Features of Carnival Festivities

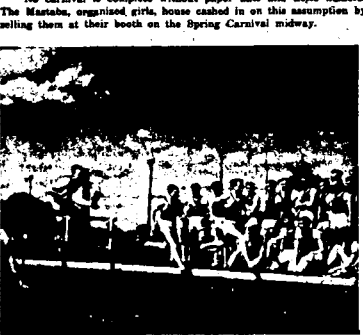

One of the more popular concessions was the Lo-Flow club many pitch. The grand prize for the winners at this concession was a free airplane ride.

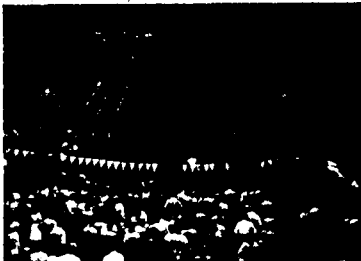

Famous persons participated in the Spring Carnival Variety show. Southern's student body president, Andrew sisters blend their voices in their rendition of "My Billy Bell."

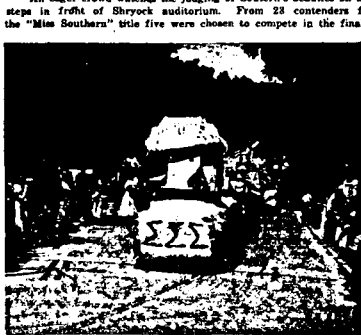

No carnival is complete without paper hats and noise makers. The Mastaba, organized girls, house cashed in on this assumption by selling them at their booth on the Spring Carnival midway.

Pleasant weather and enthusiasm get the Spring Carnival's track meet off to a good start.

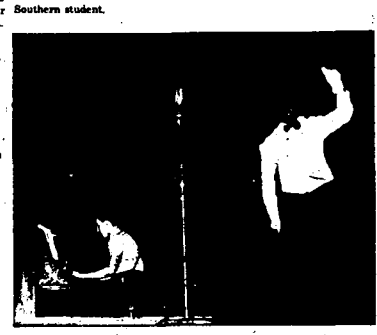

An eager crowd watches the judging of Southern's beauties on the steps in front of Shryock auditorium. From 28 contenders for the "Miss Southern" title five were chosen to compete in the finals.

Noisier harker on the carnival midway was the student who beat on the pan and invited everyone to take a walk on the "Broads of Paris." On his right is Bill Plater sketching a portrait of another Southern student.

Ray Palmer hits a high note in his impersonation of Al Jolson in the Spring Carnival Variety Show.

Southern's Campus Sports Ancient Jolopies As Well As Slinky '48's

By WALLACE PEEBLES

A campus without jolopies would be like a campus without coeds and being an ideal campus, Southern has both.

Charles Stoker of Metropolis has a 1928 Whippet which he drives home and back each weekend. He says it will run 65 miles an hour which is a pretty good speed even for the 1948 jolopy. Stoker obtained it for $125 from a farmer near his home; it had been in storage approximately ten years.

The familiar blue Model T Ford which we have all seen buzzing around the campus belongs to Charles Becherer of Mt. Vernon. It is a 1919 model which sports kerosene lamps and no speedometer, but Becherer thinks it will run approximately 46 or 50 miles an hour, which will throw dust in the face of the fastest track race about a year and a half ago. Becherer drove it to Hobbs, New Mexico without a mishap, that is, until he reached his destination. He had just arrived when a tire went flat; it seems Becherer received a rather bad sunburn in crossing the desert.

Probably the most unusual collection of antique automobiles many of us have heard of belongs to Bud Stanford and his father of Salem. Bud's most familiar car to the campus is his yellow 1925 Model T Ford which he bought from his brother at the beginning of the school year for $100. It has been a family possession for about two years which is easily long enough for it to be a legend. The Model T is only a beginning, however. Their possession is their 1902 Cadillac, which was driven to Carbondale for Southern's last homecoming parade. Everything on the car is original, including the carbide headlight (someone stole the other one), the kerosene parking lights, the spare parts gasoline and one part kerosene, because of the high octane rating, the Cadillac will run about 25 miles an hour. Last year they were offered a new Cadillac for their 1902 model, but they refused it. Their 1947 house were given five for having the oldest running car with up-to-date license. Articles about the Cadillac have appeared in both the Chicago Daily News and St. Louis Globe Democrat. They bought their Cadillac for $125 from a fellow in Salem, where it had been stored in a barn since 1919.

Another of their possessions is a 1917 Studebaker which was owned by a fellow from Mt. Vernon. This one cost them $125. It was being used as a display by a Studebaker dealer in Centralia. Its maximum speed is about 40 miles per hour. A few weeks ago they returned an $800 check to an Oklahoma dealer who had seen it in passing through Salem.

A fire engine which is about 150 years old is their oldest and last antique. This one is the type which must be pulled by manpower. It has a water hose that is lowered into a well, and the water is pumped by a hand pump which again uses manpower.

As we may have guessed, these antiques are collected as a hobby. Bud and his father take them to fairs, reunions, and similar gatherings where their greatest enjoyment is in disappointing the fellow who swears they won't run. Bud says when one of the cars is started it never fails to bring an open-mouthed stare of surprise from the spectators.

