ampus hotel still in works, official sa

Administration Reporter

Plans for an on-campus hotel have been out on hold because of disagreements between hotel developers and the SIUC administration, and new plans await the return of President John C. Guyon, says a University vice president.

James Tweedy, vice president for administration, said the University could not agree on terms of the hotel lease with American Turn-Key Hospitality Inc., the hotel developer in charge of the project

Tweedy would not discuss the issues within the lease that were found to be unfavorable by the University, but said SIUC has decided not to continue working with the developers.

He said a hotel at SIUC is still a future possibility, but any future plans await the return of SIUC president John C. Guyon.

"Nothing is being done as far as pursuing an RFP (Request for Proposal) until President Guyon returns," he said.

The Request for Proposal process allows the University to select a bidder for a service, such as a hotel developer or a mass transit comthat best meets the University's needs and not just because the bid was lower.

Guyon, who is recovering from heart surgery at St. Johns Hostpital in Springfield, was unavailable for Bill Hurst, president of American Turn-Key Hospitality Inc. said he was told by his lawyers not to comment on the former plans his company had with SIUC to build the hotel.

Tweedy said the University had used a Request-for-Proposal process to select American Turn-Key, Inc. as the developer they wanted to work with.

company that best met the needs services that the University was looking for.

The University will use the Request for Proposal process again if and when another developer is chosen, Tweedy said,

Plans for the 160-room University hotel were originally proposed in the Spring of 1993 and was to be built near the Student Center.

Direct loans offer faster financial aid

By Angela Hyland Politics Reporter

As SIUC students anxiously peer into the dusty depths of empty mailboxes waiting for information on student loans, they may take solate in the knowledge that after this year, they can have their financial aid packages processed and disbursed without leaving campus. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, this week announced SIUC will be included in a direct loan program which will make it easier for students to collect money for the 1995-96 school year.

With the new program, financial aid workers will be able to process a student's entire financial aid package in one step. This includes both loans and Pell Grants, Simon said.

In the past, students had to go to a private lending institution to obtain money for loans,

Pam Britton, financial aid director at SIUC, said the new program will eliminate this step.

eliminate this step.

Loans will be made by the federal Department of Education and will be processed and disbursed by SIUC's financial aid office, she said.

Britton believes the new program greatly will benefit students, but said she was unsure how local bank owners would view the program. "Their perspective may be different," she said.

Brent Buzbee, student lending activities organizer for Charter Bank, 500 W. Main in Carbondale, said his office currently has $3 million in loans to condense.

Many people gathered at Lenus Turley Park Thursday night for the first of this year's Sunset Concerts. The reggae band Roots Rock Society kicked off these weekly free shows. Petroleum leak gets cleaned up Petroleum discovered to have leaked from underground tanks into soil surrounding the area around Travel Service is being cleaned up by Burkey BioRemediation with microscopic 'bugs" known as bacteria.

Approximately one year ago when the old tanks were removed, a survey was con-ducted and all possible sources of leaks were examined. The area was found to have soil contaminated by petroleum, James Tyrrell, director of the Center for Environmental Health and Safety, said.

Grilling out made safe; experts lend advice

LATIN AMERICAN LEADERS PUSH FOR REFORM

LATIN AMERICAN LEADERS PUSH FOR REFORM — CARTAGENA, Colombia—Leaders of Latin America, Spain and Portugal agreed Wednesday to seek an end to the 30-year-old U.S. trade embargo against Communist Cuba. At the end of the fourth-annual ibero-American summit, more than 20 heads of state and government approved a declaration that included their most critical reference ever to U.S. economic measures against Cuba. Many of the leaders also pressured Cuban President Fidel Castro to implement democratic reforms in his country, although that was not part of the declaration. A Latin American diplomat predicted that the region's leaders will ask President Clinton to lift the embargo when they meet at a summit of Western Hemisphere nations scheduled for December in Miami.

