The SIU Board of Trustees approved guidelines for SIU C-employee salary increases of up to 8 percent for fiscal year 1985, including increases in baseline merit pay and in those based on performance evaluations, at its meeting Thursday.

At the meeting, the last for fiscal year 1985, the board approved plans for each university in the SIU System to be prepared with the office of the Chancellor.

The SIU-C plan calls for increases of 5.34 percent across-the-board increase, but the remainder of the increase would be divided into 2.24 percent for merit and 0.42 percent for equity adjustments.

The exact amount of money received from the state will not be known until budget allocations are made next month, but Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw said each university should be able to adjust.

"Whatever the increase, plans presented by each university can be implemented," Shaw said. The campuses have their own options.

The overall salary increase most likely would be closer to 7.2 instead of 8 percent, because of shortfalls, Shaw said. The University has been funded for a 5 percent turnover rate in personnel, but it's more like 7.5 percent," he said.

The remainder of the increase would have to be absorbed by internal reallocations, he said.

Media effects of hearings discussed

Both sides in the class action law suit hearings at the Federal Penitentiary at Marion agree that the publicity generated since the proceedings began in January is mostly negative for the penitentiary.

However, they disagree on that publicity and the eventuality of the hearings.

Carbondale attorney Nancy Horgan said the numerous accounts of beatings and forced rectal searches related by inmates at the hearings and in turn reported by the local media have focused public attention on the problems they believes exist at Marion.

Horgan is representing the inmates in a class action suit filed last summer by inmates at the penitentiary charging the prison administration and the general public with an ongoing program of harassment and physical abuse of inmates since the murder of two guards there in 1983.

"We made our case. I don't think there is any question that those prisoners are being hurt at Marion, rectal searches are used as punishment and the conditions are inhumane," Horgan said.

Horgan said she thinks that all the media exposure the prisoners have received works in favor of the inmates' cause.

The media attention increases public scrutiny on the prison and that can only be good for the prisoners," she said.

Horgan maintains that while the hearings have been in session, the Marion administration has treated the inmates more humanely.

Whether the court rules in favor of the inmates or not, Shaw said, the hearings will have the effect of bringing an end to the court or the public that conditions at Marion are stupid and inhumane." Horgan said.

Horgan said the plaintiffs have one more witness to call before the court when the hearings resume next week. Craig Harris, a prison psychologist from the University of Santa Cruz, will testify June 24.

Marion warden Jerry Miller said while saying that it is difficult to assess the impact of the hearings, a knowledge of the ongoing drug distribution makes it a little more intense.

But beyond generating front-page stories and reported alleged horrors at the prison, Shaw said Marion executive assistant John Clark said they see the hearings as having no real impact on the operation of the prison — an operation that they maintain is not in need of outside intervention.

Contracts totaling $150,000 set for fisheries research expansion

By Paula Buckner

Contracts totaling about $150,000 have been awarded by the SIU Board of Trustees to four Southern Illinois firms to expand research capabilities of SIU-C's Fisheries Research Laboratory.

At the meeting Thursday in Edwardsville, the board awarded a general construction contract of $95,200 to Carbondale firm R.B. Stephens Construction Co., a second Carbondale firm, Weller's Inc., received a $24,700 plumbing and heating contract, Ventilation and air conditioning work totaling $5,250 will be done by A & K Midget Insulation of Metropolis. Electrical work totaling $28,250 will be done by Burke Electric Co. of Murphysboro.

Work on the building, funded from state appropriations monies, is scheduled to begin immediately.

Designed as a one-story, metal, 9,344-square-foot edifice, the building will be located west of the main campus at the McAfferley Road service center adjacent to the present fisheries field equipment building.

According to the board’s rationale for approving construction of the building, the laboratory has greatly contributed to improvements in fish production throughout the area.

Expanding the facilities would not only consolidate several existing research operations, but also would benefit academic instructional programs in fisheries and wildlife resources.

Ex-administrator speaks at drug trial

By Bob Tita

George Mace, former vice president for University relations, testified Thursday as a defense witness for former SIU-C employee Robert Charles Hinke, on trial for conspiracy to distribute 1,000 pounds of marijuana.

Mace said Hinke looked more different than when he worked for him in the late 1970s and early 1980s. He said at that time Hinke had a beard, more hair and weighed less than he does today. Hinke is now balding and clean-shaven.

Defense witnesses on Wednesday also testified that Hinke's appearance was different at that time. Nancy Poland of New Baden, a government witness in exchange for immunity from prosecution, testified however that Hinke looked similar to the way he did today when he allegedly delivered marijuana to4,000 pounds of marijuana in 1981 and 1984.

Poland claimed that Hinke, 1006 N. Bridge St., Carbondale, delivered 3,000 pounds of marijuana in May 1972 from Jack and Judy Hrvalin, 413 Owens St. in Carbondale.

She said he took the marijuana to defendant Thomas Paiz's house in Belleville, where it was obtained and later sold by Poland and her husband Ernest. The sale of the 3,000 pounds of marijuana generated $76,000 for the Hrvalins.

Nine other people besides Hinke are on trial for drug conspiracy delivered marijuana to U.S. District Court in Benton.

"I met him when he was student at SIUC in approximately 1974," Mace said about Hinke. "I had been impressed with Mr. Hinke and thought he would be an excellent employee."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee Thursday added $38 million in humanitarian aid for anti-Sandinista rebels to an appropriations bill but refused to add more restrictions on the money. The Senate already passed a similar aid package on another bill, but added the same provision to a House-passed supplemental appropriations measure to get the issue into conference quickly.

