Senators: Happy hours hazardous

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

Happy hour for liquor establishments around the state could turn from happy to just ho-hum, if a bill in the House is passed by Illinois legislators.

Initiated and passed by the Senate, the proposed bill seeks to amend the present Liquor Control Act to restrict free alcoholic drinks and regulate the way patrons are served alcohol.

Senators William F. Mahar, R-Homewood, and Bob Kustra, R-Park Ridge, claim the rationale behind the bill is the relationship between happy hours and alcohol abuse leading to motor vehicle accidents involving alcohol.

Chinese workers get death sentence

BEIJING (UPI) — A Shanghai court sentenced three workers to death Thursday for setting fire to a train during protests against the brutal army assault on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing, state-run television said.

The sentences appeared to signal the government's determination to deal harshly and swiftly with participants in the protests in order to discourage a resurgence of the student-led movement for democratic reforms that has shaken China for weeks.

"The vital key to winning full victory in crushing the counter-revolutionary turmoil is to expose the plot of the handful of people who incited disorder," the Communist Party's People's Daily said.

It described those who led pro-democracy protests as "criminals" and "scoundrels," adding that they were "evil elements of the Bar patrons not happy about happy hour bill

By Theresa Livingston
Entertainment Editor

Those who enjoy their Friday afternoon "happy hours" may find themselves at a loss if a bill pending in the Illinois House is made into law.

The proposed legislation, which is similar in content to one proposed by two Chicago aldermen, would stop the practice of "happy hour."

Happy hours, sponsored by liquor establishments, often include drink specials such as two-for-one prices, large-sized and discounted drinks.

Proponents of the legislation defend the amendment as a way to cut down on state-wide levels of intoxication, particularly during the early evening, after-work hours.

However, on the local level, students and bar proprietors say the proposal

Addressing universities and college towns, which Kustra acknowledges as areas where happy hour practices are popular, he said, "If excessive drinking should be moderated anywhere it should be on the college campuses."

He said being around the campuses of several Illinois universities has shown him the need for students to moderate their drinking habits. Mahar claims the correlation between motor vehicle accidents and the days

University land acquisition approved by board

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The University's prospects for land acquisition in Springfield has been approved by the Board of Trustees, but purchase of the land still hinges on the State legislature.

The acquisition would give the School of Medicine extra research, office and parking spaces.

According to Harris Rowe, chairman of the board, the school wants to buy the Rutledge Manor Complex.

For five years, the School of Medicine has leased half of the Rutledge Manor complex with the option to buy.

Under the lease purchase agreement, the University is allowed to buy the complex for $2.3 million if it is bought before June 30, the end of the fiscal year. Richard King, director of facilities and services at the School of Medicine, said. If the land is blowing trash and a pile of unburied railroad ties, but he denied the charge that the waste liquid runoff from the landfill is contaminating the water-filled strip mine.

Hess blamed the weather for the difficulty in complying with EPA regulations. "The rain is hindering everything. Our dirt hauling equipment has to move from one place to another" but mud makes this impossible, Hess explained.

But Bloom stuck to the allegation made after a County Board meeting Wednesday night. "It (the waste) is entering the water. It is entering what we call lakes," Bloom said.

Bloom said samples were taken from one "area," but the chemical composition of those samples have not been determined. Bloom said, however, that the waste is not hazardous.

The County Board passed an ordinance Wednesday which mandated the county health department to take an active role in inspection and enforcement of EPA regulations at landfill sites in Jackson County.

To pay for this initiative, the County Board instituted a fee on waste collected that is expected to bring the county $100,000 a year.

Explosion rips supertanker docked in Persian Gulf port

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An explosion ripped through the pump room of an oil supertanker docked at the southern Persian Gulf port of Dubai Thursday, killing "several" crew members, shipping sources said. "Several crew members have died but that's all we know for now," one Persian Gulf snipping source said. "We don't know the cause of the explosion yet."

Group releases Belgian hostage in Lebanon

SIDON, Lebanon (UPI) — A shadowy group citing an appeal by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi Thursday freed a Belgian doctor who was kidnapped and taken hostage 13 months ago while doing relief work in southern Lebanon. Jan Coelis, 33, said afterward he was treated "in a bad and nasty manner" during his captivity.

China's turmoil takes its toll on the economy

BEIJING (UPI) — Weeks of turmoil in China have taken a severe toll on the economy, resulting in losses of at least $270 million in Beijing alone, the Xinhua news agency said Thursday. Many foreign businessmen closed their offices and left China after the June 3 military assault on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing's Tiananmen Square that left hundreds of peaceful protesters and bystanders dead.

Republicans, Democrats split over child care

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Democratic proposal to improve child care ran into immediate opposition from Republicans Thursday, who charged the bill would deny parents a choice on who will take care of their pre-school children. The sharp, partisan split surfaced as the Senate began debate on child care legislation, with indications that compromise legislation would be difficult to find and that the bill could tie up the chamber well into next week.

Gregg denies being involved in arms scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Donald Gregg denied under oath Thursday that he was involved in a conspiracy to send arms to the Nicaraguan Contras or that he kept Vice President George Bush informed of the congressionally barred supply network. Gregg has been nominated as ambassador to South Korea but the nomination has stirred up controversy because Gregg, a former CIA agent, was national security adviser to Bush during the Iran-Contra arms scandal.

