City to discuss towing charge limits

TOW ZONE: City staff report recommends that owners be charged no more than $40 when towed.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE POLITICALS EDITOR

Fees for tows not requested by vehicle owners should be limited to $40 by the Carbondale City Council, a report drafted by Carbondale city officials states.

City Attorney Paige Smith said city staff concluded that towing services should be provided at reasonable costs.

"The report recommends set fees for all nonconsensual tows," she said. "We are trying to determine a fair price for our city."

The report, which examines prices, terms and conditions for towing in other cities, will be discussed and reviewed at tonight's Carbondale City Council meeting.

Smith said, however, that no action would automatically be taken if the council approves the report.

"The report is exactly that," she said. "The council will review the report and hear discussion, then they will decide if they want the city manager to create an ordinance."

The report states that both Rockford and Naperville towing companies charge $65 for nonconsensual tows. Charges in Normal are $50, and charges in Charleston are $45 with an extra $10 fee after hours.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said she does not know if Carbondale's towing companies are more expensive than other cities. She said, however, that she does not think companies should gouge their customers.

"I'm not going into this with a preconceived notion," she said. "I want to see what discussions occur."

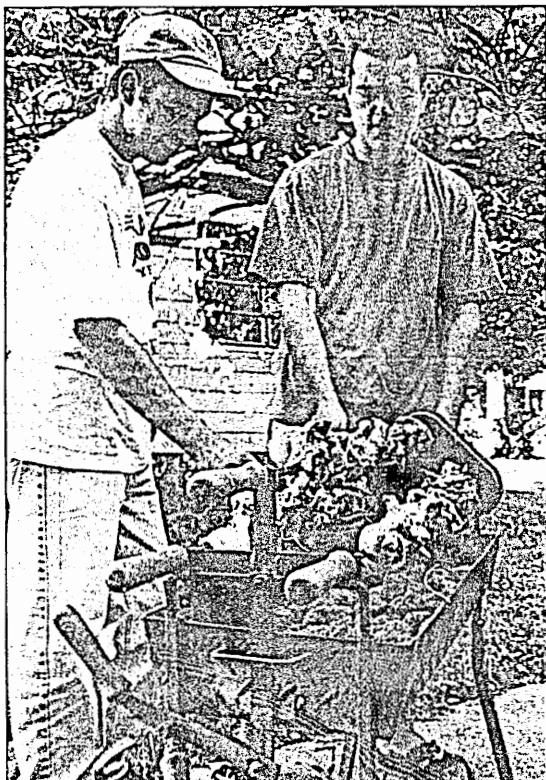

"It is a concern, and we need to come to an agreement on how we are going to manage it."

The report also recommends that the council vote to limit the charge for an interrupted tow, one in which the vehicle owner stops a tow that is in progress, to

Students savor traditional barbecue

COOKOUT: Student lugged equipment from Cyprus just to get a taste of home.

VASSILIS NEMITSAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When some students travel to foreign countries to study, they only bring necessities with them.

However, for some students from Cyprus, having equipment for cooking traditional food is equally necessary.

Nicos Pastos, a senior in electrical engineering from Tseri, Cyprus, brought to SIUC a suitcase filled with all the equipment needed to prepare a traditional Cypriot barbecue. He had an informal Cypriot barbecue at his home during the July 4 weekend.

"For me, food is very important, especially Cyprus food," Pastos said. "My family is barbecuing nearly every Sunday. Reasons such as distance and extra weight in my suitcase didn't stop me from bringing all this equipment."

Pastos brought skewers and a special grill made for barbecuing shish kebab and souvla. Souvla is barbecuing meat, usually pieces of lamb, pork, beef or chicken, on skewers. The skewers are powered by a

Supreme Court ruling will not affect IT policy

ETHICS: University has its own standards for what can be put on its Internet server.

KIRK MOTTRAM
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Supreme Court's ruling two weeks ago that struck down some lines of the Communications Decency Act will not affect SIUC Internet policy, the director of SIUC Information Technology says.

The Communications Decency Act (C.D.A.), signed by President Bill Clinton in February 1996, in part prohibited the publication of "patently offensive" material "in any manner that is available to a person under 18 years of age." It never has been enforced.

The Supreme Court found lines in the C.D.A. to be unconstitutional on the grounds that "the C.D.A. suppresses a large amount of speech that adults have a constitutional right to receive and to address to one another."

