Simon heads panel to study options for teacher merit pay

By Glady Lee
Staff Writer

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, Thursday was appointed chairman of a bipartisan task force on teacher merit pay which will examine ways to encourage quality teaching, while also recognizing teachers' concerns.

"The whole problem of education is not going to be solved by this one thing," Simon said Thursday. "But there is a problem with attracting, as well as keeping, good teachers, and merit pay may be a part of the answer.

The task force, appointed by Rep. Carl D. Linus, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, is made up of 30 members representing Congress, school administrations and teachers associations, according to David Carle, a Simon aide. James Sanders, an attorney from Marion and president of the Illinois School Boards Association, will also be a member of the task force, Carle said.

Recommendations will be made in two dimensions and secondary school districts on Wednesday that made be implemented, Carle said. The task force will hold hearings and complete a report by Sept. 30.

"I expect that by and large, with a couple of exceptions, no merit pay programs exist on the elementary and secondary education levels, although the situation is beginning to draw major issue in the presidential campaign."

Committee OKs rail project funds

By John Schrag

Three major parts of Carbondale's railroad relocation project are making it faster into reality. As the U.S. House Appropriations Committee on Wednesday approved to $67.7 million in federal funding for the project.

The funding proposal, which now must be considered by the full House and Senate, would provide money that would be used by the two projects for three projects that would clear the way for the eventual depression of the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad tracks through and around Carbondale. If passed by Congress, the approval of the railroad to the federal funds for the final engineering plans for the rail depression and construction of the $2.4 million temporary trainway that would allow rail service to continue.

The project would also fund construction of a $2.3 million pedestrian overpass across the Bloomington and Carbondale.

City inspection finds halls in compliance with code

Saluki Hall owner Wes Walton, warned last month for nine city buildings for violations, he was made all corrections ordered by the city and the SIU-C off-campus housing office.

Saluki Hall faced possible fines and loss of its approved off-campus housing status if the violations were not corrected. Violations found by city inspectors, May 1st month included: buggy wiring, insufficient lighting, clogged plumbing and unsanitary bathrooms and kitchens.

John Yov, director of the city's code division, said Thursday that an inspection made last week showed that the building is now up to code. Yow said that Walton has ordered new lights to take care of the Eastern Wood Rat fight

By Robert Green

The EASTERN WOOD rat may not be the most fascinating of nature's creatures, but it doesn't try to be.

The little brown rodent is quite content to live a quiet and unobtrusive existence in the rocky crevices of the Larue-Pine Hills Area of the Shawnee National Forest, about 40 miles southwest of Carbondale.

The rat builds its nests of grass and stems in the crevices, feeds on nuts and fruits and basically minds its own business. Unlike its cousin, the Norwegian rat, the wood rat has no "home" human company or the trappings of civilization. But it also is now believed to be the only habitat for the wood rat in Illinois. Since 1959, Klimstra and his students have conducted nest counts in the area and he said human encroachment has caused the wood rat population to fall sharply, from about 230 nests in 1959 to just 30 as of last fall.

"It is the most critically endangered form of animal we have in Illinois," Klimstra said. "And it is largely the activities of man that have expedited its demise in the state."

Klimstra calls the environmental assessment of the project, "hopelessly inadequate," because, he said, it fails to properly examine the possible effects of the project on the wood rat and on rare plants in the area.

However, all may not be lost for Woody just yet. Shawnee Forest Supervisor Kenneth Henderson said last week that as a result of concerns expressed by the public on a recent tour of the proposed project, the forest service has decided to take another look and submit another environmental assessment.

With a lot of luck, and some help from his friends, the eastern wood rat may still have a chance in Illinois.
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Supreme Court on Thursday temporarily barred rebel aldermen from taking the helm of the Chicago City Council until justices decide what to do with appeals from the political struggle.

The ruling was a temporary — but minority — victory for Mayor Richard M. Daley, whose lawyers earlier this week urged the court to maintain the status quo pending resolution of legal challenges.

Students to lobby for tax boost

By Paula J. Finlay
Staff Writer

About 14 SIU-C students will be in Springfield Tuesday to lobby for passage of a tax increase legislation. Undergraduate Student Association President Bruce Joseph said Thursday that the representatives and 14 of the students will be on hand to lobby for passage of the tax increase.

"Those are the ones who will be meeting with Joseph said, adding that when the students arrive in Springfield the Senate may already be in session. We'll have to go in and get them from there," he said. The legislators need to be reminded that students will be affected by the failure of a tax increase, Joseph said. "There's nothing like you just lost a vote to make them up, bit," he said.

The Illinois Student Association organized a statewide lobbying effort last April. Joseph said, "Twenty-one students from SIU-C were among the nearly 200 students from state universities that took part in the event. This time all 14 undergraduate and three graduate students from SIU-C will make the trip. It's important in that we're going for the same purpose," Joseph said. "It's dissimilar in that it's not state-wide. We're just going to go up on our own. Joseph said there are now fewer legislators opposed or ambivalent to a tax increase than in April. "Our troop is smaller, but our task is also smaller," he said. It is important to be up-to-date on what is happening in the legislature, Joseph said, and a "healthy stack of information" will help them be informed. Also, the group plans to be on hand as many of the minute-to-minute changes as possible, he said.

