Greeks say they're back 'in'

By Sue Voyles
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"The frat-rat is back," according to one fraternity button.

"It's not uncool anymore to be a Greek," said Nancy Harris, coordinator of SIU's fraternities and sororities.

"There's really been a change of attitude since the student activist years in the early '70's," she said.

Twelve-hundred students representing 25 Greek organizations this year is the largest number in SIU's history. Membership reached its lowest ebb in 1970-72 when about 800 students participated in Greek life, she said.

Membership has increased 10 per cent over last year's membership, she added.

There are two "colony" or unofficial fraternities on campus this year. President Bob Thompson, Alpha Epsilon Pi, and George Schau, Omega Delta Chi, both expect their organizations to be chartered or accredited by SIU this semester.

In both cases, the fraternity chapters were started by a group of guys who lived together in the dorms, they said.

"There is more interest in small group organizations with new students," Harris said. They are looking for the leadership, small group living and social experiences that fraternizing organizations provide, she said.

Right now, fraternities and sororities encompass all kinds of living situations but there is no real trend, Eric Priest, adviser to the fraternities, said. There are eight organizations on campus, five off-campus and eight without any housing, he said.

Pat Hartlage, coordinator of the Inter Greek Council and Alpha Gamma Delta president, said the Greek attitudes have changed from competitiveness to togetherness.

Three years ago there was a lot of snobbery between the organizations themselves and the student body, she said. "People were called frat-rats or sorority-bitches. But now outsiders are beginning to ask 'Hey, what's it all about?'" she said.

Most of our fraternities and sororities are secret in their ritual ceremonies, Harris said, "but Delta Upsilon is one in which the initiation ritual is open to anyone."

"The old days of hell-week are gone," she said. "Hazing," those activities which are harmful or demeaning to a person, were the main activities of "rush," the week reserved for bringing in new members in the '40's and '50's, she said.

"For example, years ago paddling was traditional," she said.

Sullivan says administration listens to Student Government

By Jon Kartman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Despite some problems, Student President Dennis Sullivan says he feels that on the whole, the SIU administration listens to Student Government.

Even so, Sullivan said, Student Government and the administration view the needs of the student from different viewpoints.

As an example, Sullivan cited Student Government's relationship with the people working in the Office of Student Affairs.

Sullivan said he comes in contact with the office of Student Affairs in areas such as student discipline, financial aid, counseling and testing and problems with the Health Service.

"I perceive that Student Government should take care of the student's needs from a student's viewpoint," Sullivan said, "while Student Affairs takes care of student's needs from an administrative viewpoint."

Sullivan said the relationship between Student Government and Student Affairs is not as good as it could be, though he did not fault Student Affairs.

"Both Student Government and Student Affairs have had so many things going on that we haven't had as much cooperation between us as there should have been," Sullivan said.

Vice president for Student Affairs, Bruce Swinburne, said he believes that the relationship between Student Government and Student Affairs is good.

"We have been supportive of some of the Student Government projects such as the student attorney program and the student to student program," Swinburne said. "I feel that the relationship is good and it feels good."

Another problem cited by Sullivan concerned the fiscal officer of Student Government.

The present fiscal officer, John L. Baier, has been in the position for several years, Sullivan said.

"Student Government can't choose its own fiscal officer," Sullivan said. "In theory, in order to approach Swinburne, we have to go through Baier. In other words, we have to go up the administrative ladder."

Swinburne said Sullivan's analysis was "unfair."

"A day doesn't go by where I don't talk to Sullivan," Swinburne said. "The position of fiscal officer is one where the person can't be changing every year like they do in Student Government."

Another problem with the administration that Sullivan said he is having, concerns trying to have a room in the Student Center named after the late Dwight Campbell, former student body president.

Campbell, who was president from 1969-70, drowned in a swimming pool accident in Chicago on July 9, 1974.

Sullivan said he approached Clarence Dougherty, director of the Student Center, and asked him if a room in the center could be named after Campbell.

Sullivan said Dougherty replied that the Student Senate should pass a resolution to that effect before a room could be named after Campbell.

On Jan. 22, the Senate unanimously passed a resolution and Dougherty sent the request to the Student Center Board, of which Dougherty is a member, Sullivan said.

Sullivan said the board tabled the request, asking for more information from him.

Dougherty then suggested to Sullivan that a plaque honoring all student body presidents be placed in the Center, Sullivan said.

Student fees may be refunded if committee bill becomes law

By Gary Marx
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU student fees totaling $1,306,125 may be freed for reallocation or refund if a bill to be decided Thursday in the Illinois House Committee on Higher Education becomes law.

The bill would require the state to fully fund all health facilities at Illinois universities including staffing, overhead and equipment. Students presently pay 76 per cent of this cost at SIU.

The bill came from a subcommittee report on student fees which found many university medical facilities understaffed, overworked and incapable of handling medical needs of the students who fund the service.

The report concluded, "Illinois should provide the necessary funding to take care of these medical facilities and it should not fall upon the students in the form of increases in student fees."

The $32.25 that full-time SIU students pay each semester for health comes from two separate fees: $17.25 from the Student Medical Benefit fee (SMB) and $15 from the Student Welfare and Recreation Fund (SWRF).

Sam McVay, administrative director of the Health Service, said students have a good chance of getting a refund of at least part of this money if the state agrees to fund the Health Service.

"The $15 from SWRF will probably be reallocated to cover the operating costs of the recreation building," he said. "But the $17.25 should be dropped."

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, agreed with McVay and said, "It is not at all unrealistic to see a decrease in student fees."

McVay said full state funding might make it harder to get additional moneys for expanded programs.

"If it is set up as a lump sum grant, we'll have to go up to Springfield and politick and try to sell the program," he said.

McVay said the state has given less and less in recent years to support the Health Service.

In 1972, SIU received $500,000 for the medical program compared to $190,000 this year, he said.

Beginning last fall semester, $15 of SWRF was reallocated to aid the Health Service. McVay said this amounted to about $600,000 and provided enough funds to hire three additional doctors.

Senate ERA supporters dealt blow

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—The Illinois Senate approved a rule Wednesday that supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment said virtually kills chances for its passage this session.

The new rule, which passed 31 to 26, declares that a three-fifths majority of the 59-member Senate is needed to ratify the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

"There is no way we can get three-fifths," said Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, D-Chicago, an ERA supporter. "We barely have a majority."

The number of votes required to pass ERA has been at the core of the controversy in the Illinois legislature.

The Illinois Constitution states that a three-fifths vote of the General Assembly is required. However, two opinions by the Illinois attorney general and a recent federal court decision have declared that provision nonbinding.

The court said, in effect, that it was up to the legislature to decide how many votes were needed.

Scheduled consideration of ERA was postponed Tuesday because its chief sponsor, Sen. Ester Saperstein, D-Chicago, said she didn't have 30 votes to pass it.

Some senators saw the vote on the new rule as actually a vote on ERA, which has stirred up a hornet's nest of controversy in the state in recent weeks.

"For those of you who don't have the guts to vote on the issue, then vote in favor of this motion," Sen. John Knuppel, D-Petersburg, told his colleagues before the vote was taken. "You may be fooling some people but you're not fooling me."

The proposed amendment, which bans discrimination on the basis of sex, has failed in attempts at passage in either the House or Senate in the last three years.

Both houses must approve the ratification resolution before Illinois can join the 34 states that have already ratified ERA. A total of 38 states must ratify the amendment by 1979 before it becomes part of the U.S. Constitution.

News Roundup

Kissinger off on Mid-East mission

LONDON (AP)—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger headed for Britain on Wednesday enroute to the Middle East and an "open-ended" negotiating mission to secure a broad second-stage Israeli-Egyptian settlement in the Sinai.

