Wilkins resigns from BOT

Trustees react to Wilkins' departure, effects on University

KATE MCCANN

SIU Trustee George Wilkins sent a letter of resignation to Gov. George Ryan Monday, three days after informing Board chairman A.D. Van Meter of his intent to resign.

A mass e-mail was sent Friday by VanMeter to all board members, interi President Frank Horton, and SIU's legal counsel. According to the letter, VanMeter said Wilkins wanted to "help get all this behind us for the sake of the Wilkins resignation follows a year of controversy and outrage from some facul-ty and students who had fought to have Wilkins removed from the board.

"I don't think they helped any cause," Student Trustee Ben Syfert said Monday.

"I think they probably hindered some people who could make changes for the University."

After a year of strong criticism by me members of the University community regarding the former trustee, a less vocal but more powerful group, the SIU Board of Trustees, is coming to his Trustee Celeste Stiehl called Wilkins an invaluable member of the board, who knew and understood Southern Illinois better than most.

"He had so many relatives in Southern Illinois, and he was very aware of the problems," Stiehl said Friday, two days before Wikins' deadline to change his re Wiikins' deadline to change his residency or resign from the board.

The law that prompted Wilkins resignation stated that trustees of all public universities must live within Illinois. The bill was signed by Ryan June 9. Student Trustee Ben Syfert said

Wilkins had always been a strong advo-cate for the University, but Wilkins was somewhat "bitter and upset" at the activities of the past year.

I think he is someone who believes in

SIU, but has personally been very hurt

According to Syfert, Wilkins received harassing phone calls from some faculty, community members and newspapers, times on a daily basis.

"There's a point where it's okay, and there a point where it gets to be too much," Syfert said. "They passed a state law to try to get him of the board."

Sen. Evelyn Bowles, D-Edwardsville, initiated the original bill that prompted Wilkins' resignation. Bowles said Monday that she sponsored the bill with him in mind.

Wilkins to step down from the board.

"I had send all people who contacted me and who made me aware of the fact that his political affiliation had changed as well as his address," Bowles said. "I have went as his address, howes said. I have enough respect for George Wilkins that I felt that this would probably be a step he would take if the bill became law."

However, Syfert said the law was over-reactive and that Wilkins was not the root of the problems that needed to be

"I think, from what I know of George and his personality, he is a very outgoing person and he had done a lot in his day for the University," Syfert said. "It will be a task to get someone to fill his shoes."

Poor attendance at board meetings ignited some of the major criticisms s rounding Wilkins' tenure on the board.

Wilkins missed the meetings because of "some of the things he has going on and some of the things that went on at the University."

Trustee Harris Rowe said Wilkins was a great contrib utor to the board and attributed Wilkins' poor poor attendance record

Trustees were not alone in expressing

Future of SIU's Board of Trustees uncertain

> DAPHNE RETTER EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The SIU Board of Trustees could potentially see the appointment of five new members in the next year-and-a-half, leaving the fate of SIU in the hands of the Illinois governor.

SIU in the hands of the limbol governor.

George Wilkins, who has served on the Board for 25 years, reigned Monday, just after a new Illinois Law that deemed him ineligible took affect. The law required all trustees to reside within Illinois, forcing Wilking to Above to more from his Culture. trustees to reside within Illinois, forcing Wilkins to choose to move from his Culver, Ind. home or resign.

Celeste Stiehl's first six-year term ended in 1999, and while she said she was not interested in reappointment to the board, decided to remain until SIU hired a president for "sta-bility" of the University. Stiehl said Saturday that she was unsure whether she would leave before a replacement for her could be found.

Three other Trustees, William Norwood,

Three other Trustres, William Norwood, Molly D'Esposito and Harris Rowe, have terms ending in 2001.

Nick Palazzolo, press secretary for Gov. George Ryan, said the term of board members are "staggered" to avoid losing several at one time, Consequently, he said, for SIU to lose five at one time is unusual.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson said the possible loss of five of the University's current trustees does not translate to drastic changes or instability in SIU.

"The University is always in a time of transition," he said. "It's been in a time of change for the 31 years since I've been here

it's a dynamic, living organism."

Ryan has only reappointed existing members of the SIU board, so many are interested to see what criteria he will use to choose new trustees.

Mary Lamb, an English professor who joined SIU one year after Williams was appeinted to the board, said she believes the University will benefit most from the appointment of new trustees

I think this board has become enough of an embarrassment to the governor's office that auto-reappointments must stop," she said. "I hope that Wilkins' dismissal from the board is

Lamb said Ryan must look for feedback from those who care for SIU in order to find effective trustees. If he does not consult people connected to SIU, she said Ryan will con-ribute to the board's spiral downward.

I think there has been a change in climate," she said, referring to the SIUC community's perspective toward the BOT. "The munity's perspective toward the board has lost faith and trust."

Carolyn Donow, a research administrator, said she is encouraged that Ryan will do what is best for the University. "I doubt Ryan is deaf," she said. "I think that probably Gov. Ryan has heard our message here and will make sure [new appointes] are active and engaged people who have the University at heart." Donow, who has work closely with some board members as a member of the advisor ttee for the Presidential search, said it would be a mistake to generalize all of the trustees, some of which she believes are very interested in SIU's future.