"There's no substitute for an education. We can't just stumble up to Springfield and try to lobby effectively," the said. "Our best way to lobby is to give them information and to be informed on current legislation." Joseph said plans call for either governmental relations officer Keith Sanders or Vice Chancellor James Brown to give the group the most current information about the status of the tax legislation Monday. And when they arrive in Springfield, an ISU legislative representative will again update the group on any developments made Tuesday, he said.

City officials hope that passage of the appropriation, the largest for a railroad relocation project in the nation, would give them an advantage in securing the additional $3 million needed for depressing the tracks. They figure that congressmen will be more likely to allocate money for the depression of tracks and bonds have already been spent on a temporary trainway and engineering plans for the depression.

The depression, which would be 2.06 miles long and 72 feet wide, would lower the tracks four to 60-foot deep through the downtown area.

Richard Falvo, acting chairman of the department of physiology and pharmacology, has been selected as one of the new associate deans of the Graduate School.

Falvo, an associate professor in the School of Medicine, is expected to start at SIU-C on July 1, according to Barbara Hamson, Graduate School dean. Hansen said another associate dean will be selected later this year.

Denise Leitner, former associate dean, will remain in that job Wednesday and John Jackson, the other associate dean, will return to his previous position in the Political Science Department at the end of the month.

Hansen said that they are in the process of restructuring the graduate school program, and that the responsibilities of the new associate dean will be different than those of the outgoing administrators.

The 40-year-old Falvo was selected from a pool of six candidates. Hansen said that the five other finalists will be asked to submit new candidates for the other associate dean position.

If tax increase fails, tuition boost will hurt

SBI CHANCELLOR Kenneth Shaw and SIU President Albert Somit are firing warning shots again. They are again alerting the University community that extra tuition increases are a possibility if Gov. Thompson's tax increase proposal gets scotched. It is difficult to say which would be the greater tragedy — the failure of the tax plan or another boost in tuition.

Students and income tax increases are the only revenue sources for the University other than a tuition increase that Governor Thompson's tax increase proposal, as scar as it is, may be the only way to save sizable state support to SIU. Revenues are diminishing from all sources, as indicated by 1984 state university tax figures.

Contrary to a locally published report, sales tax collections statewide are up nearly 3 percent in the first seven months of 1984. The Consumer Price Index rose 3.3 percent, making the collected taxes worth even less. And, according to the SIU department of the dig in sales tax revenue is reflective of similar decreases from almost all revenue sources.

OF FIVE Illinois cities particularly hard-hit by the recession — Chicago, Joliet, Rockford and East St. Louis — only one, Waukegan, posted an increase in sales tax revenue. So evidence of a turnaround in the economy — and a subsequent increase in tax revenues — is not in sight.

State residents who oppose the tax plan should realize that increases in income taxes are more equitable than most other tax boosts. Income taxes are income-proportional, so the poor will not be disproportionately soaked. An increase in the sales tax, on the other hand, is relatively equally applied by all purchasers at the same rate regardless of their ability to pay.

And those in the Legislature who would hold out against the governor's tax plan should realize the bind the state would be in without it.

But if the plan fails, the University should in turn realize the gravity: SIU students would be in if another tuition increase is initiated.

THE 15 PERCENT tuition boost initiated recently by the Board of Trustees may already have priced some students out of University classes. For example, we have noticed a sparseness of students on campus during summer term.

Tuition increases are approaching the point of diminishing return. Fewer students will remain at SIU-C to pay higher tuition rates — thus gains in revenue from an increase would be cancelled out.

So we suggest that Chancellor Shaw and President Somit continue actualizing the University's increase plan — but consider means of operating the University other than a tuition increase if it fails. Otherwise, there'll likely be fewer students around to hear the next warning shots go off.

Keep External Affairs

It's budget time again, time for cuts, time for re-evaluation and time for some people to put themselves in a good light. Only one thing has kept within last year's budget and generated benefit from outside government; that is External Affairs. This program is run by two prominent, hard-working and well-connected people from here in Southern Illinois, Clyde Chaste and Jack O'Dell. Both are students and their lives helping build this University into what it is today.

Oh, yes, we've heard about the University that Southern Illinois is creating, that SIU-C is creating. We've heard from Southern Illinois for 33 years, we've heard when the legislature retired from the Legislature, he has been the head of External Affairs. He went off to his alma mater, the Southern Illinois and in the Illinois General Assembly has had an immense impact, a good idea is upon this University. He knows what's going on and how to get it.

Jack O'Dell is Clyde's right-hand man. He is the current president of Southern Illinois. He has been working in conjunction with the University for many years. He is the workhorse of External Affairs. He goes out to the communities of Southern Illinois to discover how the University can help them. He helps find grants for community development. He works with industry in preparing their members for their jobs and how they can serve the Southern Illinois state has upon them. He talks with the people of Southern Illinois and he brings them to the University and communicates to those people about how the University can help them.

As you see, External Affairs give an infinite amount to the entire area, as well as the University.

I beg both Clyde and Jack for a long time. I have seen them in action and know how they have fought to get things done and get people into action. Their work with External Affairs is an invaluable asset of this University.

And as our cuts and tuition increases pending, their jobs, as well as External Affairs and work, are in jeopardy.

