More funds sought for U.S. defense

WASHINGTON - AP
Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger asked Wednesday for a $22.6 billion-surge in the Pentagon's budget to cover a series of new weapons, including a new form of nerve gas, because "the United States cannot allow the military balance to swing further in favor of the Soviets." Weinberger had said Tuesday that "we've fallen dangerously far behind in a number of vital areas," and that "something has got to be done about this as quickly as we can." The Senate Armed Services Committee has asked for increased defense spending, noting that the Reagan administration has proposed a long-term and costly buildup of the nation's military strength. The administration's fiscal 1983 budget request calls for spending $3 billion on the development next year of new weapons, including two new conventional and strategic military programs.

Thompson asks for tight budget

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - Gov. James R. Thompson proposed a "bold, tight, hold fast" $41.9 billion budget Wednesday, which trims medical welfare, temporarily hicks a business machinery sales tax, delays other tax relief - and may well face more chopping. The already recession-scared proposal might have to be backed by up to $600 million more if the Reagan administration's federal budget cuts it wants, said Thompson's budget director. And Thompson told legislators Wednesday that another $200 million conceivably might have to be added if the recession eats further into state revenues.

By Mike Anton Staff Writer

SIU and the state's other universities are expected Thursday to introduce legislation for passage of the $128 billion budget for fiscal 1983. The Illinois Board of Higher Education estimates that SIU's share of the $123 billion requested by Gov. James R. Thompson last month.

However, Chancellor Kenneth Mandeville said the move is "traditional" among the state's universities, adding that the possibility of passing such a measure will be discussed at that time.

The IBHE reluctantly approved a plan Tuesday to cut higher education budgets statewide to meet Thompson's recommended level of funding for fiscal 1983. Thompson's proposal would increase general revenue funding to higher education by $60 million next year, only $10 million more than the $50 million requested by the IBHE in January. It is the IBHE's $128 billion budget "symbolizes the best interest of the people's needs," he added. But he added that because of the state's serious financial condition, the budget would have to be made elsewhere in state government. Mandeville said an additional $5 billion in education would get more funds.

3 universities cut off admittance

SIU-C accepting freshman applications

By Randy Rogunski Staff Writer

While some state schools are closing their doors to prospective four-year students, the number of freshman applications at SIU-C is down from last year, according to Jerome Pfaff, associate director for admissions.

Northern Illinois University, Eastern Illinois University and Illinois State University are no longer accepting freshman applications for next year, because potential students, spurred by the recession, have streamed to the universities in unexpectedly large numbers.

SIU-C, however, will continue to accept applications until it is unable to accommodate the costs, parents in Northern Illinois may be reluctant to send their children, according to Pfaff.

As of Wednesday, applications at SIU-C were down by about 200 from the same period last year, Pfaff said. SIU-C has received about 6,100 freshman applications for next year. Although the University doesn't normally cut off applications until about August, Pfaff said he isn't sure why SIU-C is receiving fewer applications than last year.

"It's something that has baffled me for the last couple of weeks," Pfaff said.

Pfaff said that the location of SIU-C may be one reason for the lower number of applications. Faced with skyrocketing travel costs, parents in Northern Illinois may be reluctant to send their children, according to Pfaff.

Pfaff said the other universities may have cut off freshman applications in part, to follow last year's suggestion from the Illinois Board of Higher Education to cut enrollments. Bernie Warren, IBHE director of governmental relations, said all three schools were advised that dropping enrollments is one way to stretch state dollars.

In line with the IBHE policy, EIU stopped accepting freshman applications Feb. 18 after receiving 1,775 applications, about 200 fewer than last year's cut off. The school's dean of student services said the school has not closed its freshmen applications since 1972.

Pfaff said he expects SIU-C to accept some additional students who are denied admission to other schools. He said the University will accept applications as long as it can accommodate those students and meet housing and classroom facilities.
El Salvadoran leader extends amnesty offer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Salvadorian leader Jose Napoleon Duarte said Wednesday he is extending his offer of amnesty to certain guerrillas and has ordered the arrest of a retired major who called on the military to take over the government.

Gunnmen fired six shots at the U.S. Embassy from a speeding car, but no one was injured and Marine guards did not return fire, an embassy spokesman reported. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

It was the first reported attack on the embassy since the Reagan administration announced a truce of military and guerrilla fighting and the provision of $260 million in aid to Salvadoran security forces to deal with the guerrilla insurgency.

In an interview with The Associated Press, renewed this phase of the effort to end the civil war, economic aid, vowed he would not tolerate foreign military intervention in the civil crisis.

WASHINGTON (AP)— AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland offered Congress some of the harshest criticism of the Reagan administration's economic recovery proposals during a meeting with Democratic congressmen to ask whether he is out of step with the nation's million blue-collar workers.

"The budget cuts, tax cuts, regulatory cuts and money supply cuts add up to more unemployment," Kirkland told the House Budget Committee. "We do not believe that the Reagan administration has been too generous in helping the poor, the disadvantaged, the unemployed," he said, adding, "We believe the administration's proposal is too generous in supporting the wealthy and the powerful."

