Reagan says SALT 'dead,' links buildup to arms talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan declared the unratified SALT 2 treaty dead Thursday, but linked any immediate U.S. buildup beyond the limits of the abandoned pact to progress in arms talks with Moscow over the next several months.

On a day marked by intensive White House efforts to resolve confusion over his own remarks Wednesday night, Reagan endorsed a statement by chief spokesman Larry Speakes that the agreement is finished as a foundation for arms control.

"The SALT treaty limits no longer exist," Speakes announced. "If we take future actions in the area of arms control, it would be for reasons other than the SALT agreement."

Asked if the treaty is dead, the spokesman replied, "That's right."

Asked the same question, he answered, "We're going to try to replace it."

While hinting SALT 2 limits still could serve as a benchmark for nuclear arsenals, Speakes closed a loophole Reagan left open Wednesday night in suggesting during a televised news conference that his May 27 renunciation of the treaty was not a final abandonment. Reagan said it would be "several months" before the decision to actually exceed the limits would be made.

Speakes said regardless of U.S. actions later this year, when Reagan could decide to exceed SALT 2 limits for the first time, actual compliance — a political commitment since President Carter and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev signed the accord in 1979 — is no longer a concern.

"The United States is indicating that we will no longer be bound by the numerical limits of it," he said. "We have not violated it yet. We may not go over it in the fall."

Reagan, questioned during a meeting with high school exchange students, including eight headed for the Soviet Union, refused to be drawn into another detailed

Plant ordered to pay penalties for contaminating soil, water

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

Whether hazardous wastes that leaked from a Carbondale plant to nearby property and water pose a threat to the community may not be known for more than a year.

Koppers Company Inc., a Delaware corporation that operates a railroad tie and wood treatment plant in northeast Carbondale, was ordered last week to pay $175,000 in penalties and $125,000 in investigatory and court costs for contaminating soil and water near the plant with creosote and other hazardous materials.

Creosote is an oily liquid used as a wood preservative. Under an agreement approved in Jackson County Circuit Court June 4, Koppers must also undertake a study to determine the extent of the contamination and the best way of removing the contaminants.

Clark Mitchell, manager of operations at the Carbondale plant since September 1984, said Thursday the study will go into "full swing" within a week to 10 days but will take about 60 weeks to complete.

The company expects the study to cost close to $1 million, Mitchell said, and cleanup costs could be twice that much.

He said Koppers had been looking into the extent and potential threat of the contamination for a year and a half before the cleanup agreement with the state was signed.

The agreement was reached almost 20 months after Attorney General Neil Hargett's office filed a complaint against Koppers on behalf of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

James L. Morgan, one of the assistant attorneys general assigned to the case, said Wednesday that until the study is completed there is no way to estimate the environmental threat posed by the contamination.

However, Morgan, Mitchell and another Koppers official said there is no reason to suspect that the contamination may be endangering the community because it has not been detected near drinking wells.

The complaint against Koppers, filed Oct. 5, 1984, said that hazardous wastes placed in lagoons on the plant site seeped into ground and surface water and soil in nearby areas.

It also alleged that two cattle died in October 1981 after drinking water tainted by the contaminants.

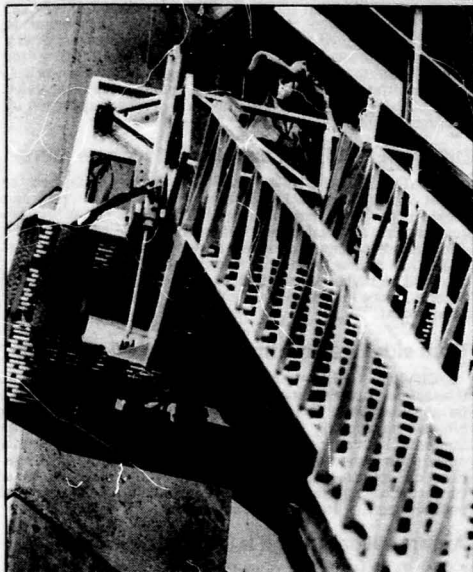

The wastes were also found in Glade Creek, which passes near the northeast corner of the plant before joining Crab Orchard Creek, a tributary to the Big Muddy River.

Mitchell said that since discovery of the contamination in 1981, Koppers has been working with the state to determine the best way to deal with it.

David Kerschner, manager of environmental regulatory programs for Koppers, said the company has had contamination problems at plants elsewhere in the United States. He attributed the problems to outdated wastewater treatment systems, which are no longer used.

Kerschner said that like studies Koppers is conducting at other plants, the one conducted at the Carbondale site will follow guidelines set by the state and federal environmental protection agencies.

Mitchell said that the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency will monitor the study at the plant while it is underway.

Trustees approve budget increase

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

A 6.5 percent increase in the University's budget for fiscal year 1987 was approved Thursday by the Board of Trustees, but the measure still has to be passed by the Legislature.

SIU-C faculty salaries, according to the measure, will be increased by 3 percent of the faculty member's previous year's salary minus the percentages allocated for promotional increases and market and equity adjustments.

Faculty salaries are added together, said Ernest Lewis, associate vice president for academic affairs, and money available for increases is 3 percent of the total faculty salary base.

Promotions and equity adjustments account for 0.64 of the original 3 percent, he said, and the remaining 2.36 percent will be used for across-the-board faculty salary increases. Therefore, each faculty member's salary for fiscal year 1987 will be 2.36 percent more than their fiscal year 1986 salary, he said.

Equity adjustments are made when a faculty member "performing meritoriously" has a salary "out of line," Lewis said. Such a faculty member would receive an equity adjustment to compensate for a low salary, which is a result of lower salary offers in previous years.

Lewis said he wrote a letter two weeks ago to John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs, asking deans to examine the salaries of minorities, women, and full professors.

"We want to be sure that they are not being underpaid because they are women or minorities," he said.

Full professors' salaries are

AIDS virus may have inner defensive device

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The AIDS virus has many variations but each AIDS victim appears to be infected with only one or a few types and becomes resistant to others — a finding that will help in the search for treatment and a vaccine, scientists said Thursday.

Once inside a person, the AIDS virus evolves into many variations, apparently forming a sort of genetic "fingerprint" that is different from patient to patient, the scientists said.

"It has tremendous implications," said Dr. Beatrice Hahn, a research assistant professor in medicine and microbiology at the University of Alabama and a principle investigator in the study.

She said the study "does open a new (research) path in the respect that more information is available now. It will provide a more rational approach" to development of treatments and a vaccine against the AIDS virus.

Hahn is co-author of a report on the study appearing in the journal Science, along with other scientists from the University of Alabama, Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, the National Cancer Institute and the University of Miami.

The researchers isolated acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus from three patients: a Haitian child with AIDS who contracted the virus from its mother; a homosexual man who had AIDS-related complex, a group of symptoms thought to represent a milder and possibly non-fatal form of AIDS; and a woman who also had AIDS-related complex.

The virus changes its outer coat rapidly, a characteristic that researchers thought would make development of a vaccine difficult until they

Contra aid report questions path of last installment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz charged Thursday that congressional foes "concocted" a report that questioned what happened to the last installment of American aid given to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. Shultz accused opponents of President Reagan's plan to give $100 million in aid to rebels of trying to spring "a political surprise" by airing General Accounting Office findings that suggested some of the $27 million non-military aid program approved by Congress last year was misused.

Different test firing considered for new joints

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new design for shuttle booster rocket joints is expected to be completed in a few weeks and engineers are considering a more realistic vertical test firing to guard against a repeat of the Challenger disaster, NASA officials said Thursday. They said the new design for the rocket joint that leaked like a blow torch 59 seconds after Challenger was launched will be reviewed by a National Research Council panel of experts before it goes to NASA Administrator James Fletcher for approval.