Kissinger embarked on the journey—his ninth trip to the Middle East since the October 1973 War—with a kiss from the First Lady and a hearty handshake from President Ford. The Fords walked the secretary to his waiting limousine on the White House South Lawn after a final conference in the Oval Office.

Kissinger's first stop is London and consultations with Foreign Secretary James Callaghan. Thursday he is to make a side-trip to Cardiff, Wales, accompanied by the new U.S. ambassador to Britain, Elliot Richardson, to attend a dinner in Callaghan's honor.

Diplomats in London said Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's experts have formulated a range of options for Kissinger to present Egypt's President Anwar Sadat.

Rebel rockets hit U.S. plane

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—Rebel artillery shelling Phnom Penh airport hit an American plane for the first time Wednesday after the DC8 cargo jet landed with a load of rice.

U.S. officials decided to halt the emergency airlift for the rest of the day.

No injuries were reported among the crew of the World Airways plane, and diplomatic sources said it returned to Saigon's Tan Son Nhut air base with only minor damage from shrapnel.

In Washington, Secretary of Defense James A. Schlesinger said the United States is reviewing its options regarding the worsening military situation in isolated Phnom Penh.

As to whether U.S. Marines would be used to evacuate Americans from the city, Schlesinger said: "We would be prepared under the circumstances to use Marines, if the need arises."

Prime interest rate lowered again

By the Associated Press

Morgan Guaranty Trust dropped its prime rate Wednesday to the lowest level in nearly two years in a move to encourage businesses to borrow and spend their way out of the recession.

Congressional committees, meanwhile, considered tax cut legislation designed to get individuals to do the same thing.

President Ford announced that he will seek an extra $2 billion to extend the public service employment program for six months and provide more summer jobs for young people.

Ford acted as the Labor Department announced that state unemployment insurance claims in the week ended Feb. 15 set a record for the second straight week. More than six million persons received benefit checks, an increase of 125,600 over the previous week.

On the bright side: a separate report showed 605,200 initial claims for unemployment benefits were filed in the week ended Feb. 22, a decrease of 43,700 from the previous week.

Kuwait to take over oil firms

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait announced Wednesday it will take over the remaining 40 per cent share of the country's huge oil operations held by British and American firms.

Acting Oil Minister Abdel Rahman Atiki said the government will initiate "participation" talks with British Petroleum and Gulf Oil next Tuesday in order to achieve 100 per cent state control of oil. The government already holds 60 per cent of the Kuwait Oil Co., through which BP and Gulf operate in Kuwait.

Atiki said the foreign companies would be retained as production and marketing contractors.

A similar statement was made by Oil Minister Abdulmoutaleb Kazimi in Algiers, where he is attending the summit conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Filibuster breakthrough scored

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key breakthrough was scored Wednesday by members seeking a change in Senate rules to make it easier to choke off filibusters.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., leader of the fight against a change, conceded that within a few days he and others allied with him will go down to defeat.

"We are witnessing the crushing of dissent, the cutting off of the right of free debate in the Senate," he said.

Cloture, or the limitation of debate, can now be put into effect under Senate Rule 22 only by a two-thirds majority of senators voting.

Opponents to the new rule, introduced Wednesday, argued that 84 per cent of all the states require only a majority of members elected or a majority of those present and voting to approve an amendment to the Constitution.

But Sen. William C. Harris, the Republican leader from Pontiac and sponsor of the motion, said the Senate rules should conform to the language in the Illinois Constitution and should specifically spell out the voting requirement.

Campus bus system discussion set today

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Alternatives to the experimental intra-campus bus system to enable East Campus residents to get transportation to the Health Service will be discussed at a meeting Thursday.

The experimental bus system was terminated last Friday, after a month of operation, because of lack of usage.

The meeting, scheduled for noon in the Student Affairs conference room, will be attended by Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs; Sam McVay, administrative director of the Health Service; Debbie Degman and Jim Dunn of the East Campus Executive Council; Harry Wirth, manager of SIU travel service; Morris Collier, a representative from Evergreen Terrace; and two members of the Student Health Advisory Commission (SHAC).

Swinburne said Tuesday he expects to discuss operating a bus during peak hours of usage. During the experimental period, buses ran for 10 hours daily, he said.

He said another possibility is to use campus transit cars to transport persons from East Campus to the Health Service.

"We don't want people who are sick not to get treatment at the Health Service because they don't feel like walking across campus," Swinburne said.

"We ran that (the experimental bus) to see how much success that method would have," he said. "It does not cut out the possibility of other alternatives."

Swinburne said his "real concern" is for students who need to get to the Health Service.

McVay said the bus, which ran for 19 days, had about 130 riders per day. He said that some persons believe if the experimental bus had operated longer than a month the amount of riders might have increased.

up on a plaque," Sullivan said. "We should honor Dwight Campbell, an outstanding student body president who died too early in his life."

"All the buildings at SIU have been named after past teachers or administrators," Sullivan said. "There is nothing on this campus that has been named after any student."

Dougherty declined to comment on the issue other than to say that at the Student Center Board's meeting Tuesday night, no action was taken on the proposal.

Should the board approve the proposal, Dougherty said it would be forwarded to the President's Advisory Committee for Naming University Facilities.

From there, Dougherty said the proposal would be forwarded to the Board of Trustees for final approval.

"Student Government has never established a strong identity," Sullivan said. "As a result, we appear either as very antagonistic to the administration or we appear as a puppet for the administration."

What hurts Student Government in its dealings with the administration, Sullivan said, is that a new party or person is in power in Student Government every year.

The lack of continuity makes it hard for an incoming person to know what is going on in Student Government, Sullivan said.

"One year the Greeks are in power, the next the hippies, the next the blacks, the next somebody else," Sullivan added.

Trends indicate upswing in Greek membership

But there were two hazing-associated deaths last year, she said. At Monmouth College in New Jersey, one man was accidentally buried while digging the traditional graves on the beach during rush week, according to the Associated Press. Another man was killed at Bluefield State College in West Virginia, "in an incident that took place between the alumnus and active members at an informal fraternity initiation," she said.

Hazing activities are prohibited under University policy and are denounced by the national organizations, she said.

Instead of hazing new members, most organizations require that they perform a community project, she said.

For example, Tau Kappa Epsilon has changed the name of its rush week from Hell Week to Help Week this year, according to Jim McCoy, a member of the group.

Though their main function is social, all fraternities and sororities contribute service projects to the community, Harris said.

"Most projects are a one-shot affair" like the door-to-door campaigning for the Heart Fund, the Walk-a-thon for the Styress Home in Carbondale, or the Special Olympics for the handicapped, Gary Ricketts, secretary of Omega Delta Chi, said.

Omega Delta Chi is doing a continuous project, coaching swimming, basketball and floor hockey at the Jackson County YMCA this semester, he said.

"Values were more distorted a few years ago than what they are now," Grace Whitlock, housemother of Alpha Sigma Alpha, said. "The girls rule out pot (marijuana) completely. They are neater in their appearance and their habits. The kids are tired of being way-out."

"Frat life has picked up," one student said. "There are more new faces and representation from many different departments."

"We have a good house to offer," one fraternity president said. "We even have a bar downstairs."

Council candidate ponders board offer

City Council Candidate Walter Robinson said Wednesday that he will not fill a vacancy on the Jackson County Board until the board makes a firmer offer and he get approval from his constituents.

If Robinson takes the county position, he will withdraw from the City Council race.

Robinson, an associate professor at the Rehabilitation Institute, said he was first considered for position in December when Board of Supervisors member Cleveland Matthews talked of resigning.

