COBA council to run separate book co-op

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

The College of Business and Administration's Student Council announced plans for a book co-op for business students.

A COBA Book Exchange will operate during the last three days of this semester, the same time that the Illinois Student Organization's book co-op is run. COBA refused to help open the Student Council's co-op.

John Kelly, COBA co-op chairman, said that COBA is not trying to compete with the USO, saying that the project is aimed at business students.

"There is no catering to the College of Business," Kelly said. He said the idea behind the COBA co-op is to help business students, not to hurt the USO co-op.

Sources call budget balancing 'doomed'

WASHINGTON (AP) - By reducing and transferring 10 percent of its budget, director and a key Democratic Senator are raising $80 billion in new taxes over the next three years, President Reagan has virtually abandoned his promise to balance the government's books by 1984.

Administration sources said Wednesday that the president told his economic advisers that he expected the projected $50 billion tax increases even if the alternative is a red ink budget in the final year of his current term. The same advisers concede a deficit will be inevitable with the revenues to close a widening gap wrought by recession.

The president also continued to pressure Congress for deep cuts in the deficit that could balloon to as much as $90 billion in 1982 and $110 billion by 1984 without further budget savings, accounting for the deficit would not be to be identified by name.

The president's economic advisers have begun to admit in recent talks that a balanced budget plan for a record boost in defense spending, a record cut in the deficit and a balanced budget - all by 1984 - will no longer succeed because of the deteriorating economy.

Felony charge against Johns dropped by judge

A motion to dismiss a felony charge of official misconduct against state Sen. Gene Johns, D-95th District, was granted, while a motion to dismiss 25 counts of misconduct against Johns was denied, according to a Wednesday indictment in Williamson County Circuit Court.

The indictment, filed Oct. 21 by a Williamson County grand jury on 29 counts of violating state campaign financing laws and on one count of official misconduct, was opposed by the Illinois State's Attorney's Office.

Johns pleaded not guilty at his arraignment on Wednesday and a date for jury trial was set for 9 a.m. Jan. 4 in Williamson County Circuit Court. A pretrial hearing date was set for 9 a.m. Dec. 1.

A motion to dismiss 25 of the 29 State's Inc. mistletoe cases was granted by Circuit Judge Tony Armstrong, for failure to meet the State's Inc. requirements, was denied by Alexander County Circuit Judge Simon Sporer.

But he granted the motion to dismiss the remaining four, for lack of a cause of action. "The charge alleged that he either obstructed or attempted to obstruct justice," Sporer said. "I do not agree that there was no cause for action in this case."

The State's Inc. case was dropped after the judge's local announcement that the defendant was convicted of the state's Inc. charges.

A Southern Illinois coal research center, drastically reduced its staff from federal budget cuts, may again operate at previously levels because of a push from Illinois congressmen.

The Carbondale Mining Technical Center, in Car- tovile, may be transferred from the Department of Energy to SIU-C. If Congress agrees to an appropriation bill to the endorsement of House and Senate committee members.

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-19th District, Sen. Alan Dixon and Sen. Charles Percy said Wednesday is a joint announcement that they have won informal approval for the transfer of the IDI operation.

"We can't do without the center," Dickson said.

The largest budget cut would be the creation of a research project funded by the DOE.

"This action means that sales of carbon in the current year will be preserved," Percy said. "Just as importantly, this critical high sulfur research center will continue to focus on problems of Illinois Basin coal and will make it easier to sell overseas."
Haig says treaty with Soviets rests on missile, bomber support

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told Congress Wednesday that his support for MX missiles and B-1 bombers "will make or break" efforts to negotiate a new strategic arms treaty with the Soviets next year.

At the same time, Haig disclosed that in a NATO contingency plan to fire a nuclear weapon for demonstration purposes "would conventional war erupt in Europe.

Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that U.S. -Soviet talks for a new SALT treaty "can begin as early as next spring.

And he said Reagan's decision to deploy MX missiles and resurrect the B-1 bomber may worry the Soviets enough to make them willing for the first time to negotiate reduction of their arsenal of nuclear strike missiles.

"B-1 and MX -- and the degree of Congress' support for them -- will make or break our attempt to negotiate a reasonable strategic arms control agreement," Haig testified.

But he said the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty talks can begin "next spring only if the Soviets do not invade Poland or otherwise worsen relations between the two superpowers.

"We should not delude ourselves that such a cataclysmic event would not affect the arms control process," he said.

In testimony, Haig said that there is a NATO contingency plan "to fire a nuclear weapon for demonstration purposes" should conventional warfare break out in Europe.

The object, he said, would be to forestall escalation to a fullscale nuclear exchange.

