DAILY EGYPTIAN PRESSMAN Tom Bingman is an amateur photographer with a flair for the art. For other examples of his work, and a story, see page 2.

Tom Bingman: Printer-Photographer

By Margaret Perez

Handling other people's pictures, Tom Bingman is a professional; with his own, he's an amateur. This week, he's both.

Bingman is the Daily Egyptian's pressman and five days a week supervises the printing of the paper. Part of that job includes the handling of all the photographs that are used in the paper—he checks each negative to insure that it has the proper density, gives the order for more or less ink so that the photos are neither too dark nor too light, and is in charge of a variety of mysterious processes that only pressmen seem to understand.

On his days off, Bingman takes his own camera in hand and indulges in his life-long hobby.

He started taking pictures in the eighth grade when he won a Donald Duck camera on a radio program in Carmi.

"The camera was a pretty good one and it actually took pictures," Bingman says. "In fact, I think I still have it around someplace."

He's been behind that camera, and others, ever since. But he isn't the typical photo bug, with a bag full of equipment that an Army Quartermaster would envy. Instead, he just has one 35 mm. camera (forgetting that Donald Duck model) and a used enlarger. His darkroom is any dark corner he can find.

He does use a variety of cameras, however, borrowing them from friends.

Bingman's formal training in photography is meager.

"I've taken a few photography courses here," he says, "but other than that, I've never had any formal training in the field."

He finds photography both challenging and relaxing. But, he says, "it's hard to find the time anymore, because I'm a family man." He and his wife Marlene have two children, Bruce, 3, and Laura, 10 months.

But he is able to indulge his hobby on the job now and then, doing much of the special graphic art that has appeared in the cultural arts section of the Egyptian.

In fact, Bingman's hobby led him into his profession. He attended SIU for two years, then joined the printing service as a lithographer. He has been head pressman for the Daily Egyptian since 1962, cradling it through its first years as an offset paper.

His special pride is the Saturday paper, with its greater emphasis on art work. "That's my baby," he says, and his painstaking care with it shows his concern.

That's true most Saturdays. Today he undoubtedly aimed at perfection.

BINGMAN turns his camera on nature, combining a love of the outdoors with his photography hobby.

Bordeaux of the Irish

By Nora O'Sullivan

Bordeaux was formerly the city of the Irish. The city archives say that: "of all the peoples who have come to make up this our city, the Irish came in the greatest numbers." This is evident from the names of houses, streets, vineyards, tombstones. It all began sometime before the 5th century, that is 1500 years ago, when there was said to be trade, considerable for its time, between France and Britain. Down the long centuries since then, until the early 1800's, this trade survived—even when suppressed by English governments—submerged as smuggling. But there was always contact, cultural or economic or both.

To return to the 5th century—repeat, 5th century—it was then—as our school books tell us—that successive waves of barbarians crossed the Rhine and swept down over France. Bordeaux was the last city to fall.

A nucleus of learned men fled before the descending hordes, and by an ancient trade route, reached Ireland and sanctuary, bringing with them their Gallo-Roman learning and the name of their city, then known as Burdigala, Bordail in Irish. (This name has survived as Bordwell in Westmeath and in a few other places in Ireland, and has survived also, in the Irish language, as a noun of assembly.)

The compliment of sanctuary was returned by Bordeaux over 1,000 years later, and returned over a thousandfold. The city received Irish students, especially Munstermen, after the defeat of Kinsale in 1601 and it gave a warm welcome to the thousands of wild Geese who fled to the towns of Western France after Cromwell in the 1650' and after the Williamite wars of the 1690's.

It was then to this city of the Irish that the Hon. Mrs. Desmond Guinness, herself a German princess, brought the Georgian Society last September. She brought them to a magnificent welcome and to tremendous hospitality. The Lord Mayor, and the millionaire vineyard owners gave wine receptions, lunches, dinners, wine. To misquote Kinglake there was wine, wine, wine, still wine, and only wine, and wine and wine and wine again. There was a welcome by many diverse people, great and small, at every point of contact, and most curiously, by the keepers of the city cemetery.

I propose to elaborate at this point. Eoin O'Mahony known to most of our listeners, was with us. He brought a wreath of oak-leaves from Ireland. Mr. Emmanuel Cruse, a name familiar to wine merchants, kept it for five days in his bath. When the time came, we walked, 35-40 strong, mainly Irish, but with some English, French and German, Catholics, Jews, Protestants, through the Chartreuse cemetery in hot sunshine, some of the mentaking turns with the large wreath. It was placed on the tomb of the Lynches.

We also found the tombs of the Exshaws (distillers) of the Mc- Carthys, and the O'Byrnes, Mrs. Desmond Guinness brought flowers and placed a tribute on each. All this to the amazement of the ten or twelve uniformed supervisors, or, as we called them—the gendarmes of the cemetery—who had, in the first instance, looked up the records for us and led us to the tombs.

The oak-leaves, by the way, came from Grangecon, Co. Wicklow and were from an oak planted by Parnell at Kilmorna, Co. Kerry, the year before his death, which had been transplanted later by the O'Mahony's. The gendarmes were amazed, they said, at the romance, persistence and consistence that had brought a wreath of oak-leaves through the skies from Southern Ireland to South-West France, to be placed by the greatest concentration of Irish they had seen, on the graves of their long dead kinsmen.

EOIN O'MAHONY: "He brought a wreath of oak leaves from Ireland."

'The Heath Cobblers'

Drama
From Finland

By Wanda Barras

The translation and adaption of the Finnish play, "The Heath Cobblers," has been for Richard Johnson a journey back through time, back to the 1850's, back to the time when Aleksis Kivi, the play's author, lived and worked.

The search for the precise meaning of the Finnish dialogue has led Johnson, a playwright and speech instructor at VTI, back over a 100 years to a time when the Finnish language was just beginning to develop into its modern form.

"The major obstacle in translating the play into English was the drastically changed Finnish language during the last century," said Johnson, who speaks fluently the modern Finnish language.