Justice John Paul Stevens wrote in the majority opinion that "the breadth of the C.D.A. is wholly unprecedented."

Michael Schwartz, director of SIUC Information Technology, said the Court's 7-2 decision to eliminate those lines will not affect the current "Electronic Information Systems Statement of Ethics" written by the SIUC Board of Trustees.

The policy states, in part, that inappropriate use of electronic information systems is the "use of computer and/or network facilities in ways that impede the computing activities of others."

He also said the Student Conduct Code, which is consulted in cases of questionable

Internet publications, will not change with the new ruling.

The decision could prompt some changes at SIUC in the future, Schwartz said. But, ultimately, it would be up to the Board of Trustees.

Schwartz and Tony Kerber, data processing analyst in Information Technology, said the University's policies on Internet publications are fairly lax.

Schwartz said, however, there always will be a debate on what can be published on SIUC information systems. The problem, he said, is partially one of definitions.

"They (courts, states and universities) can't even define what pornography is, so it's difficult to get one reasonable policy," Schwartz said.

The University does not give out many individual home-page licenses, but allows faculty, departments and organizations to establish sites on the Internet, using the school's server.

Schwartz said that because the web pages are sponsored by the University and contain the SIUC logo, material published on them must adhere to decency standards.

Schwartz and Kerber said they do not know what would happen if there were problematic Internet publications because federal law might conflict with University policy.

battery motor that slowly rotates the meat as it cooks.

Pastos' friends were amazed by what he brought with him just to get a taste of home, but they quickly changed their minds once the smells of food filled the air.

"Everybody thought I was crazy to bring all that stuff here," he said. "Once I began cooking, none of my friends could resist."

Pastos and his friend Toni Klashi, a senior in hotel restaurant travel administration from Xilophagou, Cyprus, invited some friends from their home country for dinner on Sunday.

Both Pastos and Klashi prepared another traditional Cyprus dish, sheftalies, which is made of mixed ground pork and beef, blended with cut onions, parsley and cinnamon.

For many Cypriots, sheftalies is a hard dish to prepare, but Klashi learned the art by following the tradition established at his home.

"It's not an easy job to do this," Klashi said. "My grandmother taught my mom to do this, and I learned that from my mom."

In, Cyprus there are few people who say 'no' to a good dish of sheftalies."

With a Greek compact disc playing in the background and with smoke from souvla filling the atmosphere, Klashi stands by, watching the souvla as it rotates.

He spoils small pieces that are already cooked and quickly picks them off with his fingers, trying to avoid getting burned by the heat of the souvla.

"This is how I enjoy eating my souvla, right on the spot," Klashi said. "This is why I always volunteer to do this job."

After nearly an hour, dinner is ready and all the guests are looking forward to eating.

Polys Polycarpou, a senior in business management from Nicosia, Cyprus, said food is one of the things he misses the most when he is away from home.

"I love souvla and sheftalies," Polycarpou said.

"Unfortunately, you can't find this kind of food in Carbondale. I got sick of eating burgers and pizza."

Pastos said the good taste is not even the most important part of eating souvla, his favorite dish. Pastos said eating souvla and barbeque also keeps the traditional Cypriot family together.

"For us this one of the most important things in our culture," Pastos said, "spending the whole weekend together as a family."

Group promotes hemp usage

FUND RAISING: Hats, cookies sold to increase public awareness of hemp.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Now that Help End Marijuana Prohibition is an SIUC Registered Student Organization, group members will be ordering hemp cookies to raise funds and awareness of the different products that can be made from hemp. Since Undergraduate Student Government made H.E.M.P. an RSO in April, the group's president wants SIUC and Carbondale to know the group is actively working on promoting the benefits of hemp, and not just actively working on getting high.

SIUC H.E.M.P.

• H.E.M.P. meets at 2 p.m. Thursdays in Activity Room D, 3rd floor of the Student Center.

I get a lot of people who want to join, and when they find out we don't have any weed, they quit," said Reid Baum, a senior in political science from Los Angeles. "We're not really into getting high."

Baum said many people are not aware of the historical and practical use of hemp for items such as flour, oils, paper and clothes.

While awaiting approval of funding from USG, the group plans to sell cookies to raise money for the group, which organized in late 1996.

The cookies, made of hemp flour by a company in Colorado, have textures similar to those of overcooked oatmeal cookies. Baum said eating the cookies does not get a person stoned.