Matthews resigned from the board last week to become Carbondale's Equal Opportunity officer. In a letter to board members, Matthews nominated Robinson as his replacement. Robinson's seating is subject to majority approval by remaining board members.

"Presently, I am still thinking the matter over and I am still campaigning for the City Council," Robinson said.

Robinson finished fourth in a field of six in the Feb. 25 primary for the council. His withdrawal could bring Clark Vineyard, who placed fifth in the primary, on the April 15 general election ballot, City Clerk Elizabeth Leighty said.

So far, Robinson is the only nominee for the district four vacancy, Reginald "Bo" Stearns, Jackson County Board chairman said. The board will fill the vacancy during its March 18 meeting. "Since the board wants to fill the vacancy before the city election, I am waiting until they make a firm offer about the position," Robinson said.

"I will consider the proposal when it is made," Robinson said.

Stearns said Robinson was mentioned as a replacement for Matthews some months ago but he is not sure how much support Robinson has on the board.

"Several other people may be nominated between now and the board meeting," Stearns said.

Big budget hike sought by Walker

SPRINGFIELD. (AP)—Gov. Daniel Walker proposed Wednesday a $10.75 billion budget for fiscal 1976 containing massive spending increases designed to combat the recession.

Inflated by a $1.9 billion plan to boost the state's economy by rapid construction of highways, airports and buildings, the Walker budget calls for $8.155 billion in spending during the fiscal year beginning July 1—more than $22 million a day.

The budget assigns $463 million more than the state expects to receive during the fiscal year and would spend every penny in the state's general revenue fund, from which most bills are paid.

"Many of us have been speaking about maintaining a prudent balance-pointing out that like any family we must save a little money for bad times, for a rainy day," Walker told a joint session of the Illinois House and Senate.

"But conditions have changed dramatically. Now we are in a recession. In my book, this is the rainy day we've been protecting against. We must spend more to meet the increasing needs of people caught in this deepening recession," he said.

The budget for the current fiscal year, the highest yet in state history, is expected to be $8.664 billion, with anticipated spending of $6.949 billion.

Appropriations traditionally exceed actual spending during a fiscal year because some projects for which money is appropriated are not completed during the year.

Walker's new budget would be 24 per cent higher than the current budget and more than twice the size of the state's $5.152 billion 1971 budget.

The governor said he had no qualms about proposing a budget so finely calculated that it calls for ending the year without a cent in the general revenue fund.

"Our revenue estimates are solid. Our agency budgets, including public aid, are realistic," he said.

Black studies lecture set

A specialist in Black American Studies will speak on "The Moral Legacy of the Founding Fathers" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Davis Auditorium.

John H. Franklin is a professor and former chairman of history at the University of Chicago. The SIU history department will sponsor his talk. Following the speech, Omega Psi Phi will sponsor a reception for Franklin in the Wham faculty lounge.

Franklin is an alumnus of Fisk and Harvard Universities. He is president of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, and has taught at Harvard, Cornell, the University of Wisconsin, the University of California at Berkeley and the University of Hawaii. He has lectured in Europe, Africa and Asia.

Franklin has authored and edited ten books on Black-American history. He has received honorary degrees from more than 35 American colleges and universities.

City may receive same amount of general revenue sharing funds

By Mary Whittler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Mayor Neal Eckert returned from the City-Congressional Conference in Washington, D.C. with an indication that general revenue sharing funds for Carbondale in the next year will remain about the same.

Eckert, who met Monday and Tuesday with congressional members and federal officials, said their position on revenue sharing "is to stay with basically the same formula, with few strings attached."

City Manager Carroll Fry, who also attended the conference sponsored by the National League of Cities, said Carbondale is receiving about $450,000 in revenue sharing funds during this fiscal year.

Eckert said the city is "very lucky to be getting that amount of money."

Carbondale's railroad relocation project may be in danger, Eckert said. The administration, through the Office of Management and Budget, has recommended a rescinding order for the legislation that authorized the relocation projects.

Carbondale has studied several methods of relocating the railroad, including a plan to depress the tracks through town.

Eckert said the House should be acting on the recommended order in April. He added that even if the Congress does not vote to rescind the legislation, the administration might seek to kill the railroad relocation project by impounding or deferring the funds. If this happens, Eckert said Congress would have to take some positive action to release the funds.

An alternative plan for railroad relocation calls for the federal government to provide 70 per cent of the necessary funds with the cities providing 30 per cent of the funds.

Eckert said there is "no way we could come up with 30 per cent."

The original plan calls for the federal government to provide 95 per cent of the funds, through the 1973 Highway Act.

A federal building for downtown Carbondale is still a very real possibility, even though legislation authorizing the expenditures on a long-term basis expires June 30, Eckert said. He said the expenditure for Carbondale's federal building could be authorized on a short-term basis. Congressman Paul Simon was "optimistic that it would be," Eckert added.

Guidance for disabled special symposium topic

A special symposium dealing with the programming for the handicapped child will be presented from 11:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Thursday at the Student Center. It will precede the Fifth Annual Good Teachings Practices Conference Thursday and Friday.

The symposium is aimed at bringing together educators and physicians to explore coordinated programming for the disabled child. The content will deal with early identification and programming for the minimally handicapped, alternative programming for the severely and profoundly handicapped, and the legal rights of children.

Dr. Marvin A. Fishman, who is director of the rehabilitation programs at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., will speak during the luncheon session on "The Epileptic Child."

Dr. Fishman is also a consultant for the regional diagnostic centers for the state of Missouri and is certified by the American Board of Pediatrics and the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology with special competence in child neurology.

Another participant in the symposium is William C. Morse, professor of education and psychology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. He is the author of "Conflict in the Classroom" and "The Education of Emotionally Disturbed Children."

Coordinators of the symposium are Dr. Joseph M. Garfunkel, SIU professor and chairman of the Department of Pediatrics and James M. Crowner, SIU professor and chairman of the Department of Special Education.

The symposium is presented by the SIU School of Medicine in cooperation with the SIU Department of Special Education.

Greasy palms

The Senate should follow action recently taken by the House and vote to end the oil depletion tax break given to U.S. oil companies. Hearings began in the Senate Tuesday.

The depletion allowance permits petroleum producers to deduct 22 per cent from their taxable income from oil and gas properties, up to half their net income. Estimates coming from the oil barons predict that elimination of the tax break would add $2.5 billion to the industry's tax bill, forcing it to curtail its domestic production and exploration for new energy sources.

Gulf Oil Corp., one of this country's largest, warned recently, in the grand style of fear-imposing tactics, that elimination of the tax break would force it to cut by 20 per cent its 1975 budget for domestic exploration and inevitably increase this nation's dependence on imported oil. This dependence is precisely what our President warns we must avoid if we are to achieve "Project Independence," a lofty, but desirable ideal.

C. John Miller, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, (IPAA), attempted to instill more fright into the public's mind by warning that elimination of the tax break would cause the United States to increase by 10 million barrels-a-day its imports of Mideastern oil. Miller, however, offered no proof of where these figures came from.

With all the arguments coming from the oil industry urging and warning against repeal of the oil depletion allowance, there is an alarming lack of facts. Exploration and production of domestic petroleum and alternative energy supplies have been relatively constant over the past few years, since the time oil prices began to soar to their present heights. Oil production peaked in the United States in 1971, at 9.5 million barrels-a-day. It is now estimated, according to industry figures, at 9.1 million daily barrels. Estimates of increased exploration and wildcat drilling are up only four per cent from 1973. Where is all the increased exploration and domestic production—the oil companies are claiming they will be deprived of?

