U.S. officials assassinated in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—The U.S. ambassador to Lebanon and his economic counselor were shot to death Wednesday while crossing the no-man's land that divides war-torn Beirut. They were en route to peace talks with the nation's president-elect.

In Washington, President Ford termed the deaths an assassination during a "mission of peace."

Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., 59, counselor Robert O. Waring, 58, and their chauffeur, Zohair Maghrabi, were last seen alive late Wednesday morning as they headed for the dangerous crossing on their way from the U.S. Embassy in the Moslem sector to the Christian-held territory and the office of president-elect Elias Sarkis.

Neither Ford nor the U.S. Embassy here gave details of why the two diplomats were going to see Sarkis. The Syrian-backed candidate was elected May 8 over heavy leftist opposition.

Palestinian officials said the three bodies were found near a Beirut beach more than two miles away from the crossing point, which is used to move from one side of the city to the other.

A source at American University Hospital in Beirut said the two diplomats' bodies and that of their driver had been taken there for identification by the embassy.

Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat's official news agency Wafa said neither Palestinian guerrillas nor their leftist Lebanese allies had anything to do with the killings.

An embassy spokesman refused to give details of the two diplomats' journey, citing security reasons. He said the visit to Sarkis had not been made public and the bullet-proof Chevrolet was not flying an American flag to identify it as a diplomatic vehicle, although its license plate identified it as an American embassy car.

State Department spokesman Robert Funsath in Washington said the three men were "executed. They had been shot." He said he had no idea who was responsible for the murders. He said there were no known threats and no one was claiming responsibility for the murders.

Ford went before reporters in the White House briefing room to read his statement on the deaths personally. He said the "United States will not be deterred from its search for peace by these murders."

He said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has been ordered "to continue our intensive efforts" to help find a solution to the Lebanese civil war.

Senate okays SIU bid for tuition money

A bill approved by the Illinois Senate will allow SIU to spend an additional $1.2 million before the end of its fiscal year, June 30.

The bill has been sent to Gov. Daniel Walker for his signature.

The money will come from additional tuition funds collected from SIU's increased enrollment, which was up 2,200 this year. The University needed state approval before spending the money.

The increased enrollment also raised costs, making the additional funds necessary, said Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale.

SIU officials say the funds will be used to meet rising utility costs and other expenses including delayed purchase of equipment.

The Illinois House approved legislation which provides $2 million in relief funds to northeastern Illinois residents who incurred damages resulting from last Sunday's tornadoes.

The House also approved a bill which permits payment of $1.6 million to Amtrak, money owed by the state for passenger service.

Student president outlines goals for year

By Matt Coulter
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Tom Jones, SIU student president, leaned back in his black chair and sipped coffee from a styrofoam cup. His light brown hair hung across his forehead, just touching his glasses.

"So far, we've been rearranging files. We've condensed 10 files into about three. We had documents stored up here from 1947," he said.

Gus
Bode

Gus says who'll believe a president named Tom Jones?

Jones, 22, began his term as student president Monday, Wednesday morning he outlined his plans for money management and organizing his staff from his office on the third floor of the Student Center.

"Student government is one activity where you don't see direct results from your efforts," Jones said. "In a club or fraternity that is putting on programs, you can see a concrete result from your effort when the program is completed."

Jones feels that this can create problems in getting volunteers for student government work. However, he doesn't anticipate a shortage of volunteers this summer.

"We always welcome volunteers. If someone wants to work with Student Government, we'll find something for them to do," Jones said.

"We'll be doing a lot of homework around here, trying to find out where mistakes were made in the past—where people ran into brick walls—so we'll be prepared when we start working on some problems."

Jones has an incurable case of leukemia and can expect to live five to ten more years. Jones does not feel that the disease will affect his work as student president.

He receives chemotherapy treatment one week every month, but is in the hospital only during nights. He will be free to perform his student government activities during the day.

Jones said one problem Student Government will be working on this summer is tighter control of funding for campus groups.

Presently, recognized student organizations can spend money given to them for purposes other than those for which the money was intended.

"A group could take money given for lecturers and spend it on travel and nothing can be done about it," Jones said.

His telephone rang and interrupted his flow of words. He quickly took care of the caller's question.

"If the Board of Trustees passes the Fee Allocation Board's proposals, it will be impossible for a campus group to overspend."

The Student Government Fee Allocation Board has proposed that groups be given money to spend in five scheduled areas. The areas are commodities, salaries, travel, telephone and contractual services.

Contractual services would include functions such as hiring bands for concerts.

Campus groups would not be able to spend money specified for one area in another without special permission from the Fee Allocation Board.

The proposal is scheduled to come up at the Board of Trustees meeting on July 8, Jones said.

Student Government will also be trying to convince the Illinois Legislature to give matching funds to the SIU Student-to-Student Grant Program, Jones said.

Each student at SIU contributes $2.25 through fees to the grant program. Students not wishing to participate can have the fee refunded.

"Students voted almost 2 to 1 to keep the program this spring," Jones said. State matching funds would double the amount available for the program.

"It's really too early in the term to say exactly what all we'll be doing," He finished his coffee and set the cup on his desk.

"We don't want to waste a lot of time on something we could never change."

Creative conference features scholars, workshops, debate

By Diane Pintozzi
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The National Conference on Creative Interchange, which will focus on alternatives communication methods, such as confrontation, encounter, debate and Socratic Dialectic, will open at 7:30 Friday evening at the Ramada Inn. William S. Minor, director of the Foundation for Creative Philosophy Inc., said the weekend conference will include plenary sessions, workshops and panel conversations. These sessions will be based on 40 interdisciplinary papers on creative interchange by the guest authors, Minor said.

Minor, who organized the conference, said after the papers are analyzed and edited, they will be published for use by teachers and students.

The theme is "For a Breakthrough in Creative Rather than Destructive Treatment of Human Conflict." The conference, dedicated to the late Henry Nelson Wieman, distinguished professor of philosophy at SIU, is sponsored by the Foundation for Creative Philosophy Inc. in cooperation with the SIU department of philosophy and the division of continuing education.

Approximately 57 scholars from throughout the nation will attend the conference, Minor said. The conference is preliminary to the New York International Conference on Creative Interchange to be held October 7.

The conference will open Friday evening at 7:30 p.m. with a "get acquainted" reception Elizabeth Eames, director of graduate studies in philosophy will act as hostess. Minor said.

There will be a $35 registration fee which will include the cost of meals and copies of featured papers. Minor said. Workshops and plenary sessions are open to students free of charge.

A Saturday morning breakfast at the Student Center is scheduled from 8 to 8:45. President Warren Brant will deliver the welcome introduction. Late registration will be held from 8:30 to 9 a.m.