Pediatricians warn of gun threat to children

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of six pediatricians reported treating children or adolescents for gun-related injuries during the previous 12 months, an American Academy of Pediatrics survey showed Thursday. In findings presented to a congressional panel examining the volatile combination of children and guns, academy officials said a 1988 survey of 758 pediatricians across the nation found 16 percent had treated a youngster for gun-related injuries in the preceding year.

Kopecne's parents break 20-year silence

NEW YORK (UPI) — After 20 years of silence, the parents of Mary Jo Kopecne say the only satisfaction they received in the aftermath of their daughter's drowning at Chappaquiddick, Mass., is that the tragedy kept Sen. Edward M. Kennedy "from becoming president." The Kopecnes said they got little emotional support from Kennedy and sat in frustrated silence as Mary Jo's name was dragged through the mud.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — As many as 30,000 Illinois residents, or just less than three of every 1,000 individuals, may be infected with the virus that causes AIDS, state Public Health Department officials said Thursday. State officials said 2,893 people in Illinois had developed AIDS through May 31, and 60 percent of those individuals already have died.

Pulliam project nears end

By Irene Oplioh
Staff Writer

As renovation and reconstruction of Pulliam Hall come to a close, plans for occupation of the building still remain unresolved, Sally Dedecker, assistant coordinator of Project Achieve, said.

"It would be comfortable for Achieve to either stay in the Baptist Student Center or move back into Pulliam," Dedecker said.

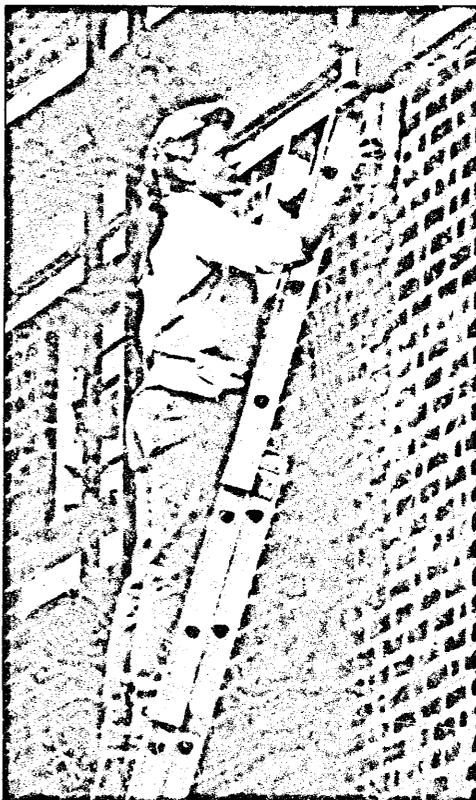

Project Achieve and the College of Education were forced to vacate the building in spring semester 1988, when workers began the removal of insulation containing asbestos.

Construction should come to a close by November 1 and occupants are scheduled to move in before spring semester, said Harian Bohnsack, architect with Garrison Jones Architect, Inc., the firm handling the project.

Sixty percent of construction has been completed, Bohnsack said.

"Renovation included bringing the building up to code for health, life and safety standards, as well as adding an elevator and improving accessibility for handicapped persons," Bohnsack said.

Despite temporary delay from disputes early in the project about safety precautions in the asbestos removal, the $5 million project has gone according to plan with no major setbacks, Al Haake, University supervising architect and engineer, said. $470,000 was set aside for asbestos abatement when high concentrations of the substance were found.

The building was built in the late 1940s, a time when asbestos was commonly used for insulation and sound-proofing.

Civil trials slowed by reconstruction

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Although 130 civil jury cases have been put on hold in the Jackson County Courthouse because of a lack of personnel and inadequate court facilities, a Jackson County Board member said that by October things will get better.

But only after they get worse.

Natalie Trimble, chairwoman of the building and grounds committee for the Jackson County Board, the government body responsible for upkeep and construction at the courthouse, said the $550,000 third floor renovation should be completed in October.

This renovation, Trimble said, will move the States' Attorney's offices upstairs and could allow one of the two court rooms, now equipped only for bench trials, to be converted to a courtroom in which jury trials could be held.

But before the courtroom could be converted, Trimble said, one of the two courtrooms now used for jury trials will be out of commission for about two and-a-half months because Fire Marshall Tom Bectudik has ordered the construction of a fire escape. Construction of the fire escape also will evict one of the judges from his chambers.

Trimble said of the project, "When it is all finished they (court personnel) should be able to meet their needs."

But Presiding Judge Richard E. Richman sees the results of the construction project in a different light. "I disagree with her completely," Richman said.

Richman said the courthouse facilities are "a problem much greater than the board realizes. I don't want any more piecemeal construction."

The Judge said consultation with architects and residing judges has been neglected as the construction work drags on with no apparent plan for the second floor of the courthouse.

The administrative order issued by Richman last week cited a lack of court reporters, inadequate facilities for jury trials and the continuing construction in the courthouse, as reasons for delay of all civil court cases with juries that are expected to last more than two days.

By tying up one of only two jury courtrooms and one of only three court reporters every day, a lengthy civil trial that has been going on since May 1 and is expected to continue for at least two more weeks has added to the strain on courthouse resources.

Richman said the civil cases also were delayed to allow court reporters to catch up on typing transcripts for appealed convictions as well as to make room for criminal cases which must be tried within a certain length of time to assure suspects a speedy trial.