Gulf claims that the depletion allowance accounted for over $100 million of its $408 million 1974 profit. Need companies make such mammoth gains, be allowed to pay minimal taxes and not push for exploration and domestic production? The House has decided, by a large majority, that it is time to bring the oil giants down to earth. The $2.5 billion in additional taxes that would come from elimination of the depletion allowance could serve to bolster our ailing economy in any number of well chosen areas.

There are two drawbacks, however. The House has decided to tack on the depletion question with its overall economic package. Hot Senate debate on this matter will undoubtedly lead to delay, something we cannot tolerate. But, as Rep. Sam Gibbons (D-Fla.), a staunch backer of killing the depletion allowance, said it would be petty politics to delay the total economic plan which calls for a $20 billion tax cut, in favor of haggling over the depletion allowance.

Also, as Gibbons admits, ending the oil depletion allowance would lead to a two-to-three cent price increase on gasoline. This is something we would have to grudgingly accept. Cutting the tax breaks given to giant oil firms would be a step in the right direction towards alleviating some of the gross inequities in our tax laws.

Let's open the door and not lock the jaw

By Wes Smith

After three months of honeymooning at SIU-C, it is time newly appointed President Warren W. Brandt got out of the sack and into action.

When Brandt accepted the SIU-C presidency he may not have realized that he wasn't simply getting behind the plow of a sleepy educational farm in Hee-Haw country.

But, by now, Brandt must realize that things have been going to pot down on the farm and another heap of fertilizer isn't going to cover the smell.

Brandt came to a campus which was going through withdrawal. The tumultuous Derge administration and the surprise package for 104 terminated faculty members created a paranoia which one departed Ph.D. likened to a "Nazi prison camp."

Another disenchanted faculty member confidentially remarked, "Under Derge and Lesar I had mentally packed my bags to leave the University. But with Brandt it seemed there was hope, so I mentally unpacked. Now, I'm packing again."

Many of those familiar with the wranglings and danglings of the administration agree that Brandt is slowly getting things into motion. But they'll add that his manner of carrying on business behind closed doors is discomfiting.

Richard M. Nixon and Charlie Rich will tell you "no one knows what goes on behind closed doors."

Tuesday, Feb. 25, Brandt met with the attorney representing C. Harvey Gardiner and Doug Allen in their separate suits against the University.

I called Brandt after the meeting. He wasn't in but he later called back. (to his credit, he is very cooperative along those lines).

"I understand you met with Carl Runge, (the attorney), today. Was anything determined in those suits," I asked Brandt.

"I didn't say we discussed any suits," he replied.

"Okay, did you discuss the Gardiner and Allen suits?"

"Yes, but I have nothing to tell you."

"Thank you for your cooperation."

Guess I should be thankful that he did have the courtesy to return my call but the game of hide and seek dampened my thankfulness for our new "accessible" top man.

Later, Gardiner's attorney said a settlement had been reached that day.

But, at his meeting with Brandt, the attorney had found our president so uncommunicative and apparently disinterested that he had given up hope of negotiating with him.

Gardiner's lawyer settled the three-year-old suit with the University's legal counsel later in a brief meeting.

Bruce Swineburne, vice-president of student affairs, once said enthusiastically of Brandt's attitude, "If I went to him and said we were having trouble keeping the washrooms clean Brandt would set up a meeting with the janitor to solve the problem."

The fact that this University is being sued by three individuals for alleged violation of their rights, plus the fact that at least two more suits are waiting in the wings, ought to be enough to bring at least a couple of "janitors" scurrying.

Granted, Brandt hasn't been around very long and he didn't walk into the most clear cut situation ever facing a new administrator.

But, repeatedly, from campus constituencies, faculty, other D.E. staffers and people with strong interests in SIU, I get the feeling that Brandt's seemingly uncooperative attitude has irked more than those using the washrooms.

The days of a divided, petty faculty are nearing an end. There is a new feeling of unity spreading among the faculty. But it isn't a unity spurred by a common interest in overhead projectors and number two pencils.

The new feeling of a common bond is based on an undercurrent of fear and mistrust nurtured in past years toward the administration.

SIU needs a strong, honest leadership.

We need an open door policy. Not a clamped jaw and an "I know notheing."

When President Brandt first came to campus he said one of his goals was to have SIU students go home and say, "Hey, I go to SIU at Carbondale and it's a great place."

A balanced budget may not be desirable

By Dennis Hale
Student Writer

Just what are the facts about deficit spending and the national debt? For a start, consider four statements often used to describe the federal debt since the end of World War II. (Clue: With eight exceptions, government expenditures exceeded revenues in the 44 years since 1932.)

1. The debt has continued to grow as a percentage of the gross national product, GNP (the value of all goods and services produced by the nation during any year).
2. Interest on the debt also has continued to increase as a percentage of GNP.
3. The size of the debt relative to each citizen has increased.
4. The national debt has expended until it far exceeds privately held debt in this country.

Do these statements summarize the facts about deficit spending? The answer is no!

In fact, every one of the statements is false. But you wouldn't get that idea from most of the public debate in recent decades. The issue of national debt and deficit spending surfaced again last month when President Ford announced plans for an $85 billion federal deficit over the next two years, a record in peace-time. The figure for next year alone could top $60 billion if Congress reinstates some $17.5 billion in program cuts proposed by Ford, or if Congress adds to the President's plan for a tax rebate.

Federal debts and deficits have been commonplace during the last seven U.S. presidents. But the public remains as misinformed as ever. As much as anyone, politicians have created the confusion by oversimplifying the issue and by alternately decrying, and then implementing, federal deficits.

Just a few weeks ago Ronald Reagan told a gathering of cattlemen: "There's only one cure for inflation, and that's balancing the budget." Reagan is not the first to simplify and distort the issue. Last year, President Nixon projected a deficit of 9.4 billion for the current year, estimated down to a tenth of a billion dollars. Budget officials now say that the amount will reach $35 billion. In January of 1934, President Franklin Roosevelt announced: "We should plan to have a definitely balanced budget for the third year of recovery and from that time on seek a continuing reduction in the national debt." Not one year while he was president did he balance the budget or reduce the debt. No wonder the public remains confused.

Federal debts and deficits, however, should be examined within the larger perspective of the total economy. Although the national debt has continued to grow since World War II, it has increased more slowly than the total economy. Thus it has become less of a burden on the total economy. In 1946 the debt constituted 128 per cent of the total economy; today it is less than 50 per cent. During the same period, interest on the debt has dropped from a high of 2.5 per cent of GNP to less than two per cent. And the amount of debt for every citizen has dropped. This answers the first three statements posed earlier. Concerning the fourth statement, since the war, private debt has soared to a point where it is four times larger than the national debt.

Considerable confusion results from equating the federal budget with a family budget. Living within one's means has long been a virtue in this country. But even the most frugal family incurs a debt on a home and automobile that amounts to more than a year's income. So why can't the federal government similarly borrow to finance long-range projects?

"THE STOCK MARKET MUST BE MAKING ONE HELL OF A RECOVERY!"

...the purpose of deficit spending is to stimulate consumer buying...

Economists argue that the family budget simply is not analogous to the federal budget. In his Smith's Law on federal budgets, economist Warren Smith of the University of Michigan said: "There is only one rule about budget balancing, and it is that the budget should never be balanced." Professor Paul Samuelson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology argued that "since the budget cannot be balanced every day or every month, there is no particular merit in trying to balance it in the arbitrary astronomical cycle involved in one swing of the earth around the sun."

The purpose of deficit spending during a recession is to stimulate buying, which stimulates production and employment. General economic conditions, not the calendar, dictate the timing and size of such deficits.