The first plenary panel, "Woman's Career as Distinguished Professor of Philosophy," will honor the life and works of Henry Nelson Wieman (1884-1975). It will be held in the Student Center Auditorium from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

Morris Library Auditorium will be the scene of the First National Exhibit of the Henry Nelson Wieman Archives, 11 to 12 p.m.

Workshops beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday are: "Metaphysics and Epistemology," in the Student Rooms, and the plenary session, from 4 to 5 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

After dinner, four workshop sessions on "The Value Disciplines" will be presented from 7 to 8:30 p.m. A social hour in the Gallery Lounge will follow.

Sunday, four workshops on "Social Philosophy" will be held in the River Rooms, following breakfast and a "Fun Feature."

The closing plenary session will be held from 11 a.m. to noon in the Student Center Auditorium. Issues for further research and use at the international conference to be held in New York will be discussed.

The conference will end following dinner at 1 p.m.

Attucks Board increases size to meet funding standards

By Steve Hahn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Faced with losing two city contracts for supervision of social service programs conducted through the Eurma Hayes Center, the Attucks Community Service Board has increased its membership to 12, bringing the board into compliance with local funding standards, Herbert Walker, director of social services, said Wednesday.

At a meeting two weeks ago, the city council heard proposals for the renewal of the Youth Services and Unified Social Service Program contracts. At that time the board had only seven members and the city staff recommended that the contracts not be renewed.

The council, however, voted to override the staff's recommendation and extended the contracts for two weeks, allowing the Attucks Board time to add five members. The Council is expected to make a final renewal decision at its meeting Monday.

If the contracts with the Attucks Board are not renewed, the city would take over administration of the programs. City Manager Carroll Fry has criticized the board for ineffective management of the programs.

received a $2.7 million community development block-grant from the department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which included funding for the programs under the Attucks Board.

The Unified Social Service Program is expected to negotiate with the city council Monday for a $53,000 contract. $45,000 of the contract would come from a recent HUD grant, according to Donald Monty of the community development department. The other $8,000 would come from funds left over from a past grant, Monty said.

A Youth Service Program contract for $40,000 is also expected to be negotiated Monday. The entire $40,000 would come from the HUD grant, he said.

An evaluation was cited at the council meeting which questioned the effectiveness of the two programs under the board's direction. The evaluation conducted by Robert Stalls, director of the city's human resource division, and his staff, cited poor delivery of services to the city's residents.

Stalls has blamed the poor service on improper use of aides and the lack of supervision by a trained professional in the social services field.

Stalls refused comment Wednesday saying, "The evaluation was not intended as a public evaluation and I cannot discuss it with the press."

According to Walker, he received a letter on June 3 from the Carbondale Steering Committee, signed by the Rev. Charles Watkins saying "...it seems unfair" to conduct an evaluation 16 days before the contracts were due to come before the council.

Walker said, "The board was given no opportunity to take corrective action. The evaluation is looked at with a great deal of suspect."

Local airport to receive $1.15 million

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—The Southern Illinois Airport will receive $1.15 million for runway and taxiway work as part of a $103.3 million state airport improvement and development program announced Wednesday by the state Department of Transportation.

The program for fiscal 1977 includes $69 million in federal money, $9.9 million from state bond proceeds and $7.6 million in local money.

It is nearly twice the size of the $57 million program announced last year, but includes many projects announced for the current fiscal year which ends June 30, according to DOT Secretary Langhorne Bond.

Included in the fiscal 1977 program is $4.2 million for land acquisition near Columbia and Waterloo should Illinois be chosen as the site for a second airport serving the St. Louis metropolitan area.

Nearly $43 million of the airport program will be used for improvements at three Chicago airports—Midway, Meigs and O'Hare.

Among other major downstate airport projects which are included in the program are $412,000 for a new fire station at Champaign; $3.766 million for lengthening the runway to permit the Greater Peoria Airport to handle larger planes, and $1.3 million for land acquisition for a new general aviation airport capable of handling business jets in the Pontiac-Streator area.

News Roundup

Six killed in South African rioting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Bloody rioting swept through a sprawling black suburb Wednesday in an eruption of violence over the enforced use of Afrikaans in schools, a language despised as a symbol of white oppression. Police opened fire on the mobs and at least six persons were reported killed and dozens injured.

"We fired into them. It's no good firing over their heads," a senior police officer told reporters.

Hundreds of police with guns, dogs, tear gas and helicopters converged to herd the rioters onto a small hill in Soweto, a vast township eight miles outside Johannesburg. More than one million blacks live in Soweto, segregated from whites under South Africa's apartheid policy.

German border guards kidnapped

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A diplomatic row flared between West and East Germany on Wednesday as the Bonn government protested what it termed the deliberate kidnapping of two border guards by Communist troops.

Michael Kohl, head of East Germany's Germany's mission in Bonn, was handed an urgent demand for release of the men.

Government spokesman Klaus Boelling told reporters that the high-level protest was decided after West Germany's representative in East Berlin unsuccessfully demanded clarification for the second time.

Ford may seek busing limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford Administration may seek legislation setting a five-year limit on court-ordered busing in communities which earnestly try to desegregate schools, Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi said Wednesday.

Levi said the administration views busing as a transitional remedy which must be imposed in certain circumstances but should not be permanent.

He said President Ford agrees with that legal decision although he personally opposes busing.

"I think busing is constitutionally required where there is no other adequate remedy. The President certainly has agreed with that," Levi told a news conference.

Chicago man charged in flood killing

CHICAGO (AP) — A 30-year-old South Side man charged with the fatal shooting of a suburban Buffalo Grove woman when her car stalled in a flooded area near the Dan Ryan Expressway entered an innocent plea in Circuit Court Wednesday.

Marrion Logan pleaded innocent to shooting Phyllis Anderson, 51, of the northwest suburb.

Logan, who is being held in Cook County Jail without bond, is charged with two counts of murder, one count of attempted murder and two counts of aggravated assault in connection with the incident.

Mrs. Anderson and her husband, Lee, 51, were shot Sunday night when their car stalled in a flooded viaduct during a heavy thunderstorm. Anderson is listed in serious condition at Mercy Hospital.

Packaging God for the masses

By Constantine Karahalios

Consumated Digest reports that the latest fad on college campuses today is God.

"That's true," said Dave Id, a traveling salesman who deals in God. "That despite the fact that God's been around almost as long as mankind. It ain't no new product, y'know," continued Id as he sported this spring's newest fashion look, a Jimmy Carter smile. Id sets up his simple shops on college campuses all over the country, usually near centers of traffic.