The construction work, which began in March, is contracted to Morgan Commercial Structures, a Murphysboro firm.

New wheelchair provides increased mobility for disabled

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Independence is the key word for most people with disabilities.

Finding new ways to take care of themselves is always in the forefront of their interests, and it was on the minds of those who attended a demonstration of a wheelchair called "The Chariot."

The Chariot is a 3-wheeled vehicle that allows people in wheelchairs to drive into it and away without the hassle of transferring from the chair into the drivers seat. It sells for about $5,500.

Mark Roemeling, a graduate student in higher education, has been in a wheelchair for 16 years. Like most, he was interested in the possibility of greater self-sufficiency.

"I can put 20 miles on my chair in one day," Roemeling said. "But I'm sore afterward."

Roemeling said he could see the potential for the machine, but the high cost prevents him from owning one.

"It's a lot of fun. It would be nice if I had the money," he said.

Pzulette Subka, of the Southern Illinois Center for Independent Living, said financing such items are a common problem for disabled people.

"Many disabled persons are low-income people who need public aid," Subka said.

Subka said agencies such as Medicaid often consider some items unnecessary for the disabled.

"One problem is disabled persons are getting out into the community more but accessible housing isn't keeping up," she said.

Subka said many times additional equipment is needed to make up for shortcomings in housing, but are not covered by Medicaid.

"Medicaid considers portable commodes unnecessary, but what if you can't get into your bathroom in your chair?" Subka said.

"It (Medicaid) just doesn't cover everything," Lynn Mowry, a friend of Roemeling's, said.

Mowry emphasized the importance of independence to the disabled.

"Their life is on hold for somebody else's schedule," she said.

Subka said devices like The Chariot are good for disabled people who want to be independent.

"Some people would really use it and it would help them," she said. "But they don't help if you can't afford one."

Radio station move, a questionable call

THE RECENT cancellation of the contract between the University and Turner Communications, the owner of radio station WEBQ, seems to reflect poor sportsmanship and poor business.

Last year Turner Communications paid $11,000 for exclusive broadcast rights to Saluki Sports beginning in the fall of 1988. The contract designating this annual fee was to last three years.

On June 7, O.L. Turner, chief executive officer of Turner Communications, announced that his company had terminated the contract because of inappropriate and threatening actions that had been taken by Jim Hart, University athletic director. The actions evidently referred to a letter sent by Hart.

The conflict triggering this action appeared to have arisen after Turner's May 30, press release that announced the hiring of new broadcast teams for football and basketball. Six men were hired to work as announcers.

IN REACTION to this announcement, Hart sent a letter to Turner expressing his discontent with the development. Hart said that it was not his disapproval of the broadcast teams, but the fact that they had been hired without his approval that concerned him.

Turner responded by saying that he had informed Hart by means of a letter that was hand delivered May 6. Turner then waited three weeks for a response from Hart. When none was received, he made the announcement.

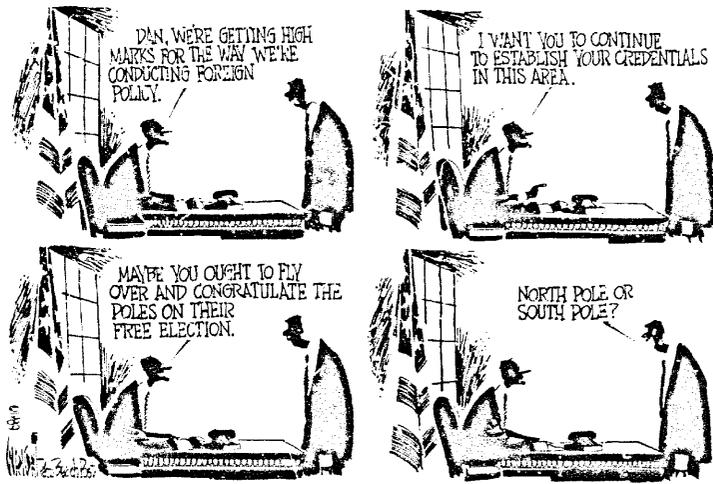

On June 14, the University signed a one-year non-exclusive agreement with WCIL-FM granting them sports broadcasting privileges. The station will pay $200 per game for five football and 15 basketball games. The agreement allows any other radio station to broadcast by paying the same rights fee.

AS IT STANDS the agreement with WCIL-FM will bring $4,000 to the athletic department leaving a $9,000 deficit in the sports budget. Although the idea is to sell a large number of one-game contracts, the department would have to sell at least three contracts equal to that of WCIL-FM before a profit would be realized.

Considering the financial burden and negative publicity, the incident looks like poor business.

Perhaps the feuding men should have considered the six men hired to work as announcers whose positions have been shuffled.

Although the motives behind the vendetta are unclear, no one profits from the poor sportsmanship that has been displayed.

Letters

Though there are other world troubles keep South Africa in mind, Mr. Bush

Dear Mr. President, Greetings. On this day June 16, 13 years ago, the formidable South African "Defense" force opened fire upon peaceful, defenseless demonstrating high school children. The first victim to be hit was Hector Paterson who was soon to be followed by hundreds within three months.

Since then more than a thousand people have either died or disappeared. Today we black South Africans commemorate the 13th anniversary of that massacre. It was by no means the first or the last.

