two long handles on each side under the spout until it is full. They then pour the melted iron into the molds.

After filling the molds, the cast iron would set for at least two hours before breaking the molds open in late afternoon.

The work is divided up among groups. While one group is resting and cooling off from the heat, a group of two would fill the cupula, while another group filled the molds.

Ben Meeker, a visiting artist from Seattle and a 1992 graduate of SIUC, said the cupula and the process the group used is an ancient and basic process.

"That is what makes it so fun," he said. "It is broken down to the basics and you can actually see how it is all put together from the first step."

Cynthia Handle, a visiting artist from California, said it is the people working together that makes the event worthwhile.

"It is all about teamwork," she said. "There is a big feeling of camaraderie because it is a unique and close group of people who actually do this. It is the excitement that keeps me enthused."

Handle not only teaches iron pouring at San Jose State, she has also written a book called "The Women in Cast Iron Directory." She also will be lecturing on teamwork in iron-pouring at the International Women's Conference in Beijing, China this year.

Handle said she has been casting metals for about eight years, and has been casting iron for about five. Handle, who made her third trip to the iron-pour this year, said she came all of this way because she heard of the reputation of Walsh and of SIUC.

"I made the mold almost a year ago," she said. "This was the perfect opportunity to cast the mold."

Most of the visitors are former SIUC students or faculty or people who have just heard of SIUC and its iron pouring.

"It's like a homecoming of some sort," Walsh said. "It is a gathering of the clans of iron pourers."

Thad Duhigg, a 1986 SIUC graduate, has come back for the pour three times since he graduated. He said SIUC has a great program.

"The program is regarded highly around the country," Duhigg, an instructor at Texas Christian University, said. "The advantage of being a former student is that I can bring my students back here to participate."

Duhigg said although it may have seemed chaotic at times, the pour actually ran fairly smoothly.

"There is a method behind the madness," he said. "It is like a performance piece."

Walsh said he believes some people may not recognize iron-casting as an art because they do not see the process behind it.

"It is very laborious and takes time," he said. "But in the end the final product makes it all worth it."

Questions raised by drug testing policy

By Cynthia Sheets
DE Sports Editor

Drug testing used to be in the discretionary hands of high schools across America, with most opting for signed contracts stating that athletes would not use alcohol, tobacco or illegal drugs.

On June 26, the U.S. Supreme Court reacted to a 7th-grader's refusal to take a drug test, upholding the 4th Amendment of unreasonable search and seizure.

Now, local reaction to the ruling is mixed, as some athletic administrators in the area feel the testing is an expense that might not be worth the effort.

SIUC's Charlotte West, Associate Athletic Director, said she can not speak against the deterrent to test for drugs at the high school level.

"I do have an extremely serious concern about the finances involved in this action," West said. "It is a very expensive process, and it would take away dollars that could be used for other areas of the sports budget."

"If there were quite a few indicators that the student was using drugs, I wouldn't be opposed to the testing, but without cause, a random testing wouldn't be beneficial."

Jim Woodward, Murphysboro's Athletic Director, said he probably would not implement the program because of the extreme cost.

"Personally, I think society has a problem overall with the Fourth Amendment," Woodward said. "On the other hand, extra curricular activity is what athletics are, and I don't really see any problems with the new drug testing guidelines."

However, Bryan Kohring, a third year assistant coach for the Murphysboro Junior High wrestling squad, said the testing is beginning at too early an age.

"I think the kids that do drugs are probably not going to be the same kids trying out for the team," Kohring said. "At least, not at this level."

"We do make our athletes sign a contract saying they will abstain from using drugs, and if they do, they will be punished."

Nathan Bateman, an eighth grade wrestler for the Murphysboro squad, said he feels the new rules will be a good addition to athletics.

"I think it is good that they have this rule," Bateman said. "It will keep people off steroids."