In Nicaragua, President B. Ortega, the country's communist leader, said he was not surprised by this individual attack on President Reagan's proposals, but I wonder whether the Reagan plan for the rank and file members of your union in doing business is in keeping with the administration's thinking on this issue.

Rep. W.G. Hufner, D-N.C., asked, "Are we really getting an overall view of what the blue-collar worker is thinking out there?"

Kirkland replied that the AFL-CIO surveyed the opinions of rank-and-file workers democratically, through local union meetings and conventions.

As an AFL-CIO president addressed the budget panel, four economists debated the Reagan plan before the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

The administration is asking Congress to cut about $5 billion from the budget for 1982 and deeper cuts in the future. It also seeks passage of two major programs: a 20 percent cut in fiscal 1982 and deeper cuts in fiscal 1983. The Reagan administration has added an additional $1 billion for 1982 and deeper cuts in fiscal 1983. The Senate has added the additional $2 billion for 1982 and deeper cuts in the future. It also seeks passage of two major programs: a 20 percent cut in fiscal 1982 and deeper cuts in fiscal 1983.

The Reagan budget passed first test.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Agriculture Committee today voted overwhelmingly to approve an increase in dairy price supports a victory for President Reagan in the first congressional test of his budget proposals.

The committee approved the proposal by a 14-2 vote, with Senator John Tower, R-N.C., voting present, on the motion to approve a Democratic proposal to organize 20 standing committees.

Two of the Senate's 30 Democrats were absent from the base, and two of the 29 Republicans voted present on the motion to approve a Democratic proposal to organize 20 standing committees. Of the Senate's 30 Democrats, 28 were voting present on the motion to approve a Democratic proposal to organize 20 standing committees. Opposition to student aid cuts to be discussed at hearing

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

A congressional hearing scheduled for Friday at the Student Center is intended to drum up opposition to the Reagan administration’s cutback proposals for student financial aid programs, said U.S. Rep. Paul Simon of the Illinois 25th District.

“We have to let people know that what we’re embarked on is a serious change in national policy that could have an adverse effect,” the Democratic Representative from Carbondale said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Center to dispose used oil

Oil recycling program begins

By Bill Turley
Staff Writer

More harmful environmental effects have come from people changing their motor oil at home and then dumping it than from all the oil tanker spills in the ocean during a year, according to John Meister, director of pollution control center.

With that in mind, an oil recycling program has been established on campus by the center to properly dispose of used motor oil, Meister said.

“Used oil is already concentrated at the campus travel service,” he said. “There the 350 University vehicles receive oil changes, leaving almost 90,000 gallons of motor oil a year to be disposed of.”

Meister said an agreement has been worked out with the travel service for them to set up a central oil disposal container to store and then sell the used oil to an oil scavenger company, which recycles oil to be put back on the market.

In addition to the pollution control center, there has been a report of a 25-gallon storage tank next to the Physical Plant smokestack, where used motor oil can be deposited for recycling, Meister said.

He said oil doesn’t break down and dissolve unless heated to extreme temperatures not reached in a natural environment. Therefore, dumping or burning oil can cause environmental damage.

Before the start of the oil recycling program people have burned oil down on dusty driveways and roads or in ponds to control mosquitoes or just burn it as fuel, Meister said.

“The’s just not that much to squeeze out of the trucks,” Shaw said.

He proposed a plan to the legislature expected to be proposed Thursday, most university systems statewide are proposing to raise the 10 percent tuition increase recommended by the IBHE as one way of making up for funding cuts by the governor.

Shaw still considers a 13 percent increase at the March meeting of the Board of Trustees, which oversees Northern Illinois University, and Sangamon State University, which has requested a 14 percent tuition hike.

In the list of members of the University’s task force on recruitment and retention released by the President’s Office Tuesday, George C. Brown, director of the University Honors Program, was incorrectly identified. John J. Cody, incorrectly identified as the dean of the College of Science, is a professor of guidance and educational psychology.

Also, a story in Tuesday’s Daily Egyptian incorrectly reported that Central Illinois Public Service Company burns 50 million tons of coal a year. CHPS uses only 39,000 tons of non Illinois coal a year.

I am shocked. As predictable as spring is the old argument about an increase in the fees. In January, the student newspaper, The Daily Egyptian, published an editorial, entitled "Method or Overindulgence!" by Mrs. Lutz of the Student Government Association. The Student Body had just voted in favor of increasing fees. As the editorials section of the paper already says, "only one argument was presented. Arming people is goal of mobile-home militia

By Peter Arnett
AP Special Correspondent

TIGERTON, Wis. (AP) - Meet the Posse, 1980s style.

As in the old days, they come from the local community but now they ride pickup trucks, not horses. They assemble automatic rifles in gun racks and hide .45s in their pockets in place of saddle-holstered Winchesters or six guns at their hips. Instead of assembling in saloons, they gather at private mobile home parks.