The impact that External Affairs have on the University and the State of Illinois is infinite. It makes the University the money spent for their work.

If programs are to be cut or eliminated, External Affairs should be left intact. — Murphy C. Hart, Senior, Law Student.

Check both sides of parking hassles

I'm getting pretty fed up with students complaining about our parking facilities at SIU-C. Everyone keeps griping that there is a lack of parking spaces, and that our parking division is terrible. I couldn't agree less. As students of higher education we should be preparing to go both out of college and into the work force. As future business people we must learn to park our cars, and deal efficiently. This is what is expected of us. It's a cold world, and to make it, we must learn to take others' parking space by force. This is the only way to survive.

I am proud to say I am a parking system that is just, reasonable, and most of all — compassionate. I'll pay my tickets with a smile. — Alani B. Beard, Senior, Political Science
Former county prosecutor to head consumer division

Former Jackson County State's Attorney Howard Hood has been named chief of the office of General Counsel and Chief for the Consumer Protection Division.

A Carbondale native, Hood served as state's attorney from 1973 to 1979, during which time he handled fraud cases. He holds a bachelor's degree in English from SIUC and a law degree from the University of Illinois College of Law in 1972.

In a news release issued this week, Hood was chosen for the $47,500-per-year post because of his trial and courtroom experience.

"We are fortunate to attract a person with Howard Hood's reputation and solid legal track record to head our Consumer Protection Division," said former Attorney General Gordon's consumer protection chief said on June 20, 1981, announcing Hood's appointment.

Hood, 43, left his post as the new chief. Assistant Attorney General's office in the consumer protection division. Grassroots movement growing over possible Shawnee sell-off

By Robert Green

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The movement to save the Shawnee Forest, the state's largest tract of public land, has gained momentum in recent months. A grassroots movement has been growing public concern and debate over the fate of the Shawnee Forest, which is designated as a federal land. The movement is gaining momentum in the Metropolis area, where a group calling itself the Save Our Shawnee Committee has been circulating petitions against the proposed sale.

A resolution passed by the group condemns privitization of the forest because it would cause soil erosion, upset the ecology, reduce recreational areas, and allow for the possibility of strip mining, nuclear and/or chemical waste dumping, and uncontrolled timber practices.

Forest Supervisor Kenneth Henderson acknowledged last week that if allowed to proceed, privatization could open the door to the type of mining and commercial interests feared by some concerned citizens.

"The legislation will determine the criteria as to what type of lands would be studied, and if so, how the lands could be used," Henderson said. "Typically if land is returned to private ownership we would have no more authority over it.".

The targeted Shawnee Forest lands consist of 15 sites, some large, some small, and sale of the lands would reduce the forest from a sprawling patchwork of landholdings into four isolated units.

Henderson said the scattered ownership pattern is especially common in many eastern forests and he said as a result such a scheme "is much harder to maintain." Mary Bresler, a Carbondale resident and a board member on the Illinois Environmental Council, said her main concern is the effect of the sale on flora and fauna in targeted sale sites.

She pointed out that one of the proposed sale sites, the Fountain Bluff area near the Mississippi River, supports nearly 90 different kinds of ferns and flowering plants and is also one of only two areas in Illinois inhabited by the eastern wood rat.

Mr. Bresler, who represents the IEC on the State Forestry Planning Committee, also expressed concern about the proposed loss of recreation areas and possible renewal of soil erosion problems if forest lands were placed in private hands.

Mistakes in land usage by many farmers before and during the Great Depression caused severe soil erosion in much of the land that is now the Shawnee Forest. Because the land was relatively unproductive, civic groups in the 1930s began an active campaign to obtain land in the area until the official establishment of the national forest in 1939.

Warren Bresler: "After the wise stewardship of the land all these years, privitization will only encourage a return to such conditions to Shawnee."

IEC has already expressed grave reservations about any proposed sale, and other groups who have spoken out against the sale include the Southern Illinois Audubon Society and the Illinois Nature Preserves Commission.

Energy technology seminar was no Mickey Mouse course

By Brian O'Brien
Student Writer

After receiving certificates of completion from Mickey Mouse himself, 49 SHC students recently returned from Walt Disney World's EPCOT Center, where they participated in a seminar program titled "The Amazing Disney Run Our World." The seminar was part of a travel study tour offered through the Department of Continuing Education and sponsored by the Design Department and the Renewable Energy Resource Group, a recently formed campus organization.

The seminar, the first of its kind for both Disney and SHC, was coordinated by Richard Archer and Larry Busch, instructors in the Design Department.

"I know that there were several universities who applied to Disney for the program," Archer said, "but we were the first university in the country to have one approved.

The seminar, held June 1 to 8, gave students a unique opportunity to learn first-hand many of the innovative systems and technologies that comprise EPCOT. Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow, a term coined by the late Walt Disney in the early 1960s to describe his plan to construct a "window to the future." His dream came true when EPCOT Center opened its doors in October 1982.

Major topics of discussion at the five-day EPCOT seminar included: energy management, transportation, communications, computer applications, horticulture, landscape planning, hydroponics, and aquaculture.

Archer called the program a big success and expressed hope that the trip would be repeated soon.

"EPCOT is a fascinating place," he said, "Nowhere can a person see so many technologies showcased in one place. We would have had to take the students to at least 15 other places to expose them to what they saw there."