Finance Committee head fears tax revisions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Senate Finance Committee said Thursday he feared revisions to President Reagan's tax plan could result in a huge loss of revenues while industrial leaders urged lawmakers not to forget the deficit.

Several members of the committee examining Reagan's tax bill indicated that, by the time lawmakers finished working on various provisions, the federal deficit might be even further bloated.

Report to Congress backs chemical weapons weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan sent Congress a report Thursday saying the Pentagon needs to build up modern chemical weapons stockpile so the nation can have "a credible capability to deter attack.

The report, prepared by the Chemical Warfare Review Commission, concluded that a projected binary munitions program offers a safer and more credible deterrent.

Center for Auto Safety asks for Ford recall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Center for Auto Safety renewed its demand Thursday for a recall of Ford cars with automatic transmissions built before mid-1980 because of new figures showing deaths in "park-to-reverse" accidents rose to 106. The center said the deaths involving automatic Ford models built between 1966 and 1980 were more than seven times the 14 fatalities reported as a result of Firestone 500 radial tires, the top killer involving a defective vehicle design that later was recalled.

Poll says consumers lost in AT&T breakup

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (UPI) — Very few Americans feel the consumer came out ahead in last year's breakup of AT&T, according to a poll of 5,800 visitors to Walt Disney World's Epcot Center. And nearly half of those responding think the breakup was a bad idea to start with. Asked who benefited most from the divestiture of the former monopoly telephone corporation, the majority cited telephone companies (38 percent), business and corporations (23 percent). Only seven percent said the consumer received any benefit.

State students lag behind in world, report indicates

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The math skills of Illinois school students may be close to the national average, but student achievement nationally falls behind those of other countries, a State Board of Education study showed Thursday. Ted Sanders, state schools superintendent, said the report could bolster efforts aimed at reaching an educational reform package and increases in school funding prior to the Legislature's scheduled June 30 adjournment date.

Gray suspicious of Reagan's Contra aid plan

Security concerns closed office

By John Krukowski

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Reagan administration announced Tuesday it is willing to approve significant arms sales to India but Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi said his country is not interested.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said prospective arms sales are "not a central issue" in talks between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and top U.S. officials during the prime minister's state visit.

But he added: "We are willing to sell arms to India and in the past there have been some modest sales over the years. We are prepared for more active arms relationship if the Indians so desire."

However, two hours later in a meeting with a small group of reporters at the Indian embassy, Gandhi said his country did not have the necessary confidence in the United States as an arms supplier.

He said: "We have two problems. The terms of supply can be altered retroactively in the United States and we have doubts about the reliability of the United States as a supplier of spare parts and other equipment ... it would take time to establish the necessary confidence."

One U.S. official said that during a visit to New Delhi last month by Defense Undersecretary Fred Ikle, Indian officials "insisted the Indians to see what we would be prepared to consider."

Honest people can’t be trusted

RAY SCHELEMIN recently received a rather flagging letter from the Visa credit card people. She wrote it off as a scam and tossed it into the wastebasket.

"We think you will be interested in having the best possible credit card in the world," the letter from the Visa Credit Card Department of Chicago began. "We offer you this special card with a credit line of $1,000 for a very select group of people. People like you, who handle credit very responsibly and find it unique advantages."

Ray liked that — especially the line about "a very select group of people."

Actually, it was a fair description of Ray. In her line of work she’s been a brush artist at the Chicago Tribune — she has a national repuation.

It’s also the main reason she invented the device that lets police quickly make composite drawings of criminal suspects by flipping plastic sheets that have different faces on them.

BY COINCIDENCE, the Visa letter arrived when Ray, who is 65, was thinking of finding a better investment than the one she had bought.

He has never used such cards before, but he is scheduled to conduct a series of seminars in different parts of the country. He was looking for an account to advise him to save his monthly receipts for business expenses.

So Ray pulled out the Visa form and filled it out.

A couple of weeks later, her husband, Edith, got a phone call from the credit card company that checks out Visa applicants.

"Can Edith use the card if you approve his application?"

"We will call your husband to complete the form."

"What did he leave out?"

Edith asked.

"I was looking about whether Ray would get his way in Congress and fund his 'hustlers' and 'freedom fighters,' or whether the aid was 'right,' humanitarian, or whether the Marines were on their way to Managua, or —

"This time when the votes were brought up, the only ones against it were from peace activists and a few editorial writers, who were easily ignored. When the issue of the day shifted from military intervention in Nicaragua to tax reform, supporters of the aid bill knew they could slip their one in without anything but a whimper.

SURE, there are a few members of Congress who still faithfully oppose contra aid. And there are those who are adamantly in favor of it. It’s the indecisive ones who now had the excuse to bend to the Ray administration’s pressure and vote for 'humanitarian' aid.

Some members of Congress are claiming that Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega’s veto will be overruled.

SO FAR, aid to the contras has done nothing but drive the Sandinistas further into the arms of the Soviets. A nation generous they’ll take no aid if there were strings attached just now has received $400 million from the Soviets and other European countries.

With the Nicaraguan economy now devoting about 46 percent of its revenue to defend itself from the contras, one can only wonder whether the Soviet aid wouldn’t be necessary if the contras were not maintained as a lightning force by the United States.

