Students not receiving proofs from N.Y. studio

By Cindy Clausen
Student Writer

An untold number of seniors are without their senior pictures and the Obelisk II yearbook is facing a loss of nearly $10,000 owed it by Rappoport Studios, according to Joel Wakitsch, yearbook editor.

"I don't know if they're bankrupt. The Students' Attorney's Office doesn't know for sure either, but we are working on it," Wakitsch said of the New York-based studio.

Rappoport was to pay Obelisk II for each senior whose picture was taken in order to get students' orders for pictures. The studio now owes Obelisk II about $10,000 for this service, Wakitsch said.

The yearbook, however, did receive its copies of senior pictures and distribution of this year's Obelisk II began Monday as scheduled.

Wakitsch said he became aware of the problem when seniors calling the office complained of not receiving their portraits from Rappoport.

Pamela Metz called the studio after her husband, Robert, did not receive proofs in the prescribed six weeks. She said their check for $50 for the proofs had been cashed and returned, however.

The Obelisk office directed her to call the Rappoport studios collect.

"They said they'd print them up again and send them out. We still didn't get anything so I called back in January and again in February, but I couldn't get hold of anybody. Then in April we found out their phones had been disconnected," Metz said.

The Obelisk office has since received about 60 calls from seniors who have not received proofs and cannot reach the company.

Wakitsch said he was informed by Student Legal Service that there had been no response to phone calls to the home or business of the company's president, Richard Restiano.

Wakitsch said any seniors who have not received their proofs should call the Obelisk II office and leave their names and phone numbers. This will help the Students' Attorney's Office find out how many and enable the office to contact the students in case a repayment agreement with Rappoport can be reached.

Wakitsch is not optimistic, however.

Although there has been no notification of bankruptcy, other studios from New York have asked for SIU-C's yearbook photo contract for next year according to Wakitsch. "They seem to know that Rappoport has gone under," he said.

Several money-making ventures are being planned by Wakitsch and the Obelisk II staff to make up the $10,000 loss they may now face.

"The University will absorb much of the loss and we will just gradually pay them back as profits come in over the years. But the bill will get paid," Wakitsch said.

He said the Obelisk has no responsibility for any agreement made between the studio and the students, but he is trying to help out as much as possible.

The yearbook had been working successfully with Rappoport for the past two years and had been considered a reliable and reputable company, Wakitsch said, adding that the studio has new ownership this year.

SIU administrators' salaries criticized by Senate committee

By Jacqui Koszcruk
Staff Writer

Criticism of SIU's administrative pay scales sounded in the Senate appropriations committee may find its way to the Senate floor this week during discussion of faculty salary increase legislation. Sen. Lynn Martin, R-Rockford, said Monday.

SIU officials, among some of the highest paid state employees in Illinois, were grilled by senate appropriations committee members last week about administrative salaries and benefits. Administrators from other state universities were also questioned.

During SIU's bid to boost Gov. James Thompson's faculty salary proposal, Martin and other senators took Chancellor Kenneth Shaw to task for his $65,000 annual salary and the state-supported housing and transportation that he and the two SIU presidents receive.

Sen. Roger Sommer, R-Morton, also predicted that consideration of SIU's and other state university's administrative salaries may be taken up on the senate floor.

"Those salaries look pretty good to me. With all this apparent concern over low faculty salaries," Sommer said, administrators perhaps should "say this year that they don't want salary increases themselves."

Shaw's annual salary tops the governor's salary by $7,000. Acting President Hiram Lesar's salary is $58,140 this year. State legislators earn from $20,000 to $28,000 annually.

Sommer said he suggests that any state university employee earning $30,000 or more annually should forfeit a salary increase. Thirty-nine SIU administrators earn more than $30,000 annually, and 14 make yearly salaries above the $40,000 mark.

The senate will act on an 8.5 percent average pay hike for SIU employees sometime this week, Martin said. The senate, however, does not determine how much of that appropriation will be put into administrative salary increases. That decision is left up to the Board of Trustees, Sommer said.

Last year, the board limited the top three administrators to 5 percent average increases. Other administrators earning more than $40,000 were limited to 6 percent, while faculty received average increases of 7.5 percent.

According to figures from the Illinois Board of Higher Education, SIU's administration is better paid than any other Illinois university administration.

Martin said though SIU administrators usually receive a smaller percentage increase than faculty and staff, their base pay is so much higher that they wind up with higher cash increases every year. She added that the same holds true at some other Illinois universities.

Last candidate on campus

SIU-C 'on the track' for '80s

By Paula Donner Walter
Staff Writer

In the next decade of predicted declining enrollments, students will "vote with their feet, enroll where they can get the best education possible, and will recognize the quality of SIU-C," said Robert Rutford, a candidate for the campus presidency.

Rutford, vice chancellor for research and graduate studies at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, was on campus Monday for public and private interviews with administrators, faculty and members of the Presidential Search Committee. He held two public question-answer sessions in the Student Center Auditorium.

"The next decade of declining enrollments provides universities with the opportunity to reestablish quality in many programs. But I don't think SIU will suffer from these declines. I believe students will recognize quality and will come here rather than go somewhere else," he said.

Rutford said SIU's growing national recognition has been brought about by the publication of scholarly studies in prestigious journals and that such activity must be maintained.

"I believe this institution is on the track to national recognition as a fine institution, which unfortunately to a lot of people is only achieved by the publication of scholarly activities in prestigious journals. If you want national recognition, that's what it's going to take because that's how peer evaluations are made," he said.

Rutford, 47, said teaching activities are not any less important because "the primary reason this institution is here is to provide a four-year baccalaureate degree to the students. But we have graduate programs and therefore are obligated to not simply pass on knowledge, but to create and synthesize knowledge."

Rutford said there should not be set standards for promotion and that circumstances surrounding an individual faculty member's teaching loads and assignments should be documented.

"Standards for every single faculty member cannot be the same and I'm not convinced that every faculty member has to do all three aspects considered when hiring—teaching, research and service," he said.

Rutford said institutions need

10-year-old Med School crusading new concepts

By Jacqui Koszcrnk
Staff Writer

Striking a comfortable balance between research and teaching priorities is a delicate matter for institutions of higher education, but it can be critical for one such as the SIU School of Medicine—only one decade old and a crusader for new medical education concepts in a profession fixed in ivory-covered tradition.

News Analysis

Research productivity is not only a cornerstone of prestige for older, wealthier medical schools. In many cases it is responsible for generating about one-third of the schools' annual income. It is not unusual, as SIU Medical School Dean and Provost Richard Moy points out, for a medical school to take in $20 million to $30 million a year from research. Compare that to SIU's $3 million a year and it becomes obvious that the school's contribution to the medical field is found beyond research lab doors.

Moy acknowledges the value of a faculty actively honing its teaching skills and netting national recognition for the school through research productivity. But Moy, a former University of Chicago Medical School administrator, also speaks of the necessary point of departure for strong research priority schools such as the U of C and the newer, more experimental and teaching-oriented brand such as SIU.

During the SIU Medical School's 10-year history, the balance between research and teaching has been struck in favor of teaching, with emphasis on an innovative medical education curriculum that has shaken the nation's medical ivory towers, says Moy.

With the publication of a new prototype curriculum plan, the school audaciously suggested that for too long medical schools have been keeping aspiring medical students in the dark about departmental standards. It also suggested that medical students had become so entirely preoccupied with grade competition that a sense of attaining a sound medical education had been sacrificed.

In the traditional curriculum, "planning is sequestered within the department," Moy says

"The learning objectives are kept secret."

In contrast, the SIU faculty must identify and make public a detailed set of objectives, telling students. This is what you must know, long before exam time has the chance to evolve into showdowns at sunrise between students—students who supposedly are in the incipient stages of a sophisticated and highly-esteemed professional career.

"There are no secret or surprise questions," Moy states. "The goal is excellence, and the variable is time. For example, in an examination that covers 10 critical principles, under the traditional system a passing grade would be 70, with no one asking what happened to the missing three principles. Under a competency-based system, the student would repeat the missed material until competency in all 10 principles had been demonstrated.

Moy dismisses the claims of "the elitists" who fear that without competition, students will ultimately sag into mediocrity.

"We've managed to avoid the war games," Moy said. "SIU students like each other and they like the faculty. The curriculum was designed because it rewards the type of behavior we want doctors to have."

The school has also loosened the shackles of tradition by establishing one of only 15 it could produce 100 new physicians annually was estimated in 1971 at $20 million, compared to the $100 million it would have taken to build a conventional campus medical school with expensive teaching and research hospitals.

Faced with a shortage of doctors in Central and Southern Illinois and endeared to the possibility of acquiring a new for institutional services.

"We knew the money would dry up over time," Barr said.

Planning ahead for the phase out, the school invested in fledgling research projects in the hope that it would begin to generate grant money on its own.

Since state appropriations are static from year to year, research productivity is also expected to cover inflationary cost increases, Barr said.

Moy maintains that growth in the school's research productivity will be restricted for the most part to research in primary care medical education, covering the areas of family practice, general internal medicine, pediatrics, and obstetrics.

For now, the emphasis at SIU is on research of "immediate teaching value," Moy asserts. "We do not aspire to the $20 million to $30 million a year level. Research productivity will expand because it's necessary for the faculty."

He adds, "We will do laboratory research, sure, eventually."

When judged by its success in establishing a comprehensive and innovative medical education curriculum for practicing physicians, "we are the best in the country," Moy boasts.

Furthermore, with 50 percent of its first group of licensed physicians working in Central and Southern Illinois, the school is just what the doctor ordered for short-handed medical centers and hospitals in those areas.

"The University of Chicago Medical School would flunk out if it were judged only on the basis of its contribution to its community," Moy says.

