U.S., Soviet relation worsening—leader

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said Sunday he detected unfavorable changes in the U.S. attitude toward his country that could return the world to a "cold or semicold war."

Gorbachev made known his fears in a meeting in the Kremlin with Australian publishing magnate Rupert Murdoch and his remarks were carried by the official Tass news agency.

"Gorbachev expressed his anxiety about signs of a change in the U.S. attitude to the Soviet Union," Tass said. "The changes are reflected not only in statements but also in some economical and political steps."

Gorbachev said the new relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union that began with perestroika in 1985 had given much positive to the world.

"This relationship must be treated with care and filled with new content and must move forward," he said.

"If what has been gained during the previous (Ronald Reagan) administration and the Bush presidency is jeopardized, the world again will fall into the depths of cold, or semicold, war, or at least in the atmosphere of political darkness, which will harm the health of the entire international community," he said.

The Soviet president said it is necessary "to think continuously of the special value of the relations between two such great powers and not to subject them to unnecessary tests, especially at such a critical moment."

He said he still wants a summit with the United States to take place.

Gus says Gorbachev feels that America isn't warming to the absence of a cold war.

Bush hospitalized for second day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush remained hospitalized Sunday night, receiving medication intended to correct his irregular heartbeat, as doctors continued to review medical tests of the 66-year-old president.

Bush's delayed return to the White House appeared to be prompted by his modest response to medication intended to resume a regular heartbeat, which became erratic Saturday following a jogging stint.

naval center at around 8 p.m. and said the president was preparing to retire early for bed.

"He looks great," she said upon leaving the hospital for the White House, where she was to spend the evening.

On Sunday doctors had conducted a battery of tests on the president's condition, known as atrial fibrillation which is caused by an irregular beating of an upper chamber of the heart, called the atrium.

More than 48 hours after being admitted to the hospital, Bush continued to take digoxin, a derivative of digitalis, and the drug procainamide.

Earlier in the day Bush smiled as he leaned briefly from his fourth floor window to field questions from reporters.

Bush said his doctors assured him that he would be able to resume his jogging, a major source of enjoyment for the active president.

When suggested he was anxious to return to the White House and said, "I was hoping to get out of here this morning."

Areas still feeling effects of disasters

Typhoon survivors vulnerable to disease; death toll in Bangladesh reaches 130,000

DHAKA, Bangladesh (UPI) — Health specialists predicted Sunday that waterborne diseases would break out among the famished survivors of last week's major typhoon that has killed at least 130,000 people.

The typhoon with 146 mph winds and 20-foot tidal waves stormed ashore from the Bay of Bengal early Tuesday, sweeping away homes and people, killing thousands of cattle, swamping ships and flooding several islands.

Officials said Sunday rescue teams found hundreds of bloated corpses, human and animal, littering the southern coast of Bangladesh, raising the death toll to at least 130,000.

It was the worst storm since a 1970 typhoon raged across Bangladesh and killed 300,000 people.

Indian newspapers quoting unnamed officials in Dhaka put the ultimate death toll at 500,000. Finance Minister Saifur Rahman has predicted a toll of 200,000.

Health Ministry officials said they do not yet know the total number of dead and the food, water and medical requirements of the survivors.

Weather forecasters warned of more rains poised to belt southern Bangladesh, one day after a smaller typhoon swept across the country.

Landslides, floods created by earthquake forces evacuation of residents in Georgia

MOSCOW (UPI) — Floods and landslides triggered by last Monday's earthquake battered northern Georgia Sunday, washing away 18 houses and forcing the evacuation of 1,800 people, the official Tass news agency said.

Last Monday's quake, which was measured at 7.2 on the Richter Scale by the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colorado, left at least 114 dead and 67,000 homeless, the International Red Cross said Friday.

Tass said the powerful quake triggered landslides that led to flooding Sunday in the main northern Georgian city of Tskhinvali.

"Landslides blocked ravines where snow melts in this period of the year and formed water reservoirs," it said. "The dam of one of them did not withstand the water pressure."

"More than 60 apartment houses were in the flooded area, of which 18 were destroyed. A total of 1,800 people were evacuated to safe areas."

The tremor was more powerful than the quake that killed 25,000 people in neighboring Armenia in 1988, but it caused less loss of life because it struck in a less densely populated region.

The leadership of the Georgian parliament on Friday lifted a blockade of equipment from Russia, allowing medicines to reach South Ossetia region.

OMB plan restricts research reimbursements

By Natalie Boehme and John Patterson
Staff Writers

April 22 for the type of overhead costs universities can charge to the government while conducting federally sponsored research, said Tom Bruce, OMB public relations specialist.

"It became clear that there were some abuses in the system," Bruce said. "The proposal is an attempt to clear up guidelines."

A large part of the proposal deals with reimbursements on costs universities encounter that are not directly related to the research, such as utilities and libraries.

The current manner of handling overhead reimbursements is being questioned because of recent federal investigations of misuse of this funding at Stanford University and other institutions, he said.

Bruce said the proposal will be open to public review and comments for about 60 days.

Revisions then will be made to the proposal before they are added to the existing guidelines, he said.

Larry Hawse, associate director of grants and contracts for SIUC's Office of Research Development and Administration, said the Stanford experience is causing a lot of questioning.

Salukis win Gateway regular season

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

With its final two wins against Wichita State Saturday, the SIUC softball team won its first Gateway Conference regular-season title.

The Salukis finished their regular season 38-4 overall and 14-0 in conference play. SIUC is the first team in the Gateway Conference's nine-year history to go unbeaten in league play.

This season the Salukis also set the school record for consecutive wins, going 23 straight before falling to Southeast Missouri State

May 1.

SIUC coach Kay Bretchelsbauer said when they lost and broke their streak, the players did not let it dampen their spirits.

"It was bound to happen sooner or later," Bretchelsbauer said. "We could only go so long unbeaten. I think the team responded to it well by bouncing back to take the second game against Southeast and by winning two Gateway games Saturday."

The Salukis will play in the Gateway Conference Tournament Thursday through Saturday in Wichita, Kansas. If they win, they will automatically advance to the NCAA Championship later on this spring.

SIUC's doubleheader Friday against Southwest Missouri State was cancelled because of rain, so the Salukis played only two games against Wichita to end their regular season.

Wichita took the Salukis to the limit in the first game, playing 16 full innings before falling to them 2-0. SIUC swept past the Shockers 4-3 in the second to bring their Gateway wins to an undefeated 14-0 for the season.

Sophomore hurler Angie Mick went the distance with the Shockers, setting a new school record by pitching all 16 innings of the first game. Sunny Clark held the old record of 15 innings pitched in one game set in 1983.

This is Mick's sixth shutout of the season and it ties the school record for most shutouts in a season. With this win, Mick's record raises to a 17-3 mark.

SIUC scored its runs in the top of the sixteenth on an error and a wild pitch. SIUC and Wichita both had six runs in the game.

Junior second baseman Andrea Rudanovich had two hits, junior shortstop Cheryl Venorsky had one and junior center fielder Kim Johannsen and freshman Jenny Klotz each had one.

"We just were not able to score," Bretchelsbauer said about the 16-inning game. "Both Angie and Wichita's pitcher Celeste Sanchez had great pitching performances. Neither team's offense could come through. We did not get the hits we needed to score."

"It was a great come-from-behind win. The players attacked the ball better later in the game."

Dawgs finish last at tourney

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

Dodger manager Leo Durocher once said, "Nice guys finish last." The Salukis certainly agree.

SIUC's baseball team, which spent as much time playing groundskeeper as baseball, finished last in the Wright State Invitational this weekend in Dayton, Ohio.

When the team arrived Saturday morning, there was no tarp on the infield and the turf was soaked. Because there were no groundskeepers, the Salukis took time to prepare the field for the game, which they lost.

The same problem arose Sunday and once again the Dawgs took it upon themselves to clean up while the Wright State players stood on the sidelines and warmed up. The Salukis also dropped that game.

SIUC falls to 24-31-1.

The Dawgs dropped the opener to Eastern Illinois 3-0, wasting an outing by senior Phil Mehringer, in which the right-hander allowed two earned runs on three hits through seven innings.