SIUC ultimate Frisbee takes off around campus

RSO offers members variety of experiences

By Eric Helbig
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In addition to the official University sports teams, SIUC's ultimate Frisbee team, a registered student organization, offers both travel and physical fitness to its members.

Organized ultimate Frisbee has been at SIUC since the mid-1970s, according to Jan Bedell, a 1989 graduate and ultimate Frisbee player since 1985.

However, most of the current players have been playing for a year or less, a team member said.

"We welcome any level of experience," Jen Bedell, a graduate student in biochemistry, said.

"If they don't know how to throw a Frisbee, we'll teach them."

Women and men play the sport together, but low participation by females has kept SIUC from having a separate women's team.

"We would like to start a women's team in the fall," Bedell said.

"Right now we only have three or four women that come regularly."

Tara Doran said she started playing on the team when a friend gave her an extra incentive.

"A good friend said to me, 'If you come out to practice I'll buy you a beer.' So I did," Doran said.

Other players participate for different reasons, ranging from the competitiveness of the game to the physical fitness that it provides.

The sport is played with seven players on a side.

Players advance the frisbee by throwing it down the field.

Physical contact is not allowed in the sport, and fouls are called when contact occurs, allowing the team that was fouled to maintain control of the disk.

A score of one point occurs when a team advances the disk across a goal line.

Unlike other sports, ultimate Frisbee does not use referees, so players are trusted to call their own fouls.

"We focus on what we call the spirit of the game," Bedell said.

"The people that play are really responsible." Bedell, a three-year ultimate Frisbee player, said most tournaments are set up for four games in one day.

In that case, games usually last an hour and a half and are finished when one team reaches 15 points.

The team travels to several tournaments during the year, with expenses covered by the money the team receives for being an RSO and by fundraisers members have during the year.

In the summer, the team participates in club tournaments, which means teams can be made up of people who are not college students.

There also is a collegiate level that runs during the spring.

Rolling Salukis have history of national recognition, rankings

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Being the only intercollegiate tennis team in the nation is not what makes the Rolling Salukis a special team.

The four player team travels throughout the nation to battle against other wheelchair tennis players. All four players that make up the Rolling Salukis are ranked nationally in disabled tennis competition.

Rich Swanson, a graduate student in recreation from River Forest, said he never actually liked tennis until last year, when present teammate Kim Martin asked him and a few others to try it out.

"We just tried it and liked it," Swanson said.

"We didn't want to try but it's nice that we did."

As a doubles team, Swanson and teammate Earl Jordan are ranked 14th nationally in the men's C division.

"We won the doubles title in Dayton last year," Swanson said.

"It's not too bad for it being our first year of competition."

By having Saluki women's tennis coach Judy Auld present at some of the practices, the players are developing solid fundamental skills, Martin said.

"Judy Auld has been a big reason we've been so good," Martin, who ranks 6th nationally in the women's A division, said.

"It's good to have a coach present and get feedback."

The team encouraged Auld to attend a wheelchair tennis camp in Boulder, Co. last summer to help her understand the needs of wheelchair competitors, Martin said.

"I'm returning to the camp this summer where I'll learn from some of the best wheelchair instructors in the nation," Auld said.

Saluki players work on forehand, backhands and positioning, as well as play practice sets against each other, Auld said.

"They work on mobility in the chair for positioning," she added.

"It's a lot like footwork in able bodied tennis."

The tennis experience is not always just hard nosed competition but a way to stay in shape between softball and basketball, Jordan said.

Jordan, a senior in recreation from Chicago, said he is developing some skills that earn him a 15th ranking in men's singles C division.

Disabled tennis divisions are A, B, C, D and open in descending order.

Open is available to all competitors, D is the beginning level, C the next step up, B is the advanced level, and A is expert status, Jordan said.

"I'm growing as a player- getting better at every practice and every game," Jordan said. "Depending on how I do this year, I might move up to the B division next year."

"Even though I'm just starting out, I've got speed and mobility that compensates for my lack of skill."
