Appeal of Marion lawsuit approved

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council decided to file an appeal to the lawsuit against the city of Marion in a closed session meeting Monday.

Councilman John Mills said that based on what the city's legal counsel has said, Carbondale has a strong case and could possibly win. "It's not a situation we take lightly at all," he said.

"We believe it's the right thing to do for Carbondale and surrounding cities," Mills said. Protection of the city's jobs and businesses is a main objective of the council's decision to appeal, he said.

Carbondale's lawsuit was dismissed in a circuit court in February.

Negotiations for a development agreement for University Mall and a cooperative tree replacement program also were being given a green light.

The tree replacement program is between the city and CIPS.

A development proposal was received from Davis Hocker & Associates, Inc. on behalf of UM Partners on Friday. The proposal includes renovation of the existing areas of the mall and an expansion of 25,000 square feet that will include a food court and two department stores.

Installation of a grand entrance, replacement of exterior sidewalks, exterior lights, renovation of the parking lot, new ceramic tile floors and additional skylights are also some of the proposed changes.

USSR elections complete

MOSCOW (UPI) — Pro-democracy candidates who challenged the Communist Party in regional elections are poised to win in the nation's second- and third-largest cities, preliminary results released by opposition groups showed Monday.

The official news agency Tass said maverick politician Boris Yeltsin, who seeks the presidency of the largest republic of the Soviet Union, easily won a seat in the Russian Parliament.

Tass also reported that in special runoff elections Sunday, Lithuania's pro-independence movement overwhelmingly clinched control of the Baltic republic's Parliament, setting up a confrontation with Moscow over secession.

Although Tass said official results of Sunday's regional parliament and city council elections in the Russian republic, the Ukraine and Byelorussia will not be released March 14, early

Carbondale awarded enterprise zone

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

An enterprise zone that will boost the local economy is coming to Carbondale, Gov. James R. Thompson said Monday at the Southern Illinois Airport.

Thompson announced that Carbondale, Murphysboro and Jackson County, which will share one zone, were one of 12 new zones awarded this year, 10 of which were in Southern Illinois.

"Enterprise zones have proven to be one of our state's most important economic development tools," Thompson said. "Originally intended as a neighborhood revitalization program, enterprise zones have evolved into a key factor in encouraging business development and expansion in Illinois."

Thompson said the creation of the new zones brings the total number of zones in Illinois to 81, making Illinois the largest enterprise state in the union.

An established enterprise zone would enable Carbondale to offer state incentives to encourage companies to expand or locate within the state.

Some incentives include sales and utility tax exemptions, investment tax and job creation tax credits, income tax deductions and increased accessibility to the state's business financing program.

Fast-food chains violate nutritional agreement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four major fast-food companies are defying an agreement with eight states to provide consumers with nutritional information at all outlets, a health advocacy group said Monday.

Center for Science in the Public Interest claimed McDonald's, Burger King, Kentucky Fried Chicken and Wendy's are failing to honor a July 1986 agreement made with the attorneys general of California, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, New Mexico, New York, Texas and Virginia.

The agreement required the fast-food companies to make available pamphlets containing nutrition and ingredient information at all outlets and to post signs alerting consumers to the availability of the pamphlets, the non-profit consumer group said.

"We have urged the attorneys general to consider prosecuting the companies unless they reach full compliance within 60 days," said Michael Jacobson, executive director of Center for Science in the Public Interest.

The center conducted a survey of about 20 outlets per company in up to nine states and found nutritional pamphlets available at only 25 percent of Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants, 42 percent of Burger King restaurants, 45 percent of McDonald's restaurants and none of the Wendy's

No. 1 vs. No. 2 in MVC finale

By Kevin Simpson

NORMAL — The stage is set for the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament championship game between the Salukis and Illinois State tonight at Redbird Arena in Normal.

SIU-C comes into the 8:38 matchup with a school-record 26 victories, against only six losses, while Illinois State enters the game with a 17-12 mark. The starting time is late to accommodate ESPN, which will televise the game nationally.

Junior forward Rick Shipley remembers well last year's championship-game loss to Creighton and said this year's team has a completely different attitude. He said last year the Dawgs were content with the success they had (20 wins) and were content to be in the game with Creighton. But this year they want it all, he said.

"This year we're going into the game with one attitude, that's to win," Shipley said. "It's just going to be whoever wants the ball game more."

Shipley also mentioned the adversity the team has gone through this year and said the players don't want to come up short.

The Salukis came into the tournament seeded first and promptly disposed of Indiana State 70-54 and Tulsa 75-65. The Dawgs are winners of five straight and eight of their last nine.

The Redbirds used the No. 2 seed and the home court to their advantage to sweep aside Drake 77-62 and Creighton 69-64.

After a 28-point outburst against Tulsa, senior guard Freddie McSwain reflected on the unselfish nature of the ballclub as

MVC brass to 'gamble,' shift tourney

NORMAL (UPI) — It's time for the Missouri Valley to act like a major conference and move its end-of-the-season tourney to a neutral site, MVC officials said Monday.

The MVC decided to move next year's tournament to St. Louis' Kiel Auditorium.

"It's a big gamble," said Associate Commissioner Joe Mitch. "The financial part is not such a gamble but you need fans in the stands to project a favorable image."

The Big Eight, like several other major conferences, holds its post-season tournament at a neutral site — in this case Kemper Arena in Kansas City. Civic and business leaders in St. Louis hope to match their cross-state rivals' success.

MVC commissioner Doug Elgin said the move to a major city reflects the con-being the foundation for the success it has had this season.

"We've got a lot of players who have stepped up this year and made a lot of difference in our basketball team," McSwain said. "We depend a lot on each other and our defense."

Loyola leaning toward continuing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — One day after the sudden death of teammate Hank Gathers, the Loyola Marymount Lions Monday postponed any decision about continuing their season, but appeared leaning toward accepting a berth in the NCAA tournament.

Gathers, the 11th-leading scorer in NCAA history, collapsed Sunday during the semifinals of the West Coast Conference tournament and died at a hospital without regaining consciousness. He was 23.

The rest of the WCC tournament, which grants an automatic NCAA tournament bid to the winner, was canceled about four hours after Gathers was pronounced dead at 6:55 p.m. at Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital.