Johnson was aided in his search through the past by numerous acquaintances he made while living in Finland from 1954 to 1957 as a missionary for the Mormon Church.

"I've written numerous letters to Finnish friends during the past year searching for the accurate word meaning of the Finnish play," Johnson said.

Johnson came under the influence of Kivi, who is proclaimed by Finnish people as the father of Finnish drama, while serving as a missionary in Finland.

"If you live in Finland for any length of time, you can't help becoming acquainted with Kivi and his works," Johnson said.

Kivi is considered the Shakespeare of Finland, and he and Elias Lönnrot were the beginning of Finnish literature, Johnson continued. The Finnish National Theatre is dated from 1856 when Kivi's play "Lea," was produced.

"Because of his fame, festivals are held each year throughout the country in his honor. His plays and famous novel, 'Seven Brothers,' which has been adapted for theater, are produced in huge outdoor theaters with revolving stages. For five years now, the festivals have also been held at Kivi's hometown, Murmijärvi.

"If you are interested in literature and theater you just can't help running into Kivi," Johnson continued.

Johnson said he chose this play to translate and produce at SIU because English-speaking people are more familiar with this one and because a comedy might lead to more interest in Kivi's works. "I want to translate all his works before I die," Johnson said.

The philosophical beliefs of Johnson and Kivi are very closely related. "Kivi was always optimistic about people and he believed that all would work out well in the end. He also believed that righteous action was more effective in the correction of erring people than preaching," said Johnson. "I believe this also."

Kivi's philosophy is demonstrated in "The Heath Cobblers." The correction of greed results from the goodness of Jaana, the adopted daughter of a shoe cobbler, instead of the preaching of the church sexton, Sepeteus. Jaana gives to the shoe cobbler and his family 250 pounds after they plotted to cheat her out of 500 pounds. It is this act of righteousness that warms and changed the hearts of the greedy family.

STYLISTIC COSTUMES for the Heath Cobblers were designed by Eelin Harrison of the Department of Theatre. The basic garments are of black, with colorful vests and aprons for the different characters.

While Johnson was in Finland, he decided to go into theater professionally and is presently working toward his doctorate at SIU.

"I came to SIU because I have great respect for the Departments of Speech and Theater," Johnson said.

Johnson received his bachelor's degree in speech and drama from Idaho State University and his master's degree in fine arts from Ohio University.

In November of 1965, Johnson produced one of his own plays, "Incitement," at Anthony Hall.

Tickets for "The Heath Cobblers" can be purchased at the Communications Building box office for $1.25. The play will be presented March 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. in the University Theatre of the Communications Building. The play is being directed by Naggy Faltas, a graduate student in theater.

The cast members are Bill Kirksey as Sepeteus, Bill Padgett as Topias, Anne La Valle as Martta, Denny Schlachta as Esko, Bruce Logsdon as Iivari, Bob Wiley as Mikko, Dan Vance as Niko, Jerry Mann as Jaana, Bob Koske as Kristo, Jerry Wheeler as Karri, Beth Grover as Kreeta, Steve Carnett as Jaako, Pete Magee as Sakari, Jay Welker as Antres, Guy Glarizzo as Eerikki, Ken Patrick as Leena's Kalle, Diane Eggers as Anna and Ron Szatkowski as the innkeeper.

The role of Teemu is still open, Johnson said.

military writer of this generation. On February 21, 1967 it became the posthumous monument to Dr. Bernard Fall as he fell victim to a Vietcong mine while on patrol with U.S. Marines in The Street Without Joy.

Dr. Fall had elected to accompany this particular patrol, one of four scheduled for the same day, since it was revisitation of the scene of an earlier book, generally considered definitive to that time, of the Vietnam conflict. If, because at age forty Dr. Fall's career was cut short before his overview of military strategy still lacked global scope, and he cannot be considered the foremost in the entire military field, there is little quarrel that he is without peer in the interpretation of Vietnam.

The months spent with the French Forces in 1953-54 provided Dr. Fall with the data used in his doctoral dissertation. The present book on Dien Bien Phu is a composite of eyewitness accounts, interviews with the North Vietnamese leaders, and official records made available to Dr. Fall by the French Ministry of Defense. The world is fortunate this book precedes his untimely death. For this book is far more than a narrative of parachute jumps, combat heroism, and a struggle of a dying Empire against the rising tide of nationalism; it is, from Dr. Fall's viewpoint, the chronicle of a turning point in the global anti-colonial movement.

While Dr. Fall indicates a belief the French had lost their Asian Empire before the end of World War II, probably concurrently with the arrival of the Japanese Imperial Forces in 1941, in his opinion wavering policy on the part of the United States who succumbed to panic when the Mao Tse Tung forces drove Chiang Kai Shek out of China must bear a large share of the burden for the French decision to fight Ho Chi Minh. He believes that had the United States been as firm toward France in Indochina as it was toward the Netherlands in Indonesia the debacle could have been averted. But the United States was preoccupied with Europe at the time.

He cites the "Crisis in Asia" speech of Dean Acheson, then Secretary of State, in January 1950 as the point of irrevocable U.S. involvement in the outcome of the struggle in Vietnam. At that time the Secretary of State promised France the aid she needed to win in Indochina, a part of the "Crusade Against Communism."

While Fall does not think a final military victory against the forces of nationalism in Vietnam possible he does believe the tragedy at Dien Bien Phu could have been averted by the aid of bomber support delivered from U.S. carriers in the Gulf of Tonkin. His specific comment is, "The decision, then in 1954, to let events take their course at Dien Bien Phu . . . put the United States in a position where, for the first time in her whole history, she would abandon an ally to his fate while the ally was fighting a war the United States had encouraged him to fight to a point far beyond his own political objectives and most certainly far beyond his own military means. In that sense, there can be no doubt but that Dien Bien Phu, far from being a purely French defeat, became an American defeat as well."

