Fee changes recommended by committee

By Rich Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A report recommending a Community Fee for faculty, administrative and professional staff and numerous changes in University fees paid by students was approved by the Fee Study Committee at its final meeting Thursday.

The committee, which has two faculty and six student members plus nine administrators, was notified at the meeting that the student members plan to send a separate minority report to Chancellor Robert G. Layer. A paper signed by the students said the report "will attempt to reflect the will of the only group that actually pays these fees—the student body of SIU."

The paper said "the committee has often disregarded the needs, desires, and the welfare of SIU's student body...most notably in committee votes on the athletic fee and University Center fee."

Despite the unexpected action by the students, the committee members voted unanimously to approve final adoption of the majority report. The report will now go to Layer. Only the SIU Board of Trustees has the authority to change University fees.

The fee committee, in making recommendations on student fees, said that full fee amounts should be charged to students carrying six or more hours, and students with five or fewer hours should not be required to pay fees, except in the case of the University Center fee.

Major recommendations are to have the community fee for faculty, professional and administrative staff. The committee did not set an amount, but said a committee should be appointed to review the benefits these groups receive, such as Daily Egyptian and University Center.

The committee recommends the following action on student fees:

- lowering of the $10 athletic fee to $9 in 1971-72, with the fee being budgeted entirely for athletic operations and not any to a stadium development fund. The committee also recommends that Layer have a committee review the University's commitment to inter-collegiate sports and the funding of the commitment.

- establishing of a $7 mandatory health service fee (for six or more hours) and a compulsory health insurance fee.

- cutting the activity fee from $10.50 to $5, with an accompanying elimination of University inter-collegiate athletics, women's inter-collegiate athletics, and health service from activity fee funding.

- raising the University Center fee from $5 to $10 for students with six or more hours, leaving it $5 for those with five or fewer hours.

- keeping the Student Welfare and Recreation Building fee $15 (for six or more hours) and setting a $7 million ceiling on use of the fee for a Co-Recreational Building which is planned.

- elimination of numerous incidental fees.

- lowering the graduation fee for graduation expenses to $6 for undergraduates and $9 for graduate students, but keeping an additional $4 alumni fee.

Two other minority reports will be submitted to Layer, one by SIU Athletic Director Donald N. Boydston recommending no action be taken on the athletic fee, and the other by Ray Nowacki, faculty member on the committee, who recommends in part that the University Center fee be $16 (six or more hours) and $8 (five or less).

'Need more study'

Horsley bills have trouble

By Pat Silha
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — State Senator G. William Horsley R-Springfield seemed to have underestimated the case when he told the Senate Judiciary Committee that some of the five bills that he was to present at the Thursday meeting "need some more study." None of the bills, four of which dealt with conduct on college and University campuses, made it through.

Three of the bills were taken back by Horsley for revision and resubmission at a later date, one was defeated by a 9-1 vote and one was killed on the floor.

Five attorneys, representing three state universities and two university systems, also attended the meeting and three of them made presentations against specific bills. Edward H. Hammond, assistant to the chancellor for student relations, also attended the meeting, but made no presentation.

C. Richard Grunz, legal counsel for the SIU Board of Trustees, who represented the Board, said the attorneys had made a previous agreement to divide the task of testifying among themselves, but all the attorneys opposed all the bills.

New U-Senate begins work on Monday

By Darrell Aherin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Provisional University Senate's first organizational meeting will be at 7 p.m. Monday at the Morris Library Auditorium. Chancellor Robert G. Layer announced Thursday.

The Senate, approved in an all-University referendum, includes representatives from all constituencies at SIU.

On the agenda for the first meeting will be a proclamation by Layer on the inauguration of the Provisional Senate and the conditions of its existence and operations.

The agenda also includes the election of a temporary president as presiding officer and of a temporary vice president.

Several committees will be selected during the Senate's meeting, including an ad hoc by-laws committee to write by-laws for subsequent Senate adoption; an agenda committee; a committee to advise Layer on his preparation of proposed governance amendments to the Statutes of the Board of Trustees.

The agenda states that the Senate will consider other business only by unanimous consent of the body.

Layer said he believes all six constituencies to the Senate have selected their representatives.

UofI president challenges 1972 education budget

URBANA, Ill. (AP)—Dr. David D. Henry, president of the University of Illinois, challenged Thursday Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's rejection of budget recommendations by the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Ogilvie said a reduction from $859 million to $672 million is necessary and the board should make the cuts. In a statement, Henry said: "The governor's proposals to reduce the budget request...cannot be implemented in our view without damage to the quality of education, to the service capabilities of the institutions and to the educational opportunities to the people of the State of Illinois."

Henry said it is important for the people of Illinois to understand the consequences "to their educational institutions." They must take into account particularly the damage that may not be immediately visible but which, in the long-range, would prove to have been poor economy for a great industrial and agricultural state.

Henry said the budget recommendations of the governor's message to the General Assembly Wednesday "simply cannot be implemented without the frustrations of those expectations and through reduction of those services." Henry said the last annual budget ignored the state funding of current obligations for retirement. "By law this funding is required as part of the budget's request," he said, "thus complying with the law automatically increases the request significantly over last year even though it applies to an expanded services."

Henry said capital construction was severely reduced in the last annual budget and expenditures were held "largely for facilities in the health fields."

He said this has created a background of unmet need that naturally inflates the request for the current year when added to normal annual increases.

"The governor's office indicates that expenditures under the state's university system, excluding junior colleges, have increased 34.1 per cent during 1968-1971," Henry said, "while enrollments were increasing 140 per cent. This simple generalization does not reflect the complexities of such comparisons."

"The 1971 figure includes capital cost and building authority rental while it appears that the base figure excludes the building bond issue which financed all capital expenditures in 1962."

Henry said public higher education in Illinois is at a financial crossroads and the action taken this year will affect what the universities are able to do for many years to come.

Proficiency exams save $500,000

By University News Services

Students took more than 7,500 proficiency examinations at SIU last year and enough passed to save a half-million dollars in classroom expenditures.

Robert McGrath, dean of admissions and records, who made the estimate, based it on average costs of $1,600 a year to educate an undergraduate.

Proficiency exams may be taken to satisfy course requirements without actually taking the course. The majority attempted at SIU are in the General Studies curriculum required of all students.

McGrath said students got credit for 5,885 courses by taking proficiency exams last year. He said an average of 3.5 quarter hours for each one would total to 20,397 quarter hours—or the same as 420 students earning a full year (40 hours) of credit by "proficiencying."

However, many students took more than one test—one having proficiencyed 13 courses. The all-time record-holder by hours of credit earned through the system, according to General Studies Associate Dean Andrew Vaughan, is Edward Hutt, a freshman from Palatine, who has 46.

Catholic stand defeats the 'Green Revolution'

To the Daily Egyptian:

Father Genisio asserts: "...given our area and natural resources, a population of 300 million does not seem all that great." But to accommodate this additional 100 million Americans by 1999 will require duplicating half of the public facilities available now: from schools to sewage plants. Can't we do other things with our tax money than build public facilities to accommodate population increases?

"There is no correlation in the United States between population and a human standard of living." But there is a direct correlation between the per capita income of my family and the number of people in my family. I could not provide the advantages and opportunities for six children that I am providing for two.

"...a human standard of living for all citizens of the United States...depends on a reform of our governmental, economic and educational institutions." I would be foolish to have six children that were dependent for "a human standard of living" on the reform of society's major institutions. What year will these reforms be completed? Had I not better keep my family small until the reforms come?

"There is simply no way to know what discoveries...will come in the (future)." Dr. Norman Borlaug, father of the "Green Revolution," in his Nobel Peace Prize acceptance speech last December said, "Recalling that 50 per cent of the present world population is undernourished and that an even larger percentage, perhaps 65, is malnourished, no room is left for complacency. ... I am confident that within the next two decades (man) will recognize the self-destructive course he steers along the road of irresponsible population growth and will adjust the growth rate to levels which will permit a decent standard of living for all mankind."

The list of institutions in need of reform omitted the church. If the Roman Catholic Church had worked in the fifties to reduce birth rates, Dr. Borlaug's agricultural revolution would have been a resounding success by now and half of mankind would not be scrambling along at their present inhuman level.

Alaskan pipeline foes have their last chance

To the Daily Egyptian:

This is the last chance for Alaska's wilderness. The decision of whether or not to build the Trans Alaska Pipeline is being made now in Washington and citizens and organizations have only until March 8 to file testimony either pro or con with the Department of the Interior. Director (Attention 320)
Bureau of Land Management
U.S. Dept. of the Interior
Washington, D.C. 20240

and request that the statement be included in the official hearing record. This statement must be received by the Department of the Interior by March 8.

'Blind approach' defies foresight, rationality

To the Daily Egyptian:

Permit me to respond to Father Genisio's letter that appeared in the Feb. 18 issue of the Daily Egyptian.