"You really don't need much more than a Bible and a strong voice," said Id. "The most important thing to remember is your market. Colleges are good because we appeal best to the emotionally insecure and morally deprived."

Id said that selling God is not an easy profession and that new angles had to be found over the centuries.

"When God first arrived on the market," began Id. "It was easy enough to sell. Civilization was just dawning and most humans were thoroughly confused as to what to do with it."

"We had a good system the first 10,000 years because it gave everyone of choice. Zeus, there was a God for everything," said Id.

"But after a while the choices got too confusing, so people just quit buying. That was our first marketing crisis, and it could have been disastrous if not for the foresight of the Ancient Greeks."

Id said the early Greeks developed a system that cut down on the confusion by packaging the product into 12 major and a host of minor sellers. About the same time the Greeks began developing their market, Id said a group of tribes in the Middle East were hard at work on their own system, and had discovered a method of packaging all the Gods into one.

"That's always been a good regional seller," said Id, still wearing the Jimmy Carter smile. "But it's never really done well in a large market."

"Then about 2,000 years ago the Romans tried marketing the Greek system down in the Middle East. But the regional competition was too stiff, so the Romans never made it out of the red."

Id said this major rift between the two main distributors nearly caused another crisis, but luckily it gave rise to a number of smaller, independent institutions like Radical Barabbas and Amalgamated Christ.

"Amalgamated Christ was the real savior," Id said about the institution he works for. "At first we weren't worth much, except as lunchmeat for lions. But today we're the largest distributor in the world."

Id attributes Christ's success to dynamic distribution techniques and a good understanding of the market.

"Basically all we have done is merge the Greek and the Middle East systems into one," revealed Id. "Consumers like to have a choice, but they also like it to come in nicely tied package."

"We kept the idea of one God, but split it up into three parts. This way people think they're getting a bargain, three for the price of one."

"From the Greeks, we hung on to the idea of minor sellers," Id continued, "We created the saints because people can identify more with them."

Id said that although this seems to be a good year for sales, God-salespersons shouldn't get lax and overconfident. Id stressed that April, along with December, is one of the peak sales months.

"But you can't let it lull you into a sense of false security."

You don't get converts by smacking them on the head with a stone anymore," David Id concluded, still wearing the Jimmy Carter smile.

'You call that a secretarial skill?'

By Arthur Hays

Congressman Wayne Hays reluctantly had to fire an attractive young aide recently. He said he'd just discovered she had hardly ever shown up for work during the past two years.

What the heck, Miss Elizabeth Ray, 27, told reporters, "I can't type, I can't file, I can't even answer the phone." She claimed Mr. Hays put her on the public payroll at $14,000 a year for other skills. Mr. Hays gallantly denied this. But that's neither here nor there.

The issue, of course, is whether an inability to type, file, answer the phone or show up for work is a firing offense in Washington. Most experts think not.

They cite the historic case of Congressman Bagley Boodel and his buxom secretary, Miss Dee Kupp.

Mr. Boodel's envious colleagues agreed that Miss Kupp was far and away the most valuable secretary on Capitol Hill. For one thing, every time there was a conference, all the Congressmen wanted to meet in Mr. Boodel's office which saved him considerable time.

For another, she performed her duties with admirable efficiency. She was an expert at picking up his laundry and buying him new shirts. And few excelled her at purchasing anniversary, birthday and Christmas presents for wife, maiden aunts and assorted children.

Thanks to her, Boodel's office was known as having the best coffee and Danish on the hill, not to mention the best-stocked bar. Due to her wiles, he enjoyed an excellent parking place in the Congressional barber shop.

"She's my girl Friday," Boodel proudly told everyone except Mrs. Boodel, who thought that was his bowling night.

This ideal relationship lasted six years. The end came when Mrs. Boodel discovered that her husband didn't own a bowling ball.

Putting two and six together, Mrs. Boodel wrote Miss Kupp an irate letter threatening to break down her apartment door on the forthcoming Friday unless Miss Kupp found another line of work.

Miss Kupp, however, failed to warn Boodel. And when Mrs. Boodel broke down the door that fateful night, she had little to say other than, "You call that a secretarial skill?"

Boodel had no choice but to fire Miss Kupp. "Why, after reading Mrs. Boodel's note," he asked the perfect secretary, "didn't you write me a warning note?"

"Read?" asked the perfect secretary. "Write?"

Miss Kupp appealed her dismissal to the Federal Civil Service Commission, contending that the duty of a secretary was to keep her Congressman happy and that reading and writing were not required in the job description. The Commission, after six months' deliberation, upheld her.

So it's doubtful Congressman Hays has a case.

Opposes SIU patronizing Indians

To the Daily Egyptian:

Hot on the heels of a move to restrict admissions and upgrade academic performance by blocking the entry of students with poor preparation and low ACT's, we see the champions of justice from Anthony Hall preparing to gather up a new group of the educationally disadvantaged, the American Indians.

It has been explained to us that, despite the large proportion of poor blacks who would be cut out by raising ACT qualifications, the move is not really racist. That is because the ACT really detects which students are likely to benefit from a college education and which are not. The Developmental Skills program, with years of acquired expertise in helping the graduates of poor inner-city high schools make a go of it at SIU is not considered in this equation, we are no longer going to fool around with late bloomers. This may be a valid decision, if the goal of the University is to provide quality education to the most able students in the most efficient way.

But then what can be the purpose of seeking out an educationally disadvantaged group who have never tried to come here, whose needs we don't understand and are totally unprepared to cope with? (SIU is no more a logical site for an Indian education center than it was for a Vietnamese studies center—outside of a couple of anthropology professors, who is here who could tell a hogan from a hatrack?) Will the Native Americans be grateful to be patronized as the latest example of "Academic Outreach" at SIU? Or will we succeed in frustrating two groups at the same time—both the Illinois students who were not admitted and the Native Americans who were?

Law school publishes first journal

By Karen Book
Student Writer

Concurrently with the graduation of its first class, SIU School of Law has published the first issue of the Law Journal.

The Law Journal publishes legal research and in-depth analysis of current legal problems as written by students, law professors and other members of the legal profession.

The journal, sent to U.S. and Illinois Supreme Court Libraries, the Attorney General's office, Illinois legislators and courts and to every law school in the country, serves as a national representation of the educational quality and legal training at SIU's law school.

An editorial board composed of third year students edits and publishes the journal twice yearly, with the next printing scheduled for November 1. A subscription is $7 per volume (two issues) or $4 per issue.

"With articles from law journals from law schools across the country being cited in court briefs, the editorial board of the journal has a policy of certifying the accuracy reliability of the material published," said Ron Spears, this year's Editor-in-Chief.