I would hate for us to paint all board members with the same broad brush," she said. "It's just not fair."

Search for leader of SIU narrowed to three finalists

Three finalists for SIU President were extensively interviewed by the Board of Trustees Friday in a closed meeting in St. Louis.

No information is being released on the search or the linal candidates, but a decision is expected to come with-in the next two weeks, according to Student Trustee Ben

Syfert said he thought the search was at the point to where the board had to make a decision. He also addressed concerns that the search was overly confiden-tial and reiterated the need to protect the candidates.

"A lot of these guys are making a six-figure income," Syfert said. "One of the last things any board wants to hear is that you have a successful CEO looking for a job.

In 1998, they began to push the idea of moving the public relations program to the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts, but were once again refused by the Department of Speech Communication. Ekachai and Parkinson both agreed that it

Union concerned with salary, faculty lines and shared governance

Negotiating teams from the Faculty Association and the administration continue to meet in hopes that a new contract can be agreed on by fall.

The current contract technically ended June

Some of the issues that the Faculty

Association are bringing to the negotiating table are faculty lines, salary parity and the right to review administrators. Neither side would reveal details about negotiations because of a confiden-tiality agreement.

Kay Carr, Faculty Association president, said

some outstanding matters still need to be resolved. All faculty union members must vote to endorse the final contract.

SIUC retiree Sylvia Greenfield shows water color paintings in exhibit of Sylvia Greenheid, local artist and retired SIUC professor of art and design.

Her watercolor paintings will be on display in the library until July 26 thanks to the Friends of the Library, the Carbondale Community Arts Fund and the Illinois Arts council. This is the second of three art exhibitions the library is displaying this summe

Many of Greenfield's paintings consist of small painted squares pasted on a black board, giving the appearance of tiles. The small squares e all painted uniquely, but follow the individual color scheme of the entire picture...one pre-dominantly blue, one with reds, one with greens.

Greenfield, who spent 30 years in the SIU School of Art and Design, said a technique using an acrylic medium gives the surface of her paintxture and her technique of demonst icrocosms within a macrocosi stems from her graduate school days at the University of orado-Boulder.

"Each piece has to feel that it's complete, and yet all the pieces together have to be complete,' Greenfield said. 'They're paintings you can look at from a distance or up close. I like to work on both levels."

The individual tiles appear to be swirls and swishes of color, looking like colorful slides that might be seen under a microscope.

"I'm a sloppy painter," Greenfield said. "I love it. There's a lot of accidents that happen with paint, and I feel I can take advantage of that."

Greenfield also has two pictures that are a series of multi-colored, three-dimensional cubes, stuck together and appearing like a kind of abstract architecture. She found inspiration for these pieces from a quilt pattern called "baby blocks."

Greenfield said she starts by preparing about 10 watercolor paintings on large

"Each piece is gorgeous. She looks at each piece as a thing unto itself," Bernstein said.

"Then all sorts of wonderful interactions start taking place. You start seeing forms within the forms."

Friend and fan of Greenfield's work Roberta Viper, a retired psychologist, described the process of Greenfield's painting as intriguing.

"A lot of the art in it is the way the squares are chosen and related to one another," Viper said. "An important part of the art is in that Viper said she has one of Greenfield's paintings hanging up in front of her bed, so she sees it when she first wakes up every morning.

"When the sun's shiring in, it catches the reds in my painting," Viper said. "It's a really intense, colored way to wake up in the morn-

The SIU School of Law received a $240,000 donation from a prominent Carbondale family to establish a permanent professorship in its health law policy program. The Garwins, a Carbondale family who have made tremendous contributions to the community and to the University, established the Garwin Family Foundation in 1993 for the purpose of fostering educational and academic

"This is an important day for not only SIUC but for the Carbondale community," said Rickey McCurry, vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement. "This gift will allow us to create a permanent professorship in a health law and policy program."

Created in 1996 by the Garwin Family Foundation, the Dr. Arthur Grayson Memorial Distinguished Professorship of Law and Medicine has brought experts to the SIUC School of aw for year-long teaching and research units.

The latest gift from the foun-dation allows the professorship to continue on a permanent basis. This brings the total donated to the Law School by the Garwin family to more than $500,000.

The arrangement marks the first time in the history of the Law School that a private entity has established a permanent pro fessorship.

Garwin Family Foundation is the largest single supporter of the School of Law, not simply from a financial standpoint but from a support standpoint that cuts across the entire University," said Dean homas Guernsey.

According to Guernsey, this gift illustrates

"The School of Law is trying to develop a center for health law and policy," Guernsey said. "The announcement today is an important step in pulling together the pieces for that center."

Bryan Liang was named to the professorship position after serving as the Dr. Arthur Grayson Memorial Distinguished Visiting Professor for the 1999-2000 academic year. His appointment to the permanent pro-

"With the student's point-of-view and the University's point-of-view, it's a loss," said Tim Collins, senior in public relations and presi-the lowest bidder," Carr said. "That, essentially, is the trend."