Does such thinking apply to the current recession, with its accompanying high prices and interest rates? This was what caused Treasury Secretary William Simon to be "horrified" by Ford's proposed deficit. Simon said that heavy borrowing by the government to finance the deficit would push interest rates even higher, preventing borrowing by private citizens and corporations. However, moderate economists, like Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under Nixon, argue that the proposed deficit will not add to inflation or interest rates. With industrial expansion and home construction at a low ebb, money is available for the government.

Even during a healthy economy, a national debt of some size provides benefits. Economist Kenneth E. Boulding said that a widely distributed national debt is "Perhaps the best insurance policy a government can have against the wrath of the people." By purchasing government bonds with their savings, private citizens help finance the national debt. And to the extent that they have faith in their government, they may feel secure about their savings.

This is not to say that there are no limits to deficit spending. Certainly it should not continue during periods of high employment.

A national debt is not something about which one writes sonnets or ballads. Daniel Webster may have been overly exuberant when he said that a "national debt is a national blessing." On the other hand, it isn't the ogre that some depict it to be. As the Wall Street Journal editorialized on January 22, "The relation between deficits and inflation, after all, is a bit more subtle than a wrathful God inflicting inflation as a punishment for loose living."

Deficit spending has become an orthodox weapon for stabilizing the economy and employment—even for a conservative, Midwestern Republican from Grand Rapids, Mich. As a political issue, it should be as dead as prohibition.

Arena should serve area

To the Daily Egyptian:

Thank you Dean Justice, SIU arena manager, for scheduling the Charlie Pride show in Carbondale. I was very pleased with the fabulous country-western show he, plus the Four Guys and Ronnie Milsap, presented to a good sized crowd on Feb. 14. I was very disappointed to read the review Marilyn Schonfeld and Paula Magelli wrote. Apparently they dislike country-western music. I say this in lieu of their statement "surprising all with a hyped-up medley, Milsap performed 'Rolling In My Sweet Baby's Arms', 'Chantilly Lace', and 'Johnny B. Good' with the finesse and feeling of Leon Russell."

Not being too familiar with Mr.

Russell, I did some research and found out that he is what one could classify as a "soul singer." There is quite a difference in country-western and soul singing, and therefore I feel the student writers were biased toward the soul singing and they should not have had the "task" of reviewing the country-western show. One question, if it was such a poor show, why did the artists receive standing ovations?

Letters

I feel SIU needs to serve not only the students but the community and surrounding area. In our area of the arena where we were seated, there were people from all over Southern Illinois, some from Cape Girardeau, Mo., and one couple from Southern Indiana. These were not students, but fans of the country-western music. This definitely was a "family type" presentation. Needless to say, you can please some of the people some of the time but not all the people all of the time.

Mrs. JoAnn Hoerner

Letters to the Daily Egyptian

The Daily Egyptian welcomes expression of opinions from all members of the University community. Writers are requested to be concise and in the event the subject has a time element, to bring letters to the Daily Egyptian as soon as possible in the day as possible. The editors reserve the right to condense letters to permit a larger variety of opinions, to correct minor typographical and grammatical errors, and to edit out material that is considered libelous or in bad taste. Letters should be typed, double spaced, and accompanied by the full address and signature of the writer.

Rummy marathon set for Easter Seal drive

Alpha Phi Omega and Phyettes members hope to collect $1,000 this weekend during a rummy playing marathon on behalf of the Southern Illinois Easter Seals campaign. Fifty consecutive hours of rummy playing will begin 6 p.m. Friday at the Wesley Foundation in Carbondale. The public is encouraged to watch this match and pledge money to Easter Seals for each hour the eight players stay at it.

All proceeds from this marathon will be given to the Southern Illinois Easter Seal Fund Drive on March 14. This money supports the camp at Little Grassy Lake.

The SIU chapters of Alpha Phi Omega and Phyettes, organizers of the marathon, have already collected over $500 from individuals and businesses in Carbondale, Marion and Murphysboro. They hope to collect $1,000 for the Easter Seals Fund by the end of the card game 8 p.m. Sunday.

Four people will try to play rummy the entire 50 hours. Several others from Alpha Phi Omega and Phyettes will fill in during the weekend.

Mike Vogelsang, first vice president and recording secretary for Alpha Phi Omega, is the marathon leader for his fraternity. Lynne Conlan will be the leader of the Phyettes card players.

Some local restaurants will donate food to sustain the card players.

Introductory law course set for undergraduates

An introductory law course designed to familiarize undergraduates with legal areas that affect their everyday lives will be offered fall semester by the College of Liberal Arts.

"Law in American Society," a 100-level course, will meet at 8 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday in Lawson 101.

Bruce Appleby, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said complete plans for the course aren't definite, but the subject matter won't be specialized. Topics will include student rights, civil disobedience, crime, labor-management relations and obscenity.

Appleby said tentative plans have been made to bring in panels from the community and other university departments.

Students will also have a chance to learn about pre-law counseling and law as a profession and to take a mock Law School Admissions Test.

The course will be interdisciplinary, with lectures by faculty from economics, history, political science, philosophy, sociology and psychology.

Provocative therapy expert will lecture Friday in Lawson

Jeff Brandsma, co-author of the book "Provocative Therapy" and faculty member of the Department of Psychiatry at the University of Kentucky at Lexington, will speak at Room 131, Lawson Hall, at 3 p.m. on Friday.

Brandsma and Frank Farrelly, a social worker at Mendota State Hospital in Wisconsin who is affiliated with the Department of Psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, are the originators of provocative therapy, according to Tom Spudis, president of the Department of Psychology's colloquium.

"Provocative therapy is a mode of psychotherapy which relies rather heavily on confrontation," Spudis said.

"Autobahn
Kraftwerk
Phonogram

By Paula Magelli
Student Writer

"Autobahn," the most recent release by a German group called Kraftwerk, is a boring haberdashery of electronic babbling. However, if you're one of those people who is rather thrilled when highway monotony sets in, then this album will be a musical delight.

Apparently following the path blazed by Mike Oldfield in "Tubular Bells," the group has attempted to synthesize an album based on electronic modes of sound production. Due to the nature of the medium chosen, the music appeals to the ear as well as the nervous system.

There are two cuts on the second side of the album that are comparatively pleasing: "Kometemelodie I" and "Morgenspazengang."

While the sounds that are assembled are bizarre, the mere amalgamation of them is not necessarily enough to qualify as music. Don't give up the moog, guys, perhaps you'll be hired to create sound tracks for Japanese science fiction flicks.

"So What"
By Joe Walsh
ABC Dunhill Records

By M.C. Jolls
Student Writer

"So What," Joe Walsh's third album of his solo career, takes new turns and indicates Walsh is expanding favorably into a different form than his first two albums.

Since his departure from the James Gang, Walsh has built himself a strong, cult-like following.

With his second album, "The Smoker You Drink, the Player You Get," he peaked and established his presence in the rock field.

Although hesitant about releasing the new album, Joe Walsh's "So What" immediately jumped up the income ladder. Musically, it is more distinct and polished, yet loses some of the moodiness and space-rock feel the previous albums contained.

From the goony, folkish-blue "All Night Laundry Mat Blues," to an appreciation of French impressionism with a beautiful adaptation of Maurice Ravel's "Pavane of the Sleeping Beauty," Walsh develops himself in every way possible. Yet he does not make the mistake of trying to do what is beyond his reach. This is the key to his fine musicianship and popularity.

Nine songs form "So What," with side two representing the mellow Walsh. His gentle, crying guitar is heard throughout the album, and the unmistakable voice marks it with true clarity.

"Turn Tow Stone," a song originally done on the first album is reactivated with more emphasis on recording techniques. The somewhat mystical patterns do not appear as readily on "So What" as they do with the other Walsh albums. This marks a new, but subtle approach to his music.