But they share something with the posse of the West — a willingness to rise against the bad guys. The problem is, their definition of bad guy doesn't usually include the sheriff.

They call themselves the Posse Comitatus, literally, Power of the County in rural Wisconsin where they are most numerous, they are in constant conflict with the law.

Taking root in the past decade in the poor scrublands of northern Wisconsin, the organization is trying to spread its philosophy of "power to the people" by tax revolt and other activities that go against state and local regulations. It is reaching beyond the farmers to a wider audience in the discontented middle class.

Jack Anderson, a reporter for the West Bend (Wis.) News, describes Posse members as "deadly, cold-blooded, serious, but men of integrity. They want to arm the people to buck what they see as a national, monetary, and tax and court conspiracy."

State officials are less sympathetic. Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., has referred to the posse as "an extremist group with stormtrooper fantasies."

People interviewed in nearby Tigerton Dells expressed concern. Some suggested that large supplies of automatic weapons were buried in the woods and that a system of underground courts is reaching beyond the local community but not into the law.

"We are losing three police officers a day in Wisconsin. Both men have spent many hours in legal and court controversy," Wickstrom, a reporter for the Riot Press today that the militia is reaching beyond the state but not into the law.

The group's leaders, who say they are less concerned about speaking out now that a case concerning administration of order in Washington, openly identify with hate groups.

"The KKK and the Minutemen know what we are talking about," said James Wickstrom, who describes himself as "the new national director of the organization of Minutemen of America."

Wickstrom said that while his group was "psychologically blended" with such other groups, there were no plans to consolidate.

He said the Posse has held joint paramilitary training in the Sierra Nevada mountains of California with the Klan and the Minutemen, a group with a philosophy of "peaceful resistance" to federal policies.

Membership numbers are not known, but leaders claim to have cells in every state but Hawaii, with up to 2,000 members in 13 Wisconsin counties. Wickstrom received 16,000 votes last year in a run for a U.S. Senate seat from Wisconsin as an independent with a philosophy that the government is too big.

Posse Comitatus claims legitimacy from common law that authorized sheriffs to tie up personal assets even though courts have ruled the liens have no legal basis.

Despite the rulings, court hearings are generally required to sort out the claims. "We, as public officials, should not have to tolerate this kind of intimidation," state Rep. Edward McClain said.

The Posse has also founded the "Life Science Church." Some donate their land, their personal property, even their guns at their church. Declaring themselves "ministers" and "members" of this church, they write off donations as tax-deductible religious contributions.

Beyond these confrontations are the wider aspirations of the posse as detailed by Wickstrom, a stocky 38.

"We are trying to have police officers a day in the cities. America is at war," he said in his view the Posse is the rebirth of the militia prior to the Revolutionary War, and the enemy includes police SWAT teams and "the international banking houses of Jewry."

Posse member Gary Thomas, 26, was bolded up in a mobile home in Tigerton with his newly wed wife and half a dozen guns. An American flag flew upside down from a pole "to show how distressed the country is," he said.

Up the road at Tigerton Dells was a larger concentration of mobile homes on part of 840 acres of forest land given the Life Science Church by Posse member Donald Minnieeshe. The area is posted with threatening signs.

Survivalism: A new way of life?

Third of a four-part series

A fast at a fast food restaurant near Oshkosh.

With him was Thomas Stockweiler, the Posse's state chairman, who wore a tin star bearing the words "Sheriff's Posse Comitatus" on his left pocket of his blue leisure suit.

Both men have spent many hours in legal and court controversy with authority. Stockweiler was convicted of assaulting an Internal Revenue Service agent named Fred Chicken in 1974 and jailed for 90 days.

These sometimes occur when Posse members resist orders to move their illegally parked mobile homes from public land or are faced with losing their farms because of unpaid taxes.

Wickstrom and a score or more other members in paramilitary garb sometimes arrive with loaded semi-automatic weapons to defy the peace officers. The law has so far backed off.

Posse Comitatus members have also harassed local officials with blizzards of common law liens, some amounting to millions of dollars, that tie up personal assets even though courts have ruled the liens have no legal bases.

Enjoy the Vasqueness of nature this Spring.

Collins 'Face Value' is rather shallow, simple

By Alan Scully
Staff Writer

"Face Value," the title of Phil Collins' solo album, aptly describes the general feel of the music on the record. The album's sound is simple and rather superficial. What you hear on the first listening is what you get.

While that is a stark contrast with the arty and intricate style of Collins' band, Genesis, it does mesh with the belief many fans have that Genesis has not been as good since Collins replaced Peter Gabriel in the band's line-up. Based on the average performances on solo albums, it appears the sum of Genesis is better than its parts.

Still, there are some pleasant moments to Collins' album, but most of these moments sound like imitations of other artists. When Collins makes prominent use of Earth Wind and Fire's horn section on four songs, the music sounds more like Earth Wind and Fire than Genesis. Prime examples of this sound are "Behind The Lines," which when aided by the horns, has a Motown feel, and the Jackson 5's "I Want You Back," and "Thunder and Lightening," which finds Collins using the "yeah" and "you" calls often used to introduce disco songs.