Both sides celebrating close abortion ruling

DENVER (UPI) — Anti-abortionists entered their annual convention Thursday buoyant over a close Supreme Court vote on abortion while their philosophical opposites gathered six blocks away hailing the ruling as a victory for women. The Supreme Court ruling Wednesday that declared a Pennsylvania abortion law unconstitutional and the arrest Thursday of anti-abortion activist Joseph Scheider were the chief topics of conversation as delegates gathered at their hotels and local police braced for possible confrontations.

Anti-rebel campaign launched before talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The military has launched a three-day counterinsurgency campaign to head off a possible offensive by leftist rebels before upcoming peace talks, the country's top military leader said Thursday. Some 12,000 troops are sweeping through guerrilla strongholds in northeastern Morazan province, north central Chalatenango, central San Vicente and Usulután and the Guazapa volcano, just north of the capital, said Gen. Adolfo Bláncon, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

Firings prompt consideration of anti-leak laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department moved to fire three workers Thursday for leaking sensitive economic data or using it for personal gain, Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said, and outlawing such leaks is being considered. The dismissals followed a nine-month investigation by the department's inspector general, the FBI and the Securities and Exchange Commission into a leak in September 1985 of the gross national product figures for the second quarter of 1985.

Senate rejects restoring sales tax deductions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate rejected a move to restore sales tax deductions to its tax reform bill Thursday and House Speaker Thomas O'Neill cast doubt on whether the House would fight to completely save IRA tax breaks. On a voice vote, the Senate defeated an amendment that would have kept the sales tax deduction in its bill and pay for it by limiting other itemized deductions.

Doctors deny 'pressure' in considering baby

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (UPI) — Baby Jesse received a heart transplant because the donor parents chose him not because doctors were pressured into reconsidering his plight after first rejecting him, doctors said Thursday. "We went through the usual channels to alert the regional organ procurement agency that Baby Jesse was in need of a heart," said Dr. Bruce Branson, chief of surgery at Loma Linda University Medical Center.

South African exile pleads with university to divest

URBANA (UPI) — South African exile Motielapula Chabaku urged the University of Illinois Thursday to divest its $26 million from companies doing business in the racially separated nation. Chabaku, on the university campus for a weekend National Women's Studies Association conference, told the Board of Trustees it must do more than condemn apartheid. "You cannot say I condemn South Africa ... and still finance it and feed it."

Fighting intensifies around refugee camps

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Shiite Moslem militiamen and Palestinians traded rocket and mortar fire Thursday, escalating a 19-day-old conflict around three Palestinian refugee camps that has left at least 12 people dead.

A Moslem delegation led by Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami traveled to Damascus seeking Syrian help in ending the fighting in southern Beirut.

Moslem political sources said Karami wants Syria to play a more active role in efforts to stop the battles, which have claimed at least 92 lives and left 455 people wounded.

Police said militiamen of Amal, Lebanon's main Moslem militia, and Palestinian guerrillas fought with mortars, rockets and heavy machine guns around the camps of Sabra, Shatila and Burj al Barajneh shortly after Moslem leaders arrived in Damascus on Thursday.

Early in the day, Amal and the Palestinians skirmished with light automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades around the three war-ravaged camps.

Amal, which has the military backing of neighboring Syria, blames the Palestinians for the violence and vows to keep the guerrillas from rebuilding the west Beirut power base they lost in the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

The Palestinians, many of them Sunni Moslems, accuse Amal of trying to force the refugees out of Lebanon.

In Damascus, the visiting Moslem leaders said they would propose a new plan to halt the fighting around the camps and end the rule of Syrian-backed Moslem militias in the western sector of the Lebanese capital.

The proposed plan is based on closing militia offices in mainly Moslem west Beirut and deploying a joint army-police force to restore law and order, sources with the delegation said.

"The Moslem leaders are going to Damascus with a long shopping list, but even if they get the Syrians to agree on everything, it still remains to be seen if the militias can be removed from the streets," said a delegation source who refused to be identified.

The Lebanese army and police forces repeatedly have been deployed in the western part of Beirut, but the rising power of the militias has undermined their role.

Syrian Vice President Abdel Halim Khaddam met Iran's deputy foreign minister, Mohammed Ali Besharati, in the Syrian capital, state-run Damascus radio said without giving details.

Besharati met with Palestinian and Amal leaders in Beirut, trying to arrange a lasting cease-fire around the camps, before he left for Damascus pm Wednesday.

Iran disagrees with the Amal stand that Palestinians should not be allowed to operate freely in Lebanon. Iran, led by Shiite Moslems, intervened after officials from Syria, an Iranian ally and the main power broker in Lebanon, failed to arrange a lasting cease-fire.

Vietnam vets gather in Chicago for tribute

CHICAGO (UPI) — Notes, flowers and combat helmets lined a 250-foot replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Thursday as hundreds of thousands of veterans began to gather for a weekend of reunions, celebrations and memorial services.

As many as 200,000 veterans and their families were reported to have come to Chicago for a three-day tribute to the 58,000 soldiers who died, the 2,400 still missing and those who have lived with the memories of the war for more than a decade.

About 200 veterans, many in fatigues and some in wheelchairs, turned out late Thursday afternoon for a formal dedication of the wall which contains the names of 58,022 soldiers killed in the war.

Former Gen. William Westmoreland, commander of the U.S. forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, described the war as "one of the most selfless and magnanimous actions of a people in the history of the world."

"When our descendants talk about this monument it will be described by the manifestation of a price we paid ... a principle that stands for freedom and self-determination," he said.

Tears flowed down the cheeks of many in the crowd during the singing of "God Bless America," and at least one man sobbed as he stroked the name of a dead comrade etched into the wall.

One of the notes resting against the monument read:

"You slept in the mud against the glare of gunfire. Now may you rest in the glow of perpetual light."

Another note read: "Wayne, I think of you constantly. Mom."

Westmoreland will lead an estimated 100,000 veterans in a Welcome Home ticker-tape parade through the Loop Friday. A memorial service is planned for Saturday, Flag Day, followed by entertainment in Grant Park.

"They're coming in from across the country, even Australia," said Thomas J. Stack, the parade chairman. "We've been swamped with calls from vets who plan to be here."

"For the first time in 18 years, guys who served in units will be reunited to talk about their experience," said Gil Lagosh, who was 19 when he served in Vietnam in 1968. "This parade will be an emotional thing. Vietnam veterans from across the country say they'll make it to Chicago no matter what."

Several reunions will be held Sunday in hotels and a banquet is planned for more than 80 Congressional Medal of Honor recipients.

found one particular area that appears to remain the same throughout all variations of the virus.

Hahn and her colleagues found viruses with different coats in each individual patient, and various viruses from a single patient were different when compared with viruses taken from other patients.

However, she said, "as a group, the viruses from one patient were more highly related to each other than they were to any viruses from the other patients."

This shows "some sort of mechanisms arise that prevent superinfection with different viruses" once a patient is already infected with AIDS virus. "We don't know what they (the mechanisms) are."

Hahn said the team couldn't rule out the possibility each patient was infected with many different forms of the virus, but other research fails to support this idea.

Rural life task force established

SIU has been named to a newly-established task force aimed at shaping life in rural 21st century Illinois. The Governor's Task Force on the Future of Rural Illinois involves consultants from SIU, Western Illinois University, Northern Illinois University and the University of Illinois.

Samuel Goldman, professor of educational administration and higher education and SIU's representative on the project, said the group will hold hearings, gather data and prepare a report titled "Rural Illinois 2000" for the state legislature by January 1987.