"The trip gave students a chance to be exposed to the technologies that are out here working," he said.

In addition to visiting EPCOT, the participants traveled to the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla., and to the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. The group returned to Carbondale Sunday.

Students taking the seminar receive four credit hours of design after completing a daily log describing their experiences and writing a paper on the potential applications of the technologies at EPCOT to their own communities, Archer said.
Tom Allen, chairman of Project Buckle-Up, shows Joyce Poole how to work the child car seat as Debra, 6 months, gets accustomed to the safety features of the restraint.

Project Buckle-Up initiated; infant restraint seats available

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

Pregnant women, fathers, mothers, volunteers and a baby populated conference rooms 1 and 2 at Memorial Hospital Wednesday night when Project Buckle-Up kicked off its program to lend and promote infant restraint devices to parents in Jackson County.

Not all of the families who originally signed up to receive seats showed up, but those who did went home seat-in-hand with the knowledge necessary to use it properly.

The meeting was the result of four months of planning which began when a law was passed that requires parents to properly secure young children when they are riding in a car.

The law will take effect July 1. The meetings will continue at 7 p.m. Wednesdays at Memorial Hospital and at 9 a.m. Fridays at the Jackson County Health Department until all 300 of the infant seats have been issued, Tom Allen, Project Buckle Up chairman, said. Appointments are required.

Persons interested in renting a seat can call 694-3141 to reserve one. A $10 rental fee is charged, with $5 refunded when the seat is returned in good condition, Allen said.

The infant seats are intended for children who weigh up to 20 pounds. They are rear-facing and semi-reclining. Children over 20 pounds must still be secured. Buckle-Up offers information to help guide parents who wish to purchase car seats for that purpose.

Allen said that in the future he hopes to introduce a Phase Two of the project which will allow Project Buckle-Up to purchase toddler restraint seats for children over 20 pounds.

Project Buckle-Up has received $3,400 in donations and $3,908 from the Illinois Department of Transportation to buy the seats, furnish maintenance and for printing costs.

Project Buckle-Up was formed through a combined effort of the Jackson County Health Department, Memorial Hospital of Carbondale and interested Jackson County residents.

Black Knights to perform

The Black Knights Drum and Bugle Corps will present a brief concert at 7:30 p.m. Father’s Day, in Baldwin Hall in the Thompson Point Residential Area on campus.

Tom Isbell of Murphysboro, a member of the Black Knight’s board of directors, said the impromptu performance is the Corps way of saying “Thank you, SIU!” for helping the Corps stage their summer training camps.

The performance comes three days before the start of the Black Knights’ national touring competition season and follows the last weekend of practice and rehearsal at McAndrew Stadium for the 88-member group.

“The band members range in age from 16 to 21, and we have a few who are students at SIU-C, SIU-Edwardsville and the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign,” Isbell said. “They are mostly from the Carbondale area, but there are also bands in the United States and West Frankfort.”

The Black Knights are said to be among the nation’s budgeted drum and bugle units in the country and depend heavily on volunteer help and donated services.

But they’ve done well in competition.

“In our Class ‘A’ at national competition the last year, we came in third in the United States and went on to the international competition where we finished in eighth place,” Isbell said.

“The band is determined by the size of the band and the annual budget. Our budget this year is just over $40,000, and the next largest band in our class has a budget of $200,000.’’

Later this summer, the Black Knights travel to Missouri, Colorado, Tennessee and to Disneyworld at Orlando, Fla., said the public is welcome to watch the practice sessions at McAndrew Stadium this week and invites the public to attend the concert Sunday.

Parking will be available at the SIU-C Communications Building.

'Octopussy' is a typical 007 movie

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

The latest in a long line of James Bond films, "Octopussy" opens with the usual Stout of nude women holding guns, proudly flaunting sleek bodies and perfectly adorned pouting faces. Perhaps this is better than the usual introduction to a Bond film where the women are merely nude silhouettes doing flips across the screen. Is seeing their faces less dehumanizing, or is it more of a camera invasion?

Even if you've never been to a James Bond film, you're probably well aware that women and guns are cornersstones of the plot and setting. A James Bond film is an ultimate fantasy land for the ultimate fantasy land for adolescent boys. It guarantees male involvement of an octopus in every scene, a few brilliant lines of dialogue, a set of 14 women trained to spy and assassinate. Even the female characters in this film seem to accept their roles as objects in an adolescent boy's sexual fantasy. They are quite natural. For example, Bond pursues the younger woman and sets Moneypenny up for an insult. "She's as beautiful," begins Bond, "as you." Moneypenny smiles shyly and adds "as I used to be."

At this, Bond throws one rose to Moneypenny and gently hands the remainder of the bouquet to the spry young girl behind the desk.

At one point in "Octopussy," Bond uses an enlarger screen to magnify the breasts of yet another female secretary. Children in the audience squealed with delight. Yes, Bond does make a couple of wonderful comments which have absolutely nothing to do with sex or sexism. And the film, which takes place in India, is brimming with color and action, clever gadgets and last-minute heroism.

If you're not very sensitive to the human, especially the female, condition, then this film should be an entertaining bit of trash for you. You might even find yourself able to laugh at its degradation. I hope not.

