Library faces budget cutback of $220,000

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

SIUC Library Affairs will be forced to absorb a reduction of $150,000 in salary funds for fiscal 1983, and Morris Library will have to slash $70,000 in periodical subscriptions and serial orders, according to Dale Cluff, director of Library Services.

Cluff said Wednesday that Kenneth Peterson, dean of Library Affairs, "has made a commitment" to lay off employees only "as a very last resort." He said the reduction of $150,000 will be absorbed primarily through attrition and internal re-assignments of some faculty and staff positions.

Peterson outlined the cutbacks that the library will be forced to make in a memorandum distributed to academic deans, administrators and constituency groups.

"We're fairly confident at this point that we can meet our required reduction through attrition and internal re-assignments," Cluff said.

"Under the current circumstances, there appear to be no alternative courses open to us," Peterson said in the memo.

Although there is "always the possibility" that library hours may have to be reduced because of reductions in faculty and staff, Cluff said, "this administration has made a commitment to keeping the library open the same number of hours" in fiscal 1983.

However, services may have to be reduced somewhat, he said.

Professional librarians are on duty from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Cluff said, and those hours could be reduced "to maybe 8 a.m. to 5 p.m."

In addition, Morris Library faces the same problem that "other libraries across the nation are facing - rising inflation," Cluff said.

Because there is no increase in support costs for fiscal '83, the library will be forced to cut $70,000 in periodical subscriptions and serial orders, he said, while inflation will reduce the library's purchasing power for book acquisitions by about

Clemons denies police harassment rap

By Jay Small
Staff Writer

Allegations of Carbondale police harassment made by members of the Young Men's Community Council were dismissed Wednesday by Jackson County State's Attorney John Clemons.

In a letter sent from the state's attorney's office to the YMCC membership, Clemons said that the evidence presented to him by the YMCC indicates "a lack of credibility." He indicated that criminal charges were not warranted.

The YMCC allegations stemmed from an early-morning incident on March 13, when Carbondale police forcibly entered the council's headquarters at 105 E. Oak St. YMCC members accused police of illegal entry and the theft of over $700 in scholarship funds.

YMCC President Ray Clayton also accused police of harassment, damage to property and abusive language. A camera, placed at the door in an attempt to thwart break-ins, recorded parts of the incident, and the videotape was the basis for the YMCC allegations.

Clemons said there was no evidence to substantiate the theft and harassment charges, and that there was no "criminal intent" in damage done by Carbondale police in an attempt to enter the building.

Clemons added that police did not illegally enter the building, since evidence showed that after-hours drinking was taking place there.

"It's clear that there was after-hours liquor consumption at 105 E. Oak," Clemons said. "The police had a right and duty to make entry."

Clemons said the videotape clearly substantiated YMCC claims of abusive language by police, but said such actions do not constitute a criminal offense.

"I feel that abusive language on the part of any police officer in the conduct of duties should be cause for disciplinary measures," Clemons said. "But that is a matter for the chief of police to decide - it is not something one is prosecuted for."

Clemons said his conclusions were based on an investigation he conducted in cooperation with the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement, including interviews of police officers and YMCC members.

Both sides shaken by losses

By the Associated Press

Britain and Argentina, shaken by their naval losses, stopped shooting Wednesday and appeared to reconsider the possibility of a peaceful settlement of their dispute over the Falkland Islands.

No military engagements were reported in the South Atlantic, and at the United Nations. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar told reporters Wednesday night he had received a "positive reaction" from Argentina to his proposals for ending the fighting.

Perez de Cuellar said the British had told him they also were considering his plan "with great interest and a sense of urgency." He said he hoped to have a positive British response Thursday.

The secretary-general said he was "a little optimistic - not too much." It was the first indication of optimism from the U.N. since the crisis began on April 2.

Perez de Cuellar did not say what his plan entailed. But sources said its chief elements were a cease-fire, withdrawal of Argentine and British forces, and appointment of a U.N. administrator for the islands. The plan reportedly does not take a position on the critical question of sovereignty.

Until now, Argentina has refused to withdraw its troops unless Britain first recognizes Argentina's right to sovereignty over the islands. Britain has said sovereignty is not a matter for negotiation, and demanded that Argentina withdraw.

Negotiations were in progress, there was apparent calm on the battle front. Despite some rumors of engagements, both sides said they knew of no fighting.

Against a background of anger and dismay, British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym told the House of Commons in London he had transmitted a "constructive contribution" to a peace plan being worked by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

"A vital ingredient of the ideas on which we are working is an early cease-fire and the prompt withdrawal of Argentine forces," Pym said.

Pym's remarks were in stark contrast to statements by British leaders last week stress that military and other pressures would be increased until Argentina gave the Falklands back to Britain.

Pym said the peace plan contains contributions from U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde Terry, who has been floating his own peace proposal.

Pym said Haig's peace efforts remained alive, despite the announcement Friday that the U.S. government was siding with Britain and imposing sanctions against Argentina. "There has been no suspension" of the effort, Pym said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that at President Reagan's direction, Haig "remains actively engaged in an effort to do all we can to assist in the peaceful outcome of the crisis in the South Atlantic. The ultimate solution must be peaceful or the consequences will be lasting and grave."

Tape played of Hinckley murder try

WASHINGTON (AP) - John W. Hinckley Jr. and jurors at his trial watched with fascination Tuesday as prosecutors played a videotape of the event that shook the nation 13 months ago: the shooting of President Reagan and three other men outside a Washington hotel.

The Secret Service agent who was the first to reach Reagan's assailant the day of the shooting testified that Hinckley was still clicking an empty revolver as the agent subdued him. FBI agent Ronald Hurt said that when he searched Hinckley's hotel room in Washington after the assassination attempt, he found an airliner hijack note in the bottom of a box of adhesive bandages.

Hurt quoted from the note: "This plane has been hijacked. I have a bomb with me plus flammable liquids and a knife. A companion is with me. Act naturally and lead the way to the cabin. Stay calm."

And the surgeon who operated on Reagan at George Washington University Hospital said the bullet he removed from the president's left lung was squashed flat "like a dime."

Bishops condemn Polish riots; talks asked with officials, union

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops Wednesday condemned the wave of riots that swept more than a dozen Polish cities and appealed for reconciliation talks between martial law authorities and the suspended Solidarity union.

The government, reverting to a tougher line, reimposed curfews and other restrictions in several cities because of the anti-government disturbances Monday and Tuesday.

In what was apparently the worst of the rioting, in the northwest port city of Szczecin Tuesday night, hundreds of youths tried to attack the local Communist Party headquarters and were routed by security forces using tear gas, reports Wednesday said.

Scores of police were reported injured and more than a thousand people detained in the nationwide violence, the most serious since the days following imposition of martial law and suspension of the independent Solidarity labor movement last Dec. 13.

Poland's Roman Catholic bishops, after meeting Monday and Tuesday at the Jasna Gora monastery in the southern shrine city of Czestochowa, issued a statement Wednesday on the new crisis.

"With pain and concern for the fate of our nation and state," they said, "the new disturbances shaking the country are delaying social accord, halting steps towards normalization and misguiding the youth."

The statement renewed the church's previous calls for talks in an atmosphere of peace.

The church, a powerful force in Poland, has called repeatedly for talks between Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's regime and Solidarity, most of whose leaders were interned when the army imposed martial law to stem the union's growing challenge to Communist authority.

Poland's joint church-state commission met Wednesday, but it later issued only a brief communique expressing concern "about social peace in Poland." This terseness appeared to signal continued strained relations between the church and party and state leaders.

Tens of thousands of Solidarity supporters demonstrated under the eyes of nervous security forces Saturday in Warsaw, the first such mass protest under martial law. And on Monday police and youthful Solidarity backers clashed in the capital and 13 other Polish cities.

Travelers arriving from Gdansk, where Solidarity was formed in August 1980, said fierce fighting there lasted into the night Monday.

Bush in China to discuss Taiwan

HANGZHOU, China (AP) — Vice President George Bush came to China Wednesday for talks with Peking's leaders on the "time bomb" in U.S.-Chinese relations — the Taiwan issue. He said he hopes to reduce misunderstandings between the two countries.

Wrapping up a six-nation Asian tour, Bush flew to this central Chinese lake resort Wednesday night from New Zealand for a day's rest in Hangzhou's lush green hills before heading for Peking Friday. He was staying at a secluded lakeside villa sometimes used by Chinese leaders.