Lt. Gov. George Ryan is chairman of the task force.

Goldman said the sites and dates of the public meetings to be held over the next few months will be chosen and set up by Ryan's staff in Springfield. Ryan and the university consultants will attend every meeting.

SIU has been given a state grant of $20,000 for its work on the project. Other financial support will be provided by the University and different state agencies.

SIU's team will focus on the topics of health care and social services. SIU will be examining transportation and economic development and the University of Illinois will study agricultural production and agribusiness. SIU will look at education and local government.

Truth is revealed about Contra aid

THERE IS A SUBSTANTIAL body of proof now available showing that the Reagan administration does indeed treat the issue of aid to the Contra rebels as a covert activity.

Using a network of intermediaries that includes many members of the private sector, the president has found an effective way of skirting the congressional ban on arms to the rebels and has provided military aid through the back door.

National news services reported that in interviews conducted with over two-dozen reputable sources, including key Contra leaders and U.S. military personnel, it was found that White House contact with the Contras has exceeded mere political advice.

Reports say Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, deputy director for political-military affairs at the National Security Council, directed the military aid efforts of private Contra backers, including conservative activist Robert W. Owen and retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub.

THESE ACTIONS SHOW THE Reagan administration is not above operating outside the law to overthrow what it sees as a communist menace in Latin America.

This is just another case of our government meddling in affairs it has no business in. It is hard to believe that the small Nicaraguan army could constitute any threat to U.S. security, and the Sandinista pledge to keep Soviet involvement to a minimum has held so far.

A wary eye should be kept on any government in this hemisphere that leans toward the Soviet bloc for support, but direct or indirect involvement in armed insurrections by our government should not be tolerated by the people of this country.

Until there is actual proof that the Sandinistas constitute a threat to the free world, they should be left to deal with their own problems without outside interference. And the Contra rebels, too, should be left to their own devices.

President Reagan has enough problems without making us Contras, too.

Civic group fights for proper zoning

PRESERVING A FAMILY neighborhood's integrity can be a long-term project, and the residents of a small enclave in the center of the city regard it as a life-long ordeal.

Fighting threats to their neighborhood since 1974, the Central Carbondale Historic Area Association is a good example of what civic pride and community involvement can accomplish.

The neighborhood people, living in an area bordered by Main Street, Schwarz Street, Poplar Street and Oakland Avenue, rightfully believe their turf should not be used for anything other than family living.

And since most of this area's residents are also homeowners their views should be respected by the Carbondale City Council.

The group fought its first battle in 1974 to keep existing properties from being converted to high-density rental housing. They successfully resisted the city's attempts to rezone the neighborhood to allow this change.

CITY COUNCILS CHANGE, and the latest policy change is away from residential expansion to accommodate the city's large student population and toward bringing more private business into Carbondale.

The city recently has considered rezoning this area to allow an insurance company to inhabit a house on one corner of the neighborhood, a move that residents fear may lead to other businesses moving in, altering the complexion of this family environment.

While it is doubtful that the interior of the neighborhood will become a bastion of private enterprise, there is a very real possibility that the neighborhood could become surrounded by a business district.

This could lead to an increase in traffic in the area, bringing unwanted noise and congestion to a previously quiet residential neighborhood.

Residents are right to protest this possible zoning change at this time. Even though seems a trivial matter now, it could lead to the demise of another bit of Carbondale's past.

Does the press tell too much?

from The Washington Post

Opinions from elsewhere

THE REAGAN administration has been in something of a retreat from the outrageous position on the press that the chiefs of two intelligence agencies expressed recently. William Casey of the Central Intelligence Agency and Lt. Gen. William Odom of the National Security Agency had "cautioned" reporters covering a current spy trial "against speculation and reporting details beyond the information actually released at the trial."

Mr. Casey took back the word "speculation" and in the course of pronouncing the press reaction to his first words "hysterical," insisted he was not trying to tear up the First Amendment. The administration, a White House spokesman added, does not condone "prior press censorship, or press censorship in any way impinging on the freedom of the press to report information and events."

THESE ASSURANCES are welcome. They do not, however, erase the widespread suspicion that in reacting to press leaks this administration is pressing hard against the outer limits of reasonable behavior. It is not the first administration to feel plagued and persecuted by the pourousness of government, or to identify its own embarrassment with a grievous assault on the national interest, or to take strong measures to erase its distress.

Its fever, however, is very high. The Reagan team badly needs to inject a dose of proportion into its responses to the rigors of political life and to show a keener appreciation for the liberties whose preservation is the first goal of government.

THE CASEY-ODOM "caution" to journalists covering the Ronald Pelton spy trial in Baltimore shows precisely the flaw. The two intelligence men made a revealing admission. "Certain classified information" is being released at the trial, they said, and that the release had been decided on by "appropriate government authorities after careful consideration of the demands of trial and the potential harm that release of this selected data may cause the national security. The information thus selected has been carefully chosen to balance these competing interests."

The effort to keep secrets by prosecuting those who provide them to an enemy can involve some compromising of secrets; the tradeoff can agonize conscientious officials. The premise of the Casey-Odom statement, however, is that information is an official commodity and that only government can weigh "competing interests" and decide what part of it should be made public. We accept the government's right to establish a classification system. But we also assert the journalist's right to decide what is will publish. Journalists do not lose this right when an official yields a classified stamp.

RESPONSIBLE journalists, moreover, are not promiscuous in the exercise of this right. They do consider "competing interests." Sensitive information that comes this newspaper's way is regularly and conscientiously screened for its possible value to an enemy. You will not be surprised that there are cases at the margin where the judgement of an independent newspaper and an official agency differ. But you are entitled to know — and to expect — that even as journalists rise to protect the very hirt of official "cautions," they apply cautions of their own.

Meese's mind was already made up

By Scott Freeman
Editorial Page Editor

Censorship of any kind should disturb everybody living in a supposedly free society. And once again, it is rearing its ugly head on a national level.

Case in point: Attorney General Edwin Meese's Commission on Pornography, an agency formed to investigate the moral blight of pornography and its effect on the public, particularly criminals.

This is a noble cause, but one rightfully attacked by critics who claim that the commission had reached a conclusion before ever beginning the investigation. And the conclusion is that any depiction of nudity constitutes pornography.

But should magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse be considered pornography? Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner said this week that these types of magazines would be rated "PG-13 or R at worst," if such classifications existed for periodicals.

By categorizing these magazines as pornography and maybe even declaring them illegal publications in the future, the government leaves itself open to charges of censorship.

Presidential plans unlikely for Simon, spokesman says

By Lisa Eisenhsuer
Staff Writer

Sen. Paul Simon has no intention of heeding the pleas of some colleagues and mounting a campaign to become the Democratic presidential nominee for 1988, a spokesman said Thursday.

Two Democratic congressmen — Rep. William Lehman of Florida and Rep. Fortney Stark of California — are asking fellow representatives and senators to sign a letter urging Simon to consider vying for the nomination.

However, David Carle, Simon's press secretary, said Simon "will certainly decline any request to become a candidate for the presidency."

"He just has no intention of mobilizing a campaign to become a candidate," Carle said.

John Shelby, press secretary for Lehman, laughed when asked if Simon was aware of plans to urge him to try for the presidential nomination before Thursday, when news of the letter surfaced. He said Lehman and the senator from Makanda had breakfast together Wednesday.

Shelby said Stark and Lehman are pressuring Simon to run because they feel he "represents what is best about the Democratic Party."

Simon is a popular legislator who is respected by his colleagues, he said. "He has unquestionable personal integrity."

Shelby said he did not know how many legislators had signed the letter, but according to a report in the Chicago Tribune Thursday, it has at least 12 names.