The second game was a pitching duel between Shawn Hogan of Morehead State and junior Sean Bergman. Bergman struck out 14, but Hogan struck out 20 Salukis and threw a no-hitter.

Neither pitcher got the victory, however. The game was called with the score tied 1-1.

Both of the game's runs were unearned. The Salukis scored when senior Mike Kirkpatrick's fly ball was misplayed into a three-base error. Freshman Jeff Cynwiar drove him home with a sacrifice fly.

Saluki head coach Sam Riggleman said it was fitting the game ended in a tie because nobody deserved to lose.

Sunday the Salukis were thwarted by both the elements and host Wright State. The game was delayed for 45 minutes before starting because of thunderstorm activity.

The rain didn't hamper the Wright State hitters. Second

Men's tennis takes second

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

The SIUC men's tennis team brought home a second-place finish from the Missouri Valley Conference Championships this weekend at Indiana State University in Terre Haute.

The Salukis were led by sophomore Rikard Stenstrom and freshman Kai Kramer. Each won his flight at the tourney.

Stenstrom defeated two players who had beaten him earlier in the season on his way to the No. 2 singles title, including Simon Cornish of Valley champion Wichita State.

Kramer hung on to take the No.

6 singles crown by outlasting Russell Burnam of the University of Tulsa.

Freshman Danny Gonzalez battled his way to a second-place finish in the No. 5 singles flight, downing a Tulsa player who had beaten him last week.

rebounded to win the consolation bracket of the No. 4 singles flight.

Saluki head coach Dick LeFevre said he was happy with the level of play at the championships.

"I'd didn't expect to come this close," LeFevre said. "Drake's team folded, Marcel Dionne (Drake No. 1 singles player) lost in the first round and fell into the consolation bracket. The guys that were there did a very fine job."

Strike the Gold trainer believes Triple Crown sweep is possible

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Gratitude and humility preclude any bold predictions about Kentucky Derby winner Strike the Gold, but trainer Nick Zito believes the son of Alydar has what it takes to complete a sweep of the Triple Crown.

"He's like Hercules," he said the morning after Strike the Gold captured the 1 1/4-mile first jewel of the crown, beating the gelding Best Pal by 1 3/4 lengths. "He just keeps carrying everybody."

"The Triple Crown" champions, you get the best horses in the world. It's gonna be tough, but we've got a tough horse with a strong will."

But does he have the ability to win both the Preakness Stakes on May 18 and the Belmont Stakes on June 8?

"I made a deal with the man upstairs, so no predictions," he said. "But I think so, yes."

Zito, a volatile 43-year-old New Yorker, considered "the man upstairs" a major character in Strike the Gold's upstart climb from the ranks of allowance horses in February to Derby victor in May. Hence the dramatic television footage Saturday that showed Zito imploring his horse home with the prayerful "Show me the way! Show me the way! Show me the way!"

"For a moment, I thought God was inviting me into his living room," Zito explained Sunday. "That's the exact thought I had. He said, 'Come on in here for a little while.'"

In the days leading to the Derby, Zito said his role was to keep the horse happy, healthy and sound. The rest, he said, was up to Strike the Gold and "the man upstairs."

He says his strategy will be the same for the Preakness.

Competing trainers suggested Zito may need divine intervention for Strike the Gold to make the same kind of winning move at Pimlico that he did at Churchill Downs.

The race is a sixteenth of a mile shorter and over a track even more conducive to front-runners than the speed bias Strike the Gold overcame Saturday in circling the field around the home turn. It also will present a few fresh challengers, including impressive Arkansas Derby winner Olympio, as well as Best Pal and Derby show horse Mane Minister.

"I think Olympio will be the Preakness winner, and I'll win the Belmont," predicted trainer David Cross, who is holding sixth-place Derby finisher Quintana out of the Preakness to freshen him up.

Trainer D. Wayne Lukas, who finished ninth in the Derby with Corporate Report, also predicted three different winners in the three classics.

"Absolutely!" Lukas said. "The horse (Strike the Gold) won, but I don't think he dominated the field. I think the '90s are going to do that to racing. You're gonna salute the winner, and he's gotta go out to do it again."

Lukas said he also will enter Best Turn Stakes winner Dodge if he wins the Withers Stakes at Belmont Park Wednesday.

Athletes work toward finals and conference

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

Four women's track and field athletes took their books on the road to the National Track and Field Invitational in Indianapolis this weekend.

Sophomore Becky Coyne won the unseeded division of the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 14.53 seconds. Coyne has struggled with injuries throughout the season is trying to come back in time for the Gateway Conference championships.

Coyne's time would have placed her in fourth again at the tougher competition in the seeded portion of the hurdles event.

Junior Julie Tuttleben also ran the 100-meter hurdles, but did not place with a time 15.22 seconds.

Sophomore Nacolia Moore placed fourth in both the long jump and the triple jump. Her leap of 18-33/4 was a season-best for her in the long jump.

Sophomore Cheryl Evers finished eighth in the shot put and did not place in the discus.

Saluki head coach Don DeNoon said even though there was only one winner, the performances were good.

"We had some positive performances," he said. "Becky Coyne is not quite over her injuries and Cheryl Evers ran up against some very tough competition."

DeNoon said his team had double duty this weekend.

"I think most of the rest of the athletes were students this weekend," DeNoon said. "Even the girls who went on the trip studied on the way there and back."

South African violence kills 14; peace talks threatened

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Two rival black factions fighting with machetes and gasoline bombs killed 14 people during the weekend, and one of the groups threatened to pull out of peace talks and organize vigilante retaliation if the current wave of violence doesn't end. The Zulu-based Inkatha Freedom Party Sunday gave its black political rival, the African National Congress, seven days to stop the clashes that have left more than 100 dead in the past week, including 13 deaths Saturday night and one Sunday.

Soviet official: Republics heading for war

MOSCOW (UPI) — The chief of the Soviet Interior Ministry troops said Sunday that Armenia and Azerbaijan are heading toward a renewal of their open war of 15 months ago. "The situation is difficult: War is going on. I think we should call a spade a spade, stop pretending, and start looking for a way out," said Col. Gen. Yuri Shatalin. Armenian President Levon Ter-Petrosian said Saturday 36 Armenians were killed in a week of Azerbaijani attacks on villages in the region near the border between the two feuding republics.

Discovery wraps up tests, returns to Earth

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Discovery's seven-man crew, marking the 30th anniversary of American manned space flight, wrapped up a battery of "Star Wars" experiments Sunday and geared up for landing Monday in California. With ideal weather expected, commander Michael Coats and co-pilot Blaine Hammond planned to fire Discovery's twin braking rockets at 12:49 p.m. Monday to drop the ship out of orbit for an hour-long glide to touchdown at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 1:49 p.m.

Gas prices increasing with summer demand

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gasoline prices inched up more than 2 cents in the past two weeks, largely as a result of increased demand, an oil industry analyst said Sunday. Tribby Lundberg, publisher of the "Lundberg Letter," said a May 3 survey of more than 13,000 stations nationwide found that the overall price of gas rose 2.77 cents to $1.22.6 since April 19. Lundberg said the increase reflects a normal upswing in gasoline demand as summer approaches. "This is the time of year that is traditionally the kicking-off of the summer driving season," he said.

Preservation agency to fight for ownership of burial land

OTTAWA (UPI) — The ownership of Illinois' oldest and largest Indian burial site is the key issue in a trial scheduled for this summer in LaSalle County Court. The Illinois Historic Preservation Agency wants to purchase and preserve the Landings-Halfway farmsite near Utica. However, the state's effort has been stopped and a trial is set for July 15. About 400 Kaskaskia Indian graves are on the property on the Illinois River near Starved Rock State Park and state officials said it was the most important surviving village and burial site of the Illiniwek Indians.

Black Caucus calls for extension of surcharge

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Illinois Black Caucus Sunday called for a two-year extension of the half cent state income tax surcharge and a boosting of the temporary tax by a half cent to prevent services cuts in Gov. Edgar's budget. State Rep. Anthony Young said the revenue generated by the surcharge increase to 3.5 percent — an estimated $800 million — should be used to maintain programs and services at existing levels. Young, at a Chicago news conference, said the extra funds would be devoted to preventing the severe slashing of funding for service programs and for state employee layoffs.