This book combines the best of scholarly research and of popular journalism. It is meticulously footnoted, is well-indexed and provides a complete bibliography, in short a scholar's book for scholars, yet the narrative reads as easily as a novel. The maps and photographs add a great deal to understanding, not only the tactics and battle actions, but also the full flavor of that terrible conflict.

presented in this book was provided by the evidence adduced at the hearings.

Some of the actual cases cited might be amusing if it were not for their sinister implications. One business executive, for example, installed a microphone in the tissue container in the ladies room so he could listen in on employees' comments on company officials and measure the time wasted in that feminine refuge. A hospital administrator was fired for monitoring confidential conversations between doctor and patient. Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon discovered that a lamp he had purchased for his home had been bugged.

As Senator Long points out, the development of this country's space and missile programs has produced electronic devices with capabilities that make James Bond's tricks look like kindergarten gadgets. Transmitters can be concealed in a martini olive, with the toothpick serving as its antenna. A lady's purse can have a microphone built into the clasp and when the purse is left Fourth Amendment, is the use to which they are put. The uniformed citizen's usual reaction is why handicap our law enforcement officials in the war on crime. Why should a gangster, or a dope peddler be protected? To use the legal phraseology, the Fourth Amendment is intended to protect the individual only against "unreasonable" searches and seizures.

Senator Long has two answers. He cites a number of distinguished jurists and law enforcement officials who agree that at best such snooping only makes the detection of crime easier and usually it tends to encourage careless and inefficient police work which makes actual conviction more difficult. Courts, he insists, are becoming increasingly skeptical of recorded tapes, which obviously can be edited and changed.

But the most critical danger of the growing use of electronic devices in his opinion is the threat of a dictatorship. He emphasized that under Hitler, "the destruction of the individual's sense of privacy was one of the principal methods used to gain total state control over the German people. Wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping were high on the list of techniques used by the Gestapo. No one was safe from the listening ears of the secret police."

Senator Long believes that there are some steps that can and should be taken to protect the American people. He believes that all snooping devices should be subject to regulation and manufacturers licensed. Telephone companies should be barred from leasing lines to government agencies for wiretapping or bugging. A Code of Conduct for all federal investigators should be adopted and enforced. Courts should be more vigilant in granting orders for the use of such devices. Finally, he insists, the American people must be aroused to the danger and "full commitment" accepted in the fight to protect the individual's right to privacy.

This is a thought-provoking book which deserves wide attention. It is as timely as the current debate between J. Edgar Hoover and Senator Robert Kennedy as to who gave approval for federal wiretapping. It is a disturbing book. The average reader is apt to feel as uncomfortable when he finishes it as he would if he knew a stranger was peering in his window. But it dramatizes the danger that obviously exists and he spells out what can be done to avert it.

and impressive indictment that modern electronics and the increasing concern with crime have confronted the American people with a far more serious form of violation of man's right to be alone. Last year Senator Edward V. Long of Missouri, as chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure, held extensive hearings on wiretapping, bugging and other forms of intrusion by both government and industry. The material behind on a chair or table, can transmit conversations long after the owner has left. Telephones can be tapped without the user ever being aware of it. Even public telephone booths are not immune. Worst of all, the author points out, all these devices and many more are available on the open market and are sold without any regulation or restrictions.

The crucial issue in the argument of whether such devices violate the

A Rogue's Novel

The Futile Life of Pito Pérez, by José Rubén Romero. Translated by William O. Cord. Englewood Cliffs, N.J.: Prentice-Hall, 1967. 151 pp. $4.95.

As is indicated in the Spanish language column of this week, this novel, just translated into English, is a contemporary Mexican contribution to the long series of works in the same vein, the picaresque or rogue's novels. Few, however, are so eminently successful as The Futile Life of Pito Pérez or the famous Lazarillo de Tormes with which an unknown Spanish writer began the genre in 1554.

The original Lazarillo was a slim volume of 167 pages. Pito Pérez is even shorter, only 131 pages in much larger type, but in either there is much about human nature, the shady tricks life plays, especially on the poor, and the life which the roguish protagonists lead. The pícaro or rogue is not simply a sneaky lowlife, he is a lot like the traditional American hobo whose theme song is the Big Rock Candy Mountains. The Mexican historian, Carlos Pereyra, applies to the pícaro all the following adjectives: "low, mean, deceitful, shameless, joyful, funny, pleasant, witty." He is somewhat of a Falstaff, but in addition he is a type of philosopher.

Juan de Luna wrote a sequel to the original Lazarillo in which his more robust than he, and in spite of the fact that her breasts are ample, Pito cannot hold his own, and turns out to be a scrawny wail.

Thus he is cheated of his first birthright. As the third child in the family he also gets short shrift. The other brothers go to school and train for the priesthood and a legal career, but Pito is made an acolyte and gets no education. Another acolyte robs the poorbox in the church; Pito is accused of the theft. From then on life plays him all sorts of dirty tricks and he finally ends up convinced of his role and calling as a perpetual bum and one doomed always to be short-changed.

After a while he takes to drinking in order to forget his troubles. He wanders from town to town. For a time he works for a pharmacist, much overweight and lazy, whose ailing wife finds cure for her troubles in the youthful company of Pito, but they are discovered and the rogue flees.

Filled with the flavor of rural Mexican life; petty politics, lack of social mobility, class consciousness, a slovenly penal system, the novel pokes fun at all and criticizes most. The style is racy, pungent, effective.

The final scenes are those of the love affair with a skeleton, symbolizing death, which in the end itself cheats Pito Pérez. This climax is a new twist to the picaresque genre, one characteristically Mexican.