Conference officials announced they would offer the bid to Loyola, the league's runaway regular-season champion. The NCAA tournament begins March 15.

The Lions and Coach Paul Westhead met Monday morning before an emotional half-hour news conference on campus. Westhead said the session was marked by a "great deal of quietness."

"The fact that we haven't made a decision is because we haven't raised the question," Westhead said. "If the question was, would the team play today or tomorrow or in three days ... we wouldn't play. Our concern right now is with Hank and his family."

Loyola guard Jeff Fryer, who spoke at the news conference with teammate Bo Kimble, seemed in no condition to make a decision about his team's future.

"I don't care if we don't play another game this year," said Fryer.

Kimble and guard Tony Walker, though, indicated they wanted the season to continue.

"Hank and I were like brothers, so close. We overcame so many different obstacles," Kimble said. "I just know Hank would want us to be strong and go on."

Women's squad overcomes obstacles to win conference

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Saluki coach Cindy Scott has guided her team to three regular-season Gateway championships in the last five years. But this year's Saluki team is special.

The Salukis dominated the Gateway in 1986 and 1987 with a combined 38-0 record. But this year's championship team had more obstacles to overcome.

"I am probably more proud of this team than any I've ever coached," Scott said. "This team is so young and it's been exciting working with them."

The Salukis entered the 1989-1990 campaign with five newcomers — junior transfers Alison Smith and Cheryl Weis and freshmen Kelly Firth, Anita Scott and Angie Rougeau. Only two seniors — Deanna Kibelkis and Eileen Richardson — started the season with the Salukis.

Despite their question marks, the Salukis were picked to win the Gateway Conference in the preseason coaches' poll. But before the Salukis could win a Gateway title, their young players had to mature and jell as a team.

"As a coaching staff we had to be patient," Scott said. "We knew it would take time for the team to come together. Young players can't be treated like veterans."

The young Salukis didn't play against the easiest of opponents this season. Five teams on the Salukis' schedule — Virginia, Western Kentucky, Northern Illinois, Purdue and Tennessee Tech — were ranked in the top 25 in preseason polls.

The Salukis won four of their first seven games — which included a 53-52 victory over Western Kentucky Dec. 9 at the Arena. But the Salukis received their first test shortly afterwards.

SIU-C lost to nationally-ranked Northern Illinois and Purdue. But SIU-C also lost its first two Gateway games of the season at home.

The Salukis were 4-7 overall and 0-2 in the Gateway.

"It was a gradual maturation progress for this team," Scott said. "It's tough to be young and lose games early in the season."

But the Salukis won 15 of their last 17 games, finishing in a first-place tie with Illinois State and Southwest Missouri with 14-4 Gateway records.

"When we started out 0-2, I didn't know what would happen," Saluki forward Amy Rakers said.

"We got together as a team and decided what we wanted to do."

Scott watched from the bench as several young players matured. The Salukis were presented with challenges — and responded each time.

After losing to Eastern Illinois 72-60 Feb. 17, the Salukis (10-4) were in third place — two games behind first-place Southwest Missouri (12-2) with four games remaining.

The Salukis looked hard-pressed to gain one of the four postseason conference tournament positions with fourth-place Bradley and fifth-place Eastern Illinois on their heels.

But the Salukis responded with consecutive victories over Wichita State Feb. 22 and first-place Southwest Missouri Feb. 24 at the Arena.

After two home victories, the Salukis were 12-4 in the Gateway — one game behind first-place Illinois State (13-3).

With victories in their last two games, the Salukis were in a position to gain the No. 1 seed in the tournament.

The Salukis upset Illinois State 70-61 Wednesday and became the Men's swimming dominates Mideastern Intercollegiates

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Dominating is an accurate way to describe the performance of the SIU-C men's swimming and diving team this weekend at the Mideastern Intercollegiate Championships in Cleveland, Ohio.

The Salukis led the 10-team field with 772.5 points. West Virginia was second with 578.5 and Notre Dame came in at 527. St. Bonaventure (405), Cleveland State (326.5), University of Maryland-Baltimore County (202), University of North Carolina at Wilmington (197.5), Rutgers (193), George Washington (188), Western Kentucky (152) and Howard (104) rounded out the rest of the field.

"We were really pleased with the type of meet it was, with the way it was handled and to come out on top in the team totals is like icing on the cake. We got so much out of the meet in all other aspects that it was a nice little bonus to win the championship as well," swimming and diving team coach Doug Ingram said.

Eleven Saluki swimmers took firsts with three of them breaking conference records.

Sophomore Todd Edison won the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 4:27.69. He broke the conference mark with a time of 4:27.14 in the preliminaries.

Senior Harri Garmendia swam winning times in the 200 individual medley and 200 butterfly. He broke conference records with his 1:50.34 time in the medley and 1:48.32 in the butterfly.

Senior Tim Kelly swam a 3:57.53 to win the 400 individual medley and break the conference record.

Freshman Glen Hignett qualified for the NCAA championships with his time of 4:48.4 in the 100 butterfly. He took second in the event.

"I don't mean to sound bragadocious about our team at all, but I think that adding another quality team like ours to the meet helped raise the level of everybody, so the meet as a whole was faster," Ingram said.

The SIU-C swimming program, an independent, has moved around to different conference meets trying to find a competitive meet it likes. This

Thompson targets Chanute as jet maintenance facility

RANTOUL (UPI) — Gov. James R. Thompson Monday named a task force to study the possibility of Chanute Air Force Base bidding to become a jet maintenance center for United Airlines. United is considering building a $500 million repair facility for its aircraft that would be completed by 1993 and employ about 7,000 people. Black editor subject of University author's book

By Peter Zalewski
Staff Writer

Hardships faced by black conservatives from the 1940s through the 1960s is the major topic for a book by a new University assistant professor.

Julius Thompson, assistant professor in Black American Studies Program and Department of History, joined the SIU-C faculty fall 1989 from the University of Rochester, New York, following the expiration of a one year research grant.

Thompson has had four books published and possibly could have three more published in the upcoming year: "Black Press in Mississippi, 1865-1985," "Black Life in Mississippi, Essays" and "Percy Greene, 1898-1977, A Biography."

"We don't have a large body of biographies, in general, on black press editors and publishers," Thompson said.