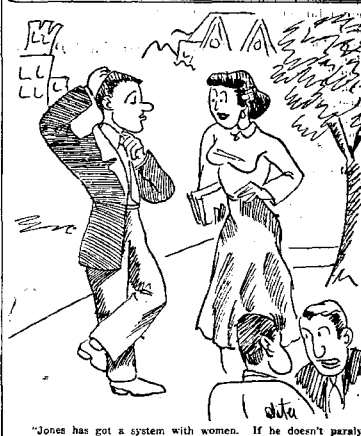

Health Workshop Is To Be Offered

Southern Illinois University will offer a workshop in health education, this summer, for undergraduates, and graduates and in-service teachers. The workshop is offered for 8 quarter hours credit for both graduates and under-graduate students.

The workshop is offered primarily for the benefit of teachers and students who have problems in their school and communities and who are interested in attempting to develop some type of program for solving these problems.

According to Ralph Boatman, health co-ordinator, a number of guest speakers in the various areas of health education have been invited. After a final confirmation of the speakers is received the list will be published.

ABSENTEES ASKED TO NOTIFY HEALTH OFFICE

All students who expect to be absent from school should notify the dean of men's office as far in advance as possible. Absentees, other than those for medical reasons, must be reported in advance, except in case of extreme emergency.

If a student becomes ill, he should notify the health office immediately. In case a student is too ill to go to the health office in person, he should have a member of his household phone the health office as soon as possible.

Alma Ruth Hankla, Dorothy Peterson, Robert Reinhardt, and William Wakeland, seniors, became members of the honorary society last year.

PERSONALITY SPOTLIGHT

By MARY BOSTON

Have you ever wondered how a good fellow like Robert J. Williams acquired a nickname like "Bud"? It's a long story, but it all began when Pud's father's cousin couldn't pronounce Pud's father's name which was Pierce. He soon transformed the Pierce to "Pud," since that time the name has come down through the family—Pud's dad is Pud, Pud's big brother is Big Pud, Pud is Pud, Jr., and Pud's little brother is Little Pud. From now on when we speak of Pud, we are referring to the Pud we know on the campus, the one who was chairman of the Spring Carnival.

Just for the record, Pud is a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. He is from Carmi, and his major and minor respectively are history and speech. Interested in social work, he would like to get a position with some industry as a public relations man after he has completed his college work. Pud likes people, likes to work with them, and likes to be around a lot of people.

His main interest is hunting wild game—deer, quail, pheasant, and duck. He claims two registered bird dogs as his personal property. Pud did his first duck hunting when he was in New California with a C. E. special boyfriend. Also while he was there, he hunted sharks with hand grenades just for the fun of it. He has hunted quail and pheasant all over the Mid-western states.

Included in his activities are vice-president of the New England Alpha social fraternity, Royal Duke of the Southern Knights, chairman of the All-school dance committee, co-chairman of hospital weekend, chairman of Spring Carnival, publicity committee member for homecoming, former member of Egyptian staff, and member of Intertricity Council.

Pud spent his entire life on a farm. He likes the farm and would like to have a home on the farm some day. He states that he never left because of his early life on

Pupa-nality Sketch

By MARY BOSTON

The happy looking conies in the picture is Alfred Carmichael Smith, sophomore from Carbondale. He has the astounding honor of being the most popular dog on the campus. Since this is the result of a poll taken among a great number of dogs, students, and faculty members Alfred is very happy over his recent title.

Alfred is a fortunate dog. He is a dog of respect, he has privileges even the trickiest student hasn't dreamed of yet. He not only cuts the snail part of his classes (occasionally he drifts in and sleeps while the class chews and the professor lectures), but he also makes no appearance on registration day. Since he has never gotten an assignment, he doesn't have a guilty feeling if and when he passes an instructor in the halls.

His personality is on such friendly terms with the personnel in the Dean of Men's Office that he doesn't have to wait for an invitation to drop in for a chat.

Years ago Alfred was told that one should never decide his major or minor until his senior year. Alfred plans to take care of that, and his freshman requirement next year. He contemplates these things sometimes as he lies in the library entrance or on the lawn on the south side of Old Main, but he doesn't think about them for long. He has to keep his mind clear for his next class. He might decide to

Housing Problems Solved By Crews And Family of 3

Living in a trailer may not seem to be the best sort of life to the average individual, but to the Ames Crews and their three children it is a wonderful life. They live in a world of their own. Their trailer is located west of the campus on a vacant lot. Mr. Crews has the convenience of the housewife that lives in a regular home. This typical housewife has no work that is sent to the trailer and back, the table cloth.

Mr. Crews is taking up the battery at the Baptist Foundation and expects to graduate the middle of next month. The family will then move into their home in Ames. The next housing that they will inhabit will be in the vicinity of the Ames campus. Crews will help up the Ames as a member of the Ames Baptist Foundation. The future minister has his own car and is planning to buy a new one. He has a hobby and a wife and three children. He has his own room.

At the present time the family is well satisfied with the facilities and the location, but even dream to someday have a home that they will not have to drive behind there every time they want to take a trip.