Haig said President Reagan was "precisely right" recently in saying use of nuclear weapons might be limited to Europe. Haig said the option of firing a demonstration weapon is an example.

He did not elaborate, except to add that the NATO goal has always been to "maintain violence at the lowest level.

Asked if he considers a nuclear war winnable, Haig said "it's a no-win proposition for both sides.

Elvis' doctor acquitted of charges

MEMPHIS (AP) -- Dr. George Nichopoulos, Elvis Presley's doctor for 11 years, was found innocent Wednesday of charges he prescribed excessive quantities of narcotics, sedatives and amphetamines for the singer and eight other patients.

The Criminal Court jury deliberated for more than 13 hours before finding Nichopoulos, Presley's doctor for 11 years, had been charged in an 11-count indictment with prescribing excessive amounts of narcotics, sedatives and amphetamines for Elvis, and seven other patients. The 34-year-old internal medicine specialist faces two to 10 years in jail and a $20,000 fine if convicted.

The jury sent word to Judge Bertram Weisman that it was ready with its verdict shortly before 4:30 p.m. but it was another 30 minutes before it was brought into the courtroom next to the room where the trial had been in progress since Sept. 30.

An electrical problem in Weisman's courtroom forced the change, and caused the delay.
Police association, city to begin another round of negotiations

By Douglas Hamm
Staff Writer

Just nine months after signing a two-year contract, the Carbondale Police Officers Association and the city administration are preparing for a new round of contract talks to begin this month.

The current pact, which expires April 30, 1982, specifies that negotiations for the next contract will begin in November. The existing contract was signed last February after nine months of disagreement, primarily over wages. The previous contract expired May 1, 1980, and one day later the CPOA members rejected a 7 percent salary increase for each year of the proposed two-year agreement. The union had asked for an 8.5 percent increase.

Negotiations were eventually declared at an impasse by both sides and union members set up an informational picket outside city hall. In June 1980, both sides agreed to non-binding arbitration but the contract was settled five days before arbitration was scheduled to begin.

The agreement gave officers an 8 percent salary increase in each year of the pact. The contract was also made retroactive to May 1, 1980, the beginning of the city’s fiscal year.

Van Milligen said no date has been set for the new negotiations but the CPOA has had sessions to “decide” strategies and issues: “We have nothing concrete yet to say as to what are specific issues,” Van Milligen said. “We would like to give the administration a chance to respond to our proposals before we discuss them with the press.”

Van Milligen said the CPOA’s five-member negotiating team will consist of himself, Don Strom, John Scwartz, Buddy Murphy and Bob Conway. Van Milligen, a member of the previous negotiating team, said the new team will be more experienced than the last.

Last year no one had ever negotiated before,” Van Milligen said. “Four of the five members of the present negotiating team have experience and you learn by experience.”

Van Milligen said he doesn’t anticipate problems in the new round of negotiations. “I sincerely hope the negotiations will be in a spirit of cooperation and compromise this time,” he added.
The president's power continues unchecked

Everyone has heard all they want to hear about the AWACS sale. It has become one of the most odious of the many acronymic acronyms in recent American history and yet, now more than ever, many people are in the dark about what the sale was.

People are in the dark because the issue was never sufficiently argued on the basis of the sale's relative merits, especially during the debate in Congress. It seems that Reagan was able to turn the tide instead. The entire matter came down to the personal presidential power and executive branch powers—

That the senators that changed their minds at the last minute would have been more willing to let the executive branch pass the AWACS sale if they had thought more about the ramifications of it, is likely. But it is also likely that they did not have the time to think about it.

Letters

Tom Wood naive about Reaganacons

Tom Wood's letter which appeared in the Daily Egyptian Tuesday seems to show nothing more than his own naivete. I am afraid I'll have to disagree with the points he made about Reaganacons.

First, you said "everybody is getting out." Wrong. Social programs are being cut. The poor, the elderly, and even school children are going to bear the brunt of Reaganacons, which tells us that Reagan has turned into a "Frankenstein" creature to the American people.

That he used these tactics on such a dubiously late as the AWACS sale is grounds for worrying about what he will do when concerned with foreign policy.

Rhode Island Senator Claiborne Pell was quoted as saying that the AWACS sale "has turned into a 'Frankenstein' creature to the American people."

Second, it is mostly affluent Republicans who refuse to be part of belt-tightening measures Reaganacons advocate. Among those are the trickle-down effect. This basically means giving the rich all kinds of tax breaks so that they can invest their money in hopes that some of that capital might "trickle down" to us poor folks. Pretty fancy terminology for a complete farce, don't you think? You say, "the problem is that everyone is not cooperating." I believe you are right. You are just a little mixed up about who is not cooperating. Reagan has said that we should not have any social programs. He should not have any social programs.