The songs that appear to sound more like Collins are basically quiet, middle-of-the-road ballads. Unfortunately, Collins' use of instruments such as piano and strings are not strong enough to give the music a life of its own. That weakness leaves the songs dependent on the lyrics to give them a catchy sound.

This is where Collins makes strike two because the lyrics are of the nondescript love song variety which can't add anything to his songs. Two boring songs that reflect this limp sound are "This Must Be Love" and "If Leaving Me Is Easy."

Collins also lends some credibility to the feeling that he is inferior as a writer and musician to Gabriel on "In the Air Tonight." The song uses the tribal drum sound Gabriel had while that Collins' use of a sitar sound more like Earth Wind and Fire's "Horizon." This is where Collins makes strike three because the lyrics are of the nondescript love song variety which can't add anything to his songs.

It seems obvious that the sound on "Face Value" isn't meant to approximate Genesis' style. Collins at least deserves credit for trying something different. Maybe next time out he will match different that something above average in quality. (Album courtesy of Plaza Records.)

Sherbs crack U.S. market with more than good sound

By Randy Lynch
WIDB Music Director

The American music scene is slowly opening up to include more foreign bands, and a lot of folks from Australia are trying to cash in on the bigger market. Also, the widespread success of AC/DC has made it easier for other Aussies like Angel City, Mi-Sex and Split Enz to be noticed.

The latest contestants from "down under" are Sherbs, and as the title to their debut album "The Skill" would suggest, Sherbs have no intentions to ride on anyone's coattails.

Sherbs may be a new band, but its members are certainly no musical novices. In fact, Sherbs used to record under the name Sherbert in their native country. While they were strictly a domestic band, Sherbert did work its way up to status as the top pop group in Australia. Success notwithstanding, Sherbert's members were musically dissatisfied, so they decided to drop out for awhile.

Having now re-grouped as Sherbs, the band has taken a decidedly rockier approach. The band's sound isn't totally original, it borrows from other bands, but brings a cross-section of influences that it manages to put together in a distinctive sound.

For characterization's sake, Sherbs could be called a cross between Kool & The Gang and Genesis. Garth Porter's keyboards define the melodies.

The Skill, Sherbs, Atco Records, Reviewer's Rating: 2½ stars (4 stars tops).

If it can be assumed that the Talking Heads have brought Afro-funk rhythms back into the mainstream of American music, then it can also be said that "My Life in the Bush of Ghosts" takes the African beat sound to the furthest extremes it has yet reached.

The long awaited collaboration of Heads leader David Byrne and producer Brian Eno is an avant-garde landmark. It's not for everyone, but "My Life..." is one of the most innovative and creative mixes of sound and recording technique to come along in quite a while. All of the credit must go to the vivid imaginations and courage of Byrne and Eno.

Layering its synthesizer, guitar, percussion and vocal sounds thickly on the vinyl, "My Life..." is a richly textured aural panorama. It's Byrne and Eno's adventure into uncharted musical territory, kind of like Stanley and Livingston venturing into the recording studio and meeting a New Wave sound laced with Eno's immortal avant-gardism.

One need look no further than the cover to see that this album is experimental, to say the least. The oddity is not lost on the listener, and it is replaced on "My Life..." by a cavalcade of pre-recorded sounds, including radio talk shows and evangelists, a Lebanese mountain singer (Dunya Yunis), an Egyptian pop singer (Samia Tawfik), an exorcism ceremony and various sound effects and animal noises. In fact, the estate of the late evangelist Kathryn Kuhlman denied permission for her sermons to be used.

Run-of-the-mill rhythm instruments are reportedly backed up by the banging of ashtrays, trash cans, pipes, lamp shades, pieces of flooring, etc. However, remarkably, all of this seemingly incoherent nonsense is formed and molded by Byrne and Eno into good some say great music.

With backing from a variety of percussionists and bassists, including fellow Heads Chris Frantz and Busta Jones, Byrne and Eno's sound is dominated by jerky, syncopated rhythms which work best when the vocals miraculously fit the instrumentation.

The last two cuts on side one, "Help Me Somebody" and "The Jezebel Spirit," work the best. "Help Me Somebody" features a tight use of congas, drums and bass woven around a breathless fire and brimstone sermon.

Waylon's 'Leather and Lace' is disappointing hodgepodge

By Rod Smith
Entertainment Editor

Although "Urban Cowboy," last year's John Travolta movie about a blue-collar cowboy who has a girl, loses his girl, and gets his girl back while a juke box listing of country music twangs in the background, is credited with starting a "country movement" across America, a 1976 LP titled, "The Outlaws," was the real introduction to country music. "The Outlaws" was an experimental sampler album of songs from Waylon Jennings, Jessi Colter (his wife), Willie Nelson and Tompall Glaser, a group of Nashville outcasts who moved to Texas, that later became the biggest selling country album of all time.