Lehman and Stark are less concerned with gathering an abundance of signatures than with getting signatures from legislators who represent a cross section of the Democratic Party, Shelby said, because the congressmen want to show Simon that he has broad support for the nomination.

Lehman, a congressman since 1972, worked with Simon throughout his five terms in the House and has kept close ties with him at his new post in the Senate, which he moved to in 1985, Shelby said.

When asked to comment on Carle's statement that Simon has no intention of seeking the nomination, Shelby said that while the senator may not be at the point where he wants to pursue the nomination, "he's not at the point where he wants to walk away from it either."

Carle said Simon is devoting his time to his work in the Senate and currently has no interest in mounting a campaign for the presidential nomination, but he did not rule out the possibility that Simon will opt to make a bid for the post in four years.

7 social work students given scholarships

Seven students in the School of Social Work have received academic awards for the 1986-87 school year.

Catherine S. Haney of Centralia received the Leah M. Reef Memorial Scholarship, an award of $180. Reef, an Olney native who was instrumental in founding the Carbondale Public Library, left a $10,000 fund for the scholarship.

Charlotte A. Browder of Grand Tower was awarded a $300 Robert W. Davis Memorial Scholarship, which was established by the late Marie K. Davis in memory of her husband, "Colonel Bob," who was chairman of SIU's first independent Board of Trustees.

Lisa J. Varnes of Lombard was awarded a $100 Carrie M. Bunn Scholarship given to undergraduate students.

Sandra J. Wisdom of Lenzburg received a $200 Lloyd and Edna Morey Scholarship. The late Lloyd Morey was a visiting professor and his wife established a fund that provided scholarships at the University of Illinois, Bradley University, SIU and Lawrence University in Appleton, Wis.

Susan E. Decker of Champaign was the first recipient of the Martha Breije Scholarship. The $600 award goes to a junior in social work who demonstrates academic achievement and a dedication to social work. The scholarship is in memory of Breije, who taught social work for 18 years.

Pentagon to proceed with Bigeye testing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon ignored severe congressional criticism of the Bigeye nerve gas bomb and said Thursday it will go ahead with initial production of the weapon for test purposes.

"We believe those opposition views are wrong," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said. "We are confident the Bigeye chemical munition is a good weapon."

Two senior Pentagon officials connected with the Bigeye program, flanked by a slide projector and a model of the 500-pound bomb, called a news conference to dispute a General Accounting Office report and criticism by Sen.

David Pryor, D-Ark., and Rep. John Porter, R-Ill.

The report by the investigative arm of Congress, released Tuesday by Pryor and Porter, charged that Air Force and Navy tests of the bomb were unable "to demonstrate the feasibility and effectiveness of the Bigeye" and further testing "will not address many of the unresolved critical questions which remain."

Pryor termed the Bigeye a "turkey" and Porter described it as "fatally flawed."

Bigeye is one of three types of a new generation of chemical munitions, called binaries — a two-chambered shell that mixes the lethal gases while the weapon is in flight.

The gases of those in the current stockpile already are mixed and the Pentagon has said hundreds of them leak.

The other two types of weapons are 155mm artillery shells and rockets.

U.S. chemical weapons production was halted in 1969. But the Reagan administration argues new ones are needed to deter the Soviets from unleashing such weapons in a war and to lessen the chances U.S. forces would launch nuclear weapons to counter a Soviet chemical attack in Europe.

Graduates' antics disrupt CCFA commencement day

By Brett Yates
Staff Writer

The noise of champagne corks popping, bottle rockets being shot off and chatting during the commencement address accompanied the graduation ceremonies May 10 for the College of Communications and Fine Arts.

President Albert Somit, who attended the commencement at 6:30 p.m. in the Arena, said while most of the other ceremonies went well, the CCFA ceremony was something to be "a little ashamed of."

He said that he believed the graduation ceremony is an inappropriate place to bring alcohol and that students should celebrate afterwards.

John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs, who also attended the CCFA commencement, said alcohol was consumed at all the commencements, but not the "magnitude" of the alcohol consumed at the CCFA ceremony.

"The whole ceremony degenerated from a graduation to a party," Guyon said. If he were a parent of a graduating student, he said, "it would have upset me."

Guyon said some kind of "control mechanisms" are needed to prevent behavior from degenerating at future ceremonies. "This is a University function," Guyon said, "and inappropriate that alcohol be there."

FA Dean Keith R. Sanders agreed with Somit and Guyon. Sanders said he believed the graduation commencement should be one of "joy and celebration," but that alcohol and raucous behavior should be exempt from the ceremony.

"I think in a friendly spirit we ought to discourage drinking in the graduation ceremony," he said. "I believe we can have a one-and-a-half hour graduation which would be a fun and interesting occasion without anyone drinking."

Sanders, however, said that while some students acted up, the majority behaved themselves. "When the students came across stage they were very friendly," Sanders said.

One "friendly" student gave Sanders a small sausage pizza and a coke. Sanders said that while he could not remember the name of the student who gave him the pizza, he recognized him and believed it to be a friendly gesture.

"I don't know how he knew my favorite pizza was sausage," Sanders said laughing.

Larry Chapman, director of student affairs at the College of Business Administration, said that he only heard "a half a dozen" champagne bottles opened during the COBA ceremonies. Most of the people at the commencement were quiet, he said.

Gilbert Kroening, dean of the School of Agriculture, said he only saw one bottle of champagne at the School of Agriculture's commencement at 11 a.m. in Shryock.

This is the second year the University has had separate commencements for the individual schools. Somit said that the separate commencements have worked out well and have been well received by students, parents, faculty, and staff.

The commencement committee will meet Monday, but committee chair Paula Woelke said discussion of the antics is not on the agenda.

She said that the committee schedules times and places for the commencement ceremonies, and that attempts to curb future commencement problems is the responsibility of the individual colleges.

Rally to mark 600 deaths in S. Africa

The Minorities in Allied Health and Public Services student group and the People Living the Dream committee will co-sponsor a rally commemorating the 10th anniversary of the "Soweto Rebellion" at noon Monday in the Free Forum Area.

Reports said that during the 1976 rebellion, 20,000 students were fired upon by South African police when they approached their destination in a march to protest a government policy requiring the equal use of Afrikaans and English as the official languages of school instruction in South Africa.

The death toll rose to 600 over a 16-month period in which there were a series of boycotts, strikes, protest marches and riots.

Admissions rise, aid cut

The increase in student admissions at SIU-C has been partially attributed to projected cuts in student aid which could make SIU-C attractive to students who had planned to attend a more expensive institution.

New Student Admission Services director Terry D. Mathias said freshmen admissions for fall are 22.4 percent above last year's freshmen admissions during this period, and transfer admissions stand about 6.5 percent above last year's records. However, Mathias said there are no plans to close admissions.

Associate chemistry prof rewarded for top research

By Ellen Leong
Staff Writer

Stephen Scheiner, associate professor of chemistry and biochemistry, is the recipient of the College of Science's first Outstanding Researcher award.

The award, announced by Dean Russell R. Dutcher, will be given annually to recognize those whose work shows significant contributions to their field of research.

Scheiner, 35, received his Ph.D. at Harvard University under the direction of Nobel Prize winner William Lipscomb in 1976. After two years as a Weizmann Postdoctoral Fellow at Ohio State University, he joined SIU-C as an assistant professor in 1982 and will be promoted to full professor by July 1.

"I became interested in chemistry when I was in junior high," Scheiner said. "I've always like science, it's just a matter of choosing which field of science to get involved in."

"Chemistry is an exciting field, there seems to be a lot of questions that are not answered yet and I thought maybe I could try to answer some of those things."

Scheiner's research interests are in the theoretical modeling of hydrogen bonding and proton transfer in systems designed to model more complex biological processes.