AFROTC cadet wins national scholarship

By Natalie Boehme
Staff Writer

An SIUC Air Force cadet is flying high on ambition and achievement.

Robert A. Lindblom, a 21-year-old junior in administration of justice from Barrington Hills, was named as one of the five nationwide winners of the Daedalian Colonel Charles W. Getchell Memorial Scholarship. The award was given at the AFROTC Awards Banquet April 26.

The scholarship, which recognizes outstanding pilot candidates, had more than 400 cadets competing for the $2,000 scholarship nation-wide with one award given in each of the five Air Force ROTC regions.

Lindblom received the award for the Ohio Valley region, which contains 25 Midwest schools, including Notre Dame, Penn State and the University of Illinois.

Lindblom was the second cadet at SIUC to receive the scholarship, said Capt. Mark Douglas, assistant AFROTC professor. Derek Davis, a senior from Granite City in aviation management, was the first SIUC cadet to receive the memorial scholarship, winning it in spring 1990.

"Lindblom is a real go-getter," Douglas said. "He's full of enthusiasm and ambition. You just can't hold him back."

Lindblom said he was surprised to receive the award.

"It's a pretty prestigious award," he said. "I had guessed they were putting me in for it, but I honestly didn't expect to get it."

Requirements for the scholarship are completion of the junior year of college, demonstration of leadership and rank in the top 20 percent of the Air Force ROTC class and the top 25 percent of the university.

Douglas said Lindblom has had an outstanding career in ROTC, earning the General Dynamics AFROTC Cadet Award, the Small Arms Expert Marksmanship Award, Excellent Performance recognition during field training camp, the Illinois ROTC Scholarship and the Gateway Flight Order of Daedalian Scholarship.

Lindblom was the only cadet in his class to receive a pilot position.

When cadets sign a contract with the Air Force, the Air Force National Selection Board assigns work positions cadets will fill upon graduation from college. The board knows how many and what jobs will need to be filled at the time cadets graduate and from this information the board selects the cadets who are best qualified in the areas needed, Douglas said.

Cadets who sign receive $100 a month for expenses from the Air Force and are eligible for tuition scholarships, such as the Getchell Memorial Scholarship. In return cadets are required to serve a set amount of time in the military upon graduation.

The time commitment depends on the type of job assigned. Pilot positions require the maximum time of service, up to 10 years.

"As long as they let me do something I enjoy, I can't see any reason why I'd want to leave," he said.

Doctoral student: U.S. needs super morals as superpower

By Kylie Robertson
Staff Writer

An SIUC doctoral student in political science said as a superpower, the United States should have super morals.

Mamoun Fandy said human rights in the United States are just as backward as those in South Africa.

Fandy has had articles about human rights and the Middle East that were published in several national newspapers during the past year. The publications include the New York Times, the St. Louis Post Dispatch, the Christian Science Chronicle and the San Francisco Chronicle for the past year.

Fandy, a native Egyptian, said he has had 25 years of experience in the Arab world.

"I feel strongly about human rights," Fandy said. "It is an important issue in many parts of the world."

Minority groups may be able to vote in the United States, but the outcome is exactly the same—they are not represented in top management or government like they should be, Fandy said.

The world is becoming much more integrated and there is a need for unity, he said.

Bill should extend ban on clear-cutting

IF PRESIDENT BUSH'S PROPOSED budget that cuts excess spending is passed, he needlessly may slash away at the Shawnee National Forest.

Fortunately, U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard has taken this as a cue to action by co-sponsoring a bill to outlaw clear-cutting and offer better management of federal lands beyond the Shawnee.

Clear-cutting in the Shawnee provides a less-expensive way of harvesting than does select cutting, and this fits nicely into Bush's proposal. The process, however, damages the environment and wastes timber by possibly cutting healthy trees.

SELECT CUTTING, ALTHOUGH not as economically compelling as clear-cutting, offers less timber waste and better maintains the precious balance required in the environment. Both of these factors have gained more attention in recent years.

Solutions are needed to curtail the reliance on clear-cutting.

By not addressing a continued ban on clear-cutting on the Shawnee, Bush has left open the possibility of a return to clear-cutting.

Poshard's proposal covers all federally controlled property, bans all clear-cutting practices and requires federal agencies to keep up diversity of wildlife in the region.

THE PROPOSAL COULD AFFECT lumber companies near the West Coast more than those in this area because clear-cutting is better suited to manage the rolling landscapes found in western states.

On the whole, however, the bill ensures better conservation measures and offers more-economically sound management for most of the country.

The residents of Southern Illinois must let their views be known on Poshard's bill and other matters concerning clear-cutting. After all, the process concerns public lands—therefore, the public should remain highly involved in the debate.

Through public meetings and letters to elected representatives, local residents need to let their concerns be known.

"I am determined that we are going to be the catalyst in that troubled corner of the world for peace."—President Bush said about the United States' role in the Middle East.

"I had to go in and recapture one-third of the bathroom from the shampoo and all the other things that took it over while I was gone."—Gen. Schwarzkopf said about the difficulty adjusting to living outside a combat zone.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letter that the editors deem objectionable because of potentially libelous material or because of extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed and submitted in person by its author or authors. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

Game playing in computer lab moronic, should be eliminated

I went to the computer lab the other night at about 9:30. I was disappointed that every computer was being used in all the rooms.

Most of the computers were being used responsibly. However, I counted 11 computer users improving their solitaire game. This misuse of valuable computer time is certainly not mature conduct of any college student.

It is not my fault that these people have no social life. But take it out on the few computers we have on this campus? There are two arcades in the Student Center is one feels the need to battle wits with a computer.

I went to the information desk to find out what the rules were regarding the playing of games. I was shocked to hear the director of the computer room condone the playing of games because it improves the users computer skills.

This is absolutely moronic. There must be a little more thought and intelligence put into this dilemma.

There are some of us who have certain times to use the computers. Game playing must be eliminated.

There is certainly no time for game playing on the campus computers, especially if tuition is going to be raised.—Tracy Vietta, sophomore, construction technology.

Palestinians aren't all innocent

The intent of this letter is to follow up on my letter of April 29 and to comment on Ms. Ratliff's letter of April 30.

Although I cannot condone the violent policies of Israel toward the residents of the Occupied Territories and believe that dialogue should at least be attempted, I can't understand how Ms. Ratliff can assume the Palestinians are innocent people "armed with only knives and stones."

It's true that Israel is much stronger than the Palestinians and, I believe, should take the initiative in any peace negotiations because of this position.

But to assume the Palestinians are innocent people going about their business with no intent whatsoever of disturbing Israel is wrong.

Several Palestinian organizations have endorsed the complete in total destruction of Israel and, even at SIU, the occasional exhibits that crop up point to this fact.

The map of Palestine that's displayed includes all of Israel and leaves no room for compromise. For peace to be achieved, Palestinians must realize that Israel is a permanent fixture in the Middle East and only then can Israel begin to talk with the Palestinians.

Ms. Ratliff points out in her April 30 letter that "1,200 unarmed Palestinian civilian demonstrators have been killed by the Israeli army."

Many Palestinians have been killed by their own people, accused of collaboration with Israel (maybe the so-called collaborators desired peace with Israel) and a number of Israelis have been murdered by Palestinians.

If Ms. Ratliff wishes to do justice to the tension in the Middle East, she should address both sides of the issue.

Finally, as I mentioned in my previous letter, comparing the Nazi destruction of the Jews with the violence in Israel and the West Bank and Gaza is unjustified.

The Holocaust was the systematic and purposeful destruction of a people and its culture in the name of racial superiority. Despite Ms. Ratliff's comments and assumptions, this is definitely not taking place in Israel.—Jeffrey Ebenstein, graduate, political science.

Daily Egyptian doing good job with coverage

I WOULD LIKE to thank the staff of the Daily Egyptian for a job well done for the 1990-91 school year.

This is my first year here at SIUC and I have found the publication of the DE to be good for a student newspaper.