Thompson's upcoming book, "Percy Greene, 1898-1977, A Biography," is about the life of a black editor of a Mississippi newspaper through the age of segregation and the Civil Rights movement.

Thompson said this would be the first biography on a major black editor who worked out of the state of Mississippi.

A study of Greene's life will help to fill a void on the role and position of conservative blacks in the south during the civil rights movement. American scholars suffer from not having a broad and fuller picture of the complexities of the black community over time, Thompson said.

longest running black newspapers in Mississippi history, between 1939-1977.

Thompson said that Greene's work with the newspaper is highly significant to many scholars, because of the quality of the newspaper during the 1940s and '50s.

"Percy felt that blacks, as citizens, had a right to vote," said Thompson.

"Greene is a paradox of the black experience," Thompson said. He was a radical black in the 1940s, but became a conservative in the 1950s and 1960s.

"Percy may have felt some opposition towards the civil rights movement and became a supporter of State Sovereignty Commission, which is an agency created by the government of Mississippi for the purpose of attacking the civil rights movement," said Thompson.

Thompson said that Greene lived in the poorest state in the Union and was a successful journalist, but he never appears to have made a large amount of money. He said Greene accepted small pay-offs from Mississippi government for supporting the campaign against the civil rights movement in the state. Yet, he always believed that black Americans had a right to vote and participate in the affairs of government.

Greene used the newspaper to address certain issues in Mississippi, and traveled to large cities making speeches in support of segregation, Thompson said.

"How does such an individual take such an extreme position?" Thompson asked.

Tremendous anger remains in the black community about Greene's work with the sovereignty committee and using the Jackson Advocate as a mouth piece to support the status quo, Thompson said.

The Jackson Advocate is the primary source of all of Thompson's information.

"The Advocate had a tremendous run. Greene often reprinted letters to the editors and letters he sent out that have created a rich body of source material directly in the newspaper," Thompson said. "It was hard finding local correspondence to question, because materials have not been collected in the archives."

The book would be a success if it helps us to understand how more conservative blacks viewed the world during the height of the civil rights movement and why they viewed the world from a conservative view, Thompson said.

Thompson earned his bachelor's degree in history at Alcorn State University in May, 1969. He received his master's degree in American history from Princeton University in 1971; and his doctorate in 1973, also from Princeton University.

Thompson's teaching and research fields include Afro-American history, 1860 to the present; Modern Africa, Since 1990 and Afro-American Literature, 1860 to the present.

Thompson is very active on campus with participating in the recruitment of minority graduate students for the department of history and helping to coordinate the recent Black History Month.

He is affiliated with the Mississippi Historical Society, Association for the Study of Afro-American Life & History and others.

Solve fiscal woes:
stop loan defaulters

PICTURE THIS.

It's your first year of college and you've decided to apply for a Perkins loan to help defray the costs of your education. After waiting what seems like years in a line at Woody Hall, you have the forms in hand and are ready to fill in the hundreds of numbered blanks.

You supply all the information necessary, get your parents to co-sign and mail the form off, hoping for the best. After all, your credit is good, your grades are excellent and your year at SIU has gotten off to a really great start.

DESPITE ALL this, you stand a good chance of not getting that loan, thus putting your academic career in jeopardy. Why? Because, even though you've done everything right, others haven't. They take out loans without ever intending to pay them back.

The University has a 5.9 default rate. In laymen's terms, this means that 5.9 percent, or 278 individuals, defaulted on their educational loans in fiscal 1987, the last time the U.S. Department of Education tabulated the data. Considering that 6,096 people were loaned $14,171,906 during this period, 278 defaulters may seem an insignificant number. However, multiply this by every junior college, four year college and University in the country and you have a real drain on the already-scarce monetary allocations for higher education.

All these figures may be a bit confusing, but they all add up to a very visible minority of students giving everyone a bad reputation.

PRESIDENT BUSH'S fiscal '91 budget calls for tougher loan requirements and a freeze on all money given to the loan program. This could mean that there would be no money left in the revolving fund because others, who came long before you, have defaulted on their loans.

Under the current Perkins loan plan, the only way the money can be replenished in the fund is to count on individuals to pay back previous loans. This means that, theoretically, the funds for the program could be quickly depleted if no one decided to pay back their loans. And that's not all. The Pell Grant and the Guaranteed Student Loan Programs have also been targeted for the budget axe.

Is this scaring you yet? It should, for the default rate on student loans in the United States has reached alarming proportions.

SO WHAT'S THE solution to ensure deserving students get the money they need but still adhere to the stringent guidelines under which the program was instituted and the President has since imposed?

While this admittedly is a complex problem, a major way to guarantee the program's continuance would be to crack down on the defaulters. Make sure people realize this is a loan, not a gift. A university education in this country is a privilege, not an absolute right. Back this fact up with strict legislation and stiff penalties and the message would soon hit home that they had better pay up or else. It's not fair to the thousands of hard-working, conscientious students who pay their bills on time that these few should be able to get a free ride at the expense of future generations.

Opinions from elsewhere

Republicans: Run, Jesse, run

Scripps Howard News Service

Jesse Jackson's decision against running for mayor of Washington, D.C., probably ensures that he will be a candidate again for president in 1992.

Jackson obviously concluded that looking after potholes in the nation's capital and trying to solve D.C.'s monumental drug and murder problems would leave him unable to concentrate on the larger political arena.

Jackson watchers are split on whether he did the right thing.

Some say he passed up an opportunity to get some experience in a real job. Others contend he was right not to get bogged down in local problems that have little to do with the presidency.

In any event, the Republican Party must be happy with his decision. Jackson will keep the Democratic Party off balance in 1992, as he has in past presidential contests, making it harder for whoever is nominated by the opposition to beat President Bush, whose popularity continues to soar.

Ethnic conflict heightened by media

When I arrived at the back door of the Interfaith Center a week ago Friday to prepare for a Hillel pot luck dinner, I was greeted by a D.E. reporter who wanted to know about the "protest" going on in front of the building. What protest, I wondered? Somebody doesn't like my chicken? He explained that someone had called into the news office earlier in the day to say that there would be a protest at 6 p.m. At that very moment, Palestinian students were handing out flyers to passers-by to protest, "a film...that wrongfully portrayed Israel as democratic, free and equal." I then realized that my ad in the D.E. to publicize our dinner, a social gathering that we hold regularly in observance of the Jewish Sabbath, had included the cryptic words, "program about Israel." How could the protesters have deduced the content of that program from these words? It might have been about Israeli cuisine or folk dancing. In fact, it was a program to encourage tourism.