"My presence here attests to our intentions to move forward as friends together to strengthen the relationship we believe is in the national interest of the United States and the People's Republic of China," he said on arriving.

He told reporters he would reaffirm to Chinese leaders that the United States recognizes only one China. "This position has been clearly stated by President Reagan and let it be clear that we consider China an equal partner in world affairs."

The U.S.-Chinese dispute involves U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. The Chinese Communist Party newspaper People's Daily says this issue is a "time bomb" threatening U.S.-China relations and "can only be defused by Washington."

The Reagan administration is seeking congressional approval for the proposed sale of $60 million in aircraft spare parts to Taiwan.

News Roundup

Chicago utility firm sued for fraud

CHICAGO (AP) — A lawsuit is seeking $300 million in damages was filed Wednesday against Peoples Energy Corp. and other gas suppliers for allegedly defrauding Chicago area consumers of at least $100 million over five years.

Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley announced at a news conference that a civil complaint was filed in federal court naming Peoples Energy Corp., four other firms and several current or former directors of the corporation, including Donald Rumsfeld, a secretary of defense under President Ford, and Robert H. Strotz, president of Northwestern University.

A spokesman for Rumsfeld said he would have no comment on the action. Strotz was not available for comment.

Daley said profits from Peoples Gas Co. and North Shore Gas Co., subsidiaries of the corporation, were siphoned off and used to acquire several new firms, which ultimately became profitable and were completely severed from the utilities.

Poison victims ate with alleged killer

BLOOMINGTON (AP) — The wife of McHenry businessman Charles Albanese testified Wednesday that two of the family members her husband allegedly murdered with arsenic had eaten dinner at his home shortly before their deaths.

Virginia Albanese, the first of ten prosecution witnesses, said the victims both ate a Sunday dinner served family style at the Albanese's Spring Grove home on Aug. 3, 1980.

Mrs. Albanese testified that her grandmother, Mary Lambert, 89, died three days later at a McHenry hospital. She said her mother, Marion Mueller, 69, died Aug. 18 at St. Theresa Hospital in Waukegan.

Prosecutors have said that financial need was the motive behind the fatal arsenic poisonings of the two women and of Albanese's father, Michael Sr., 69, and the attempted poisoning of his brother, Michael Jr., 34.

Alstat introduces speeding law change

By Christopher Kade
Staff Writer

A bill introduced in the state House of Representatives looks to be a speed demon's delight, but Rep. Wayne Alstat, R-58th District, insists that it is not.

If House Bill 2077 is passed by the General Assembly, driving up to 70 mph in a 55 mph zone would no longer be a traffic violation for which a driver could lose his license.

The bill, introduced in the current session by Rep. A.C. Bartulis, R-49th District, and co-sponsored by Alstat, could come up for a vote in the House by May 18.

Alstat said the bill would not change the state 55 mph speed limit and that "state police would be free to enforce the speed limit just as aggressively as they do now."

But under current law, Alstat said, a driver's license can be suspended for two to 12 months for three moving violation convictions in one year. "This bill says that one type of speeding would no longer be a moving violation even though the state would still collect fines just as it does now," he said.

It is that $50 fine which Alstat feels would keep the average driver from abusing the law.

"I don't think that too many drivers are going to go out and incur $50 fines just for the right to drive 70 mph," he said. "You might have a rich sucker out there who will."

The bill is not intended for the benefit of the average driver, Alstat explained, but rather for the highway trucker whose livelihood depends on retaining his driver's license.

"If a trucker has already gotten two moving violations on his record, that third ticket is going to put him out of business. They have to make good mileage to make a living. Our concern is to ensure that they will not be put out of a job in doing so," Alstat said.

Alstat believes the bill has "a good chance" of passing the House, but admits the vote will be close.

However, there has been less opposition to this bill than other speed limit bills because the Illinois Department of Transportation has said it would not be in violation of federal regulations, Alstat said. That's a crucial consideration, he said, because if it did violate federal transportation regulations, Illinois would lose its share of motor fuel taxes.

Of related interest, Alstat said that he, Rep. James Rea, D-59th District, and Rep. C.L. McCormick, R-59th District, will introduce a resolution to set up an investigation of alleged state police quota systems for issuing speeding tickets.

"State policemen are saying they are being forced into quota systems and that towards the end of the month they are rushing to fill these quotas," Alstat said.

Brutality claim against city police denied

By Jay Small
Staff Writer

Claims of brutality made by parolee Kenneth Foster against Carbondale police are not substantiated by police records or any other evidence, according to Michael Carr, assistant Jackson County state's attorney.

In a letter submitted to "The Hard Times," a progressive monthly Southern Illinois publication, Foster accused three city policemen of hitting and kicking him while arresting him Nov. 14, 1981.

Carr said Foster was arrested after poking and kicking the officers, who were trying to get him into his home at 311 W. Sycamore when he was intoxicated. Foster was convicted of aggravated battery in early April as a result of the incident and will be sentenced May 18.

Carr said photos of Foster at the time of the arrest indicated no bruises, cuts or scrapes.

"Three days later, the bruises were there," Carr said. "If Mr. Foster received any injury at all, it was self-inflicted by a street-wise con."

"The court agreed. Now he's been found guilty of aggravated battery," Carr said.

Though Foster was intoxicated, he was competent enough at the time of the incident to know what he was doing, Carr added.

"Had he been blindly drunk, we might not have had any basis for the battery charges," Carr said. "But he knew what he was doing."

"He kept telling them they were a 'bunch of punks' and threatening them," Carr said.

Foster has filed a motion with the state to dismiss the charges. The motion states that the imposition of his sentence would serve "no social or judicial purpose" since his sentence currently extends until February of 2007.

Carr said Foster was on parole for two counts of rape and two counts of aggravated kidnapping. He had been out of prison on parole just over three weeks before the incident with the city police.

The motion states that additional sentencing for the battery charge would be cruel and unusual punishment, Carr said.

"One of the sad things is that Kenneth Foster has some people who are genuinely concerned about him," Carr said. "Very frankly, it may be good that some people just don't give up on their fellow man...but in this case, they're just dead wrong."

"The man is a bum. He always will be a bum," Carr said. "He has always been a dangerous bum."

Tenant union may be a boom to renters

Student renters may finally be getting a knowledgeable friend in Carbondale. Too long the victims of their own ignorance and an occasional avaricious landlord, students who rent will soon be able to call upon the services of the newly-organized Landlord Tenant Union.

The union's goal is to create educated self-advocacy among renters, according to Mark Philbrick, the Undergraduate Student Organization student welfare commissioner and one of the organizers of the union. That concept — educated awareness — can be of great benefit to student renters.

The student renter union is a good idea, and one which has been attempted in the past. Each time, however, it floundered as the involved renters and organizers left town or graduated. The structure of the new union may prevent that from happening this time.

This union will be run by a student director, with a board of representatives composed of members of the USO, the Graduate Student Council and the student body. Most important, the board will include non-student representatives who, it is hoped, will provide the union with the stability and continuity that past unions have lacked.

What do students stand to gain from the Landlord Tenant Union?

Guidance in the unknown. First-time renters and even experienced renters frequently make mistakes of judgment in renting. Failure to read and understand a contract thoroughly, failure to properly examine the rental property for defects — these and others are common oversights renters make.

Later, after the contract has been signed, if they are caught, renters frequently end up complaining, "If only I had known..." With the union, that complaint will be heard less often.

Projects planned for the union include a rental rating survey of off-campus housing, checklists for before and after inspection of property by landlords and tenants and the establishment of a complaint service to handle rental problems.

The union will also distribute "Tenant Survival Manuals" containing information about leases, damage deposits, repairs, city codes and renters' rights and responsibilities. In short, things all renters should know, but too often don't.

The rental rating survey could be particularly useful to renters. It may give them an objective yardstick by which to judge rental property. In the past, renters have been forced to rely for information on landlords and the hearsay of other renters — hardly the most objective sources.

The survey would evaluate general conditions of rental units, plumbing, upkeep, the cost of rent and landlord relations.

Information from such a survey, if widely read, would be enough to make indifferent landlords sit up and take notice. Presumably, landlords would take steps to avoid getting bad ratings.

The benefits to be gained from a tenant union are many. They will, however, like all good things, come only from work and support by those the union will serve. Without the help of a large segment of student renters, the union will flounder.

When it comes to shelling out their dough for housing, students don't have many friends. They should take care of this one.

Soul, rock could be aired daily

WIDB can make things work smoothly for both the soul entertainers and the rock programs. Instead of taking out the black oriented musical program, efforts should be made to work out a schedule whereby the soul entertainers and the rock programs will be aired on the same day at different times of the weekend.