THE PAPER COVERS a wide variety of issues and even has a comic section.

But like all things in life there is definitely room for improvement. Earlier this year there was a small discrepancy about minority coverage in the paper.

SOME READERS felt that there wasn't enough coverage on minority issues and people. When the problem was presented to the staff of the DE, it was very helpful about the situation.

The DE spoke with representatives from a couple of black organizations on campus and consulted the members of these groups.

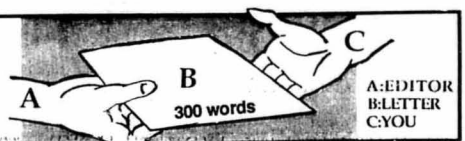

THE STAFF ASKED for suggestions on improvement for the paper.

The DE seems to be willing to try different approaches to getting the stories to the readers.

THEREFORE, I want to extend my gratitude once again to the paper for providing the kind of coverage it does.

I am confident the quality and format will continue to improve.—Keisha Evans, sophomore, visual communications.

The president joked about his condition. When asked whether his heart still had an irregular beat, he responded, "Yes. Can't you hear it?"

Bush delivered an emphatic "yes" when asked if he was going to continue jogging, and added, "the doctors have said that."

The president's spokesman cautioned that doctors detected no signs of a heart attack but added that medication had failed to entirely correct the rapid heartbeat that surfaced Saturday while Bush was jogging at Camp David, Md.

"There are no signs of heart damage and no evidence of a heart attack," press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said earlier in the day. "The president has no other symptoms and feels completely normal. This is corroborated by the blood and X-ray tests which were examined this morning."

Bush had been hospitalized overnight after suffering shortness of breath while jogging Saturday at Camp David, Md., the presidential retreat.

The president had just returned from a speech in Michigan when he complained about his breathing.

Fitzwater then told reporters there was a likelihood that Bush would be kept in the hospital for the rest of the day, perhaps overnight.

But he was unable to explain the continued fibrillation of his heart but repeated that there has been "no heart damage."

Fitzwater declined to give the rate of Bush's heartbeat and was unable to say whether he had been put on a monitor.

Although Bush's condition sometimes can be a sign of more serious heart disease, in men over age 60 atrial fibrillation usually occurs without any more serious problems, the experts said.

"It has nothing to do with a heart attack," said Dr. Adolph Hutter, president-elect of the American College of Cardiology.

The rapid, unsystematic contractions of the upper heart chambers cause the lower chambers to beat unusually fast and irregularly. The rapid pulse results in a decreased amount of blood pumped to the body.

On Sunday the president received visits from several grandchildren, his wife Barbara, the national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, and chief of staff, John Sununu.

Sununu, who described his visit as "routine paperwork," said after seeing the president, "He's getting cantankerous. He wants to get out today, right now."

Barbara Bush spent the night at the hospital and delivered an upbeat assessment as she left early Sunday. "He looks great. He looks fabulous. He's had no pain, no strain, no nothing." She returned later to lunch with her husband and remained the rest of the day.

At the White House, officials made a concerted effort to operate normally while the president was in the hospital.

On his way into church Sunday morning, Vice President Dan Quayle told reporters: "The president is doing well and feeling upbeat."

Quayle and his family attended 8:30 a.m. services at the Fourth Presbyterian Church in the Washington area.

Fitzwater said Bush had never experienced a similar ailment of shortness of breath in the past.

RESEARCH, from Page 1

University bought a yacht and a grand piano and billed part of the costs to the government to be reimbursed as research overhead, according to the Chronicle of Higher Education.

The proposed changes would prohibit reimbursements to universities for any costs associated with such items as:

- Housing for university officials;
- Club memberships;
- Social activities and other entertainment, including tickets to athletic events;
- Lobbying;
- Goods or services intended for the personal use of university officers or employees;
- Defense of fraud charges or similar actions brought by the government if the institution is found liable or does not contest the charges; and

■ Fines or penalties for violating laws or regulations.

The proposal also limits universities to collect a maximum of $120,000 for salary of any officer or employee.

The changes will affect SIU, but the 21st Century Plan aimed at increasing the amount of research the University does will not be affected directly, said George Gumerman, director of the Center for Archeological Investigations at SIUC.

Gumerman said the changes will affect the University, but the 21st Century Task Force is not at that specific level of detail yet.

"Overhead recovery helps the University be more flexible," he said.

Overhead costs are a major problem that needs to be addressed, but the solutions are far from cut and dried, Gumerman said.

He said items such as air conditioning bills for labs fall in the grey area of what should and shouldn't be funded.

Although situations such as the Stanford overhead costs clearly show that many items should not have been charged to the federal government, Gumerman said sometimes there are items that should be included but aren't.

The new guidelines will help with the problem, but individual problems with overhead costs are not easy to find on a general basis, he said.

Any Cooper contributed to this report.

The media is presenting Arabs as "greasy and sleazy" through political cartoons not recognizing that Arabs come to the United States to integrate into the western culture, he said.

They are ridiculed and go back to their nation with an unfavorable image of the United States, he said. These people are the ones that later become anti-western fundamenlists.

Fandy has had two books published in Arabic.

One is a non-fiction cultural critique on the post-modern era of the Middle East. The other is a collection of short stories, he said.

After completing a degree in English in Egypt, Fandy studied as a Fullbright student in linguistics at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

He moved to Carbondale in 1989 where his wife Judith Fandy teaches in the English Department.

He said he continues his studies and research for his articles.

"Carbondale is an ideal place to carry out research," Fandy said. "It is quiet with few distractions and I can carry out my work with no disturbances."

Fandy works from home and obtains his information by fax from international and national sources.

Fandy is currently a permanent writer for the Pacific News Service based in California.

He writes three pieces a month for the service as well as submitting some articles to other publications.

"I like to have my point of view published in different places," Fandy said.

GORBACHEV, from Page 1

Both sides have said they envision a summit in the first half of the year, which now means June.

"The U.S.-Soviet summits must be held on a regular basis and not be sensational happenings," he said.

The United States put off a February summit with Gorbachev because of U.S. preoccupation with the Gulf War and displeasure with Moscow's crackdown in the Baltics.

Gorbachev made it clear he is not happy over Western press descriptions of chaos in the Soviet Union and his perceived turn to the right to halt the decline.

He pleaded for Western understanding of the transition from a pure totalitarian state to one trying to be based on law with a parliamentary system.

"In the transition of any country, especially one such as ours, into an entirely new state, chaos is inevitable. A brutal suppression would just mean a return to the past and this would be destruction," Gorbachev said.

"The choice has been made once and for all, and movement now may be only forward. The political task is now is to keep the chaos from becoming a catastrophe."

"I know grades are important too so I don't let them be overshadowed by ROTC," said

Lindblom.

Many presidents hospitalized during terms; 4 die in office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush is among a long line of U.S. presidents who have been hospitalized frequently in the nation's history, though only four of the republic's 40 presidents succumbed to death from illness.

Four other presidents were felled by assassins' bullets.

Bush was hospitalized Saturday after suffering from an irregular heartbeat, a common ailment and one that typically can be stabilized with medication, which the president is taking.

The president's doctors have said their patient is in no danger. None of the men who preceded Bush died of heart attacks, according to written accounts, though three presidents had seizures while in office, including Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was the most recent president who died of illness in office. While the 32nd president survived an assassination attempt on Feb. 15, 1933, in Miami, Roosevelt suffered a fatal stroke on April 12, 1945 - less than two months into an unprecedented fourth term.

Other presidents who have died from illness while in office include Harding, William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor.

Harding was stricken July 27, 1923, by what first appeared to be indigestion from eating crab meat on a trip to Alaska. Later, doctors diagnosed the ailment as a heart attack although an autopsy was never performed.

While recovering in San Francisco, he developed pneumonia and died Aug. 2.

Harrison and Taylor developed colds in office and died.

Harrison, the 9th president, caught pneumonia during his inauguration on March 4, 1841, and died a month later.

Taylor became ill from the heat while laying the cornerstone of the Washington Monument. He developed typhoid fever and cholera and died July 9, 1852, just over a year into his administration.