You are leading a powerful nation which believes in justice, democracy and human rights. Recently you made a speech about the unfortunate massacre in China that "...America will do all it can to stop such incidences..." We commend you for such words. You are a man of great integrity; however, we find ourselves wondering about the evidence of dichotomy. Is the injustice and senseless systematic mass murder in South Africa acceptable? Your silence about this matter is deafening to those of us who are waiting and listening with patience.

Is our blood so expendable that my people can be sacrificed for the strategic minerals, for the strategic position of our country, for our natural resources for the consumer market of American products? We suspect so. Your predecessor said that if the true owners of South Africa got their country back, South Africa would fall to the communists. Why should it?

How he reached that illogical conclusion we do not know. What is your stance?

Mr. President, what exactly is your position towards injustice in South Africa? Why is there U.S. support for the genocide in Angola as perpetrated by the United forces of Mr. Jonas Savimbi?

How can you stand and point a finger at others who kill while clandestinely support other killings?

As much as I am concerned about my people in South Africa, I am also concerned about the people in Southern Africa. Their peace is our peace, our peace is their chance to be stable and progressive so that we may all have no more need for arms but to concentrate on producing our own sustenance.

Our leaders tried all peaceful means to resolve this overextended deadlock but they were left no alternative but violence, then they were labelled terrorists. Our spokespeople like the Rev. Desmond Mpilo Tutu have tried to propose actions to be taken but their patient appeals fell on deaf ears. We young people do not have that patience.

Simply because the South African regime has clamped on news releases about conditions inside South Africa does not mean all is well. It does not mean the world can sleep with peace and forget. We are still dying everyday. We are still suffering.

Your nation believes in the freedom of expression that is why I dare stick my neck out but I am a black South African national and I am fully aware that this letter will find its way into their hands. However, I believe in justice and there can be no peace without justice.

Mr. President, we are a peace loving people, all we are asking for is to be treated as human beings. If you are lost for action, ask the people in the street. When you were elected the South African government rejoiced. Why? Were they right in their speculation that they could continue without reprisal or even with tacit consent?

You have a golden chance, let it be that when we write our history books you will be put down as the man who made it happen.

Finally, may I beg that in your prayers tonight remember those children who gave their lives for the love of peace and justice. Remember the child who is dying somewhere in South Africa due to lack of treatment which could have been availed with the greatest of ease had she been white.

Remember the father sleeping hungry in a sewerage avoiding the ever prowling police seeking him because he should be in the homelands starving in obscurity. Remember his family waiting for his check which is not going to arrive. Those are my people, those are the people I love and miss. Please make it happen.

Furthermore, may I wish you success in your administration and prosperity for your nation.

HOW TO SUBMIT A LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Local hearing enables public to voice opinions on couple

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

A platoon of Illinois Department of Transportation representatives and planning officials hosted a public hearing in the Student Center Thursday on the proposed $1.7 million east-west couple.

The plan, designed to cut down on Route 13 traffic congestion on West Main Street and decrease the number of accidents at the intersections of Main Street with Poplar Street, Oakland Avenue and University Avenue.

IDOT estimates accidents in the area are more than twice the state average.

The couple would create three, one-way traffic lanes flowing west on Main Street and would divide eastbound traffic near National foods store making three, one-way lanes to connect with Walnut Street.

The plan also allows for $250,000 in funds to preserve Walnut Street's historical neighborhood.

IDOT said plans on how to deal with the expected increase in noise levels have not been decided. Concrete or natural sound barriers have been considered.

The public was invited to express any concerns or suggestions it might have concerning the couple by either recording oral statements or filling out written statements.

would not be a serious deterrent to alcohol consumption in Carbondale.

They find the proposal a violation of the right to freedom of choice, even though mental health professionals regard happy hours and drink specials to be detrimental to overall mental health.

"In general, substances do play a major part in creating personal crises. If it is more readily and cheaply available, such as in a happy hour or whatever, people are much more likely to abuse it," Cathy Moehring, supervisor of Network, a 24-hour crisis intervention service in the Carbondale area.

Substance abuse is a vicious cycle, Moehring said, because a depressed or suicidal person drinks to escape emotional pain, but after the high comes a crashing low, leaving the person worse than before.

However, students and bar proprietors view the subject in a different light.

"Having a stable drink price will not reduce alcoholism. I can't imagine living in the U.S. and having my rights infringed upon," Marty Wallace, junior in marketing, said.

"I think it's an infringement on our rights and on free enterprise," Dena Schulte, senior in journalism, said.

Some cite economic reasons as a defense for the happy hour laws.

"I think it's ridiculous. Why cut down on the biggest commerce this town has?" Mark Mizell, senior in advertising, said.

"I know it will effect my business and other local businesses as well. I serve a three-for-one happy hour right now, so it would hurt a great deal," Jay Horney, bar manager of Jeremiah's, said.

and times of happy hours proves the adverse contribution happy hours make to alcohol-related accidents and alcohol abuse.

"Happy hours and the binge drinking associated with them flies in the face of moderation," Mahar said. "You don't need statistics to prove this, this is common sense."

"Almost half of motor vehicle accidents involve alcohol and a large percentage of those occur between four and eight (p.m.) during happy hours," Mahar said.

Under the bill, offering and advertising free drinks and other related practices would be prohibited.

Violation of the law would be a Class B misdemeanor and would provide grounds for suspension or revocation of the business' liquor license.