PLO BUILDING BECOMES CENTER OF DISPUTE-

PLO BUILDING BECOMES CENTER OF DISPUTE — JERUSALEM—In a city long accustomed to huge squabbles over tiny plots of land, the latest front line is a onetime hotel now housing a few dozen offices. A bit frayed around the edges, the once grand stone building known as the Orient House hardly seems worth fighting for. Yet, Palestinians and Israelis arguing over its future say nothing less than the fate of Jerusalem is at stake. The building's first floor is the local headquarters for the Palestine Liberation Organization, but unofficially it has become the de facto seat of government for the would-be Palestinian state. The dispute is part of a larger fight for control of Jerusalem. Israel has ruled the whole city since capturing east Jerusalem in the 1967 war has ruled the whole city since capturing east Jerusalem in the 1967 war and maintains it will never give an inch. But with last month's signing in Cairo, Egypt, of an agreement for Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho, the Palestinians saw hope for someday taking back Jerusalem.

CENSORED MOVIE CAUSES UNEASY RELATIONS—MANILA—They're at it again. When we last left the Philippine movie censors, they were under siege for demanding cuts in "Schindler's List," the Academy Award-winning Holocaust film by Steven Spielberg. Then came an uprear over "The Piano," winner of three Oscars, which the censors effectively banned as "immoral." Both decisions were eventually overturned amid scathing criticism, but the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board, as the censors' panel is officially known, has remained undeterred. Now it has banned "Belle Epoque," the Spanish production that won this year's Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film. The decision has enraged moviegoers anew, offended the Spanish Embassy here and created a potentially embarrassing distraction for an upcoming visit to Spain by President Fidel Ramos.

GAY ACTIVISTS FLEX POLITICAL MUSCLE—
RENO, Nex.—History was made here one Sunday in March, when Gov.
Bob Miller, resplendent in a stars-and-stripes leather jacket, took to the podium at a dark little bar and got a standing ovation from the rancous crowd. "In onever thought I'd see the day when I'd see a Nevada governor in a gay bar," recounted Eddie Anderson, master of ceremonics for the rally.
The event also drew Las Vegas Mayor Jan Jones—who is challenging Miller in the governor's race—and a host of other political luminaries in this self-proclaimed "Frontier State" and bastion of Western independence.
But it was a bittersweet moment for the growing number of lesbians and gays in Nevada—proof of newly minted clout, evidence of continuing vulnerability. Just months after the legislature repealed the state's 82-yearold anti-sodomy law, conservative activists launched a petition drive to old anti-sodomy law, conservative activists launched a petition drive to make it legal to discriminate against gay men and lesbians

On the boardwalk: Makanda Fest opens

By Paul Eisenberg Entertainment Reporter

Escape from the strain of everday life by just taking a short drive south of Carbondale on Springer Ridge Road to this year's Makanda Fest

The festival, which originated in 1988 and has occurred annually ever since, will feature many varieties of live music, craftspeople creating and exibiting their wares, and workshops on making crafts.

Anita Hayden, president of the Makanda Boardwalk Association, said a new feature will be added to the bill this year.

The Carbondale Science Center, a Carbondale-based non-profit organization, will set up a tent at the fest offering a juggling workshop, how-to seminars on making paper airplanes and "oobleek," a craft made, according to Hayden, "by stuffing comstarch and water stuff into a balloon

The Science Center will also offer informative sessions on tornadoes and the weather.
"Kids can take home the projects they make there, except the juggling balls," she said.

Hayden will display her weaving skills at the fest, using one of the two antique looms she has in her store "Southern Sisters."

She said she loves Makanda because of the scenic area and the people that she meets there. The only thing she does not like is the trains that roll through town seven to 12 times a day.
"One year the trains stopped because the bands were taping," she said, "All the train guys came down and watched them."

Parking agents enforce regulations

Ursula Keeling-Datson

By Diane Dove Special Assignment Reporter

They are professional, hardworking, dedicated — and would ticket their own grand-mothers, Merilyn Hogan, coor-dinator of Parking and Traffic said of SIUC's parking enforce-ment

They are Etta Kelley and Ursula Keeling-Datson "the parking ladies" who have given a combined 36 years of service to the university, issuing tickets to parking violators and assisting university patrons with questions. Kelley has worked as a parking enforcer since 1973 and said the best part of the job is meeting and helping people.

"I like meeting people, and this job gives me the chance to meet all kinds of people" she said. Kelly, who patrols the south side of campus, said the duties of the parking enforcement agents have not changed much over the years, yet both she and Keeling-Datson said they enjoy their work.