However, it is equally true that SIU would "flunk out" if judged solely on its contribution to medical research.

In February, a trade magazine labeled SIU one of the "worst" medical schools in the country on the basis of 44 survey responses from deans of various medical schools.

The Chicago Tribune on March 16 went to bat for the school, leading a news story: "Southern Illinois University's Medical School has what is widely regarded as the nation's top program to train doctors" to work in "medically deprived areas."

The State Journal Register of Springfield also heard the call to arms, publishing on its editorial page a caustic attack on the magazine survey.

"SIU has concentrated much more on teaching and meeting the medical needs of its constituency than on research, one of the traditional functions of medical schools. Undoubtedly it was for this reason and because of its newness that the school was rated unfavorably in a recent magazine survey."

Dr. John A. Cooper, president of the Association of American Medical Colleges, also came out publicly against the survey, urging medical school deans not to participate.

Despite SIU's advances in medical education and its support in the state, the school's low research profile does, in some cases, make it difficult to recruit highly-qualified faculty, according to Barr. Those who are attractive prospects as medical educators are also in positions to accept offers from schools providing more lucrative opportunities for laboratory research projects, he explained.

Potential faculty members "must stop and ask themselves if they want to go to a new, experimental school or to an established one with a reputation in research where they can get their feet wet and then try the pioneer atmosphere later," Barr said.

community-based clinical programs in the nation. Students work with physicians existing community hospitals rather than at university owned-and-operated medical centers, thereby "putting clinical training in the real world of real hospitals," Moy claims.

However, Moy added, the decision to use existing facilities for the SIU program had as much to do with economy as it did with a philosophy of education. The cost of building SIU's program to the point that medical school at one-fifth the going rate, the legislature was an enthusiastic "angel" for the community-based approach. The General Assembly subsidized the cost of building the school and now provides $18 million annually, or 84 percent, of the school's income.

Research accounts for only 10.2 percent of the annual budget. But, with the loss of $250,000 in annual federal support currently being phased out, research is expected to pick up some of the slack, according to Jason Barr, assistant dean

Students beware, say officials; spring brings out book thieves

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

Spring not only brings warm weather, Frisbee players and the end of the semester, but it also brings thieves to the campus.

Library and University security officials are warning the unsuspecting to "take care of their things," since a number of thefts have been reported recently.

Dale Cluff, director of library services at Morris Library, said that on Friday alone he received three different reports of book or knapsack thefts. All of the thefts involved students' property and none of the material belonged to the library, Cluff said.

"I understand that this happens every year," Cluff said. "Students leave to go to the stacks or somewhere else and leave their books unguarded," Cluff said.

Joyce Schemonia, a statistical clerk for University Security, said that as of April 1, 15 reports of theft at Morris Library were reported.

"Already in one month, we had more reports than we had for three months," Schemonia said.

Cluff suggests that students make some type of unique identifying marks on their books, such as circling letters on certain pages. He also advised students not to "carry any more than they have to."

Bob Harris, assistant director of University police, said he has at least one plainclothes police officer and one uniformed officer in the library at all times. But, Harris said, it is hard for officers to accost people and have them prove that the books they are carrying belong to them.

During this time of year, Harris said, every bookstore in town is buying back used text books. The bookstore check to see if the books are on the stolen list before they are bought back. If a book is listed, Harris said the bookstore personnel will contact police.

Naomi Patheal, manager of the University Bookstore, recommends that students immediately report all stolen books to the bookstores in town, as well as to police.

Patheal said that the theft rate has been "worse this year" than in the past.

"There have been more reports of stolen books this year and we have been finding more."

The bookstore received 10 reports of stolen books during the last week in April and received 15 reports last week.

Patheal suggests that students write their name or ID number somewhere inside the book.

USO election results show strong finishes by write-ins

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

In last Wednesday's student elections, many students were apparently looking for the "animal" among the student presidential candidates.

Snidely the Snake was the highest presidential write-in vote-getter. Pulling down 73 votes, Snidely was paired up with several vice presidential candidates including Kermit the Frog, Andy Panda, Pete Parakeet, Don Donkey, Toby the Rat, and Ralph the Rat.

According to election commissioner Tim Adams, if Snidely had won he would have been disqualified, not because he's an animal, but because of a campaign violation. Snidely posters were found tacked up on the Route 51 pedestrian overpass, in violation of a rule that stipulates no posters be displayed outside.

"Besides that," Adams said tongue-in-cheek, "he's not registered at SIU-C."

Winning the presidential race was Paul Matalonis—who edged ahead of Tom O'Malley in the last hour of vote counting—by a vote of 1,128 to 1,057.

Running third was a former student vice presidential assistant, Phil Eberlin, with 354 votes.

Other write-in candidates who fared better than Snidely by taking senate seats were Russell Packet and Grant Cynor with 25 and 26 votes consecutively. They won two senate seats representing East Campus.

Winning a Thompson Point seat was write-in candidate Tony Delgado with 19 votes.

Other write-in senatorial candidates included Mickey Mouse, Gonzo, Slim Whitman, George Tirebiter, the 2000-year-old man, Richard Nixon, Eraserhead, No Preference, and Gus Bode.

Insurance groups 'pass buck' in apartment fire responsibility

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

On Sept. 22, 1979, fire destroyed Paula Duren's Southern Hills apartment and all her personal belongings. The fire began three hours after welders finished their work on the apartment's air conditioning system, but its cause has not been determined.

Duren, a graduate student in psychology, has yet to receive the compensation she says she deserves from either the University or H and H Plumbing of Mount Vernon, the company employing the welders.

"I've been going in circles since (the fire) Everyone denies fault while I do without everything," Duren said.

Duren's losses included research for her master's thesis and all her notes for major exams in June.

What Duren expected from the University, she said, was payment for her lost personal possessions. She explained that "the University hired the plumbing company to install air conditioning. It's the University's responsibility to fight the plumbing firm. They have more time and money than I have."

But Richard Higginson, University legal counsel, said he can't legally help Duren. He pointed out that the school has no legal obligation and no legal basis to make a claim.

"We have our own claim against the plumbing company for building damage, and we will jeopardize our claim if we agree to help Paula."

Higginson said the delay has been caused by the insurance companies for the University and the plumbing firm, both of which sent investigating teams to the accident scene. Each company filed a report. Duren and her attorney, Jerry Reed of Murphysboro, have been attempting to get a copy of the report filed by the University's insurance company, which is owned by Employers Insurance of Warsaw.

Tom Busch, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, said the report belongs to the insurance company and will be used as evidence in court should the University sue H and

H Plumbing. He added that "simply because a company is under contract to the University doesn't make the University liable."

Attorney Reed said that if Duren is to file suit to recover damages, she must have a copy of the insurance report.

"The insurance company has offered to present the report if Paula will pay one-third of the costs of putting the report together," he said.

Duren said the cause of the fire is clear: No shield was erected to protect the wood behind the pipes being welded. The wood slowly got hotter and hotter until it burst into flames. Duren maintained.

Not so, said Larry Bell, of the Ohio Casualty Group of Springfield, the insurance company for H and H Plumbing. He said their engineer noted poor, cheap construction, little fire protection, and rotted out wood in Duren's Southern Hills apartment. "The fire was unfortunate for Paula, but it remains to be seen who is to blame. We wouldn't rule out a compromise, if both we and the University insurance company were to share the cost of damages," he explained.

Sam Rinella, University housing director, emphasized that the school carries no insurance on personal effects. He suggested that a student should either carry his own insurance or use his parents' homeowners insurance. "If that were present in Paula's case, her insurance company would be pursuing her claim, not her," he said.

8 bodies sent home; London siege ends

By The Associated Press

Iran turned over the bodies of eight U.S. servicemen Monday to a Greek Roman Catholic archbishop in Tehran who said he would take them to Switzerland the next day for return to families in the United States, Tehran radio said.

In London, police stormed the Iranian Embassy, ending the six-day occupation by Iranian Arab gunmen. Police said three gunmen were killed, one was arrested and one was hospitalized. The five gunmen, who held an estimated 19 hostages at the embassy, belong to the ethnic Arab minority of Iran's Khuzestan province. They have been demanding the release of Arab prisoners in Iran, but the Iranian government refused to negotiate.

Carter hopeful Illinois will ratify ERA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Monday there is a "better chance this year than we've ever had" to see the Equal Rights Amendment ratified in Illinois.

The president told a national convention of the League of Women Voters in a Washington hotel that if Illinois ratifies the amendment, "it'll only leave two states and it'll be much easier for us to get those states subsequently."

He received prolonged, tumultuous applause when he declared that the ratification of the ERA was "one major unmet need" in the nation's economic and social progress.

Mentioning that he has appointed three women to Cabinet positions and 28 women to the federal bench, Carter added:

"I would like to see, with the Equal Rights Amendment applicable throughout the nation a time in the not-distant future when no president or no public speaker would have to ever mention again how many women judges there are."

Tito's body lies in state in Belgrade

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The body of President Josip Broz Tito lay in state Monday beneath the dome of Yugoslavia's Parliament building after his personal train carried it through the heart of the country he ruled for more than a generation. His death brought his widow back into public view after 2½ years in disgrace.

Communist party and government officials placed red wreaths on the light brown, oak casket as Tito's sons, Zarko and Misha, and his formerly estranged wife Jovanka stood by weeping.

His marriage to Jovanka was revealed in 1962. After being his constant companion in public for years, she dropped from sight in 1977 amid reports—never denied—that she had manipulated to arrange a position for herself in the Yugoslav hierarchy after Tito's death. Yugoslav officials never discussed the reason for her disappearance.