H.E.M.P. recently provided samples of chocolate-chip hemp cookies to be sold by area businesses, including Threads, 112 N. Illinois Ave., which sells products made from hemp.

Baum said the group also can order products such as hemp salve, a calming balm used for burns, and "Sativa," a pungent, musky fragrance that smells like CK One sprayed in a forest. The unisex fragrance is named after marijuana's botanical name, cannabis sativa.

DOUG LARSON/DAILY EGYPTIAN

BROWSING: Reid Baum, a senior in political science from Los Angeles and president of H.E.M.P. club, uses a catalog to show a few uses for the hemp plant.

Baum said the number of H.E.M.P. members changes constantly because of people who only join the club in search of a buzz. Baum said the group has a steady core of about 20 members, and recreational marijuana smokers are welcome to join.

But he wants those potential members to know that the group has other plans for marijuana, including hemp, an offspring of the male marijuana seed.

"Just because we're not into smoking pot doesn't mean we're not 100 percent for the recreational usage of marijuana," he said.

"We are concerned with all aspects of marijuana, and we're looking to contribute to the debate surrounding marijuana policies. We're not just a club for stoners."

"People don't realize that the first two drafts of the Constitution were made out of hemp paper. Because marijuana is illegal, hemp has a misunderstood reputation, but once people open their minds, you'll be able to buy hemp shirts at Wal-Mart soon."

H.E.M.P. Vice President Patrick Garner, a junior in English from Urbana, said the group will become a visible force in the community.

The group is participating in Carbondale Clean and Green's Adopt-A-Spot program, in which participating groups pledge to keep areas of Carbondale litter-free.

Members plan on attending Carbondale City Council meetings to get to know councilmembers.

"Right now we're trying to meet people so that we can build a foundation," Garner said. "We want to accomplish our goals."

But Baum said his pet project is to order and sell hats made of hemp with SIUC logos.

"I've already gotten approval from University Relations for the idea," he said. "They said it would not be a problem for me to order the plain hats. I just need approval on the design of the SIU logo."

Until SIUC hemp hats arrive in Carbondale, Garner said many may still believe that his new RSO has nothing in mind but scoring a packed bag of weed.

But nonetheless, he issued a challenge to disbelievers.

"Come to our meetings," he said. "Then everyone will know what we're all about."

Apparent heart attack claims student

GRADUATE: Top American philosophy program brought Korean student to SIUC.

HEATHER YATES
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An SIUC graduate student who attended SIUC for two years died July 1 from an apparent heart attack while visiting his family in Denver.

Sung Kuk Ahn, 40, of Seoul, South Korea, earned a bachelor's degree in philosophy at Baylor University in Waco, Texas, in December 1995 before deciding to attend SIUC to pursue a graduate degree.

Philip Deen, friend and former roommate of Ahn's, said Ahn came to SIUC because the school has a top program in American philosophy.

He said Ahn loved classical American philosophy and was deeply interested in John Dewey's works.

Dewey, an American philosopher, was one of the founders of the American Civil Liberties Union and the NAACP. SIUC houses the Center for Dewey Studies, which analyzes and edits Dewey's collected works.

At the time of his death, Ahn was translating Dewey's book "The Quest for Certainty" into Korean. Deen said that would have been Dewey's first book to be translated into Korean.

"He was a good student," Deen said. "He was constantly questioning professors. I thought that was an admirable trait. Most American students don't question instructors."

Vernis Shownes, a Philosophy Department secretary, knew Ahn well and said he was extremely outgoing.

"He was determined to be part of us, and he was," Shownes said. "He loved to cook. Just last week, he baked me a cake."

Shownes said Ahn was well-liked by all, department faculty and students.

Investigation nets teens in local burglary spree

Carbondale Police have arrested four teenagers in connection with several East Main Street burglaries last week.

Kenneth L. Joiner, 19, of Carbondale; Daniel Y. Khoshaba, 18, of DeSoto; and Jeremy S. Lyles, 19, of Carbondale, were charged with burglary. Bertha C. Moore, 17, of Carterville, was charged with theft.

At 4:25 a.m. Wednesday, police responded to an alarm in the 1300 block of East Main Street. A K-9 officer and her dog located two of the suspects hiding in the bushes. The other two suspects were identified and apprehended during the investigation.