That release showed that country music could have a good tune, meaningful lyrics, slick production and didn't a twangy guitar and yodeling vocals. As a result, Waylon and Willie became "overnight" superstars although they had been recording since the early '60s. Since then, Willie has become a saint in some eyes, a spiritual wise man in blue jeans and bandana, while Waylon has seen his initial success deteriorate into mere cover versions of other artists' songs and generally haphazard, weak albums. Unfortunately, Jennings' latest release, "Leather and Lace," is much the same—a hodgepodge of previously recorded songs that are remixed with vocals from Colter, a woman who has more good looks than talent. Colter, whose claim to fame is "I'm Not Lisa," a syrupy, shrill tune that is listenable about once a year, does add some nice touches here. Especially in duets with her husband. She wrote half of the album's 10 cuts, including "Ain't The One," a rocked-out duet that is the album's best tune. While the duets are a tasteful use of contrasting vocal styles, her solos in "Home Sweet Home" and "Believe You Can" are a return to the mellow, uninspiring drivel she has always produced.

As for Waylon, well, he's in a rut. Ever since "Ol' Waylon," his 1977 album that included marvelous songs like "Luckenbach, Texas" and "Lucille," Jennings has succeeded in singing oldies and ever producing his LPs. Neil Young, Elvis Presley, Buddy Holly and Chuck Berry stand...

Program offers series of outdoor challenges

By Pam Petrow
Staff Writer

The last in a series of wilderness challenges for SIUC students and employees will be offered by the Student Outdoor Adventure Recreation program in March and April, according to Clem Dabrowski, coordinator of the program.

The programs, which began last month, are designed to teach participants outdoor skills such as backpacking, canoeing, camping, rappelling, cross-country skiing and rock climbing.

Most of the programs are at the Touch of Nature Environmental Center. The activities offered in March and April are the final three of an eight-part program plan.

No experience is needed to enter one of the programs, Dabrowski said.

"A lot of our programs are geared towards beginners," she said.

SOAR stresses environmental protection in its programs. On outings, groups practice "low-impact camping," in which they try not to leave any traces they were in the area.

"All refuse is cleaned up when the group leaves an area," Dabrowski said.

An Outdoor Adventure Weekend at Touch of Nature Friday through Sunday will include an obstacle course: a night hike, camp, rappel and a canoe trip. Dabrowski said the cost of the program is $15.

During spring break, from March 15 to March 20, another group will take a three-day hiking trip to Missouri's Taum Sauk Trail. They will also spend three days canoeing on the Black River. The trip has already been filled, Dabrowski said.

The cost of the program is $65. All program fees include the cost of transportation, first aid supplies and the rental of ropes, canoes and other equipment. Backpacks and sleeping bags are not covered by the fee. Dabrowski said.

Backpacks can be rented at the Base Camp at the Recreation Center for $1 a day and sleeping bags are 50 cents a day. Both items can be reserved in advance.

Food is included in the cost of all trips of more than three days.

A second Outdoor Adventure Weekend will be offered April 3-5. The activities are for women only and will include rock climbing, map and compass reading, caving and rappelling. The instructors all will be women, Dabrowski said.

Before a program begins, the members meet to discuss the schedule and plan meals.

SOAR's five earlier programs featured cross-country skiing, caving and winter backpacking at the Touch of Nature Center and Giant City Park.

Campus vans are used to transport the groups to and from program sites. The vans pick up and drop off people at the Recreation Center.

Dabrowski recommends the SOAR programs for anyone who is "willing to try something new."
Jones itching to get relief help

By David Boone Staff Writer

SIU-C baseball Coach Ithy Jones has been looking for relief the past couple of years. He's known the diagnosis: he just had trouble getting the prescription filled.

"The game's changed on the college level as well as in the pros," Jones said. "You've got to have a reliever to go out there an inning or two.

As the 1981 season approaches, Jones, along with new assistant Coach Jerry Green, who has worked with the pitchers and catchers, has been blessed by unseasonably warm weather that has allowed SIU-C pitchers to get more pre-season work than in past years. During that time, they've also been plotting a relief strategy.

"We just got to have relief pitching," Jones stressed. "The last two years we haven't had what we thought was a reliever who could go out and stop people.

But the balmy February weather has given the Salukis time for experimentation.

"We've spent a lot of time out on the baseball field," Jones said. "It's given our pitchers for the first time in a couple of years a chance to throw off the dirt mound before our spring trip. Every pitcher will have had an opportunity to make an appearance and we've had some good prospect about what our pitchers can do.

Although the Salukis don't have a Bruce Sutter, Jones is hopeful that he's found an answer in the form of one of last season's starters, senior Paul Evans. The 6-3 righthander from Granite City has a three-year record of 13-5 for the Salukis, is a sophomore, he was 7-0 and had an eye-popping 0.84 earned-run average.