Students respond to coverage of black events

By Lula Fragg
and Donald X. Williams

Again, it is time to address the Daily Egyptian concerning its superb "miscoverage" of particular campus and community events. From the startling, spectacular front-page results of the official cardboard boat race to the beautiful, illustrative cover photograph of the coming of spring, is obviously indicative of the DE really being on its job. Never let it be said the DE staff forgoes an opportunity to cover significant campus occurrences.

However, there is one particular arena of events which seems to be, arbitrarily of course, mitigated—even, if you allow, overlooked. We realize the DE's naivens of "other" areas of campus news is "conventional" journalistic etiquette, so to criticize these campus reporters would be improper. Surely, Tribute to Black Men, the Miss Eonness Pageant, minority scholarship recipients and the Black Affairs Council executive officers elections have no stature in the annals of the DE.

Perhaps this "effective" reporting

Viewpoint

can be attributed to the editors' professed "shortage of able-bodied" reporters. This is why we applaud this news team for sacrificing full coverage of the King All Class Day and Delta Sigma Theta's Jabberwock in order to "uncover" and feature "front-page" the indiscretions of University Housing's dealings with Kappa Alpha Psi's residency contract. This disclosure typifies the epitome of adequate access to the press.

Fortunately, George Brass, pre-law sophomore, and his acclaimed Carbondale-to-Chicago run did not fall into this category of events worthy DE consideration. Nor were such un-begging events as the Kenneth Garrison Annual Fashion Show, BAC's prison program and Black History Month. Alpha Phi Alpha's recent state convention held at SIU Blacks Interested in Business' Minority Business Day and the Annual Paul Robeson Awards Picnic worth of DE concern. It is student journalism such as this which instills "positive" impressions in readers' minds, isn't it?

Recently, a group of students approached the DE editorial staff with grievances concerning the paper's intentions. These disgruntled students were not happy with the DE's fascinating in-depth news coverage. They were not happy with stories such as the cardboard boat race or pictures informing them spring had arrived.

They wanted, for some strange reason, to read about King All Class Day, the five minority psychology students who received $2,500 in fellowships, George Brass' run and all other "non" covered events.

Isn't this a bit strange students protesting against the DE? It was pointed out these students wanted the paper to change its reporting procedures. How absurd! But don't ruffle your tailfeathers, contented readers, you can rest assured these "radicals-leftist" won't receive any publication, nor will their demands be met, or might they?

Letters had been mailed to the newspaper by miscellaneous groups inquiring as to why certain events had not been covered. But, these letters were not consistent. So, the DE felt it was in no impending predicament warranting measures of rectification. Unfortunately for the DE, these people have not forgotten their poignant concerns.

What now will the DE do? We, as concerned students, authors of this prose and supportive of these disenfranchised readers have a suggestion. It is time for the DE to illuminate, for questioning readers, its judicious tactfulness responsible for such superb journalistic exhibitions.

The sooner the better.

(Editor's Note: Fragg is assistant editor of the Black Observer. Williams is chairman of Action Team, a campus political organization.)

Balance the housing books

I am a resident of Wright III in University Park on East Campus. It has come to my attention that housing payments for the Triads are identical to those of Neely Tower and Brush Towers. However, the accommodations are not identical. In particular, is the absence of air conditioning in the Triads.

I know the air conditioning units have been installed in the rooms—because I use mine as a book shelf. It's too bad that I can't use it as an air conditioner though. I know your upset too, Sam (Rinella, housing director). But, the fact of the matter is it doesn't work. Now I ask you Sam, why should the residents of the Triads be forced to pay the same amount of money for housing, that doesn't have air conditioning, as residents pay for housing that does?

Sam, I know it is easy to hold onto the extra money that the Triad residents paid at the beginning of the year in anticipation of air conditioning during the spring months. But now let's see if you and the housing office really do have a heart. Will you balance of books with the Triad residents?

Sam, would you pay extra money for no added benefit? I don't think you would. So how can you demand that Triad residents do just that, I feel that I and all other Triad residents are getting ripped off by you and the housing office. I don't like the feeling any more than you do, Sam. Why don't you do something about it to make me feel better? Come on Sam, show me that you and the housing office are not insensitive to your residents' problems. Please prove to me that housing is where the heart is, and the conscience! — Peter A. Tremulis, Senior, Marketing

EDITOR'S NOTE: Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, explained that air conditioning in all University Housing will be turned on when warranted by weather conditions.

Pull together as a nation

Despite being very interested and concerned over the Iranian situation the past six months, I like many others, have refrained from speaking out publicly. But after the occurrences this past week, I feel I can no longer keep my thoughts and ideas to myself.

I was shocked by the tragedy during the rescue attempts, and wish to send my deepest sympathy to the families and friends of the brave AMERICANS who lost their lives while serving their country.

It was an even greater shock when I saw the public display of the remains of these men in Tehran. What kind of barbarians could do such a thing? And these people can consciously call themselves men? This is not an act typical of modern men, but an act expected of primitive barbarians.

Even fellow Iranians were shocked by these clergymen's orders! Maybe this is why so many problems have arisen in the efforts to release the hostages. We expected to deal with intelligent, feeling humans, but have found ourselves dealing with just the opposite.

I, like many, had hoped that efforts for the release of the hostages would have fallen short of military action, but the time had come when action of some sort was needed. And, although the rescue failed not because of poor planning and the quality of men, but a combination of unlucky and untimely mishaps, we should not give up and sulk over our losses, but gain strength from them and pull together as a proud nation.

We have to prove to these people and the rest of the world that no matter what, we will not give in to these criminal wishes, but will remain strong and become victorious in the end.

It is a shame that it takes a tragic event like this to pull a country together and allow people to show how proud they are to be Americans. I never have and never will have any doubts in my mind. I hope those who have had doubts in the past, will take this time to reach deep into their minds and thoughts and express their true feelings.

Something needs to be done to eliminate this ordeal immediately. Although the United States is not totally innocent of wrongdoings in the past, this is no excuse to place the suffering on the innocent people held hostage. This suffering should be placed on the party responsible for their captivity and I'm sure they will pay the consequences in the near future.

I am sick and tired of hearing those no-minded, babbling, idiots yell...down with and death to Americans. And I for one would like to say...down with the Ayatollahs of Iran!! — Shane Bird, Graduate Student, Geology

Review offended everyone

The DE has been a continuing source of amazement to me but this last issue (April 25) contained an "article" which provoked me to put my amazement in writing.

I fail to see where a review surfaced anywhere in the 110 pages of drivel produced by Ken Mac Garrigue and Tony Delago. What appeared was a childish tirade which maligned, stereotyped and offended nearly every person on the SIU-C campus.

I especially take exception to the passage concerning Women's Studies. In one sentence, the writers offended Women's Studies majors and homosexuals. I also object to their obsolete term for homosexuals.

I seriously doubt that a junior high school student would even consider handing the copy desk such a banal attempt at humor. The editors should feel ashamed for running such trash if they had a two column hole to fill on page 25. Unfortunately for the other staffers, the supposed review appeared with two other well written reviews.

Being a journalism major and having worked as a reporter for almost two years, I am embarrassed and insulted that Mac Garrigue and Delgado may someday work in the same profession with me. I would like to offer them a little advice which can be heard in the lyrics to a song by the rock group America: "Don't cross the river if you can't swim the tide." — Michelle Schwent, Junior, Journalism

Rainbow's End seeking funds from administration for move

By Carrie Sweeney
Staff Writer

WANTED: one or two large rooms available for rent by June, 1980. Must be able to accommodate between 30 and 40 energetic children along with assorted games and toys, and must have kitchen facilities. Please contact Rainbow's End Nursery School.

WANTED: approval of University administration to finance and support the renting of aforementioned facility. Please contact Rainbow's End.

Rainbow's End is moving out of Pulliam Hall on the SIUC campus, that is if it can find an appropriate building to move into and if the University will pick up the tab for rent, says Margaret Gossage, assistant director of the nursery school.

If the University chooses to not finance the facility, she added, then the school will have to close.

"We have been given permission to stay in Pulliam until the end of the summer semester, but we definitely are moving, or closing," Gossage said.

Currently, most of Pulliam is used for classrooms, special education offices and the nursery school. However, by the end of summer, the offices of Home Economics Education will move from the Home Economics Building into the nursery school's rooms Gossage said.

"There is one building that we could possibly move to, if we can get licensing and rent money for it. The University will decide by June whether it's going to pick up the rent."

Physician Prescribes Manipulation For Low Back Pain

By Dr. Roy S. White Doctor of Chiropractic

The above headline is from a column by Ben Zinser, medical science editor of the Long Beach, California, daily newspaper.

Of course, the concept that those who suffer low back pain can be helped by manipulative therapy is nothing new to the Doctor of Chiropractic.

Consider these comments made by a world-renowned orthopedic specialist in California as reported in the Los Angeles Times: Their headline read: Spine manipulation for back pain urged.

"Anaheim—It's a crying shame that more physicians are not interested in manipulation of the spinal column to solve back problems because that technique, properly done, could save an awful lot of surgery bills," a noted British orthopedic surgeon told a California Medical Association here Saturday.

Dr. James Henry Cyriax was invited to address the CMA's 100th annual scientific session because he has the reputation of being one of the world's leading authorities on backache.

Dr. Cyriax told a press conference that doctors had pretty much ignored his 40 years of preaching about the value of manipulation.

Yet, Dr. Cyriax said, his experience based on more than 40,000 backache cases has shown that 1% or fewer need surgery.

He said the only justification for surgery is incurable pain.

Many are operated on because the surgeon thinks the pain is incurable, but the fact is that 9 out of 10 getting it don't need surgery, he said. He added that in the United States, where operations of most kinds are more common than in Britain, the incidence of back surgery is even higher.

During the press conference Dr. Cyriax described manipulation as the use of the hands by a doctor. Manipulation is not new, but is just not being used by medical doctors, he said.