Written in 1938 while the author was Ambassador of Mexico to Brazil, La Vida Inútil de Pito Pérez as it is called in the original Spanish, attained immediate success. It is a best seller which has had many editions. It will no doubt live as a Mexican literary classic because of its sparkling wit and the sympathetic delicacy with which it treats the problem of the down-and outier protagonist explains that he prefers: "to eat watercress and garlic and not work, to eating capons and chicken by working." More vehemently put, he continues: "If I am to say what I feel, the picaresque life is the life, for other ways of life do not merit that name; if the wealthy tasted it, they would leave their wealth for it, as did the ancient philosophers, who in order to attain it left what they possessed. I say 'in order to attain it,' because the philosophic existence and the life of the rogue are one and the same; the only difference is that the philosophers put aside what they had, and the pícaros, without putting anything aside, find it. It is not, then a matter of vulgar indolence, but of a certain attitude towards life."

The picaresque novel of Spain is, furthermore, notably realistic from the very first. In fact this is true of most Spanish literature from the beginning.

In the case of Pito Pérez one had not only all of the old traits of the classic protagonists of the Spanish rogue novel, but he also reflects attitudes of many of Mexican rural declassé society. Through the device of making an alcoholic of his pícaro Romero was able in addition to introduce a fantasy which typifies a mixture of the classic medieval attitude towards death as the social leveler and the indigenous Mexican approach to the concept of death.

Pito Pérez's life is told in the first person by the author and the protagonist. It opens in the bell tower of a small town church in the state of Michoacán, Santa Clara del Cobre. He begins as do most of the pícaros: a poor boy, of unknown or doubtful father. He is born at that unfortunate moment when a neighbor woman also has a child. She dies in childbirth and his mother is so charitable a woman that she nurses the orphan along with her own son. But the other child is

A Glimpse of Humanity

The Ravishing of Lol Stein, by Marguerite Duras. New York: Grove Press, 1966. $3.95.

Marguerite Duras, best known for her screenplay for Alain Resnais's Hiroshima moir Amour, has over the past decade produced a dozen novels that have clearly put her in the spotlight as a member of the so-called "nouveau roman" or "anthing more need occur to her to be fulfilled.

A central concern with such novelists as Mlle. Duras, clearly evident in The Ravishing of Lol Stein, is the clarity with which language can serve to make experience meaningful. Throughout the book, Mlle. Duras's concern with Lol's concrete though unspecified confusion of dream with reality is described—evidently captured quite well in Richard Seaver's translation—in seemingly simplistic images and style; in reality, though, this serves to make coherent Lol's confused mental state and her obsessive interest in Tatiana's love life. An unusual story, this novel is a powerful and unexpected glimpse into the human personality.

tri-novel" school which also included Alain Robbe-Grillet and Michel Butor and Nathalie Sarraute. In common with these, Mlle. Duras attempts to overcome some of the limitations of plot and traditional character analysis—as SIU's Harry F. Moore indicated in his recent two-volume history of modern French literature—and instead usually emphasizes the concreteness of the material world and of human experience.

In her new novel, The Ravishing of Lol Stein, the title character, a beautiful but passive girl of 19, observes her fiancé entranced by an older woman, and, after wrestling with the unexpectedness and horror of losing him, suffers what might be called a breakdown. After her ultimate recovery, she marries another man, has children, but clearly relives the traumatic experience repeatedly as she mentally returns to the place of the occurrence. After some 10 years of brooding, she deliberately seeks out a sometime friend, Tatiana, (who is herself married and quite respectable) and voyeuristically observes this woman's affair with another man. Lol's seduction of this other man constitutes the book's central action (the title is surely ironic), and obviously serves as a means by which Lol can purge herself of her masochistic tendencies.

Despite the potential melodrama such a plot might have, however, Mlle. Duras has succeeded in making Lol Stein come alive as a tormented (not demented) and pathetic figure who so combines love and madness that the reader is not quite clear where one ends and the other begins. The "ravishing" is one night of love; after this one act, Lol's story ends, as if to suggest that her life is now complete, that no-

El Picaro

En 1554 apareció impreso en Alcalá de Henares, Burgos, y Amberes la primera novela picaresca, La Vida de Lazarillo de Tormes, de autor hasta hoy desconocido. Este tipo de novela es la gran contribución de España a la literatura mundial. Es, además, un género más realista que ni el realismo declarado de los franceses de fines del siglo XIX. De hecho, el realismo español es el primitivo de la literatura mundial.

Y ¿qué es la novela picaresca? "¿Qué es un picaro?" dice D. Carlos Pereyra que la etimología de la palabra queda desconocida, pero agrega que "esta misteriosa palabra no necesita etimología. El picaro (es una persona) que comienza por ser bajo, ruin, doloso, falto de vergüenza. Es también andrajoso y despedazado. Pero nacen acepciones honoríficas, dentro de un orden especial. El picaro es el astuto taimado, el que con arte y disimulación logra lo que desea. Por último, el picaro es el «chistoso, alegre, placentero y dichoso»."

Continúa en otra parte: "Dos son los polos de la picaresca: holganza y libertad. Dice el Lazarillo de Tormes (una continuación del original, escrita por Juan de Luna) que siempre quiso más «comer berros y ajos sin trabajar, que capones y gallinas trabajando»." Sigue con vehemencia, "Si he de decir lo que siento, la vida picaresca es vida, que las otras no merecen este nombre; si los ricos la gustasen, dejarían por ella sus haciendas, como hacían los antiguos filósofos, que por alcanzarla dejaban lo que poseían. Digo por alcanzarla, porque la vida filosófica y picaresca es una misma; sólo se diferencia en que los filósofos dejaban lo que poseían por su amor, y los pícaros, sin dejar nada, la hallan." No se trata, pues, de una holgazanería vulgar, sino de una cierta actitud ante la vida."

Uno de los más perfectos pícaros de la literatura del idioma español de la época contemporánea, es la creación del mexicano D. José Rubén Romero, en la novela La vida inútil de Pito Pérez.