Police closed 16 business burglaries that occurred in Carbondale on July 1 and July 2, and they anticipate closing at least eight more burglaries as a result of these arrests.

Joiner, Khoshaba and Lyles were taken to Jackson County Jail, where they remained as of press time. Their preliminary hearing is July 16. Moore was released on a notice to appear in Jackson County Court.

CARBONDALE

Vehicle burglary cases solved with arrest of two

Two people have been arrested in connection with five vehicle burglaries in Carterville and Carbondale, including the burglary of the car of a Carbondale AIDS patient.

Lawanda C. Burton, 20, and Ralph Richard Cook, 42, both of Tennessee, were taken to Williamson County Jail on June 30, charged with auto burglary in Williamson County and auto burglary and forgery in Jackson County.

Burton and Cook were apprehended by John A. Logan College campus security officers after being recognized from descriptions in a Carbondale Police news release.

Carbondale Police Department, Jeff Vaughn, community resource officer, said, "Based on the investigation, officers were able to make a positive ID of the suspects."

As a result, police have cleared four car burglaries from the John A. Logan campus and the burglary of AIDS patient Steven St. Julian's car, parked at the Carbondale Public Library, 405 W. Main St.

The two allegedly stole several items from St. Julian's car last month, including a cashier's check, $650 in cash and $1,400 in prescription medication.

The plastic bag containing St. Julian's prescription pills was not recovered.

"It is my understanding that the medication was thrown away," Vaughn said.

In addition, numerous forgeries of checks and credit cards in Carbondale and the surrounding area have been cleared as a result of the investigation.

Children should surf the Internet

Jon Katz
 Washington
 Post

 Column

Guest column appears every Tuesday. To submit a guest column, drop it off at the Daily Egyptian, Communications Building, Room 1247. All columns must be typewritten and double spaced and are subject to editing. Columns are limited to 750 words.

I've been following with interest President Clinton's enthusiasm for technological solutions to help parents protect their children from inappropriate material on the Web.

His suggestions make political sense and probably come from the gut. They certainly go to the heart of my concerns as a parent and writer on technology issues.

But I see hidden costs in the quick rush to restrict kids' online wanderings. There are better, more old-fashioned ways of tackling the problem.

In the wake of the Supreme Court ruling deflating the Communications Decency Act, Clinton plans to convene a meeting later this month of industry leaders, teachers, parents and librarians to find, he said, "a solution for the Internet that is as powerful for the computer as the V-chip will be for the television, and that protects children in ways that are consistent with America's free speech values."

But in his urge to protect, and in his endorsement of everything from V-chips to blocking software and ratings systems, Clinton is subjecting children to a renewed wave of censorship and control. It may be reassuring to many parents, but it's clear to me that censorship and bans should be the last resort in dealing with children, not the first.

Children need to be given the chance to develop values and a sense of social responsibility. Learning to make their way on the Internet and helping them confront whatever dangers lurk there is no different from countless challenges they will have to face as they grow up.

We have never thought of acquiring blocking software for our 14-year-old daughter, who has been online since she was 10. She's played Nintendo, watched cable, loved the "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles." Now, she watches "ER," "Homicide: Life on the Street" and "The X-Files," plus old musicals on cable and the occasional dumb sitcom after a tough week.

Not that she has free rein. She's been taught not to pass around her name, address or phone number — and to pass problems or unsettling experiences on to us.

Occasionally, she has encountered creeps and a few disturbed people online — boys who want to talk dirty, men who want to send her explicitly sexual files — and she's learned important phrases like "No" and "Get lost."

Although she is not the embodiment of some utopian vision — like many other teenagers she can be difficult, rebellious, moody — she works to the best of her ability in school, is socially responsible and carries her weight at home.

As long as she continues to do so, we will trust her implicitly. She — and we — live very much according to a Social Contract.

It's an old idea we've found especially useful in the digital age.

Three centuries ago, the English philosopher and essayist John Locke promoted the notion of the Social Contract, an agreement based on the concept of mutual responsibility.

Locke challenged the belief, widespread then and too often now, that the power of parents over children is "absolute." In his writings on government and in the essay "Some Thoughts Concerning Education," Locke argued for the moral education of children rather than the arbitrary imposition of rules. Children, he argued, like adults, were entitled to some measure of freedom because that was appropriate to their status as rational human beings. Parents' authority should not be severe or arbitrary, he wrote, but used only for the help, instruction and preservation of their offspring. Eventually, it is to be relinquished.