According to the proposal, restrictions also would be instituted to regulate how patrons are served alcohol.

The bill proposes that one person could not be served more than one alcoholic drink at a time, which is designed to hinder individuals from buying alcohol for someone else.

Pricing of pitchers of beer also would be restricted.

The proposal would force businesses to maintain a constant price on pitchers of beer for at least one month at a time. Prices could only change on a month-by-month basis.

Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, said although he is not familiar with the bill, he said he would support it because of the restrictions on free drinks.

"It's not something I've made a priority, but, yes, I would support it based on that one issue," Woolard said.

charges of damaging transportation and communications equipment, saying: "The penalty for that is death. You have only three days to appeal."

The death penalty — usually a bullet in the back of the head — is prescribed for a wide range of offenses in China, ranging from murder and rape to major economic crimes.

The train was torched during protests in Shanghai that erupted after armor-backed troops swept into central Beijing June 3 to end a 22-day student occupation of Tiananmen Square and crush a citywide insurrection ignited by the brutal assault.

Western diplomats reported at the time that demonstrators set fire to the train when it careened through a railway line blockade, killing at least six people.

The death sentences were the first imposed that were directly linked to weeks of anti-government protests. Three people were sentenced June 2 to die for robbing a Beijing bank during confusion caused by a demonstration.

The television announced that dissidents also were put on trial in Changchun, in northeastern Jilin Province, but failed to disclose the sentences imposed by the court.

"Two ty-six ruffians were publicly tried at Changchun in Jilin Province," the television said. It said the defendants who "stopped traffic and advocated a strike among workers all received proper punishment."

Television and newspaper reports Thursday announced at least 91 new arrests, including three men said to be responsible for hanging a soldier from an overpass in Beijing and burning him alive in retribution for troops firing on demonstrators.

Also taken into custody was Liu Chiang, a leader of an independent workers union that supported the student-led protests, the television reported. He was named Wednesday in a special wanted list of three union leaders.

State-run media said 15 people surrendered to authorities in connection with the protests, including Xiong Wei, 23, of Qinghua University, one of 21 students on a most-wanted list publicized by authorities on television and in the press.

National television said Xiong, head coordinator of the rescue teams providing medical aid to students who staged a hunger strike in Beijing, gave himself up at the urging of his mother.

The television also said a total of 148 stolen military weapons had been turned in to officials in Beijing, where 1,620 offenses had been reported on special hotlines set up last week for citizens to identify people involved in the uprising.

The television reported the arrest of Cheng Zue Dong, a senior leader of the Nanjing independent student union, saying he "organized several demonstrations, shouted reactionary slogans and wrote counter-revolutionary posters" in the city near Shanghai.

State radio Thursday reported the first signs of continued armed resistance to the military crackdown in the capital.

The radio said snipers fired two shots from a building in Beijing's northwest Haidian university district early Tuesday and said vandals burned a bus in an area south of Tiananmen Square.

House makes S&L owners put up more pocket money

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, heeding a veto threat from President Bush, defeated a key amendment to the savings and loan bailout bill Thursday that would have reduced the amount of money thrift owners had to invest in their own institutions.

The House, voting 326-94, killed an amendment by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., to the $285 billion savings and loan bailout bill that would have allowed some owners to continue counting an intangible asset, known as supervisory good will, as part of the hard capital they otherwise would be required to invest in their thrifts.

The bill as drafted required most S&L owners to bring the amount of their own funds invested in their institutions up to 3 percent of total assets by June 1990 on the theory that the more of their own money they had at stake, the less likely they would be to make highly speculative investments and loans that helped create the S&L crisis.

Under the bill, those thrifts with supervisory good will on their books would have until January 1995 to phase out counting it toward the 3 percent capital standard.

Supervisory good will is an accounting gimmick permitted in the early 1980s by federal regulators to encourage healthy S&Ls to merge with failing ones.

Bush, whose S&L bailout bill contained tougher capital requirements in hopes of preventing future thrift failures, told lawmakers in a letter released Thursday he was "adamantly opposed" to any weakening of those standards.

Bush's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to a Bush appearance in Brunswick, Ga., that the president might veto the bill if the amount thrift owners had to put up was reduced.

Bush later released a statement saying he was "determined that in the future, federally insured institutions should have to put their own money at risk before that of the insurance fund and the taxpayers. This is an essential element in protecting against any future repetition of this problem."

Fitzwater also said "There's some feeling even the financing aspect of it would warrant (a veto)." He referred to amendments yet to be debated that would place the huge cost of the bailout bill "on budget," as the House Ways and Means Committee wants, rather than "off budget," as Bush is demanding.

If the bill's cost is placed on budget, lawmakers will either have to vote to exempt the legislation from the provisions of the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law or support tax increases and spending cuts to cover the huge cost.

Hyde argued that the issue is whether the government would keep its word since it had allowed 241 of the nation's 3,000 thrifts to count supervisory good will as hard capital in exchange for buying up failing S&Ls as a favor to the government, which did not then have the funds to bail them out.

Library names director

The Carbondale Public Library named James Guenther as its new director. He is expected to take over administration on July 5.

Guenther is currently Reference Librarian at the Gary Public Library in Indiana.

Guenther received his Masters in Library Science from the Indiana University in Bloomington.

Guenther said he hopes to become involved in all facets of the management or administration of a library which exists in a public environment.