El protagonista de esta obra posee todos los atributos clásicos de la novela picaresca, pero no es ninguna copia servil de las veintenas anteriores en este género. Refleja por un lado lo que es netamente el ambiente mexicano de un pueblo pequeño, en especial las villas del Estado de Michoacán, pero además es un reflejo de lo históricamente filosófico en la novela picaresca, una expresión de los hondos problemas de su clase social y de su país. Esta filosofía del pícaro reúne, además, el clásico tema medioeval de la muerte como gran igualador, con la muerte tal como se pinta en las tradiciones folklóricas indígenas - españolas, y crea un amorfo entre su protagonista y la muerte.

Habla Pito Pérez de su consorte: "Aquí su fotografía, conozca usted a la señora Pito Pérez, colgada de su brazo; admiro sus grandes ojos, sus dientes blancos, y fíjese que sobre su corazón lleva atado un ramito de azahares, como el que llevo yo prendido en la solapa de mi levita. La Epístola de San Pablo dice que el matrimonio acaba con la muerte; el mío ha comenzado con ella, y durará por toda la eternidad".

"Sirva usted unas copas para todos —ordena el autor de la novela—, aunque me parece algo paradójico brindar a la salud de la muerte. Hagámoslo por Pito Pérez y por su respetable consorte..."

Pocos días después encontraron muerto al pobre pícaro. José Rubén Romero escogió para su epitafio los versos del poeta Manuel José Othón: "... y al fin en el Amor los ojos cierra; pues, ¿adónde hay más amor que el de la muerte, ni más materno amor que el de la tierra?"

Folk Sings Reflect Today's Involvements

delay, amid reassuring bulletins from the reservations desk.

Paxton, who wrote "The Last Thing on my Mind," seems to epitomize the contemporary popular music writers, even with his picture on the album cover. He is looking straight ahead, a balding young man, wearing a windbreaker, awedding ring and an intently serious expression.

Bob Dylan used to write city folk songs and actor Sebastian Cabot reads 11 of their lyrics to a background of baroque violins, in an unusual and generally effective new LP, "A Dramatic Reading with Music," on MGM.

He begins with a ravagingly dramatic "Who Killed Davey Moore," and then does quieter readings of "It Ain't Me Babe," "Blowin' in the Wind," etc.

Cabot's style is as if he were reading a medieval poet and as reads "Don't Think Twice, It's All Right," the listener can visualize the action as taking place in a lonely English inn long ago.

Sometimes the music seems too emphatic, and inappropriate. Other times, as in "Like a Rolling Stone" and "All I Really Want To Do," the listener is better able to concentrate on the poetry because Dylan's original tune and strong beat are absent.

Vanguard issues several albums after each Newport Folk Festival; from the 1964 festival there were seven, each with its own topic—blues, country-western, traditional, topical songs, etc.

Now from the 1965 festival, the company has issued its first offering, a cross-section album called "Festival." It's an interesting combination, 13 songs, ranging from the Paul Butterfield Blues Band to Son House, authentic gospel and "Turkey in the Straw" on a banjo to a spoof of the Wild West.

"More Than a New Discovery," meaning Laura Nyro, on Verve. Folkways, is "folk" in the way that Gale Garnett's songs are—"contemporary" is probably a better word.

In the Depression, the folk song writers were chronicling the dust bowl, the migrant workers, the impoverished, the big power dams. Today, there again are folk song writers abroad, in a much-different land, like a bunch of vagabond sociologists.

Many of the new LPs reflecting their work are powerfully telling in their insight, clarity and original turn of phrase.

"Fred Neil" on Capitol, marks Neil's debut with Capitol Records. (He has recorded for Elektra.) His voice is mellow and melodic, his tunes are interesting and the guitar work (both acoustic and electric) never blares. There is one very good instrumental number seven and a half minutes long, sounding like pop chamber music.

Subjects of the songs include city life bringing a person down, a wry "life gets tedious" chronicle, endlessness and saying goodbye to people, looking for a meaningful life. Neil also sings a couple of his songs which are fairly well known, "Sweet Cocaine" and "Green Rocky Road."

"Outward Bound," by the widely talented Tom Paxton, is on Elektra. Some of these songs sound a century old (for example a fine one about a bulldog); some are humorous jabs at modern foibles.

The images are fresh and simple. Singing about a jilted roamer, he says, "I spent cities like a handful of change but I never quit looking for you."

Paxton sings the touchingly realistic, understated "My Son, John," about a boy who left for war, wrote home that his buddies were being killed, came home and didn't talk much.

He also has a tongue-in-cheek talking blues about pop art in which he tries to buy a can of beans and finds it costs $300. Another one describes a plane's long takeoff

Television's Week

Mark Twain Tonight!

Mark Twain lives again in Hal Holbrook's portrayal of this famous American humorist Monday night on the CBS network.

Holbrook's one-man show, "Mark Twain Tonight," was first presented in New York in 1959, and has since been on a world tour.

In costume, Holbrook re-creates a Twain lecture of the late 19th century. He offers anecdotes and readings from "Luckieberry Finn," "Life on the Mississippi," "Roughing It," "Letters from the Earth" and other writings.

Rockford Investigates Slayings

ROCKFORD (AP)—A shell casing was found Friday a few feet from the park pavilion where two teen-age boys were shot to death as they knelt with their backs toward their killer.

Sheriff Herbert Brown told newsmen the casing was from a .22 caliber bullet which probably had been fired from a pistol.

Coroner Collins Y. Sundberg reported the boys had been shot Thursday night from a distance of 2 to 3 feet. The victims were Wayne Mullendore and his first cousin, Ronald Johnson. Each was 14.

The sheriff described them as clean-cut, church-going boys who never had been in any trouble.

The boys were executed as they knelt against a stone wall in a pavilion in Levings Park, a large summer picnic ground just outside the southwestern city limits.

Johnson was shot squarely in the back of the head. The bullet which killed young Mullendore entered the rear position of one side of his head, as if he had started to turn to face the executioner. Both also were shot in the abdomen.

Officials said their early impression was that it appeared to be a revenge slaying, and that no sex factor was involved.

Winnebago County Sheriff's deputies and city police joined in a search for clues in the tee-dotted park.