Rather than relying on sophisticated blocking techniques, we adults and parents would do well to embrace Locke's Social Contract, recognize our kids as individuals, and support the notion of the Responsible Child.

Children need to master the machinery and content of the high-tech culture evolving around them. It's their universal language. It's their means of attaining modern literacy, which in the next millennium will surely be defined as the ability to access information, rather than to regurgitate the names of the presidents. It may mean the difference between economic well-being and economic hardship.

Because of this, it is critically important for parents to recognize that children possess some basic rights in the digital age. Their choices ought not to be left completely to the often arbitrary and sometimes ignorant whims and fancies of individual educators, religious leaders or parents, any more than adults ought to be subject to the total control of children.

Children need to be given the chance to develop values and a sense of social responsibility.

Towing troubles

Capping nonconsensual towing fee would improve Carbondale's image

CARBONDALE DRIVERS, PLAGUED BY THE tow trucks that hover in city parking lots like carrion birds, could be done a real favor by the Carbondale City Council tonight.

City staff, at the request of the council, has prepared a report, to be discussed at tonight's council meeting, which shows the towing fees in other Illinois towns. Attached to that report is a recommendation that the council approve an ordinance capping the fee for a non-consensual tow to $40 in the city. Some Carbondale towing companies commonly charge $65 for non-consensual tows.

THE COUNCIL SHOULD, INDEED, ASK CITY Manager Jeff Doherty to draw up an ordinance reflecting the recommendation. Such an ordinance, the report states, is possible because of a 1995 law giving states and cities the power to regulate nonconsensual towing.

If the ordinance is adopted, Carbondale's image as a friendly city would be enhanced, and student and non-student drivers alike would thank the city for finally being responsive to their years of complaints.

IT'S BAD ENOUGH THAT TOWING COMPANIES do not need to receive complaints about cars before they tow them. They sometimes tow cars minutes after their owners, who may just need to make a brief stop, leave them.

"Hey, that's my car!" Those who have found themselves on the wrong side of the counter at a towing company office have violated the parking lot owners' requests. So they seethe at their own stupidity for parking illegally, the inconvenience of traveling to get their cars and finally, the chunk of change it costs to get them back.

TO BE FAIR, THE REPORT DOES SHOW THAT Carbondale's seemingly exorbitant towing fees are the norm statewide. In Rockford and Naperville, non-consensual tows cost $65. In Normal, they cost $50, and in Charleston, they cost $45 or $55, depending on the time of day.

So Carbondale's recommendations would place the city below the going rate in many Illinois towns of similar size. The proposal is all the more generous because fees for nighttime tows, or fees for using dollies, winches or jacks to remove vehicles, common in many Illinois towns, would be banned in the city's non-consensual tows.

City Council members who requested the report are keeping their campaign promises to examine city towing procedures.

TO FOLLOW THROUGH COMPLETELY, THEY should request a vote on the proposed towing ordinance and then support it, taking advantage of the law that allows the city to regulate towing.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

"I want to show people we are a friendly university and make people feel comfortable with SIUC."

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs, on his visits to Southern Illinois communities, during which he talks to people about SIUC.

"From 1977 to about 1987, I was a farm worker in Jackson County. But, I always had the idea of going back to school. When you are treated and made to feel less than a human being, you think, 'This is not what I want to do with my life.'"

Pedro Pomes, an SIUC student and former migrant worker, on why he quit farming to get an education.

limit the charge for an interrupted tow, one in which the vehicle owner stops a tow that is in progress, to $15. Smith said that interrupted tows, many Carbondale companies charge half the price of completed tows. "This is the first time we have addressed this situation," Smith said. "We always receive complaints about people coming out of their house and seeing their car taken away while they're standing there." Smith said most local towing companies have not been contacted about the contents of the report. However, she expects towing company owners to respond to the report at tonight's City Council meeting.