"This requires every footnote and textual statement to undergo substantive citichecking and editorial scrutiny."

The inaugural issue of the Law Journal features three leading articles. The first, by Professor Harlan S. Abrahams of the SIU faculty and Professor John R. Snowden of Nebraska, argues for a separation of powers doctrine prohibiting administrative agencies intruding into the criminal lawmaking process.

The second, by Professor Myres S. McDougal, Professor Harold D. Lasswell and Lung-chu Chen of Yale discuss the problems of minorities throughout the world who are not allowed to speak their native language.

The final article by Professor Frank J. Remington and Walter Dickey examines the question of providing legal services to prisoners.

The remainder of the issue deals with comments and casenotes written by SIU law students Ralph Friedrich, Orval Nangle, James Stuart Wilber, Neil Nyberg, Ronald Spears and Stuart Borden.

Student attorney sought

The search for a student attorney has narrowed to four candidates according to Doug Diggle, a member of the Student Attorney Program's board of directors.

Diggle refused to release the names of the four remaining candidates.

"I hope to get at least three of the candidates to state that they are still interested in the position," Diggle said.

Remaining interested candidates will then be brought to SIU, probably within the next four weeks.

"By mid-July we expect to have the candidate chosen, and I would expect that we would have a functioning program by the beginning of fall semester," Diggle said.

Candidates applied from as far as

New Mexico in the west and New York in the east, Diggle said. Applicants ages ranged from 23 to 53.

The Student Attorney Program is funded through a $1 fee paid by each SIU student. The fee is refundable, but students taking the refund cannot utilize the services of the attorney.

"Once we get an attorney, students will see it is a valuable service," Diggle said, adding that he thought the program would be a "good insurance buy" at $1.

$36,000 has been collected for the program through students fees so far, Diggle said.

SIU is the only major university in Illinois that does not have a student lawyer program.

Jack-of-all-trades preacher stays active through his life

By George McWhinney
Student Writer

"Stay active and be healthy." After a few moments with B.J. Murrie, you realize that active is an understatement in describing this "retired" preacher, builder, editor and jack-of-all-trades.

From his youth on a 220-acre farm in Simpson, Ill. until his present occupation as a guide for Presley Tours Inc. in the Mideast, Benjamin Jackson Murrie has led an active life.

Sandwiched between these unique life-styles is over 30 years of pastorates in the Southern Baptist Church. Sometimes his sundry congregations were too small to support a pastor, so he supplemented his meager income by becoming a jack-of-all-trades. He remarks, beaming with pride, that in his lifetime he has preached in almost every state of the Union.

Church activities, however, were not confined to Sunday homilies and corporal works of mercy. He was building consultant for all the Baptist churches in Illinois for two years and editor of the Illinois Baptist until 1957.

In the Carbondale area he supervised a construction crew which completed the Baptist Building on Main Street and drew the floor plans for the University Baptist Church, 700 S. Oakland.

Ben was a tireless editor and the circulation of the "Illinois Baptist" skyrocketed while he was in charge of it. Under his direction five daily issues and one weekly edition rolled off the presses like clockwork. That's all past him now, though. With a reflective gaze Ben declares, "No more deadlines for me."

His retirement philosophy is elementary. "I just try to keep busy with a lot of projects. I might finish some of them, but more come up," he says.

One project that comes up semiannually is a 12-day excursion to the Middle East. Due to his background in ancient Hebrew, Old and New Testament, Greek, and his M.A. degree in biblical archaeology, Presley Tours chose Ben to chaperone their most popular tour. Not only does he arrange and check the complex arrangements for passports and visas, transportation, lodging, and meals, he also escorts as many as 30 sightseers through places of interest and lectures on the biblical history and significance of each.

To some this hectic and demanding task may seem too much of a burden for a 75-year-old retiree. Well, you've never met Ben Murrie.

The wiry Ben Murrie bubbles with enthusiasm when he describes his favorite stop on the tour, Petra Canyon below the Dead Sea in Jordan. The sightseers, led by Ben, descend on horseback and ride down the rock streets to the palaces, tombs and dwellings chiseled into the side of a mountain by an ancient civilization.

The remainder of his time is consumed by myriad pastimes. Sewing his own clothes, growing his own vegetables, collecting antiques, repairing jewelry upholstery furniture, building grandfather clocks and tracing the genealogy of his 1,600 ancestors are his major projects.

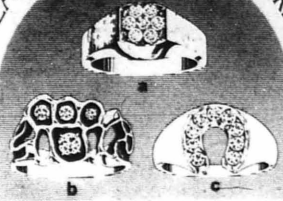

"I figure," Ben says, surrounded by walls of books, his homemade desk and drafting table, a sewing machine and grandfather clock, "if somebody can do something, why can't I?"

How does Ben plan to spend his future retirement?

"I will continue to work eight to 10 hours a day. When I get tired, I switch to a different job and do that for a while."

All this really doesn't resemble retirement, but try to convince Ben Murrie.

Black Alumni hold function

The SIU Black Alumni Association is sponsoring a "Las Vegas Night" at 9 p.m. Friday at the Harris YMCA, 6200 S. Drexel in Chicago.

Advance donations are $3 or $3.50 at the door with proceeds going toward the Dwight Campbell Scholarship Fund. Campbell, now deceased, was a student body president at SIU in 1969-70.

The Black Alumni Association is a non-profit organization formed two years ago to primarily raise funds to financially assist worthy Black students attending SIU.

Last year the Association's fund gave two $500 scholarships to two Chicago high school seniors chosen by the selection committee.

Pulliam Pool is open for summer

Pulliam Pool is open for swimming, according to the Recreation and Intramurals department. Pool hours are 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. Only SIU students are allowed to swim, and can only be admitted with a student ID.

There are locker rooms for men and women, complete with showers. However, swimmers must supply their own towels and locks for personal belongings. Women swimmers are required to wear swim caps.

House committee to vote on workmen compensation bills

Packages of 13 bills which the Chamber of Commerce say would solve the workmen's compensation problem were introduced in the House and Senate.

The Senate Labor and Commerce Committee put the package in a subcommittee in lieu of the committee's own bill. A vote is expected today in the House Labor and Commerce Committee on the chamber-backed bills.

In other action Tuesday, the House approved legislation providing $2 million for relief services to residents affected by Sunday's tornadoes in northeastern Illinois.

The appropriation had been tacked onto a Senate-passed $1.9 million appropriation for fiscal 1977 operations of the state Department of Mines and Minerals. The Senate must approve the relief money amendment before the measure can be sent to the governor.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved and sent to the governor a bill permitting Southern Illinois University to spend an additional $1.2 million from its tuition income funds before the fiscal year ends June 30.

Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale, said the money was needed because of increased costs associated with a jump of 2,200 in student enrollment this year.

And the House sent to the governor a bill which Comptroller George Lindberg said was needed to allow payment of some $1.6 million owed by the state to Amtrak and the Rock Island Lines for passenger rail service.

The railroads had threatened to shut down six lines in Illinois if the money were not paid by July 1.

The Senate also approved and sent to the governor a measure appropriating an extra $500,000 to help pay the deficits of downstate mass transit systems this fiscal year.

The money, appropriated on a 35 to 2 vote, will be used to help pay costs for the last quarter of this fiscal year, which ends July 1.

Veteran's gift to the country will proudly wave once again

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a little help from Richard Nixon, President Ford, the Justice Department and a gaggle of high-powered lawyers, John Dramesi will probably get his flag back.

All it will take is the concurrence of three federal judges.

The flag, made painstakingly and with love while Dramesi was a prisoner of the North Vietnamese, is somewhere among the 42 million pieces of paper and 5,000 tape reels left behind by Nixon when he resigned the presidency.

The Nixon materials are impounded, pending a decision by the Supreme Court on whether he can have them back. Dramesi wants to show his flag in Philadelphia's Bicentennial celebration July 4.

He started the wheels rolling, contacting Nixon, then Nixon's lawyers and the White House counsel's office. They saw no reason he shouldn't have the flag and on Tuesday a motion to that effect was filed with the three-judge court.

Dramesi, a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force, was shot down over Vietnam in 1967 and was a prisoner until 1973 when the Paris Peace accords were signed.

He made the flag at the Hanoi

Hilton, the main American POW camp in North Vietnam, using a white handkerchief for the background and threads from a blue sweater and a pair of red undershirts. His needle came from a piece of scrap metal.

He smuggled the small flag out between two plain white handkerchiefs and proudly waved it when he disembarked from the repatriation plane.

On May 24, 1973, at a White House dinner, Dramesi gave the flag to Nixon as a gift to the nation.

"What we've done is to get agreement from the government and the lawyers representing the other parties," said R. Stan Mortenson, one of Nixon's lawyers.

Thus, there seemed little doubt Dramesi will be able to wave the flag at the big birthday celebration.

State's largest farm sold to Chicago bank corporation

HAVANA (AP) — Norris Farms, the sprawling corn and beef cattle operation carved out of Illinois River bottomland near Havana, has been sold intact to Nortrust Farm Management, Inc., on behalf of an unnamed client.

Nortrust is a subsidiary of Nortrust Corporation, owner of Northern Trust Bank of Chicago.

Price of the 11,660-acre farm, largest in Illinois, was not disclosed. The asking price for the land alone was $21 million and Nortrust bought the cattle feedlots, crops, buildings and equipment, said Charles Mikuta, a spokesman for Northern Trust Bank. The sale was finalized Monday, but Mikuta was uncertain how soon Nortrust would take possession.

"This particular parcel was purchased for one of our trust customers and we never disclose who our customers are," Mikuta said.

He refused to rule out the possibility the buyer was one of several Italian nationals who had toured the complex since it went up for sale five weeks ago.

"I just simply can't comment on that," Mikuta said.

Norris Farms currently employs about 25 persons.

"So far as we know at this point there will be no major changes," in the way the complex is operated, Mikuta said.

Northern Trust has been managing farmland for more than 75 years, he said, and presently holds more than 500,000 acres throughout the United States.

The Norris family has owned the farm for 37 years and it is administered by the Norris Cattle Co., Ocala, Fla.

Morton Salt Co. was the original owner, draining several thousand acres of backwater lakes in the early 1900s, after lengthy court suits fighting the development.

Western Illinois group files action over athletics funds

PEORIA (AP) — Fifteen Western Illinois University students and faculty members say they will proceed with their sex discrimination suit against the school despite the denial of their petition for a restraining order.

The women filed a complaint in U.S. District Court last week charging that the women's athletic department at Western was being shortchanged in operating funds, tuition waivers and scholarships.

Judge Robert D. Morgan dismissed a request that Western be restrained from allocating additional money until it has a plan for complying with Title IX of the Education Act of 1972.

The law requires equal educational opportunity for all by 1978.

The defendants, the Illinois Board of Higher Education, Western's Board of Governors, the school president and provost have 20 days to answer the complaint.

The plaintiffs' attorney, John H. Bisbee, said he hopes to resolve the issue within the 20 days, but if not, the litigation will continue.

The suit charges that women make up 40 per cent of enrollment in Western athletics, but the women's athletic department gets only 18 per cent of all money spent on sports.

Circle profs petition Walker

CHICAGO (AP) — A petition from some 400 faculty members of the University of Illinois Chicago Circle campus asking for a bigger share of the state budget for higher education has been set to Gov. Daniel Walker and the General Assembly.

The petition also threatens that the faculty may seek "other methods" for raises.

John Pappademos, a spokesman for the American Federation of Teachers, an AFL-CIO affiliate, declined to define "other methods," but said the group wants a stronger voice in the state budget-making process.

"There is serious concern about their deteriorating economic position," Pappademos said.

The faculty is facing a average salary increase of only 2 per cent for next year.

The petition charges that although enrollments have increased by 80 per cent, there has been a decline in the proportion of higher education funds in the state budget over the past five years, according to Pappademos.

Sexual awareness workshop to offer helpful alternatives

By Chris Moenich
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A candle-lit evening, group discussions and exploration of alternative lifestyles will highlight the intensive weekend sexual awareness workshop.

The workshop, offered through the Counseling Center and Human Sexuality Services in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education, will focus on how people look at their own and others' sexuality.

Jim Perkins, director, and Prevention and Health Maintenance Program staff member said, "We will deal with feelings and attitudes not discussed openly in the outside world."

The workshop, June 25-27, is under the direction of a six-person leadership team. They will discuss their own life styles and struggles as well as present alternative lifestyles through films, tapes, slides and discussions.

Carbondale gets set for wheelchair pageant

The City of Carbondale and SIU will be co-hosts to the first Miss Wheelchair Illinois Pageant June 26. The weekend of June 25-27 has been proclaimed Miss Wheelchair Illinois Weekend in Carbondale by Mayor Neal Eckert.

The pageant is a prelude to the fifth annual Miss Wheelchair America Pageant to be held in September in Columbus, Ohio. Miss Wheelchair Illinois, who will be selected on the basis of the degree of her handicap and her ability to function as a productive member of society within the limitations of that handicap, will advance to the national pageant.

Gas cutbacks planned

CHICAGO (AP)—Nine gas companies in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Missouri face curtailment of deliveries this year from the pipeline subsidiary of Peoples Gas Co.