Also elected at Wednesday's meeting were Madelon Schillip, president of the board of trustees; George Black, vice president; Hans Fischer, secretary; and Tyler Young, treasurer.

Dunn: Income tax proposal not beneficial in the long run

Final Senate vote expected to come during next week

By John Walby
Staff Writer

"It may be the only ball game in town," said Illinois Senate Republican Ralph Dunn, concerning the temporary income tax proposal sponsored by House Speaker Michael Madigan, which is expected for final vote in the state Senate next week.

Dunn, from Du Quoin, said he is not happy with the proposal as it stands and doesn't think it will be beneficial in the long run, but there may be no alternative.

The proposal neglects other programs that should receive funding consideration by limiting the funding to education and local governments, Dunn said.

The two-year, 18.4 percent income tax increase would create an estimated $726 million annually.

If passed, the monies would be divided equally between education and local governments. The hike, to the taxpayer, would mean the current 2.5 percent rate would rise to 2.97 percent.

In a Senate session Wednesday, Democrats quelled attempts by Republicans to add amendments to the proposal, which previously passed quickly through the House before coming to the Senate.

Seven amendments were proposed in the session, six by Republicans, but none received the support necessary for approval.

The defeated amendments would have given relief to property taxation, directed a portion of the funds raised by the tax increase to areas other than education and local governments, cut the tax by 50 percent and divert all revenue created by the tax to education.

If the bill is passed by the Senate, the proposal will go to Gov. James Thompson. Thompson has hinted that he will veto the proposal in its present form.

Senate President Philip Rock, D-Oak Park, said he believes he has enough votes for passage, but will wait until next week to bring the issue up for a vote.

Republicans question whether Rock has enough support for the bill, claiming he would call it for a vote sooner.

Mine workers strike spreads, police put on 24-hour alert

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI) — A four-day-old wildcat strike by the United Mine Workers slowly gathered steam Thursday, with walkouts seeping north of the Kanawha Valley and across state borders.

Several coal companies, meanwhile, lashed out at the UMW with a series of legal moves. At least seven coal companies have filed lawsuits in U.S. District Court in Charleston, seeking damages against the union for the unauthorized strikes.

The civil actions came on the heels of court injunctions ordering the miners back to work, which many of the companies have been granted in federal court.

Alan Mierke, director of research for the state Tax Department, said the strikes have not yet affected state tax revenues.

In fact, production figures from the U.S. Department of Energy indicate West Virginia's coal production through the end of May is higher this year than last year, he said.

"Production has remained high," Mierke said. "Pittston is still producing, as well as I can follow, so there's still revenue coming in."

"As for the wildcats, if they spread to other companies, larger producers, we could have a problem," Mierke said. "Although I'm quite sure there is some revenue loss, I don't think it's substantial enough to cause us a problem."

Last year, coal producers paid $108 million in severance taxes to the state. That money is shared with counties and cities across West Virginia.

"I wouldn't call it a drop in the bucket," Mierke said of the direct revenue from coal, "but it's not as important as it used to be."

Civil rights defenders fault court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Civil rights advocates breathed a sigh of relief Thursday when the Supreme Court upheld a key civil rights ruling, then blasted the court for continuing to chip away at three decades of progress against bias.

There were calls both on and off Capitol Hill for Congress to act to reverse a string of court decisions this term that have sharply narrowed anti-discrimination laws.

On Thursday, the court voted unanimously not to overturn a major 1976 ruling, known as Runyon, but on a 5-4 vote on the particular case before it refused to extend the law's reach to cases of racial harassment on the job.

"It's a sad commentary on the state of the court's general outlook on civil rights that today's decision must be greeted with a measure of relief," said John Buchanan, chairman of People for the American Way.

The case decided Thursday, Patterson vs. McLean Credit Union, had been closely watched because of the high court's unusual action last year to use the case to re-examine its Runyon ruling, which was based on the Reconstruction-era Civil Rights Act of 1866. The Runyon

"Congress must not let these decisions stand."

ruling prohibited private schools from excluding qualified children solely because they are black.

"While the Supreme Court upheld the principle of the Runyon decision, the court then proceeded to limit significantly the effectiveness of Section 1981 in the Patterson decision," said Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP and Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights in a joint statement on behalf of the conference.

The 5-4 Patterson ruling refusing to extend legal protection of the 1866 law to racial harassment "is the latest in a series of setbacks for the employment rights of minorities and women," Hooks and Neas said.

"Indeed, this Supreme Court term has been a disaster for all those committed to equal employment opportunity," the conference heads said.

Although racial harassment on the job is illegal under other laws, Section 1981 of the 1866 law allows for jury trials and provides for damages and compensation for the emotional pain caused by discrimination.

Also voicing disappointment in the ruling was the American Civil Liberties Union. "Upholding Runyon should not be characterized as a victory, even a modest one," said John Powell, legal director of the ACLU.

"What the court did was to say that even though a woman was racially harassed on her job for 10 years, she has no legal protection," Powell said.

Powell said the ruling showed an "incredible insensitivity, perhaps even hostility, to minorities and ... undue deference to the business community."

Salukis to a 663-293-5 (.696) record in 18 years, says that many of his former campers are thankful they took part in the camp.

"A lot of them come back and say that the camp helped them," said Jones. "I would say that about 7 to 9 members of our baseball team each season took part in this camp at one time."