Towing on state Route 51, plans to attend the meeting. "It's (Carbondale towing charges) not bad as long as we are with the average of everyone else in the state," Davis said. He said, however, that the report's recommendations may be below average. "I can tell you now that ($40) is low," Davis said. "Some University of Illinois companies charge $50." Davis said he charges a flat rate of $65. Larry Georgeff, owner of Larry's Towing Service, 820 N. Washington St., said he may attend the meeting. "I want to see where they're coming from and what the report is based on," he said. He said he charges between $40 and $50, depending on the time of day. In other business, the council also will review a report that concludes it is impossible for the city to take over the Carbondale Park District, an idea brought up at a council meeting in May. The council, and councilmembers acting as the Liquor Control Commission, also will consider the request by Carbondale Main Street for a temporary liquor license. The license would be used for the proposed Sept. 26-27 festival being planned by Main Street to promote economic activity along South Illinois Avenue. The festival would take place in the parking lot behind 710 Bookstore. The Council also will reconsider an ordinance forbidding scavengers from removing garbage from curbsides in residential areas. The ordinance was approved by the council in May. Councilman John Budsluck, in a June meeting, asked that it be reconsidered.

"If someone was putting out some pornography, we'd probably shut it down," Schwartz said. "But, that might put us in a difficult spot because we might not have any legal ground to stand on." Bill Schroeder, SIU School of Law professor, said a further difficulty is the unclear language of state obscenity standards. "Patently offensive" material is such a vague term," Schroeder said. "I'm dubious about prosecuting people for obscenities. "Society isn't going to fall apart if a minor sees that stuff (offensive material)."

Schwartz said yet another problem in deciding University Internet policy is the number of "We're trying to walk a tightrope here." MICHAEL SCHWARTZ DIRECTOR, SIUC INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY competing interests involved. "On one side, you have to preserve academic freedom and on the other side of the coin you have taxpayers, alumni and contributors who want their dollars used responsibly," Schwartz said. "We're trying to walk a tightrope here." Schwartz said there have not been many problems with Internet use on campus, so regulation of electronic information at SIUC is minimal. "If there's a problem, we just bring the person in and say, 'Don't do that,'" Schwartz said. "But people have always been responsible about what they publish." Kerber said he hopes people linked to the SIUC server continue to act responsibly. "It's free expression up to an extreme limit," Kerber said. "If someone wants to put out a pornographic site, they can do it, just don't force it on me."

Hairston bats 2-for-4 in single-A debut

BOY OF SUMMER: Former Saluki assigned to Orioles farm team in Bluefield, West Virginia.

TRAVIS AKIN
DE SPORTS EDITOR

The contract disagreements former Saluki infielder Jerry Hairston had with the Baltimore Orioles are over. After almost one month of contract negotiations, Hairston has signed with the organization.

Hairston, who signed a three-year contract June 27, said it was the right time for him to begin playing professionally.

"I just turned 21; I am young," he said. "I definitely knew I had to go out and play."

Hairston led the Salukis last season with a batting average of .380. He also hit 12 home runs.

Hairston was playing with the Wareham Gatemen, a team in the Cape Cod League in Massachusetts, before he signed.

Hairston left the Gatemen and reported to the Bluefield Orioles in West Virginia on June 28. The Bluefield organization is a lower single-A team designed for newly drafted players.

He is playing in the lower single-A team because the season has started for the higher single-A teams, and their rosters have been filled.

In his first game as the starting shortstop, he had two hits in four tries.

Hairston said the professional experience is educational.

"We practice before the games, and I am getting the coaching I need," he said. "I also learn from my mistakes in the games. I am learning every day."

Hairston's father, Jerry Hairston Sr., a former Chicago White Sox player, said the contract could have been for more money, but he is happy his son chose to play professionally.

"You never get what you want," he said. "But it is in his best interest to go the professional route."

But though Hairston Jr. has chosen to play professionally, the Salukis now have to find a replacement.

The SIUC baseball team has a scholarship to give to a new player, because Hairston, who was a sophomore last season, no longer is eligible for college baseball because he signed with Baltimore.

Saluki baseball head coach Dan Callahan said finding a replacement will be difficult.

"Replacing someone of Jerry's caliber won't be easy," he said. "We are looking more for a third-base kind of guy who can put up those kind of numbers."

He said Hairston does have the skills to succeed in the major leagues.

"He thinks is ready to play pro ball," Callahan said. "I think so, too."

Hairston Jr. said the team will pay for him to finish his degree in public relations, but that is not in his immediate plans.

"I can go to school in the wintertime, but I think this year I will play winter ball," he said. "I will go to school when I establish myself in the organization, and they will pay for it."

Hairston Sr. said he wants his son to finish his education, but he would like to see him succeed in an organization such as the Baltimore Orioles.