Deliveries by the Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America will be reduced 5 per cent this winter to the nine companies, a utility spokesman said Wednesday.

The impact on the affected companies or on consumer prices is hard to determine since the companies generally all have other suppliers, the spokesman said.

The companies are the Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., which serves Chicago; the North Shore Gas Co., which serves northern Chicago suburbs; Northern Illinois Gas Co., which serves additional Chicago suburbs; Northern Indiana Public Service Co., of Hammond; Illinois Power Co., Decatur; Interstate Power Co., Dubuque, Iowa; Iowa Electric Light and Power Co., of Cedar Rapids; the Iowa and Illinois Gas and Electric Co., of Davenport, Iowa; and the Mississippi River Transmission Co., of St. Louis.

The reduced deliveries are necessary since the pipeline company is meeting difficulty in getting new gas supplies to keep up with demand, the spokesman said.

Natural Gas Pipeline supplies 49 gas companies in the Upper Mid-

"We want to let people know that there are alternatives," Perkins said. "Everyone involved can then evaluate these and from there work out their own needs."

Perkins added that the workshop provides an atmosphere congruent to open discussion. Those on the leadership teams are open and create an environment the participants can trust.

"The workshops are successful," he said. "People find the information they need for making decisions for preventing complications like anxiety."

There have been no follow-ups after the workshops, which began three years ago. Perkins said the workshops have had an impact, though. Most participants come with an idea about an alternative lifestyle and the workshop provides information in the direction they are moving in.

Seven or eight films, slides, and tapes will explore masturbation,

Among the judges for the Miss Wheelchair America pageant will be Shirley R. Holmes, first runner up to Miss Wheelchair America in 1975. Mrs. Holmes is a Carbondale resident and SIU-C graduate.

The state pageant has attracted five entrants thus far—four from Southern Illinois and one from the Chicago area, according to John Holmes, academic advisor for the SIU-C department of radio-television.

Both the dinner and pageant are open to the public, Holmes said. Cost of the dinner will be $5. There will be no admission charge for the pageant.

west. Along with the North Shore Gas Co. and Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., it is a subsidiary of Peoples Gas Co. In another development, the spokesman also said Chicago area residents can expect gas bills next winter to be as much as 20 per cent higher than this past winter.

homo- and hetero-sexual relationships. Perkins said the different media will present sexuality on all levels.

There will be large and primary group discussions. The workshop has a 24 person limit that will be broken up into four primary groups. They will be self-selecting and last the entire weekend.

Friday, June 25, will be devoted to sensuality. Perkins said there will be an opportunity to explore sensuality through films, tapes and by creation of a sensual candle-lit environment.

On Saturday, June 26, there will be discussion among primary and large groups. In the evening the participants will break up into exclusive male and female groups. After they talk among themselves, each group will confront the opposite sex with questions brought up in the smaller groups.

SGAC presents strained show

Michael P. Mullen
Daily Egyptian
Entertainment Editor

Any opportunity to see live music outside of a bar in Carbondale should be looked upon as a rare treat. Sharing a small, hot room, paying dearly for each beer along with several hundred other humans sardines, just to see some live rock is not what you would call optimum conditions for musical enjoyment and good times. SGAC's continuing effort to "take it to the streets" with free concerts on campus should be applauded. Unfortunately, SGAC's effort can't be classified as successful.

At the end of last semester, SGAC scheduled Wishbone Ash for a term ending concert behind Woody Hall, only to have the whole thing blown off by the weather. SGAC didn't want Wishbone to set up in the rain, and according to Wishbone's manager Wishbone decided that the rooms available in the Student Center were too small to hold their act and it would take too long to set up anyway. Carbondale, appetites wet for live rock, free and outdoor, went away with a bad taste in their mouths.

Tuesday night, SGAC sought to get off on the right foot with a freebie featuring the local band Chariott. Again, things didn't quite work out.

The concert was originally scheduled for the back of Woody Hall, but rain was forecast. In their desire to please the student audience, SGAC held the band to the original plan as long as possible in the hope that the weather would clear. It didn't, and the concert was moved to the Student Center Roman Room. It was after 9 p.m. before the band got all its gear together and began the concert originally scheduled for 8 p.m.

Considering the circumstances, a good size crowd hung around to listen, but they didn't stay long after the band started playing.

A Review

A three piece band, Chariott plays synthesizer-type English rock (their repertoire included songs by Jethro Tull, King Crimson, Robin Trower and Emerson, Lake and Palmer), and their sound is dependant on the full efficiency of their instruments. The logistical red-tape (Chariott had to go through to get set up may not have been the full reason for the overall hollowing they suffered from, cut it undoubtedly had a lot to do with it, and had to blame in part for the departure of the bulk of the audience. Then again, the audience may have been looking for another type of music.

On the whole, Chariott isn't a bad band. Dan Nolan plays guitar with a spordic flash, standing out on the Trower and Hendrix songs, Jim Haidinyak played a combination of ARP String Ensemble, Moog and, when it was working, Hammond B-3 organ. Haidinyak handled this array of keyboards expertly, especially on Emerson, Lake and Palmer's "Lucky Man" and King Crimson's "Court of the Crimson King." John Link, percussionist, used a massive drum kit with taste and skill throughout.

SGAC has the opportunity to do something good for the student body with the free concert concept. Hopefully, more of these events will be scheduled. There are enough local bands that should be only too happy to play, and with the selection available (Shawn Colvin, The Dakota Band, Highway, Big Twist and Chariott), should be large enough to satisfy every musical taste. A band on the grass behind Woody beats a band in the bars.

Faithful Rundgren does turnaround

By Keith Tuxhorn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

What would you do if you bought an album half-filled with remakes of old songs so precisely done that you couldn't tell the differences between them and the originals?

And what if that album came from an avant-grade rocker who's suddenly switched back to playing his popular pop style of several years ago?

And what if that artist, who's always packed his album covers and liners full of lyrics and notes, offers us this album with a spotless cover and liner, save for title and personnel? With all these changes in one man, what would you do? Probably give up on him.

Which is where the title of Todd Rundgren's new album comes in. With "Faithful," he is testing the reliability of his own diehard followers by presenting a complete turnaround from his previous direction. Of course, the fans should be aware of this by now, since the Runt hasn't had a predictable album for several years.

Side One's faithfulness comes in the form of Todd's recreation of a half-dozen oldies. They include "Good Vibrations," "Rain," and "Strawberry Fields Forever," and come from 1966 and '67, two years before Rundgren made his break with the Nazis.

These cuts should be applauded for their exactness of imitation—"Good Vibrations" sounds so much like the Beach Boys it's scary—but tends to get tiresome after a while. After all, this is a new Todd Rundgren album, and not another oldies collection.