At one time there were nine players in the major leagues that Jones had coached. Two current stars, Darryl Boston (Chicago White Sox) and Joe Girardi (Chicago Cubs) also took part in Jones' camp at one time.

Jay Thompson, who is the coach of the Class AA Illinois state champion Harrisburg Bulldogs, was a participant in Jones' first camp.

else, why don't you learn how to give yourself a shot?" Gray recalled asking Johnson. "Then you wouldn't have to run around town doing this."

The inquiry into drug use in Canadian sport was prompted by Johnson's positive test for the anabolic steroid stanozolol at the Seoul Olympics.

Johnson, who was stripped of his gold medal in the men's 100 meters, finally admitted earlier this week that he'd used performance-enhancing drugs since 1981.

But Johnson, reluctant to accept complete responsibility, insisted that neither his coach or doctor informed him of possible side-effects. Johnson also painted himself as a less-than-active participant in his own drug program.

Nicklaus one shot under lead in Open

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Bernhard Langer, Payne Stewart and Jay Don Blake shared the early first-round lead in the U.S. Open at 4-under 66 Thursday, finishing one shot in front of golfing legend Jack Nicklaus.

The huge crowd which followed the 49-year-old Nicklaus around the rain-soddened Oak Hill Country Club course was rewarded by witnessing his best U.S. Open round in nine years.

"I don't know what might happen tomorrow," said Nicklaus, who is competing in a record 33rd Open and is trying to win a record fifth. "But to play a good round in the opening round of the U.S. Open was fun. I wouldn't put a lot of money on me for the rest

Rec offers sports instruction for youth

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

The University's Intramural-Recreational Sports Family Youth Program is offering a way to keep area youth active this summer.

The program, geared for youth between the ages 7 and

serve over hand, and she was sure she never would," Hagemeyer said. "I told her not to worry and three days later she ran up to me all excited because she had made the serve. That's the stuff I live."

The camp has been held at SIU-C for the last 14 years and is now the largest of the camps given, Hagemeyer said. "The camp has a real good reputation," claimed Hagemeyer.

"The camp is not limited to girls, but so far no boys have been brave enough to show up," said Hagemeyer. The camp divides the athletes by skill rather than age so the campers do not get frustrated.

As some of the campers take a break, lounging on the bleachers refusing to expend anymore energy than necessary, Clifton noted, "It was hard getting out of bed this morning."

Her friend Tammy Herring disagreed, saying: "I'm not that sore today, but they say tomorrow's going to be tough." Her comment was met by her friend's groan of disapproval.

Although it is difficult to know whether any amount of fun will be able ease the aches of some of these campers, Hagemeyer said she hopes to try.

Futsal, a Brazilian hybrid of soccer, will be played from 10 to 11 a.m. beginning Tuesday in the Rec Center.

17, offers instruction in tennis, martial arts, futsal, water-sports and other forms of recreation.

Kathy Hollister, assistant director of Intramural-Recreational Sports, said the program offers activities that young people may not have participated in before.

One sport that may be new to some young athletes is futsal, a Brazilian hybrid of soccer, Hollister said. Futsal is similar to soccer in the way it's played, except it's inside on a basketball court, instead of on a field of grass.

Futsal is played from 10 to 11 a.m. starting Tuesday through July 6 at Recreation Center. A supervised free swim for futsal players will be held after the games until noon.

Deadline for registration in the Family Youth program is Monday. An instructional fee pre-payment will be required. The fees vary for each sport and are higher or lower depending on whether the child's parent is a student, Rec Center pass holder, or a community member.

The program kicks off — literally — on Monday with Martial Arts instruction, which will be held from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays through July 28 in the Rec Center. Instruction will be provided by a second-degree black belt.

Aquatics, Frisbee and many other activities will be the focus of the Youth Recreation program, which also begins Monday. The program meets from 10 to 11 a.m. at various locations around campus.

Instruction keeps swinging with the Youth Tennis program, which runs July 11 through July 27 at the Law School Tennis Courts. The program is designed to enhance knowledge of such skills as serving, volleying and serve returning. Rules for singles and doubles play also will be taught.

The tennis lessons are divided into two sessions. Session I, for ages 7 to 9, meets from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Session II, for ages 10 to 17, meets after Session I from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

McCutcheon's departure prompts merger of jobs

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Saluki athletic's sports information department will merge with its promotions and marketing department, as a result of the recent departure of former assistant athletic director Bruce McCutcheon.

Charlotte West, associate athletic director, said the two departments are being combined in an effort to save money without diminishing the quality of the product.

A permanent replacement has yet to be named to replace McCutcheon, although sports information director Fred Huff has been assigned to oversee the operations. West said: "Fred Huff has a wealth of experience in promotions."

McCutcheon left SIU-C to accept a similar position at Temple University in Philadelphia. He began his duties there June 12. He was responsible for the development of the Great Saluki Tailgate Day and many other sports promotions events.

Huff was in charge of sports promotions before McCutcheon was hired five years ago. "Sports information will pick up a lot of the responsibilities, for as long as it takes," Huff said. "It will be a little challenging, but nothing we can't handle."

Some of the duties Huff will oversee include sports event management, ticket office operations and sponsorship of events.

The merger was established on a temporary basis and the success of the re-assignments of duties will be evaluated on periodic basis for at least six weeks.

"When the athletic budget is completed we can give our full attention to the structuring assignments," West said.