Steven I. Scheiner

"If you are interested in science, the best thing is to read about it, you can get pretty high level if you just read and do some thinking about it," he said.

"The interesting part in doing science is working in areas you're trying to solve problems which no one has done before, that makes it exciting," Scheiner said. "If you're repeating somebody else's work or confirming other people's findings, it isn't very exciting."

"I like solving puzzles," he said, "there's a lot of science that's gone on before and everything you do is just building on previous foundations, and people who will come after me will hopefully use some of the principles that I have established."

Scheiner has had 66 research papers published in national and international research meetings.

A quiet person by nature, Scheiner likes to keep unusual pets. Reptiles are his favorite, as is reflected by his ownership of two iguanas, a turtle and at one time several snakes and newts.

He says he likes them because of their quiet personalities. "I like to watch how they behave and how they figure things out because they are probably the dumbest form of animals," he said.

"Reptiles don't require a lot of attention or care," he said. "You can neglect them quite a bit, and not feed them every day."

Scheiner, now living in Murphysboro, commutes daily to work on his bicycle. He likes the leisurely pace of the bicycle and on weekends, he will go on a 30- to 40-mile ride.

Senate votes to save oil industry loopholes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, ratifying a political deal crucial to its tax reform bill, voted Thursday to save special oil industry loopholes, but House Speaker Thomas O'Neill cast doubt on whether the House would fight to keep IRA tax breaks.

On a 77-20 vote, the chamber tabled an amendment from Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., that would have dropped from the sweeping legislation special tax shelters for investments in the oil and gas industry.

Earlier, the Senate rejected on a voice vote another amendment that would have restored sales tax deductions to the radical measure drafted by the Finance Committee.

The special oil industry tax breaks, worth about $1.5 billion in the next five years, were originally placed in the bill as a way to win over oil state senators and get the measure passed by the Finance Committee.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the panel's chairman, opposed the provisions in committee. But on the Senate floor he defended them as necessary for the survival of the bill, even though he admitted they were unfair.

Weicker, however, argued the tax breaks hurt the tax reform cause. "Remember, you're not selling this bill... as an exercise in politics," he said. "It's being sold as an exercise in fairness and simplicity."

Packwood and other supporters have thus far successfully opposed all amendments to the bill, arguing that any significant change could unravel the entire measure. The vote on the oil issue was further evidence that the measure is moving toward being approved virtually unscathed.

Democrats sued by LaRouchites

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two supporters of right-wing extremist Lyndon LaRouche filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court Thursday, claiming they should be allowed to speak before the Illinois Democratic convention in Springfield this weekend.

The suit was filed in Chicago on behalf of Mark Fairchild and Janice Hart, who scored upset victories last March in the Democratic primary for lieutenant governor and secretary of state.

State Party Chairman Vince Demuzio of Carlinville announced Wednesday the LaRouche candidates would not be allowed to address the convention on Saturday.

Demuzio, who was not immediately available to comment on the lawsuit, said the decision was based on the fact that neither Fairchild nor Hart is a Democrat.

The suit filed against Demuzio claims the two LaRouche candidates have a right to present their views to the convention.

Demuzio also said he wasn't sure if party officials would allow Fairchild and Hart inside the Springfield union hall where the convention will be held.

"It's a small hall," Demuzio said. "They're not Democrats. We're not going to give them any credibility."

Fairchild charged the move was "an attempt to stifle my vote."

"This smells of divine right of monarchy and means Demuzio is running KGB politics," Fairchild said.

Earlier in a letter to Democratic party officials, an official with LaRouche's National Democratic Policy Committee, a group that is not related to any regular Democratic Party organization, said both Hart and Fairchild would attend the convention.

Botha declares emergency state in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The white-minority government declared a nationwide state of emergency Thursday and detained hundreds of anti-apartheid leaders in a bid to stem an anticipated outbreak of racial violence on Monday's anniversary of the 1976 black Soweto uprising.

The emergency, declared by President Pieter Botha, gave police sweeping new powers to detain people without charge and imposed severe restrictions on media coverage of black political violence.

South African Council of Churches leader Christiana Beyers Naude said indications were that 1,000 people were detained in police raids that began before dawn in Johannesburg, Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and Durban.

The government action was denounced by the U.S. government, opposition groups and Canada, which imposed new sanctions. It came after Asian and mixed-race lawmakers blocked a bid to push through Parliament by Monday a series of laws to significantly extend police powers without an emergency declaration.

Botha, in an address to Parliament broadcast nationwide, said intelligence indicated "radicals and anarchists" planned country-wide disturbances "supported by actions of terror and sabotage" next week.

Panama official named for drug, arms selling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration said Thursday it is disturbed by allegations that Panama's military chief is involved in money laundering, drug trafficking and supplying arms to guerrillas.

But the State Department said it is up to Panamanian authorities to investigate the allegations against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the effective leader of the Central American country with close ties to the United States.

Secretary of State George Shultz, asked to comment on allegations against Noriega reported by The York Times and NBC News, told reporters: "I've seen these reports and, of course, activities of that kind are obviously of importance and concern to us. But I don't want to comment further on things that are just coming to our attention."

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said, "We find these allegations to be disturbing and that an examination of these allegations would appear to be a matter for consideration by the government of Panama."

In Panama, the military and the ruling party rejected the reports as "pure lies." Romulo Escobar Bethancourt, president of the military-backed ruling Revolutionary Democratic Party, labeled the allegations an attempt to scuttle the agreement to turn over control of the Panama Canal to Panama in 2000.

Baptists closer to alignment of Protestant body to right

ATLANTA (UPI) — Fundamentalists in the Southern Baptist Convention moved Thursday to more closely align the nation's largest Protestant body with the political and social agenda of the religious right.

The three-day annual meeting of the 14.4 million-member convention ended with outgoing President Charles Stanley turning aside all moderate challenges to the tightly controlled proceedings.

Delegates adopted with little or no debate resolutions commending the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, alleging censorship of the "Judeo-Christian heritage" in school text-books, and condemning abortion and secular sex education programs.

Under Southern Baptist rules, resolutions are only expressions of the opinion of those present and voting. But some officials saw the increasingly political subject matter of the resolutions as signaling the increased presence of a new kind of Baptist in the denomination.

Basics stressed at SIU-C baseball camp

By Steve Merritt
Assistant Sports Editor

Baseball is a fine art, a skill that requires natural talent and instincts as well as the ability to develop and mature. Watching a great pitcher or hitter is like watching an artist paint a picture — when looking upon such a sight, one realizes that not everyone can do it.

Concerning baseball, Saluki coach Richard "Itchy" Jones would be considered a master of the art. This past week and next week, he will be passing on some of the knowledge he has acquired from a lifetime of dedication to America's favorite pastime in the 14th annual Saluki Baseball Camp.

The camp originated some years ago when area parents voiced their concerns on being too far away from a major league park to give their potential gold gloves the kind of exposure they needed to become interested in learning the game of baseball.

"We concentrate on the fundamentals," Jones said at camp on Tuesday morning. "If the kids don't learn the right fundamentals right off the bat, then it gets harder and harder to get out of the habit of doing things the wrong way."

The camp consists of two groups: the first ended their session Thursday and the second group meets from June 15-19. Campers are divided into three age categories. The cost is $200 for resident campers and $135 for campers who commute to and from the camp.

The first session drew 125 campers and the second is expected to draw at least that many. Jones said campers are predominately from the Southern Illinois area, but campers also come from Indiana, Kentucky and Missouri. Jones has had campers from as far away as Maryland.

The campers get started at 8 in the morning, break for lunch at noon, and work until 4 or 4:30 in the afternoon. At night, Jones lectures on the finer points of the game or shows training films and has discussions with all the campers.