An analysis done by the University Budget Office showed disparity among the figures used in the advertisement. However, Carol Henry of the Budget Office said while some of the advertisement was disputed, the salary figures are not denied by the office. Morteza Daneshdoost, president-elect of the Faculty Association, said comparable salaries mean not only attracting better quality faculty but can serve as a measure of appreciation toward existing faculty.

"When we talk about the faculty's salary, we are not talking about what's going in our own pockets," Daneshdoost said. "We are talking about the quality of the faculty who are here and who we are going to be able to attract.

Britton said he agrees that faculty lines and enrollment are real issue but doesn't know if the University can protect faculty lines.

"We can't expect to protect all jobs," Britton said. "To single out this issue and not address others is short-sighted."

Shared governance is another concern of the association. Its members feel faculty should play a larger role in decision-making processes. For example, Daneshdoost and

Carr said the presidential search should be made more open at this time. While they agree the prelimi-nary search should be confidential, so as to secure a wide pool of candidates, the faculty representatives said it is time for the board to open the

Carr, a member of the presidential search advisory committee, sub-mitted a letter to the Board of Trustees advising there should now be a community-wide interview for the finalists.

"As a faculty member," Caneshdoost said, "I feel outraged that they will not allow interviews by people whose lives will be affected by this person — faculty, students and staff."

Britton, however, said the associ-ation was informed of the confidential nature of the search well in advance when the processes for the search were made public.

The presidential search advisory mmittee also includes representa tives from University groups includ-ing Faculty Senate and Graduate Council. Britton said he thinks the committee represents the University.

"I feel it is strange the association is suddenly concerned with the pres-idential search," Britton said. "These are 11th hour concerns." are 11th hour concerns.

However, Archer said he hopes the next president is someone who can run ol like a faculty member but also possesses the ability to raise funds.

"If I were choosing a president I would choose someone who would wear both hats," Archer said.

Syfert would not comment on whether the candidates were Illinois natives, nor would he release any information on their backgrounds. But his impressions of the three were favorable.

"I can say that it's going to be a very tough decision," he said.

Area high school volleyball teams come together to improve their skills

RANA CONNOLLY

Sitting in the bleachers, Cathy Black, head coach for Norris City High School's volleyball team watches her varsity team practice at the SIU Volleyball Team Camp—a camp she has turned to for more than a decade.

"I have brought a team to this camp for 15 years," Black said. "I think it's good for my team to hear another coach tell them what I tell them all the time."

High school volleyball teams from across Illinois are visiting SIUC for volleyball camp, which began July 9 and lasts until the 12th. SIU volleyball head coach Sonya Locke has been coaching the camp every summer for 18 years. The camp provides instruction for individuals, teams and specialty positions such as setters and middle hitters. Campers will leave the camp with improvements to their skills, an increase in the teams' output and motivation for their upcoming seasons.

"The camp is a good way for teams to improve in their overall game," Locke said.

The camp's schedule is instruc-tion and drills in the morning hours and competition in the afternoon and evening hours.

High school teams attending the angui school teams attending the camp are Highland, Neoga, Illiopolis, Brownstown, Carterville, Norris City, South Central and Zeigler-Royalton.

Improvements are definitely made to the performance of the tearn, according to Black. Black also has players from her team make the nas payes from her team make the one and a half hour drive for the individual camps SIU offers. "Carbondale is close enough, it's not too far to drive," Black said. "And the cost of the camp is not too expensive. Most camps have raised their prices to where it's too expensive for me to ask the girls to pay that much."

Life goes on for Josh Cross after the NBA Draft

that he was not selected in the 2000 NBA Draft. On evening of June 28, Cross watched the draft, which took place at the Target Minneapolis, by himself at his apartment. He said if he thought he was really going to be selected, the scene would have been a lot different.

"If I expected to get drafted, my whole family and I would have been sitting around the TV watching the draft, but we really weren't expecting anything big to happen," Cross said. "I just stayed to myself and watched it."

After four hours and 58 picks later, Cross was not surprised he did not hear

"There were no hard feelings,"

Salukis will likely have Indiana on non-conference schedule

The SIU Pasketball Office confirmed the team's non-conference schedule will likely have Indiana University a part of it.

"It's well past the rumor stages," said SIU assistant basketball coach Rodney Watson.

Once television rights for the game are finalized, the Salukis could have a three-year contract with the Hoosiers. SIU then would play at Indiana this season and at SIU Arena play at Indiana this season and at SIU Arena the following year. The third game against Indiana would be played at the RCA Dome during the annual Indiana Classic. "It's a perfect set-up for us and it should be really exciting, "Vatson said. Indiana University's Sports Information Office said the basketball schedule should be feelingth whe and of July finalized by the end of July.

LAWRENCE, KAN.

Roy Williams decides to stay at Kansas

With two words Thursday night, Roy Williams slam-dunked a week of specula-tion about him leaving Kansas for North Carolina's basketball coaching job.

"I'm staying," Williams said, smiling as cheering erupted from the thousands of fans gathered outside in Kansas' Memorial Stadium.