Congress should be above childish notions of protecting their egos when the well-being of millions of innocent Nicaraguans and potentially millions of innocent Americans is at stake.

The House is now waiting for a final confirmation vote to release the funds. They’ll pass it. After all, nobody is watching them.

Mike Royko
Tribune Company

"It says you own your own home. Who is the mortgage with?"

"There is no mortgage," said Edith. "We paid for the house 20 years ago."

A FEW MORE questions established that Ray and his wife don’t owe anybody any money.

The credit-check woman sounded confused. And suspicious. Everybody these days owns something.

But not Ray. He doesn’t believe in buying things unless he can slap cash on the counter. Since he has a good job and a successful invention, he can afford to pay for most of the things he wants or needs.

"I guess it was growing up in the Depression that did it," he says.

A few weeks ago, Ray got another letter from Visa. His one was less flattering. It said:

"Your application has been carefully reviewed, and we regret that we are unable to approve it at this time.

The reason: "An insufficient number of satisfactory references as reported in your creditor report."

IN OTHER WORDS, Ray didn’t owe anybody anything.

He had never owed anybody anything.

Therefore, he cannot be trusted.

Ray was furious. After a lifetime of not being a deadbeat, always paying his bills, he was told he couldn’t be trusted with the kind of card that many of America’s deadbeats have in their wallet.

He called Visa and raised hell. Somebody said they would review his application.

A couple of weeks later he got another letter. It said: "As you requested, your application and credit bureau report have been carefully reviewed. Unfortunately, we are unable to approve it at this time."

"That bugs me," says Ray, "is that they approached me in the first place. They sent me the letter saying that I’m the kind of person they want."

"THEN, when I accept their card, they fill out their form, they stick it to me. After I talked to Ray, I pronounced spokesman for Chicago Visa and asked him how they could convict such a solid citizen.

"I know it sounds kind of screwy, but that’s the way it works," said the spokesman.

"If you’ve never done any credit history, that’s what happens."

Maybe this helps explain why so many banks in this country are in such a sorry shape.

"I’m not sure what I’m going to do now," says Ray. "Maybe I’ll have to go get into debt so they will trust me."

Either that, or tell them you’re a South American and you’ll probably earn you a fat billion.
Travolta, Curtis are ‘Perfect’ match

Sex goddesses absent from movies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Movie actresses have undergone more changes personally and professionally in the past decade than in any previous period in film history.

For the first time in memory, Hollywood doesn't have a recognizable sex goddess.

Start with Theda Bara and move on through the years to Carra Bow, Mae West, Betty Grable, Jane Russell, Marilyn Monroe, Raquel Welch and Bo Derek — voluntarily retired from the throne — and who is there now?

She cannot be found among the present stars: Meryl Streep, Sally Field, Debra Winger, Jessica Lange or Cissy Spurlock.

NOR DO any members of the young brigade: Molly Ringwald, Ally Sheedy, Diane Lane or Phoebe Cates — fill the bill.

Most are asked to disrobe somewhere along the line in the course of a movie role, but that's not the same thing as diamonds, fur, plunging necklines and provocative poses.

Outright sex appeal is now deemed exploitation and actresses are avoiding the glamour label, except in television where the likes of Joan Collins run rampant.

Leigh Taylor-Yap, who stars in the new movie "Secret Admirer," and who can trace her career back to TV's "Peyton Place," says women's roles in movies have changed as radically as they have in reality in recent years.

"I can see it in my own career and in my personal life," Taylor-Yap said. "It doesn't require a microscope. In "Peyton Place" 30 years ago Taylor-Yap played shy, retiring school Welles. Offscreen she is the positive wife of two successful men, actor Ryan O'Neal and Columbia Pictures President Gus MacElhene. Both marriages ended in divorce.

In "Secret Admirer," she portrays a strong, extroverted woman who knows what she wants from life Offscreen, the star of "Secret Admirer" is just as dramatic.

WHEREAS she customarily conducted interviews in a soft voice, her eyes cloudily fixed on the floor, Taylor-Yap now has a challenge in her eyes and speaks right up. She neither looks nor behaves as she did in "Peyton Place."

"I reflected the roles I played," she said. "I was introverted and sweet and seldom spoke. Most actresses played those roles because they represented women's place in society.

We were superficial and beautiful, not mothers or shakers. I enjoyed a certain success in the 60s because I embraced the generation gap and the idealization of women as sex objects, passive and pliant. I didn't make waves in private life or my marriages any more than my characters did in films."

TAYLOR-YAP exudes self-confidence and self-satisfaction. Clearly, she no longer is a clinging vine nor dependent on any man for her emotional and intellectual well-being.

She has become an athlete, climbing mountains here and in Europe. She's whacked off her long blonde hair in favor of short curls. She's tanned and outdoorsy. She likes and droogamous men.

She has gone from meowy housewife to yoga enthusiast! She also jogs and does aerobics after beginning each day with an hour or two of meditation. She lifts weights in a gym and runs up and down the Santa Monica Mountains fire trails.

"WHAT IF I really like to attempt sometime soon is the triathlon for women," Taylor-Yap said, putting away a ponds salad at a Polo Lounge.

But more than anything, she credits her role in an off-Broadway play, "Catastrophe," with turning her life around.

"I played a victim, forced into passivity to survive," she said.