"We try to make it fun as well as educational," Jones said.

With Jones' baseball background, educational is an understatement.

Tournaments a feature of 1987 cage season

The SIU-C men's basketball team will host 14 games during the 1986-87 season. The schedule was released by Athletics Director Jim Livengood.

After opening the season on Nov. 15 with an exhibition match against Australia's national team at the Arena, the Salukis host Wisconsin-Stevens Point Nov. 28 in their home opener. Other non-conference teams the Salukis will face at the Arena include William Penn, Murray State, Nebraska, St. Louis, and Eastern Illinois.

Away non-conference games include dates with Northern Illinois on Dec. 20 and SIU-Edwardsville on Jan. 8.

The Salukis will also compete in two tournaments: the Virginia Invitational on Dec. 6-7 which includes New Orleans, James Madison, and the host Virginia Cavaliers; and the Indiana Classic on Dec. 12-13 which includes East Carolina, George Washington and the host Indiana Hoosiers.

The Salukis will open their 16-game Missouri Valley Conference slate against defending MVC champion Bradley on Jan. 10 in Peoria. Two days later the Salukis return to the Arena to face MVC opponent Tulsa.

SIU-C, under second-year coach Rich Herrin, hopes to improve from its 4-12 MVC record and 8-20 season of a year ago.

Cubs fire Frey, call on Vukovich

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former National League manager of the year Jim Frey was fired Thursday by Chicago Cubs President Dallas Green, upset with the club's dismal showing on the field this season.

Hitting coach John Vukovich was named to manage Friday's doubleheader at home against St. Louis. Green would not say who he was considering as a permanent manager. Third-base coach Don Zimmer, a close friend of Frey, also was dismissed.

"I think he did everything in his power to help the players and to help the organization get back on the winning track," Green said of Frey, who led the club to the National League Eastern Division title in 1984. "Unfortunately, it was my opinion that whatever he was doing at this stage of the game wasn't getting the job done."

"I have a lot of respect for Jim Frey. If anybody thinks this job of replacing managers is easy, I dare him to get up here and try to do it."

The struggling Cubs, 23-33, are 16.5 games behind the front-running New York Mets and only one-half game in front of cellar-dwelling St. Louis.

The club just came off a 3-7 road trip, including a three-game sweep by the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates, who lost 104 games last year, have beaten Chicago seven of eight times this year. Ironically, it was in Pittsburgh where the Cubs clinched the 1984 Eastern Division pennant.

The decision to fire Frey came after Tuesday night's loss to Pittsburgh, Green said. He denied any plans to take the

Baseball facility decision delayed by SIU-C board

The SIU-C Board of Trustees postponed a decision on the approval of a proposed baseball training facility and locker room at Abe Martin Field.

The Board decided to postpone the decision until Director of Intercollegiate Athletics Jim Livengood was available to be present at the meeting. Livengood is currently in Florida at a national meeting of collegiate athletics directors.

Private funds raised for the facility amount to $65,000 and labor donated towards the project amount to $40,000. The total cost of the project is estimated at $140,000. About $35,000 of the total cost is to be paid for out of student athletics fees.

team over himself, as he did in 1989 when he stepped down to the field from the front office and led the Philadelphia Phillies to the World Series.

"I'm not in that business anymore," he said. "I'm not going to do that anymore."

Green ordered a mandatory workout for the players Thursday morning without Frey's knowledge. It was then that he told the players about his decision. At the news conference, he refused to discuss what went on at the meeting.

Before Green's news conference, Frey said he was not given a list of reasons for his dismissal.

"The manager has to take responsibility and we were not doing the job on the field," he said.

Asked if the team quit on him, Frey said, "If they quit, they quit on me, Dallas Green, the team, their mothers and the Lord."

Pitcher Steve Trout said he was surprised by the firing. "I know you can't fire all the players," Trout said. "It's just too bad this had to happen."

Green had backed Frey for the better part of the year since the Cubs fell out of contention last year in an injury-plagued campaign. The Cubs, after winning their first title of any kind in 39 years in 1984, fell to 77-84 last year.

With the club's pitching staff recovered from injuries this season, the Cubs were expected to contend again. But the club never got on track.

at SIU-C, Jones had led the Salukis to nine NCAA appearances and three College World Series appearances, with a lifetime record of 610-280-5 (which includes two years as the skipper at MacMurray College). He has coached at the high school level, posting a record of 62-24 in four years at Jacksonville High School, and has played at the professional level as well.

Assisting Jones is SIU-C assistant coach Kirk Champion, graduate assistant Dan Callahan, several members of his baseball team, and several area coaches with long and distinguished baseball coaching careers.

Bert Newman, a former Saluki who ranks in almost every career offensive category at SIU-C, is also an assistant — for the 10th straight year.

A four-year veteran of the camp, 15-year-old Andy Darnell of West Frank-said he learns something new every year.

"It's the best part of my summer," Darnell said, soaking his hands in cold water to help cool the bat-swinging induced blisters on his hands. "As soon as school gets out, the Saluki camp is what I start looking forward to."

And rightfully so — if Itchy manages to pass on just a tincture of what he has been able to learn, the campers will all be very satisfied young men.

Doug Ingram, director of the Saluki Swim Wednesday afternoon at the Rec Center Pool. Camp, gives instructions to his swimmers. The camp runs through June 20.

Annual swimcamp doesn't want kids wet behind ears

By Peter Rechenberg
Staff Writer

It's the second week of grueling practices and aches and pains for participants in the Saluki Swim Camp.

"We are basically trying to improve the swimmers' technique," said Doug Ingram, head coach of the Saluki men's swim team and director of the camp. Women's swim team coach Bailey Weathers is assisting Ingram with the camp, which is scheduled to end June 20.

The camp is competitive in nature, Ingram said. "We work on the four basic strokes, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and freestyle, and we try to improve their speed. We also work on their starts and turns," he said.

The camp, open to boys and girls 10 to 17 consists of three one-week camp sessions. On the final day of each session, there is a testing competition and awards are presented to the swimmers.

Ingram said enrollment varies from 30 to about 60 swimmers.

"With fewer people, they get more individualized attention," said Ingram, "but it's also nice to have a big happy group. We also increase our coaching staff when we have more people."

Camp runs from 6 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. daily, and swimming is not the only thing on the agenda. Two recreation periods, lectures, movies, and videos are used to help swimmers with their techniques.

Goal setting, mental training, nutrition, and physiology are also an important aspect of the sessions, Ingram said.

City's Legion baseball team boosts record

The Carbondale Legion Post 514 baseball team improved its record to 3-0 in district play and 3-1 overall with a come-from-behind 6-4 victory over Herrin Wednesday night at Williams Field in Carbondale.

Herrin held a 4-0 lead into the bottom of the seventh inning before Carbondale erupted for six runs. Carbondale first baseman David Drake started the rally with a leadoff home run.

Carbondale pitcher John Jarvis went the distance to improve his record to 2-0 overall.

Brechtelsbauer signs 4 recruits, looking forward to '87 season

By Ray Albert
Staff Writer

Four highly-touted recruits and a list of 13 returning players has Saluki softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer already looking forward to the 1987 season.

After finishing 23-21 overall and 10-8 in an up-and-down season in 1986, Brechtelsbauer will have seven returning starters from a team that didn't lose by more than two runs during the entire season. Add to that the new recruits and the returning talent and things look rosy for the softball Salukis.

Brechtelsbauer also says her recruiting isn't over and she would like to sign at least two more players for next year.