In the first place, whether or not our country has an adequate supply of natural resources or is over or underpopulated cannot be judged simply on the basis of resources within our boundaries. This country, as all of the world's 130 "nations," is part of a world community and the high average level of living of most of our citizens depends directly on resource imports and exchanges of goods with dozens of nations. Thus, we cannot separate the United States' present favorable population to resources ratio from the less than favorable situation in most of the rest of the world.

Secondly, regardless of the seeming abundance of many of our resources, we need to be very concerned with the quality of these resources as they relate to population pressures and problems of the future. Wayne Davis, in a January 1970 article in New Republic, opined that the United States is the worst off nation in the world in terms of technological pressure on and damage to its resources. This is most critical in terms of its entire array of biotic, water and air resources and surely must be a factor in trying to judge whether we should wisely be very concerned with population pressures now before we reach a critical situation.

In paragraph three Father Genisio suggests that the population explosion is a myth propagated to divert "attention from the 'real problems' of our country." But is the people-supporting capability of our country (or the world) any less of a problem than our human rights and distribution of wealth problems or the international anarchy problem that is plaguing mankind the world around?

I also am alarmed at the suggestion (paragraph six) that we should have higher birth rates now to assure that there will be enough younger people "to support a growing population of old people." With this approach a nation could never "catch up" and adopt measures to slow or curtail the growth of its population.

And finally, Father Genisio proposes that we proliferate people into the future on the assumption that "science" will come up with enough new discoveries through the years to increase the production of essentials to support the additional people. This blind approach flies in the face of all the power of foresight and rationality which the human animal is supposed to possess. It is like deciding to enjoy a vacation now but putting off any concern about whether one can pay for it or not until some later time. Surely we should not leave our children and young people a legacy and future more problem-ridden than it is likely to be even without extra complications stemming from additional millions—or billions—of people.

How will monorail help handicapped student?

To the Daily Egyptian:

Once again plans seem to exclude the wheelchair student. Just exactly how is the monorail system going to help the handicapped student? I would sincerely like to know since I am a wheelchair student. Will handicapped students be able to use it at all? It is hard enough now for wheelchair students to get around on campus. Even those students who have cars have problems.

Someone must have the answers and you at the Egyptian (hopefully) are in a better position to find out.

SIU's Press Council has great possibilities

To the Daily Egyptian:

Once again at SIU they came up with a very innovative idea, a Press Council whose only purpose is "finding out how the Daily Egyptian can better serve its audiences."

This council does not have any relation with the Daily Egyptian itself; it depends on the SIU administration. The idea is so great that I think it should receive plenty of publicity. I'm sure there are some more people that would be interested in using it.

For example, wouldn't Mayor Daley like to establish such an organization in the city of Chicago, to tell the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Daily News how to better serve their audiences?

And how about dear old Spiro Agnew? I'm sure he would absolutely love this idea. He would organize councils like this throughout the country and Heaven knows what more.

Of course, the councils would be only "advisory groups." They would make only "recommendations and suggestions" because "anything beyond that would infringe on freedom of the press." It is to be certain that all the pressure to be applied is to be completely indirect.

And tricky Dick? Well, let's leave that.

Opinion and Commentary

EDITORIALS - The Daily Egyptian encourages free discussion of current issues through editorials and letters on these pages. Editorials - labeled Opinion - are written and signed by members of the student news staff and by students enrolled in journalism courses and represent opinions of the authors only.

LETTERS - Readers are invited to express their opinions in letters which must be signed with name, classification and major, or faculty rank, address and telephone number. Letters should be typewritten and their length should not exceed 250 words. Letter writers should respect the generally accepted standards of good taste and are urged to make their points in terms of issues rather than personalities. Acceptance for publication will depend upon the limitations of space and the timeliness and relevance of the material. Unsigned letters will not be accepted, and authorship of all letters must be verified by the Daily Egyptian. It is the responsibility of the Daily Egyptian to determine content of the opinion pages. Other material on pages four and five includes editorials and articles reprinted from other publications, syndicated columns and articles, and interpretative or opinion articles authored locally.

Local volunteers help the troubled

Editor's note: The following is the latter of a two part series on student suicides and the counseling services developed to deal with emotional problems among students.

By Paula Musto
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

457-3366 is a number to call for help. It is the phone number of Crisis Intervention Service (CIS), a telephone "hotline" for SIU students who have problems.

In the past few years telephone hotlines have been emphasized as a means of suicide prevention. St. Louis, New York, Chicago and other large cities have such telephone services, which are manned by trained volunteers who talk to callers with emotional problems.

Concern over the increasing suicide rate among young people, however, is bringing such phone services to small towns—college towns.

CIS hotline is operated by volunteers from the Department of Psychology, Counseling and Testing, and Clinical Services. Most of the volunteers are graduate students who have had experience in counseling.

Two shifts man phones

The volunteers work on two shifts from 8 to 11 p.m. and from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m. During other times a tape recorded message refers the caller to Clayton Ladd, director of Counseling and Testing.

During the first six weeks of its operation, the hotline received 118 calls. Four of these were from students who said they were contemplating suicide.

The first thing the volunteer does is to determine the "lethality" of the call, said Rollo Cook, a graduate student in psychology who is a hotline volunteer.

"The most serious call would be from a person who has already injured himself in some way," said Cook.

On such calls, Cook said, the volunteer's main concern is to determine where the person is and how to get help to the person.

The volunteer usually must rely on clues the caller provides to get information on the locality of the caller. Cook said less than two per cent of the phone calls can be traced.

CIS has two incoming and one outgoing phone. Two volunteers are always on duty so that while one is talking to the caller, the other can use the outgoing phone to call for help if the location of the person is determined.

Callers seek all kinds of help

Most hotline calls are not this type, however. The majority fit into the "cry for help" area, said John Snyder, clinical psychologist at Counseling and Testing who works with hotline volunteers.

Snyder said most of the callers are asking for help before they do try to hurt themselves. Calls come from lonely or depressed students who just want to talk to someone. Some callers ask for information on University counseling services.

Others just need someone to listen to their problems, which can range from academic difficulties to sexual problems.

There are three types of people who commit suicide, said Thomas Schill, CIS director who is an associate professor of psychology.

Schill describes three groups

First, there are those who really believe that life means pain and that death is release from pain, he said. The second group includes those who view suicide as the only means of dealing with their problems. They do not really want to die but they are looking for an escape route, Schill said. The third group consists of people who are technically considered mentally ill. Often these people cannot be held responsible for their actions.

The hotline most frequently reaches the people in the second group, Schill said. These people have problems they feel they cannot possibly live with. Suicide seems to be the only answer, he said.

"This person's preception is totally different from those who look objectively at their problems. He cannot see any alternatives," Schill said.

The role of the hotline volunteer is to offer alternatives to these people. The volunteer discusses with the caller what resources the person has to work with and how he might be able to come up with a workable situation.

"If we can do this, suicide will become a less attractive alternative for the person," Schill said.

Often the hotline volunteer will refer the caller to service agencies where students can go to receive help with their problems. For example, a girl who calls wanting to know what to do about an unwanted pregnancy will be referred to either an adoption agency which handles unwed mothers or to the Jackson County Family Planning Center which makes abortion referrals to New York.

Students who call about drug problems are often referred to Synergy, a student operated service which provides help for students suffering from "bad trips" or other reactions to drugs.

The hotline also works closely with Counseling and Tests, which has a staff of 15 psychologists and five postgraduate students in psychology.

Students are sometimes hesitant to go to Counseling and Testing because they are afraid their visit will be listed on some kind of record but this is not true, said Snyder.

Hotline volunteers spend a lot of time explaining to students that all records at Counseling and Testing are completely confidential and cannot be released to anybody without written permission from the student, Snyder said.

There are now 35 volunteers working with the hotline. All of them have been through a training program which includes studying suicide and intervention methods.

The training sessions usually include role-playing situations and discussion of actual cases with experienced hotline volunteers, said Schill, who conducts the training program.

Hotlines' functions expanding

Although the hotline was first designed to handle only emotional problems of students, it has evolved into a general information and help service.

Callers have asked questions ranging from "Where can I get food stamps?" to "Where can I find a pad for the night?"

Snyder said the hotline will deal with all these questions. By providing such a service, instead of making people search unaided for answers to their questions, the hotline hopes to make life at SIU easier for students, Snyder said.

'Now I root against America'

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

The radio this morning said the allied invasion of Laos had bogged down. Without thinking, I nodded and said, "Good."

And having said it, I realized the bitter truth. Now I root against my own country.

This is how far we have come in this hated and endless war. This is the nadir I have reached in this winter of my discontent. This is how close I border on treason.

Now I root against my own country.