Walsh will certainly not lose any of his flavor or spicing with this more mechanical formula. In his mindful search, he is growing and learning more. Stagnation is obvious and "So What" will add confidence to Walsh's future conceptions and hopes that he continue.

"Souvenirs"
By Dan Fogelberg
Epic Records

By Marilyn Schonfeld
Student Writer

The Illinois-born boy calls it his "L.A. Album." Although recorded at Record Plant Studios in Los Angeles, Fogelberg's album "Souvenirs," recaptures the sounds of Illinois country guitar picking somewhere on a bluff overlooking the Illinois River.

Not strictly country, but a bit of Neil Young, Jackson Browne, and the honesty seen in the lyrics of Joni Mitchell, Fogelberg conveys his romanticism, memories of the past and self-confrontation in his own style.

With some of L.A.'s best musicians, Joe Walsh (producer of the album), Russ Kunkel and Graham Nash, Fogelberg strays away from the sobby love stories and melancholic tunes overwhelming his first album, "Home Free" and incorporates more musical variety and spice in his songs.

It seems as though Fogelberg has put more of himself in this album as well as an extra effort to try many different sounds. From the country-blue-grass sound of "Morning Sky," to touches of hard rock in "The Raven," Fogelberg has clearly set no limits for his good musicianship and excellent voice range and control.

"Souvenirs" is an innovative step and shows more of what Dan Fogelberg has to offer in frank lyrics and musical abilities.

GROCERY SURVEY

This survey was compiled by the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) Consumer Research Committee on February 27 as a service to the people of the Carbondale area.

The list of items represents commonly bought products which are available at each store, and is not intended to reflect a consumers personal shopping list. Also, at the time of this survey certain items were on sale, and in such cases we attempted to report the last regular price before the sale!

Stores were ranked left to right in the order of lowest to highest priced grocery basket.

Summer course to examine topic of student, faculty rights

A new course being offered this summer will explore questions of students' rights, including such topics as last Tuesday's Supreme Court decision concerning the rights of high school students, according to Stephen Wasby, one of the two course instructors.

Wasby, an associate professor of political science, will teach the course with Associate Professor Robert Trager of the School of Journalism.

Last Tuesday, the U.S. Supreme Court, in a 5 to 4 decision, held that school board members may be sued for damages for violating the rights of students. This ruling came shortly after another precedent-setting decision giving high school students the right to a hearing before they can be suspended from school.

Decisions such as these are having drastic effects, not only on primary and secondary education, but indirectly on colleges as well, Wasby explained.

Other topics in the course will include dormitory search and seizure regulations, dual jurisdiction (between municipal and university hearings), faculty rights (including suspension and tenure) and freedom of student publications.

The course is being offered for both graduate and undergraduate credit and may be taken through either the journalism or political science departments. There are no prerequisites, but consent of the instructors is required.

Student awarded prize for biochemistry paper

An SIU student was awarded first place honors for his biochemistry research paper at the second annual chemistry conference held at SIU last Friday and Saturday.

William Y. Carr, a pre-dentistry major, won $75 for his paper, which was co-sponsored by Werner Aechermann, graduate assistant in chemistry and biochemistry, and D.W. Slocum, professor of chemistry and biochemistry.

George E. Vidalakis, a chemistry major at SIU, finished in a three-way tie for second place in the research paper competition. He received $25.

The conference was sponsored by the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry.

SAN FRANCISCANS IN A STAMPING RAGE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One of the latest crazes to get started here is the rubber stamp rage.

It is a crazy-cocky decorative art form that has aficionados stamping envelopes, walls, themselves and you name it, while stores are increasing inventories as fast as they can. One executive said:

"People are using them for letterheads, to make collages, even to produce 'life-like photographs' with dots. Customers go absolutely bonkers once they start stamping."

"The catalogs have thousands of metal and woodcut designs which can be made into stamps for just a few dollars. People start scanning the pages, order one or two and then can't stop; it's like eating peanuts."

Wesley to open sandwich bar

The Break Even Sandwich Bar will open Sunday night in the Wesley Community House at 6:30.

The customers will make their own sandwiches and all food will be sold at cost, said Lyn Muldoon, coordinator of the project.

The Wesley Community House also will be open for several hours on Sunday nights for informal music, games and studying, Muldoon said.

Also this Sunday, the Wesley Community House is sponsoring a trip to Rich's Cave south of Carbondale from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Participants should wear old clothes and meet at Wesley at 1 p.m. for a ride.

Divorced man assumes mother role

By Joy Stille
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—"It seems to me it's as reasonable for a man to have the kids after a divorce as a woman," says Michael McFadden, who for the last three years has taken care of his own three young children.

It was "by a kind of mutual agreement" that he and his former wife, Nancy, decided he should be the parent to raise their two daughters and a son, "only two and still in diapers when I took him."
"We did the most responsible thing we could do in this situation," explained the curly-haired, 35-year-old McFadden. "I was in a better spot economically and, being a writer, I could arrange my schedule to be at home a lot. Besides, I'm very used to doing 10 things at once and I can write and have kids running in and out and it doesn't bother me."

Nevertheless, the easygoing father has learned to organize and take shortcuts in order to manage the house and supervise Tom, 5, Mary, 8, and Kate, 10.

Some of the knowhow he has acquired he has passed along to others in the same situation in a book, "Bachelor Fatherhood," as a result of his own experiences and of interviews with numerous other single fathers and mothers, psychiatrists, child psychologists, divorce lawyers—and children.

"Men are not quite as caught up in some of the traditional housework traps as women. They do things that work rather than what theoretically should be done," he says. "I decided early that the kids were not going to make their beds, so I got them all quilts which they pull up over their beds and that keeps things tidy."

McFadden claims he doesn't make a "big production" out of meals, but he does make sure there are plenty of fruits, raw vegetables and yogurt around for snacks, and refuses to keep sweets in the house.

"When the kids get hungry enough they'll get a piece of celery," he laughs, adding that anyone undertaking to feed children should buy a book on nutrition rather than a cook book. "What he dislikes most is doing the laundry, admits McFadden, dressed casually in tan corduroy jacket and brown and white checked shirt. "I don't mind washing but hate putting it back together, things like matching socks. The kids are getting so if they don't have clothes in the morning they learn to wash them."

His former wife, "a bright lady," who teaches pottery-making and makes and sells pottery, lives nearby and sees the children regularly. In fact, he pointed out, she was with them while their father was in New York.

"The kids pretty well accept the situation," he notes. "In the county I live in (Orange County, Calif.) there'll be as many divorces this year as marriages. But if you live in a small town where it's a stigma, perhaps you should move. The kid shouldn't feel like he's a second class citizen because he has only one parent."

McFadden finds people are shocked by the situation and he gets more reaction, both positive and negative, from women than from men. "Any way you slice it the man comes out as a hero because nobody can understand why a woman would give up custody. Nobody ever thinks a man may want his kids too."

All employees having cleared the initial probationary period are eligible for election. Nominating petitions require the signature of five employees from the same category.

Al Schwegel, Personnel Services, is distributing the petitions and may be contacted for further information. Current members of the council are Leo Dailey, James McKeown, trades and occupations; Rosia Kerrens and John Robinson, services; Joann Marks, and Hilda Born, secretarial; Bill Hertzer and Walter Barwick, custodial; Dave Bunton and Dave Reed, professional; Lee Hester and Bernice Weithorn, general and Joe Elliott and Richard Musgraves, administrative.

Cager excused for game in regional tournament

By Martha Sanford
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Last weekend the women's basketball team scored a big victory by taking second at the state tournament. But the team also scored another victory, this one more on a personal level.

Kay Anderson, who plays guard for the Salukis and is student teaching this semester at Lincoln Junior High in Carbondale, was told early in the season that, due to a university policy, she would not be excused from school to play in the state tournament should the Salukis be able to go.