I don't think the Southern Illinois merchants want to reach only white students. At least some black students buy their products too. Every advertiser wants his message to reach as many prospects as possible, and I think the prospects are both rock and soul entertainers listeners. — Edet Eao, Junior, Journalism.

Nixon decision is up to Board

I would like to clarify a statement attributed to me by Staff Writer Rod Furlow in his article, "Nixon library advocate fears SIU won't want it," which appeared in the Daily Egyptian on April 30.

Rod stated, "Peterson said... that it's not his place to support or oppose the project." President Somit had asked me to discuss the project with Gordon Wayman. Thus, I have sent a letter to Somit summarizing matters discussed during my meeting with Wayman. Meanwhile, I am not in a position to give official endorsement. It would be up to the University administration and the Board of Trustees to take such action. — Kenneth G. Peterson, Dean, Library Affairs.

Freeze advocates aren't Pollyannas

As a pacifist, I have a few complaints about John Rutledge's characterization of the nuclear freeze movement in these pages recently. He tries to create the impression that freeze advocates are at best Pollyanna optimists. This is not so.

First of all, Rutledge characterizes the movement as seeking unilateral disarmament. The movement's concern is for reduction by both America and Russia. Of course, it is to be hoped that the other nuclear nations on the planet would follow suit when given the example of the "super" powers laying down their weapons. For the moment, we're concerned about America and Russia because they seem most likely to start using their atomic bombs.

Rutledge has a rather distant view of the arms race, as revealed by his descriptions of it. Russia isn't Russia, isn't its leaders, isn't even the Kremlin; Rutledge describes the nation as "the Soviet bear." His deliberate flight to symbolism shows his unwillingness to admit that Russia, like America, is run by human beings capable of being reasoned with.

Rutledge also expresses his belief that "the arms race should be brought to a halt," which conjures up images of a third party forcibly stopping the two runners. There is no third party. The arms race will stop when the runners stop themselves and that is what the movement is all about.

Rutledge can support, at another time, his assertion that America is "the last bastion of freedom." For now, let us ask, as Rutledge suggests, what price we pay to maintain the status quo. The financial drain of manufacturing and stockpiling atomic bombs has been well-documented, as well as the health risks inherent in the civilian and military nuclear industries.

But there is another corruption, a moral one. In the name of Rutledge's "historical postulate," we are encouraged to be suspicious, cynical and miserly. We are encouraged to define our enemies and hate them strenuously. We are encouraged to judge others, while ignoring our own flaws. We are, in short, encouraged to ignore the basic ethical values of the Christianity we claim to practice.

What price victory, Mr. Rutledge? Let me answer your question with another question: what does it profit a man to gain material security (the world) at the price of his soul? — Patrick Drazen, Carbondale.

Keep worthwhile teacher

It seems that everyone is making financial cutbacks, including SIU-C. While budget cuts affect students, they also affect the University teaching staff. Many instructors are losing their jobs due to the reduction of departmental funds. This elimination of teachers is accomplished by removing the personnel at the bottom of the totem pole, those who have little or no tenure. One such person is Hans Kuss, a highly competent and devoted teacher, who is being removed from the Electronic Data Processing staff.

If the University administration is concerned with the quality of education, they should first start with the quality of the teaching staff. Should not an instructor be judged on his teaching capabilities instead of his tenure? That seems to be a logical approach to determine who is eligible to stay on the payroll. It seems only economically and academically justified to provide students with instructors who are capable of raising the scholastic level of the student body.

We feel that the dismissal of Hans Kuss will be extremely detrimental to the EDP department and the students. He has the background, experience and personality that constitute a qualified teacher who students can learn from and relate to in the academic environment. Is it fair to remove an instructor who gives to the students what they are paying for? Since students are putting out hard-earned dollars, they expect teachers who make their investment worthwhile. Hans Kuss is one such teacher who is capable of instilling in his students a high degree of comprehension in electronic data processing. Thus, we feel that the discharge of Hans Kuss is unjustified. — Judy Venderheide, Junior, Interior Design.

Narrow people oppose bringing the Nixon papers here

This is in response to the three letters that were printed on April 30 in the Daily Egyptian concerning the possibility of obtaining the Nixon papers.

Since the possibility is remote that the papers will be lodged at SIU-C, the matter is somewhat academic. However, it surprises me that two people who presume themselves to be scholars so vehemently oppose having the papers. Does this mean that we would not want the personal papers of Joseph Stalin, Adolph Hitler or Juan Peron? What the hell has ethics got to do with having valuable historical documents for original research? It never ceases to amaze me how damned narrow people who espouse academic freedom can be. — James Osberg, Coordinator, Evening and Weekend Program, Continuing Education.

DOONESBURY

by Garry Trudeau

Nixon presidency was debacle

I read with great interest and astonishment your May 3 editorial, "Nixon library makes good academic sense," and cannot understand your support for a man who made a debacle of the U.S. presidency.

You referred to the people against SIU-C as a site for the Richard M. Nixon library as "shortsighted," as having "no place at an institution dedicated to pursuit of truth." If only Nixon were interested in reciprocal action.

If it weren't for the dedication and perseverance of two unknown journalists, who made public the gross infractions committed by the Nixon administration, who is to know if the truth had ever been uncovered?

The Founding Fathers instituted the checks and balances system so that no branch of government could go beyond the scope of its constitutional powers. Nixon obviously decided that he wasn't going to play by those rules. Former Idaho Sen. Frank Church, the chairperson assigned to determine the extent to Nixon's involvement, noted: "There is no inherent constitutional authority for the president or any other intelligence agency to violate the law."

Significant failures by Nixon were not included in your editorial. Such as: Nixon approving G. Gordon Liddy and his thugs to burglarize the offices of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist; the secret and very illegal wiretapping of 17 prominent journalists; distributing $220,000 to the Watergate burglars and their defense counsel; and for ordering the CIA to pressure the FBI in limiting its investigation of Watergate. Although evidence incriminating Nixon was substantial, his successor, Gerald Ford, pardoned him of any wrongdoing. Despite these validated claims, you brushed it off as being "knee jerk." You glorified his overstated success while refusing to question the same incidents that caused his resignation.

For instance, while it is true that he eventually ended American participation in Vietnam, he promised to cease U.S. involvement in his 1968 campaign — a promise he did not fulfill until 1973. Also more bomb raids on North Vietnam were conducted under Nixon than any other president in wartime history.

I call for the immediate cease of any plans for construction of the Richard M. Nixon library at SIU-C. His blatant misuse of the law not only seriously questions the legitimacy of our Constitution, but caused undue hardships to many innocent people. — Patrick Z. McGavin, Freshman, Journalism and History.

Lewis Park used 'bait and switch'

I could go on and on about all the red tape one must go through to get an interview appointment for Lewis Park. Instead, I will only state that the handing out of the 120 applications for housing was a complete waste of time and money. Some of the people who got up early and waited in line to get their applications were left out in the cold simply because they didn't phone Lewis Park management to set up an interview appointment soon enough. Theoretically, the people who received application number 120 could have been one of the first to get their choice of housing. It seems rather unfair that this can happen!

I'm not complaining on this issue because of any personal loss to myself. My friends and I leased one of the last two remaining four-bedroom apartments. It was just what we had wanted, but for the second day of room registration, we had an awful selection to pick from.

What really bothered me was the cold-hearted attitude the management had towards all the other students who had not yet been to their interview appointments. During our interview I asked the young lady and young man if they were attempting to contact any of the remaining applicants to inform them that there were no more four-bedroom apartments available. The lady rudely replied, "Why should we?" I then explained that alternative housing for these people would be harder to find with each passing day. That was when the young man ignorantly blurted, "Well, how do we know what everyone wants?" When I stated that our applications said exactly what we wanted, he said no more. The lady then said that many of the applicants who come in and see that they can't get what they wanted, would in turn settle for something different within Lewis Park!

Have you readers ever heard of a sales gimmick called "bait and switch"? It's when a certain product is offered to the public with intention of just getting the public there to buy something else! Lewis Park management is doing just that, and I think it is very inconsiderate, rude and just plain bad business! Just because they have the student over a barrel doesn't make their actions justified. — Greg Hadden, Sophomore, Radio and Television.

Nixon library would bring jobs

It seems to me that many people writing in opposition to the Nixon library have missed the whole point. This is not a question of Nixon's morals but of economic development.