I mention the above not to trivialize the very serious concerns of Palestinians and Jews alike about the ongoing crisis in the Middle East, but to cite an example of the media which does nothing to promote the interest of both parties in a just and peaceful resolution.

I point to another recent example of factual distortion...this time, distortion by omission. No compassionate human being can help but be disturbed by the graphic photos of the Palestinian struggle currently on display at the Student Center. But the tableau is incomplete. Missing, for example, are photos of Palestinian "collaborators" tortured by their fellow Palestinians, and of Israeli and non-Israeli civilians who have died as a result of terrorist attacks. Prominently featured, however, is a book entitled America's Greatest Enemy: The Jew and an Unholy Alliance. This anti-semitic literature does nothing to promote peace and justice.

I would like to suggest to the Palestinians a potentially more productive opportunity to gain media attention. It is no secret that there are divisions within the Palestinian community, as evidenced by the rival political factions. On this campus alone, there is more than one active Palestinian group. Similarly, there are deep divisions within Israeli government, and within the Jewish communities in Israel and America. Some colleagues on campus and I have been trying to organize a single forum or series of lectures on the Israeli / Palestinian conflict which would include speakers representing these diverse perspectives on problems and possible solutions. Let's try to understand each other by looking at the whole picture. If you are interested in a meaningful dialogue, you can contact me at the Interfaith Center. — Robin Gross, Interim director, SIU Hillel Foundation.

Motorcycles offer little protection — unlike cars

After reading Kristin Cargill's letter in last Wednesday's D.E., I started to cry, thinking of what she had lost. I then thought of my fellow college students who ride motorcycles.

I know it's great riding that motorcycle on a sunny spring day, decked out in a tank-top, shorts and a pair of goggles. When you're riding you never think of actually being in an accident. It couldn't happen to you — you've been riding a long time. Besides if something did happen you're quick enough to steer that baby right around any dangerous situation, right? Wrong!

Motorcycle deaths have increased in the last few years. The problem began in the motorcycle companies. They started building them lighter, smaller and quicker.

I know that what I'm about to say is obvious, but I want you riders to think about it. In a car you have the body of the vehicle to protect you somewhat in an accident. Of course, it is more protective if you are wearing a seat belt. On a motorcycle however, there is no vehicle structure to protect you, no seat belt. The horrible truth is this: whatever speed at which you collide is the speed at which you are thrown like a rag doll.

Please understand I'm not asking you to stop riding. I'm asking you to trade in the tank-top, shorts and gargoyles for a thick denim or leather jacket, jeans and a helmet. I know what you're saying...that stuff is too hot to wear in warm weather. Fine, but at least wear a helmet. Besides, road burns heal in about four months, if they aren't that serious.

The choice, as always, rests upon you. You can ride with proper protection or you can keep on riding like you normally do. But please, before you decide, think seriously about what I've said.

One last thing. Though I don't know you personally Kristin, you are in my prayers, and I wish you strength and courage with each passing day. As for Jason, he will always be with you, deep within your heart. — Shawn R. Davison, sophomore, premajor help one another, but now all they do is condemn and falsely judge anyone who is not part of their clique. Some are real Christians, but it seems that Phil (the two-faced zealot leader of the group) drives the others to condemn and to pray for all the ones who will go to hell for missing mega-life.

Phil has no legitimate authority in the BSC but he has been so far to get what he wants through bullying and subversion. Anything he says goes. He tries to act like the head resident advisor and God at the same time; the only problem is that he gets away with it. Then when someone points this out, it is shushed up because the BSC might get a bad reputation.

This letter might give the BSC a bad reputation, but that is not the intention. The point is that the BSC is a great place to live, but until management does something about mega-life and its leader, Phil Nelson, nobody but pious martyrs should live there. — William M. Stephens, political science major.

Area educators said they agreed with the principle of the resolution, but some said the wording of the act left out some important elements.

Carolyn Farrar, representing the State Board of Education, said the failure of the federal government to make any financial commitment abrogates the resolution's intent.

"I don't think we ought to make a commitment to changes in education without providing revenues to support them," Poshard agreed, adding that the changes may not necessitate additional funds—just better use of existing funds.

Charlotte Des Jardins, member of the Coordinating Council for Handicapped Children, said she represents the concerns parents have for the resolution.

She said the call for more flexibility with funding, if accepted, will be especially damaging to disadvantaged populations.

(The proposal) is just a piece of legislation dressed up with promises for continued federal monitoring of funds that simply will allow those who wish to misuse funding to do so, Des Jardins said, adding that violations are more likely to occur in large urban schools.

"It takes away the strongest protections for the disadvantaged and replaces them with vague assurances," she said.

Des Jardins said the resolutions includes no provisions for parents in evaluation.

"The primary (proponents) are the school districts who want the federal restrictions to be removed so they can misuse funds," she said.

Des Jardins said the resolution may bring about loss of civil rights for minority groups as well.

"If anything, we need to intensify the protective role of the government. The schools are not adequate because of lack of freedoms. We do not have enough protection," she said.

Poshard said the idea of the resolution is not to hurt students who need education the most.

He said the proposal includes nothing about protection of special groups.

The summary of the current draft of the Poshard-Smith act states: "Nothing in the agreement can be misconstrued as removing, lessening or changing the (federal) mandates ... regarding civil rights, discrimination and safety; absolving states of maintenance of effort or comparability of services requirements; altering the distribution of funds to those entities not participating in the agreement; or permitting diversion of funds for private use."

Mary Cotter, representing the Illinois Learning Disabilities Association and the Learning Disabilities Association of America, said her group continues to oppose the proposal because it lacks proper wording in four areas.

Cotter said the resolution needs to:

- specifically reiterate that the federal mandates regarding the handicapped will be enforced

- mention that parents need to be involved in every aspect of the resolution, including evaluation of the programs

- allow for public hearings on the program

- and restrict the demonstration to a small number of sites.

She said education will not be successful until teachers are properly prepared—something that must be enforced federally.

Smith agreed that teaching is a great concern.