"We're trying to work him into a reliever," Jones said. "We talked to him about it and that's the way we've worked him in practice. Where other people throw six or seven innings on their day to pitch, Paul may throw one or two in a row for an inning or two.

Jones said that Evans' maturity and ability to keep his pose are his strong points. He struck out 17 while walking nine last season.

"So often, people think of the bullpen as a place for inferior pitchers," Jones said. "Your bullpen is for your superior pitchers. They only get in during crucial situations. You don't put a person in the bullpen if he doesn't have good composure.

Junior left-hander Robby Clark is another 1980 starter who may view the game from the bullpen more often in 1981. Clark started seven games and completed five of them last season. Although he walked more batters (17) than he struck out (16), he still had a 3.96 ERA.

The loss of would-be reliever Bob Schroeder, meanwhile, didn't do wonders for the Salukis' starting rotation. Schroeder, who signed a contract with the Milwaukee Brewers after last season, was 3-4 for three seasons, striking out 116 and walking 85.

"It certainly helps our pitching," Jones said. "You turn on the TV and see Dave Stieb pitching in the All-Star Game or watch player introductions at the World Series and see young George Vuckovich.

"It keeps our school's name in the limelight because we get the reputation of being able to take ballplayers who weren't high draft choices out of high school and still give them the chance to play pro ball later on.

The regular starting rotation may be altered as the season goes on, but prior to the post placement of Thursday's doubleheader at Austin Peay, senior righthander Klem Klump was scheduled to start the first game and sophomore left-hander Rick Wysocki was to go in game two. Klump is another Saluki who has made a transition—from first base to the mound.

Klump has made good progress," Jones said. "He's got a good live fastball and a good breaking slider. It looks like he'll be an asset to our staff.

Wysocki had control problems last year, walking 25 while striking out 19. Jones feels Wysocki's biggest needs are improvement of his breaking pitch and keeping the ball down consistently.

Senior righthander Jerry Halstead, who finished all three games he started last season en route to a 4-2 record, is still trying to bounce back from a bout with the flu several weeks ago, but should be in the rotation also Chris Wicks; a junior righthander from Champaign, is another who must overcome physical ailments.

"His problem last year was that he'd pitch a game and then be sore for three weeks," Jones said of Wicks. "We'll try to work him a little harder this year, but we hope he won't get stiff again.

Other pitchers who should start at one time or another this year include Clark, senior Harold Brown, junior Barry Nellorn, sophomore Tom Caulfield and freshman Steve Nelsen. Caulfield, Clark and Wysocki are the only lefthanders on the team, but that doesn't concern Jones at this point.

"Actually, three lefties are more than most people have. That's more than the Cardinals have right now," Jones said with a laugh. "Good pitchers are all we're looking for, left, right, or down the middle.

Quids beaten twice in tournament

By Keith Bennett Student Writer

The Quids, SIU-C's wheelchair basketball team, placed fourth in the fifth annual Intercolligate Wheelchair Basketball Championship last weekend at Southwest State University in Crookston, Minnesota.

The Quids were soundly defeated by Southwest State in the first game of the tournament, 97-27. High scorer for SIU was Keith Wubben, with 13 points. The Quids were led by Dave Hastings with eight. Southwest State's high scorer was Mark Mortensen with 24 points, followed by Rocky LeCurite and Rich Miller with six each. According to Head Coach Rich DeAngelis, the Quids just couldn't buy a basket.

"I just think the guys were too nervous," DeAngelis said. "Southwest was playing good offense and its defense wasn't too bad, either." Southwest State shot 50 percent from the field, compared to 22 percent for the Quids.

Sunscreen is needed to protect the skin from the harmful UV rays that cause sunburn, premature aging, and skin cancer. Regular use of sunscreen can help prevent these effects by blocking out the sun's ultraviolet rays. The amount of sunscreen needed depends on the SPF (sun protection factor) and the skin type. It is recommended to apply sunscreen 15 to 30 minutes before sun exposure and to reapply every two hours or after swimming or sweating.
Gymnasts to square off with Circle

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's gymnastics team travels north to Chicago to face the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle Chikas Thursday night in a dual meet.

The 13th-ranked Salukis currently have the conference record this season, and have never lost a dual meet to Circle. However, SIU-C finished fourth in the Windy City Invitational in January, with a 153.50 score, while the Chikas finished third with 159.50.

According to Saluki Coach Herb Vogel, Circle probably has the strongest team it has ever had, and it is probably one of the toughest teams in the state.

It is only Circle and the University of Illinois at Champaign that pose any threat to Southern's state title defense," Vogel said.

Vogel added that the Salukis have greatly improved since the Windy City Invitational, but Circle is the team to beat for the national title.

"We're scoring six to seven points higher as a team than we did at the Windy City Invitational. We're getting more consistent performances of several individuals, even though there is still quite a bit of room for improvement," Vogel said.

The Salukis are the only team in the state who can hope to challenge the national title. However, the team will face a stiff challenge in the form of the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle Chikas.