Being a lifelong resident of Southern Illinois, I have seen many people out of work and have seen low economic development. Money and jobs are what the Nixon library is all about.

It seems to me that our congressman in our district is not providing this economic development needed for Southern Illinois. I am open to almost anything for some development in this area.

The potential is so great. The location for the library is great in Southern Illinois, the heart of America.

Thanks go to custodians

I'm writing this letter to relay some much needed appreciation to the maintenance, custodians and groundskeepers. If it wasn't for their daily routines I'm sure that most of the apathetic students on this campus would be appalled at the messes they take for granted.

There I was sitting out behind Warren Hall catching a few rays on this beautiful day when I heard a wonderful noise. Two riding lawnmowers and a crew handling three weed-eaters came down on me like the

I would also like to state that the library isn't just for the students at SIU-C. It is for everyone to come and visit. If those who oppose it don't like it, then don't visit it. Other people will because of his highly controversial nature. Sure he had some faults but it seems to me that just about every president, like Johnson, Kennedy, Franklin Roosevelt and others, had some faults.

Someone who hasn't lived here as long as I have may not understand the situation. Many students are here for four years and gone; I plan to stay. Let's get economic development rolling for Southern Illinois. The Nixon library may not be the answer, but it is a start. — Gary W. Cross, Junior, Political Science.

helicopters in the movie "Apocalypse Now." They were very friendly and efficient. They made several passes around the dorm assuring themselves that they had not missed a patch of grass. When they were finished I felt as if I owed them a cold drink but instead I believe that University-wide recognition, through the Daily Egyptian, would be more efficient and appropriate. So once again I thank you. — M. Kevin Bainter, Junior, Administration of Justice.

Women and dissidents mistreated by Khomeini

This letter might jeopardize my parents' lives in Iran since Khomeini's spies (his supporters on campus) have been ordered to identify political dissidents and report them to the regime's embassies. However, I think this is the least that I can do to fulfill part of my debt to more than 8,000 innocent people who have executed by Khomeini's firing squads during the past eight months, and to the more than 30,000 political prisoners who are in constant danger of being executed.

The lack of media coverage on Khomeini's crimes has allowed his savage regime to continue and even increase the wave of terror and repression against the people to an unprecedented level. There are now 30,000 political prisoners in Iran. In addition to the executions, many of these prisoners are murdered under brutal tortures.

Because of Khomeini's backward attitude toward women, they are particularly subject to his abuse and mistreatment. There are various reliable reports from Iran on the barbaric treatment of women by the regime's ruthless guards. Some of them are as follows: lashing, beating and injuring women and young girls in public; kidnapping opposition women and subjecting them to gang rapes; executing pregnant women; and harassment and beating of mothers and fathers who go to the prisons to see their loved ones.

These and many other crimes committed by Khomeini saddens every compassionate human being. I appeal to all international human rights organizations and all freedom loving individuals to answer to the just cries of the Iranian people, whose only demands are democracy, social justice and human dignity. I ask them to oppose Khomeini's barbarism by writing letters of condemnation to the secretary general of the United Nations and asking him to use all possible means to stop the torture and execution in Iran. Indeed, by such actions, they can be instrumental in saving many lives and preventing much misery. — Name withheld on request.

Join forces to fight cuts

The publicity attending the question of whether the enemy within is a Marxist has obscured an issue central to this controversy: Why aren't we joining with our students in making the loudest most public demands on the Legislature and the Governor?

Some people appear to be sanguine about the impact of federal and state cuts in funds on undergraduate and graduate students; they may expect these students to be replaced by ones who, for the same reasons, will be forced to transfer from more expensive colleges and universities.

Does it then follow that the University should be more genteel in its presentations? Only if we and our representatives on the Faculty Senate and Graduate Student Council assume that a perfect correlation exists between income and capabilities at both student and administrative levels. — Joann P. Palne, Associate Professor, Political Science.

Nuke the Loverboy reviewer!

My first question is how did a jerk like Joe Walter become the entertainment critic of the Daily Egyptian?

I was furious when I read Walter's review of the Loverboy concert. After dwelling on the problem a while, it is now obvious to me that Walter couldn't have even gone to the concert. His review was so off target that I can't believe he was talking about the same concert that I saw. There were no flaws in the concert that I could see, least of all the excellent guitar solos that Walter describes as "making some noise."

Also, describing Loverboy's music as something one hears at high school proms playing from a Top-40 list and "high-powered elevator music about as runny as unseasoned gruel" is totally ludicrous. What did Walter expect of Loverboy? They are a Top-40 hit band with hits on the Top-40 list. If he expected a thunderous heavy-metal rock 'n' roll concert, he should have done a little research on the band first. I think everyone who went to the concert, except Joe Walter, got what they expected.

Walter neglected to mention the synthesizer solo combined with the lasers, which I feel was one of the highlights of the whole show. Walter's description of Loverboy and their songs as "bubblenum" makes me wonder if he is even a rock 'n' roll fan. Loverboy is one of the most talented, up-and-coming bands that I've heard in a long time, and they put on a show that will last in my memory for many years.

I say nuke Joe Walter! — Paul A. Hooper, Freshman, Psychology.

Destroying church is outrageous

I am outraged. How can Carbondale even contemplate tearing down the church at University and Main in order to build a parking garage? The church is an architectural monument that can't be duplicated. The aesthetic value it gives the city can't be matched by any modern creation, especially if the same people that built the federal rust building are contracted to build the new garage.

If the city wants a garage so badly, why doesn't it put more levels on the existing parking garage located next to the Student Center? It's close to downtown, accessible and won't require tearing down any Student Center? — Kurt Boyle, Senator, Undergraduate Student Organization.

Letter writing was good start

I wish to take this time to heartily commend the SIU-C Graduate Student Council, Carl Kosierowski, Steve Emil and all the students who banded together and took the time and initiative to write letters of concern to our legislators about the educational budget butchering that have — and still are — taking place across the country.

It is not only essential that the students rally in unison against this issue of educational cuts, but it is equally important that the youth in America realize that we are one of the many minorities in our societal structure.

Just as the elderly across the nation rallied together against

Social Security reductions and race minorities such as blacks have frequently risen up against injustices or discrimination, the youth of America should actively organize and demand representation in social and political issues.

The time is not that we shed our apathetic and defeated attitudes in political affairs and start making some noise. I sincerely hope that what has been taken place here on the SIU-C campus is the tip of an ominous iceberg or a powderkeg ready to explode. To all who participated in National Letter Writing Day, keep up the good work and fiery spirits. — Terry W. Spenser, Junior, Marketing.

SIU-C organ student wins tri-state contest

Lynn Trapp, a freshman organ student in SIU-C's School of Music, won first place and $100 in the Tri-State Organ Playing Competition sponsored by the Evansville Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. Trapp, 19, competed against both undergraduate and graduate organ performance majors from Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois. He is a student of Marianne Webb, University organist and music faculty member. He serves as organist of the First Baptist Church in Carbondale. "In terms of his career, this was a wonderful opportunity at such a young age to have won this competition," Webb said. "He was competing against organists who were considerably older than he, and he came out on top. He's uniquely talented, with a facile technique and a musical maturity far beyond his years."

Entries to be taken Monday for next week's artwork show

Student-produced artworks will be accepted in Student Center Ballroom C between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday for consideration in the fourth annual Student Center Purchase Award Competition.

From the entries, a jury will select a number of art pieces to be purchased by the Student Center and put on display as part of the Center's permanent collection. Works chosen will be announced and exhibited at an opening reception at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Gallery Lounge on the second floor of the Student Center. They will remain on display until noon May 14.

"The idea is to have a student collection because after all this is a student center," said Kay

Pick Zipkovich, arts and crafts coordinator for the Student Center.

Students need not be majors in art fields to enter. "The goal is to get a wide variety of student artwork that represents what students do, not only in art-related departments, but in different types of media," Zipkovich said. "There may be a lot of talented people out there who just don't choose to go after a degree in art."

In past years, students have entered paintings, drawings, pastels, sculptures, photos, etchings and prints in the competition.

The principle restriction on entries is that two-dimensional works must be no less than 16 by 20 inches in size, matted out to 20 by 24 inches — large enough that the pieces aren't lost in the building's long hallways. The works must also be in exhibitible form.

Last year, seven works of art were purchased in the competition, but the number varies from year to year, depending on the quality of the work and the size of the budget, Zipkovich said.

Entry blanks are available in the Student Programming Council office, the Student Center Craft Shop, the Design Department, the School of Art office, the University Museum and the office of the Department of Cinema and Photography.