You call it lambasting, I call it criticizing.

This letter is in response to Tom Wood's letter that appeared in the Daily Egyptian on NOV 14, 1981.

Mr. Wood, when you stated that I was so sure the senators who voted for the AWACS sale had all around you, make them seem equally fraudulent. This is not far from the truth. You're wrong for a number of reasons. You and I do agree with cutting the budget and make the cuts fair and equal. What President Reagan has done is that he has asked the Congress to cut the budget, while in the government, he has been making spending, tax cuts, and increasing in massive increases in military spending and still find employment for $5 million people which is Reagan's goal.

You see, Reaganacons wanted to cut the ills of the economy, but they only made it worse. If President Reagan is the quarterback of your cooperation-minded football team, and the football he is preparing to throw represents the US economy, such an outcome is not a good start.

Peterson's

No way to Reaganacons!

In response to Tom Wood's letter in the Oct. 2 Daily Egyptian in which he asks students to give Reaganacons a chance, I reply: "No way!"

It may seem to Mr. Wood that Reagan is trimming the budget, while in reality, he is simply destroying some of the most vital social programs in this country are diverting the money to the military.

The long-term effects of his cuts are potentially dangerous for America, especially to the poor, the blacks and the elderly who will once again be overlooked by our government. The percentage of benefit programs for social security is rich and the corporations with military contracts who cooperate with Reagan's programs would be an act of the blind following the blind. What we must do is oppose those programs or prepare to meet the tragic consequences.—Kurt Lauer, Janitor, Political Science.

School board races see incumbent sweep

By Bob Hundalst
Staff Writer

All incumbents on the ballot in school board elections Tuesday were re-elected.

In the Carbondale Community High School District 115 election, William Schwegman, with 1,735 votes, was the top vote-getter of four candidates vying for two seats. Incumbent Richard Cannon narrowly beat challenger Margaret Siaff with 1,011 votes, and Judith Merritt received 1,071. Robert Sedlack finished last with 502 votes. In the Carbondale Elementary School District 55 election, two full-term seats were up for election, with three candidates running. The lone incumbent, Gary Highland, received 1,408 votes, and Judith Merritt received 1,411. Terry Robb received 661 votes. Jean Lacey and June Kunkel carried the district with 7,881 and 7,895 votes respectively. Challenger Jacob Whitecotton received 5,927 votes.

John A. Logan district voters also approved a bond issue to extend the present school property tax past 1983. The bond issue, passed by over a 2-to-1 margin, will fund construction of new campus classroom buildings to replace temporary facilities which the college has maintained for over 12 years.

For Kemper & Dodd Stereo, we have expanded. We now have a big, new audio service department and car stereo installation center for even faster service. We have just purchased the latest, State-of-the-Art electronic test equipment that is designed to insure that your stereo equipment is operating correctly. We have a huge inventory of replacement parts so you don't have to wait. We've moved our Cape Girardeau Service Department to Carbondale, so that we would be the biggest, most complete Service Department in Southern Illinois. Best of all, our staff of service technicians have years of training and experience...you won't find better technicians anywhere else.

This means that if your car stereo or home stereo component needs expert service, we will fix it fast and right!

Our new Service Department will repair most major brands of stereo equipment, both in and out of warranty, at reasonable rates, too!

by his doctor (Donald Pleasence) and falls from the balcony, but rises again. A couple of missing camera angles are added, along with a replay of old footage from that scene. From then on, the killer claims more lives in the mythical town of Haddonfield, Ill., while stalking the one victim that got away, baby sitter Jamie Lee Curtis, who has been taken to a local clinic. By all odds, the old excitement should still be there.

The killer continues to be a haunting vision of evil incarnate, and Pleasence plays the doctor as a modern-day Ahab while tracking the ultimate killer machine.

However, "Halloween II" is flawed by the plodding, predictable script of Carpenter and Debra Hill, and the inconsistent direction of Richard Roseenthal, a TV documentary filmaker. Carpenter and Hill have both indicated that they'd like to escape the horror genre. Unfortunately, they deliver a promising, nerve-grating story into little more than a good "mad slasher" film.

There are a few inspiring images, such as the killer's luminous face of terror as he's walking with a knife through a plate-glass door and a chair being lifted into mid-air on the end of a rope. But these are the exceptions, while the overwhelming bácerlated gore, hypodermic needle in the eye, dominates the action. Throughout the film, which plods along in the first half, tension is never really allowed to mount. The incessant sense of impending doom which led to so unsettling a climax in the original never surfaces here.