Strawberry farmers thriving, they let buyers do the work

TOLONO (AP) — Customers searching for sweet strawberries and a sweet price found what they wanted at Jan and Melinda Meyer's farm.

They stopped and even crawled on their knees to pluck the red, ripe berries from the plants.

In return for their labor, they bought the strawberries for 58 cents a pound, half the price of some other berries.

The strawberry harvest began early this year in Southern Illinois and is moving north. It will continue until early July.

The pick-your-own craze has turned small, family-run businesses into big business — a $5 million a year industry selling more than 10 million pounds of strawberries.

"I know they can make a lot of money," said Allen Degan, the Meyer's produce farm. "But I really enjoy raising them."

He began as a youngster with strawberries as a 4-H project and turned that into a career with Meyer Produce Farm three years ago. He and his wife rent 10 acres of land and travel to a trailer park on U.S. 45 in Champaign County.

They are among 250 strawberry farmers in Illinois, raising 1,500 acres of berries on small plots in every county — mostly for a second career.

"Our industry is profitable and growing," said Bill Courter, a strawberry specialist at the University of Illinois. "You can't buy the same quality anywhere else — they're fresh and ripe — and you pay less than in the store."

It takes at least $1,500 an acre to get into strawberry farming, and most growers irrigate, put an additional $1,000 an acre. However, good growers get 3,000 pounds of fruit per acre and sell it for about $4,000.

The business takes much less expensive land and equipment than grain or livestock production, and growers are not subject to fluctuations in the market. They set their own prices.

But, Meyer said, it is much easier to lose a strawberry crop than a corn crop, and raising berries involves more manual labor.

This is the busiest time of the year for the Meyers — four weeks of dawn-to-dusk duty.

According to Allen the first crop will be picked by the police or a warning ticket will be issued second offenders will be fined $25. The fine will be reduced upon proof of purchase of an approved restraint v. c.

Residents of the county are not only to rent infant car seats, but also to institute the new Illinois law requiring restraints to secure their children in the front. The law took effect in 2001 and is an approved child restraint device. An approved child restraint device.

The law further requires children four and five years of age to be secured either in a restraint device or by a seat belt.

Because of loopholes in the law, such as a lack of specific requirements for securing a three-year-old, the law will be challenged and it is unclear that all children under the age of six be properly secured in an approved restraint device or a seat belt, he said.

Deputy Sheriff David Nichols of the sheriff's office and Lt. Larry Hill of the Carbondale Police Department said that the police intend to enforce the law, but that there will not be a rash of tickets.

Strawberry farmers, like many others in the industry, have learned to live with the new law. They are not always happy with it, but they know it is here to stay.

But, Meyer said, it is much easier to lose a strawberry crop than a corn crop, and raising berries involves more manual labor.

This is the busiest time of the year for the Meyers — four weeks of dawn-to-dusk duty.
Elderly exposed to adventure with Elderhostel expeditions

By Jackie Doerlet
Student Writer

Gray hair, wrinkling skin, loss of memory may be associated with growing old but not with retirement. Backpacking for a week, learning to canoe, rappelling for the first time, studying Shakespeare or politics of the Civil War, East Coast trips to make pottery or how to garden, may not be activities usually associated with people over 60. However, through a network of universities and colleges in the United States, Canada and abroad, Elderhostel offers such activities to people over 60.

Nature Photography, a birching of East, learning to canoe were Elderhostel programs that 122 elderly people from various parts of the United States took part in this spring at Touch of Nature in Carbondale. A variety of activities was scheduled for the week. One woman said a sunrise pontoon boat ride on Little Grassy Lake was her favorite.

Another couple said they enjoyed the field trips to Fern and Heron Nature Preserve where they had the opportunity to take nature pictures.

The tight life included a wine and cheese, an outstanding hay ride where owl and predator watching and a slide sharing and critique session that one man said taught him the most about his photography. The final event of the week was a buffalo tro, which is a steak dinner where the steaks are cooked directly on coals. This was the last chance to enjoy drinks and dinner with the friends that were met during the week.

It is not only new friendships that develop here. Two women who have been friends since childhood and now live across the country meet once a year at an Elderhostel. This year the two women went on the backpacking Elderhostel.

The backpacking program was first offered by Touch of Nature in September 1981. It was the first Elderhostel program in the country to provide an opportunity to experience the physical and emotional risks of spending a week in the wilderness.

One of the advantages of Elderhostel is you learn so much in so little time, backpackers said. The backpacking program is an outdoor stress course to expand the realm of their experience, develop the ability to meet new challenges and learn more about one another.

The group of backpackers, five women, two men and three directors, entered the wilderness carrying 40-pound packs. They camped to Panther's Den and explored the cave. They rappelled an 80-foot rock face and slept under the stars in almost record low temperatures and unexpected snow for the middle of April in Southern Illinois.

Unlike most Elderhostel programs which operate in the summer, Touch of Nature offers most of its courses in the fall and spring. The summer months are mainly devoted to wildflowers and their experiences for handicapped youngsters and adults. This spring five Elderhostel programs were offered. The programs were: The Natural and Cultural History of Southern Illinois, Nature Photography, Backpacking and Birding.

Usually participants are bound in university dormitories. At other universities some learning activities may take place outside, the course at SIUC is the only one that exposes older people to outdoor adventure on a week-long trek through the wilderness.