Summer trips offered to alumni

The SIU-C Alumni Association is offering four summer vacation programs to former students and their families.

Programs include a Caribbean cruise, motorcoach trips to the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. and camping sessions at Camp Brosius, Wis. and at Little Grassy Lake.

The eight-day cruise, June 26 to July 3, will take vacationers to Dominican, Puerto Rican and Virgin Island ports aboard the M-S Song of Norway. Prices start at $1,045 with a $200 deposit per person and final payment due May 7.

Two weekend motorcoach tours to the World's Fair are sold out, but tours scheduled for Aug. 5 to 8 and Aug. 10 to 13 are taking reservations on a first-come, first-served basis. Cost is $150 per person and includes transportation, housing, fair tickets and several side trips. Final payment is due June 1 and a deposit of $50 per person is required.

For the camping trips, arrangements have been made with Indiana University to use its camp facilities July 4 to 10 at Camp Brosius on the shore of Elkhart Lake, 55 miles north of Milwaukee. Prices range from $161 to $235 for adults, $115 to $177 for children, and $50 to $93 for infants. Reservations must include a $50 per person deposit, with final payment due May 24.

Vacationers may choose between two plans offered for camping sessions July 11 to 17 and July 18 to 24 at SIU-C's Touch of Nature Environmental Center at Little Grassy Lake.

One provides a rustic cabin at prices ranging from $60 to $160 per person per week. The other permits campers to bring their own tents or trailers. Prices range from $55 to $150 per person per week. Reservations must include a $50 deposit per person, with final payment June 1.

Each camp program includes 17 meals, counselors, babysitting service and recreation activities.

Reservations may be made with the SIU-C Alumni Association at 453-2408.

University names buildings to go without air conditioning

Vice President for Campus Services Clarence Dougherty has announced which buildings will go without air conditioning during the span between spring and summer semesters.

The buildings which will have no air conditioning from May 15 to June 14 are: Allyn, Parkinson Lab, Anthony Hall, Shryock Auditorium, Agriculture, Lentz Hall, the Arena, Wham, General Classrooms, Communications, Technology, the School of Technical Careers, Faner Hall, Trueblood, Neely, Allen, Boomer, Wright, Schneider, Mae Smith and Grinnell Halls and the Recreation Building.

Buildings with air conditioning will include: Bailey, Pierce, Bowyer, Steagall, Brown, Felts, Kellogg, Warren, Smith, Abbott, Baldwin, Thalman, Miles, Salter, Coyer, Kesnar, Wakeland, Kaplan, Biemfohr and Shuman.

Other buildings with air conditioning will be the Student Center, Altgeld Hall, Lindgren Hall, Building Services, Quigley, the Laundry, Archeological Investigations, Student Life and Agricultural Industries.

The basement of the Life Science II Building will retain air conditioning, and so will the "C" wing of Necker.

Dougherty has also released a list of buildings and portions of buildings that will be air conditioned when the temperature falls under 85 degrees, allowing the University's air conditioning to be spread among more buildings.

Dougherty said that if temperatures are moderate enough, the following buildings or portions of buildings will receive air conditioning, in this order: the basement, first and second floors of Morris Library, Rooms 101, 121, 161, 171, and 201 of Lawson Hall, the west half of the inner core of Life Science II, the remainder of Lawson Hall, the remainder of Morris Library, the remainder of Life Science II and the Law Building.

Black woman Pasadena mayor, first for city over 100,000

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The first black woman to become mayor of a U.S. city of more than 100,000 people says her selection shows that Pasadena is a place "where dreams can and do come true." Loretta Glickman, 36, an investment counselor who was a Pasadena schoolteacher and who toured as a singer in the '70s with the Christie Minstrels and London Fog, said it is wrong to assume she will be a spokesperson for the black community.

"Perhaps it means more to the black community," she said Wednesday of her election by Pasadena's Board of City Directors, of which she has been a member since 1977. "It has taken them so long to arrive at this point."

She noted that the black community in the nation's 129th largest city is diverse. "It cannot be assumed that there is one spokesperson for blacks," she said. "My reason for being here is not necessarily to be their spokesperson, but to be sure they are being heard, and that's very different."

She was installed as mayor Monday and said if Pasadena's mayor were elected by a vote of the people, it would have been many more years before a woman or a black would have gotten the job.

Mayors are chosen by the board for one-year terms in the unpaid, largely ceremonial post.

Her election, Mrs. Glickman said, "is surprising because of the history of Pasadena."

"It's not that we have a race problem per se, but our image is one of being a conservative, bedroom-type community," she said. "People see it on New Year's Day, and they see a predominantly white community, middle class. A lot of the world is probably not aware that we have a mixed, diverse community."

"It's only human nature to go in with a preconceived idea about me and the job I do and what will happen because I am black. It's a fact that being black provides me with a certain sensitivity and closeness to the community that wouldn't otherwise be there. It makes me a much broader-thinking person for the whole community."

Mrs. Glickman, a divorced mother of two young boys, grew up in Pasadena, where she said her family has lived since the late 1800s.

'Big Jim' told to meet 'Big John'

SPRINGFIELD, (AP) — A talking outhouse and 2,000 rolls of toilet paper were dumped on the steps of Illinois' Capitol Wednesday by a group protesting a planned hazardous waste landfill near Ottawa.

The group of about 50 LaSalle County residents, calling themselves Residents Against A Polluted Environment, said they wanted to dramatize their fears the landfill would make their area the "toilet seat of Illinois."

The talking outhouse, rigged with a wireless receiver broadcasting the voice of one of the protesters, urged Gov. James R. Thompson to leave his second-floor office and greet the gathering.

Calling out to Thompson by his nickname, the outhouse implored: "Big Jim, come on down and meet Big John."

Design class teaches students to experiment

By Michael Neilson
Student Writer

Students make paper airplanes in Larry Busch's class.

But not because they're bored or just fooling around. There's definitely something important to be learned from it.

Designing a building or a paper airplane is essentially the same as designing a Boeing 747, said Busch, instructor of GSC 205, "Innovation in Contemporary Environment."

"The process of experimentation and development is basically the same, and it makes a lot more sense to start with paper airplanes than it does with Boeing 747s," Busch said.

"The class was asked to design a paper airplane, and, as with all of our assignments in 205, I don't really care if anyone can build a paper airplane," said Busch, a 1970 graduate of SIU-C. "That's a totally trivial thing. It's the process we are focusing on."

Busch said that the purpose of the airplane assignment was to get students to grapple with design problems and to conduct experiments.

"It is phenomenal how many people won't experiment. They go only to books to find out what the answer is. And you cannot get innovation out of books," he said.

"You have simply got to say, 'I don't know. I've read all the books and I still don't know. So now I'm going to experiment and see what happens.'"

The airplanes were tested in class and were graded equally on the basis of performance and innovation. Fifty points were given for distance and 50 for design of the airplane. Busch said.

If a student wanted a sure-fire plane, he or she could make a trade-off and design a standard airplane, he said. "But the maximum number of points you could get distance-wise was 50, and that's a flunking score. I know how to build that airplane — what I wanted to know was 'What else can you do?'"

Busch outlined the attraction that GSC 205 holds for students who take the class. "We deal with what I call a 'high seduction class.' I go out of my way to make it enjoyable. That's not for my own amusement or by accident. I could stand there and in one class period tell everything I know about design. But it would be meaningless because no one would believe me."

Only a few people respond favorably to and learn from the high-content and low-seduction approach, the Champaign native said. People enjoy themselves and think favorably of the teacher but don't learn much from the all-seduction and no-content approach, he added.

"So obviously, one's goal is to have high-content and high-seduction, which is very much what I try to do in 205. It is the occasional class where it's more content than seduction, and some where it's more seduction than content."

"The package has to be judged as a whole," Busch said. "I think that's one reason that the class can be powerful for students, for without knowing it they look forward to each class."

GSC 205 maintains almost 100 percent attendance, nearly twice the attendance rate of any other lecture class, Busch said.

"That's an important figure, because we who teach this class try to design in success, rather than having the attitude, 'Boy are you lucky to be here and if you're smart you'll listen closely to what I'm saying.'"

"We are going to do our best to make GSC 205 as interesting as we can and ensure that as many people pick up on what we are saying," Busch said. "Because in large part, you learn as much from what I say as how I say it."

Mother indicted in stabbing deaths of two children

WOODSTOCK (AP) — A McHenry County grand jury has indicted a 30-year-old McHenry woman on charges of stabbing her two children to death.