Manipulation is used, of course, by Doctors of Chiropractic in the everyday care and treatment they render their patients.

Expert on job finding to speak about tactics

Tom Jackson, one of the nation's leading experts on jobs and finding employment, will speak on the topic "Guerrilla Tactics in the Job Market" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Ballroom D of the Student Center.

Jackson is the author of three books: "The Hidden Job Market," "28 Days to a Better Job" and "Guerrilla Tactics in the Job Market" - and has over 15 years of experience in the career development field. He has been responsible for contracts with federal and state government agencies for job development and placement programs and has designed out-placement facilities for terminated employees.

The lecture will cover such topics as how to find the "hidden jobs," how to market yourself, how to find 85 percent of the jobs that are not advertised and how to avoid some of the most common job seeking mistakes. Jackson will also discuss ways to get "inside" to top management, how to understand yourself in relation to the job market and what areas will experience growth in the 1980s.

Admission is $1 and tickets are now on sale at the Student Center Central Ticket Office. The program is sponsored by the Student Programming Council Lectures Committee.

New synthetic fuel industry may cut foreign dependency

CHICAGO (AP) — Increased use of coal and an "entire new industry" built around synthetic fuel plants could help lessen this nation's dependency on imported fuels and meet a shortfall in the world oil supply, speakers told the American Mining Congress.

Randall Meyer, president of Exxon Co., U.S.A., told the congress' opening session Monday that a sizable contribution from solar and other renewable sources of energy was still decades in the future, so "virtually all growth in domestic energy supply will have to come from conventional nuclear power and direct burning of fossil fuels."

In an afternoon address, Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson called for major changes in federal laws and regulations which currently prevent maximum tapping of coal reserves.

"We cannot survive so long as we keep our coal industry in parking gear and keep sitting on 80 percent of our fossil fuel resources while we keep our economy more than 80 percent dependent on other fuels," Thompson said.

The governor also said recent Carter administration proposals that the federal government spend $10 billion to $15 billion over 10 years to pay a portion of converting utilities and industries to coal are "too little, too late."

Meyer said a synthetic fuel industry would lead to a "significant" drop in imported oil by the 1990s and "considering the availability of the technology, the size of the resource base, and the financial capabilities of the private sector," oil imports could be "eliminated completely early in the next century," Meyer said.

Meyer said such an industry—processing coal and oil shale in equal amounts—could produce some 15 million barrels per day.

Trial procedure for mentally unfit unconstitutional

ROCKFORD (AP) — A Circuit Court judge on Monday ruled unconstitutional the state's procedure for handling cases of criminal defendants declared mentally unfit to stand trial.

Under the state's criminal code revision, a judge decides whether a mentally unfit defendant goes to a mental institution or is set free, depending on the evidence presented at a so-called discharge hearing.

But Judge John Layng said it is wrong that the defendant has no right to a jury. He also questioned how a defendant unfit to stand trial can assist his defense lawyer adequately in the discharge hearing.

Layng's ruling came in the case of Ray Koons, 41, of Rockford, charged with aggravated arson and sent to a mental hospital after a discharge hearing.

State's Attorney Dan Doyle said he will appeal the ruling to the Illinois Supreme Court. Lawyers said that although Layng's ruling is not binding in other counties, it nevertheless will affect many other discharge hearings around the state.

'Ron' never flubbed a line, recalls Reagan's high school drama coach

DIXON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's old drama coach remembers "Ron" as never flubbing a line and thinks he has the makings of a president.

"Some may think that at age 69 Reagan is too old," says 84-year-old B.J. Frazer. "But he still has amazing vitality, good looks and attitude. He looks 59, and I think he has a good chance of becoming president."

"He's welcome to the damn job," Frazer said. "If he gets in, half the people will think he is doing a bad job if he doesn't solve their problems right away. I think he can sell the idea that if people want things they have to pay for them—that the gravy train stop here."

"I've been a Democrat my whole life, but I cross party lines to vote for Reagan."

Reagan, the front-running Republican presidential nominee, won his first election in 1928, his senior year at North Dixon High School. He was chosen president of the student body, recalled Frazer, who was assistant principal and drama coach.

"He starred in our class plays and was in my drama club three years," Frazer said. "From the very first he stood out. He always delivered his lines perfectly, never flubbed one, and lived the part he played."

Frazer said he has seen several of the some 50 movies Reagan appeared in. After Reagan graduated from Eureka College near Peoria, he went into radio sportscasting in Davenport and Des Moines and landed in Hollywood in 1937.

"He was thinking about selling shoes in his dad's shoe department at Montgomery Ward, but I told him to go where he could use his talents, and he followed the advice," Frazer said.

"His best roles were as Drake McHugh in 'King's Row' and George Gipp in 'Knute Rockne—All American.' But most of his movie vehicles were pretty light. He didn't do such a helluva job out there."

Frazer says Reagan now and then writes to him, but he hasn't seen him for about 15 years. He remembers him as an "ideal" with a B-plus average.

"He never was in any trouble in school. Maybe I made it easy for him," said Frazer, who lives with his wife of 57 years on a quiet, residential street.

"He made the football team at end. But he was nearsighted and when he first went out he was hit in the face by a pass. As I recall, he didn't make the basketball team.

"Reagan was the kind of boy who gravitated to the leadership in the classroom and on the field," Frazer said. "He was a very curious kid. He wanted to know the answers to everything. He had an intense inquisitiveness that not many teen-agers have."

Frazer recalled that Reagan "reacted all the time to what was going on in class and this quality rubbed off on others."

Center for chemistry history established to preserve works

By Pete Knecht
Student Writer

In an effort to satisfy the need to have the history of successes, failures and biographies of chemistry preserved, an SIU-C chemistry professor has been a major proponent in establishing a center for the collection of contemporary chemical work. John H. Wotiz, chairman of the Division of History for the American Chemical Society, said "it is long overdue that we preserve the work of outstanding chemists" and has helped instate the new Center for the History of Chemistry. Currently, few records of chemists' activities are kept, and those that are maintained are usually done insufficiently, Wotiz said.

Maintaining an accurate history of chemistry is important to current and future generations of chemists, Wotiz said. Chemists can work more efficiently from a base of established knowledge, thus saving both money and time.

"We don't want to repeat the mistakes of the past," Wotiz said. "We want to have the best and avoid the worst."

"Too many times we see the end result," he said, "but how did we get there?"

The Center for the History of Chemistry, approved by the Division of History last September, will formally attempt to maintain the needed records of current work by individuals and companies in the chemical industry, including biographical data on modern-day chemists, Wotiz said.

"We want to write a history as we go along," he said, "so that future generations will have a better understanding and appreciation of what our work has been."

The CHC, tentatively planned for location in Washington D.C., will be a full-time program employing historians and staff to collect and "digest" material from the chemistry field, Wotiz said. This includes documents, laboratory notes, sketches and taped interviews with chemists.

Having a chemical history available can aid chemists seeking to apply existing research to new topics, Wotiz said, and problems in granting patents for discoveries might be eliminated.

In addition, establishing biographical information on notable chemists will help satisfy future curiosity as to "how things got where they are, how the chemists managed and what motivated them," Wotiz said.

With experts at CTC to analyze and compare data, relations between chemical industries and the public should turn more favorable, Wotiz said. This could be an immediate benefit of the CHC.

"The public is more likely to accept an unbiased appraisal of information from a person who can properly analyze it," Wotiz said. The neutral source would prevent company propaganda from influencing the public's opinion on research.

Wotiz expects a director to be chosen for CHC in September. The director will determine when the center begins its work and how its staff is to be hired. Initially, funding will come from dues of the 120,000 ACS members.

Drama used to draw students back to foreign language study

By Beth Williams
Student Writer

Learning a foreign language does not necessarily have to consist only of monotonous recitation and dull grammar exercises. As several SIU-C professors have discovered, drama can also be used to draw students back into the foreign language classroom.

Enrollment in foreign language classes experienced a decline during 1970s, stated a recent article in the Chronicle of Higher Education. As this decline was felt in foreign language departments across the country, instructors began employing a variety of teaching methods to arouse students' interest in foreign languages.

Tony O'Meara, an associate French professor, said enrollment in foreign languages began to increase a couple of years ago. He added that he doesn't "know if my teaching can be credited for the rise in enrollment, though."

O'Meara teaches an unusual 400-level French class that provides students with an opportunity to apply their particular field of study to the French language.

Students taking the class may opt for the more traditional methods of studying French—reading, writing, or conversing in French or they may try a different approach, such as acting in a French play.

Once the student decides what his particular project will be, the entire semester is spent working on that project. O'Meara said one student applied her advertising major to the French language by doing the advertising in French for the class' play production. The class recently presented two plays entirely in French.

O'Meara said he feels the course is "unanimously enjoyed by the students," but added that the large number of different projects took a lot out of him.

O'Meara said he also encourages his lower-level students to become involved in this 400-level class by taking small parts in the plays. He said he hopes the walk-on parts "will whet their appetites for future classes."

Nancy Norris, a visiting assistant professor of spanish, uses role playing to relieve the tedium of grammatical drilling. She said this role playing gives her students a "feel for the situation."

Norris said she begins by describing a situation—like ordering dinner at a restaurant or going to a party—and the students assume Spanish-speaking roles in that situation.

Norris said she favored the use of dramatics in the classroom because it enhances the curriculum. However, she said, "It must be used with discretion."

Taking foreign languages encouraged in high schools

By Carol Knowles
Student Writer

Eighty percent of the high school students polled during the Seventh Annual Foreign Language Day held recently said they would not be enrolled in a foreign language if it were not a prerequisite for college.

Fifty out of about 1,100 students from 48 Southern Illinois high schools were included in the poll.

Ninety-five percent of the students polled said that their high school counselors encouraged foreign language enrollment.