Bowl ‘athletes’ give intellect a workout

By Lee Anne Brown Student Staff

There is at least one bowl game in which an SIUC coach would stack his team’s potential for success against that of any other school.
The arena is the College Bowl, and the coach is Michael Blum, visiting instructor in the Music School.
College Bowl, the ‘varsity sport of the mind,’ is played by two four-member teams who compete against each other and the clock. The games consist of 15-point toss-up questions and bonus questions worth a given point value. The winning team is determined through that of a television game show. ‘Even though it’s a scale institution, it has the potential to be as good as any private institution. We’ve fielded teams superior to schools such as the University of Notre Dame and Notre Dame,’ Blum said.

“College Bowl is not a test of intelligence and education. It is really a test of memory and quick recall. Who knows it better, but who remembers it first?”

Blum should know. He was a member of SIU-C’s 1979 intercollegiate team, which Open house set for new students

The SIU-C Office of Admissions and Records will sponsor an open house for interested high school and community college students beginning at 8:30 a.m. Saturday in the Student Center.
The open house will preview SIU-C’s academic and extracurricular programs, campus facilities, admissions and housing policies and financial aid opportunities.
A special program for students in grades 9 through 12 will include campus tours and on-the-spot registration.

Crowd of computers on display

Video display terminals and computer consoles will fill Ballrooms A and C from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday when national companies participate in the biggest display of home computer equipment ever shown at the University.

The display is part of the Conference of Technical Education being held through Friday.

Word processors and home computers will make up most of the show but other computerized business equipment, such as a computer inventory control system, will also be shown.

M. H. Dallman, a faculty member in the School of Technical Careers, said companies represented will include Radio Shack, IBM, Lanier and 3M.

A Carbondale auto parts distributor will show a computer inventory control unit that can give information on the firm's national inventory by being hooked into a computer with a telephone.

Automotive equipment and tools, welding equipment, photocopiers and electronic typewriters will also be shown by major manufacturers.

The 16th annual conference is designed to aid those who teach and administer technical education programs. Sessions on technical writing, recruiting women into technical professions and industrial resurgence in the United States will be held.

The Great Lakes Region of the American Technical Education Association is sponsoring the two-day conference.

Aviation professor dies of cancer.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon for David L. Rich, 60, an assistant professor in SIUC's Division of Aviation Technologies. He died Monday in his Carbondale home from cancer.

He was born April 26, 1921, in Cobden. He taught in the aviation program since 1968. He is a veteran of 30 years in the aviation industry and teaching. He served in World War II and was in the Korean conflict.

Legacy named chairman of Ag Education

James Legacy, associate professor of agricultural education, has been named chairman of the Department of Agricultural Education and Mechanization in the School of Agriculture. Legacy succeeded Thomas Stilt, who was asked to resign his teaching and research, according to SIUC President Albert Somit, who announced the appointment.

Legacy joined SIUC's Agriculture School as an assistant professor in July, 1977. He was promoted to associate professor in 1980.

Legacy received a doctorate in agricultural education from Cornell University in 1976 and taught at Purdue University for one year. He was a high school agriculture teacher from 1971-74.

Legacy, a specialist in teacher education, has served as advisor to state approved teacher education development programs. He is a native of Yale, Ill.
Romantics again fail to reach debut album's hard rock level

By Alan Sculley Staff Writer

The Romantics are capable of having a fresh and distinctive hard rock sound. The band proved that with its debut album, which featured a snappy but forceful early-Kinks sound.

Unfortunately, the follow-up, "National Breakout," found the band degenerating into a mediocre heavy metal sound. That change in style undoubtedly disappointed many Romantics fans. And those fans will find their hopes for a return to the Kinks-styled sound dashed by the Romantics' third album, "Strictly Personal."

This album finds the Romantics continuing in much the same vein as "National Breakout." Again the band has associated a sound dominated by thunderous and heavy-handed drumming and incessant power chording. Much of the blame for this sledgehammer style must be laid on producer Mike Stone. On several songs, such as "In the Nighttime" and "Can't Get Over You," the catchy guitar line is present, but a mix which places a booming bass and drums up front drowns out any distinctive melody the songs have.

The only song which fully succeeds with this raw sound is "Pop," which has a... well... gripping beat and a simple single type chorus. Otherwise, the raw sound seems to force the band to ignore one of the strengths of its early metallic-melodic vocals. On "Strictly Personal," the Romantics sound like they are trying to shout over the overwhelming volume of the instrumentation.

Consequently, it takes an unusually strong melody and vocals to overcome the loud style of "Strictly Personal." Of course, some heavy-rocking songs aren't necessarily bad, but on "Strictly Personal," there is no interruption to this cacophonous bliss.

The saving grace of this album is that the band still shows the capability to turn out a decent song. But with an occasional change in tempo and a lighter touch, the lesser material on "Strictly Personal" would have stood up better. Album courtesy of Plaza Records.