In a hunt for information that would point to a motive, investigators questioned youngsters in Wilson Junior High School. Both victims were in seventh grade there. Mullendore was an honor student, and Johnson an average pupil.

Officials appealed to an anonymous tipster—believed to be a woman—to come forward and help them.

Reds Tell Troops Of New Weapon

SAIGON (AP) — The Communist leadership in Vietnam has been attempting to build up the morale by telling troops of a new secret weapon in the Red arsenal.

That weapon, informed sources believe, is the 140mm rocket which the Reds used Monday against the big U.S. base at Da Nang.

That attack, by some 50 rockets, killed 47 persons, including 12 U.S. Marines. Most of the dead were in an adjoining Vietnamese village.

Informed sources say first reports of the secret weapon began to reach U.S. intelligence authorities about two months ago.

Such reports naturally caused some apprehension. Now that the so-called secret weapon has appeared, the feeling is that while the rocket will doubtless cause more casualties, the Communists won't be able to make much of it.

The 140mm rockets weigh about 90 pounds and are considerably more fearsome than the Chinese 120mm mortar, the biggest weapon the North Vietnamese previously had sent south.

However, some of the limitations were evident even in the initial Da Nang strike.

Victory Predicted by Powell If There Is Court Fight

BIMINI, Bahamas (AP) — "I might be back in Congress next week," said Adam Clayton Powell on Friday in announcing he would fight to get back the seat his colleagues have denied him.

Powell, who met with newsmen under palm trees, said he would fight first in court, where he predicted a quick victory.

LBJ Takes Step To Halt Strike On West Coast

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson took a first step Friday toward halting a strike at 13 West Coast shipyards that is said to be hampering the war effort in Vietnam.

Johnson, using his powers under the Taft-Hartley law, created a three-man emergency board to look into the four-month-old walkout which has idled 9,200 workers.

Once the board reports, the Justice Department will be free to seek a court injunction halting the strike for 80 days.

The President, who is spending a weekend at his ranch home north of here, was described as several days behind in his paperwork and striving to catch up.

For one thing, Johnson is completing a special message, going to Congress next week, in which he will recommend a new Selective Service law to replace the present statute, a major portion of which expires June 30.

A presidential commission has reported to Johnson on its recommendations for changes in the military draft. Its report will be made public tonight.

But if that fails, he will run again in Harlem where he said he hasn't had to campaign for six years.

The court battle, he said, would be left to his "crew of lawyers," due to confer with him on legal aspects later Friday on these British-owned resort islands.

But, in an afterthought about battles, he said, "We have a saying in Harlem that when a Negro gets his Negro up he's a hard man to handle." Powell predicted an easy victory if he has to run again. "I'll run on complete confidence and faith in the Puerto Ricans and Negroes in my constituency," he said. "The size of the majority would depend on who is running."

In the last election Powell won by better than 70 per cent.

The flamboyant preacher plans to deliver a sermon entitled, "When a man falls, he shall rise again," this weekend to 24 visiting theological students from New York. He appeared relaxed in a spotless white sports shirt and white Bermuda shorts.

4 Men to Continue Viet Hunger Strike

SAIGON (AP)—Four Americans vowed Friday to continue their hunger strike in prison "until we die or get justice." They charged the U.S. Embassy "threw us to the wolves" but Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge denied this.

The four — all civilian employees — assert that a special Vietnamese military court convicted three of them on illegal currency transaction charges last December after they had refused to pay a bribe of $10,000. All deny any guilt.

Looking weak and thin after 24 days of fasting, they were visited by reporters in suburban Chi Hoa Prison.

Elijah Lovejoy Nominations Being Received

Nominations for the 1967 Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award, presented annually to a weekly newspaper editor for courage in journalism are now being received by the Department of Journalism.

The award is given in memory of abolitionist editor Lovejoy, who was killed by an Alton, Ill., mob in 1837 to become one of the first American martyrs for press freedom.

Howard R. Long, department chairman, said the award will be presented during the week of July 16 at the International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors held annually at SIU. Deadline for submitting nominations is March 31.

Past winners of the coveted award include Hazel Brannon Smith of the Lexington (Mass.) Advertiser in 1960, who later won a Pulitzer Prize, and W. Penn Jones Jr., editor of the Midlothian (Texas) Mirror in 1963. Jones, because of a book he has written on the Kennedy assassination recently received national prominence through TV interviews.

Other winners include Sidney Curtis, publisher of the Revere (Mass.) Journal, 1966; Foster Meharry Russell, Cobourg (Ont.) Sentinel-Star, 1965; Gene Wirges, Morrilton (Ark.) Democrat, 1962; Samuel Woodring, editor of the North Augusta (S.C.) Star, 1961; John F. Wells, editor of the Arkansas Recorder in Little Rock, 1959; J. Wilcox

Dunn, editor of the Princess Anne Free Press, Virginia Beach, N.C., 1958; Horace V. Wells Jr., editor of the Courier-News, Clinton, Tenn., 1957; and Mabel Norris Reese, editor of the Topic, Mount Dora, Fla., 1956.

Delta Zetas Named To Special Offices

Marcia Rodriguez, president of Delta Zeta social sorority, recently appointed 10 members to special offices.

They are Judy Rank, song leader; Barbara Allen and Jody Erwin, guards; Donna Clift, parliamentarian.

Appointments to the judicial board are Jo Ann Fischel, Diana Armstrong, Jacqueline Schryer, Mary Anderson, Diane Thyberg and Mary Gard.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF HEARING

There will be a hearing of the Carbondale Planning Commission on Tuesday, March 21, 1967, at 7:30 o'clock P.M. in the Courtroom of the Hall of Justice at the following address:

Room 101, State Street, Lower Room of the Court House, Carbondale, Illinois 62901. Planning Commission will consider a proposed ordinance to amend the Carbondale Zoning Ordinance, Chapter 11, Article 1, Section 1-1, to provide for the establishment of a new zoning district, the "Community Center District," and to provide for the establishment of a new zoning district, the "Community Center District," and to provide for the establishment of a new zoning district, the "Community Center District."