Women injured in accident two Carbondale women were involved in a car accident Thursday morning on U.S. Route 51, a spokesman of the Jackson County Sheriff's Office said.

Paula A. Eard, 12, of Route 5, was driving north when her car left the roadway one mile north of Makanda. The car, a 1974 Plymouth Duster struck and vaulted the guard rail and came to rest on a field on the east side of the road.

Eard and her passenger, Donna K. Martin, 20, also of Route 5, were treated and released at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, a hospital spokeswoman said.

He never knew what hit him.

"More things happen in this movie than in sex-oriented action films. There's not just a thrill adventure, there's a thrill, a laugh, a shock and a special effect.

"A clever thriller with laughs that combine stocky girl spoiler with softy, who doubts if there's a kid from 6 to 60 who wouldn't be cheering for it."

Six youngsters to get VIP view of shuttle Discovery's next liftoff

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Kristin Houlihan has no doubt there eventually will be constructive discoveries while living in space, and she intends to design her house so it can be used as a model. If her mind is filled with thoughts of outer space these days. She is one of six children who will get a VIP view of the liftoff of the space shuttle Discovery Monday at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"I think they'll be a lot more creative," she said of her generation of space architects. "The houses will look like bits and have different weird shapes and colors."

Glassman, Foundation member, dies

Jerome L. Glassman, longtime vice chairman of the SII Foundation Board of Directors, died Thursday at his home in Mount Vernon. Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Friday at the Hughey Funeral Home in Mount Vernon. Burial will be at 2 p.m. Friday at the B'nai Amoona Cemetery in University City, Mo.

Memorials may be sent to the United Hebrew Temple in Florissant, in care of Pam Rubin, 31 Lakeside Estates, Mount Vernon, Ill. 62866.

Mr. Glassman was named to the board in 1973. He had been vice chairman of the board for more than 10 years. He was named honorary board chairman for 1985-86. He was a member of the advisory board of the College of Business and Administration and served as chairman.

Mr. Glassman was a World War II Army Air Corps veteran. He served as chairman of the board of Community Service Broadcast Inc. and was a trustee, vice president and former president of the Mitchell Museum Foundation in Mount Vernon.

The Glassman family bought radio station WMCL in McLeansboro in 1972, and eventually acquired other stations in Illinois, West Virginia and Tennessee. In 1981, the family bought radio station WTAQ in Murphysboro.

Mr. Glassman joined Liberty Petroleum Co. Inc. after WWII. He was president and part-owner of the company when it was sold in 1977.

MEDPREP gets federal grant to assist minority med students

By University News Service

The SIU Medical-Dental Education Preparatory Program has received a three-year, $277,341 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The MEDPREP program prepares minority students for the rigors of medical school, either at SIU or other schools around the country. The grant-funded project is designed to start a summer program in which minority students planning to enter the SIU School of Medicine can sharpen their skills. It will also provide tutors to help minority medical students stay in school.

The grant will also be used to step up recruitment of minorities to participate in the MEDPREP program. Recruiting activities will be focused on metropolitan areas like Chicago, as well as surrounding states such as Tennessee, Missouri and Mississippi, where minority populations are large.

The SIU Medical School has been at a disadvantage in recruiting minority medical-school candidates, said MEDPREP Director Harold Bardo.

"In the past, SIU hasn't gotten the best MEDPREP students because it hasn't had the inducements to offer," Bardo said. The grant will enable SIU to be more competitive with other medical schools, he said.

Officials of the health and human services department said the SIU MEDPREP program was chosen for the grant because of its long-term commitment to minorities in medical education. MEDPREP is a two-year program tailored toward supplementing the needs of prospective medical students.

CHICAGO — UPI — There are arguably more momentous occasions and more important inventions in the world's history, but Thursday hundreds of people showed up to celebrate the 50th anniversary of men's cotton briefs.

I didn't hurt that Jim Palmer, of Baltimore Orioles and master buffoon, was on hand as the official spokesman for Jockey International, which first marketed its cotton brief from a Marshall Field's department store in downtown Chicago.

"Let's get down to brass tacks," said Jere Wendi, 16, who was waiting in line with two of her friends. "We're here to see Jim Palmer.

"Well, I'm really here to get a poster for my girlfriend," she's on vacation," said Stephanie Panessa, 38. "I don't get too excited about underwear.

Cooley had opened the proceedings hailing the introduction of men's all-cotton briefs back in January 1933. Put on display in the store window during one of the worst snowstorms in the city's history, the revolutionary new design sold out in hours. Cooley said.

"ESTABLISHED SERVICE YOU CAN DEPEND ON\"
New computer lab oriented to non-computer students

By Justus Weatherby Jr.
Staff Writer

What Computing Affairs Director Leo Min calls "affirmative action computer technology" has been put into use at Fairer Hall.

Min was referring to the 64 IBM personal microcomputers added to the Fairer Hall computer facility. The $300,000 was raised and the lab opened today by a ribbon-cutting ceremony conducted by President Albert Somit.

I really want to teach the students in academic departments that currently have not been computer-oriented, Min said, in explaining what he meant by "affirmative action computer technology."

He said No. 1 priority of the microcomputer lab is to reach students in such disciplines as English, journalism, political science, and others who haven't had access to a computer facility.

"They come first," he said. "Priorities for instructors wanting to use the lab for course work will be set by the vice president for academic affairs and research."

The lab has two sections -- one for individual use, the other for group use.