How frighteningly sad this is. My generation was raised to love our country and we loved it unthinkingly. We licked Hitler and Tojo and Mussolini. Those were our shining hours. Those were our days of faith.

They were evil, we were good. They told lies, we spoke the truth. Our case was just, our purposes noble and in victory we were magnanimous. What a wonderful country we were. I loved it so.

But now, having descended down the tortured, lying, brutalizing years of this bloody war, I have come to the dank and lightless bottom of the well. I have come to root against the country that once I blindly loved.

I can rationalize it. I can say that if the invasions of Laos succeeds, the chimera of victory will dance once again before our eyes—leading us once again into more years of mindless slaughter. Thus, I can say, I hope the invasion fails.

But it is more than that. It is that I have come to hate my country's role in Vietnam.

I hate the massacres, the body counts, the free-fire zones, the napalming of civilians, the poisoning of rice crops. I hate being part of My Lai. I hate the fact that we have now dropped more explosives on these scrawny Asian peasants than we did on all our enemies in World War II.

And I hate my leaders who, over the years, have conscripted our young men and sent them there to kill or to be killed in a senseless cause simply because they can find no honorable way out—no honorable way out for them.

I don't root for the enemy. I doubt they are any better than we. I don't give a damn any more who wins the war. But because I hate what my country is doing in Vietnam, I emotionally and often irrationally hope that it fails.

It is a terrible thing to root against your own country. If I were alone, it wouldn't matter. But I don't think I am alone. I think many Americans must feel these same sickening emotions. I feel I think they share my guilt. I think they share my rage.

If this is true, we must end this war now—in defeat, if necessary. We must end it because all of Southeast Asia is not worth the hatred, shame, guilt and rage that is tearing Americans apart. We must end it not for those among our young men who have come to hate America, but for those who somehow manage to love it still.

I doubt that I can ever again love my country in that unthinking way I did when I was young. Perhaps this is a good thing.

But I would hope the day will come when I can once again believe what my country says and once again approve of what it does. I want to have faith once again in the justness of my country's causes and the nobleness of its ideals.

What I want so very much is to be able once again to root for my own, my native land.

Turks kidnap four yank airmen

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—An extremist group kidnaped four American airmen Thursday and threatened to shoot them unless $400,000 ransom is paid by Friday evening.

American officials said the four radar technicians were kidnaped by five armed Turks as they were driving in a military car from a radar and communications base to their billets in Ankara.

The Turks put a barrier across the road and forced the Americans out of their vehicle into another car. The Americans' Turkish driver was tied up and left at the scene. The kidnapers drove off in both vehicles. Police said they later arrested a youth identified as Mete Ertekin, while he was parking the Americans' station wagon near the Soviet Embassy in Ankara.

Ertekin is a former student at Middle East Technical University whose campus address the road where the kidnaping took place.

The kidnaped Americans were identified as Sgt. Jimmie J. Sexton, San Angelo, Tex., and Airmen 1C, Larry J. Heavner, Denver, Colo., Richard Carazzi, Stanford, Conn., and James M. Gholson, Alexandria, Va.

The ransom note was signed by the Turkish Peoples Liberation army.

The note demanded that "America" pay $400,000 by 6 p.m. 11 a.m. EST Friday or the Americans would be shot. It said the Turkish state radio must broadcast assurances to these terms after which specific instructions for turn-over of the money will be given.

are Glenn Beckham, Gary Dickerson, John Lopinot, Murray Mann, Ernest (Pete) May and Billie Jean Prince.

Three alternates chosen were Bob Carr, Jack Silver and Sue Millen. The Campus Senate selected last week six representatives from the student government.

The Senate threw out six recommendations for undergraduate representatives Wednesday because of the committee's misinterpretation of selection procedures. Its recommendations were made under the stipulation that nominees had to be sophomores or above.

The senate had deleted that part of Bill H-45 concerning the selection of undergraduate representatives to the University Senate Feb. 17.

'George M' sings story of Cohan

By Cathy Spangle
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Stars, stripes and a cast of Yankee Doodle dandies will light up Shryock Auditorium's stage at 8 p.m. Sunday when the Celebrity Series presents "George M!" The musical is a biography of George M. Cohan, the patriotic song-and-dance man who wrote over 500 songs during the first quarter of this century.

Cohan was a flamboyant patriot who showed his great pride in being an American in his flag-waving musicals. He wrote "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy," "It's a Grand Old Flag," and the theme song of World War I, "Over There." These songs are included in the production of "George M!"

"George M!" traces Cohan's life from when he was a teenager in his parents' vaudeville act, The Four Cohans, to when he was no longer writing musical shows, but had agreed to star in the Rodgers and Hart Musical, "I'd Rather be Right," impersonating Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Tony Tanner, who starred on Broadway in the central role of Kips in "Half a Sixpence," will portray Cohan. A large company will portray Cohan's family, his two wives, producing partner, the stars of his musicals and the vaudeville tycoon, E. F. Albee. The production is directed by Billy Matthews and staged by Robert Paget.

Tickets to the show can be bought at the central ticket office in the University Center. Student prices are $3, $4 and $5. General public tickets are $4, $5 and $8.

Feeling effect

Rendelman says schools in for bad time

By Rick Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"We are feeling the effect of telling the public to go to hell." That statement was made by Edwardsville Chancellor John S. Rendelman Wednesday night, only hours after Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie trimmed the higher education budget for 1972 by $187 million. Rendelman was speaking to a meeting of the Graduate Singles club.

"We oversold higher education and made it a panacea. We thought if we brought everyone in for four years of college and a bachelor degree, we would solve the country's problems. This isn't so, although we were convinced once it was," he said.

Rendelman pointed to a change in how higher education is being viewed by the public and said "we are witnessing a reaction to the activities of the last six years."

During the last few years higher education budgets have grown tremendously, faster than enrollments. Universities have also been hit by student protests, which Rendelman indicated had been met unfavorably by the public.

He said there is a different prevailing philosophy today on higher education. Before the idea had been to provide an education to as many people as possible at low costs. "This has been replaced by a philosophy of having students pay more. Now they're saying it is to an individual's advantage to get an education," Rendelman said.

Sighting a strong division between people today, which he said was more of a credibility gap than generation gap, Rendelman said the college administrator must try to reopen the lines of communication between the constituencies of the university—students, taxpayers, faculty and the legislature.

The student body is the most important constituency, but it must have the support of the legislature, taxpayers and faculty," the chancellor said.

Rendelman, in a more negative vein, said "we are entering a repressive, anti-intellectual era." He pointed to 25 bills which will be introduced in the Illinois house of representatives "putting down higher education." Ten years ago, he said, this would never have happened.

Rendelman said schools will keep their doors open, but will be in for a rough time. He indicated higher education is now the one with the "soft belly" apparently—the one easiest to attack when it comes to cutting back budgets. A few years ago, he said, it was welfare and mental health.

Rendelman appeared on campus to speak on the public relations of the educational administrator, which one of the graduate students said was "a nice way to get him to talk about Paul Powell."

Rendelman gave the group some of what he called the "no-nos" of an administrator: "don't go into the house business...and if you run into shoe boxes, assume they have shoes and don't open them."

He was referring to his involvement with the University House and his role as executor of the estate of the late secretary of state Paul Powell. Rendelman found almost $800,000 in Powell's hotel room after Powell died last October.

Rendelman said he had misgivings about being executor, but said Powell had helped SIU and Powell "thought the secretary of state should be able to have a chancellor as his executor."

"If I had had any idea of the cash, I would have done one of two things," Rendelman said, "refused to be executor, or made prearrangements to get rid of the money...and not be caught with the crown jewels in the tower."

Senators can't talk

Senate OK's courtesy and respect bill

By Cathy Speagle
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Campus Senate passed a bill Wednesday night to show respect and courtesy to guest speakers who appear at Senate meetings.

The bill, submitted by Bill Atkinson, Eastside dorm senator, resolved that silence be maintained at the Senate table during presentations. Senators who wish to leave the table must ask the chairman of the Senate for special permission. All conversations must be carried on no less than 15 feet from the table.

A guest speaker is present at almost every meeting of the Senate, usually in the community report section.

A resolution was passed commending the Chamber of Commerce and the School of Journalism's public relations course taught by Bruce Roche, instructor of journalism. Roche's class is analyzing the irritations between students and merchants in an attempt to reduce tensions in Carbondale. The Senate commended the class' efforts and the Chamber for supplying the students with various materials.

An ad hoc committee to the community Affairs Committee was created by the Senate. The committee will assist in the planning and operation of a food and clothing drive on March 10 and 11, to aid tornado victims in the Mississippi River delta area.

Regina Wilson, a student, had spoken to the Senate earlier in the meeting, asking for its support and help in the drive. She said the "Serve the People" campaign was not doing its job, and asked for workers to help with the drive, which will be held on campus.