Karen Delaney, a sophomore at Herrin High School, said that counselors strongly recommended that she take a foreign language course, especially if she was college-bound.

"Many field trips, including a summer trip to Spain, are planned to keep students interested," she said.

Jennifer Jones, a senior at Centralia High School, said encouragement is given by teachers as well. "Once you're enrolled, they try to get you to take more classes," she said.

Family influence is another reason students enroll in a foreign language class, the poll showed.

"I took German because my mother was born in Germany," said Jeff Campbell, a Carlyle High School student.

Donald Bankhead, a Murphysboro High School sophomore, said he is taking a foreign language because it's fun.

"I like the teacher," he explained, "and it's a good class."

Foreign Language Day is a means of raising both interest and enrollment in foreign language studies, said Rick Williams, chairman of the 1980 Foreign Language Day Committee.

"Slide presentations, sing-alongs, craft shows and magic acts, as well as lectures are included to acquaint students with foreign cultures," he said.

Curriculum studies test ideas

By Mark Swanson
Student Writer

Curriculum research is one way that new ideas can be introduced, developed and tested in the university setting and the Office of Research Development and Administration helps the faculty to find funds for the research, according to Sonja Eveslage, one of six program development specialists.

In any college or university new ideas can be introduced at the administrative or curricular levels, she said, but to students curricular changes are most noticeable.

"Changes in curriculum are typically initiated by the faculty," Eveslage said, "but in order for them to be put into effect, some testing must be done."

Testing takes money, Eveslage said. Grants for such research are available from among hundreds of federal and state agencies and private

Du Quoin to hold dirt car racing starting May 31

The 1980 U.S. Auto Club championship dirt car race season will open May 31 with a 100-mile contest at the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds. The race marks the 25th anniversary of USAC dirt car racing at the fairgrounds.

All of the top name drivers in the USAC championship dirt car circuit are expected to compete in the event, including 1979 national dirt car champion Bobby Olivero, Bill Vukovich, Pancho Carter, Gary Bettenhausen and Bill Puterbaugh. The race will be seen nationally on ABC's Wide World of Sports on a tape delay basis.

Tickets for the 2 p.m. race are $9 reserved grandstand and $7 unreserved. Ticket orders should be addressed to the Du Quoin State Fair Association at P.O. Box 191 in Du Quoin.

foundations, she said, and this is where the Office of Research Development comes in.

"Our main function is to facilitate grant getting for research projects," Eveslage said. "We help teachers learn what grants apply to their discipline."

This year, 425 grants were awarded to projects ranging from values in the communication arts to curriculum for competency-based agriculture occupations.

A sure way for faculty members to cultivate new ideas is to be involved with people in their field of study outside the University, she said. In this way they are aware of what is going on in their discipline.

"Our office tries to keep the faculty in touch with the priorities of funding agencies," Eveslage said. "There are so many programs that projects previously refused funding could receive money with only minor packaging changes."

Not all ideas are that flexible, however, and many times Eveslage said she has advised an instructor to seek funding from alternative sources rather than change the "substance" of an idea to fit a particular agency.

Student death rate here lower than five-year national average

By Erick Howenstine
Staff Writer

If your parents worry about your safety while you reside in Carbondale, try this one on them: The death rate of SIU-C students is 50 percent below the national average.

A morbid form of consolation perhaps, but one that can be statistically supported.

Nationwide, there are 12 deaths per 10,000 each year in the 15- to 24-year-old age group. But, during the past five years at SIU-C, the death rate in that age group has been half the national average, according to Joyce Schemonia, a University Security statistical clerk.

Of the 84 SIU-C students who have died since 1975, 56 died as a result of accidents. There were five suicides and one murder. Thirteen died of natural causes and the causes of six deaths remain unknown.

Schemonia said most of the fatal accidents were motor vehicle crashes. The second most common fatal accident has been drowning, followed by pedestrian-train deaths. The more unusual causes of death have included a fall from a cliff, a residence fire, a parachuting accident and inhalation of vomit.

Of those reported to the Security Office, most of the deaths by natural causes were a result of heart attacks.

In the past 10 years, 13 SIU students have committed suicide, Schemonia said. Of the five cases for which the reason has been established, all have been related to severe depression, she said. In the other eight cases the reasons are unknown.

Four students died in leaps from the 11th, 12th or 13th floor of Neely Hall. The next most common method of suicide was self-inflicted gunshot wounds, followed by drug overdose, carbon monoxide poisoning and hanging.

"Suicide is a very individual type of thing that comes from a complete sense of hopelessness," Elwyn Zimmerman, a counseling psychologist at the Counseling Center, said.

But fleeting thoughts of suicide are not abnormal. "In that sense, possibly one-half of the population is suicidal," he said.

Though "depression" is a common problem for everyone," Zimmerman said, SIU has had few students seeking counsel for suicidal depression.

"In the past year I've had about a half-dozen clients who had suicide in their thinking," he said.

SIU has a number of programs and services that may account for the relatively low suicide rate among students here, Zimmerman said. In addition to the services offered by the Counseling Center, the Health Service, Student Wellness Center, Human Sexuality Service, the Clinical Center, the Recreation Center and the residence hall system are all staffed to meet the student counseling needs.

"A lot of things go on that are not pointed at suicide prevention, but rather are added to the climate of mental health," he said.

Zimmerman, a registered psychologist with a doctorate in student personnel, has worked at the Counseling Center for eight years. He said there is a "healthy climate" on the SIU campus and that the staff has a good attitude toward students.

Just the presence of another person often subsides the suicidal impulse, he said.

Suicide can be the result of a short-lived impulse, Zimmerman said. He advises people who might be affected by such impulses to avoid situations that may present such a "nuisance." This may mean selling a personal weapon, or even staying away from high places.

The center offers individual and group therapy, as well as various workshops in the Student Center and in residence halls.

Rare dog virus suspected in area

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

A rare strain of virus carried by dogs may have found its way to the Southern Illinois area, and dog owners are being cautioned to keep a careful eye on their pets.

One case of the virus, suspected to be a strain of Palvo virus carried only by dogs, has been reported to a Murphysboro veterinarian.

Although the case reported has not been positively identified as Palvo virus, Dr. Charles Koehn said he has sent blood samples to New York for tests.

Koehn said the virus is not communicable to humans. To his knowledge, Koehn said, there have been no cases diagnosed to be Palvo disease in Southern Illinois, although there have been a few cases reported in northern Illinois.

Dogs infected with the virus vomit blood and have bloody diarrhea, Koehn said. The symptoms appear without warning, and the infected animal may die within a day.

Koehn said many people think their dogs just swallowed a foreign object when the dogs vomit blood, but he advised dog owners not to take this symptom lightly while suspicion of the virus exists.

Dogs exhibiting possible symptoms should be taken to a veterinarian immediately, Koehn said. He said the dog suspected to have the virus will probably live because it received treatment in time. The dog is currently being kept under quarantine, Koehn said.

The virus is transmitted through the air, via contact with another dog or by sniffing another dog's urine. The dog possibly infected with the virus was in Texas recently, where cases of Palvo virus have been diagnosed, Koehn said.

'Counts' lecturer emphasizes need for peaceful coexistence

By Candice LeGassy
Student Writer

Accepting racial differences as a source of pride is the most important element in creating the best environment for learning, says Jerry Apodaca, former governor of New Mexico and the first Spanish-American governor in the nation.

Apodaca, guest speaker for the College of Education-sponsored George S. Counts lecture series, emphasized that the 1980s will be a time to develop an attitude of peaceful coexistence.

"I see this as the theme of the 1980s," he said. "We must not live together as a melting pot, but rather as a pot of stew—without the need for blending but always with the need for coexistence."

Educators and others in positions of influence must consider as part of their responsibilities the need to transmit feelings of ethnic pride, Apodaca said.

Teachers must also reinforce, for their students, the concept of an "open society" where a person can achieve what he wants if he is willing to work.

"Once we have accepted the differences, then give us all the opportunity to succeed. Give us all the opportunity to fail. Give us all the opportunity to participate and to be No. 1 and not just No. 2," Apodaca said.

While he was governor, Apodaca said he was often frustrated trying to transmit these feelings of ethnic pride to the people of New Mexico.

"I had an opportunity to talk with many people during my campaign for governor in 1974," he said. "Some would stop me and say, 'A Hispanic will never be governor. I heard this more from my own people than from non-Hispanics.'"

Apodaca said these reactions gave him the energy to continue until he had accomplished what he had set out to do.

"Somehow, for whatever reasons, there was this compelling attitude that someone with an ethnic background should not aspire to achieve those kinds of goals," he said.

It became important for him to succeed, he said, so that he might leave open the door to other Hispanics who might choose to follow.

Apodaca said he faced a similar frustrating experience while campaigning for Jimmy Carter in 1976. The Spanish community of Southern California questioned his support of Carter. They felt Jerry Brown was more sympathetic to their needs.

One member of the Spanish community accused Apodaca of not being a "typical Mexican," to which Apodaca replied there was no question of his ancestry.

"What disqualifies me?" asked this person. "Is it because I have worked hard and have gone to college? Is it because I have been successful as a businessman and as a governor?"

"Should I assume, then, to be a 'typical Mexican' one must be a failure, unemployed and on welfare?" Obviously, the answer is no," he said.

German professor to visit Austria to research obscure theater critic

By Merritt Mills
Student Writer

Searching for insights and information about a relatively obscure German theater critic will be the assignment of Frederick Betz, associate professor in German, when he travels to Vienna, Austria for three weeks in June.

Betz will research the career of Max Lesser, who wrote theater reviews for Das Neues Wiener Tagblatt, a Vienna newspaper, from 1887-1930.

Lesser was extraordinary in that he was with one newspaper for about 45 years, and his career spanned the transition from naturalism to expressionism in the German theater, Betz said.