Then, by a stroke of luck, she was excused for one day to attend the tournament—after the Salukis were seeded second—due to a policy at the school where she is teaching which allows student teachers one day personal leave.

But Billy G. Dixon, Director of Professional Education Experiences, went one farther and granted a personal exception which will permit Kay to attend and play in this week's regional tournament at Illinois State.

"Actually I granted the favor more to Charlotte West, director of women's athletics, than to Kay. I did it out of respect for a fellow faculty member," Dixon said.

Dixon explained that he could see West's position in pointing out that these kind of allowances have been made in the past, even though it is against the policy.

"I want it understood, however, that the policy has not been changed, and exceptions of this kind will not be permitted in the future," said Dixon.

What was Kay's reaction to the news?

"I'm elated," she said, "especially since this is my senior year and my last opportunity to play with the team."

In last weekend's tournament action in the quarter final game against the U of I, the game went into overtime. During the overtime period, Kay scored six points, her total for the game, and the Salukis won 66-56.

James Gang leads cage intramurals

By Rick Korch
Student Writer

With only a week remaining, women's intramural basketball is quickly winding down to the campus championship.

The Monday and Thursday leagues are led by the James Gang and Delta Zeta, respectively, but according to Jean Paratore, coordinator of women's intramurals, only a few of the 17 teams are out of the running.

The James Gang, with five wins and one loss, are just ahead of the Girls, 4-1, and Bowyer Bouncers, 3-1. All of the teams in the Monday league will play seven games.

In the Thursday league, Delta Zeta is undefeated with six wins but they are closely trailed by the Sugar Shots and the Hot Shots, both with only one loss. The nine teams in the Thursday league will each play eight games.

The last night of play is March 13, and any ties will be played off the following weekend. The date for the campus championship has not yet been announced, but it will be played on the weekend of March 15-16.

The girls are also gunning for the most points, since a trophy will be given for that. So far, Judy James, of the hot shooting James Gang, has 67 points, which leads the tournament, but she is closely trailed by Rhonda Garcia with 64.

Paratore says that the championship should be a "really good game. You won't see super basketball but the girls are getting better."

"It's still pretty rough," she mentioned, although most of the contact is caught by the officials. Minor violations, such as traveling or double dribble, are not usually called.

"The girls are out for a good time," Paratore said. "They're not highly skilled, but they have a lot of fun."

Birdies to fly in tournament

A badminton singles tournament will be held March 12 at 6 p.m. in Davies Gym.

All students and faculty are eligible to compete in the single-elimination tourney. Entry forms can be picked up from Room 205 Davies Gym or from Claudia Blackman, badminton supervisor.

The tourney will have a consolation round. Trophies will be awarded to the first place man and woman, and consolation certificates will be given to the two runners-up.

"The tourney is really not that big. Not many women come out, but it hasn't been publicized that well in the past," said Jean Paratore, coordinator of women's intramurals.

Cyclists start

Despite cold winds Sunday, the SIU Cycling Club inaugurated its 1975 racing season with a 20-mile training race around Campus Lake. Dave Casebeer took a solo lead at the beginning of the third lap and barely held on at the end for the victory over his brother Dan. Third was Frank Altschuler, and Ralph Campoverdi was fourth.

The winning team consisted of Casebeer, Gael Boyd, David Nelson and Dave Boe.

Steve Loete, race committee chairman, said the training race and next Sunday's time trial are to prepare the Southern Illinois team for its first official race of the season March 15 in Chattanooga, Tenn.

The SIU club competes in major bicycle races around the country, and will host a race this year April 12.

Practice on for tennis

Optional practices for any woman interested in going out for the women's tennis team are now being held under the direction of tennis coach Judy Auld.

Auld said the optional practices are not mandatory for prospective team members, but are being held for women who wish to get a jump on the season or need some individual help. Official team practice will begin March 31, and an organizational meeting will be held later this month.

The practices are held in Room 208 of the Davies Gym Mondays and Wednesdays from 6 to 7:30 p.m. and Friday from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Auld said she presently has little idea of who will be on this season's team. There is no team limit, however, and she hopes to be able to let each girl play in at least two matches. To achieve that goal, Auld is trying to schedule meets with John A. Logan and Rend Lake College.

"These smaller schools will give the less experienced and less skilled girls the chance to compete more on their own level," said Auld.

Four dates are presently on the spring schedule, two at home and two away. April 12 will be the team's first meet, at home against Western Illinois, followed on April 14 with a home meet against Southeast Missouri State.

April 25-26 the team will play SEMO there, and May 3 is the Western Invitational.

SIU trainer to join Met team

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

They say you can't please everybody all the time.

That would mean that somewhere lives a person who isn't happy with Larry Mayol as a trainer.

It's not a member of any Saluki athletic teams. The unanimous feeling in the Saluki training rooms is that the student trainer is speeding down the road to quick success.

"He's done a great job," Saluki trainer Dr. Robert Spackman praised Wednesday. "Everybody is impressed with Larry. He's a better trainer than many people I know working in bigger jobs."

Actually, Mayol isn't that far from "the bigtime." Friday, he will depart by car for St. Petersburg, Fla., to join the New York Mets' baseball spring training camp. In his car will be a variety of equipment to be used to test the Met minor and major leaguers for strength and flexibility.

"I use the same approach as Doc Spackman," the 23-year-old health education graduate student remarked Wednesday, as he took a breather from his parttime job as women's trainer.

"I try to prevent rather than treat injuries by helping the players get stronger and more flexible to avoid getting hurt," he said. "That way, the individual gets more enjoyment out of the sport, and so do I."

The handsome, well-built graduate student has learned all he knows under the tutelage of Spackman, starting a little over three years ago. He enrolled in one of the head trainer's classes, entitled, "Care and Prevention of Athletic Injuries."

"I got interested and asked Doc Spackman if he could use any help in the training room that spring, and he said he could," Mayol recalled. All his help had graduated by then, so there was just me, Doc and Ed Dirks, the assistant trainer.

"I was in the position of having to learn quickly, which was rather difficult," he said. "I realized, though, that I was in a good position."

He learned extremely quickly—which is one of the first things SIU athletes will point out about him. By this spring, the women were interested in signing him as their first trainer.

He began Jan. 23 and started ordering supplies from what money could be extracted from the budget. He then split his time between Davies Gym and helping the men's basketball team, which left no time for anything else.

Now, he's set to embark on the next adventure with the Mets—a job which resulted from Spackman's many contacts. Mayol started with the Mets organization last summer, working three months with the Class A club in Batavia, N.Y.

"Last spring, I told Doc that I was interested in working in semipro ball," Mayol said. "He checked things out and found out about the opening in Batavia. We used the same exercises there that we used here, and I didn't have any pitchers miss a starting turn."

That job lasted three months, then the Mets offered him the position at their Double-A club in Jackson, Miss., where he will report when spring camp breaks about April 15.

After that term of duty, it's a wait-see situation, as Mayol hopes to make some contacts that may present other openings in the sports world. While at Jackson, he hopes to pass the National Athletics Trainer's Association (NATA) exam, which would open several more doors for him.

With Mayol at Jackson figures to be former Saluki shortstop Stan Mann, who the Saluki student trainer already has helped.

"I worked with Stan on his shoulder after an operation last year," he said. "He had to have the biceps tendon reattached, but it was nothing major."

Mann is not the first Met satisfied with Mayol. According to Spackman, it spreads much further.

"The Mets are really impressed with Larry," Spackman said, sizing up his portage. "They're anxious for him to get down there, and they'll probably want to keep him in their organization. He'll really help."

Just ask any Saluki athlete.