According to Vogel, the 141.50 score are the Salukis posting against Louisville last weekend, against a 144.40 four-meet average, all but guarantees SIU-C a wild card berth to the NCAA national championships.

SIU Boxing Club to compete in Golden Gloves tournament

The SIU-C Boxing Club will travel to Springfield Saturday, March 1, to compete in the state Golden Gloves tournament.

There will be eight members boxing in the two-day event. SIU-C will be represented in five different weight classes ranging from the lightweight class at 147 pounds to the heavyweight class at 229 pounds.

The club had two of its members in the finals last year, and this year Mike Neugebauer and Bill Torpy are legitimate contenders for lightweight and 119-pound amateur titles, respectively.

Although there will be no novice and open competition in the single-elimination tournament, SIU boxing club members are expected to make the trip to make the team.

SIU-C's Richard Fitchkin and Fred Steinbrecher are classified as seniors in the senior category, which applies to more experienced racers. The only way we are going to win is if those shaved and rested people come through," Steele said. "We have got quite a few guys that have made the NCAA standards."

He added that the Salukis had the best chance of qualifying for the NCAA meet are Larry Wesley, South Armstrong, John Fischer, Carlos Henao and Mike Bohl. According to Steele, all the members of Miami's team will be rested and shaved for the meet, except Valarie Gribble.

Steele said that for the Salukis to win the meet, they must swim well in the 500- and 1650-yard freestyle races, and in all three relays, the 400-yard medley relay and the 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays.

Cincinnati coach honored by Metro

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) - Ed Badger's stormy three years as head basketball coach at Cincinnati were capped Wednesday when he was named Metro Conference Coach of the Year.

The 48-year-old Badger said he could not have been more delighted if his Bearcat team wins the Metro post-season tournament opening Thursday night and gains an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

In its first winning season in his three years at UC, Badger's Cincinnati team finished in a tie with Virginia Tech for third place in the conference with a 6-16 league record and 14-12 overall.

The coach-of-the-year honors were decided by voting among sports writers, sportscasters and coaches in the league.

Bernie Kirsner interested in cage job

By Scott Stahmer
Sports Editor

Bernie Kirsner, a former New York baseball pitcher and the father of Saluki Rob Kirsner, is interested in the SIC-C basketball head coaching position.

Kirsner, contacted at his home in Florham Park, N.J., has sent applications to Men's Athletics Director Gale Sayers and Kirsner confirmed that he is interested in the SIC-C basketball head coaching position.

The 31-year-old Kirsner said the situation at SIC-C is a good one, despite the team's 7-20 record and 18-game losing streak in 1980-81.

"I don't want to go into a situation and start from scratch," Kirsner said. "I know the situation at SIC-C. I know the players and what they can do, and I have been around them.

"I think the team needs two guide forwards who can help against the press and also a quick guard. That doesn't mean the players they have now couldn't do things that could compensate for the lack of quickness. You hide your weaknesses."

Kirsner, a left-handed pitcher last year after 20 years of coaching high school ball in Brooklyn at Lafayette and Erasmus Hall high schools, former players of his include Philadelphia Phillies Coach Billy Cunningham, Denver Nuggets Coach Joe Kleine, former Marquette and American Coaching Exchange standout George Thompson.

Kirsner's son and another Saluki, 6-10 center Vincent Wiggins, played for him last year.

Kirsner said he retired as a high school coach because he wanted to leave New York City. "New York City has changed dramatically," Kirsner said. "When I first started out there, kids wanted to wash my car. Now the beg to steal my car. Fortunately, money wasn't a problem for me."

Kirsner began thinking of giving up retirement after observing the SIC-C basketball team this winter.

"When the team started losing, it was quite evident they would need another coach," Kirsner said. "I think I could do a lot. I could enjoy myself and help the players at the same time.

"The more I thought about it. the more I thought I will return to the school at a few times, like the coach I was with and thought I would enjoy it."

Although Kirsner said he wasn't used to blowing my own horn, "I readily admits his strengths as a coach. "I have very good people with the players," he said. "I'm a very good teacher. The kids enjoy it because it's very interesting for them. There would be at least 10 different defenses every game, we'd do something else.

Kirsner said he would have no trouble making the transition from high school to college coaching. He said he coached college players during summer camps he ran.

An assistant coach in a major college only goes around recruiting, Kirsner said. "He hasn't had a chance to experiment, to teach. You have to teach them kids.

If hired by SIC-C, Kirsner said he would rely on recruiting contacts in New York, but also would try to bring in players from other parts of the country.

"I would love to get into the Chicago area," he said. "All you need is a few people to get you started. Give you a player a fair shake and he'll tell his friends."

Divers still friends despite competition

By Cindy Clawson
Staff Writer

Not many people are allowed to use the diving boards at the new north pool of the Student Recreation Center Pool. But nobody does it better than those who do.

Tracey Terrell and Julia Warner have both made a workout every day. They are SIC-C's top two women divers. They are also this year's top two finishers in the Illinois AAU swimming and diving championships on both the one-meter and three-meter springboards, and are both headed for the AAU National Championships with hopes of finishing in the top eight on both boards.