Randy Schumacker, associate director of the Instructional Computer Laboratory, said the new facility is expected to get heavy use -- and soon.

"I anticipate by the middle of the summer semester, the faculty will begin to develop course material and use the lab to teach their courses," he said.

He advised that people wanting to use the lab at specific times should plan ahead.

Many faculty and students have been waiting anxiously for a microcomputer facility," he said, predicting that it would be in full use during fall term. Schumacker said the lab is designed to assist and encourage students to become computer literate. He said the microcomputer has penetrated the marketplace and the instructional lab is a tool to improve students' familiarity with the new medium.

"We want to maximize its use by as many departments as possible," he said.

Min said, "The facility may be the best in Illinois for instructional purposes. Our call is to make it as feasible in the United States and my dream is to possibly make it the best facility in the world."

Min said there were 36 computers and terminals for a rotates and computers by the end of the year.

For the summer, the lab's operating hours will be from 8 a.m. to midnight Monday through Friday, and for eight hours Saturday and Sundays. Operating hours for the fall will extend to seven days a week and 24 hours a day.

Lover would expose KGB, former FBI agent testifies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) -- A former FBI agent accused of spying testified Thursday he thought his love affair with a Soviet immigrant would help him unmask the Russian spy network, the KGB, in an admitted "James Bond kind of fantasy."

Richard Miller, testifying for the third day in the espionage trial of Sovelana and Nikolai Ogorodnikov, insisted his position with the FBI was not compromised by his sexual relationship with the immigrant because he was grooming her as a possible informant and as his vehicle for infiltrating Soviet intelligence.

"Part of my motivation in handling her this way was I felt the situation I was in my personal life wasn't good," Miller said. "I wanted to improve my status at work because I didn't feel I had much respect among my fellow agents.

"I thought perhaps I could accomplish something that's never been done before, namely, the infiltration of the Soviet secret service. She could be a goldmine." He said he would "come out of the closet" if the plan came off, adding that he had a "James Bond kind of fantasy."

"That's not a very good metaphor," said the 230-pound plus Miller, "because James Bond is not me."

Miller is the government's star witness against the Ogorodnikovs, accused of having $6,000 in gold and cash in exchange for secret government documents. Miller's trial is scheduled for later this summer, but nothing he says in the Ogorodnikovs' trial can be used against him in that proceeding.

Miller described his meetings with Ogorodnikov in May 1984 and said he shared his troubles with her, but only to make her believe he could be recruited as a Soviet spy.

"I wanted her to think I was vulnerable," he said. "Not for the purpose of becoming a traitor or selling out my country, but for the purpose of getting her confidence .... so that when it happened, I could go to my supervisors and say, 'Look what I've done, isn't that great?'"

Miller admitted, however, that his actions were improper and that he should have realized he could be fired for having an affair with Ogorodnikova.

"I didn't consider the consequences or I probably wouldn't have handled it the way I did," he said.

Miller's personal and professional troubles have become the focus of the trial, with stinging attacks from prosecutor Bruce Merritt about Miller's weight problems, poor work performance and numerous love affairs, including one with Ogorodnikova.

Wednesday, the 30-year FBI veteran admitted he was "sued" to begin a sexual relationship with the woman and to sell criminal histories from FBI files because he was pressed for money.

Adoption fair focuses on hard-to-place children

The state's first-ever adoption fair uses technology and an old-fashioned formula for love in drawing attention to the hard-to-place child in need of a home.

The two-day fair, geared toward the hard-to-place child, begins Saturday and ends Friday at the State of Illinois Children's Home in Carbondale. It was designed to provide information to those who want to learn about adoption and to help place those who make up the waiting list of children.

The children who are hard to place include those who are physically or mentally handicapped, as well as those from all ages. white children over the age of 10 and groups of siblings.

There are brothers and sisters who need to be placed together. Sometimes a home will become available for one and not the other," said Gary Cawson, a spokesperson for the fair.

"Unfortunately, children who fall into these categories are the ones who are overlooked not the ones who need any less love," she said.

The fair is sponsored by the Adoption Information Center of Illinois, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services and the Child Care Association of Illinois in an effort to make a match made by love, said Cawson.

"The DCF's and the state have always been concerned about placing children in good homes, particularly those who are hard to place," said Cawson.

The computer program, which was introduced at the fair links families seeking children and children waiting for homes by similarity of race-ethnic background of children and parents, geographic proximity of children and families, religious preference of youngsters or biological parents, number of children to be adopted together and the kinds of disabilities.

The fair, however, is not a fair of children on display. Prospective parents get to meet the children through one-page biographies and amusing black and white photographs that bring their likeness.

Mary Nicolson, of Schaumburg, who has expanded her family of two boys with the addition of two girls said she and her husband chose two daughters because the girls have "special needs." The girls have Downs Syndrome.

"It's difficult to describe the reasons for adopting a child with special needs. It's a different kind of parenting, but it is parenting and it is rewarding. The children are children first, not handicapped or suffering from any physical or behavioral disorder," Nicolson said. She gave birth to two boys, Joshua, 10, and Matthew, 7.

"We decided we wanted more children. So, I guess you could say we kind of put them on special order. We looked for children with special needs. We didn't settle for them because we couldn't get a child that would be considered normal. We got the kind of cutie we wanted," she said.