Runners fare well

Despite 20-degree temperatures and a 10-mile-an-hour wind, the Southern Illinois Road Runners braved the elements last Sunday to compete in the Third Olympiad Marathon in St. Louis.

The Road Runners had one winner and several other runners who placed in four different divisions, all run on a 26.22-mile course.

Carolyn Gibbard took honors in the women's division, running the course in 3:30:28. One second behind her in second was Marilyn Good.

In the men's master class, 40 years and over, Ron Knowlton finished second in 2:48:40, for an average of 6:26 a mile. Larry Good finished in sixth, Ken Ackerman, seventh, Frank Gibbard 12th, and Larry Phillips 98th in the open class.

Bob Busby, of Warrensburg, Mo., was the overall winner in the meet that had approximately 160 participants.

Can one priest make a difference?

In Italy, in the 1800's a poor priest met a boy of the streets. At that time there were thousands of such boys in Turin... hungry, homeless and without hope.

But what could one priest do? Without money. Without support. Without even a building to house them.

But Father John Bosco did make a difference. He founded the first community that was dedicated primarily to youth. With a program of play, learn and pray he brought the boys from the streets back to God and gave them a means of earning their living. From such humble beginnings a movement began that now reaches around the world... a movement that has touched the lives of millions of youngsters — the children of St. John Bosco.

Today over 22,000 Salesians carry on his work in 73 countries. A family of community-minded men who help to build a better world by preparing young boys to be good citizens for both God and country. Salesians serve as teachers, coaches, counselors, parish priests and missionaries. You see, one priest can make a big difference.

Is red-letter day here for Salukis?

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

With a little luck, today could be a red-letter day for Saluki basketball.

Not only is the NCAA due to send out its invitations at 8:30 a.m. CDT, but the NIT is free to send out its first notices two hours later.

The NIT, which plans to announce most of its selections Sunday after regular season-ending play this weekend, may send word to a few teams as early as 11:30 a.m. New York time, or 10:30 a.m. CDT today.

Apparently, the Salukis have reason to be hopeful.

"Southern Illinois is definitely under serious consideration," NIT selection committee chairman Pete Carlesimo said Wednesday afternoon. "We are very conscious of Southern Illinois. We hope to make some announcements Thursday morning, but we will make many of our selections on Sunday following the weekend play."

The eight-man selection committee, chaired by the Fordham University athletic director, has held three meetings thus far concerning the 16-team field. Today's meeting will be followed by a fifth and final one this weekend.

"We have already co-ordinated what we'll do Thursday," Carlesimo said. "I'm not at liberty to say if Southern Illinois will be invited. For us to contact anybody before 11:30 New York time would not be legal."

"We are looking at records, schedules and, certainly, drawing power," he explained. "Southern has a great background tradition, too."

Is Saluki All-America center Joe C. Meriweather the type of "drawing power" the committee is searching for?

"Any time you have an outstanding player, it makes a difference," Carlesimo remarked. "When you go back to Southern's college division team when they had Walt Frazier, that's an example."

Meriweather's drawing power should be heightened, if anything, by tour-namment time. The 6-foot-11 senior will be named to The Sporting News' second team All-America squad, a level he figures to attain on most post-season honor squads.

Final team statistics released Wednesday showed Meriweather with a team-leading 11.4 rebounds per game, 62 per cent shooting and 20.4 scoring average. Mike Glenn was second in two of those categories, firing at a .614 clip, while averaging 16.2 points per game.

Corky Abrams just missed double figures scoring with a 9.7 mark, while Tim Ricci and Perry Hines scored 8.2 and 8.0, respectively.

If the Salukis are invited to post-season play, two starters will need to finish mending from late-season injuries first. Hines pulled a leg muscle in the next-to-last game against Evansville, and Ricci suffered a slight foot injury in Monday's finale.

Creighton's total of 47 points in that final contest, by the way, was the lowest against the Salukis in seven years. The Dogs stopped Texas 58-37 in the early part of the 1969 season to top the latest effort.

For the season, the Salukis maintained a 66.4 defensive average, prompting coach Paul Lambert to praise. "We're proud of that defense because we have achieved that average without holding the ball."

The team will resume practice today in hopes of a tourney bid (if they haven't already received one by then).

The NIT will hold first round action March 15-16 at Madison Square Garden, followed by the quarterfinals March 18 and 20. The semifinals and championship are slated for March 22-23.

The NCAA tourney also is set to begin March 15-16.

Ruggers return home

With spring in the air, the organized madness of SIU Rugby has returned.

The Ruggers, with virtually everyone from last semester's 8-4-1-squad, will open their March 8 at Evansville, followed by a three-game homestand through March and April.

Ed Willi, club president, said the outlook for the coming season is bright, and the team should finish with as good, or better record than last semester's.

Last time to qualify for NCAA

Swimmers head south for independent meet

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The Mardi Gras is over and there aren't thousands of people jamming into the French Quarter for a Super Bowl game, nevertheless, the SIU swimming team has gone to New Orleans.

Coach Bob Steele and his Salukis left Carbondale Tuesday and drove down to the Gulf Coast city for the National Independent Championships being held Friday through Sunday.

Eighteen teams will compete, including Miami (Fla.), Florida State, South Carolina, Tulane and Air Force. The meet is being staged at Tulane University.

The meet will be run under NCAA rules, meaning that each team can have a maximum of 18 performers. SIU is taking only 12 swimmers.

"We're not going to take the divers," Steele said, explaining the reason for such a small team. "We're only taking those people I think can score some points. I think we can possibly win the swimming portion of the meet, but South Carolina, the Air Force and Miami will pick up most of the diving points."

Steele is not too concerned about placing high in the meet, but rather, his goal is "to qualify guys who haven't qualified for the NCAA."

Junior sensation Jorge Delgado, Dave Swenson and Mike Salerno have already qualified in their share of events, but Steele says some more guys should qualify.

"Paul Schultz and Steve Jack should break the school records and meet the NCAA standards in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes," Steele predicted. "I'll be disappointed if the team doesn't break three school records in the relays and seven more in individual events."

Steele is also looking for Dave Boyd, Rick Fox and Tony Wickham to qualify in the 200-yard freestyle, Jamie Powell in the 100-backstroke and Dennis Roberts in the 100-freestyle.

In order to help the swimmers to prepare for their last chance at qualifying for the NCAA championships to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, March 27-29, Steele has cut the swimmers' daily yardage to 2,000 a day. Delgado, Swenson and Salerno still swim 11,000 yards per day because this meet is not that important for them.

With the national meet creeping up on them, Steele says. "We're right where we want to be at this point. The guys who still have to make the NCAA times have really been looking sharp in practice and they feel sharp in the water."

Besides breaking records easily as smashing a peice of China on the floor, Delgado and Swenson have also made some waves in the national rankings.

According to the latest statistics published by the College Swimming Coaches Association, Delgado has the highest ranking on the team for one event. He's no. 2 in the country in the 200-yard butterfly. Robin Backhaus of Washington leads Delgado and the nation with a time of 1:56.20. Delgado's time is 1:50.38.

In the 200-yard freestyle, Delgado ranks seventh in the nation, but his time of 1:41.0 is only 1.4 seconds off the leader, John Naber, 1:39.6, of USC.

Delgado also claims a 15 ranking in the 500-yard freestyle. Teammate Swenson is seventh in the nation in the same event with a 4:35.33 clocking. In the 1000-yard freestyle, an event not swam at the NCAA championships, Swenson has the fifth best time in the U.S. as a team.

As a team, SIU broke into the top 10 in the 400-yard medley relay with a time of 3:31.4, good enough for the tenth spot. USC leads the nation in the relay with a time of 3:23.65.