Elderhostel is a national program formed in the summer of 1976 by Marty Knowlton, professor and social activist photographer from Maine and his friend David Bianco of the University of New Hampshire. This year over 50,000 people will participate in Elderhostel. There are three courses, meeting for one to a half hours each day, are offered during each one-week program. There are no grades or homework, and the cost of the program in the United States and Canada is $180. The only requirement is that one person in the couple's 60 and over.

"This type of vacation is so much more beneficial than the typical hotel vacation. I always learn so much," one woman who has participated in five Elderhostel programs said.

Many Elderhostel participants say they do not participate in another program and feel it is an opportunity to widen their education and experience.

Review those bicycle rules to avoid fines, impounding

By Joe Pacheco
Staff Writer

So you think you know what rules apply to your bicycle and begin wheeling to work along the sidewalks. If you live on campus it may seem natural to scroll along the sidewalks, but beware the bicycle rack in your morning wanderings.

Is your bicycle sticker properly displayed? If not, that fine is $5 and the police will come running. If you’re guilty of this offense and it cost you a couple pitchers of beer to get it fixed, you’re in for some more.

If you live in campus and are instead considering using the sidewalks, you may be required to pay the City of Carbondale fees. For any non-moving violation off campus, whether committed behind the handles of a Schwinn or the wheel of a Chevy, these are two minor examples of bicycle rules and will cost students and faculty alike.

To make the rules a little easier to remember, there are major differences separate city and campus. Here’s a summary of the City’s ordinance rules: it is against the law to park bicycles, ride the wrong way on a one-way street, fail to stop at stop signs and red lights.

Council committee elects professor

Arthur Altman, professor of secondary education, was elected by the executive committee of the Illinois Curriculum Council. Other members of the council are Michael Soliday, Education Center Coordinator; and James Quisenberry, elementary education coordinator. Altman’s purpose is to seek ways to help educators and citizens in school improvement and to advise the superintendent of schools and his staff on recommendations. The council has been involved in the publication of several series of Curriculum Publications and other educational services.

Engineering dean to speak to group

Raw material scarcity and national vulnerability will be the topic of Southern Illinois Incorporated breakfast held June 11 at 8:30 a.m. at the Rameada Inn.

Dean Kenneth Tempiemme, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, was the head of his department in "The Outlook for Manufacturing Materials." Also, South African and other resources are being used to replace those that are scarce. This work will significantly impact both investments and price of the rare metals. Interested members and their guests should notify SII by June 11 at 405-4550.

Others I"C!IOUI'eeS

Since its founding in 1947, Curriculum Publications and the Curriculum Council have been elected to advise the citizens of the Illinois public schools. Other than the Rack III Protection, there have been two minor examples of bicycle rules and they are still considered to be in force.

"We’ve worked hard on such things as contacting University bicycle paths with the Wham Building rather than ride in and around all the pedestrian traffic in the middle of campus," said the spokesman.

"Before taking the whole summer to find the best way to get around campus, a cyclist might get help from the University Parking Division in Building D of Washington Square, located between Student Center and the Library. There are copies available, by the way, of the University grounds. The map includes parking areas as well as the student parking regulations. Bicycle and automobile decals also may be purchased at the ISU-C Store.

A cyclist needs only one bicycle sticker, either on his office or the University. Both are SII."

In many other college communities of Carbondale’s size, a large part of the population rides bicycles. The number of registered bicycles changes with the size of the student population, but one statistic that remains is stolen bike theft. Over the past six years, not including 1983, a yearly average of 177 bicycles was reported stolen from University grounds. Last year alone, 156 were reported stolen and 35 were recovered. A total of $21,423 of worth of bicycles was reported stolen.

Joyce M. Schembri, Statistical clerk for SII-C Security, said that through the first week of June, 66 bicycles have been reported stolen so far.

Twelve of those have been recovered, so thats still a stolen value amounting to $3,678. How can cyclists keep their bicycles from becoming part of "those statistics?" One way, obviously, is to buy a dependable lock and chain or chain.

To help deter bicycle thieves, the University Parking Division has installed a new bicycle rack on campus. These modern-looking racks, the spokesmen said, are actually known as Rack III Protection.

Hogan has researched these locks and believes they are the best. "We will not be purchasing any other new bicycle racks other than the Rack III," Hogan said.

Wright warned that the opening of the semester, especially, is a time when police receive the most stolen bicycle reports. "Most many as students aren’t aware of the need to protect their bikes," he said. By using new releases to radio stations and newspapers to caution cyclists about safety and protection factors, said Wright.

Hogan and Wright both said the easiest way to remember bicycle rules is common sense. Wright summarized it by saying, "When riding a bicycle, basically the same rules apply as riding your car."
Animal warden enjoys his job

It's after a they felt endangered their homes were attacked by snakes, and strode off, the chamber. Friendly about that Monday resignation board action to investigation tickets.

Snakes, other animals, and even sympathizes their fence, or better law prohibits animals from running at large. "At large" is defined as the owner's premises and not under the control of someone by leash, cord, chain, or other physical restraint. Verbal restraint isn't enough. Other violations include being a nuisance, and not having rabies vaccinations.