Naturalism was concerned mainly with being historically accurate and realistic, Betz said, whereas expressionism dealt more with the inner thoughts and motives of the characters.

"I am not saying that he was a great critic who has been ignored," Betz said.

In his search for information, Betz has contacted Lesser's three daughters. He has talked mainly with the oldest, who was born in 1902. She and a sister live in Rio de Janeiro and the other lives in Tel Aviv, he said. The daughters were able to supply information about Lesser's career after 1900, Betz said.

Most of the research in Austria will be done at the University of Vienna Library where he will look through old newspapers for reviews written by Lesser. To save time, he has been researching the premiers of Berlin plays from the Austrian National Library, he said.

Betz said he hopes to pinpoint exactly when Lesser's career began and when it ended. He has used 1887 as the probable beginning because that was when Norwegian Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts" premiered in Berlin.

One reason Lesser has remained relatively obscure is that he lacked the credentials that most critics had, Betz said.

'Clergy malpractice' suits prompt liability insurance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter and Maria Nally, a Roman Catholic couple, were heartsick at the death of their son, who had sought help from one of the city's Protestant churches before committing suicide a year ago.

So they sued the church and its pastor, charging wrongful death, negligence, outrageous conduct and "clergy malpractice."

The Nallys' attorney, Ed Barker, says the suit is California's first "clergyman malpractice" suit and typical of a growing occupational hazard facing American ministers.

Insurance companies are responding by offering them professional liability insurance, otherwise known as "clergyman malpractice insurance."

Church Mutual Insurance Co. of Merrill, Wis., has been insuring churches for the usual fire, accident and losses since 1898. Two years ago it added coverage up to $1 million for any acts, errors or omissions ministers might be accused of from counseling of parishioners. Matters of theology are not subject to coverage.

"The church is no longer a sanctuary," Don Schlachtenhaufen of Church Mutual's Denver office said. "There was a time when the church doors were left open and nothing was taken. Now churches are being burned and robbed like everyone else; they're also being sued like everyone else."

Most of the ministerial suits seem to be a form of lashing out by the plaintiffs, finding someone to blame. Most are eventually dropped or thrown out of court by a judge.

But the simple filing of a suit costs a church money. That is what the insurance is for.

The church can also be hurt by publicity, even if the charges are never proven.

In the Nally case, the couple's attorney announced the lawsuit in a March media blitz even before the Grace Community Church of the Valley in suburban Panorama City knew it had been sued. No hearing date has been scheduled.

Sam Ericsson, spokesman and attorney for the church, denied the allegations of wrongdoing.

Anderson clears one hurdle, gets name on Michigan's ballot

WASHINGTON (AP) — John B. Anderson cleared one of the big early hurdles of his 11-day-old independent campaign for president Monday by getting his name on Michigan's primary ballot with more than three times the required petition signatures.

The Illinois congressman's supporters said they filed petitions bearing 62,252 signatures with the Michigan secretary of state in Lansing. Only 18,339 signatures were needed to put his name on the August primary election ballot.

His place on the primary ballot in turn will qualify him to compete in the November general election if he gets the votes of three-tenths of 1 percent of the primary turnout.

After Anderson announced April 24 he was withdrawing from the Republican race and running as an independent, aides cited Michigan as having one of the most restrictive election laws for any independent or third-party presidential candidate.

"We are getting carloads of petitions," said Lorraine Beebe, Anderson's Michigan coordinator Monday, a few hours before the filing deadline.

Michigan election laws required that Anderson obtain at least 100 signatures in each of 19 congressional districts, with no district providing more than 35 percent of the total required.

Beebe said petitions have been arriving in Anderson's Lansing headquarters from all parts of the state.

"We have easily met the minimum and are shooting for more in case of challenges," Beebe said.

Anderson's campaign aides have said they expect representatives of the Republican and Democratic front-runners, Ronald Reagan and President Carter, to try to disqualify names on the congressman's nominating petitions.

Michigan also has no provision for an independent candidacy, so for solely legal reasons Anderson had to create a "paper" third political party known as "The Anderson Coalition."

The state also requires that any third party list its insignia when filing for the general election. Anderson has jokingly suggested that because the Republicans have the elephant and the Democrats, the donkey, he might choose the aardvark. In fact, the Michigan Anderson campaign will list printed words "The Anderson Coalition" in red, white and blue as its official insignia.

Anderson's campaign ousted gather 39,245 signatures in Massachusetts by Tuesday, and aides have said that deadline will be easily met.

The Illinois congressman has already been certified for the November election in New Jersey, the first state to do so.

Since dropping out of competition for the Republican presidential nomination, Anderson has geared his campaign to deadlines set in various states for getting his name on the November ballot as an independent.

He will spend two days in North Carolina later this week, to build support for obtaining enough signatures to meet a June 1 deadline.

Beebe said those signing the petitions for Anderson are about equally divided by party affiliation and include many blue collar workers.

Students good, bad for restaurant

By Jeff Formentini
Student Writer

Having a majority of college students for employees and customers causes no major problems in running a business, said Joe Bryniarski, manager of Quatro's Pizza in Carbondale.

However, Bryniarski added that the large percentage of students does create situations that would not otherwise exist.

Quatro's currently employs 30 people, 20 of whom are students. Bryniarski said the large number of students creates a ready supply of employees.

He said students also tend "to be a bit brighter in handling cash and taking responsibility."

Bryniarski said that about 55 percent of Quatro's customers during the spring and fall semesters are students. He said this percentage is increased by delivery orders and 90 percent of these are made by students.

Dealing with such a large amount of student customers does create some problems. Bryniarski said students "running out" on their checks, receiving bad checks and non-existent deliveries create the biggest losses.

Bryniarski said these losses occur in most restaurants but seem to occur most frequently among students.

Steve Payne, owner-operator of Quatro's, sees the problems of dealing with students a little differently. He said student employees look at their jobs as a secondary activity—school comes first. This makes the job expendable to the students resulting in high employee turnover.

"Because of the high turnover rate, there is a loss in productivity due to the time spent training new employees who may end up working only a few weeks," Payne said.

Payne said another problem with students is that they "nickel and dime you to death." Students are money conscience, he said, and it is hard to get them to spend their money. Payne said most of Quatro's specials are geared towards students to get them into the restaurant to spend money.

Both Payne and Bryniarski agree that although students make up over half of the business, it is the local residents who keep the restaurant going.

As far as managing goes, Bryniarski said his main objective is to keep the owners happy. He said he also likes to keep the employees happy so they will work more efficiently, and keep the customers happy with good service so they will return.

Bryniarski said that Quatro's has a good working atmosphere.

Cooling units turned on at Triad dorms

By Leanne Waxman
Staff writer

A year-long project to cool three University housing areas was completed in one of those areas Monday when the University turned on $1.3 million worth of air conditioning units at the Triads.

The air conditioning units at Southern Hills and Thompson Point, however, will not be ready until July 1 and Aug. 15 respectively, according to University Housing Director Sam Rinella.

Installation of air conditioning units at the Triads - a cluster of three four-story residence halls on East Campus - went very smoothly, unlike installation of the units at Thompson Point, Rinella said. The Thompson Point project was hindered by a two-month strike in the company supplying the units. The strike threw the installation schedule for that housing area three months behind. The installation of new heating and cooling systems at the Triads and Southern Hills was not hindered by the strike because the two contractors handling those projects did not use the same company for supplies.

The Triads cooling system, which is identical to the system installed in the high-rise dormitories during the 1960s, is an energy efficient system that involves circulating chilled water from a large tank in the basement of Trueblood Hall to each room.

'Reestablish quality' in some programs is Rutford's priority

to return to the point where promotion and academic rank had more meaning than it does today, but added that faculty who might not be rewarded with a promotion should not be penalized in the pockets.

"I don't think you can set hard and fast rules in these instances. We should reward faculty financially, even if they are not awarded by rank," he said.

Rutford said that in future periods of needed cutbacks, more attention should be drawn to the peripheral aspects of the institution.

"In general, some peripheral areas have not been examined as closely for justification as academic programs have. In cuts, everything is fair game," he said.

Rutford is the final candidate to appear on campus for interviews. The other three candidates are Albert Somit, executive vice president of the State University of New York-Buffalo, T. Alexander Pond, executive vice president of SUNY Stony Brook, and Robert Quinn, dean of the 17 Pennsylvania State University Commonwealth Campuses.

A fifth candidate, Gene Nordby, vice president for business and finance at Georgia Institute of Technology, withdrew his candidacy.

Jo Ann Boydston, chairperson of the search committee, said from two to four final recommendations will be made to Chancellor Kenneth Shaw on May 14. Shaw will then recommend one candidate to the SIU Board of Trustees for approval.

Defense motions denied by judge in store robbery case

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

Motions to suppress identification of suspects in the Dec. 1 robbery of Grand Central Stereo were denied in Jackson County Circuit Court by Judge Richard Richman Monday.

The motions to suppress were made on behalf of three of the four defendants in the case.

Grand Central Stereo in Carbondale was robbed of a truckload of stereo equipment by four men on the morning of Dec. 1, shortly after the store opened. Four employees and nine customers were in the store at the time of the robbery.

The value of the stolen equipment, which has not been recovered, was estimated at between $20,000 and $30,000. An employee of the store was also robbed of $60.

Four days after the incident, a yellow rental truck matching the description of the one reportedly used in the heist was found empty in Chicago.

State troopers took the four defendants into custody after the car they were traveling in was stopped for traffic violations on Interstate 57 just south of the Benton interchange at about noon Dec. 1. James W. Coleman, Ansia L. Willis, Albert A. Davis and Previn H. Sanford were taken into custody and subsequently charged with the robbery.