Four presidents were assassinated and four presidents were targets of assassins, but escaped. With the exception of John F. Kennedy, all the assassinated presidents lived for at least a day after the attack. Kennedy died instantly.

Abraham Lincoln, the first president killed in office, lived nearly 24 hours after he was shot by John Wilkes Booth on April 14, 1865.

James A. Garfield was shot July 2, 1881, at a railroad terminal in Washington by a spurned aspirant for U.S. consul to Paris. He died 80 days later, Sept. 18, 1881, after signing a single extradition paper.

Bush suffers minor ailments while in office, remains active

United Press International

President George Bush, 66, who jogs regularly and remains otherwise very physically active, has generally been in excellent health.

During his 1990 annual checkup, however, doctors discovered Bush had glaucoma in his left eye.

Bush, who wears glasses, suffered no vision loss from the problem and was given eyedrops for the condition. Glaucoma, which affects an estimated 2 million Americans, is caused by high fluid pressure in the eye.

Bush also has a slight hearing loss sustained during his flight days in World War II.

The president takes over-the-counter drugs for minor allergies and is allergic to bee stings.

In fact, in 1978 he had a life-threatening allergic reaction to a sting at a football game in Alabama. He was treated before suffering anaphylactic shock.

In a 1988 interview with The

New York Times when he was vice president, Bush said he suffered a non-bleeding duodenal ulcer in 1960, passing out in a London hotel room while on a business trip.

He had a second such ulcer in 1966, but now claims he has no memory of it, the Times said. The duodenum is the first part of the small intestine. Doctors believe stress may contribute to, but not cause ulcers.

As a teenager, Bush had a bout of hepatitis, making him ineligible as a blood donor, the Times said. The hepatitis virus can remain latent in blood and increase a person's risk of liver damage.

Bush takes a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drug to combat mild arthritis of hip and knee joints when it flares up after jogging.

Bush has also suffered diarrhea from an attack of irritable bowel syndrome, and in 1986 he had a small non-cancerous colon polyp removed, the Times said. Bush also has slight enlargement of the prostate gland.

Poll: Charge those who knowingly transmit AIDS with murder, assault

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most Americans believe that those who knowingly infect another person with the virus that causes AIDS should be charged with murder or assault, a poll released Sunday showed.

An overwhelming number of Americans reported that the rights of partners of those infected with the HIV virus should outweigh medical privacy rights held by those who are infected, the poll showed.

The survey was conducted by National Law Journal and Mead Data General Corp.'s LEXIS, a legal database.

The random telephone survey of 800 adults focused on some of the most controversial modern medical debates — including such issues as the jailing of pregnant substance abusers.

Most Americans, while still fiercely guarding their right to medical privacy, believe in limiting the rights to privacy of AIDS-infected doctors, pregnant substance abusers and violent criminals, the poll showed.

Most of those surveyed — 93 percent — said doctors and dentists with AIDS or the HIV virus should be legally required to inform their patients of their health status.

The poll showed that 79 percent said that those who knowingly infect another person with AIDS or its virus should face criminal charges.

Half of those surveyed said people who knowingly transmit the deadly virus should be charged with murder and 29 percent said that they should face assault charges.

Perhaps even more startlingly, more than half — 52 percent — reported that a new mother should be criminally charged if her child is born impaired as a result of substance abuse during pregnancy, the poll said.

In addition, 43 percent said genetic information on murderers and rapists should be made available to law enforcement officials through a nationwide DNA data bank.

Overall, Americans still believe in a person's right to medical confidentiality.

Tribes to bury Indian remains returned from Field Museum

CHICAGO (UPI) — Field Museum officials are taking inventory of their collection of Indian remains and plan to turn the bones over to the appropriate tribes for burial.

Jonathan Haas, the museum's vice president for collections and research, says the accounting was ordered to respond to passage of the Native American Grave Protection and Repatriation Act, signed into law last year. The measure requires museums across the country that receive federal funds to inventory their remains so they can be returned to their descendants.

The legislation, however, has no impact on the Illinois State Museum at Dickson Mounds because museum officials say it is not possible to trace that collection to any modern tribe.

Haas said the Field Museum has remains of about 1,000 Indians from 40 groups and the inventory process is expected to take quite a while. Research by two native American interns is under way to determine how the museum acquired the remains.

"They're very open to work with, very good to work with," said Curly Bear Wagner, who is waiting to acquire the remains of 35

Blackfeet Indians to take back to Montana.

Wagner said just holding the index cards detailing the museum's collection makes him feel as though the spirits are close.

"When I took them to my studio apartment and I laid down, I had the feeling that somebody was in the room with me, that the spirits were in the room with me," he said. "They were glad to see me. There was a lot of spiritual power there."

Wagner said it is important for the remains to be buried on Blackfeet land.

"We feel their spirit is still roaming around," he said. "Our elders feel this is the reason why the drugs and alcohol and all this misbehavior is going on. This is one of the reasons why. There are people who aren't at rest yet."

The remains were stolen from the Blackfeet reservation more than 100 years ago, Wagner said.

"We recognize that Native Americans didn't really approve of having Native American remains on display," Haas said.

The Blackfeet remains come from several parts of Montana and include men, women and children, said John Yellow Kidney, 60, spiritual leader of the tribe.

HeadHunters' second album pokes fun at country music

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

One of the only surprises at the 1991 Grammy Awards came from out of the South in the form of the Kentucky HeadHunters.

The band's first album, "Pickin' on Nashville," broke a few stylistic rules and won it the title of Best Country Artist for 1990.

Now the Heads, as they sometimes call themselves, have followed up that victory with another strong blues-rock-country mix on PolyGram Records, "Electric Barnyard," a release dedicated to the notion that country musicians need not take themselves too seriously.

Few other country bands would have the nerve to poke fun at their art with a rocking version of "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" ("Killed him a bear when he was only three"), a song that helped make Fess Parker's Disney films popular in the 1950s.

This self-produced album provides a nice forum for Greg Martin's 1950s rockabilly guitar style and Fred Young's percussion, which has the force of a baseball bat whacking a garbage can.

Music Review

Young's brother Richard plays rhythm guitar, and Doug Phelps provides a solid, bluesy bass line.

The album kicks off with "It's Chittin' Time," a boogie number in the best bar-band tradition that praises the joys of cutting loose and partying.

On "With Body and Soul," the bouncy melody puts a happy face on a song about a lover's death. It's the kind of song a listener can dance to several times before realizing the nature of the subject matter.

The band's influences really begin to show on the fifth track, "Diane," whose opening chords evoke the Who's "I Can See for Miles."

The lyrics catch the feeling of worthlessness that comes with lost love. "A dark man in glasses walked up with a knife," singer Ricky Lee Phelps declares. "I said, 'You must be crazy, I got nothing left to take at all.'"

Guitarist Martin cuts loose a dirty, Led Zeppelin-style riff on "Wishin' Well," a warning about the dangers of excessive materialism: "Be proud of what you got and who you are."

A cover of Norman Greenbaum's "Spirit in the Sky" follows, with Martin and bassist Doug Phelps taking some of the edge off Greenbaum's ominous chord changes.

Ricky Lee Phelps' clear Southern voice makes the song's declaration of faith more believable. Where Greenbaum sang "I've never been a sinner," Phelps admits his transgressions.

The second half of the album is stronger than the first, which is hobbled by two standard country cliches. "Only Daddy That'll Walk the Line" suffers from an unremarkable construction and a typical "my woman done left me" theme, and "16 and Single" is just another song about men drooling over the sexiest girl in town.

But the high points on the record far outnumber the lows, and it's good to hear a band defying the unwritten laws of country-pop and being recognized for it.

"Electric Barnyard" does its level best to breathe new life into a tired style of music, and almost succeeds single-handedly.

Notorious graffiti vandal arrested

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A notorious graffiti vandal known as "Chaka" was arrested Sunday for trespassing at a city golf course and was found in possession of a marking pen, an apparent violation of his probation.

Daniel Bernardo Ramos, 18, of Boyle Heights, who has scrawled his signature, or tag, "Chaka" more than 10,000 times across the state, was arrested with two companions at the course in Griffith Park, Sgt. Gus Martinez said.