Susan Iwert was named in a two-count indictment Tuesday charging that she repeatedly stabbed her children, Amy, 2½, and 3-month-old Jeffrey, in the family's garage on April 14.

Bond was set at $1 million for Mrs. Iwert, who is undergoing treatment at a Chicago hospital.

Neighbors heard a car running in the locked garage and summoned police who found Mrs. Iwert unconscious in the car and the children dead on the garage floor. A kitchen knife was found near the bodies.

Authorities said the husband, Gary, 34, was out of town on business at the time.

Study says television leads to kids' violence

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television is "a violent form of entertainment" that clearly leads to aggressive behavior by children and teen-agers, a new government study concluded Wednesday.

The National Institute of Mental Health said the evidence has mounted since a 1972 Surgeon General's report first implicated television as a cause of violence by children.

"The evidence accumulated in the 1970s seems overwhelming that televised violence and aggression are positively related in children," the institute said.

Despite periodic outcries from members of Congress and citizens' groups, the study found no decrease in the level of violence on television.

"The percentage of programs containing violence has remained about the same since 1967, although the number of violent acts per program has increased," it said. "Children's shows are violent in a cyclical way, up one year and down the next."

The 94-page report, "Television and Behavior: Ten Years of Scientific Progress and Implications for the Eighties," was based on a two-year review of hundreds of research studies.

The report, which focused on television entertainment, made no recommendations, but Dr. Herbert Pardes, director of the institute, said its findings have implications for parents, policy-makers and the television industry.

CBS said it would not respond to the report; NBC and ABC had no immediate comment.

Sean Sheehan, the National Association of Broadcasters' senior vice president for public affairs, said his group has not yet seen the report, but said: "We think the situation has improved in the past decade, so we're somewhat skeptical about the study."

He said the industry has taken steps to screen out violence on cartoons and other children's shows aired Saturday mornings. But he acknowledged, "They're still showing older material that's pretty violent, like the old Warner Brothers cartoons. It's a problem."

Peggy Charen, president of Action for Children's Television in Newton, Mass., applauded the study. "One of the devastating problems with children's TV today is that there is almost no choice. Children are watching too much violence in part because there is so little else for them to watch."

The report said, "Both prime time and weekend children's television are dominated by action, power and danger. There is an average of five violent acts per hour on prime time and 18 acts per hour on children's weekend programs."

"The consensus among most of the research community is that violence on television does lead to aggressive behavior by children and teen-agers who watch the programs," it continued. "This conclusion is based on laboratory experiments and on field studies. Not all children become aggressive, of course."

Speaker calls SIU-C leader in control of chemical wastes

By Eric Larson
Student Writer

SIU-C is a recognized leader in the area of chemical waste control, according to Dick Orendorff, technical services representative for U.S. Ecology Inc., Louisville, Ky.

"You're years ahead of any other university in terms of your waste management programs," he told about 15 students in the Student Center recently.

Orendorff, in a presentation sponsored by the Department of Pollution Control, told students that the waste management industry is ready "to tackle the challenge" of chemical waste management in the 1980s despite inheriting problems from the past.

According to Orendorff, chemical waste management companies will be drawing people from other professions into their rapidly growing industry in coming years.

Problems inherited by today's waste management companies include thousands of disposal sites, heavy debts for cleaning up old sites and a generally negative public attitude toward the industry, he said.

Mismanagement is the real potential problem in the hazardous waste disposal industry, according to Orendorff.

He said the media and public sometimes lumped together companies practicing good waste management with those that have mismanaged their waste in the past.

Recently however, the media have been doing a better, more objective job of reporting issues dealing with waste management, he added.

In the past 10 to 12 years, the volume of chemical waste in the United States has jumped drastically as a result of increased technology and more use of synthetic materials, according to Orendorff.

Chemical waste is generated in the production of nearly all products, he added.

"Before 1970, there wasn't nearly as much waste generated and most of that was handled on the site, usually by landfilling," he said. Modern disposal problems and good governmental regulations will allow industry to control its generation of chemical waste in the future.

The issue of chemical waste management should be important to the general public and the government as well as to private industry, Orendorff said.

"It's everybody's problem."

Revised guide for disabled expected to be done in August

A 1982 revised edition of the Carbondale Guide for the Handicapped is expected to be completed by August. It will be offered to the disabled community of Carbondale by the Southern Illinois Easter Seal Society.

"The purpose of the guide is to provide information to disabled individuals in our community about accessibility of businesses in Carbondale and buildings on the SIU-C campus," said Arlene Jones, client case coordinator for the Easter Seal Society.

"The new guide will be a real asset to them," Jones said. "So many businesses have changed hands in the last four years that a revised edition is really needed."

Designed primarily for persons confined to wheelchairs or crutches and for the blind and deaf, the guide will show which buildings can be entered from ground level or by a ramp instead of stairs, width of doorways, interior facilities and general information about getting around the city.

Jones said the guide will be bigger this year, including more restaurants and businesses than were included in the past.

Upon completion, the guides will be offered free of charge by the Southern Illinois Easter Seal Society, 801 S. Oakland. Other places of distribution will be named later.

Paula Garret faithfully weather-conditions one campus. The sealant should protect the sculpture piece of Nicholas Vergette's group sculptures on from moisture.

Facelift is in order for Vergette sculptures

By William Jason Yong
Student Writer

Repair and weatherproofing of the group of ceramic sculptures between Morris Library and Wham Building is nearing completion.

Simply named "Here," the ceramic clay sculptures have been eroded by weather.

The damage was discovered several years ago, according to Evert Johnson, curator of art at the University Museum. However, he said that the damage was still in the beginning stages.

Small fissures in each of the sculptures allowed moisture to penetrate, Johnson said, and during freezing temperatures, the moisture froze and expanded, producing cracks in the ceramic clay. Small chunks of the clay began to fall off, followed by bigger pieces as the cracks propagated, he said.

"Here," a group of 11 free-forms pieces ranging from six to 14 feet in height, was the creation of Nicholas Vergette, ceramic artist at SIU-C. He was commissioned to create an outdoor sculpture for the campus in 1969 by SIU-C's Architectural Arts Program.

An internationally known sculptor, Vergette took about three years to complete "Here." At that time, Vergette called it the largest ceramic sculpture he had ever undertaken. Only a few months after seeing his massive grouping emplaced on a knoll in the campus, Vergette died of cancer.

Johnson said a buteraite formula of polymerized plastic, the type of material used for weather protection of highways and buildings, is being applied to the fissures and cracks. The sealant, he said, is resistant to water, chemicals, salt water and petroleum products.

The buteraite plastic is spread on the damaged surface of the sculpture, and a brush is then used to seal the cracks. The repair work has been done mostly by students, Johnson said.

Johnson said repair work on the sculpture began about a year ago and he expects it to be completed within two weeks. The repairs' cost is about $500 in materials and $400 in student wages, he said.

A major problem causing the delay in starting the repairs, Johnson said, was the question of authority. According to him, the sculpture is not under the care and responsibility of the museum, but, rather, under the University.

The museum took voluntary steps to undertake the repair work, he said. Johnson said the museum received about $300 for it from the office of the vice president for academic affairs.

"Here" is the culmination of Vergette's work. While working $30,000.

The inflation rate for library materials has been running at about 12 percent annually, and for the last three years the library has faced "a no-growth" situation in its number of periodical subscriptions, Cluff said. "We haven't been able to keep up with inflation."

The library spends about $1 million annually for periodical subscriptions and serial orders, and about $400,000 for new books, he said.

Last year, the library was able to delay canceling periodical subscriptions and serial orders because an additional $100,000 was allocated to the library from the vice president of academic affairs and research.

"That saved us last year from having to cut the number of subscriptions we have," Cluff said, "but we won't be able to come up with any additional funds" for fiscal '83.

Three years ago, the library began compiling lists of periodicals on continuing order and placed those publications in priority groups, Cluff said.

The division heads of the various library departments determined which periodicals were most important to keep and which were less important, Cluff said. After compiling the lists, faculty and students were able to review them.

"The division heads have done their job so well that there's been little concern by either faculty or students" about which periodical subscriptions the library will continue to receive, he said.

"It's obvious" that the effects of fewer periodicals, serials, and books will be felt by faculty and students, Cluff said, and "will require more inter-library loans and more cooperation with libraries in the state and the nation."

"If we don't have something that someone needs, we'll do our best to get it from another library," but there could be a delay of a "few days."