The Senate defeated a bill to hold a winter seminar for student government members. The seminar would have included a banquet dinner and speeches by student government officials. Dennis Kosinski, Westside dorm senator, described the seminar as a way to "crystallize the goals of student government."

Jim Peters and Paula Squetert, senators from Brush Towers, were elected by the Senate to serve on the Student Government Activities Council's chairman selection committee. The two senators will help in the selection of a student activities chairman. The Senate amended its constitution at the last meeting, changing the position from an elected to an appointed officer.

Fraternity to hold fund drive for Free Clinic

Members of Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity will hold a fund-raising drive to aid the Carbondale Free Clinic Friday and Saturday.

On Friday the fraternity will collect donations all over campus. They will also have a table set up in the University Center between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

On Saturday the fraternity will hold a "bucket brigade" to solicit funds in the business district of Carbondale. They will mainly be stationed along Illinois Avenue.

The Carbondale Free Clinic gives free medical attention to the needy. Located at 104 E. Jackson, the clinic is currently open on Monday and Wednesday evenings between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Bills met with much opposition

Two of the bills, numbers S-48 and S-49 were initially referred back to subcommittees, but after one senator objected to the procedure as a waste of time and manpower, Horsley agreed to amend the bills himself and resubmit them later.

Bill S-48 states that the chief administrative officer of any state-supported college or university may summarily suspend any student for violation of school rules until there is a hearing on the charges. It originally included a phrase that would also permit summary suspension of the student's scholarship assistance, but it was deleted by

James J. Costello, representing the University of Illinois, said it violates due process as well as good sense. Costello said the universities already have the power of interim suspension if a student's action constituted a danger to the campus. He said that in the case of interim suspension, however, a preliminary hearing on the charges should be scheduled immediately, with a full hearing following it.

"I don't think the bill is necessary," Costello said. "We have the power and we exercise it." There was no discussion on bill S-49, which would have eliminated the differences in penalty based on amount of damage in criminal damage-to-property violations, making a greater penalty possible in all cases.

A bill which would have made it illegal to distribute on campuses, written or printed material "which might reasonably be intended to incite persons to commit violence or the violation of any law," was defeated by a 9-1 vote.

John Templin, representing Northern Illinois University, said the bill contained "areas of constitutional question" and would present a problem in administration.

Morris to vacate home

Construction of a new Humanities-Social Sciences Building north of the University Center will force President Emeritus Delyte W. Morris to vacate his home and office by March 31, according to Chancellor Robert G. Lauer.

The new building will stretch through Morris' home on Thompson Street in the center of campus.

Lauer said Morris will be given office space on Chautauqua Street but the SIU Board of Trustees "has communicated to him that it will not provide him with a new home." Last August the Board, in response to Morris' request to be reassigned president emeritus, relieved him of his responsibility to live on campus and said he would have to vacate his home and office by Dec. 31.

The third Horsley bill which was postponed for reconsideration was the Anti-Pornographic Publications Act. If passed it would prohibit the distribution of pornographic material on school property to persons under 19 years old without prior written approval of school administrators. The bill includes a graphic description of what would constitute pornography.

Grundy, in his presentation against the bill, said that the stipulation requiring a separate written permit for each distributor and the specific listing of the materials could conceivably cause problems for the universities. He said, according to the pornography criterion in the bill, the student workers, librarians and faculty in various fields, including health education, anatomy and art among others, would have to be issued permits. Also, each of the volumes in the library dealing with the above subjects would have to be listed.

"And the medical school is going to have a terrible time," he quipped.

Grundy said that according to the Harewood Materials Act, which is already on the books, the distribution of pornographic material to anyone under the age of 18 is prohibited anywhere in the state. He said Horsley's bill, in essence, would only outlaw the distribution of the material to persons above the age of 18 but not yet 19 on school grounds.

There was no discussion on S-81, which would prohibit the publication or distribution, on school property, of any material advocating violent overthrow of the government, bombing, property damage or personal injury without the prior written approval of school administrators.

Library photocopiers attended

By Paula Musto

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carlton F. Rasche, director of Auxiliary and Service Enterprises, said Thursday he is looking into ways of improving photocopy service in Morris Library.

Rasche said he met with members of the Morris Library staff Wednesday to discuss what improvements could be made to keep the library's coin-operated photocopy machines functioning at all times. Auxiliary services is responsible for the operation of the machines in the library.

Rasche said the meeting was held in response to complaints that the machines were frequently out of order. During February photocopy machine refunds amounted to $47.15, Rasche said.

"The very success of our operation is the thing that is causing us problems now. Business (photocopy machines) got too good, too fast," Rasche said.

He said an average of 60,000 copies are made on the machines each month, but February was a particularly busy month in which the machines produced 80,238 copies.

Rasche said the major problem in keeping the machines functioning is that they have been unable to get anyone to tend the machines in the evenings when the demand for them is the greatest.

Rasche said Auxiliary Services hired a student Thursday to be in charge of the machines at night, and they plan to hire a full-time person later in the week.

A "beeper" system, which notifies the repairman when he is needed, will also be implemented this week, Rasche said.

Free School sponsors open frisbee tourney

Free School is sponsoring a Frisbee Tourney to be held at noon Saturday in the area southwest of the Arena.

Phil Lawver, co-coordinator of Free School, said prizes will be awarded in contests of accuracy, distance and team competition.

Lawver said there is no age limit and anyone will be allowed to participate. The specific categories will be announced at the tourney.

Spudnuts

Nowhere Else Available
Only Three Locations

Open 24 hrs.

The repairman will carry a paging system in his pocket through which librarians can reach him in any part of the building by dialing a telephone number which transmits a signal to the repairman.

Rasche said Auxiliary Services is also considering the possibility of increasing the number of photocopy machines and installing dollar chargers in the library.

There are now 12 coin-operated photocopy machines for public use in Morris Library. Rasche said Ten are A.M. (Addressograph Multi-graph) machines and two are Minolta machines. In an editorial in the Daily Egyptian Wednesday the machines were erroneously called Xerox machines.

'Father' reveals mind destruction

By Jeanie Scheffer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"The Father" by August Strindberg, will be presented at 8 p.m. March 4, 5, and 6 in the Laboratory Theater of the Communications Building. The production's plot can be summed up in a few words. The entire play takes place in the drawing room of an army captain's home and the plot is the way the wife drives her husband insane.

The dialogue of the play is interesting, but occasionally it tends to drag and a dramatic moment is ruined by the inattention the long, complex and abstract conversations invite.

The cast offers much in the way of fine acting. Especially good are Roseanne Wagner as Laura, Alan Friedman as Captain and Paula Parker as Margaret.

Friedman is a strong willed army captain who eventually is brought to his knees by his scheming wife. His forceful portrayal of his character adds emphasis to the final moment when he acknowledges and accepts his insanity.

But, by far the two most interesting character studies are Laura and Margaret.

Margaret is the family nurse who has raised the Captain from infancy and who must be the one to offer the final insult—confining the Captain in a straightjacket. Miss Parker's portrayal is intense, emotional and moving. Her sympathy seems real and her part in the play emphasizes the futility of the Captain's role.

Laura becomes a despicable person. Her conniving and scheming turn the audience against her and one can almost feel the intense dislike bordering on hate rising up inside. Miss Wagner takes possession of the character and molds it until you cannot actually believe this is merely a play. Her contribution to the play is substantial and she offers a fascinating character study.

"The Father" is not a light play intended merely for entertainment. This is a thought piece and the viewer had better be prepared to deal with some cruel, ugly facts.

SIU students' role being researched

By Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A student government official from the University of South Carolina is researching the students' role in handling campus affairs and related areas at SIU.

Howard Comen, director of student government security at the University of South Carolina, is studying SIU's student governance as part of research project funded by a Ford Foundation independent study program. The project is called "Contemporary University."

Besides SIU, Comen said his project will take him to Yale, Harvard, the University of Connecticut, Columbia University and Brandeis University.

He said SIU was referred to him as possessing a process "where students are actively participating in the total structure of the University."

As a director of a student security program, he is interested in SIU's Sahaki patrol as well as the student government.

Comen, himself a junior majoring in political science, will be at SIU until Saturday.

The Sahaki Patrol, he said, is a "fantastic bunch of fellows." The patrol, he added, is a "fantastic idea" for law enforcement and on the job police training.

The patrol, Comen said, may be frowned upon by the students in general, but, "in the capacity that they're operating it's a necessity."

One problem he sees at SIU is that a lot of students do not know who is in administrative leadership. Thus, he said, is because the University is undergoing such drastic changes.

Theoretically, Comen said, "the students at SIU should have a voice in a lot of what's going on."

The student government is doing a fine job, considering what happened last May.

"If the whole University can sit back and get a little oriented I think you can have a really fine situation down here."

Comen said he directs a Student Night Patrol.