In addition to their normal work duties Hogan said the parking enforcement agents often deal with adverse weather conditions

They're working when it's cold, they're working when it's hot, they're working when it's raining or snowing," Hogan said, "If it's 101 (degrees) outside, you can bet that parking lot is even hotter because they're working on asphalt, and people forget about that sometimes

Keeling-Datson, who patrols the north side of campus, said since she began working at the university in 1978 there are more students and more parking spaces, which means more work for the parking enforcement agents.

She said the hostility toward parking enforcement agents appears to be getting worse.

Beanstalk' mystifies with music

By Katarzyna T. Buksa General Assignment Reporter

At 7 p.m. tonight, the floor of the Stage Co., 101 N. Washington St., will rumble and shake as the earth tears apart to allow space for a magnificent beanstalk to climb into the clouds of the heavens.

In the company's theatrical presentation of "Jack and the Beanstalk", Jack and his seemingly insignificant beans transform an ordinary evening into something close to magical.

Craig Hinde, president of The Stage Company, said he is very excited about the set for "Jack and the Beanstalk,"

The beanstalk is made of a cyclical dryer vent and composed of leaves cut in a three-dimensional manner, he said.

"There are sound effects that are made along with the growing beanstalk to add to the authenticity of the scene," Hinde said.

Hinde and Joyce Hesketh, a regional musician, are responsible for the sound effects which are through electronic processing equipment.

"The harp takes on a life of its own through sound effects which allow it to express emotion through music." Hinde said.

Richard Oakey, the set designer, aid the set was what made the play different from others.

"The sets are changed by the children, so it had to be done simply enough so that the children could change the scenes quickly,

Rita Lehker, scenic artist, said he excited about the little things added to the scenes that makes it so surprising to the eye.

There's a lot of green, blue sky, a magnificent bean stalk, a fireplace designed to look like an enormous mouth, and these awesome faces found at the doorway of the Giant's castle," Lehker said

Sheryl Ringel and Hillary Hammond, the costume designers, said they focused on creating traditional clothes.

"The costumes are warm peasant clothes and they fit each character," Lehker said, "The harp is a white Leftker said. The narp is a wine lace outfit and each time the young girl puts her arms up, the strings become visible."

Mike Lehker, director, said the adaptation of the play taken from William Glennon is humorous and a good show for the family, "The east involves an array of

Bands, Booby's offer help; donations to benefit cause

SIUC Environmental Center and three local bands will join together at Booby's, 406 S. Illinois Ave, this weekend to help people arrested in Idaho's Cove Mallard wildemess area.

More than 52 people have been arrested in the past two years for attempting to prevent the forest service from building roads in areas that were previously roadless.

To help those arrested with legal fees, three bands will play at 8 p.m. Sunday in Booby's beer garden: Jimmy Salatino and Dean, Meat and Onions and Organic Rain.

Carolyn Goering, owner of Booby's, said she was approached by those who are holding the benefit when the Incation was being decided. Steve Christianson, a member of the Student Environmental Center, said once a road is built in an area it can never be designated as a wilderness area.

There have already been 22 miles of road built in the area," he said. "Some of the people arrested were charged with grand theft of a road because they buried themselves up to the waist to prevent the forest service from adding more road."

The donation is $3 and all money will go to the Cove Mallard Coalition in Idaho. Christianson said.

Christianson said the reason people from this area have shown concern for those in Idaho is because the area in which Cove Mallard is located. The Greater Salmon-Selway Ecosystem, is the largest national forest in the lower 48

Shawnee National Forest is the second largest, and Christianson said environmentalists are trying to preserve both.

O.J., ex-wife subjects of media speculation

Simpson was found murdered Monday, along with a friend, Ronald Goldman, in front of her condominium in Los Initially, the media reported that O. J. Simpson was questioned in the deaths and then went on to report on more important things, such as events in Bosnia and Haiti.

But, a short day later, it was announced that Simpson was a prime suspect, and a media feeding frenzy began.

Newspaper reports were full of nasty unnamed sources and "unfounded rumors" were repeated, such as that bloodstains were reportedly found in O. J.'s car and a bloodstained glove was found at his house. Even though the blood type has not yet been matched to that of Nicole Brown Simpson, the history of her stormy marriage to O. J. is being discussed at breakfast tables across the country.