Volleyball camp fun for coach

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Patti Hagemeyer is having fun. As she rouses the current bunch of volleyball players after their lunch break she smiles and gets them back to work.

Hagemeyer, SIU-C's head volleyball coach, is running this year's Saluki Volleyball Camp at the Arena, where she will meet over 400 volleyball players from the area before the camp ends today. She said she hopes her enthusiasm catches on with the campers.

"Volleyball is a real fun game," Hagemeyer said. "We try to teach them the basic skills and how to play, but we really want the campers to have fun."

Jennifer Martin, a volleyball player from Carbondale said the camp staff is "crazy." "They keep it loose," she said.

Tammi Clifton, a camper from Murphysboro agreed, saying: "They made us duck walk."

"Our team lost and the winners get to make us do something," Clifton said. "We had to squat and walk like ducks around in a circle," she said while flapping her arms in demonstration.

and a veteran of other camps contended that the fun atmosphere has made this the best camp she has been to yet. "I've been to other camps and this one is the funnest."

Hagemeyer admits she enjoys the camp as much as the athletes, especially when she sees them improving.

Itchy's baseball camp a major league draw

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

SIU-C baseball coach Itchy Jones is in his 17th year of directing the Saluki Baseball Camp and during that time he has seen it come a long way.

"I remember the first year we had the camp there were only 50 kids here for the first week of it," said Jones. "The camp has really grown a lot and the coaches have done a great job on and off campus with it."

This week, about 190 young ballplayers participated in the camp's first session. Jones said he is expecting around 150 next week for the second session. The camp is for the 11 to 17 year old age group.

Resident campers pay a fee of $210, which includes housing in University dorms, meals, instruction, materials, a camp t-shirt and cap and medical benefits. Commuter campers pay a $145, which includes everything the resident campers receive except housing, breakfast and supper.

Most of the campers come from Southern Illinois. Others come from the Chicago Area, Missouri and Kentucky.

"We cover the fundamentals of hitting, fielding, and pitching," said Jones. "We do not play as many games as some of the other camps. We have about five hours of instruction during the day."

At night, the residents watch videos covering the techniques review what happened that day in camp, Jones said. "We also cover what we will do the next day and they can give the commuters somewhat of a preview."

The Saluki Baseball Campers are separated by ability or into age groups for individualized instruction. The facilities and equipment of the Saluki baseball program are used for instruction at the camp. Six baseball diamonds including "Abe" Martin Field, five batting cages, pitching machines, radar gun and instructional films are utilized.

The Saluki Baseball Camp staff is made up of high school, college and professional coaches.

"We have hired 24 coaches and that gives us about two for every position," said Jones. "I also have a video out on coaching that is used for instruction."

Drug testing under scrutiny of panel

TORONTO (UPI) — A West German television journalist told an inquiry panel that an Olympic drug analyst told him tests of urine samples from the Seoul Olympics showed 80 percent of male track and field athletes had used anabolic steroids.

Bernd Heller testified under oath that Manfred Donike, who runs the International Olympic Committee-accredited lab in Cologne, West Germany, told him during a telephone conversation in March that the results of samples collected in Seoul showed changes in athletes' endocrine levels that could be used to identify steroid use up to eight years after use.

If true, such new interpretative methods could revolutionize athletic drug testing since athletes could not safely take banned drugs at any time in their careers.

However, three days ago, Donike recanted and told Heller that steroid use could only be detected three to six months after use and said Heller was mistaken about the percentage of retests which showed steroid use, Heller testified.

Donike, a member of the IOC medical commission, said the IOC would not allow him to reveal the figures but that they might be released at an IOC-sponsored doping conference in Moscow in October, according to Heller.

"I suggest what Mr. Donike was concerned about was that, if the endocrine profile were to be used, it would wipe out a whole generation of track and field athletes," said Roy McMurtry, lawyer for Ben Johnson's long-time coach, Charlie Francis.

"That was the conclusion," Heller responded.

The inquiry into drug use in Canadian sport was prompted by Johnson's positive test for steroids at the Seoul Olympics.

Outside the hearing room, Heller suggested that testers such as Donike, under contract to the IOC to perform its drug tests, may not wish such information to be made public since it could hurt business. Fewer tests would need to be performed if drug use could be detected years after use.

In a telephone interview from West Germany, Donike confirmed he had talked to Heller but that the 80 per cent figure was "not my figure. I cannot say whose figure it was."

Donike would say no more because he is scheduled to testify before the inquiry in August. "Wait until August," Donike said. "(Testifying) will be fun."

Johnson a 'steroid cocktail' expert, says another athlete

TORONTO (UPI) — Ben Johnson expertly mixed his own steroid "cocktail" when his coach and doctor were unavailable, another athlete told a government inquiry Thursday.

Canadian discus thrower Rob Gray testified that Johnson carefully drew fluid into a syringe from two bottles the sprinter brought to Gray's Toronto apartment in March 1988. Gray then injected Johnson.

Johnson testified earlier this week that he did not mix the syringe administered to him by Gray. Johnson said he would not have known what or how much to take.

Johnson also testified that he did not recall bringing his own drugs to Gray's apartment.

But Gray said Johnson seemed expert at mixing the steroid and inosine.

"He definitely knew what he was doing," Gray testified. "He measured it out exactly and made sure there were no bubbles in it which is something that is important."

Gray said he suggested that Johnson should learn to do his own injections.

"Ben you do everything