The Patrol, he said, consists of the average student, those having long and short hair, blacks and whites, who patrol the campus acting as the "eyes and ears" of the campus security.

But, he said his patrol is concerned with persons from off-campus, whereas the Sahaki Patrol is more concerned with students.

Comen said his patrolers, who cannot be distinguished from anyone else, call in crimes that they witness while on patrol to the campus security which apprehends the violators.

South gain population; First since Civil War

By Martha Cole
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—New data from the 1970 census shows that blacks still left the South in the 1960s, but whites moved into the region in even greater numbers.

The result: the South registered a population gain through migration of about 500,000, the first such gain since Civil War times.

The data released by the Bureau of the Census gave the final population count of Negroes in the United States in 1970 as 22,672,570, up 20 per cent from 1960. The white population grew by 12 per cent, to 177,612,309.

The Negro portion of the U.S. population in 1970 was 11.2 per cent, compared to 10.5 per cent in 1960 and 9.8 per cent in 1940.

The bureau reported also fewer crowded homes in 1970 and a big drop in the number of housing units lacking basic plumbing facilities.

"The quality of housing improved," Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans said in announcing the new data and analyses.

Stans said that in 1960, 35 per cent of homes didn't have the basic plumbing facilities of hot and cold water, bath and toilet. In 1960 the figure was 17 per cent and in 1970, 7 per cent.

Census officials said some of their continuing data had indicated that blacks were moving out of the South at a lower rate than in previous decades. But the 1970 census indicates no marked trend, they said.

In the 16 states which the census designates as the South, the bureau estimated that 1.4 million blacks left, while 1.8 million whites moved in.

Most of the population gain through net migration occurred in Florida, Maryland, Virginia and Texas. Georgia also showed a net gain of about 50,000.

Most of the black out-migration occurred in eight states—North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas and Louisiana.

In other regions, New York lost 500,000 whites through in-migration. Ohio lost about 190,000 whites and gained 45,000 blacks. Illinois lost 200,000 whites and gained 125,000 blacks. In Michigan, the coming and going were about the same.

California and Florida led all other states in total gains through net migration as well as in gaining white in-migrants.

U.S. to celebrate in '76

Bicentennial plans begin now

By Joe Brooks
Copley News Service

America will celebrate its 200th anniversary in 1976.

The bicentennial will be a year-long event, both a look backward at the ideals for which the American Revolution was fought and a look ahead toward the advancement of human welfare as the nation moves into its third century.

That is the goal of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, which is planning the observance under a mandate from Congress.

"Where is the bicentennial going to be?" asks Commission Chairman David J. Mahoney. "The bicentennial will be everywhere, all across the United States."

Mahoney told a recent news conference in San Francisco that the commission is planning a series of regional meetings in every section of the country to encourage cities, towns and states to become involved in the observance.

Every state, from the original 13 Colonies to the newest states of Alaska and Hawaii, has contributed to the American heritage, and thus each should join in celebrating the nation's 200th anniversary, he said.

The commission is planning three components for the bicentennial.

1. Heritage '76—a nationwide summons to recall the country's heritage and to place it in its historical perspective. To accomplish this the commission is asking all groups in the nation to reexamine the origins, the values and the meaning of America and to dramatize its development.

A major part of Heritage '76 will be played by cities which had a key role in the early development of America, such as Philadelphia, Boston and Washington, D.C.

2. Open House U.S.A. This will be a nationwide effort to stimulate travel to various parts of the country and to encourage visitors to America from other nations.

3. Horizons '76. This component of the observance is a challenge from the commission to every American to undertake at least "one principal project which manifests the pride, the priorities and the hopes of his community."

"Just as our forebears were faced with a series of movements into the unknown, at first across seas to a new land, later over the plains and mountains of that land and still later through the moving frontiers of America, in technology, in education, in science and in space, we too, as we approach our nation's 200th anniversary are faced with a movement into the unknown," Mahoney told a recent meeting of the commission.

"Just as our ancestors had no guidelines, for no nation was ever built at such a pace and with such dynamism, we have none because, as with them, no nation has dared to move into the unknown with such intensity. Just as it was their hope of building a new and better society, it must be ours now."

As part of the Open House U.S.A. component, the commission has made this recommendation for the nation's Capital city.

—The National Capital Region. To mark the actual and symbolic importance of our national capital, special emphasis should be placed on the renewal of Washington, D.C., with the objective of making it a worthy example of what a successful quest for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness can produce.

Leisure revolution is at hand as work hours are reduced

By Edward Nelson
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Feeling tired and overworked? You shouldn't feel that way, according to statistics. If you are an average man living in an industrialized nation, you will have 22 years more free time in your life than did your grandfather.

Whether or not that is a comforting statistic, it serves to illustrate the fact that the leisure revolution is at hand. The reduction in working time per week between 1850 and 1970 represents for many a gain of almost 30 hours' free time a week.

In a recent article, "The Growth of Leisure Industries: How Play Makes Work" in Panorama, journal of the International Labor Organization, Peggy Landers lists the reasons for the new leisure.

Advanced technology, the increase in paid holidays and vacations leading to shorter work weeks and work years, the shortening of careers by longer training and earlier retirement, plus longer life spans combine to create the phenomenon.

This leisure is not a product of unemployment. It is, says Eric Larabee, author of "The Self-Conscious Society," "time paid for by work, whether one's own or somebody else's."

Leisure is not all the time outside working hours, it is the time left after sleeping and daily chores and work-related activities such as driving or riding to work. It is as Larabee says, "the time left to do something enjoyable in itself."

What is the average man doing with all the extra time on his hands? The vicarious conflict, victory and defeat of spectator sports, is one leisure time activity that is increasing dramatically.

A glance at the figures on the millions of viewers of televised pro football games is testimony to this trend.

Psychologists claim spectator sports bring excitement and emotional release to millions who are under stress and tension from their jobs in modern society.

Others are taking to participation in do-it-yourself hobbies and the full range of outdoor recreation.

Whatever man does with his free time, it costs money to do it. In his article, Larabee says, modern economies, by virtue of "higher incomes, more time off and a greater longing to use leisure time actively, are in turn creating employment."

The United Nations yearbook of national statistics records the money spent on recreation and entertainment country by country. A number of items are covered: theater, films, hotels, restaurants, books, newspapers, magazines, spectator sports, indoor and outdoor sports equipment and sports licenses.

In every instance, consumer spending on these items and activities has risen dramatically since 1958. For example, France doubled its leisure spending in the last 10 years to over $100 per adult last year.

In the United States, the leisure "industry" is worth at least $30 billion annually, and growing. International travel has been showing the most remarkable rate of growth, despite the plight of the troubled airlines.

As for specific sports, the ILO Panorama article cited bowling as a prime example. The number of lanes has tripled in the United States since 1956, creating a $1.5 billion industry employing 150,000 people who earn nearly $700 million. Bowling is also growing outside the United States. It is competing with golf as Japan's fastest-growing sport.

Pleasure boating is another rapidly growing leisure time activity. Americans own and operate over eight million pleasure boats.

With so many people fishing as a leisure activity, related business activities, such as mounting of fish, have developed profitably. One Florida firm mounts 14,000 fish a year.

Skiing is another leisure time activity that has reached boom proportions in the United States.

American skiers spent $300 million last season on equipment and clothing. The number of skiers has tripled since 1960. Japan, with half the population of the United States, has six million ski enthusiasts.

Another indication of the decline of work as the "center of man's life interests" is the growth in popularity of second homes, gardening groups, art classes and adult education courses.

American businesses last year spent over $1 billion for employee recreational facilities. Each year more and more large companies report that their management must take into account recreational facilities when relocating executives.

What is a growing population going to do with its increasing leisure time in the future? A recent research study predicts that North Americans could have six-month vacations by 1985 while maintaining the present standard of living.

Only global effort will solve pollution problem, U.N. says

By Ruth Pearson
Copley News Service
NEW YORK - A physician has warned that walking the streets of New York is equivalent to smoking nearly two packs of cigarettes.
What soil and pollution actually do to the human lungs can be seen in Central Park where a priceless stone monument, "Cleopatra's Needle," has disintegrated more in the 100 years it has been in New York than it did during the 3,000 years it stood in the Egyptian desert.

If pollution destroys stone, just think what it does to people.
United Nations members are doing just that. Pollution, they point out, knows no national boundaries. Norway's Institute for Air Research last year complained about pollution entering Norway from two European countries.

Pollution is a global problem. The world's air and waterways cannot be contained within boundaries. Fish contaminated in one part of the world are eaten by people thousands of miles away when they buy imported canned goods.

Secretary-General U. Thant has presented the U.N. with a report on the preparations under way to hold a two-week conference on human environment beginning June 5, 1972 in Sweden.

The secretary-general says effective steps toward environmental management rest upon international cooperation and a significant extension of a world community spirit.