THE SIMPSON FAMILY DIRTY LAUNDRY IS

flapping in the breeze on the media clothesline. Nicole Simpson's therapist, Susan Forward, has appeared on TV and recounted the contents of her two sessions with Nicole that include Nicole's declarations that her husband beat her and threatened to kill her. Whatever happened to patient confidentiality? Apparently, it ceases to exist after the death of the patient or in the opportunity for TV fame.

It is no surprise that the tabloid TV shows have joined in and are busily promoting special reports, no doubt starring such expert witnesses as former neighbors who heard Simpson and his wife, Nicole Brown, quarreling in their home.

Even though he had not been charged or arrested, O. J. Simpson is being tried in the media before the entire public. In the event the case is put before a jury with Simpson as defendant, where in the world will there be found a single impartial juror? In a cave?

IN THE PAST YEAR, EXTENSIVE COVERAGE OF the John and Lorena Bobbitt case caused the American public to join one of two sides. There were those who felt he had it coming and deserved to have his organ loped off and those who felt she was a screaming banshee nut.

Michael Jackson, who will forever be labeled a weirdo, was also subjected to trial by the media in his recent child molestation case. The Tonya Harding/Nancy Kerrigan mess was the subject of similar treatment.

The job of the media is, obviously, to report news and to serve as a watchdog for the public. The American people deserve to hear the news and this country is built on the media's freedom to report the news, but the accused also have the right to fair trail.

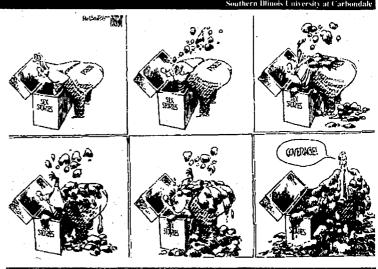

The media should not bear the entire blame for this bloody blitz. The public continues to tune into tabloid shows and buy their counterparts at the supermarket checkout stand. Advertisers continue to plunk down big bucks. Slime sells

Clinton speaks of self-sufficiency; welfare reform needs more work

"There's no greater gap between our good intentions and our misguided consequences than you see in the welfare system." President Clinton said in announcing welfare system." President Clinton said in announcing his welfare reform package this week.

He was speaking of the welfare system as we know it now, but the chances are good that the words would apply equally well if his complex proposal becomes law. Clearly, the welfare system is broken. What is not so clear is how to fix it without making things worse, "Welfare reform" is a popular political mantra. What is also that the reforms intended to more isn't mentioned is that reforms intended to move people from dependence to self-sufficiency cost more than taxpayers are willing to spend. The price tag on the administration's original plan was $15 billion over five years.

The president, unwilling to raise taxes, scaled it back to $9.3 billion, largely squeezed from other social programs. That's too bad. If Americans really want a welfare system that points people toward self-sufficiency, they need to know that it will cost more money than the current system - at least in the short

If, however, the nation really chose to invest in its poorest citizens, much as it invested in the middle classes after World War II, the long-term benefits would repay the costs many times over.

It's important to remember that the main target of reform, the familiar AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children), exists to help poor parents provide for their children, te serious discussion of the welfare of these children is rarely heard in this debate.

What happens if we impose time limits on payments or work requirements on recipients, but don't provide or work requirements on recipients, but don't provide decent child care while parents are at their jobs? The children pay the price. What good does that do for welfare families, or for society?

The Clinton plan has some good provisions, such as strengthening the collection of child support payments. There is also a strong case to be made for sending a message that families need to strive for self-sufficience.

But most of its distinguishing features are punitive to some degree, with no guarantee that essential support services—child care, health services and the support services—child care, health services and the like—will hold firm until families are on their feet

The administration deserves credit for trying. It brought together some of the best students of welfare policy to draw up this plan. But the tangle of problems and policies that have given rise to the current mess will not yield easily, even to the strongest campaign

New sanctions to strike compromise to be forming behind the Clinton administration's proposal to compel North Korea to drop its nuclear weapons program by subjecting it to graduated sanctions. Russia's Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev indicates his country is ready to accept sanctions as a last resort. Japan says it will go along with any sanctions voted by the U.N. Security Council. China continues to regard sanctions as "ineffective." Significantly. though, China chose to abstain rather than vote against the recent decision by the board of the International Atomic Energy Agency to end technical assistance to North Korea because of its refusal to allow full international inspection of its nuclear facilities. That abstention strongly hints that China might well decide not to cast a veto when the sanctions resolution comes before the Security Council.