CHRAGM (AP) - Toxic shock syndrome, usually found in women who were menstruating, has now been discovered in a new group - men. Nine women who underwent surgery, a researcher said Wednesday.

Other researchers have discovered that a toxin associated with toxic shock can be passed along to infants in the breast milk of mothers who have the disease, but the researcher says they do not know whether the toxin can be transmitted that way. The findings, reported at a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology, emphasize that toxic shock can strike people of all ages, men as well as women.

Dr. Donald Graham, of the Springfield Clinic in Springfield, Ill., reported the occurrence of toxic shock in patients who have had operations. He and a group of doctors from four other institutions across the country found 15 patients who had developed toxic shock after surgery of various types. One patient died of pneumonia, probably as a result of having had toxic shock, Graham said.

The patients - five men and 10 women - developed symptoms of toxic shock within a few days after surgery.

Most cases of toxic shock still occur in women who are menstruating and using tampons.
Grad Council to discuss grading policy

The Graduate Council will discuss changes in the wording of the Graduate School's grading policy when it meets at 5 a.m. Thursday in the Student Center's Mississippi Room.

The changes would alter the wording of the school's grading policy to make it consistent with the undergraduate policy, Ronald Brandon, chairman of the educational policies committee, said.

The council will also vote on revisions to the engineering-biology program at the meeting.

Top teacher’s students ‘want to do well’

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

When people ask Marcia Anderson to list the most important requirements for being a good teacher, she always gives the same answer:

"I hold my students you have to enjoy people and have enthusiasm, or you will never get any satisfaction out of teaching," Anderson said.

Anderson is an associate professor of business education, and those criteria are well known to have been named the winner of the Alumni Association’s 1981 Great Teacher Award. Anderson presents an annual honor class membership to recognize outstanding students, and the award provides a $1,000 prize and an engraved plaque.

Anderson has a packed agenda each week. In addition to teaching three classes with about 70 students, she is the director of Career Associates Inc., a private employment agency. She gives regular presentations around the country on word processing and teaches two nights a week at Elgin Community College. The feeling, according to her students, is mutual.

"I find it always do really well in her classes, just because she makes you want to do well for her," Carol May, senior in business education, said.

May, who is the president of Pi Omega Pi, business education honor society, praised Anderson’s teaching methods.

"I think she’s very effective," May said. "She gets right to the point of what you have to know, and you learn." May said.

Other students agreed.

"I think she’s excellent," Barbara Hill, senior in business education, said. "She is very up-to-date, and she’s interested in all her students. She’s an exceptional person.

Anderson is also an authority on business education. She has co-authored three books and has contributed numerous articles to professional journals.

Word-processing education is Anderson’s specialty, and she has written a monthly column on the subject for Word and Information Processing Systems Magazine.

Anderson’s schedule will be even heavier next semester. She will fly to California every other weekend to teach classes to military students.

It’s really not that bad, though," she said. "I did the same thing last year.

Anderson is a native of Bloomfield, Neb., and lives in Carbondale with her 8-year-old daughter, Erika. She joined the SIU-C faculty in 1970 and earned her doctoral degree from SIU-C in 1975.

The Great Teacher Award is the first recognition of excellence Anderson has received. In 1980, she was cited as an outstanding teacher by the Illinois Special Education and the SIU-C Department of Special Education Studies.

In what spare time she has, Anderson likes to read, water ski, and be outdoors with her daughter.

Anderson is not sure what her future holds, but she does know that teaching will be part of it.

"Teaching will always be some part of my career," she said. "There’s a very basic feeling I get from it, a good feeling that I like."

Federal panel to begin hearings on remap proposals

CHICAGO (AP) — A three-judge federal panel is set to begin hearings Thursday on proposed redistricting plans to bring Illinois congressional apportionment into line with 1980 census figures.

Seven maps have been presented, including one of the panel, which will make its decision by Nov. 20, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Mercleary, a Lake Bluff Republican.

The judicial panel was created to decide the remap issue after the Illinois General Assembly could not agree on reapportionment.

The panel will still have to decide on a map that eliminates two predominantly Democratic districts, the Democratic-controlled Senate recommended a map to eliminate two Republican districts.

Those two maps are before the federal panel.
THOMPSON WINS MOST VETOES

By William C. Strong
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD—Gov. James Thompson again stood in the breach to protect Illinois' arm-twisting governors, but he got his way most of the time through the Illinois General Assembly's fall veto session.

Helped by economic and political realities, he was able to keep his budget cuts neatly intact. And he won the most visible non-money battle—tax breaks to lure businesses to inner cities.

According to Thompson, his 181 vetoes of bills represent his challenge to the job. House Speaker George Ryan of Kankakee.