"To an unprecedented degree," the report says, "the situation of the global environment presents both governments and peoples with a common cause beyond geography, politics, ideology or social systems."

In other words, after 25 years of agonizing debates over the crucial issues of war and peace, hunger and poverty, the U.N. has found a subject which just about every nation can agree on: clean healthy environment.

What nation doesn't want its people to have clean air, pure food, unmarred seashores and an abundance of natural wildlife?

But asking all nations of the world to work together to protect the environment will not be simple. National interests are involved in every case and in every country. Measures to deal with environmental quality could conflict in some cases with economic and social development.

Back in 1969, the U.N.'s Economic and Social Council unanimously adopted a resolution recommending that the General Assembly consider the desirability of convening a U.N. conference on problems of human environment.

The Economic and Social Council then set forth 20 recommendations to be considered by the conference. These would include the possible setting up of an international system to evaluate the existing resources, the methods used in each area to preserve the human environment.

The improbable dream

I recommended that the information gathered should apply both to commodity resources, such as types of timber and food products, and to noncommodity resources, such as natural areas or research reserves to provide scientifically adequate examples of the world's habitat types and endangered species of flora and fauna.

The U.N. also suggested a uniform terminology and monitoring method be developed which would form the basis of worldwide monitoring in air, soil, water and living organisms.

The recommendations include the suggestion that special efforts be urgently made to preserve the right genetic resources that have evolved over millions of years and now are being irretrievably lost as a result of human actions. Also, these efforts must include the establishment of special protected areas in regions where long-domesticated species of plants and animals thrive in their original habitat.

The need for environmental education is suggested along with ecology teachers, workshops for environmental teachers and training professional environmental scientists and technologists through establishment of university chairs and institutes for environmental studies and conservation.

The secretary-general's report points out that "increasing numbers of plant and animal species are in grave danger of extinction as a consequence of direct actions against them and of indirect destructive influences on their indispensable habitats."

It recommends that U.N. members accelerate the establishment and protection of national parks and wildlife sanctuaries and that developing countries must receive appropriate assistance.

The report also states that "the improvement of the environmental quality is a task of great complexity, ultimately dependent upon the political will of member governments which, in turn, often is conditioned by public attitudes."

The secretary-general emphasized that "it is not only a question of the impact which the conference will have on public opinion; it is also a question of the latter's influence on the conference."

What will come of the conference? A global environmental monitoring system is envisioned. It will not only provide an inventory of the world's present resources and how long they are expected to last, but also make certain that those resources are constantly pampered, protected and nourished.

U. Thant also recommends that a Universal Declaration on the Protection and Betterment of the Human Environment be signed by all countries.

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The San Diego County Farm Bureau says tangerines, sometimes called the "zippered" fruit because of a peeling that almost unzips itself, are more plentiful than ever. Believed to be a native of China, the tangerine first reached this country in the 19th century when the Italian consul at New Orleans planted tangerine trees on the consulate grounds.

Pint-sized athletes sometimes successful

By Bernie Evans
Copley News Service
LOS ANGELES—Sports is a big man's world—and it's getting bigger.

Just ask Notre Dame quarterback Joe Theismann whose size was the primary reason for preventing professional clubs from picking him higher than the fourth round of January's football draft.

Theismann was runner-up in 1970's Heisman Trophy balloting during the so-called "year of the quarterback," but his even six-foot stature tarnished his credentials. The pro scouts tabbed 90 players better than the Irish sparkplug.

At six-foot, Theismann isn't considered NFL superstar material. Years ago Eddie LeBaron would have been a rage with that height. The former Washington and Dallas quarterback played the game at 5-8.

The "little men" in football today are six-foot, 200-pound linebackers, 5-10, 210-pound defensive ends and 5-11, 180-pound tight ends.

That doesn't leave much room for the world's little men in the '70s but there are a lot of them around who persist in beating the odds.

A pint-sized Swede, Kjell Isaksson, managed to get all 5-foot-7, 145 pounds of himself over the 17 feet, 7 1/2-inch mark recently to set a new world indoor pole vault record. Another little man, 32-year-old Army captain Mel Pender, tied a world mark in the 70-yard sprint at 6.8. The 5-foot-5, 150-pound Pender evened the mark which he had previously achieved in 1965 and 1968.

In basketball's world of six-footers, Frank Sylvester is making it big at Bradley University as a 5-foot-4 back court star.

Bradley has been a consistent contender in the Missouri Valley Conference race, and the 140-pound Sylvester has helped keep it there.

In his freshman year at Bradley, he averaged 13.2 points a contest. For the variety, the 5-4 speedster has been scoring just under 10 points a game, many of them coming on driving lay-ups past the big Sylvester points to confidence as the big factor which keeps the little man close in talent to the bigger competitor.

But one of the most famous short men in sports says it's compensation which narrows the odds. "It was compensating all the time," says 5-foot-5 Albie Pearson, former all-star center fielder for the California Angels.

"I guess the secret was playing the percentages in the outfield. I usually played shallow.

"You know, it's a funny thing. Whenever the ball went over my head it was usually hit by another small guy."

At the plate, Pearson concentrated on timing.

"I always used a small bat and just concentrated on timing the ball perfectly. Even when the situation called for a home run I used the light bat and tried for the timing," Pearson added.

Pearson used compensation to such an advantage that he still holds club records four years after his retirement.

While Pearson learned to compensate for his stature, he also had to overcome a more serious physical handicap.

The Angel outfielder competed in more than 2,000 professional baseball games through 14 years with an incomplete spine.

"I spent all my high school years exercising, trying to strengthen my lower back."

Eventually, he strengthened it to the point where his muscles compensated for the support he lacked from spinal cartilage.

Pearson was never hindered by the deficiency throughout his minor league career but in 1960 when he was on the Baltimore Orioles roster, it recurred with devastating results.

"I was just running down the first base line and it went out," Pearson reports.

"I was on my back for months. I called Baltimore during the winter and told them I thought I wouldn't be able to play any more."

After Pearson was on the phone to Baltimore, the Orioles were on the phone with the California Angels.

The injured outfielder was traded to the new expansion club where he became its highest-salaried player. "It's funny, the thing never bothered me again until 1966 when it went out on me three times," Pearson says.

The third time finally put the scrappy Pearson temporarily in a wheelchair and permanently out of baseball. Now he's dedicated himself to the ministry with the same service he gave to baseball. The Eddie LeBaron, Mel Penders, Kjell Isaksson, Frank Sylvesters and Albie Pearsons are rarities in major league sports as are their accomplishments.

But the achievements of the small giants are only magnified in the big world which they compete in.

Baseball scrambling for bigger attractions

By Paul Corcoran
Copley News Service

Major league baseball clubs are trying to find ways to attract more spectators to the ball park.

Baseball—with what Jim Brosnan aptly described as the "long season" of 162 games—is using every gimmick possible to lure people away from their television sets and the beaches to watch the sport in person.

New York's Yankees, a poor second in Gotham attendance to the Mets, have decided to play only 32 night games and but eight doubleheaders.

The Yankees, once the mightiest team in professional baseball, attracted only 1,125,124 fans in 1970, the fifth best mark in the 12-team American League in the nation's largest city.

Almost all major league teams have moved up the starting time for night games by 30 minutes to an hour, offering parents an opportunity to get their children home at a reasonably early time.

There is a significant, and ominous, note to the increase in day games and the earlier starting times: the fear of crime and vandalism, especially in the larger cities, after dark.

Paradoxically, the commissioner of baseball, Bowie Kuhn, and the major league presidents have decided that for the first time a World Series game will be played at night, largely for greater TV viewing.

There are gimmicks by the score devised by individual team promotion men to boost fan attendance.

There are hot days, ball days, senior citizen days, photography days in which the fans may take photographs of the players, helmet days when youngsters are given helmets of the same color and design as the major league teams, and the inevitable "day" given each season for a star player of the status

Stauber gets ISU position

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP)—Gene Stauber, an Indianapolis native and an assistant coach at the University of Illinois for the past 11 years, has been named an assistant football coach at Indiana State.

Stauber spent three years as an assistant at the University of California and one year at Nebraska.

He replaces Doug Key, who left Indiana State to take over the head coaching job at Olivet College in Olivet, Mich.

of Mickey Mantle—or Joe Smith, if no one better can be found.

Some teams are curtailing the number of games per week, day and night, because fans tend to stay home on Mondays and Tuesdays. San Diego, with a poor early week draw, will play only four or five times a week at home. Most cold weather teams will do the same early in the season, banking on big weekend draws.

But all the gimmicks in the world won't help if you do not have a winning team, or an almost fanatically loyal following as is the case with the New York Mets, Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cubs.

Some of the money put into promotion might well be used to buy more player talent, the wiser heads in baseball believe.