Attorneys for Coleman, Willis and Sanford submitted motions to suppress identification of their clients in in-person line-ups because the witnesses who identified the suspects had been shown photographs of the suspects nine days prior to the line-up.

The attorneys argued that the witnesses may have identified the suspects in the line-up on the basis of having seen photographs of them, and not because they had seen the suspects during the robbery.

The witnesses were shown five photographs, four of which were photographs of the suspects. Although none of the witnesses identified all four of the defendants, some identified one or more of the suspects in both the photographs and the line-up.

Jackson Public Defender Dennis Waks, representing Sanford, also argued that his client should have been accompanied by an attorney at the line-up. Waks had not been appointed to represent Sanford at the time of the line-up on Dec. 1.

However, attorneys for two of the other defendants were present at the line-up.

Richman said although it would have been better to show more photographs to the witnesses and to have attorneys present for all of the defendants at the line-up the rights of the defendants were not violated.

Anderson resigns his committee post under pressure of House Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bowling to pressure from Republican leaders, independent presidential candidate John Anderson on Monday submitted his resignation from the powerful House Rules Committee.

The Illinois congressman acted less than two weeks after he was dropped out of the GOP presidential race to run as an independent. Party leaders had called for his departure from the Rules Committee to make way for what Whip Bob Michel of Illinois called "a bitin' fightin' partisan Republican."

But after a huddle between Anderson and Minority Leader John Rhodes, R-Ariz., the leaders said they opposed a move to discipline Anderson for his independent bid by drumming him out of the Republican Caucus.

Stevenson grows tired of 'politics as usual'

By Michael Monson
Student Writer

Michael Monson, author of this article, interviewed U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson in Washington. Monson, a journalism-political science student, is on an internship in Washington.

Sometime in 1978, Adlai Stevenson III grew tired of the "politics as usual" attitude that he felt was leading the nation to ruin.

For instance, there was the speech he gave at the Ninth Annual Leadership Symposium on November 3, 1978. Stevenson told the audience that, "The presidency may again require a new party to sustain it." Stevenson's oblique call for the creation of a third party drew nationwide attention, as did his public musings about a third party Stevenson bid for the presidency in 1980 (which failed to materialize).

Something was obviously at work on Stevenson, and on March 30, 1979, it became clear—Stevenson would not be seeking reelection to the U.S. Senate in 1980.

At first glance, Stevenson seems an unlikely candidate for retirement. Stevenson's name, if not his persona, is as well known as any across the country, with the possible exception of the Kennedy and Rockefeller. Stevenson, 50, is still relatively young. He still has political ambitions and he probably could have won another term as the junior senator from Illinois, had he so chosen.

Stevenson's main reason for retiring it seems, is disillusionment. Simply put, he feels that he can be more effective elsewhere than in the Senate. Stevenson has come to believe that the Senate as an institution lacks significance, and that it has failed to address the major issues of the day. He wants out.

In person, however, Stevenson does not come across as a bitter man. His comments are punctuated with a wry sense of humor.

Q. Why are you leaving the Senate? Some call it the most exclusive club in the world and yet you're not running for reelection?

A. You find more senators and congressman with each passing Congress leaving voluntarily, and I suspect for many reasons, some of which are related to all of the frustrations involved in public service nowadays.

But the main reason in my case was simply a desire to step back from politics after some 16 years in elective office and take a little time to decide what to do with the rest of my life. I don't feel that I have to be a senator and I'm not sure that we are well-served by professional politicians, nor that the Senate is the best place to be of service to my country.

For me, it's simply a matter of stepping back a little. I feel as if I've been swimming upstream for a long time. I'd like to go ashore, get my feet on the ground, get my breath again and just decide what to do with the rest of my life.

Q. It's been said that men in Congress, particularly in the Senate, have almost no time to themselves—no time to think, to read, or be alone. Would you agree with this statement?

A. That's true of Congress, but it's true of many political offices.

It's dangerous because it's important to think, and think carefully, about the world and where the country is going, but that's the last thing we have time to do.

This gets back to my decision (to retire) and it's part of the reason for it. I want to take some time not only to think about my own future but also about the country and the world. There are times I think I have to be wrong because certainly everyone else in government can't be wrong. As time goes by, however, I feel, on the whole, vindicated by history, and if so, there is something very wrong with our politics. So, I'd like to think a little bit from the outside about how to influence government, and that may include such unthinkable possibilities as a third party.

Q. You mention a third party candidacy. Do you feel that 1980 is the year for the rise of an effective third party, whether it's headed by John Anderson, yourself, or any other alternative to Carter and Reagan?

A. No, I think it's too late. All the cards are stacked against a third party. It couldn't even get on the ballot in many states. But if these two parties fail, as they may do, alas, then we ought to consider such a possibility.

I want to remain a Democrat, and it may be that we'll be able to work within the Democratic Party. But if the Democratic Party continues to ape the Republican Party, it will be time for a "Democratic Party."

A Democratic Party that's true to the ideals of Thomas Jefferson. Maybe it will succeed, this party, nominally Democratic, just as the Republican Party once succeeded the Whigs.

I do believe in a two-party system, but we are rapidly being reduced to a one party system. Two parties, but one set of ideas.

Q. Would your favor a return to a more disciplined party system? Reagan says that he wants the Republican Party to stand for a certain conservative philosophy. The Kennedy wing of the Democratic Party argues for a more liberal philosophy. Should parties stand for a certain set of ideas? Is that what you're seeking?

A. Yes, but I'm not in favor of these worn-out, overworked ideas which pass for philosophy. I'm not for going back to the 60s any more than I'm for going back to the 18th century with Ronald Reagan.

But I do believe in ideas and I think they can be given some coherence and some appeal to an American public which is not, so far as I can tell, enchanted by the ideas of the candidates either. But those ideas to mobilize the public and move the country must be ideas that move us into the future.

Ex-Saluki harrier wins road race

Former Saluki Mike Sawyer placed first in the overall category in the 1980 Southern Illinois 10-Kilometer road race held last weekend. The 6.2-mile race attracted 320 entries.

Sawyer, a four-year letterman on the SIU cross country team and a specialist in long-distance events, finished the course in 30:29, 14 seconds ahead of Steve Houseworth. Mike Bisase, also a former cross country letterman for the Salukis, placed fourth, 31.55.

Mike Keane, Bob Ratcliff and Mike Gonzalez, all present members of the SIU track and cross country teams, also ran in the race. Keane placed third (31:08), Ratcliff seventh (33:24) and Gonzalez ninth (33:58).

Besides the overall category, the race also had eight men's and four women's categories. In the men's junior classification (ages 13-19), Ronnie Bobb finished first, 36.05. In the 20-24-year-old open class, Chris Milligan was first, 35:03. In the 25-29 open class, Mike Deterding took first, 35.59.

Rich Breiner, an instructor in the SIU Radio-Television Department, was first in the sub-veteran (30-34) classification. Breiner completed the course in 35:23. In the age 35-39 sub-veteran classification, Jim Martin won, 36:46.

Curtis Dodd won the veteran classification, ages 40-49, in 37:49. Truman Waldrup took first in the master's division, ages 50-59, 43:40. In the final men's category, the seniors class for 60-years-old and over, Stan Venoski took first, 47:38.

In the women's junior class, Sonja Heidinger won in 40:05. Jani Johnson, the wife of men's Assistant Track Coach Jan Johnson, won the open category (ages 20-29) with a time of 36:32.

Cheryl Martin won the sub-veteran category for ages 30-39 in 43:43 and Marilyn Good won the veteran category, ages 40-49, in 49:18.

The race was sponsored by the Jackson County Heart Association and Vic Koenig Chevrolet.

Hurdler Lee hopes to earn respect

It is now a disappointment whenever Lee doesn't run the intermediates under 50 seconds. He was under the mark for three weeks until a "sloppy" race this week at the Illinois Intercollegiate. He still won.

Lee's next challenge is the Missouri Valley outdoor championships where he will try to repeat his performance at the indoors and win four events. Lee has not been long or triple-jumping in previous meets to prevent any chance of an injury.

"He'll take only one jump in both the triple and long jumps," Hartzog said. "If he hits, he'll win them both. He's just that good."

The MVC finals, the NCAA's and the Olympic trials await Lee in his quest for respect.

"The main thing is the NCAA's right now," Lee said. "The Olympic trials are big, too, but I have to take them as they come. If I get a chance to compete in any alternative games, I will. The Olympic situation is a mess, but there isn't a thing we can do about it."

It's a shame that Southern Illinois fans haven't had a chance to see one of the nation's finest trackmen.

Fortunately, he's only a junior. He'll be back next year. A year older, a year better, and hopefully, more respected.

Madlock suspended for striking ump

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Pittsburgh Pirates third baseman Bill Madlock received one of the longest suspensions ever in major league baseball Monday for hitting an umpire with a glove during a dispute.

A Pirates spokesman said National League President Charles Feeney suspended Madlock for 15 days, effective Monday. That means Madlock will miss 11 scheduled games.

Feeney also fined Madlock a reported $5,000.

The 22-year-old third baseman immediately appealed through the National League Baseball Players Association, the team spokesman said.

The punishment stems from an incident at home plate in last Thursday's game with Montreal.

Home plate umpire Jerry

Crawford called Madlock out on a swinging third strike to retire the Pirates with the bases loaded in the fifth inning.

Madlock protested that he hadn't taken a full swing, and after getting his glove from another player, pushed it into Crawford's face. Madlock and Crawford then were separated by Pirates manager Chuck Tanner.

Major League talks resume today

By the Associated Press

Talks resume Tuesday between the Major League Player Relations Committee and the Players Association, 16 days before a strike deadline.