Even more amazing is that Warner and Terrell, though fierce competitors, are roommates and the best of friends.

"One of my goals in diving was to win the three-meter board for four years," said Warner, a senior. "Not accomplishing that has been a big disappointment for me."

But the loss, according to Warner, could have been for a better cause—a chance to compete against Terrell. Warner, Warner finished second to Terrell in both events.

"Terrell is reserved about things, and Tracey is a little wilder," Warner said. "It means a lot to me to be friends with her."

Terrell is a junior, has spent only two years at SIC. Recruited by Julian Krug SIC-C's diving coach at the University of Iowa summer session, Terrell began her freshman year at SIC-C by breaking the SIC-C diving record on the three-meter tower dive at her home in Florida. Other schools attempting to recruit her said she would only excel in two more years.

"Many coaches said I'd never be a springboard diver. Nobody ever expected much of me," Warner said. "I didn't even think I could break the record. Still, she liked the coach and the school. So she decided to take that chance.

The summer after her freshman year, Terrell finished among the top eight nationally in an AUA platform diving, qualifying her for the Olympic trials. Krug also made a decision to leave SIC-C for a coaching assignment at the University of Pittsburgh. There was a platform diving program at Pittsburgh also. Terrell decided to follow her coach and train for the Olympic trials.

It was a move that Terrell says "just wasn't worth it." One of her satisfactions at Pittsburgh was being unable to design her own major. She is currently majoring in exercise science, but that major is not her greatest concern.

"The thing I missed the most was being back home here, and Julia," Terrell said with a smile. "I really missed Julia all the time."

"To me, she really helped me. Back home, I could have the support of Julia all the time."

Through it all, Terrell said, much to the relief of Warner, herself and the whole team. And although it's an ambitious diver and one that Warner has held back from overdoing, she is quiet in speaking about diving.

"I'm just not that person to talk about diving," Terrell said.

"Diving is an expression of feeling," Warner said. "For Terrell said. "The sport has me find out what I can do against the press."

"It means a lot to me to know I could do something in improving all areas of my diving. This is a great team experience. Terrell explains that the teams from Christian parents is made more meaningful by her diving experiences. The discipline of diving has kept her from giving her own way. Terrell is not only quiet in speech but in diving. She gets in the water and without a splash," Warner said in a somewhat envious tone. Even the novice is able to observe the grace with which Terrell performs.

"Warren may appear envious, but she has her own list of talents her roommate can't help," Warner said. "She's recognized for her strength and consistency. She is also known to perform more difficult dives than Terrell. Both of their specialities are the same, but their differences are more a matter of style than ability. When I get nervous, there is something. But she can be a little more confident on the side of the pool to emerge on the team and can often be heard bombarding one of her fellow fans while cheering for a swimmer.

Warner says she is more concerned this year than ever before with being a good example because there are so many people watching her. She is attempting to take the stress out of her excellence to divers in order to maintain confidence and a more collected attitude.

"It takes a lot for me to sit down and rest between dives," Warner said.

Terrell also said he would upgrade the Salukis to the next level, with each recent opponent as Roosevelt, Siena Heights and North Carolina. They might blow us out, I don't think so, but they definitely know that after playing these schools, we'd be prepared to play Iowa and Tulsa. Those schools would seem easier.

Kirsner said he didn't know if his son, Billy, would be better than Terrell. "You never can tell," he said. "I am sure unaware of other. but both Terrell and Warner see Terrell as the best swimmer and Terrell as the best diver."

Warner and Terrell say many people question how their friendship can survive under such competitive conditions.

"There is no pressure between us," said Warner. "Any pressures that exist are created by other people. Personally, I come up and say, 'Julia, how'd Tracey beat you on both boards again?" That's the only pressure.

There is a desire to beat one another, but both Terrell and Warner say each motivates the other to do her best. Warner said, "I'm not thinking too much about priorities. They don't keep them from appreciating each other.

Right now, their priorities are right in line with each other. Julia Warner and Tracey Terrell are ready to break into the ranks of the top eight divers in the nation together."

Steele said Miami is led by Jesus Seijas, a world record holder in the 400-yard individual medley for the past 5 years and a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic team.

"He's the most noted swimmer in the meet," Steele said.

Vassallo is also the former world record holder of the 200-yard butterfly, and a national AAU champion in the 200-yard medley. Steele added.

Miami also has another Olympian, Matt Grubble, who was the No. 1 high school butterfly performer last year.

Steele said.

Grubble has un réussi fly times better than VonJouanne, Steele added.

Vassallo will face Vassallo in both the 200- and 100-yard butterfly, medleys, and Grubble in the 200-yard butterfly.

Steele said the Salukis have five members, VonJouanne, Paddy O'Neil, Tom Graber, Pat Looby, and Conrado Porta, who have qualified for the upcoming NCAA championships. The rest of the Salukis will be rested and ready for next year.