In vetoing the measure, the Republican governor said he

One involved a bill sponsored by Sen. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, to provide tax breaks to lure businesses to inner cities.

According to Totten, Thompson signed the bill but reneged after he entered the GOP primary fight for lieutenant governor against Thompson's choice for the job, House Speaker George Ryan of.

In vetoing the measure, the Republican governor said he

News Analysis

It's probably better to be perceived by voters as a budget-cutter than as a spender, even if the cause is a noble one...

Even the highly publicized battle over preserving day care and social services money was more shadow than substance. The $12 million involved represented less than 3 percent of Thompson's vetoes.

Although Thompson's veto of the bill that would have provided day care aid to local governments, he said he was driven by the need to compromise with a coalition of social service groups and avoid a floor fight in the Senate.

Just hours before the Senate was due to take up the issue, Thompson aides reached a $4.5 million compromise with the House.

Thompson's staff also reached middle ground on legislation to increase state Medicaid payments to nursing homes. Thompson believes the agreement will save $210 million over two years.

While convincing lawmakers to hold the line on spending, Thompson also prevailed in a fight over issue-oriented legislation.

The idea, but the bill was flawed. He set up a special panel to study the idea and draw up a substitute plan bearing an "administration stamp."

Totten pressed for an override, and succeeded in the Senate. But the House sided with the governor last week.

The vote on licensing church-run day care centers followed intense lobbying by the administration on one side and the Moral Majority and the Illinois Association of Christian Schools on the other.

The fundamentalist groups said the state has no business requiring them to take out insurance and pay for day care facilities. They wanted to be exempted from those regulations.

Thompson had vetoed a bill allowing the exemption. He said, despite the separation of church and state, the state must protect children.

His veto was overturned in the Senate, and faced a close vote in the House last week. But Thompson again came out on top, as the move to override fell nine votes short.

Among other noteworthy developments:

- The House upheld the governor's veto of a bill boosting state aid to local probation systems. Although supporters said the measure would save money by keeping people out of state prisons, Thompson objected to the estimated $20 million annual price tag.

- Lawmakers never challenged the governor's veto of a bill setting up a special commission to approve pay hikes for legislators, judges and other top state officials. The measure was criticized as a way for lawmakers to boost their pay without having to take any heat.

And then there was trans-

PORTATION, the major issue of the 1981 legislative session. Thompson had come under fire for failing to push a mass transit bailout through the spring session. Over the summer he began dropping hints of another legislative initiative in the fall.

In mid-October, he circulated a memo outlining his plan, which received wide media coverage. Then, last week, he held a news conference to announce his proposal for reifying the Chicago area's mass transit system.

It was curious. Thompson admitted his plan had no chance of making it through the General Assembly until at least after the primary elections next March. He said he just wanted to show people he was doing something new about the issue.

"I want to demonstrate to the public that we are serious about RTA (Regional Transportation Authority) reform," he told a Statehouse news conference.

The plan immediately was knocked down by Democrats and by a group of suburban mayors for its failure to provide increased state aid to the failing transit system. But Thompson had struck first in his drive to put points on the political scoreboard.

Crimsons 'Discipline' mixes maniac seriousness and dry wit

By Tom Travis

When King Crimson released its latest album, the posthumous "Frame of the SIAA," leader Robert Fripp was caught in a dilemma: "It's an R.I.P." with the inner note, signifying that the band will die in a concert as a group of highly talented musicians.

However, his desire to form a "first division band" and his aversion topai music by one style of music for too long led him this past spring to begin rehearsing with ex-Crimson drummer Bill Bruford, guitarist John Levin, keyboardist Tony Levin, and bassist Steve Hillage.

"Discipline," the first studio album of new material by King Crimson since the release of "Red" in 1974, "Discipline" shows off the increasing influence of Fripp but also a harmony between his distinctive creative process and those of the other three musicians.

Although most of the music breaks the Fripp solo work, the steady progressive rhythms of Levin and Bruford's bass line with Fripp's台灣 pharmaceuticals give the band a more conventional base.

Next in line is "Frame by Frame," where Bruford's influence really comes to light. The tune, which would have been at home on any of his last albums, contains his distinctive rolling, crashing drumming and some impressive multi- octave singing by Levin, who sounds surprisingly comfortable with the odd time signatures and tricky polyrhythms.

Bursar's bill alteration studied

A subcommittee of the Billing Receivable System Task Force has begun meeting to redesign the Bursar's Office, according to Thomas J. Watson, chairmen of the committee.

Watson said most of the changes being discussed are cosmetic, such as providing a larger address and including boxes at the bottom of the bill to show previous balance, payments, credits, and total of the bill. The subcommittee may also decide to print information on the back of the bill to call for certain problems, he said.