"My concern is that we will lose 50 percent of our classroom teachers by the turn of the century. To make up for this attrition, we will need 30 percent of all baccalaureate graduates to go into teaching," he said.

"The problem is to find a way to attract a large number of teachers. It is literally a survival issue for our nation's competitiveness in the world," he said.

will focus efforts on retention and expansion of industrial parks and central business districts.

Thompson said the new zones will provide new jobs as well as help retain old ones. In the last five years, more than 54,000 jobs have been created in Illinois within the zone areas and more than 120,000 jobs have been retained.

The zones will be especially important to the region because it will bring diversity to the area.

Thompson said Southern Illinois residents rely heavily on coal mining and if the new acid rain legislation passes, the region's economy could be hurt.

"The enterprise zones should bring in new and diverse industries to the area," Thompson said. "Hopefully, the zones will cushion the blow if the acid rain legislation passes."

President George Bush's acid rain legislation calls for a 10 million ton reduction of the sulfur dioxide emissions by the year 2000. If enacted, 50 percent of the sulfur dioxide emissions would be reduced.

Since coal from Southern Illinois is very high in sulfur, the president's plan could put a dent in the local economy.

Thompson said the fact that Illinois is one of the leading coal producing states in the country is a primary reason he pushed to pass legislation that created 14 new enterprise zones instead of six.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quin, who helped pass the legislation, said there were two "wild-card zones" that have yet to be designated, and Dunn said he would like to see one of them go to Perry County.

Wild-card zones are set aside for Illinois communities if a major development project comes along. State Rep. Larry Woolard, D-

Carterville, said he believed the enterprise zone is one of the best economic tools to have.

Woolard also said he would sponsor legislation in the spring session that would extend an enterprise zone into Williamson County.

Steven McClure, director of the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, said it was possible for Williamson County to be included in Carbondale's enterprise zone if the county meets the zone criteria.

"To be considered for a zone, a community must meet specific economic distress criteria and show a thorough understanding of its strengths and weaknesses in economic development," McClure said. "The area must have a specific plan with goals and objectives to minimize the weaknesses and highlight its strengths."

restaurants.

"Most of the time when you ask a cashier for nutritional information, they don't know what you are talking about or how to get that information," said Richard Layman-Heitman, a spokesman for the consumer group.

The best firm in terms of nutritional information was Jack in the Box, a Southwestern region chain that had pamphlets on hand in 83 percent of outlets surveyed.

Dick Detweiler, a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp. in Louisville, Ky., said Monday that his firm has provided nutritional information through all of its restaurants "since the mid-'80s."

"As far as we are concerned, we have complied with any agreement we have made with the attorneys general," Detweiler said, adding: "We get very few requests for this kind of information."

Denny Lynch, a spokeswoman for Wendy's International Inc. of Dublin, Ohio said his firm has distributed nutritional brochures to store managers in the past and has advisories on menu boards about such information. Outlets may have "dropped the ball" by failing to request new supplies of pamphlets, Lynch said.

returns from opposition groups showed democratic bloc candidates were leading.

The elections were the second stage of President Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms. In the first stage, a national Parliament was elected in multi-candidate balloting, but the second phase penetrates into the regional Communist strongholds that Gorbachev has said are blocking his economic reforms.

The elections in the three republics accounting for nearly three-fourths of the Soviet Union's 290 million population offered voters a choice of candidates ranging from Russian nationalists, orthodox Communists and radical reformers.

At stake were 1,068 seats in the Russian parliament, 450 places for the Ukrainian legislature and 310 in Byelorussia's.

J.C. Penney store will be connected to the new department stores through the expansion. Control of the additional land required has been acquired by the developer.

Renovation and expansion costs have been estimated to exceed $40 million. The estimate was determined from the architectural plans. Construction will start in April.

Also approved was the tree removal and replacement program. This program will enable the city and CIPS to remove right-of-way trees which are undesirable for the city and CIPS. The trees will be replaced with others.

Trees approved by the city forester will be removed by CIPS and replacement trees will be planted by the city. CIPS will share in the replacement cost on a 50/50 basis up to $100 per tree.

Five Rickert-Ziebold winners split $20,000 in award money

By Tracy Sargeant
and Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writers

The long hard months of careful planning, diligent designing and anxious waiting came to a rewarding end as Harris Deller, committee chairman, announced the winners of this year's Rickert-Ziebold trust awards.

Five winners from the School of Art and Design will share a $20,000 prize. Brandon Bellrose, David Berk, Alice James, Frances Meader and Shirley Richards will each receive $4,000.

Berk, a senior in product design, said the time and effort he put into his work really helped him in the show.

"Even though the School of Art and Design is one of the most expensive majors to be in; it does pay off," Berk said.

James, who works with metal and glass, said she had been preparing for three and a half years for the contest.

"It was a nice climax," James said. "There was a good representation of the work being done at the School of Art and Design."

Bellrose, ceramics and design, said it was a long way to the final exhibit.

"It was more than just a long day; it was suicide," Bellrose said.

Richards, glass work, said she and Bellrose have planned to create a joint piece of artwork for the final exhibition.

"It was tickled that we all made it together," Richards said. "There was not one thing in the show I would have minded losing to."

Meader, fibers, said she will invest her part of the $20,000 in to a certificate of deposit to help her make her way through graduate school.

"Eventually I want to teach art and show my work," Meader said.

All the winners agreed that it was difficult to compete against their peers and friends.

"All 13 finalists deserve credit," the group said.

The group also said that the faculty and staff in the School of Art and Design were a great help in preparing for the contest.

The Rickert-Ziebold trust awards are made possible because of an endowment from the estate of the late Marguerite Rickert. The original gift was $300,000 and the interest earned from the account covers the $20,000 that is awarded each year.

Since the first year of the awards in 1975, over $280,000 has been given to students from the School of Art and Design.

Coroner: Ex-Marine probably killed self

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

A 44-year old Carbondale man died of what appeared to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head Saturday, Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale said.

A sheriff's department official said sheriff's deputies, who were dispatched to Warren Road on a call, found Jose Gonzalez's body on the front porch of his house.

The spokesman said Gonzalez was pronounced dead at the scene by Ragsdale. The case is still being investigated, the spokesman said.

Ragsdale said the man died of an apparent self-inflicted wound to the head, and that he had been dead two to three hours prior to being found.