The two "special orders" who make up the Nicolson family are Jenny, 4, and Carie, 4. Nicolson said the girls are only 14 weeks apart in age.

While at the fair, the Nicolson siblings watch people as they page through the adoption folders that include biographies and many photos on adoption. Matthew, the family's resident photographer, carried his camera around his neck, and his brother chaffered Jenny around in her stroller. Carie had the best seat in the house in her mother's arms.

The agencies at the fair include AASK Midwest, an adoption agency of special children that serves Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan; the Bensenville Home Society; the Lutheran Social Services of Illinois, and Adoption Information Center of Illinois.

"Contrary to what people may feel, we try to screen those wanting to be parents in advance," said Alan D. Twigg, a DCFS social worker.

The adoption process begins with a series of interviews of prospective parents and is no longer limited to married couples. Single parents are welcome to adopt and salaries are no longer a major factor.

Several options available to students traveling home

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

How to get home from school is a concern for all students by all students a least once during their stay at SIU-C. And the nearer the home is, the greater the challenge to get there.

A variety of options are available for the student wishing to travel home for the weekend or the holidays. The options are: travel by car, bus, train, or plane.

If someone wants to get home quickly, air travel is the best bet. Brits Airways, out of William O'Brien Airport in Marion, and ResortAir, from Southern Illinois Airport in Murphysboro, are two new shuttle services with connections to St. Louis, Springfield and Chicago.

Fares for the two services are comparable, but advance bookings are necessary for both. Brits Airways gives a special rate if bookings are made 30 days in advance: $115 round trip to Chicago if you stay over a Sunday and no longer than 21 days. Fry's, the customer service director at Williamson County Airport, said on seven-day advance bookings the price is $186 if you stay over Sunday and no longer than 60 days. Fry said, all tickets are refundable.

Britt's expanded service, which started June 3, has taken off like a rocket, Fry said. "Right now, most of the flights are being filled by family businessmen, but we hope to attract a lot of SIU students to this service."

There is a daily waiting list for the flight, which departs at 6:25 a.m., stops over in Springfield for about 10 minutes, and is scheduled to arrive at Meigs Field in Chicago at 8:40 a.m. The return flight leaves Meigs at 4 a.m. and arrives in Marion at 6:25 p.m.

We encourage people to make reservations as far in advance as possible," Fry said.

For those who wish to arrive at O'Hare Airport in Chicago, there is a shuttle available from Meigs Field at no extra cost, Fry said. Also, you can switch to an 88-passenger jet at Springfield, if you want it.

While Britt's flights are made in 48-passenger turboprop planes, Fry said Round trip rates to St. Louis are $195, with no special rates available.

"Right now Britt has no special student rates available," Fry said. "This policy was adopted so that no one group of travelers would feel discriminated against."

ResortAir, a St. Louis-based commuter service serving Southern Illinois, offers feeder flights that link up with TWA flights to Chicago from St. Louis. Ron Tucker, regional manager at Southern Illinois Airport said, "ResortAir has a student discount rate of $124 round trip to Chicago, but one-day advance booking is required, Tucker said. Regular fare is $174 round trip. Neither fare is refundable.

For students who prefer train travel, Amtrak rates are $43.50 one way to Chicago and $69 round trip, an Amtrak spokesman said.

Although service doesn't extend to Springfield from Carbondale, students should check with Amtrak to see what depot is closest to Carbondale, the spokesman said.

Bus rates are $32.50 two-way to Springfield and $61.30 two-way to Chicago, a spokesman for Gulf Transport Bus Lines in Carbondale said. St. Louis is $34.40 round trip.

House subcommittee approves bill to restore food stamps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee approved legislation Thursday that would partially restore the food stamp cut Congress made at the beginning of the Reagan administration.

The modest restorations, part of a measure to extend the food stamp program for another five years, emerged from recommendations of a hunger task force appointed by President Reagan and legislation passed last year by the House but ignored by the Senate.

Robert Greener of the Committee on Budget and Policy Priorities, said he was pleased with the measure but anticipated strong efforts to block the restorations as the bill moves through Congress as part of pending farm legislation.

The subcommittee defeated by voice vote an amendment by Rep. Bill Emerson, R-Mo., to give states an option to set up their own nutrition assistance programs in place of food stamps. That concept, advanced by Reagan's hunger task force, is expected to be considered again as the legislation moves through Congress.

But Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the domestic marketing, consumer relations and nutrition subcommittee, said turning food stamps over to the states poses a "risk that the benefits will be reduced."

The subcommittee defeated a move to repeal a special program that replaced food stamps with a special cash program in Puerto Rico. The subcommittee-passed measure would raise food stamp benefits slightly across the island by revising a formula that ties benefits to food inflation.

The measure would restore previous cuts in food stamp benefits for low-income working families. The elderly and disabled would get more credit for medical cost deductions in determining eligibility for stamps.

Each state would be required for the first time to set up a training and employment program for employable food stamp recipients.
Weaver returns to Orioles following Altobelli’s firing

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Earl Weaver, officially returned as manager of the Baltimore Orioles after a 23-year absence Thursday and will assume control of the team Friday night.

Weaver replaces Joe Altobelli, the man who replaced him as manager in 1983. Altobelli guided the Orioles to the world championship in 1983 but the club slumped to fifth place in the AL East last year and is currently in fourth place, eight games behind Toronto.

Orioles General Manager Hank Peters made the announcement of Weaver’s return at a news conference Thursday at Memorial Stadium.