The trio was spotted about 1 a.m. near the seventh tee by rangers patrolling the park, which was closed for the night.

Martinez said Ramos had a wide-tipped marking pen.

"If I can prove he was in possession of a marking pen, that's a violation of his probation," he said.

Ramos was released from jail Wednesday after pleading guilty to 10 counts of vandalism.

Butler to ambassador strangled in Moscow

MOSCOW (UPI) — The butler at the U.S. ambassador's residence was found strangled Friday in a Moscow apartment along with the owner of the flat in a double murder, the official Tass news agency said Sunday.

The mysterious death of Clementa Pandin, 66, an employee of 26 years at the ambassador's residence, comes six weeks after a fire swept through the U.S. Embassy, including its secret top-floor offices.

Pandin, an Italian citizen, lived at the ambassadorial residence along with his wife Maria, also an Italian citizen, the housekeeper at the residence, known as Spaso House.

Tass said that Pandin did not return home after leaving May 1 at 7:30 p.m. and his wife notified Moscow police May 3 about his disappearance.

The body was discovered Friday in a flat in central Moscow along with the owner of the apartment, a lawyer identified by both the Moscow police and Tass only as Lebedev.

"Moscow police identified two men found dead with signs of strangling in a city flat last Friday as a staff member of the U.S. Embassy, Clementa Pandin, 66, and the Soviet flat owner, a lawyer, Lebedev," Tass said.

A Moscow police spokesman would not speculate about the motives for the killing, but said the apartment contained stolen video systems.

He said the apartment was registered in the name of the lawyer, Lebedev.

All permanent Moscow residents must register their residence with the police.

The apartment where the bodies were found is in Moscow's prestigious Krasnopresnensky region in which the U.S. Embassy but not the ambassador's residence, is located.

Study: Supermarkets losing millions to employee theft

PARK RIDGE (UPI) — Grocery store owners beware. A new study shows that supermarkets lose a lot of money to employee theft annually — up to $17 million a year for large chains.

The study, conducted jointly by the London House of Park Ridge and the Food Marketing Institute, says respondents admitted to stealing an average of $143.52 from their employers in 1990.

Two employees admitted stealing $500 a week, the study said.

Based on the admissions, the organizations calculated that a 100-store food store chain could lose between $2.15 million and $17.6 million annually to employee theft.

The survey tapped 583 supermarket employees at 26 chains around the country. The results were presented at the Food Marketing Institute's Loss Prevention Conference.

In a similar survey conducted in 1989, employees admitted to stealing an average of $44.72 cents.

A higher percentage of employees admitted to stealing in 1990, compared to 1989, the study said.

In the 1989 study, 43 percent of supermarket employees surveyed admitted to cash and property theft.

Cubs beat Braves for 9-6 win

ATLANTA (UPI) — April is the cruelest month for Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg. May, however, is another matter entirely.

Sandberg went 3 for 5, scored three runs and drove home a pair Sunday to help Chicago break Atlanta's three-game winning streak with a 9-6 victory over the Braves.

Sandberg, whose average hovered around the .200 level for much of April and improved to .221 entering the game, belted a two-run homer — his second of the season — a double, and a single.

"I've always been a slow starter, it seems it takes me three weeks to get started," said Sandberg, who led the National League last year with 40 home runs. "I have to work on it. But slowly but surely, I felt pretty good today. I had a short night, about four hours sleep. It's nice to play in the warm weather."

Mark Grace and George Bell also homered for the Cubs. Grace went 2-for-4, including a three-run shot, his second of the year. Bell added his sixth homer of the season.

Chuck McElroy, 1-0, who entered in relief of Mike Bielecki in the fifth, worked 2 1-3 innings for his first major-league victory. The left-hander allowed one hit, striking out two and walking one. Dave Smith worked the ninth for his fifth save.

"Even when we win one, it's a struggle right now," Cubs Manager Don Zimmer said. "I wanted Bielecki to get five innings, but he couldn't find the plate. With all those left-handed hitters coming up, he walked two straight."

Bielecki walked the first two batters he faced in the fifth before being replaced by McElroy.

Chicago took a 3-1 lead with three third-inning runs off Charlie Leibrandt, 2-3. With one out, Jerome Walton singled and Sandberg followed with a double. Grace then stroked a 1-1 pitch over the right-field fence for his second home run of the year.

"I got too many pitches up in the strike zone too consistently," Leibrandt said. "I need to keep the ball down and I haven't done that in recent ballgames. Sandberg is one guy I didn't get any good pitches to. I got two balls up over the plate and he hammered them."

The Braves climbed within 3-2 in the fourth. Jeff Treadway led off with a walk, went to second on a single by David Justice and scored on Sid Bream's double.

Chicago added two runs in the fifth on Sandberg's homer, but Atlanta closed to 5-4 in the bottom of the inning an run-scoring groundout by pinch hitter Jeff Blauser and an RBI single by Justice.

for all the Salukis, however. Senior Joe Demeterco and sophomore Jay Merchant were disqualified from the tournament because of unsportsmanlike conduct penalties assessed to them after a match.

Both Demeterco and Merchant had won their first matches and were in the winners bracket in No. 1 and No. 3 singles, respectively.

Demeterco was expected to challenge for the singles title. He had destroyed eventual champion Darren Frian of Wichita State 6-0, 6-2 in a conference match last week.

The disqualification also meant the Salukis lost their No. 1 and No. 2 doubles teams.

The Salukis lost a total of 12 possible points due to the penalties and Wichita State finished ahead of SIUC in every flight the disqualifications affected, so the point swing could have been even greater.

LeFevre said he could not comment on the matter until he spoke with Athletic Director Jim Hart.

Missouri Valley Conference Associate Commissioner Joseph Mitch said the conference will not discuss the matter.

"We will not release any more information," Mitch said. "It was a decision made at the tournament and the decision is final."

Saluki players were not able to comment either.

GATEWAY, from Page 16

In the second game senior Lisa Robinson held tough on the mound. Robinson gave up only six hits, bringing her record to an unblemished 10-0.

Venorisky and freshman catcher Laurie Wilson lead the Salukis with two hits apiece. Venorisky also had one RBI along with Johannsen, senior first baseman Angie LeMonnier and senior left fielder Shannon Taylor.

"I am extremely pleased with the team's accomplishments this season," Bretchelsbauer said. "It was not an easy task to win the Gateway regular-season title. We had to work hard, playing some very difficult games and coming from behind more than once. The players held tough until they got the runs they needed to take the win."

Brechelsbauer said until the tournament the players are focusing on taking their finals.

"We are leaving Wednesday, so we only have two days of practice," Bretchelsbauer said. "We are concentrating on exams and staying as rested as possible to play on Thursday."

baseball Jon Sbrocce, No. 4 in the country in hitting with a .485 average, doubled. He later scored on Pat Garrigan's ground out.

Wright State extended its lead to 2-0 on left fielder Brent Fruhwirth's wind-blown homer to right in the seventh.

The Dawgs wouldn't go down quietly. In the ninth, after another two-hour rain delay, Kirkpatrick singled and advanced to third. With two out, Cywnar walked. Senior reserve Steve Nester pinch-hit for junior Derek Shelton.

Nester came through with a single to right, scoring Kirkpatrick. The game ended, however, when Cywnar was thrown out trying to advance to third on the play.

Riggelman said the fault did not lie with the Saluki hurlers.

"We were more than happy with the pitching," Riggelman said. "This weekend we just did not hit."

Graduate school offers alternative to job hunt

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

With the recent recession and plummeting economy, college graduates may want to consider graduate school as an alternative to the endless hunt for nonexistent jobs.

John Summey, associate professor in marketing and director of the Master of Business Administration Program at SIUC, said during a bad economy, it is a good time to be in graduate school.

He said the College of Business and Administration has received more applications to its graduate programs this year, but recruiting efforts have been stepped up as well.

Although he said he didn't know if the increase was because of the recession and lack of jobs or the increased recruiting efforts, it has been documented that more people stay in school during difficult times, he said.

Although graduate school may not be for everyone, a master's degree can help if there is a demand for that degree, Summey said.