The sanctions debate has a long way to go. The U.S. draft resolution has just reached the council, and it will probably be several weeks before a final resolution is ready to be voted on. However, it's beginning to appear that the Clinton Administration's efforts to line up countries whose support for sanctions is essential is meeting success.

A big reason could be that there's now a new appreciation of how appallingly high the stakes in this confrontation really are. A nuclear-armed North Korea would produce a radical shift in the balance of power in Northeast Asia, making it perhaps all but certain that South Korea and Japan would feel and Japan would feel compelled to acquire their own nuclear arsenals. y try to realize

The Clinton administration's phased-in approach is the necessary one for gaining political backing in the international community. Equally vital now is that North Korea be left in no doubt about the readiness of the United States and its allies to respond with overwhelming force if Pyongyang seeks to move this confrontation into the arena of open conflict.

Chris Germann, assistant vice president of the Bank of Carbondale, said the new system will lead to a loss of revenue for many Carbondale banks.

"We're kind of hoping it won't work." he said.

While students are in college. banks collects interest on loans, said. Once students graduate, banks may choose to collect on loans or sell the files to a student loan purchasing agency.

Once the new program goes into effect, this income no longer will be available to banks, he said.

Most banks currently offer

Once the new system goes into effect, Germann anticipates a sharp decline in the number of students obtaining loans from the bank.
"We'll still loan money to students, but only on a collateral-type basis," he said.

Simon said SIUC, SIU-Edwardsville and John A. Logan Community College were among nine schools added this week to the

The new system will expand repayment options, enabling students to pick a payment plan that

"The petroleum leaking out is not dangerous in the sense that anything will catch on fire," Tyrrell said, "The basic problem is that the soil is contaminated and the gas needs to be removed,"

Helping to remove the contaminated soil is Don Grammer professional engineer with Burkey Bio-Remediation who is working in conjunction with the Capital Development Board.

The CDB is involved in all construction modification projects in the state and provides funding for the contaminated soil removal.

These funds come from taxes set aside specifically for these projects in the state, Tyrrell said.

Grammer explained that the university had a release from an underground storage tank and petroleum moved across the lot by the force of gravity and water.

The concept of cleaning up the soil is preferential to digging a hole and hauling the soil to a landfill. Grammer said.

"Instead of just transplanting the problem somewhere else, we are injecting bacteria into the ground to soak up the petroleum," he said. "The culture is put into nonchlorinated water, put through three cycles of agitation and rest and then pumped into the ground."

Tyrrell concurred with Grammer's

Another important member helping to clean up is Michael Hostetter a representative with Bio-

Hostetter said the trademark of the bacteria was that it occurred naturally.

"The agitation and rest process is used to expand the colony of bacteria approximately one million times the original number," he said, The process is the amount of time it takes to grow into the development state." The carbon in the petroleum is the bacteria's source of food and after they multiply, they are hungry and soak up the contamination from the soil, Hostetter said.

According to Grammer, a leak occurring in a tank is a fairly normal occurrence.

"Ninety percent of steel underground tanks are leaking either from the tank or the lines." Grammer said.

The reason this happened was because the tank has been in the ground for many years and inventory control did not start until recently, Hostetter said.

This inventory needs to be closely watched over a long period of time,

"Volumes get larger in the heat and smaller in a cool environment, so the volume needs to be watched over a long period of time to ensure the information is accurate." he

Marion County commemorates GI Bill of Rights

Marion County is throwing a no-holds-barred birthday bash this weekend, not for a founding father or native celebrity, but for a piece of government legislation.

The G.I. Bill of Rights, which has assisted in paying for the education of nearly 20 million veterans, is turning 50 this weekend, and Salem, the city in which the bill was drawn up, wants the occasion to be special, said Doris Whitten, co-chairperson of the celebration.

Whitten said the event is one of a series of celebrations the city is Whitten, who works at Salem City Hall, said she found out about a program started by former President George Bush that allows communities to receive special grants to hold celebrations commemorating the 50 years following World War II.

"To become an official community in the program a city must hold three patriotic celebrations a year and a report must be filled out and filed each year with the Pentagon on the events. It is really kind of neat to be involved with this." Whitten said.