Peters said that Weaver has agreed to return as manager for the balance of the season and a contract was reached at 12:30 p.m. Thursday in Washington.

Peters said Weaver had a prior commitment Thursday night and would not be available to comment. A news conference with Weaver is scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday at the stadium.

Peters said coach Cal Ripken would manage the team for Thursday night’s game against the Milwaukee Brewers and Weaver would be in the Baltimore dugout Friday night.

Weaver, who said he was retiring from baseball in 1982, reportedly becomes the highest paid manager in baseball upon replacing Altobelli.

At Weaver’s request, the contract runs to the end of this season, at which point Orioles management would be re-evaluated.

Although monetary terms were not revealed at the news conference, UPI’s senior sports columnist, Milton Richman, in reporting Wednesday that Weaver would return, said that Weaver would become the highest paid manager in baseball for the fifth time.

Yankee manager Billy Martin is the No. 1 money maker among managers, at over $400,000 a year. Weaver will get more and he will be paid in a unique fashion — on a per diem basis.

Weaver has told the Orioles he wants to be paid per diem, making him the first manager in history ever to be paid on a day-by-day basis.

“We are sorry about relieving Joe Altobelli,” Peters said. “It was a difficult decision, but we did not like the direction in which the club seems to be headed and decided that a change was necessary.”

At the same time, we felt that Earl with his knowledge of the club, of the organization and most of the players as well as his past record as a winner was the most appropriate choice to replace Joe in this situation.”

Altobelli did not attend the news conference but said as he was leaving Memorial Stadium: “I’m going to give it a couple of days and be back at the stadium Monday.”

Bandits remain with USFL

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Tampa Bay Bandits will remain in the United States Football League in 1986 without owner John Bassett.

Bassett balked at the 15 percent cut to be made to a fall season in 1986 and announced an April 29 league meeting that he would start his own spring league. However, Bassett’s plans were halted by his deteriorating health.

Bassett has been in his hometown of Toronto for over a month while undergoing treatment for two brain tumors, one of which is inoperable.

“We are part of the league,” Campbell said Thursday. “Our options are to merge to sell for moving to another city or to sell and remain in Tampa.”

Campbell emphasized John Bassett Enterprises will not own and operate a team in the USFL playing in the fall.

USFL commissioner Harry Usher Thursday announced both Tampa Bay and Denver Gold will remain in the league next season.

Saluki swimmers, coaches honored as state’s best

By Mike Frey
Sports Editor

Coaches and athletes of the Saluki men's and women's swimming teams received recognition from the Illinois Swimming Association for the 1984-85 season, the ISA announced recently.

Both women's swimming coach Tim Hill and men's swimming coach Doug Ingram were named university division "coaches of the year" for guiding their teams to outstanding seasons.

Gary Brinkman and Wendy Lucero were also honored by the ISA. Brinkman was named "men's athlete of the year," and Lucero gained the same honor.

Hill led the Salukis to a fifth-place finish in the NCAA finals at Tuscaloosa, Ala., last March, the biggest-ever finish for SIU.

It was the fourth consecutive time Hill has led the Salukis to the finals in his five years with the Salukis. SIU finished seventh in 1984 and ninth in both 1985 and 1982.

Ingram guided the Salukis to their fifth consecutive Top Twenty finish at the NCAA finals. The Salukis finished 12th in 1984, 1985 and 1982 and 15th in 1981.

Ingram completed his first season at SIU, replacing Bob Steele, who left the Salukis after 11 seasons to become the aquatics director of the Justus Aquatics Center in Orlando, Fla.

Ingram coached at Indian River Junior College in Fort Pierce, Fla, for five years prior to his arrival at SIU. He led the IRJC men's team to the NJCAA national championship in each of his five years and guided the women's team to the national title twice.

Brinkman placed fourth nationally in both the 500- and 1,650-yard freestyle and set university state records in both events with times of 4:18.16 and 14:34.72, respectively. His time in the 1,650 is a school record.

Brinkman, a junior from Athlone Park, South Africa, will be the Salukis' top returning swimmer.

Lucero, a junior from Aurora, Colo., became the second Saluki in history to claim a national title. She won the 1-meter diving competition with 164.30 points. She also placed sixth in the 3-meter with 164.30 points.

Franco benched by Indians

CLEVELAND (UPI) — There are 28 reasons Cleveland shortstop Julio Franco has been benched as of late.

One is a slightly pulled hamstring. The other is 19 errors.

"If I figured some rest might help Julio both physically and mentally," Indians manager Pat Corrales said, "I didn't do him down because he was a little late for a practice.

"The rainouts Tuesday and Wednesday nights" will help him, Corrales said in today's Thursday.

Franco, who will commit 55 errors at this pace, used the free time to check out his equipment.

"I oiled two of my gloves," he said.

"Were they rusty?"

"The gloves are OK," he replied. "I'm kind of rusty."

Franco has not started since Sunday, and club scuffle had hit that tardiness rather than a sore hamstring was the reason.

"Julio really wasn't late for a practice," Corrales said. "I wouldn't jump all over him if he was.

"There are two reasons he sat out — his hamstring and his errors." Franco said Thursday that his left hamstring "feels much better."

I got to rest for four days or so, and there's not so much stiffness now," he said. "I'm ready."

But Bert Blyleven also ready. The veteran right-handed aimer for his 300th victory Friday night as Cleveland opens a four-game series with Oakland.