But the side is once more interesting in the fact that it seems Todd has picked the songs to reflect his current philosophies. Reincarnation, inner peace and the importance of individuality are all stressed throughout the six songs. It's a shame that only one—the Yardbirds' "Happenings Ten Years' Time Ago"—can really stand up to repeated playings.

But turn the record over and there are six cuts that just won't quit. While the music may not be as aggressive as it has been on the last few albums, it is every bit as complex and satisfying.

Even more gratifying than the music are the lyrics, which rival last year's "Initiation" in their depth and eloquence. After complaining for three verses about people's predictability in "Cliche," Todd shamelessly states, "And I say what I say when I know there's really nothing left to say, still I play that old cliche." His optimism shows as he sings, "take a dive off your ivory tower and fall—everyone will catch you" in "Love of the Common Man."

The gut-level feelings of "Black and White" and "The Verb 'To Love'" make them the strongest cuts on the side, the former for its grinding and basic rock sound, the latter for its moodiness, projecting more than "Don't You Ever Learn" and "The Last Ride."

The only other hindrance to "Faithful" is its lack of lyrics and liner information. Rundgren's voice is not the easiest to decipher, and it's a shame to let these fine lyrics go unprinted and unknown.

This is the most easily listenable collection of songs from Todd we've had since "Something—Anything," and what's more, their compositional strength far outweighs the previous album's. And if the listener can make it through those technically good but musically unsurprising remakes, then "Faithful" is an album not to be missed.

Suspect Salmonella in contaminated dog food

WASHINGTON (AP) The Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday that Ralston-Purina Co. is recalling an unknown quantity of dog food allegedly contaminated with a bacteria commonly associated with human food poisoning.

The FDA said it learned of the problem involving Purina Chuck Wagon Dog Food, chunky beef flavor, from the Milwaukee, Wis., Health Department following a report that a woman and her three and one-half month old daughter had fallen ill. The dog food was found to be contaminated with salmonella bacteria, which can result in fever, malaise and intestinal disorders, the agency said.

The FDA said it believed that the woman first handled the dog food and then the family's food, transferring the bacteria.

The FDA said it did not know when Ralston-Purina began the recall of an unknown quantity of five-pound bags of Chuck Wagon food from the upper Midwestern states. The recalled food packages were coded N05TB although the FDA said the letter B may or may not appear on packages.

Nazi propaganda style topic of fall class

By Dan Kening
Student Writer

The tactics used by the Nazis to influence public opinion and enforce public obedience to the Nazi principles will be the subject of Speech 421 offered this fall. "Nazi Rhetoric and Propaganda," the title of the course, will be taught by Randall Bytwerk, assistant professor of speech. Bytwerk said he intends to examine the techniques of Nazi propaganda through speeches, books and newspapers, posters and films.

Bytwerk said he first became interested in Nazi propaganda techniques as a graduate student at Northwestern University, where he did his dissertation on Nazi anti-semitism.

He has had papers on the subject read at speech conventions, and a paper published in the Quarterly Journal of Speech on "Rhetorical Aspects of the Nazi Meeting, 1926-1933."

The course will briefly examine the historical aspects of Nazism as well as study the speeches and writings of Adolf Hitler, Joseph Goebbels and Julius Streicher.

Through the study of the various techniques used by the Nazis, Bytwerk hopes to find out why they were so successful in forcing their beliefs on German society.

"Some of the same general principles are used in advertising and politics in this country," Bytwerk said. "Although I don't mean to imply that the Nazi objectives were the same as those in politics or advertising."

Expressing a fascination more with the tactics rather than the results of Nazi propaganda, Bytwerk said he hopes no one believes he subscribes to those principles.

"Sometimes people look at the poster of Hitler on the wall of my office and get the wrong idea," he said. "But if one knows the process, one is less likely to fall victim to the message."

Southern hosts gymnastic camp

By Scott Burnside
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Steps are being taken at the Arena this week for panning gymnastic gold at the 1980 Olympics.

These steps are in the form of an Olympic Development Camp for young gymnasts. The camp is co-sponsored by the U.S. Gymnastic Federation (USGF) and the U.S. Olympic Committee. Southern's gymnastic coach Bill Meade is coordinating the camp for the federation. He is also the chairman of the Olympic Gymnastic committee.

Meade said 15 boys from the ages 12 to 18 are entered in the third annual camp. These gymnasts are the top finishers in the 1976 USGF Junior Olympic Championships. Five are from the 12-14 division and ten from the 15-18 competition.

One of the main purposes for the two week camp is to introduce new compulsory exercises. These exercises will be used in the all-around competition at the 1980 Olympics.

Meade said the camp will also introduce physical and psychological training which will prepare the gymnast for making the Olympic team.

Program director for the camp is Masayuki Watanabe, assistant coach of the University of California gymnastic team. He is also coordinator of the Junior Olympic Program. Assisting Watanabe is Paul Ziort of Oklahoma University, Rich Roxal of the University of Washington and W. Mike of San Jose.

This camp has a strenuous program. The gymnasts work on their strength in the mornings, along with lectures. In the afternoon from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. the entrants drill and work on the various apparatus. In the evening camp officials either lecture or gymnastic movies are given.

Meade said another similar Olympic development camp is set for December. This camp will introduce the new exercises to university competitors.

These camps, which have been in existence for three years, have already made progress on the Olympic front.

Meade said two of the top rated gymnasts in Olympic competition were in the first camp. Tom Beach, University of California-Berkeley, and Bart Connor, Morton Grove, are currently second and fifth respectively in all-around Olympic competition.

Olympic chairman Meade is looking for a more-than-respectable showing for the gymnastic team at Montreal.

"I'm really high on the team this year," Meade said. "We had to compete in Germany with twelve other teams in order to qualify and we finished first."

For this Olympics, gymnastic teams finishing in the top six places during the 1972 World Games automatically qualified for the 1976 Olympics. The other six teams making up the Olympic field came out of the recent Germany trials.

Meade said the first six teams, out of the World Games competition were Japan, Russia, East Germany, Rumania, West Germany, and Hungary. A U.S. team has beaten both Rumania and West Germany's Olympic teams this year.

The final Olympic selection will take place at Penn State University on June 25-26. Meade says he believes the final team will probably be the squad they took to Germany for the trials.

Southern won't have a gymnast on the team. Meade said that former Saluki Jim Ivceck just missed making the team. Ivceck broke an arm last year and Meade said the gymnast has never completely recovered.

Future SIU teams may indirectly benefit from this camp.

Meade said it never hurts to have gymnasts of this caliber using SIU facilities. "The kids get to know our facilities, work with our kids and plus I get to work with them some."