According to a spokeswoman for the Memorial Funeral Home in Corpus Christi, Texas, Gonzalez served in the United States Marine Corps and was a former Vietnam veteran. The spokeswoman said Gonzalez served a total of 34 months in the conflict, being awarded the Purple Heart.

The spokeswoman said Gonzalez is survived by his mother, Mrs. Petra Almazan of Harlingen, Texas and his sister Gloria Hinojosa, of Corpus Christi.

Gonzalez was born Nov. 26, 1945 in Elsa, Texas.

Film 'Hunt for Red October' confusing but suspenseful

By Stephanie Stelzer
Staff Writer

"The Hunt for Red October" submerges into the thrill beneath the waves.

The main plot of the film is as the title suggests — the hunt for the Soviet's typhoon submarine called the Red October.

The Red October, which is over 650 feet long, is taken over by Russian Captain Marko Raimius, played by Sean Connery. The Russians believe that Raimius stole the sub from the Russian naval base to launch a missile attack on the United States, so they send out a sub to destroy Raimius and the Red October.

Dr. Jack Ryan, played by Alec Baldwin, is a naval author for the CIA and he discovers that the Red October is not like any other Russian sub known to the United States. This sub has a special propellant system called the Caterpillar and is virtually undetectable by sonar.

When the U.S. Navy gets wind of this, they send out the USS Dallas in search for Raimius and the Red October.

Now for the secondary plot. Ryan somehow figures out through his superior intelligence that Raimius is not headed to the United States to launch missiles, but to defect. Ryan does have one problem though, he must convince his superiors that he is right.

Admiral James Greer, portrayed by James Earl Jones, does believe in Ryan and he helps Ryan convince the captain of the USS Dallas, Capt. Bart Mancuso, played by Scott Glenn.

Meanwhile, Raimius and Capt. Vasily Borodin, played by Sam Neill, plot their escape to the U.S.

Raimius knows he is risking it all for his freedom. He gives his chance for freedom the probability of one-in-three and this does not thrill his crew, who eventually learns of Raimius' ulterior motives to defect. Put because of Raimius' excellent navigational skills he continually reassures his crew that he knows what he is doing.

This film, which is based on the book of the same name by Tom Clancy, focuses on the harsh reality of the U.S. and U.S.S.R. relationship before the "Glasnost" days of Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev.

"Red October" is highly suspenseful at some points, but at other times it lulls into extreme technicality, making it difficult to understand what is going on.

"The Hunt for Red October" is rated PG and is now playing at the Varsity Theater.

German reunification hinges on collapse of East, prof says

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

German reunification will not take place in the near future unless the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) collapses, Manfred Landecker, associate professor of political science, said.

"The Germans cannot make this decision by themselves," Landecker said.

Landecker sighted the "two-plus-four" formula used by Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

"Two-plus-four" means the two Germanies will negotiate between themselves and the United States, Russia, France and Great Britain (the four victorious allies of World War II) will have to negotiate amongst themselves.

Landecker had his own formula for German reunification. It is the 2 + 4 + 7 + 12 + 16 + 35 formula. This includes the two-plus-four formula and the seven Western European Union countries within NATO, the 12 countries within the European community, the 16 NATO countries and the 35 members of the Conference of Security and Cooperatives in Europe.

All these organizations are going to want a say in the approval of German reunification, Landecker said.

Jorge Hennig, doctor of physics here on exchange from Clausthal University in West Germany, said things have accelerated recently and now "strong forces want to have it (reunification) in one or two years."

Hennig said he would prefer the unification to take more than one or two years so East Germany will be able to develop some new ideas to contribute.

The East Germans want to have the living standard the West Germans have, Hennig said. But what is going to happen when 450,000 West German troops and 150,000 East German troops are joined? Hennig said adding that

Officials to begin formal negotiations next week for unification of Germany

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The "two-plus-four" process on German unity will begin this week with official talks between the two Germanies and the four victorious Allies of World War II joining next week, West Germany's foreign minister said Monday.

Previously it was believed the talks would not begin until after the March 18 elections in East Germany.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said East and West Germany will meet at the "official" level on unification later this week and the Big Four allies — Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union — will join the talks next week.

Genscher, attending a meeting of European Community foreign ministers, said the meetings would be the first official talks on German unification since the "two-plus-four" process was established in Ottawa last month.

He did not give further details but a spokesman for the EC president later said representatives of the two Germanies would meet Friday, followed by extended talks with the Big Four on March 14.

The East German news agency said the early talks on German unification would force postponement of a March 17 meeting of the Warsaw Pact scheduled for Prague, Czechoslovakia, at least until late in the month.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, who attended a private briefing by Genscher for foreign ministers, said the "two-plus-four" talks would begin soon but gave no details.

Hurd met earlier with NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner and the two "agreed on the desirability" of an early April meeting of NATO foreign ministers on German unification, but no date was set.

In the restricted session with foreign ministers, Genscher sought to reassure EC and NATO partners they would be consulted on all aspects of German unification, according to Hurd and Belgian Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens.

the result would be some worried neighbors.

"We need to find institutions to help resolve these questions," Hennig said.

Uwe Franz, an exchange student from Clausthal University, said reunification could happen in one or two years, but in the beginning West Germany would be contributing the most.

East Germans are willing to work, but the corrupt and mismanaged economic system they have been working under have left them poor and in need of help from the West, Hennig said.

"I would like to see a unified Germany in the framework of a unified Europe," Franz said.

Kerstin Busching, graduate student on exchange from Hamburg, West Germany, said she likes the idea of German reunification.

"On the one hand it's scary, (because European countries are apprehensive about allowing it), one the other hand it would make me happy. I have relatives there," Busching said, adding that the separation of Germany was never intended to be permanent.

Lack of cooperation hinders search for 2,304 POW/MIAs

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

Lack of cooperation is the biggest obstacle in accounting for the 2,304 Americans who are missing in Indochina, the chief of the special office for POW/MIA Defense Intelligence Agency, said.

Col. Joseph A. Schlatter will discuss "government efforts to ascertain the fate of Americans missing in Indochina" at 7 tonight at the Student Center Auditorium.

"In both Laos and Cambodia, 85 percent of the Americans are missing in parts that were controlled by those countries during the war," Schlatter said.