For animals that haven't been spayed or neutered, the fines are $30 for the first occurrence of each violation, $60 for the second, $180 for the third and $200 for all subsequent violations. "I try to give people a break and help them out as much as possible," he said. "Sometimes I'll write them a warning instead of a $25 ticket. But a lot of them just keep it up." An added problem is that when people neglect to pay the fines, a warrant for their arrest is issued. Even though this is stated on the ticket, Ellis said, people don't pay attention. Ellis is mainly concerned with dogs that haven't had a rabies vaccination. He went through the painful series of rabies shots as a safeguard when he took the job. He has been attacked by a dog once, which hit him three times on the arm. "You can die from rabies," he said. "It's no laughing matter. It's more serious than people take it." When an animal bites or attacks a person, it is impounded for a 10-day rabies observation. The owner is responsible for all costs, including medical expenses of the victim's immediate treatment. Ellis said his job is misunderstood.

"I'm not in it just to drive around eight hours a day and collect a pay check," he said. "I get people laughing at me all the time." Once, he said, he saw a guy laughing at him and he stopped and asked him why. The guy said he thought Ellis' job was a joke.

"I asked him how he would feel if a rabid dog bit him, went on its merry way, and no one did anything," Ellis said. "He said he hadn't thought about that." Mention the dreaded dogcatcher and many people envision a truckload of sad-faced dogs being carted off to be destroyed. Yet Ellis said his small percentage of impounded animals are actually put to sleep. When he apprehends a dog and can't contact the owner, he takes it to the Humane Society and then notifies the owner by telephone or letter. After the payment of all fees and fines, the animal is released to the owner.

If the animal is not claimed after seven days, the Humane Society decides whether to destroy the animal. About 95 percent of all letters are claimed, he said, and some of the others are kept for adoption.

Before Ellis became one of the city's two animal wardens, he worked in construction with his father and raised dogs for hunting. He lives in Carbondale all of his life and plans to remain here. Although the label dogcatcher doesn't bother him, he said, his official title of animal warden does. "It sounds like I run a prison," he said.

Shooting anger school officials

OLNEY, ILL. - Two Olney school board members resigned after a Halloween party. They felt endangered their families' lives.

Staff Writer C. Edward Miller and member Ray Strzelec resigned Monday night after a recent board action cut his personnel and student hours.

Miller, who motivated the shootings, Miller said, "I don't want to comment about that until the investigation is going on." A special meeting investigating the Memorial Day weekend shooting incident, during which Miller's home was hit by several bullets and the home of board member Sue Quayle was fired into. Both homes were attacked late May 7 while the families were at home, no one was injured. At least two people were found inside Miller's home, police said.

Mrs. Quayle said she was angry because of the resigning. She and Strzelec said they think the shootings are related to school board business. "It's an extreme coincidence if somebody went around on a shooting spree and just happened to shoot the homes of two school board members in a town of 10,000," Strzelec said. He said that although no shots were fired at his house, he resigned because it was necessary for the safety of his family. Miller said he, too, resigned to protect his family.

"The board accepted the resignations with dismay and disappointment that we had to come to this type of thing," said Mrs. Quayle. "We sympathized with their reasoning."

The board, known as the East Richland school board, has made some difficult decisions this year. Early in the spring, the board voted to cut personnel costs and trimmed program budgets to avert financial problems.

Cyclists push ahead during break

Led by the husband and wife combination of John and Linda Elgart, the SIU-C Phoenix cycling team climatized a highly successful spring season last weekend. The cyclists won two gold medals and a bronze at the Illinois Cycling Championships held last weekend in Rock Falls.

Linda Elgart captured the women’s road race, John Elgart won the veteran’s race, and teammate Mike Jenkins came in third in the Veteran time trial.

In the 50-mile women’s event, Linda Elgart broke free from the field with eight miles to go and put a four minute lead on her nearest competitor. She said it was the toughest time trial of her life.

“I couldn’t tell where the chase group was, she said. “I was afraid they were going to catch me, and I just hammering all the way.”

In the 50-mile veterans race, a considerably closer affair, John Elgart won a close finishing sprint to gain his gold medal.

“It was surprising that the five of us stayed together on the hill,” he said, “I tried to get away repeatedly but the other riders were glued to my rear wheel for most of the race.”

Jenkins came in fifth in the same race.

The Elgarts also had big days at the Anderson Criterium-May 22 and at the Memorial Day races in the Quad cities.

John Elgart won the veterans category at Anderson and then Coach of the year. Paul Westphal of New York was the comeback player of the year. Monocheff was named the top defensive player, and 76er Bobby Jones was named the league’s “sixth man.”

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham accepted the MVP trophy or Malones at the league’s award banquet.

“Moses came to Philadelphia and fit in so well with Ewing,” said Cunningham. “Having two players like that makes it so easy for a coach. Moses doesn’t have the natural talent some other players in the NBA have, and he’s a special athlete and exemplifies what you can do with hard work.”

That is what makes this rivalry the finest of them all during the regular season — the fans. It would be an easy task to grid out further controversy over the lack of high school All-Star football covering the turf of McAdrew Stadium this Saturday. But that's not what Coach Bowl chairman Gary Glenn would like.

"Right now we've just hung the game is going to be played," said the president of the Southern Illinois Football Coaches Association. "Let's leave those problems behind us and talk football."