As the government neared the end of its direct evidence, a videotaped replay of the shooting was shown in the federal courtroom, first at regular speed and then in slow-motion.

Hinckley's demeanor contrasted sharply with apparent disinterest Tuesday, when he never raised his head to look at two victims of the shooting incident who testified in court.

After showing the film, the prosecution planned to rest its case. Then it will be the defense team's turn. The government needed only two days to present its direct evidence.

The videotape, shot by an NBC-TV cameraman, showed Secret Service agents and White House aides walking ahead of Reagan as they left the Washington Hilton Hotel that rainy day of March 30, 1981.

After gunshots were heard, a Secret Service agent could be seen shoving Reagan into the presidential limousine while a crowd of people jumped on Hinckley.

on it, he said he hoped it would be considered his masterpiece. Vergette, who came to SIU in anticipated that time might take its toll on "Here," Johnson said.

"This was an experimental piece for Nick. He wasn't exactly sure just how it would stand up to weather over time."

"For several years he worked on developing clay bodies and ceramic glazes suitable for the outdoors. For the most part," Johnson said, "his work on those materials was a success, but like any experiment, there were small failures."

The spot where "Here" is located has become a campus landmark and a popular retreat for study, relaxation and noontime lunchbreaks — or contemplation in an environment that bears Vergette's pleasing and powerful signature. The razor-edged monumental sculpture now rivals its creator in popularity.

Viewed from close-up, the sculpture is texturally rich and evocative with designs ranging from ruin to life forms.

John J. Whitlock, director of the museum, summed up the symbolic nature of "Here," saying that the sculpture inspires reaction of the mind with the forms. It also symbolizes change, he said. It represents a natural relationship between man-made creation and Nature itself. In winter, the sculpture stands barren, as winter is, he said.

Vergette, who came to SIU in 1959, received a National Diploma from the Chelsea School of Art in London in 1960. He taught for one year at the School for American Craftsmen in Rochester, N.Y. He also was a Fellow of the British Royal Society of Arts.

Shortly after he arrived in New York, Vergette was awarded a commission to decorate the interior of the baptistry of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Syracuse, N.F. His successful work earned him an award from the New York Association of Architects for the best use of ceramics in architecture.

and Cy Young award winner a year ago. The signature dates back to 1964, when Fingers pitched a one-hitter and a two-hitter in American Legion competition in Little Rock, Ark.

If you have any doubts about Kesser's claim of fan superstardom, he has solid proof to back him up. With SIU-C's two games on Tuesday, Kesser now owns 3,095 scorecards, enough to keep even the most fanatical baseball statistician busy for months.

Kesser has also been more than a fan in the past. He has umpired, coached teams and kept score for Legion games. He remembered helping legendary Saluki Baseball Coach Abe Martin out of a jam several years ago.

Martin was short an umpire, so who else did he turn to but, that's right, "Mr. Saluki" himself, Chester Kesser.

Kesser, despite his fine attendance record, insists he isn't the Salukis' biggest booster. He called Monte Stotlar, wife of John "Doc" Stotlar, former SIU-C associate professor of physical education, the Salukis' No. 1 fan.

"She goes to all the games," Kesser said.

Regardless of whom the Salukis' top fan may be, the 71-year-old Kesser has just one goal—to see as many games as he can for as long as possible.

Who knows, the way he's going, Kesser may be the first baseball fan elected to the Saluki Hall of Fame.

depth." Auld said. Leading Drake's attack are twins Kathy and Patty Jablonski. Kathy is 7-2 this spring at No. 1 singles, and Patty 6-3 at No. 2. They have compiled a 4-5 doubles record after posting a 7-1 mark in the fall.

As with Drake, the Salukis have not faced Wichita State this season, but Auld has heard the Shockers also have good depth.

Team depth, however, also was displayed by the Salukis last week against Illinois State, in the first round of the state meet. The Salukis defeated the Redbirds 9-0 in team competition, but Saluki Lisa Warren later lost to Redbird Sue Uranich in the semifinals for the individual title.

The MVC drawing, which will be held Thursday, could affect performances. The Salukis would have a better chance of advancing if they did not have to face Drake right away, Auld said. The Salukis, though, do have a good chance of doing well.

"Everyone was playing well last weekend," said the Saluki coach. "Physically, we have no problems with anyone. There sometimes can be some mental letdown after a state meet, but I don't feel it's that way at all with us. They also have exams coming up, but I think everyone is geared up for the conference."

Hendrick, Cards defeat Cubs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — George Hendrick supplied the punch and Bruce Sutter the relief pitching as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 7-6 Wednesday.

Hendrick's second homer of the day, a solo shot in the seventh inning, provided the Cardinals with their winning run.

Reflecting the indisputable value of Hendrick to his club is St. Louis' 16-2 record with him in the lineup. Hendrick's winning shot, his third homer in two games and seventh of the season, came off Willie Hernandez, 0-2, the third Chicago pitcher.

Doug Bair, 3-0, picked up the victory for St. Louis, escaping a two-on none out jam in the Chicago seventh. Sutter pitched the ninth inning, earning his major league-leading 10th save. It was St. Louis' fourth straight victory and the Cubs' fourth consecutive loss. Hendrick belted a solo homer in the second off Cubs' starter Doug Bird and added an RBI-single an inning later to give St. Louis a 3-0 advantage.

Chicago tied the score in the fourth. Junior Kennedy tripled and scored on a single by Bill Buckner. Keith Moreland singled Buckner to third. A wild pitch by Cards' starter Andy Rincon scored Buckner and Leon Durham singled home Moreland.

St. Louis took a 5-3 lead in the bottom of the inning on an RBI-single by Rincon followed by Lonnie Smith's run-scoring double.

Dane Iorg's two-out RBI-single in the fifth off Dick Tidrow tied the game at 6-6 before Hendrick connected for his second home run.

Cubs to honor Saluki alumni

In honor of SIU-C alumni, Saturday, June 5, will be SIU-C Day at Wrigley Field in Chicago, where the Chicago Cubs will take on the San Francisco Giants.

A pre-game and post-game party will be held at the Cubby Bear Lounge, across from the ballpark on Clark and Addison streets. The Cubby Bear's owner is George Loukas, a former Saluki football player who graduated from SIU-C in 1973.

Tickets for the SIU-C section at Wrigley that day, behind and above home plate, are $5 each, which includes a contribution to SIU-C athletics.

Tickets may be ordered from Loukas, with checks made payable to him, at the Cubby Bear Lounge, 1059 Addison, Chicago, Ill. 60613; or from the SIU-C Alumni office in Carbondale, with checks made payable to the SIU-C Alumni Association.

Perry takes aim at No. 300

SEATTLE (AP) — Gaylord Perry exchanged breezy telephone greetings with President Reagan and said at a news conference Wednesday he was more excited than nervous about approaching his 300th major league pitching victory.

Perry, who picked up No. 299 last Friday in New York's Yankee Stadium, is scheduled to get his first crack Thursday night at becoming the 15th pitcher to reach the 300 mark. The Yankees again will oppose Perry and the Seattle Mariners.

"I know it's just an ugly rumor that you and I are the only ones left who saw Abner Doubleday throw out the first ball," Reagan told Perry from the White House will also run the 5,000. Illinois' Marianne Dickerson, the Division I MVP last year, and ISU's Van Mierlo will provide the top competition in that event.

Plymire-Houseworth is the only Saluki to qualify for the nationals, in the 5,000 and 10,000. The state meet will, "for all practical purposes," be the last chance the Salukis will have to qualify, Blackman said.

Davis is the only other Saluki athlete whom Blackman thinks has a realistic shot at qualifying. The sophomore's best time this season in her specialty, the 400 dash, falls two-tenths of a second short of the qualifying time of 55.0, hand-held. Davis will face Western's Sheila Barney, the 1980 state meet MVP who has also yet to qualify for nationals.

Western's Cheryl Novak and Judy Madea, both AIAW qualifiers in the javelin last year, will challenge Saluki freshman Joy LaPorte will battle WIU's Kathy Koch and Eastern's Stance Sukei and Sharon Farley in the 400 hurdles.

The last time the Salukis won the state meet was 1976 in Charleston.

"I'm hoping that will be a good omen," Blackman said.

Saluki nine scalp No. 18 Illinois twice

By Steve Metsch
Sports Editor

CHAMPAIGN — The Salukis played the way Coach Itchy Jones felt they could all year here Wednesday as they twice beat the Illini.

SIU-C scalped the nation's No. 18 team 10-5 and 5-0 at Illinois Field.