"We don't have evidence that there are Americans alive out there in Indochina, but we can't rule out that possibility."

Schlatter said there were 598 Americans missing in North Vietnam, 1,081 missing in South Vietnam, 537 missing in Laos, 82 missing in Cambodia and 6 missing at sea in China.

"We want the fullest possible accounting possible," Schlatter said.

To get that account, Schlatter said, we need:

- to know if there are Americans still alive in Indochina, and if so, access to them should be allowed.

- return of all remains of Americans.

- access or sharing of the wartime records of Indochinese countries.

- access to the battlefields, prison camps and grave sights.

Vietnam has cooperated on a limited basis, Schlatter said. Since 1973, of the 275 remains the United States has received, 242 of those came from Vietnam.

"We have been to Vietnam nine times searching," he said. "With the Vietnamese we have found the remains of two men. The Vietnamese gave us the remains of 17."

It is obvious that some of the skeletal remains the United States has received were in storage, Schlatter said.

Others were just recently exhumed, which means that the whereabouts of the dead men must have been known all along, he said.

The government of Laos has been less helpful, Schlatter said. Since 1985, there have been eight crash sight excavations and most of those were in this last year, he said.

Cambodia has not allowed the United States to send any teams in to search for remains or interview witnesses, he said.

Indochinese countries do not want to separate humanitarian issues from political issues, Schlatter said. They use humanitarian issues for political leverage.

Schlatter added that the United States once sent the details of the losses of all of the 82 men the U.S. is missing in Cambodia to that country through another country's embassy.

When the U.S. pressed for the release of these remains, the Cambodian government said that it had made a mistake and perhaps the remains of only six or seven were Americans, he said.

Role of secretary to expand in 1990s, according to official

By Jerianne Kimmel
Staff Writer

Secretaries and administrative office support personnel will act as managers and motivators in the 1990s as their role in the workplace expands, Sylvia Shaw, vice president of the Southern Lakes Chapter of Professional Secretaries International, said.

"Secretary" is basically an outdated word," Shaw said. "The role of secretary/support staff is a changing role. Regardless if you're male or female, there is more to being a secretary now."

The role of office staffers is changing every year because of new technological challenges. In "moving right along" with the changes, secretaries have long since done more than answer phones and type letters, Shaw said.

A workshop, "Embracing A New Vision: The Administrative Assistant/Secretary As Manager and Motivator," will be April 17 from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom D. The workshop is designed to help anyone discover ways to:

- motivate and manage self and others,
- project a powerful and capable image,
- get ahead and get along with responsible assertiveness over the phone and face-to-face,
- envision that "ideal future job" and make it happen.

The workshop is a step toward developing necessary communication and motivation skills, Shaw said.

"You have to have the skills in any job you perform in any field," Shaw said. "You have to be motivated and work well with others or you won't get the job you're qualified for."

Joan Linder, president of P.S. Consultants, Inc., of Middletown, Ohio, will conduct the workshop. She has helped more than 300 organizations solve problems and implement strategies for organizational improvement. She has developed and presented custom-designed educational workshops in more than 25 different topic areas throughout the United States and Canada.

Linder has worked with managers, directors, supervisors, technical personnel, secretaries, sales associates and professionals from Fortune 100 companies, such as IBM, AT&T and General Electric. Her clients include organizations such as Federated Department Stores, First National Bank, The American Hospital Association and Union Central Life Insurance.

Linder has done extensive research on dual-career couples and has been on both radio and television, including the Phil Donahue Show, to discuss the topic. She is a national member of The American Society for Training and Development, and has served as Region III Coordinator of Career Planning and Women's Network Representative.

The registration and refund deadline is April 6. The fee of $35 includes lunch. The registration fee for Collegiate Secretaries International members is $15 and does not include lunch.

Checks, made payable to PSI, can be mailed to Rose Bender at 308 S. Forest, Carbondale.

Alcohol plan necessary for vacation

To Your Health

By Jackie Kapres
Wellness Center

Spring Break is around the corner and ads to "Party in Padre" give many students high expectations of fun in the sun. These expectations of not having a care in the world while traveling south may need balancing out with an honest look at the vacation break.

Alcohol, often a big part of break activities, is a very powerful mood and mind altering drug and even small amounts impair vision and reaction time.

"Travel can be a great experience for students," Joe Baker, Safety Coordinator at the SIU-C Wellness Center, said, "but there is always the potential to bring back souvenirs you did not shop for, like legal fines for driving under the influence."

"Also, when drinking is involved, students can find themselves a greater target for stolen wallets or date rape."

Besides considering where to go, where to stay, and how much to spend, students should make decisions on using or not using alcohol. Just as decisions about logistics need to be made prior to departure so should decisions about alcohol use be made before hand. It's a lot harder to think clearly about these decisions in the middle of a party atmosphere.

"Students can reduce their legal and safety risks by not drinking or setting a limit on drinking. Sipping drinks, pacing drinks to one per hour, and eating before drinking alcohol help to minimize negative effects of alcohol," Barb Fijolek, Alcohol and Drug Education Coordinator at the Wellness Center, said.

When making that decision to drink or not to drink, it is important to weigh the risks involved as well as to look at your motivation behind your decisions. Are you drinking because you really want to or because everyone else is? If you drink, how does this affect you and others you are with?

"I think we're closer as a team. We came out here this year with a lot more confidence and we feel like we are the team to beat."

With Creighton out of the running for this year's title, (there never has been a repeat tournament champion), the Salukis will have to fend against the home court that weighs heavily in Illinois State's favor. The Redbirds have won 11 straight home games this year and are winners of 11 of their last 14 games overall.

The Dawgs and Redbirds split the regular season series. Illinois State won 85-75 Jan. 6 in Normal and the Salukis nipped the Redbirds 85-79 Feb. 24 at the Arena.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin would like to guarantee his team a place in the NCAA tournament with a victory over Illinois State. The winner of the tournament will be given an automatic bid to the final 64.

"It means very much to both basketball teams," Herrin said. "I'm sure it's going to be tough. We just hope to come out with great effort tomorrow night for a game between two great college basketball teams."

Illinois State head coach Bob Bender has transformed the Redbirds from a loser into a conference contender in his first season. The Redbirds finished at 13-17 last season. This year ISU finished in a second-place tie behind the Salukis.