He said he strongly advises students considering graduate school to talk to the people who are doing the hiring and find out if an advanced degree would be beneficial.

"If there is little demand in the field for your degree, then a master's won't really help you," Summey said.

More people have received MBA's in recent years. In 1990, 75,000 people received their MBA's in the United States compared to 72,000 in 1989, Summey said.

Students who graduate with a bachelor's degree now will be competing for jobs with those who already have received master's degrees, he said.

Summey said if two people apply for the same job and both are willing to work for the same pay, the company probably will hire the person with the advanced degree.

Mike Murray, assistant director of the University Placement Center, said students with an advanced degree have more options open to them, such as teaching or researching for a company.

He said during this recession and even before, major companies such as AT&T, IBM, Granite City Steel, and McDonnell Douglas have cut down the number of personnel.

Murray said students will have to look harder for jobs this year. If a student has been considering going to graduate school, he would recommend that they do it because of the recent down trend of the economy.

Once the economy starts to pick up, companies will be re-hiring and a master's degree will be beneficial for a student looking for work.

L. Daryl Smith, manager of strategic employment for McDonnell Douglas in St. Louis, said a graduate degree alone does not ensure success at McDonnell Douglas or any other company.

"What is critical is a proven track record and the right skills and abilities," he said.

Three key skill areas are important and can be developed through a graduate program, such as analytical skills, strategic orientation and a broad perspective, Smith said.

"With that in mind, a graduate degree can be a tremendous asset," Smith said.

Alfreda Gober, personnel communications for Anheuser-Busch in St. Louis, said the company does not have a policy for hiring people on the basis of their college degree.

She said for entry level positions, someone with a bachelor's degree would have just as good a chance of gaining a position as someone with a master's degree. But for the upper level management positions, a master's degree would be necessary.

Students who are considering graduate school should follow some very basic tips, said Richard Falvo, associate dean of the SIUC Graduate School.

Falvo said the first step is for students to do as well as possible academically in undergraduate studies and make sure all examinations required, such as the Graduate Management Admissions Test, to enter graduate school have been taken.

He said he would advise students to make a decision about graduate school at least one year in advance and send the application to the department or the University by November the year before graduation.

He said this would give the student a better chance of obtaining assistantship and/or financial aid.

Falvo said students should request information about programs offered at the graduate schools and read the information carefully before making a decision.

He said it also is important for students to visit the graduate school they are thinking of attending and to talk to other graduate students at that school.

Students can spend from two to seven years in graduate school so it is important that they are happy, Falvo said.

He said it is common for students to take some time off from school before going on to graduate school. It does not hurt a student's chance of being accepted if he or she wishes to re-enter the school environment at a later time.

Graduate school was a really good experience, said Charles Ramsey, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council and graduate student in higher education from Carbondale.

A bachelor's degree used to guarantee a person a job, but now the market has changed, he said.

More and more people have a bachelor's degree, so it is more important for people to get master's degrees to keep ahead, Ramsey said.

Non-elite colleges provide affordable, solid education

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — More affordable state colleges may offer an education as good as that offered by the nation's most exclusive and expensive private colleges, a new book says.

The finding is one of many in the book, "How College Affects Students," by researchers with Penn State and the University of Illinois. It reviews more than 2,600 studies conducted over the last 20 years on the impact of college on students.

"We have substantial evidence that, after taking students' pre-college characteristics into account, colleges are not all that different from one another," said Patrick Terenzini, a Penn State professor of education and senior scientist.

"Less expensive state colleges and universities shape students' education in the same ways as more expensive private colleges."

While in college, certain learning, cognitive, attitudinal, value and psychosocial changes occur in students that are viewed as educational, socially relevant, desirable and long-term, the book said.

The changes occur independently of such institutional characteristics as type of control, size, curriculum mission and selectivity.

The authors based their conclusions in part on research that shows minimal correlation between post-college test results of graduates of elite institutions and those of non-elite colleges or universities, after taking into account students' characteristics at the time they entered college.

Additionally, evidence has shown that those who graduate from exclusive colleges earn marginally higher salaries compared to those graduating from less selective institutions of higher education.

"Consistent evidence shows that it's not where the student goes to college or how much they spend on their college education that most affects learning, attitude, value and psychosocial development," Terenzini said.

"It's what happens to students after they enroll and how much effort the student puts into the college experience that counts most."

Overall, research indicates that students gain most in their ability to think more abstractly and critically from attending college. The book also reports evidence that college graduates gain tendencies for liberal shifts in values and attitudes and increases in cultural and artistic interests, activities and self-esteem.

Stressed out

Positive attitude helps relieve pressures, worries of college graduation

By Jeff Pavlu
Staff Writer

Graduation, job interviews, getting a job and moving to a new city are frequent causes of stress for college graduates.

The SIUC Wellness Center in Kcsnar Hall has many answers to these problems.

Judy Ashby, Wellness Center stress management consultant, said a positive attitude and awareness of personal choice are two key factors in stress reduction and management.

"You must think positive thoughts, have realistic expectations, and know that you have the choice to make the situation stressful or not," Ashby said.

"The perfect example is when people say they are afraid of snakes, even though the snake may just be sitting there. The snake is not scaring you; you are scaring yourself about the snake.

"People need to be able to choose not to be afraid and say they like the snake," she said.

Ashby said some immediate stress reduction tips include:

- Diaphragmatic breathing — deep breathing such as this helps get oxygen into the bloodstream, relaxes and helps you think clearly;

- Physical relaxation — be aware of the way muscles feel when they are tense and then consciously relax them;

- Reward yourself when you do something well.

"The main thing is: don't be afraid to fail several times before something good happens," Ashby said.

"The millionaires in this country have gone bankrupt an average of 3.5 times before becoming millionaires."

Rob Sepich, Wellness Center program director, said even though graduation is a very positive event, stress from it can lead to real physical problems.

"Headaches, stomachaches and back problems are several ailments that can result from stress," Sepich said. "Others problems are jitters, depression and forgetfulness."

Stress Busters

1. Organize your life

Record a list of what you need to accomplish everyday. Take care of the most urgent matters first. Set reasonable, attainable goals.

2. Use your time wisely

Study your behavior to determine the time of day you work most effectively.

3. Learn to say no

Some people accept too much responsibility. If you spread yourself too thin, your work performance and health will suffer.

4. Take time out

When you feel yourself getting out of control, call time out. This will improve your productivity and reduce the amount of time it takes to get a job done.

Source: Dr. Jeffrey W. Forman, "The Personal Stress Reduction Program."

Sepich said once the symptoms can be related to stresses, the person then needs to talk with a health professional to determine how to treat it.

"A health professional can help you think and act more optimistically, and teach you to use your self-esteem to act as a buffer against stress," Sepich said.

Sepich said while there are no more stress seminars this semester, free literature is available at the Wellness Center.

Students also can for free, confidential treatment and individual consultations.

For more long-term help, the Counseling Center in Woody Hall and the Clinical Center in Wham are available.

Wellness Center officials also recommend books to read for self-treatment of stress.

Some of the books recommended by the Wellness Center include: "The Relaxation Response" by Herbert Benson, "Minding the Body, Mending the Mind" by Joan Borysenko and "Guide to Stress Reduction" by John Mason.

Ashby said another particularly stressful situation is the job interview.

She said important things to remember to reduce stress in an interview are:

- Have realistic expectations of yourself — you probably won't get that management position right away and that's okay.

- Believe in yourself — you are educated and qualified.

- Emphasize what you say to yourself — negative self-talk will show up in an interview; change it to positive talk.

- Tell the prospective employer about your skills — it is not bragging.

- Ask questions of them — be assertive in getting information about whether the job is right for you.

File errors may hurt good credit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The credit reports on file for millions of Americans often contain errors that could cost consumers a good credit rating, approval for housing or even a job, a study concluded.

The study conducted by Consumers Union showed 48 percent of reports it reviewed from the country's three major credit reporting firms contained at least one inaccuracy and 19 percent contained a "major" error that could adversely affect a consumer's eligibility for credit.

"A credit report can make or break your application for credit, housing, insurance and even a job," said Michelle Meier, counsel for the consumer watchdog group.