"This is the way I felt we could play all year," said Jones. "We played well defensively, ran well and had good pitching. We also got some clutch hits for a change."

The Salukis have now won four straight and six of the last seven to improve their record to 30-18. The Illini fell to 44-18.

In the first game, the Salukis came from behind with seven runs in the sixth inning to beat the Illini 10-5. The highlight of the inning was Corey Zawadski's grand slam home run.

"It was a slider low and in," said Zawadski. "When a pitcher gets ahead of me, he likes to do that."

The centerfielder hit the 0-2 pitch into a stiff wind blowing in from right field. He said he "just got under it."

It was the second home run of his career, the first coming Sunday against Indiana State.

The Salukis jumped off to a 2-0 lead in the first inning as Kurt Reid and Scott Bridges each knocked in a run.

The Illini took the lead 3-2 with three runs on just one hit in the fourth. Starter Ken Klump allowed a hit and walked two men before he was lifted for Rob Clark.

Clark walked the first man he faced and hit the next batter to allow two Illinois runners to score.

The Salukis tied it in the top of the fifth when Tom Hendricks led off with a single, moved to second on Zawadski's sacrifice bunt and scored when third baseman Dave Rear booted a grounder hit by P.J. Schranz.

But Illinois proved it deserved its nickname of the Fighting Illini, coming back with two runs in the home half of the inning to take a 5-3 lead. But those runs weren't enough to handle the Saluki explosion in the sixth.

Clark improved his record to 6-3, while Illinois' top reliever, Jeff Innis, took the loss and is now 6-2.

In the second game, Jerry

Corey Zawadski

Halstead went the distance to record his first shutout as a Saluki. The senior is now 2-3.

Halstead said he didn't use his slider as much as he has in the past because he "had a little pain in his elbow." Instead, he set them up for his slider with off-speed pitching.

"With the way the wind was blowing, I wasn't afraid to throw my slider," he said. A strong wind blew in from right field throughout the doubleheader.

Halstead has pitched four times in the last five days, but said he doesn't mind.

Fan supports Saluki baseball to the hilt, at home or on road

By Steve Metsch
Sports Editor

Webster's Dictionary calls a fan an "enthusiastic devotee of a sport." If the book's publishers ever needed a definition of a "super fan," all they would have to do is visit Chester Kesser of Murphysboro.

Kesser has been regularly attending Saluki games for "16 or 17 years," and has missed just two in the past three seasons.

What's so impressive about Kesser's attendance is that it includes every Saluki game, be it on the road or in Carbondale.

"Everywhere they go, I'll go," says Kesser, who is always accompanied on the road by his wife Allene.

"We have a little camper and we'll go a day ahead of them (the team)," he said. "We'll be there, the bus will pull ahead of us and they'll all wave hello to us."

"I missed the game in New Orleans this year because we were visiting friends in Baton Rouge. I used to miss some games because of work, but after I retired, I'm able to see more," said Kesser, who retired in 1973.

The Salukis, in recognition of Kesser's devotion, gave him a baseball autographed by all the team-members between games of Tuesday's twinbill with SIU-Edwardsville.

Once the Salukis' season is over, don't expect the self-proclaimed "No. 1 American Legion baseball fan in the United States" to sit back and take it easy.

Kesser said he has been to the Legion's national tournament for 21 straight years and plans to attend No. 22 at Boyertown, Penn., later this summer as well as next year's classic in Fargo, N.D.

He attends state Legion tournaments and then visits the regional tourney which is nearest the site of that season's nationals.

"I try to go to different places each year to see different teams," said Kesser.

When he visits those "different places," Kesser is sure to bring back souvenirs.

"I always take SIU-C cups and trade them. I've got a stack of cups this big at home," he said, stretching out his arms.

Baseballs? No problem, Kesser has enough to equip a small town of sandlot teams for a season.

"I've got about 325 baseballs. I get a ball from the first-place team of the American Legion tournament each year," he said.

Kesser owns one baseball which he says he "wouldn't take anything for."

He has a ball signed by the Milwaukee Brewers' Rollie Fingers, the American League's Most Valuable Player

"It's great, I like it," he said of his frequent appearances. "I don't know how often I can pitch three games and then start, though."

The Salukis scored a run in the first, second and fourth innings and added two more in the seventh.

Catcher Joe Richardson knocked in two runs with sacrifice flies and Jim Reboulet and Reid knocked in a run each.

"I've been keeping my hands closer to my body, which makes my bat quicker," said Richardson, who also hit a triple and knocked in a run in the first game.

Illinois managed six hits off Halstead, including three in the third inning, but were unable to score when Zawadski fired a perfect strike to Richardson to nab an Illini runner at the plate.

"That was a bang-bang play. 'Z' made a great throw which was right there," said Richardson. "I'd like to have a play like that in every game."

Jones said the recent momentum the Salukis are enjoying won't be a factor in the Valley tournament.

"All the teams are 0-0. We start all over again now," said Jones.

The tournament begins at the Eastern Division champion's field on May 14. The Salukis currently lead the East with a 7-5 record. Should Indiana State or Illinois State tie SIU-C for first, a coin flip will decide the champ.

Spoiler role awaits tracksters at state

By Paul Lorenz
Associate Sports Editor

Eight teams will vie for the women's state track crown at Charleston this weekend, and women's track Coach Claudia Blackman is casting her Salukis as spoilers rather than frontrunners.

Eastern Illinois, Western Illinois, Illinois and Illinois State, according to Blackman, will vie for the lead role at the AIAW championship Friday and Saturday. Bradley should join SIU-C in determining which of the top teams claim the title, she said.

"A good finish for us would be in the top five," Blackman said, "but we should finish sixth or seventh." The Saluki coach said it would take about 100 points to win the meet and 50 to finish in the top four.

Northern Illinois and SIU-Edwardsville make up the rest of the field.

Blackman said this year's field is the strongest overall in about four years. Western Illinois has dominated the meet since 1978, she said.

"The teams have come back together," Blackman said. "One team won't finish 15 points ahead of the next." She added that to her knowledge more Illinois collegiate tracksters have qualified for the AIAW Outdoor Nationals this year than in the past several years. The nationals are scheduled for the end of the month.

SIU-C has faced all the favorites except WIU, the defending Division I state champs, in scoring meets this season.

Eastern scored 83 points to take second behind Missouri at the Saluki Relays April 9. Illinois finished second with 67 points in a triangular against champ Indiana and SIU-C the previous week. The Illini took second at the 1981 state meet.

The Salukis recorded an eighth-place finish, scoring 40 points, at the 20-team Becky Boone Relays two weeks ago, and beat out both EIU and Illinois State in the process. But Blackman pointed out that most of Eastern's team was at Drake, while ISU was missing two runners, including distance standout Wendy Van Mierlo.

"Illinois State has changed their strategy for the state meet this year, which should help them," Blackman said.

"They felt that in the past their people had been so psyched up for their own Illinois State Invitational that they suffered a letdown at the state meet the following week," she said. "So this year they made the invitational a non-scoring meet." The Redbirds finished third at the state meet last year.

Last year the Salukis placed fourth at the state meet with 79 points. But Blackman said all the teams will lose some points this year because both Division I and II teams will be competing for the same crown. Last year the field was split into two categories.

Paity Plymire-Houseworth, Debra Davis, Cynthia Joy and Karen LaPorte figure to lead the Saluki scorers.

Plymire-Houseworth has won the 10,000-meter run at the state meet the last two years. She broke her own IAAW record by running a 37:33.36 last year.

Tennis title up for grabs at MVC women's meet

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Staff Writer

Any possible lapses in performance by the women's tennis team Friday and Saturday can not be blamed on the weather, as the Salukis travel to Bradley's indoor courts in Peoria to participate in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

Coach Judy Auld has not seen the courts there, but said that Saluki Maureen Harney, a Peoria resident, described them as extremely fast courts.

"They'll be faster than what we play on, so hopefully we'll get used to them early," Auld said. "We may have a little problem hitting the ball late, but it shouldn't be too bad.

"If the weather is nice, I'd rather be outdoors," she said, adding that access to the players in order to give them instructions is usually made a bit more difficult by the confines of an indoor facility.

While the weather won't be a factor, the drawing to pair players could play a big part in the success of the Salukis, according to Auld.

"Depending on the draw, the title could be up for grabs," she said "It could go to four teams — Wichita State, Drake, Illinois State and us."

Drake and Wichita State are the teams to beat, she added. "Drake has a couple of very good players and real good