Some of the scheduled activities and attractions are the display of the giant Mt. Rushmore Flag and the Allied Flags, a soldiers and sailors reunion, a patriotic pro-

A study of the stumps of ancient trees that once grew from stream beds and lake bottoms in the Sierra Nevada has turned up new evidence that droughts in California can last 100 years or more, far longer than the state's official

In this week's issue of the British journal Nature, a California State University, Hayward, professor writes that submerged stumps in Mono Lake, Tenaya Lake in Yosemite National Park, the West Walker River in the northern Sierra and Osgood Swamp near Lake Tahoe are relics of trees that grew on land that was uncovered when droughts reduced water levels by up to 60 feet.

Studies by the California Department of Water Resources have concluded that the worst droughts have not lasted much longer than the state's recent seven-year dry spell. Officials base that assertion on 90 years of recorded weather information and tree ring data from 450-yezr-old trees.

Whitten said the event has been two years and three months in the making.

'When I found out that the G.I. Bill of Rights originated here in Salem, I contacted the chairman of the local American Legion to see if that organization would be interested in conducting this celebration, Whitten said. Ruling scuffs runners' shoes, spirits

By Doug Durso Sports Reporter

Just as the excitement of a conference championship was sinking in, the men's cross country team was notified that, because of a infraction, their championship was being taken away.

Martin Fysh, the athlete who was ruled incligible, said the situation was a terrible experience.

"To work so hard by putting all the time and practice in, and then find out it was all for nothing is just not right," Fysh said.

Men's cross country team reacts to loss of title-

He was not eligible to run in the 1993 cross country season because he did not have the 12 hours he needed the semester before, which was required by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

However, the SIUC athletic department and Missouri Valley Conference allowed him to participate not realizing he was incligible until after the season was over because of a misinterpretation

After Fysh's points were taken away. SIUC dropped down to fifth and Illinois State took the title.

Fysh said he was told he was eligible by SIUC and the MVC.

"I was told by the athletic ademic advisor, Nikki academic Chambers, that if I took an incomplete I would still be eligible for the cross country season, and the conference agreed." Fysh said.

He said if he knew he would have been ineligible he could have made up the hours in the summer and still have been eligible for the 1993 season

"It's frustrating when you know action could have been taken to correct the problem," Fysh said.

Fysh said it was really disappointing because of the effort the coach and team put into the season.

Associate athletic director Charlotte West said it was an unfortunate situation, but should not diminish the team's effort.

"At least they had the joy of being able to compete and put forth a great effort," West said. "We graciously gave our championship back, because there was an infraction.

West said that SIUC's staff is one of the most educated. experienced quality groups at any

Intramural sports offer potluck variety for all

By Bill Kugelberg Sports Reporter

While there may be fewer students on campus during the summer semester, the Intramural-Recreational Sports program keeps the fun going by offering a variety of activities during the dawg days of Southern Illinois.

Twelve-inch softball, volleyball, women's swimming and a tennis singles tournament will kick off the summer agenda. Registration for these activities is now being held for those interested.

Herman Williams, the assistant director of intramurals, said the programs offered during the summer will hopefully satisfy all of the students.

"We do have something for everyone," he said, "We are geared toward the students. There aren't as many students on campus during the summer, but we still offer a lot of things to do. There may not be as many teams

Later in the month, registration will open for a Home Run Derby, a racquetball singles tournament, a 3-on-3 basketball league, a beach volleyball tournament, an outdoor soccer tournament, a summer tournament and 2-person canoe races.

Williams said some of the new rograms offered last summer will be offered again this summer because of their popularity.

"All the activities offered last summer are being offered again this summer," he said, "We expect soccer to be popular because of what is happening with the World Cup this

Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge offers many summer activities

Activities within the refuge range from bicycling to bird watching, almost all of which are free or reasonably priced to the

Crab Orchard Recreation Specialist Neil Vincent said fishing the refuge's lakes is the most popular sport among visitors.

"If you're into fishing, this is a great place to do it since over 300,000 people come here each year just to fish." he said, "The other most common activity is wildlife observation." Both Crab Orchard and Devil's Kitchen lakes are located on the refuge grounds and feature a variety of fish that include bluegill, bass, catfish and crappie. Currently, fisherman are having the best luck with black cotton mouth lures, worms and minnows.

"I come out here twice a week because there's real good bass fishing," Ken Smith of West Frankfort said, "You may not catch as many out here, but they're bigger and there's always a few of them fish that got away last time.