"The high error rate we found indicates that lots of consumers may be at risk because of inaccurate credit reporting," Meier said.

One participant was denied credit during the course of the study based on inaccurate information that she was delinquent in paying a $19 balance on a department store credit card. In fact, Meier said, the participant had paid off the account five years earlier.

Another participant discovered information about her mother's credit history erroneously on her own credit report, including a large loan dating to when the daughter was 11 years old.

Meier said the study also revealed a concern about the confidentiality of some 400 million credit reports on file for nearly 90 percent of Americans.

"We found that a full 27 percent ... indicated that third parties had gotten access to their reports without their permission," Meier said.

Graduating in four years takes planning, initiative

By Annette Holder
Staff Writer

Students should keep track of their own school schedule and begin planning early to ensure graduation in four years, academic advisers said.

A traditional student will graduate in four years with 120 credit hours. To accomplish this, he or she must take 15 credit hours each semester.

Students should know their schedule of classes from the beginning, said Linda Seibert, chief academic adviser for the College of Business and Administration.

COBA provides a handbook to help students chart their progress.

"But even if a student's college doesn't do this, go through the catalog and do your own schedule in a form you can understand," she said.

Jane Wilson, Radio and Television academic adviser, said some students may have to go to summer school to graduate in four years.

Jacquelyn Bailey, College of Education chief academic advisor, said many students cancel a class and forget to add another one. Unless the student makes it up in summer school, he or she will have to wait another semester to graduate.

Bailey said students need to balance the classes that require a lot of reading or writing with easier classes so they do not feel overwhelmed.

"If a student has a weakness in math, I suggest they don't take three or four math classes in the same semester," Bailey said.

Joyce Jolliff, academic adviser in Art and Design, said a student should take the most difficult classes early.

"Requirements students knew they had difficulty with they will put off until the last and then fail," Jolliff said.

COBA requires students keep a "C" average in the business classes.

"If a student gets all 'C's and then gets one 'D,' he or she must get a 'B' to make up for it," Seibert said.

Bailey said she recommends students set long-term goals and decide for themselves when they want to graduate.

"Some students should stay in school longer, but it should be their choice," Bailey said.

Jolliff recommends students apply for graduation no later than the first week of the term they expect to finish.

Dianne Edgerton, College of Engineering and Technology advisement supervisor, said students should make appointments with their academic adviser two semesters before graduation.

Seibert says if students are at all unsure of their graduation requirements, they should see their adviser.

Last spring, 5,900 students applied for graduation and 4,626 graduated. This year, 5,500 students have applied for graduation.

Job search should begin early in academic career

Kylie Robertson
Staff Writer

Graduating students are like products. They have to market themselves to gain a job, said a representative of SIUC's University Placement Center.

Mike Murray, assistant director of the center, said that students must start early and take a pro-active approach toward their job searching especially in these harsh economic times.

"Waiting until the second semester of your senior year is too late if you are hoping to gain a job after your graduation," Murray said.

It is advisable to start investigating internship possibilities at the end of the sophomore or beginning of the junior year.

A great deal of information is available to students about job opportunities, Murray said. The College Placement Council publishes critiques on hundreds of companies annually.

Students can obtain an address, a phone number and person to contact at the company, he said. These directories can be found at the Morris Library or the Student Placement Center in Woody Hall Room B208.

A program that a lot of people overlook is the computerized Job Search program, Murray said. The Illinois Department of Employment Security in Carbondale has thousands of companies from around the nation on its data banks as it is tied into six other networks.

Beth Dusch, supervisor of the IDES, said the program is funded by unemployment insurance and federal grants and there is no charge for either seekers or employers.

"We currently have over 10 thousand employers registered on the system from Illinois alone. When the national numbers are included the number is in the hundred thousands," she said.

Students may use the system for 15 minutes a day, Dusch said, and if they decide to follow up on an opportunity the staff will screen the client's qualification with the job specifications.

IDES can link students directly up for an interview or send resumes away for review depending on the employer, Dusch said.

Murray said the system is user friendly and operated with a light sensitive pencil. Students can narrow their job search down by choosing their job opportunities by regional areas, type of job and sort of company.

A great deal of job information may be obtained on campus, Murray said. The placement center holds an annual campus-wide Career Fair.

Murray said the 1991 fair will be Oct. 2 and probably will include more than 70 corporation representatives.

The fair enables students to look at corporate presentations, he said. Most representatives bring corporate videos and brochures and hand out their business cards.

Murray said it is beneficial if students come to the fair in business attire with copies of their resumes to hand to prospective employers.

Students should keep business cards and make the effort to follow up with companies who received resumes.

Students should realize just how important resumes are, Murray said. They are product advertisements and should have no typing errors and must be presented on quality paper.

"You only get one chance to make that first impression," he said.

Murray said students should be aware of the recession and be ready for rejection. It should not be taken personally though, as graduates should be positive about their job search.

Despite the grimness of the economy, Murray said University statistics show that between 80 and 90 percent of SIUC graduates secure employment within three to six months of graduation.

Students should know that the most reliable way to obtain employment is through people they know, he said.

Alumni receive awards

By Todd Eschman
Staff Writer

Nine outstanding alumni will receive Alumni Achievement Awards for 1991.

The annual awards are presented by the SIUC Alumni Association on behalf of the various colleges of the University.

The award recognizes outstanding professional, career and public service contributions made by graduates of SIUC.

The honorees will accept their awards at the Commencement Recognition Dinner on May 11 in the Student Center Ballrooms.

Pat McNeil, assistant director of the Alumni Association, said the dinner is a homecoming for the recipients.

"This is a real homecoming with a special recognition attached," she said.

"This is a chance for the alumni to reacquaint themselves with Southern Illinois and the SIUC campus. I think they like coming back and seeing how things have changed. Hopefully, it gets alumni more involved with their school."

McNeil says the award is important because it allows the University to keep in touch with its graduates.

"The University likes to recognize those who have excelled in their chosen field," she said.

"It says to them that we keep track of them and that we are proud that they were prepared for their profession at SIUC."

This year's award winners include:

■ Seymour L. Bryson graduated from SIUC in 1959 with a B.A. in social work. He received his M.S. in 1961 and his Ph.D. in 1972 at SIUC. He currently is executive assistant to the president, affirmative action at SIUC.

■ Cinda Chullen is being honored by the College of Engineering and Technology. She received her B.S. in thermal and environmental engineering from SIUC in 1982 and her master's degree in business administration from the University of Houston. Chullen worked for the NASA Johnson Space Center in Houston as an engineer. She now manages an engineering support services contract valued at $885 million.

■ The College of Education will honor Terry D. Conour. Conour received a master of arts degree in rehabilitation counseling in 1975. He currently serves as a regional commissioner for the Rehabilitation Services Administration of the U.S. Department of Education in Chicago.

■ Francois Regis Ferran will receive an award from the College of Business and Administration. Ferran graduated from SIUC in 1971 with a B.A. in accounting. He earned his master's degree a year later. Ferran currently is president of Johnson Matthey corporation in Paris, France.

■ Melvin Fischer received his bachelor's degree from SIUC in 1960. He continued his education at the University of California at Berkeley where he earned a master's degree in geology. Fischer is the executive vice president of Worldwide Oil and Gas Exploration for the Occidental Petroleum Corporation.

■ Michael D. Hanes will be honored by the College of Communications and Fine Arts. He received his master's degree in music education from SIUC in 1965. He currently is an associate professor in the School of Music.

■ Charles Johnson received a bachelor's degree in journalism in 1971 and a master's degree in philosophy in 1973 from SIUC. He currently is an English professor at the University of Washington. Johnson is the author of two published novels and a collection of short stories.

■ Donald W. Kloth will receive his award from the College of Agriculture. Kloth received a bachelor's degree in agricultural education in 1965 and a master's degree in agricultural economics in 1966 from SIUC. He currently serves as vice president of the Materials Acquisition Division of Anheuser-Busch Companies.

■ Howard Schlechte is a 1958 graduate of SIUC with a degree in electronics technology. He is employed by IBM as the branch manager of service operations of the U.S. Marketing and Service Division in Jefferson City, Mo.