The subcommittee has met several times, and a redesign bill will probably not be ready until fall 1982. But if the bill can not be used, it would have to be approved by the Bursar's Office, and Computing Service would also

An abundance of teaching positions in agriculture led to a job-hunting bonanza for agriculture education graduates according to James Legacy, chairman of SIU-C's Agriculture Education and Mechanization Department.

The high salaries available in other specialized facets of agriculture seem to be drawing many graduates away from agriculture teaching jobs, Legacy said.

"The trend for many agriculture graduates has been to go into specialized farming jobs, which pay more than teaching jobs," he said.

So far, has the largest agriculture education program in Illinois and the third largest in the nation, Legacy said. There are 110 students enrolled in the agriculture education program. The University has 1,200 students majoring in agriculture. There are three agriculture education professors at the University, Legacy described a recent trend away from education jobs to the image people have of the teaching field. "The image of teaching is not comparable to more rugged agriculture specialties, like forestry or veterinary medicine."

One of the fastest growing agriculture areas is in agriculture, which deals with anything that produces the supplies the farmer uses or aids in the processing of farm products, he said.

One out of four agriculture education graduates actually start out as farmers. The other 40 percent go into other agriculture jobs. Legacy said.

The latest nationwide figures show that more than 120 agriculture teaching jobs went unfilled in 1970. The greatest shortages were in Texas, with 40 unfilled positions and Florida, with 14 open positions.

There's also a need for women in agriculture education, Legacy said. There are no female agriculture teachers in Southern Illinois.

"Agriculture has been a field where prejudice has been shown against women. That should be changing soon. Roughly 25 percent of our agriculture students are women."

SIU-C's agriculture education program is also known for its large number of foreign students, he said. There are more than 20 students from other countries enrolled in the program.

Many underdeveloped countries have food shortages because they don't have much knowledge of modern agriculture, he said.

Peacemeal Corps offers student interviews

By Paty Kasowski
Staff Writer

Ben Skaggs probably got a bit more understanding of what it is like to work with the Peace Corps in Africa than most volunteers.

Like most volunteers he learned another language, lived within a culture very different from his American experience and worked to improve farming methods in a small village in Togo.

In Togo he moved from the village post office he met the woman who later became his wife, Grace. Several years after, at the opposite end of the village in an American program similar to the Peace Corps, Skaggs and two Peace Corps representatives, Susan Stine and Claudia Sloan—set up shop in the Markham Room this week to tell students about the Peace Corps and answer questions.

On Nov. 17 and 18 the Peace Corps will visit SIU—C students for Peace Corps interviews. Beginning next spring and continuing throughout the year, Peace Corps students can make appointments with the Career Planning and Placement Center and must be registered with the office before they are accepting an appointment.

Skaggs and his wife came to SIU—C in 1977 to pursue his Peace Corps experience, he says. His Peace Corps work is to focus on what he wants to do with the remainder of his life. At home, he plans to study in international agriculture.

Ben Skaggs, a 1977 graduate of Western Illinois University with an agricultural engineering degree, first came to the agriculturally ism this country and held a number of jobs before joining the Peace Corps. He went to Togo in late 1974.

In the small farming village he worked and lived with the people, helping them use farm machinery to advantage.

"Most of the work is in the fields with these tractors. They'd have to have this equipment before. They'd be running the thing reverse at full speed or walking with a rope, trying to turn around... and it was pretty rough on the tractor."

"So simply showing the farmers how to run equipment in concentric circles, instead of moving in a row, saving time, raising the efficiency, was helpful," Skaggs explained.

A Peace Corp volunteer is paid from $100 to $400 a month," he said. "It's comfortable in most areas, Ms. Sloan said.

For Skaggs, the money was more than enough.

"You just can't live with one hand and not help share with them," he says. He shared housing with some people and lived with others who worked with him helped with the Peace Corps.

"I guess I helped get three or four men through school, helped with the food, etc."

Skaggs is now at the Peace Corps Center at SIU-C. He's available in Facer Hall Room 404, each day from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. by appointment.

Some 80 percent of the Peace Corps' jobs require a college degree, and 40 percent of these are in agriculture.

According to graduates, just about any college study area can be translated into a Peace Corps job in another country. In particular, the two are looking for students with background in engineering, architecture, liberal arts, home economics, farming, math or health.

"They call it the 'toughest job you ever love,'" and Skaggs says that's definitely true.

Police: Bikers need safety lessons

By Douglas Hamm    Staff Writer

Figures compiled by SIU-C police show that these riders aren't listening to safety messages and aren't following them.