Joining the Salukis for 1987 are Shelly Gibbs of Carbondale, Theresa Smugala of St. Louis, Kim Hulse of Canton and Karen Wilhelm of Wheaton. Smugala and Wilhelm are junior college transfers who will enter SIU-C with two years of eligibility remaining, while Hulse and Gibbs will be freshmen.

Gibbs was a four-year starter for Coach Vickie King at Carbondale High School and led her team to a 13-6 record this spring. The shortstop-catcher was SIU-C's first signee.

Smugala, touted as one of the top softball players from St. Louis in the last 15 years, batted .446 at Forest Park Community College in the spring while earning all-conference and all-region honors. Last summer, she was named the Most Valuable Player on her Esprit team after hitting .353 during American Softball Association competition.

"Theresa has a pinpoint cannon for a throwing arm," Brechtelsbauer said. "She can make the off-balance play with control. As a junior college transfer, Theresa will be expected to make an immediate contribution to the team."

Smugala is a physical education major and graduated in 1984 from St. Anthony High School before enrolling at Forest Park.

She also received scholarship offers from 1985 NCAA runner-up Nebraska, according to SIU-C Women's Sports Information, as well as California, New Mexico, the University of Albuquerque and Missouri. Iowa and Cal-State Fullerton also show interest in Smugala.

Wilhelm is a catcher by trade but she has the versatility to play other positions as well and has considerable experience. She led her high school team at Wheaton to a four-year record of 102-16, including a third-place finish in the state tournament her freshman year. During her junior season, the squad boasted an impressive 28-1 record.

Wilhelm is also active in the American Softball Association's leagues during the summer and played for five years with the Wheaton Cougars, which finished in the top five teams at the Midwest Regionals four of the past five years.

Earning all-conference honors the past three years, she had a .321 career batting mark including an impressive .400 average her senior year. Her College of DuPage team finished 17-7 the past spring.

"Karen is a clutch player," Brechtelsbauer said. "If a job needs to be done, she seems to be able to do it. She has played with and against other Division I players in summer ball, so she knows what Division I play is all about."

Wilhelm also has a strong and accurate throwing arm, says Brechtelsbauer, along with excellent game sense to complement her physical skills. She plans on majoring in physical education at SIU-C and chose the school over Illinois Benedictine College and Aurora University.

Canton High School had an 18-9 record during Hulse's senior year and she boasted a .321 batting average while leading the team in extra-base hits and in RBIs. She was the team's most valuable player and was a second-team all-conference selection.

"Kim has shown excellent hitting both for power and for a high average," Brechtelsbauer said. "She has a picture-perfect overhand throw and is consistently accurate. She has a lot of raw talent and the ability to work her way into a starting position and contribute her first year."

Hulse has primarily a catching background but has the versatility to be a candidate for other positions as well. A strong doubles hitter, she chose SIU-C over Ball State University, Illinois State and Western Illinois. At SIU-C, she plans to major in elementary education.

Saluki outfielders Finley, Jones chosen in amateur baseball drafts

By Steve Merritt
Assistant Sports Editor

The big leagues... a dream of almost every young boy who knows how to swing a bat and snag a fly ball.

Robert Jones and Steve Finley, two mainstays of the Missouri Valley Conference regular season title-holding Salukis, might get a chance to make that dream become a reality, as they were recently selected in the June Amateur baseball draft.

Jones, a former first-round draft pick in the 1982 amateur draft, was picked by the Milwaukee Brewers in the 20th round while teammate Finley was picked in the 11th by the Atlanta Braves.

Jones, a designated hitter and outfielder for Saluki coach Richard "Itchy" Jones, is SIU-C's career leader in home runs (36), RBI (176), and total bases (372). A free-swinging power to spare, Jones turned down an $80,000 signing bonus in 1982 from the Cincinnati Reds when he graduated from Proviso East High School.

Finley, a junior, is playing ball in the Alaskan Summer League while his father, Howard, tries to negotiate a contract with the Braves. Both Finley and Jones were first-team All-MVC selections.

As of Thursday, neither Jones or Finley had been able to work out deals with the teams that had drafted them.

Another Saluki, Gerry Pitchford, the aggressive leadoff hitter and outfielder who tagged five first-pitches for home runs, has not been contacted but hopes that Coach Jones can use some of his extensive baseball contacts to get him a shot in the big leagues as a free agent.

Jones said that the scouts were worried about Pitchford's size. Jones said that if Pitchford learned how to play second base, he would be a more marketable product because his size would be better suited in the infield.

Two Salukis that were drafted last season, pitcher Gary Bockhorn and catcher Tim McKinley, did not receive offers. While a nagging arm injury has put a damper on Bockhorn's future in baseball, McKinley will probably opt to try out as a free agent.

Marion to host 4 running races

Four running races will be held on Saturday morning at the Marion Memorial Hospital. The races are sponsored by the Peoples Bank of Marion and the Marion Memorial Hospital.

The four divisions include a one-mile speed walk at 7 a.m., a five-mile run and a one-mile fun run at 7:30 a.m., and a fitness walk at 7:35 a.m.

In the five-mile run, awards will be presented to the top three finishers in each age division for males and females. Trophies will also be presented to the men's and women's overall winners in the five-mile run.

All participants will receive certificates.

The Student Programming Council that brings cockroach races in the spring and greased watermelons in the summer will again present its special brand of silliness at the first "Beach Bash" Saturday on Campus Beach.

A variety of music and games will be offered between noon and 4 p.m., said Mindy Duggan, assistant undergraduate programming director. Two more bashes are scheduled for July 19 and August 24.

Music for Saturday's event will be provided by WIDB.

SPC will also present four films this summer. Two of the films, "Superman III" on July 9 and "Sixteen Candles" on July 30, will be shown at the Recreation Center at 8 p.m.

The other two movies will be presented on Campus Beach in a series titled "Sand and Cinema."

"Little Big Man" on June 27 and "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes" on July 25 will be shown at 8 p.m. Popcorn will be provided, but insect repellent will be left up to individual discretion.

Marijuana sinks to 'underworld'

RUSK, Texas (UPI) — Some East Texas marijuana farmers apparently have borrowed a technique from those who farm mushrooms — grow the crop underground.

Cherokee County sheriff's deputies Sunday uncovered a subterranean complex on a farm, 18 feet below a quarterhorse stable. The officers had to go through a trapdoor hidden in a closet of the stable to reach a 100-foot-by-40-foot chamber fitted with an irrigation system and rows of lights.

They also found over 5,000 marijuana plants, some of them 4 feet high.

A generator had been installed to provide power and avoid unusually high electric bills.

The exhibit is open at no charge to the public from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

A-P Council offers suggestions for hiring

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

The Administrative and Professional Staff Council has suggested ways the Affirmative Action office could become more involved in the hiring of administrative and professional employees.

But some council members expressed concern over extending Affirmative Action involvement.

In a first draft of suggestions for working with the Affirmative Action office presented at the council meeting Wednesday, it was suggested that all positions be submitted to the Affirmative Action office for approval. This would include positions that currently comply with Affirmative Action goals for hiring minorities and women based on availability in the field.

Marion Davis, equal opportunity officer for Affirmative Action, said the ratio of minority and women employees at SIU-C should ideally be comparable to the ratio of qualified minorities and women in the field. Goals are based on availability in each field.

Steve Kirk, vice chairman of the council, expressed concern about the increased length of time hiring might take under these conditions. He said potentially good employees may go to other institutions if SIU-C doesn't respond to their applications quickly enough.

Sam McVay, A-P Staff secretary, said, "I don't like the notion that everyone has failed because one or two or three have failed." He was referring to the inclusion of positions that presently have enough minority and female employees by Affirmative Action's standards.

But Davis said there have been about 165 openings in the administrative and professional positions since July 1, 1985. Only about six of those positions met the goals of the Affirmative Action office, she said.