After all, green and yellow uniforms with white shoes didn't bring success to the Oakland A's, who hope finally to win fan approval with one of the best young teams in the game in 1971.

SIU individuals favored in conference

Because to earn an individual event medal, a gymnast must place in the top six in Friday night's competition which will determine the team and all-around champions and then go on to win his event Saturday night.

Both night sessions start at 7:30.

Meade thinks he has a number of individuals who will place in the top three in each event and thus qualify for a spot in the NCAA finals, April 1-3 at the University of Michigan.

Leading contender for an individual title is rings specialist Charles Ropiequet who scored his career high 9.75 this season against Arizona and has come up with a pair of 9.6s during home meets in the Arena. His greatest competition will be from the defending NCAA champion, Dave Seal of Indiana.

Salukis advance in MC swim meet

The SIU swimming team got their quest for the first Midwestern Conference swimming crown off to a flying start Thursday by qualifying 11 swimmers in three events at Ball State's University Pool.

First to make time standards for the Salukis was Bill Tingley who qualified in the 500-yard freestyle as well as Bruce Steiner, Fernando Gonzalez and Eric Topham.

Rob Dickson led the SIU qualifiers in the 200-yard individual medley followed by Dale Korner, Steve Daugherty, Bill Magnuson and Peter Reed.

In the 50-yard freestyle, Salukis Vern Dasch, Jay Berne, Rich Andersen and Bob Schoon all made it to the finals which were scheduled for Thursday night.

State. The two tied at 9.45 during the SIU-SIU dual meet.

Ron Alden is the Salukis leading contender for an individual championship in the sidehorse. Alden, a senior, has performed solidly during the season and was fourth nationally last year.

In the p-rallied bars, specialist Don Locke and all-around man Tim Lindner are expected to be two of the leading contenders for a crown and Steve Duke could come up with a surprise.

Wrestlers seek MC crown

The SIU wrestling team travels to DeKalb Friday for the first Midwestern Conference wrestling championship in the Northern Field House at Northern Illinois University.

Meeting for the crown will be host school Northern Illinois, Ball State, Indiana State and Illinois State as well as the Salukis.

Wrestling will start at 7 p.m. Friday with Saturday's matches beginning at 1 p.m.

The slightly favored Salukis will be carrying a 9-7 dual meet record into the contest including a 4-0 record against conference competition.

The latest SIU victory came over Indiana State on Feb. 24, 18-12.

The next competition for the Salukis will come on Mar. 12 at the NCAA District Meet also at NIU.

Meade was pleased with Duke's performance in last Saturday's win over Kansas State and rates him as having a good chance to place highly.

Lindner and freshman Gary Morava should be in contention for the floor exercise title and Lindner is favored by most coaches in the league to take the high bar and the all-around championship.

Vaulting has been Southern's weakest area during the season but Tim Frank, Lindner or team captain Frank Benesh have all had their good nights.

Much of SIU's chances in the team competition will depend on the Friday morning compulsory exercises which none of the teams have used in public yet. The exercises are basic tricks which each gymnast must do in a prescribed manner.

The exercises will count half of the team score and will start at 10 a.m. Friday morning.

Each team will carry its Friday morning score into the Friday afternoon session. A perfect score for both of the sessions would be a total of 360 points and the team coming nearest to that figure will win the team championship.

In the Saturday night individual runoffs, the top six individuals in each event from the Friday session will compete again for the top three spots and a chance to go to Ann Arbor, Mich. for the NCAA finals in April.

Eight trackmen qualify

Mini team faces big task in NCAA's

By Ken Stewart
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

An open weekend faces the SIU indoor track team this week before a mini force travels to Detroit for the NCAA championships March 12-13.

No more than nine of the 34-man squad are expected to make the trip to Cobo Hall in Detroit.

The Midwestern Conference right now is not recognized by the NCAA so our kids have to qualify with a very severe standard," said Lew Hartzog, SIU track coach.

Southern won the new league's championship in a meet at Illinois State last week.

Hartzog said the winner of the Central Collegiate is automatically taken care of by the NCAA. Eastern Michigan won the meet this year and SIU-defending champion-placed third.

Mike Bernard has qualified for the NCAA meet with a seven-foot jump while Larry Perkins and Obed Gardner have been accepted in the long jumps. Perkins may not go because of an ankle injury suffered in the conference meet.

"We're going to feel real bad if Perkins isn't ready to go," said the coach. Hartzog added that the Salukis are in good shape physically outside of Perkins' ankle.

Rounding out the contingent who may go to the nationals are Ivory Crockett in the 60 and 300 yard dashes, Ron Frye in the high hurdles and the mile relay team composed of Crockett, Bobby Morrow, Terrence Erickson and Eddie Sutton.

"I hope to get Dave Hill in on the strength that he has missed the required time by one second," said Hartzog. Hill's best time this season in the mile occurred on a slick asphalt track at Illinois State during the conference meet.

"That's a most difficult track and I'm hoping that I can convince them (NCAA) to let him in," the coach said.

Hartzog won't be pinned down on just exactly how the Salukis may fare against the toughest track teams in the country.

"It's hard to predict how well you're going to do in the NCAA. You can go and not score a point or you can come out real great and do a pretty good job," he said. "We could be in the top 15 or somewhere along there."

Frazier: KO in tenth

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier predicted a victory inside 10 rounds after breezing through his official physical examination today for Monday night's multimillion-dollar fight of the century against Muhammad Ali.

"I expect to stop him any time between the first and 10th rounds—you can take your choice," said the Philadelphia.

The heavyweight champion took his physical an hour and a half before the expected appearance of Ali. Ali was lying up from Miami for his examination. The two fighters were not to come face to face. (There will not be a closed-circuit telecast of the fight in the Carbonate area.)

The NCAA closes out the indoor season and the Salukis will kick off the outdoor schedule in the Sunshine State against the Florida State Seminoles March 30. Three days later, March 31, SIU faces Yale, Miami of Ohio, and host school Florida in Gainesville, Fla.

Women Salukis seek basketball crown

By Jim Brown
Student Writer

Although the names Auld, Ballard and Rydzewski are not identifiable to many Saluki sports fans, they do constitute the nucleus of an SIU championship team.

Judy Auld, Marie Ballard and Doreen Rydzewski are three members of the women's basketball squad that defeated Illinois State, 32-27, at Normal last weekend to win its third successive state collegiate championship.

The girls' team, boasting an 8-2 record, starts next week's 12-team regional at Normal where they will face the winner of the Eastern Illinois-Wisconsin State at LaCrosse contest at 7 p.m. on Friday evening.

From there, it could be on to the national tournament in Cullowhee, N.C. March 26-28, providing that the Salukis finish first or second in the regional affair.

Coach Charlotte West said the girls are doing much better than she had earlier expected.

"I thought that this season would be a rebuilding one since the starting five of last year have all graduated," Coach West said.

Last year's team went to the nationals in Boston and captured the consolation championship.

This year a potential national championship is not as clearly imminent due to the relative lack of experience on the squad.

Miss Ballard, the 5-11 sophomore center, is a product of Carlsbad, N.M., and already has some Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) basketball experience. She is leading scorer and rebounder on Southern's squad and, according to Coach West, has impressive credentials in other women's sports.

Miss Auld, a junior hailing from Decatur, is a playmaking guard and team captain. In Coach West's terms, Miss Auld "is very quick and also a fine defensive player."

Miss Rydzewski, junior forward from Calumet City, has outscored Miss Ballard the past few games and possesses a fine jump shot, according to Coach West.

But that isn't all. Coach West has a promising crop of freshmen ready for next season to complement the abilities of this year's youthful but talented squad.

Cards play exhibition; Cubs debut on weekend

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Nonroster player Tony Auerio became a leadoff homer in the eighth inning to lift the Vern Bensons to a 6-3 victory over the Ken Boyers in a St. Louis Cardinal game Thursday.

Auerio's run off Chris Zachary was his second clutch blow in two days. The recently married catcher struck a decisive triple in lifting the Bensons to a Wednesday win.

Seven errors marred the contest at Al Lang Field, but pitchers Fred Norman and Mike Torres impressed Manager Red Schoendienst.

The Boyers managed only four hits in the game, two by outfielder Leron Lee. Joe Hague singled and doubled for the Bensons, who collected nine hits.

Meanwhile in Scottsdale, Ariz., a trio of Chicago Cub first-line pitchers will make a spring exhibition debut in a Saturday-Sunday set against the California Angels at Palm Springs, Calif.

With rookie hurlers tabbed for Cub action in Friday's spring opener against the San Francisco Giants, Bill Hands (18-15) gets the first test among the regulars Saturday in a three-inning stint against the Angels.

On Sunday, Milt Pappas (10-8) and relief star Phil Regan (5-9) face California.

Missing from the squad this weekend will be catcher Ken Rudolph and pitcher Ron Jones, called to military drills.