Thirty-two bicycle accidents have been reported already this year as compared to 23 in 1980. Campus police officials say they're issuing more tickets to bicyclists if the problem gets worse.

Bicycle accidents are a problem everywhere on campus, according to Lt. Marvin Braswell of the SIU-C police, and he feels bicyclists need to "Think" before they pedal.

"Bicyclists do not think like pedestrians," Braswell said. "When they think like cars do, the laws are the same for bicyclists as they are for cars."

Campus Safety Officer Jesse Crider said the problem is simply that bicyclists aren't following the rules of the road.

depend on the completion of the game to decide on their calls." Shelton hopes the completion of Sunday's game will not be as blemished as that of last week.

"I can't put my finger on what our attitude is, because we haven't had a good practice all week," he said Thursday. "It's been too wet to have good practices. I don't feel too confident about things—maybe I'm just letting my team down a little about last week come through. Our practices have been instances.

The Bulldogs' loss to Tulsa was their first loss of the season, giving them a 7-1 mark. Outside of Tulsa, Shelton ranked Indiana State as his team's most difficult foe thus far.

Dra.ke beat ISU 17-14, the Salukis dropped the Sycamores 17-3. "I can't believe Southern beat them so easily. Southern has done away with our common opponents handily," Shelton said. "I have to compare Southern favorably with Tulsa. They beat Tulsa. That puts it in perspective."

Besides being impressed by the way the 6-3 Salukis handled Tulsa, Shelton was impressed by the Salukis' game films.

"The films showed a strong team," he said. "It's no accident that they've won all these games. They deserved them."

Saturday will probably show which team deserves the conference title. "I don't think we'll have any problem getting up for the game that'll decide the conference title," Shelton said. "It should really be a good football game. I hope there's a big crowd."

think Patty has an excellent chance." Plymire-Houseworth's 11-97 at Normal on Sept. 18 is her personal best. Lindy Nelson has the 11-97 record in the 1978 state championship at Macomb. Nelson's record may be in jeopardy, since the Columbia course is relatively flat, according to Blackman.

"We have not run the course, but we will get there Friday afternoon to take a look at it. We have competed on a variety of courses this year, so the course will be as much ours as anyone else's," she said.

A case in point is runningback Harold Brown, who, despite having just one year of eligibility left after leaving Joliet this season, is being courted very seriously by both Illinois and Iowa State.

"I don't know which way he's leaning," said Yost. "But believe me it doesn't make any difference that he's only got a year left after he leaves here. They know he's good enough right now to help any program. He's no secret." Admittedly, Brown is not your usual find. A prep All-American from Kent, Ohio, he was first recruited by Woody Hayes to play for Ohio State.

who a host of junior college transfers from California has transformed Illinois from Big Ten pretenders into serious contenders. And a lot of other coaches in the Big Ten are turning to the junior colleges to find skilled players who slipped through the recruiting net the first time for a variety of reasons, usually academics. But those are not the only reasons.

Herper is MVC defender of week

So-suki defensive end John Harper has been named Missouri Valley Conference "Defensive Player of the Week," for his 17-3 win over Indiana State at Terre Haute, Ind. Harper, who plays a key role in the Salukis' front defense, made 14 tackles and assisted in seven others and caused two Indiana State fumbles.

Junior college gridders
nourish major programs

By The Associated Press

Behind the spread-stacks of the other teams plans to lose. Interstate 55 at Joliet, a factory of a different sort is refining some of the college football programs' dreams of success. Illinois' junior college football is getting better and better every year, said Joliet Junior College football Coach Jerry Yost, whose Wolves currently occupy the fifth spot in the Junior College Athletic Association's weekly poll. "In the last four years schools have meant better from him. We always do," said Paul Deterch, State, who replaced injured

Derrick Taylor, No. 36, bunted through the line for a single in the bottom of the third inning and scored on a sacrifice fly by Joe Schaefer. The Salukis (17-3, 3-0) outscored the Engineers (16-4, 2-4) 12-3.

Women's harrier coach hopes meet is a learning experience

By Steve Metz

Although the women's cross country teams were presented a serious threat to win the Midwest Regional championships, it will benefit from the competition, according to Coach Claudia Blackman.

"It will be a tough meet. I'm not going there with a defeatist attitude, but I would be happy to finish in the top ten," Blackman said. "I'm looking to have the team as the younger players can get used to running under pressure. Hopefully, the experience will help them in the future." The Illinois women's team will be entered in the third meet of the season, the Midwest Conference Meet, on Saturday, November 3.

"The race will be a good test for us," said Blackman. "We have a lot of young runners who are improving every week. They are learning from each other and from the competition. We are looking forward to this meet because it will be a good opportunity for us to measure our progress and see how we stack up against the other teams."