Running at the same time in the Arena is the SIU college all-around camp, with 15 gymnasts participating.

Meade said this was the first time for the camp and the response was good. Athletes are here from universities such as the University of Minnesota, Temple University and SIU.

Southern has four gymnasts in this camp. They are Kevin Munz, Rick Adams, Phil Savage and Kim Wall. The camp costs $100 and Meade said the athletes are paying their own way.

Next week the annual SIU gymnastic camp for high schoolers begins. About 600 athletes are entered from 33 states and Canada.

"This year at the state meet, we figured that over 50 per cent of the finalists were from our camp," Meade said.

Cubs wash out Cincinnati, 5-3

CINCINNATI (AP) — "I knew I wasn't going to go out there a third time, there was going to be another pitcher," said Chicago Pitcher Bill Benham after umpires called the rained delayed game Wednesday in the seventh inning five hours after it started.

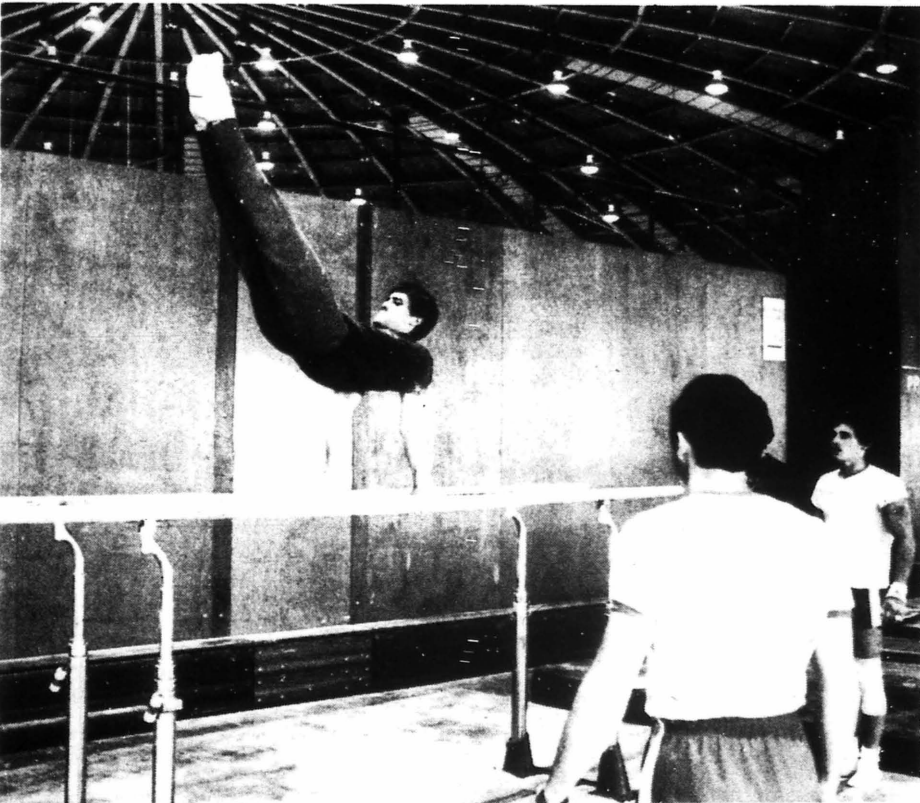

Benham, 6-3, now owns both victories over Cincinnati by the Cubs in 19 games since the 1974 season, taking the second one 5-3 Wednesday.

"I thought the umpires were very fair," said Reds Manager Sparky Anderson, adding that if the game were allowed to be completed, "I think we were at the point where we would have won."

Benham said his arm was stiffening after the third lengthy delay in the game in which the Cubs had jumped to a 5-0 first winning lead while Cincinnati was chipping away looking for another come-from-behind victory.

Benham gave up seven hits, including Joe Morgan's 12th home run of the season.

Five of the Cubs had at least a pair of hits in the game. Bill Madlock had three and there were two hits by Joe Wallis, Jose Cardenal, Manny Trillo and Steve Swisher.

Mike Hicks, of New Haven, Conn. works out on the parallel during the Olympic development camp being held at the SIU Arena. Hicks and his 14 fellow camp members were all top finishers in the recent Junior

Olympic championships. The camp is an effort to maintain high standards for the 1980 Olympics. (Staff photo by Daryl D. Littlefield)

Swimmers contend for Montreal trip

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Uncle Sam's swimmers opened five days of competition Wednesday to determine which bunch of teen-agers will go to the Olympics in Montreal and challenge the rising strength of other nations.

Shirley Babashoff, 19, Mission Viejo, Calif., finds herself without a world record after once holding three in freestyle events. The East Germans surpassed all of them. But Miss Babashoff owns an Olympic gold medal, which she won in a relay event in 1972, when she was 15.

Tim Shaw, the 1975 Sullivan Award winner as the outstanding amateur athlete in the United States, faces tough competition in the men's freestyle events. Shaw, 1975 world champion in the 200, 400 and 1,500-meter freestyles, starred in the collegiate championships and then failed in the AAU competition.

Reportedly he was having some physical troubles, but he hopefully has fully recovered after some special treatments.

John Naber of the University of Southern California ranks as the best of the United States backstrokers and a possibility in the freestyle.

If he qualifies in the backstroke, as expected, there will be the challenge of East Germany's Roland Matthes, who has won the two backstroke titles in both the 1968 and 1972 Olympics.

While the United States men still hold their fair share of world records, with Mark Spitz still having one, the American women don't have a single world mark. Miss Babashoff lost her 400-meter record to East Germany's Barbara Krause in that nation's Olympic trials.

"I would like to regain the world records," the 19-year-old Californian said. "I'd be happy with one and I think the 400 is the best opportunity."

While the U.S. women must concentrate on beating East Germans in the Olympics, Naber says that many nations pose challenges to the U.S. in the men's events, although he admits the American squad should be superior overall.

There are a host of outstanding freestylers including Shaw, Bruce Furniss, the world record holder in the 200-meter event at 1:50.32, and Jim Montgomery of Indiana University. Shaw holds the world record in the 400-meter free at 3:53.31 and Montgomery is the fastest at 100 in 50.59.

For each of the five days, there will be morning preliminaries at the Belmont Plaza pool with finals in the evening to determine those making the United States team.

Generally either the first three or first two in each event qualify for the team with some additional members added for relays.

On opening day, both the men and women will have their own competition in the 200-meter breaststroke and the 200-meter freestyle.

John Hencken of Stanford, the world record holder and defending Olympic champion, is favored in the men's 200-meter breaststroke along with Rick Colella of Seattle, who also was a Munich finalist.