Eight teams remain in race

Four independent—three men's residence hall, and one off campus dorm team—remain in running for the all-schooled intramural basketball championship. This will be cut in half after this Sunday when all teams will try to get into the semifinals.

The games will be in the SIU Arena starting at 1 p.m. The Egyptian Cobras will face Wright 11 Heads, and the Mob will meet Peace in the first set of games. At 2 p.m. the Rialthe will face the Saints and the God Squad meets the Death Dealers.

The semifinals will be Tuesday evening with the finals scheduled for Thursday evening March 11. The losers of the semi-final games will play for third place before the championship ball game.

Silver medalist will be honored

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — John Kinsella, a 16-year-old silver medalist in the 1968 Olympics, will be formally honored Sunday as 1970 winner of the Sullivan Memorial Trophy awarded to the nation's outstanding amateur athlete.

John B. Kelly, Jr., Philadelphia, president of the Amateur Athletic Union and himself the 1947 Sullivan winner for sculling, will present the Trophy to Kinsella, a swimming's world record holder at 1,300 meters.

Second Thoughts

A great career ended?

The best part of L.C. Brasfield's life might have ended Thursday night when he took off Southern Illinois University basketball uniform No. 25 for the last time.

The real bad part about it is that you know you're not going to play anymore. Two or three weeks before you're done, you kind of feel it will be good to hang it all up. But it's tough after playing so many years when all of a sudden all you can do is sit up in the seats.

Brasfield's life has revolved around basketball since he starred at Carbondale Community High School four years ago. Two record-setting seasons at Robert Morris Junior College preceded wearing No. 25 for Jack Hartman and Paul Lambert.

But everything has a life span and for Brasfield, the experiences of victory, defeat, standing ovations and long plane rides might be over.

Brasfield isn't a college basketball super-star. The National and American Basketball Associations aren't fighting for the right to pay him $1 or $2 million.

However, he is an outstanding rebounder, fine shooter and aggressive defensive player. Brasfield was one of the best small forwards in the country this season.

night's contest, he was almost three points higher than his 1989-90 season mark of 17.4.

With his college career ended, L. C. thinks SIU must "junk those guys like Arkansas, Kentucky Wesleyan, even Evansville," to improve the program. "It's just like the U of I. They don't want to play anyone that damages the program whether they win or lose."

He also thinks the college season should be expanded to at least 30 regular season games. The present NCAA limit is 26 contests.

Those are things Brasfield can do very little about. But he still has the opportunity to develop good ball handling and earn a professional basketball career.

Not bad for a kid from the "non-metallic chemical valley." That's the definition of Carbondale.

Goodbye, L.C.

Salukis hold Huskies, 107-102; Brasfield scores 27 in finale

Must play guard

But the NBA and ABA haven't been using many 6-4 forwards lately. They prefer larger models of the same commodity. That's why Brasfield says, "No matter where I go, I'm going to play guard."

Thus far, the only teams that have expressed interest in his ability are the Cleveland Cavaliers and Atlanta Hawks, both NBA franchises.

The Cavaliers have brought out the best in everyone during their initial year, holding a 12-60 record, 27 games off the Central Division pace being set by Baltimore's Bullets.

Atlanta is 16 games better, 28-44 in the same division, and has Pistol Pete Maravich, one of the games' all-time showmen.

Given the choice, is it better to join the team with a budding super-star or the cellar dweller?

"Right now, Cleveland is rebuilding its program which could make it easier for me. But with Atlanta, I'd be going up against much tougher players. You'll be a better player in the end if you go somewhere where it's tough to play."

"And the other thing about Atlanta is that the only guards they've got are Walt Hazzard and Pistol Pete. They've been resting Walt a lot now that he's getting older so I think I might be able to get in a little playing time but I won't worry about starting that early."

Before No. 25 can crack the pros, he'll need more adept ball handling, a self-admitted weakness. Brasfield's best shots come from around the key but his ball control problem also shows up there. He has a tendency to dribble at least once before taking a shot.

15th all-time scorer

"You have to prove to yourself that you can move with the ball," L. C. said of his sometimes costly single dribble. "But then right away the defensive man is on you and that's one reason you can have a hard time scoring. Guys have been guarding me well because I gave them that chance."

Entering Thursday night's game, Brasfield had nullified his defenders' efforts to the tune of 850 points while wearing uniform No. 25. That was good for 15th on SIU's all-time scoring list.

He had a good shot at catching Dave Henson, a 1961-63 player who scored 863 points for 14th place. Walt Frazier was 13th with 884 points. Brasfield ended an awful good night to catch "Clyde."

Averaging 20.3 per game before last

Two veterans and a rookie provided the difference with key free throws Thursday night in the SIU Arena as Southern staved off a late Northern Illinois rally for a 107-102 win before a season finale crowd of 8,500.

John Garrett hit three while sophomore forward Don Portugal and Greg Starrick had two charity shots apiece in the final 1:06 to clinch the 13th victory against 10 foes for first-year SIU coach Paul Lambert. SIU finished 7-1 in conference play.

SIU gymnasts host circuit meet today

If past performances are any kind of an indicator at all, SIU should take the team championship of the first Midwestern Conference gymnastics meet Friday and Saturday in the SIU Arena.

The Salukis are 4-0 against conference schools in dual meets this season, their closest call coming against Indiana State. The Sycamores went into the last two events with a chance of winning before bowing to SIU, 161.4-160.7, earlier in the season.

But a team championship is not the only thing SIU coach Bill Meade and crew have in mind.

Starrick's two charity shots came with no time remaining in the game after he was fouled by NIU's David Naves.

Southern had a 105-102 lead when Starrick was hacked after taking an in-bounded pass well past the half-court stripe from Portugal.

The Salukis held a seemingly safe 100-91 lead over the Huskies with 1:32 remaining when Northern started a comeback similar to the one that gave SIU a victory over Evansville last Saturday.

Garrett's first of three charity shots was SIU's only tally during a period in which the Huskies moved the score to 101-97 on two field goals by Don Hamel and one by Cleveland Ivey.

With 33 seconds remaining, Portugal hit both attempts of a one-and-one situation to up the lead to six points, 103-97.

Hamel came back with another basket before Garrett's two free throws and then followed those with his fourth field goal in less than a minute. The Huskies were still down, 105-101, and lost their chance for a comeback win when NIU captain Art Rohman missed the final of two free throws.

Had Rohman converted on both, Northern Illinois could have tied the score 105-101 with another basket.

But they didn't get the equalizer and that meant defeat. Northern's fourth conference loss against an equal number of wins. The Huskies finished with an overall 13-10 record.

Thursday night's victory was the final game for SIU seniors L. C. Brasfield and Martin Bradley who were introduced and given lengthy standing ovations before the game.

Brasfield played as he has for the past two seasons, leading Southern with

Frosh drop finale, 82-67

With its ace ballplayer benched with five fouls—the SIU freshmen basketball team gained strength from a new source and threw a scare into the once-beaten Missouri Tigers before succumbing, 82-67.

Eddie James paced the young Salukis in their final game of the season with nine points before picking up three fouls in the first half, two from trying to steal the ball from the Tiger's seven-foot Gail Wolf.

The Mount Vernon product who set a school record over two weeks ago with 43 points against Belleville—fouled out with 12:49 left in the game.

Charles Brown filled the gap left by James and with the aid of two steals by teammate Cal Franklin, pulled the freshmen within 11 points of Missouri before the Tigers called time-out.

Southern had trailed by as much as 23 points.

The young Tigers kept control of the game despite losing their top scorer Gary Link earlier to five fouls.

Wolf had one of his better nights on the scoreboard making 16 points, his season's average is nine. The Okawville product also grabbed nine rebounds.

But Brown was supreme on the boards, pulling down 15 rebounds while pumping in 23 points for SIU. Brown had only four points at halftime.

Links was high scorer in the game with 24 points for the Tigers.

James made 14 points, Dan Hoffman 11, David Burt seven, Cam Conner six and Franklin three.

27 points and 12 rebounds. Greg Starrick and Marvin Brooks were next in line with 22 points and 11 rebounds respectively. Bradley did not play.

All the Saluki starters were in double figures for the first time in quite a while. Nate Hawthorne had 11 points, Stan Powles 12 and John Garrett 19.

By virtue of his 27 points, Brasfield moved into the 14th spot among all-time SIU scorers, totaling 877 over a two-year career.

SIU needed a late surge to take a 52-47 intermission lead after Northern led 43-42 with just over two minutes remaining.

A nine-point surge gave Southern a 51-43 lead as it took command for the first time on four points by Brasfield, two apiece by Hawthorne and Starrick and one by Brooks.

SIU temporarily lost the five point halftime lead in the second half when the game was tied eight times and Northern led on six occasions.

Mush! Mush!