The first get-together of southern Illinois' finest prep football players is finally set for Saturday at the Mt. Vernon high school stadium. Kick-off is set for 4 p.m.

The game was originally scheduled to be at McAdrew but was cancelled last week to be at the DuQuoin State Fairgrounds before Mt. Vernon was finally settled on. No one could be happier than Glenn. The idea to put on such a showcase of high school seniors was partially his idea and he's been working on it for a couple of years, he said.

"About a year and a half ago, Mike Trud, then at Anna, and Bob Karn of DuQuion and Jim Lovin of Carbondale were all just talking, like all coaches do when we get together. And we were concerned about those basketball All-Star games going on every year, why not a football game. Well we said, 'let's quit talking about it and put it to work.'"

That they did. The game would have become a reality last summer, but the NCAA wouldn't sanction the contest because of a late entry request. That didn't keep them from trying again.

"We decided we could do it and bring in cool country the name for the game was an easy one," said Glenn. "Donations from the coal companies, McDonal's, and a lot of beig from Fred Huff got us going in the right direction."

It was SIU-C assistant athletic director Huff, as recognizable around DuQuion as the Fairgrounds, who assisted the bowl committee in getting the playing field arranged in short notice from McAdrew Stadium to the DuQuion Fairgrounds. The Cubs-Cards rivalry of this weekend's festivities there.

However it turned out that there was not enough time to level off an empty field and put in a line, field markings and electronic arrangements. That still didn't stop the committee.

Marion High School was another option, but turned out to be another obstacle due to insurance technicalities.

Then Mt. Vernon rescued the All-Star game that an Monday was considered defunct. The Coaches Association has $1 million insurance covering the event as well as the NCAA requirement that each player be covered by separate $15,000 policies for accident and death since all the seniors are no longer in high school.

Both squads will be represented by All-Conference and second team All-Conferences members. The East includes those stars of the South Eastern Independents. The West shows off the past from the Southwest Egyptian and Black Diamond Conferences. A coach representing each faction will head a group of assistants and will fill over forty players on each sideline.

It has taken over a year and a half, but Saturday afternoon there will be a crowing looking on from the stands in Mt. Vernon watching the first of it's kind in southern Illinois. A high school football All-Star game.

Cubs-Cards rivalry resumes in St. Louis

By Joe Paschen
Staff Writer

Perhaps nowhere else in the country is there an intense and competitive a major league baseball rivalry as there exists between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs. The kind of tradition the Dodgers and Padres, for example, may never achieve.

Long before the Cardinals began winning National League pennants in the sixties and the Cubs began finding every way in the world to lose a flag did this rivalry exist.

In many cases the intenseness came from the characters sitting and bowling from those dugouts at Sportsman's Park and Wrigley Field in days of yore. In those days the Gashouse Gang of St. Louis never left the field without a dirty uniform. The red wasn't always sewn in. A packed house would greet the Cubs on their trips into the old Cardinal ballpark.

As it was the event of the week when Pepper Martin and his gang traveled to the north side of Chicago to do battle with Gabby Hartnett and Lake Michigan wind. Both were contending for pennants back then.

Not until the late 1960's and early 1970's were these two clubs again ying for post season status.

The Redbirds had Gibson, Brock, White, Marshall, Shannon and Jack Buck. The Cubs had Stengel, Bunning, Banks, Santo, Remsing, Williams and Jack Brickhouse.

The Cardinals haven't fired Brock and still have Shannon and Buck. They've long said good-bye to old Sportsman's Park but wear a World Series ring with IMG inscribed.

The Cubs have slamed Banks, have lost Brickhouse but still play their games under the sun at the friendly confines.

True, the large All-Star mystique has returned to St. Louis and Chicago.

Last weekend the Cardinal-Cub three game series at Wrigley Field drew a club record 118,478 fans. No since the wrenched choke of '69 had the Cubs experienced such high numbers. The streaking Cubs took two of three from the Cardinals, losing one in extra innings.

Now it's St. Louis' turn. Chicago brings its act into Busch Stadium for a three game series beginning Friday afternoon. The Cubs have won eight of their last 11. The Cards have lost eight of their last 13. The Cubs are four games out in third place as it St. Louis who holds, should we say, the cards.

Chicago manager Lee Elia has had one of the hottest clubs in baseball ever since his heralded arrival in Chicago last year. The Cubs have won 24 of their last 31. Elia hasn't the Cubs, but an eager Montreal borough breathing up his first place neck. He's lost his centerfielder to a drug rehabilitation clinic and is praying the need for acquiring pitchers Neil Allen will justify his trading of the popular Keith Hernandez Wednesday.

Hernandez was traded to the New York Mets for right-handed pitchers Neil Allen and Jack Olwine, so Herron says, to boost the Cardinals pitching staff. Allen will probably Monday for the Cardinals.

As in Wrigley last weekend, look for the Cardinals to possibly break their club attendance record for a three game series. And as in Chicago, don't expect all fans to be wearing home team colors.

Cody, one of two trained buffaloes in the United States, and Bucky Bogey, his trainer, learned Carbondale drinking establishments Wednesday night (possibly the reason for Cody's frothy demeanor) promoting this weekend's rodeo at the DuQuion State Fair. Performance will be at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 2 p.m. Sunday.