He said he taught his son the fundamentals of baseball and has tried to make the game fun for him.

"I would take him through drills without him even knowing it," he said. "I would throw balls to his right and his left and a little over his head."

Hairston Sr. said his goal while Hairston Jr. was growing up was to see his son love baseball and not be forced into playing it.

"Basically I wanted to help him enjoy the game," he said. "I didn't tell him 'You have to do this,' or 'Don't do this.' That's what I appreciated my dad doing with me, and that is what I try to do with my sons."

Three new coaches bring years of experience to SIUC

Dunkelberger

BUDDY SYSTEM: New assistant football coaches worked with head coach Jan Quarless at other schools.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC head football coach Jan Quarless will reunite with three of his former associates this season in composing his defensive coaching staff.

Defensive backs coach Ron Lambert, defensive line coach Michael Mahoney and defensive coordinator Dave Dunkelberger, who all have coached with Quarless at other universities, will join the Saluki program.

Quarless anticipates working with his old friends on his new staff.

"We all share a similar philosophy and know what it takes to win," he said.

As a graduate assistant, Lambert helped coach cornerbacks at Wake Forest University during the 1995-96 season, when Quarless was an assistant coach there.

Mahoney and Dunkelberger were assistant coaches at the University of Kansas, where Quarless was the offensive line coach during the 1985-86 season.

Ron Lambert

Before Lambert worked with Quarless at Division I-A Wake Forest, he was assistant coach at Division II West Virginia College from 1993 to 1995.

Lambert, who was a four-year starter at defensive back for Wake Forest from 1989 to 1992, said he could not imagine himself playing or coaching any other position.

"It's the most exciting and hardest position in the game," he said. "There's nothing I like more than a challenge."

Senior defensive back Brian Samuels said Lambert can help players more because of his playing experience.

"He knows exactly what is going on," Samuels said. "He lets us know our mistakes before we have a chance to tell him."

Being a former player will help Lambert relate to players, but he said there is more to coaching than drawing X's and O's on a chalkboard.

"Just because you played the game doesn't mean you can coach," he said. "Football is more about teaching, not coaching."

He said that after playing and coaching at the Division I-A and Division II schools, Division I-AA SIUC will be a new level of competition for him.

"I've never coached or played Division I-AA football," Lambert said. "I thought it was a good opportunity to work with a different group of guys."

Lambert said he became a coach so football could continue to be part of his life.

"I've played football for 16 years," he said. "I lost my desire to play, but I still wanted to be around the game."

Michael Mahoney

Mahoney coached at four colleges during his 25-year career before coming to SIUC.

Some of his coaching stops include Murray State University, College of William and Mary, the University of Arizona and the University of Kansas.

"The coaching profession is very mobile," Mahoney said.

Mahoney came to SIUC because he likes Quarless and his straightforward attitude.

"He's the boss, and I'm the assistant," Mahoney said. "He's a very easy guy to work for because you know exactly where he stands."

Junior defensive lineman Doug Reicherter said Mahoney's desire to get the team to work has impressed him the most.

"He instills a hard work ethic," Reicherter said.

"Everything with him is full-speed."

Mahoney said he wants to have an open relationship with all the players.

"I want to be able to discuss their problems on the field and in the classroom," he said. "I think each one needs to graduate and have something to fall back on."

Mahoney expects the team to rebound and have a successful season, although the defense had problems learning the new 4-3 system in the spring. The system features four defensive linemen and three linebackers.

"The players have struggled with it," Mahoney said. "But I still expect to win every game, because if I expected to lose, I'd need a new job."

David Dunkelberger

After serving as the defensive coordinator at Northeast Louisiana University, Dunkelberger will bring 30 years of coaching experience to SIUC and hopes to mesh with Quarless' style.

"I want to be able to run the program how (Quarless) wants it because he's the head (coach)," he said.

Dunkelberger has been impressed with the defense's speed, but said there is room for improvement.

"The kids can run pretty fast," he said. "But we have to work hard on toughness."

Unlike Mahoney, Dunkelberger wants a strictly professional relationship with his players.

"I want an honest relationship so they know what I want out of them on the field," Dunkelberger said. "But I don't try to be their best friend."

Dunkelberger said he is satisfied by his relationship with the other coaches, because they all are trying to achieve the same goal.

"We got a good group of guys," he said. "We all want to see if we can win here."