Any person desiring to appear at the hearing should appear at the hearing at the above address at the above time and place and bring with him or her a copy of the proposed ordinance and a copy of the minutes of the previous meeting of the Commission.

Fleischmann to Talk On Jewish Novel

W.B. Fleischmann, chairman of the Department of Comparative Literature at the University of Massachusetts, will discuss the modern Jewish novel at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Studio Theater in University School.

Fleischmann will also talk on the "Introduction to Austrian Literature" at 11 a.m. Friday in the Seminar Room of the Agriculture Building.

The award is for outstanding editorial service involving courageous performance of duty in the face of economic, political or social pressures brought against a newsmen by members of his community.

Long said the purpose is to encourage outspoken, but responsible, participation in local issues and controversies "and to give credit where credit is due for constructive editorial leadership under conditions more rewarding to silence than to the forthright printing of the facts."

Nominations must be in writing by persons who are personally familiar with the circumstances of the newsmen's service. Consideration is limited to events that occurred during the calendar year of 1966.

Peacocks Will Carry 18-4 Season's Record Into NIT Game

By Tom Wood

Southern gets its initiation into post season basketball with the major colleges Thursday, March 9, when the Salukis meet St. Peter's of Jersey City, N.J., in the first round of New York's National Invitation Tournament. It will be the first appearance for SIU in a major college post season basketball tourney.

St. Peter's team has an 18-4 record against top flight eastern competition. The Peacocks belong to the Metropolitan Collegiate Conference and the Middle Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association. St. Peter's is a school with a long winning tradition in basketball. Last year's squad was the first losing team in 16 years at the small Jesuit school. It finished with a record of 11-12.

This year's squad is leading the nation in field goal percentage with a mark of better than 53 per cent from the floor. Two Peacocks are ranked among the top shooters in the nation: forward Pete O'Dea, the team's top scorer, is 17th in the nation in field goal percentage and Ken Grant is 16th.

In addition to his prolific scoring, O'Dea is ranked with the top 10 in rebounding. He has grabbed better than 15 stray shots a game this year.

Among the Peacock's victims this year were: Niagara, 87-83; Seton Hall, 73-67; Manhattan, 75-73; Hofstra, 91-87; and New York University, 69-68.

St. Peter's has lost its last two games to St. Francis of Pennsylvania and Long Island University. The Peacocks lost earlier in the year to Villanova, 62-48 and Georgetown (Washington, D.C.), 72-70.

The Peacocks have four of five starters back from last year's squad. In addition to this, the team is used to playing in Madison Square Garden, site of the NIT. The New York area schools have built up a solid reputation of playing outstanding basketball in post season and holiday tournaments in the Garden.

St. Peter's is among the top 20 teams in total offense, with an average of better than 84 points a game.

The Salukis take the No. 1 ranking in both Associated Press and United Press small college polls into the tourney. Southern received all 35 first place votes in the recent UPI and 13 out of 16 in the Associated Press polls. Kentucky Wesleyan finished second in both rankings.

A victory Thursday would put the Salukis into the second round action Monday. Pairings have not been completed so they do not know who their foe would be, should they defeat St. Peter's.

The only other game which has been announced is the Villanova-Marshall contest, which precedes the Salukis' game March 9. Marshall was the last team announced, bringing the field to 11.

Salukis Tie Down 1st in Small-College Poll

By The Associated Press

The Southern Illinois Salukis virtually have clinched first place in the small-college basketball poll after defeating eighth-ranked Southwest Missouri for their 20th victory against two losses.

Auto Club to Rally

The Grand Touring Auto Club will hold a night rally today.

Registration will begin at 5 p.m. at Epps Volkswagen before the event and it will close at 5:30 p.m. with the first car off at 6 p.m.

The rally will end before 9 p.m., and a party will be held afterward.

13 first-place votes and 157 points in the next-to-last poll of the season. There were no changes in the next four positions as Kentucky Wesleyan held second place followed by Lincoln of Missouri, Cheyney State and Indiana State.

Southern Illinois beat Kentucky Wesleyan 52-46 last week. The voting by a national panel of 16 sports writers and broadcasters was based on games through last Saturday.

The Top Ten, with first-place votes in parentheses, records and total points:

Kunkel Is Busy Man

NEW YORK (AP)—Bill Kunkel, former Yankee relief pitcher, is an official in two sports.

He is a rookie official in the National Basketball Association and next season will be a baseball umpire in the International League.

Kappas Capture '67 Intramural Basketball Crown

Kappa Alpha Psi (A) defeated the Bills, 62-35, Thursday night to capture the Intramural Basketball Championship for 1967. Both teams were awarded trophies following the game.

James Thomas was the leading scorer in the game for Kappa Alpha Psi with 20 points. The winners had three men in double columns in scoring. Major Hearn dropped in 12 points and Don Nesbitt scored 11 points.

The Victors used a fast break offense and a man-to-man defense throughout the game and it was too much for the Bills. Ted Romoser led the Bills with 11 points and Bill Liskey added nine.

At half-time George Toler was presented an award as the most outstanding basketball manager of 1967. Toler managed the Sigma Pi (A) team. Certificates were also awarded to the members of the Intramural all-star team which was selected by the Intramural all-star board.

Free Throw Contest To Start Sunday

The annual Intramural free throw tournament will be held in the University School gymnasium March 5-9. The student making the most free throws out of 100 attempts will be awarded the trophy.

Each participant may take three practice shots before shooting in any one round of the tournament.

In the first round each contestant will shoot 30 free throws. In order to qualify for the second round the participant must successfully make at least 20 of the 30.

In the second round, each participant will shoot an additional 35 free throws. To qualify for the third and final round, the student must have made a minimum of 45 of the first 65 shots.

The participants qualifying for the final round will shoot an additional 35 free throws.