Both Blyleven's milestone attempt and the concerted efforts of the Indians to trade him have been thwarted by rain.

"I know I'm going to be traded soon, so they might as well do it now," he said. "I'd rather go to the West Coast or to a contender."

Preseason NIL field announced

NEW YORK (UPI) — Duke, St. John's, Louisville and Kansas — schools rich in basketball tradition — were among 16 teams selected Thursday by the National Invitation Tournament for their first pre-season competition.

The selection committee also chose Auburn, Navy, West Virginia, Tulane, Dayton, Miami (Ohio), Texas A&M, Alabama-Birmingham, Illinois State, Texas-Pan American, Marquette and Providence.

"We selected the best teams we could get, based on our perception of how we thought they would do next season," said Peter Carlesimo, executive director of the tournament.

The committee divided the country into eight regions and set up an advisory board to rank each team by its projected finish in its conference. Among the criteria used in the selection process were quality of returning starters, returning lettermen, recruits, eligibility of redshirts and transfers, strength of the conference and availability.

Meade recruits all-around gymnasts for Saluki men

By Mike Frey

Bill Meade, coach of the SIU-C's men's gymnastics teams, has signed two prep recruits who he expects to help the Salukis next season.

Meade has signed all-arounders Brent Reed of American Fork, Utah, and Johnathan Dumas of Pflugerville, Texas. Meade said he considers Reed to be the top recruit in the country.

"I think Reed is really a good one," Meade said. "He's our top prospect and I think he'll help us immediately.

Both Reed and Dumas will be competing in the Junior Olympics, which begin June 26 in Columbus, Ohio. Meade said he expects Reed to finish in the top 12 in the all-around competition at the prestigious meet.

Meade said Reed is a former club teamer of Greg Upperman, a junior on the Saluki team. He said Reed and Upperman have trained together for several years, and Reed also worked a key role in Reed's decision to attend SIU-C.

Meade said Dumas is not as talented as Reed in all-around competition, although he is strong in several specialized events. Kevin Muens, Dumas's coach at the Plano gymnastics club, is a former SIU-C gymnast.

Meade said he didn't have to concentrate as heavily on recruiting this season because he lost only one athlete from last year's team. Lawrence Williamson, a Williamsport graduate who joined the Salukis last season, specialized in the floor exercise and the vault.

"We're in good shape next year and that makes it nice for a coach," Meade said. "We will do a better job next year."

The Salukis placed 10th out of 10 teams at the NCAA finals in Lincoln, Neb., last April. SIU-C has qualified for the NCAA finals for three consecutive years. Meade has led the Salukis to four national championships in his 29 years at the school, the last one coming in 1971.

Cub fans get along about as well as the Hawkfights and the McCays, so Cub fans have relished the chance to kick their rivals while they were down.

THE LAST laugh could easily belong to the Redbird faithful. The Cardinals' league-leading offense has struck terror in the hearts of opposing pitchers this season, and the Cubs' star-studded pitching staff could be next.

Cardinal players Tom Herr, Willie McGee, Jack Clark, Vince Coleman and Andy Van Slyke can be found at the top of most National League offensive categories. The old baseball adage says good pitching will always beat good hitting, but the Cardinals are trying to toss that theory out the window. St. Louis has a mediocre pitching staff and has remained competitive primarily through its offensive process.

THE CARDINALS are not ready to lay claim on the world championship just yet, but they have proven that they can compete with the best. St. Louis beat the Mets in three out of four games last weekend and would love to make the Cubs their next prey.

Because of the Cardinals' success, their fans are resting easier. A year that was supposed to be a nightmare has turned into a lot of fun.

The Cubs and their fans take pride in their 1984 divisional title and believe another championship is awaiting the team again this year. But the Cubs shouldn't look too far ahead. The Cardinals are hot on their trail and may spoil Chicago's plans for another September victory celebration.

One of the camps that several Salukis are working at the International Gymnastics Camp in East Stroudsburg, Pa. The camp is operated by Bruce Babcock, member of the Saluki Hall of Fame who won the national championship in 1961 and in 1962.

Meade said the summer would be an active one for him as well. Meade, who has led the Salukis to 17 appearances in the NCAA finals and four national titles in his 29 years at SIU-C, has scheduled a series of trips to various meets throughout the summer.

Meade plans to attend the meet between the United States and the People's Republic of China national team July 5 in Los Angeles. Babcock will compete as a member of the U.S. team at that meet.

Meade will then travel with Habcock and Lutterman to the National Sports Festival. He has also been selected as a guest coach at the qualifying trials for the World Games, which will be held Aug. 12-16 in Columbus, Ohio.

"By that time, it will be time for school to start again," Meade said.

The players and coaches have also contributed to a pool of shares totaling $34,318.62 with Chuck Nevitt getting a quarter of a share.

Coach Pat Riley will receive a full share from the NRA and assistant coaches Bill Bertka and Dave Wohl will get an equivalent from Laker management.

Sixers hire Goukas as new coach

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) -- The Philadelphia 76ers Thursday signed Matty Goukas, 29, a former team spokesperson, as their new assistant coach.

Goukas, who had been considered for the job since the 76ers fired coach Chuck Daly, said Friday he was looking forward to working with players at the next level.

"I am very pleased to be here," Goukas said. "I think it is a good opportunity for me and I am looking forward to it."