She said the small percentage of positions that meet that goal of the Affirmative Action office would have little impact on hiring procedures. She also said she did not see any delay as a result of going through Affirmative Action.

In other business, Deborah Lindrud, assistant to the executive director of personnel and labor relations, said that SIU-C could be "caught up to its peer institutions based on salary ranges" for newly hired personnel if the University receives a 6 percent budget increase for fiscal 1987.

The increase was approved Thursday by the Board of Trustees. With the increase, salaries for newly hired AP staff members will be increased between 11 and 14 percent.

Lindrud said the increase is based on statistical analysis of salaries at more than 20 universities determined by the IBHE as peer institutions of SIU-C.

There was also concern expressed regarding the lack of outside input to the council. A suggestion was made to publish a questionnaire in the "AP Commentary," the council newsletter, asking staff members why they don't attend the meetings or ask about the pros and cons of the A-P Council.

Belt said the lack of input may be a sign of contentment on the part of staff members.

'Challenge to Excellence' enhances top students' skills

For the third year, "Challenge to Excellence" will offer gifted students from central and Southern Illinois an opportunity to enhance their problem solving and critical thinking skills.

About 125 students will tackle advanced mathematics and science "brainteasers" using microcomputers and laboratory experiments during a summer institute at SIU to be held June 16-27.

David M. Byrd, co-director of the program, said creativity and leadership skills will also be stressed.

In past years, the State Board of Education funded the program, but this year students are paying for the session themselves or have tuition scholarships from one of a variety of civic organizations, Byrd said.

Agencies providing tuition scholarships include Education Service Center No. 17 in Olney, Educational Service Center No. 18 in Harrisburg and regional superintendent of schools offices serving Alexander, Jackson, Johnson, Massac, Perry, Pulaski, Union and Williamson counties.

Immigration legislation to be focus of seminar

A seminar on Congressional Immigration Issues will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the First Presbyterian Church, 310 S. University Ave.

The seminar will focus on congressional legislation to aid Salvadoran refugees, specifically the Moakley-DeConcini bill, which would grant a stay of deportation to certain refugees from El Salvador.

The Rev. Richard Wood, Illinois IMPACT, Illinois Conference of Churches, will conduct the seminar. A member of the Central American visiting team will also be present.

The aim of the seminar is to provide an opportunity for members of local congregations to gain information and insight into federal immigration legislation from a religious perspective.

The seminar is sponsored by the Refugee Resettlement Task Force, the Illinois Consortium on Governmental Concerns of the Illinois Conference of Churches and local congregations.

Carbide accepts decision to try Bhopal case in India

DANEURY, Conn. (UPI) — Union Carbide Corp. announced Thursday acceptance of a conditional court decision to move the trial of suits filed in the Bhopal chemical leak disaster to India.

"We are pleased the court is sending the case to India where it belongs. This is good for Union Carbide," the company said in a brief statement issued at corporate headquarters.

Spokesman Harvey Cobert said the company's decision was based on several clarifications made this week by U.S. District Court Judge John F. Keenan in New York who ruled on May 12 the multibillion dollar lawsuits should be tried in India.

They include the right of appeal, the right to discovery and the limitation of judgments to the company alone.

"We have accepted the judge's conditions as corrected by the court order of June 10, while preserving the right of appeal. Whether we exercise the right of appeal depends on the actions of others," said Cobert.

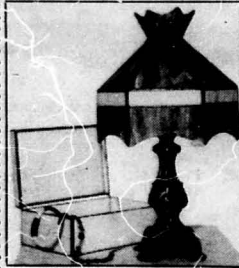

Even with Carbide's assenting to transfer the case, it is uncertain whether a trial will begin soon in India.

Lawyers for victims and the Indian government appear divided on whether to appeal Keenan's decision. They also are haggling over who has the right to represent the victims; a situation that could lead to out-of-court settlements.

The world's worst industrial accident occurred on Dec. 3, 1984, when toxic methyl isocyanate vapor leaked from Union Carbide's insecticide plant in Bhopal, killing almost 2,000 people and injuring some 200,000 others.

An Indian government report issued Thursday said thousands of people are still suffering from the tragedy and many victims may require lifelong medical treatment.

discussion of the issue, but told reporters, "I think you can trust what Larry Speakes told you."

However, Reagan hedged when asked whether the United States would surpass the SALT 2 limits later this year. "Anyone going into negotiations, I think, has a right to remain silent," he said, "so that nothing could be used against him."

Speakes said his statement was intended to dispel "confusion." Administration officials were concerned that Reagan seemed to soften his stand Wednesday night by emphasizing only what one called "the wiggle room" in his position.

Another White House spokesman, Edward Djerejian, touched on this same aspect of that policy in telling reporters that although SALT is finished, "restraint is not dead and we hope that mutual restraint is not dead."

"That," he said, "will depend on what Soviet actions are."

The renewed declarations that that SALT is dead came as the administration expressed interest in a pair of new Soviet proposals and hinted the overtures might have been prompted by the tough line Reagan took in his May 27 announcement.

"We do find it very interesting that at least the Soviets are coming forward with a number of arms proposals in a number of arms control, East-West fora, in view of the president's recent announcements," Speakes said.

The administration declined substantive comment on a Soviet offer for reductions in long-range nuclear missiles, presented Wednesday in Geneva, and invited further elaboration by Moscow and its allies on a Warsaw Pact proposal, announced Wednesday in Budapest, for NATO and Warsaw Pact to each withdraw more than 500,000 troops from Europe.

On Capitol Hill, the House Foreign Affairs Committee approved, 29-11, a non-binding resolution urging Reagan to continue compliance as long as the Soviets do so. The administration has accused Moscow of a pattern of violations. The resolution is expected to go to the House floor next week.

While tough in rhetoric, Speakes said Reagan may not go beyond limitations set by the treaty when the planned deployment of a 131st B-52 bomber with cruise missiles late this year pushes the United States past the SALT 2 ceiling of 1,320 multiple-warhead missile launchers and missile-equipped bombers.

Veteran arms negotiator Paul Nitze, an adviser to Reagan, indicated Wednesday the Pentagon may pull a Poseidon submarine out of service around that time, which would keep the United States within SALT 2 restraints it no longer officially recognizes.

The practical effect would be to again postpone an actual violation of the pact—the final step Moscow views as provocative and one opponents of the move in Congress fear could spawn an escalated arms race.

"He may decide to do that," Speakes said. "And if he does, technically that could keep us under SALT. But it won't be for the reason that there are SALT limits. It will be for the reasons of Soviet behavior."

being examined, Lewis added, because when compared to the median salary at "peer group institutions," SIU's salaries are still below average.

All figures and percentages are based on the assumption that the appropriations bill containing the 6.5 salary increase will be approved by the Legislature, Lewis said.

Salary increases for SIU-C administrative and professional staff members will absorb two-thirds of the 6 percent increase, said James Belt, assistant to the vice president for financial affairs. The salaries are slated to be increased 4.34 percent across-the-board.

The remaining 1.7 percent will be distributed for merit increases using current performance evaluation methods.

The increase percentage for civil service employees has not yet been established, but the available funds will be distributed across-the-board as a percentage of current salary.

The trustees approved an increase in fees for flight training courses offered by the School of Technical Careers. The increase is needed to meet the increased cost of operation, maintenance and replacement of the present fleet of 21 training aircraft; to provide a balanced operations budget for fiscal year 1987; and to fund reserves for the repair and replacement of equipment.

The rationale says that the increased fees will be comparable to or less than the fees charged by other similar programs.

The board also approved a resolution to transfer 14.05 acres of land along McLafferty and Reservoir roads to Jackson County.