Trailer Courts Must Change Image, Operator Says

Students want to live in trailer courts because of low cost, high quality and privacy, according to Chuck Glover, owner of Glover's Country Estates trailer court.

Glover, speaking to a group of trailer court owners at a meeting with SIU housing officials, said the trailer court has many advantages but has suffered in the past because of a "poor image."

"The trailer court must change to improve this image. We must become more active in the community and University affairs," Glover told the group.

He said the courts should participate more in such activities as Homecoming, student affairs and "university politics."

"We should also have a committee comprised of students from each court and court owners to discuss problems," Glover continued.

Glover also suggested that the owners should have some form of communication among themselves so they could pass on information about problem students and incidents that have occurred.

Speaking about the "image" of trailer courts, Glover said "We should toot our own horn more. Because of our low costs, a lot of students have been able to go through school who normally wouldn't have been able to."

In the running feud between dormitory managers and the trailer court owners, the cost factor to the students has been a point of contention.

Dorm managers maintain there is not a substantial difference in cost of the student who lives in a trailer rather than a dormitory.

The dormitory managers have also complained that there is a "double standard" in student supervision and administration when it comes to University approval of the two types of housing.

One dormitory manager has said the supervision of a trailer court is far less stringent than that of a dorm.

The University's position, according to Joseph Zaleski, assistant dean for off-campus housing, is to provide a wide variety of living facilities to the student.

"We are not trying to create any competitive advantages to any particular interest. We would like to see the student be able to select the type of housing that best suits his needs at the price he can afford," Zaleski said.

Gas Heaters Blamed for Death of Two

Apparent asphyxiation was determined the cause of death for a De Soto couple found in their home Thursday, according to Harry Flynn, Jackson County Coroner. Final ruling on the deaths is pending a state pathologist's report, Flynn said Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn Gordon Rahn, who rented a home in De Soto last Friday, were found about noon Thursday when the landlord went to check on the couple, according to the Jackson County Sheriff's office. Ellis Brown, owner of the home, said he last saw the couple about 5 p.m. Feb. 24, according to the Sheriff's report.

Two gas heaters in the dwelling were leaking gas, the report stated. Central Illinois Public Service Co. is conducting an investigation.

Foul play was ruled out when more than $700 was found on the dead man and a check for more than $200 was found in Mrs. Rahn's possession.

The bodies were found in the bedroom. Rahn was 41 years old and his wife 42 years old. Funeral arrangements are pending notification of relatives, Huffman Funeral Home said.

Three Minor Fires Reported in City

Three minor fires were reported in the city Thursday, according to the Carbondale Fire Department.

A grass fire in the backyard at 209 W. Elm St. was extinguished at 10:20 a.m. No damage was reported.

A cord of an iron caught fire in a residence at 321 N. Wall St. at 12:55 a.m. damaging only the electrical cord, fireman reported.

Fireman were called at 4:15 p.m. Thursday to extinguish a tar kettle fire at 405 Rawlings St.

Reception Set for Choir

Residents of Woody Hall will host the Winston-Salem Choir at a reception from 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday. The event is not a record dance as reported in Friday's Egyptian.

NOT HIS DAY--All this started out as a touch-of-spring photograph. This dog was using the pond in front of Morris Library for a bit of retrieving drill, complete with stick, and this was the way Photographer Ling Wong caught the action. Shortly after, the dog traipsed off to the University Center, still carrying the stick. Another member of the Daily Egyptian photographic staff, John Baran, saw the animal there. "I wondered why he was soaking wet," Baran said. Furthermore, the dog was introduced to glass doors--the hard way. Which can be the fate of dogs trying to enter the University Center without knowing about glass doors. Thump. Yelp.

Counts Gets Education Award

A distinguished professor of education at SIU, George S. Counts, has received the 1967 Award for Distinguished Lifetime Service in Education in the Spirit of John Dewey.

Counts was presented the award in Chicago at the John Dewey Lecture held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the National Association of College Teachers of Education.

The John Dewey Society was founded in the name of the outstanding American educator-philosopher who died 15 years ago. Counts is the second SIU professor to be honored. John I. Childs, now a professor emeritus at Southern, received the 1965 Dewey Award.

Counts is the author of 29 books on education and one of them was praised by John Dewey in a 1938 letter now in the possession of Counts.

"I want to join the many who have expressed warm appreciation of Counts' 'Prospects of American Democracy' and who urge that it receive the attention it so richly merits," Dewey said. "Since the publication of this book, any one assessing the prospects for democracy in this country must reckon this book as a great asset on the favorable side if only it is widely read and studied.

"As an educator, I should like especially to call the attention of educators to the chapter on the relation of the schools to the future of democracy. I wish I had the power to make this chapter the subject of study in every teachers' meeting throughout the country. . . . It would not only help democracy but will enrich and enliven the teaching in all school subjects."

Counts has taught at Delaware College, Harris Teachers College, University of Washington, Yale University, University of Chicago, Teachers College of Columbia University, and Southern Illinois University. His book, "The Challenge of Soviet Education" won the $5,000 Liberty and Justice Award of the American Library Association in 1957.

Pressmen Vote On Issue Today

Printers of Local 217 of the International Typesetters Union voted Friday night to accept a three-year contract proposed by the Southern Illinoisan.

The pressmen will vote on the same agreement today.

The agreement was reached at bargaining sessions Thursday afternoon and evening.

Management offered the striking unionists an hourly wage increase of 17 cents for each of the three years of the contract.

John C. Gardner, editor-general manager of the Southern Illinoisan, said that the union and the paper had reached "language that was mutually satisfactory."

The strike began Nov. 1, 1966, when members of the Local 418 of the Pressman and Assistants Union, struck the newspaper plant after no agreement was reached on a new contract.

The previous contract expired Nov. 1.

Members of the Local 217 of the International Typographical Union refused to cross the picket lines of the Local 418.

Before the strike, the five pressmen at the newspaper received an hourly wage of $3.18.