Negotiations between the management committee, headed by Ray Grebey, and the union, represented by Marvin Miller, were recessed April 16 by mutual agreement of the two sides. Since then, Grebey and Miller have met at pension meetings in Atlanta but there have been no formal talks regarding the expired collective bargaining agreement.

The main issue is management's demand for free agent compensation, which would permit a team losing a top player to receive a replacement from the club signing him. The union has balked at that proposal so far and warned that unless agreement on a new contract is reached by May 22, the players will strike.

"I'm still optimistic," said Grebey. "I see no reason for calling a strike. I see no reason for an artificial crisis. Baseball is being played and should continue to be played."

Salukis blank Murray State, 9-0

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

Junior Bob Schroeck pitched eight innings of almost perfect baseball allowing only two hits and recording his seventh victory of the season Monday with a 9-0 shutout win over the Murray State Racers. The victory was the eighth in a row for the Salukis, bringing SIU's record to 25-12 on the season. Murray State drops to 20-15.

Schroeck had a no-hitter for six innings and was touched for only two bloop doubles, one in the seventh and eighth. Freshman hurler David Youngblood came on in the ninth to save the two-hitter, walking one and striking out one.

The Salukis scoring barrage began in the second inning when SIU scored four runs paced by Bobby Doerr's two-run double. The Salukis scored again in the 6th on a two-run double by Jim Adduci.

The final Saluki runs came in the ninth inning when Gerry Miller led off the inning with a double and was followed by two walks. Two more Saluki runs scored on two consecutive ground outs and the third run of the inning came in on an error.

The fielding highlight of the game came in the fourth inning while Schroeck still had the no-hitter in tact. Kevin House ran from his position in deep right-center field and made a diving shoestring catch in short left-center field.

The Salukis will travel to the University of Illinois for a double-header on Wednesday. The two teams met earlier this season, with the Salukis winning 11-2 and 10-1, for Coach Itchy Jones' 400th and 401st career victories.

SIU's next homestand is this weekend when the Salukis take on NAIA champion David Lipscomb on Friday, and play Austin Peay Saturday and Sunday.

Lakers neutralize Doctor; capture first game, 109-102

By The Associated Press

The Doctor's housecall at the Forum was delayed until the fourth quarter. Darryl Dawkins spent most of the day on the seat of his pants. And in the third quarter, Philadelphia couldn't throw a pea in the ocean.

That's how it went for the 76ers in Game 1 of the National Basketball Association championship series Sunday.

The Los Angeles Lakers got their customary superb performance from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, some outstanding defense on Julius Erving and ran the 76ers halfway to San Diego during the third period in taking a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with a 109-102 victory.

The teams were deadlocked at 53-53 after an evenly played first half before the Lakers exploded, scoring the first 12 points of the third quarter and 31 to Philadelphia's 17 in the period.

The 76ers made 54.5 percent of their field goal attempts in the first half but were a miserable 3-of-20 in the third quarter.

Los Angeles had an 84-70 advantage entering the last 12 minutes. Erving, a virtual nonentity for the first three quarters, sparked a 14-2

Philadelphia surge that drew the 76ers to within four, 92-88, midway in the final period. That was as close as they could get.

The Lakers scored eight of the game's next nine points to make it 100-89 and the 76ers weren't closer than six after that.

Abdul-Jabbar had game-high totals of 33 points, 14 rebounds and six blocked shots. Erving, meanwhile, finished with 20 points—11 in the final 8:39—seven rebounds and two blocked shots.

The 76ers had better scoring balance that Los Angeles—six players in double figures—but it wasn't enough.

Barber's 4 goals trip North Stars

By The Associated Press
The clock and Philadelphia's Bill Barber conspired against the young and hungry Minnesota North Stars Sunday night.

Barber's four goals—including a shorthanded tally with 3:26 left to play—powered the Flyers to a 5-3 National Hockey League victory over the Stars Sunday night and gave Philadelphia a 2-1 edge in the best-of-seven semifinal series.

But it was the inevitable winding down of the clock, the North Stars insisted, that prevented them from beating the two-time Stanley Cup champion Flyers.

"We really thought we were going to win this game," said Minnesota center Bobby Smith. "We made an about-face in effort and that's important, but it was a big emotional letdown when they scored that fifth goal."

That fifth goal. Shorthanded. Devastating. But according to Barber, routine.

"I just try to do my job at both ends of the ice," said Barber, whose third goal had given the Flyers a 4-0 lead before the North Stars stormed back. "We were down, but we held our composure. We've been here before. We gave them life and then had to take it away."

The North Stars seemed all but dead when Barber scored at 6:07 of the second period. But then Minnesota erupted for three goals—two shorthanded and one on a power play—in a span of three minutes to delight of the standing-room-only throng of 15,706 at the Met Center.

With teammate Curt Giles off for tripping, Tom Youngblood brought the crowd to its feet by launching a 35-foot slap shot over the shoulder of Flyers' goalie Phil Myre at 14:39.

The goal snapped Myre's shutout string of 161 minutes, 19 seconds dating back to the preliminary round against Edmonton. It also ended a string of 12 straight goals scored by Philadelphia in the three games with Minnesota.

Less than a minute later, Tim Young broke in 2-on-1 with Tom McCarthy and beat Myre to make it 4-2 with 44 seconds remaining in the penalty to Giles.

Beg your pardon

In Monday's Daily Egyptian it was reported that the makeup baseball game with Murray State would be played at Abe Martin Field.

The story should have read that the Salukis were playing the Racers at Murray State's field in Murray, Ky. The game was supposed to be played at Murray State back in March, but was rained out.

SIU will play a double-header Wednesday at Illinois. The next home game will be Friday against David Lipscomb.

Porter returns to Royals as hero

By The Associated Press

Things have happened all too fast for Darrell Porter. An emotional return from drug and alcohol rehabilitation, a return to the Kansas City Royals' roster, a return to the lineup—and now a return to glory as a hitter.

"I'm saying a lot of things," the catcher said after reporters and teammates swarmed around him at the end of Sunday's victory over the Boston Red Sox. "I don't know if what I'm saying is really what I feel. Everything is moving too fast."

For Porter, Sunday's rush of events capped a struggle that started March 15, when he secretly left spring training to enter a rehabilitation clinic. He returned 10 days ago to the open arms of teammates and fans, and against the Red Sox had his first chance this season to start a baseball game, as a designated hitter.

"First of all, I came out here and I was unsure what kind of mood I was in," Porter said. "And then when I saw my name in the lineup, it changed from unsure to real happy. But I switched two or three times, from nervous, to happy, to unsure of what I was going to do."

At the plate in the first inning, Porter faced Boston pitcher Bob Stanley with two out and teammate Hal McRae on first base. He went by.

Ball one went by, then ball two. He fouled off a pitch and took ball three.

On the next pitch, Porter tensed, swung and sent the ball sailing into center field. Boston center fielder Fred Lynn leaped but the ball slammed off the wall and bounced back toward the infield. When the action stopped, Porter was on third base and the Royals had a 1-0 lead on their way to a 5-3 victory.

He followed that performance up with a two-run single in the third inning, and Porter was back to his old self.

"It was neat," he said of his return to the lineup. "Golly," he added. "Man." The jumble of reactions was difficult to sort out as tension turned to sharp laughter and slaps on the back.

David Lee's time in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles is the second-best in the nation this year. Lee has won championships at the Kansas and Drake Relays, and is the only athlete ever to win four Missouri Valley Conference championships.

NCAAs, Olympic trials may gain Lee respect

Some guys just don't get no respect.

Take, for instance, David Lee, the multitalented Saluki trackman. His list of achievements this year is endless.

During the indoor track season, Lee became the first man ever to win four events in the Missouri Valley championships, capturing the long and triple jumps and two hurdle races. He qualified for the NCAA finals in the 60-yard high hurdles, an event which SIU track Coach Lew Hartzog says is his fifth best event.

Thus far in the outdoor season, Lee has won both hurdles in the Illinois Intercollegiate, captured the 400-meter intermediate hurdles at both the Kansas and Drake Relays, and again has qualified for the nationals in both the high and intermediate hurdles.

His 49.39 clocking at Kansas is the second best time in the nation, trailing Andre Phillips of Southern Cal by only 0.04 seconds. He missed the Drake Relays record in the intermediates by just 0.4 seconds. That was after he took second in the high hurdles earlier the same day.

The Lonnie Brown Trophy, awarded to the most valuable trackman, was won by Lee last year with 202 1/2 points. The junior already has racked up 238 points this season with three meets remaining. He has had to give away several of the eight watches he has won in various meets.

Hartzog said Lee is "rapidly developing into one of the truly great intermediate hurdlers in America," but, with no indoor track at SIU, and a substandard outdoor facility that few teams will agree to run on, Lee doesn't get the notoriety, or respect, he deserves.

The Salukis had one home meet this year and only three in 1979.

"I'm not well-known yet, but hopefully I'll get recognition by winning the big meets," Lee said. "There are a lot of people near my time right now. If I get down to 48 seconds, which I probably have to do to win the NCAAs, I might be noticed."

"I like the stiff competition in the big meets, but it's crucial that I go all out in the smaller meets, too," Lee said.

Lee, a prep basketball and trackman at University City Mo., where he was a teammate of Saluki griddler Kevin House, was recruited by Hartzog as a long jumper and quarter-mile runner. He passed up offers from Notre Dame, Missouri and Kansas to "learn" how to jump from Saluki All-American Rick Rocl now his roommate, and because Hartzog was a well-known track veteran.

It was Hartzog who transformed Lee into a hurdler. "We went to Louisiana for a meet my freshman year and Coach told me the day of that meet that we would be a better track team if I ran the hurdles, Lee said. "I ran them that day for the first time. I surprised myself."

It was a surprise. Not only did Lee win that hurdle race, but I also qualified for the NCAA with a 51.5.