Bender said the caliber of the game and the coverage by ESPN will not have an effect on his team's performance.

"We feel that we have our work cut out for us," Bender said. "We have an awful lot of respect for Southern. We have to play well or it's all over."

Creighton and SIU-C advanced to the final game last year but the Bluejays prevailed. Chad Gallagher blocked a last-second shot by Jerry Jones to preserve a 79-77 victory.

ference's growing basketball stature.

"I think it's a sign we've arrived and are strong enough to take it to a neutral site. I'm confident it's worth the risk," Elgin said.

The "risk" is that without an MVC member school in town, attendance could be abysmal.

The MVC, which has its headquarters in St. Louis, has been guaranteed $175,000 from a group of St. Louis businessmen. The group will also pick up $125,000 in expenses, Mitch said.

Although none of the conference members is located in St. Louis, each school is within an easy drive. Southern Illinois, located about two hours away, is the closest and will act as co-host.

The St. Louis area has 25,000 alumni from the eight conference schools, Mitch said. It is also far larger than Peoria or Normal, Ill., Tulsa, Okla., or Wichita, Kan., towns that have played host to the last four tournaments.

first visiting women's basketball team to win in Redbird Arena. Illinois State had won 21 consecutive games in its new Redbird Arena.

The Salukis clinched the Gateway title with a 77-68 victory Friday at Indiana State.

"That is a great credit to this group," Scott said. "They fought and hung together. I really like this team. They are really eager and it's fun just going to practice with them every day."

Scott says sophomore point guard Colleen Heimstead may have been the big factor in the Salukis' run toward the title.

"I would say the maturity of Colleen Heimstead at point guard was the biggest key,"

Scott said. "She is playing with so much confidence now. I think she started coming into her own in February."

The Salukis were 8-1 on the road in conference games and 10-3 overall on the road — including a 62-60 victory over 23rd-ranked Tennessee Tech Jan. 15. Since Jan. 6, the Salukis are 6-0 in games decided by six points or less.

"It's amazing that we won so many close games," Scott said. "This team just wants to win."

The Salukis' success didn't shock their opponents.

"It didn't surprise us," Southwest Missouri State coach Cheryl Burnett said. "Coach Scott has been around too long to underestimate."

Maryland's basketball team put on probation for 3 years

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — The NCAA, reacting to "major violations" of its rules under former coach Bob Wade, Monday placed the University of Maryland basketball program on probation for three years and banned the team from postseason tournaments for the next two years.

School officials reacted angrily to the penalty, which they considered harsher than expected, and University President William Kirwan said Maryland will appeal the sanction, which was formulated by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

In addition to the ban from postseason tournaments, including the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament and both the NCAA or NIT tournaments, during the 1990-91 and 1991-92 seasons, the NCAA banned the Terrapins from live television broadcasts during the 1990-91 season, took away two scholarships and ordered the school to return $407,378 in earnings from the 1988 NCAA tournament for using ineligible players.

The NCAA Infractions Committee report released Monday cited Maryland for 13 separate rules violations during Wade's three-year tenure at the school, which ended with Wade's forced resignation last May.

Among the alleged violations were: Wade lying to NCAA investigators and ordering his assistants to do so; Wade providing illegal inducements, including free clothing, to recruits; Wade providing illegal transportation to Rudy Archer, a former Terrapins player who flunked out of school and was considered a recruitable athlete; and players receiving money from ticket scalping.

School officials have admitted guilt for every cited violation.

Steve Morgan, the NCAA's associate executive director in charge of enforcement, said the NCAA did not impose recruiting restrictions because Maryland officials "cooperated significantly with the NCAA" during its probe. In addition, Maryland is eligible to participate in this year's ACC and NCAA tournaments.

Morgan said several issues weighed heavily in the Infractions Committee decision to render punishment more severe than the organization's prescribed minimum sanctions for such violations, including the school's lack of "institutional control" during Wade's tenure and the fact that Wade's staff knowingly engaged in violations.

Oklahoma is 3rd Big 8 team to earn UPI's No. 1 ranking

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oklahoma, the No. 3 team in the Big Eight much of the season, climbed to No. 1 in the national rankings Monday in voting by the United Press International Board of Coaches.

The Sooners, who knocked off Big Eight rivals Missouri and Kansas in consecutive weeks while those schools were No. 1, vaulted from No. 7 to the top spot. All six teams ranked ahead of the Sooners last week lost at least once.

Oklahoma received 26 of 35 first-place votes and totaled 517 points. Kansas, which fell to No. 2 after losing at Oklahoma, collected four first-place votes. No. 3 Nevada-Las Vegas picked up three first-place votes, while Georgetown, Michigan State and La Salle obtained one each.

Seven coaches did not vote this week. Next Monday marks the final UPI ballot of the season. Voting is based on 15 points for first place, 14 for second, etc.

Softball team rained out at Austin Peay

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Mother Nature spoiled the Saluki softball team's hopes of playing a doubleheader on the last weekend before its March 10-19 spring trip to Florida.

The Salukis were scheduled to play Friday against Austin Peay in Clarksville, Tenn., but the game was canceled because of wet ground conditions.

"I don't really think this will hurt the team at all," SIU-C softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "If it does, we're not as ready as I think we are."

"If this was a freshman team like we had two years ago then I think it might affect us. They have been involved in this game long enough and have been in our program long enough that we are not starting anybody that hasn't already played some. So they should be able to make that adjustment."

With the nice weather Saturday and Monday, the Saluki women were able to practice outdoors on IAW Field.

"That in itself gets you excited. A day like this is great," Brechtelsbauer said. "Now it's softball time. This is when it's fun to be a softball coach."

"I think we'll be as ready as we can be at this time with all the conditions that you have to contend with. Ideally it would be nice to play a game or two before the spring trip, but it doesn't always work out."

year, Ingram was happy with where he took his team.

"We found a home, there is no doubt about it," Ingram said. "This works out perfectly with what we are trying to accomplish. The teams were very receptive to us being there and I think we were excited and inspired by being there."

Ingram also had reason to be happy for himself as he was named Midwestern Championship Coach-of-the-Year.

The Salukis will get one more chance to qualify swimmers for the NCAA championships this weekend as they play host to the Ozark Senior Invitational at the Recreation Center.
