ELECTION '96

Luechtefeld wins; ballots may be recounted

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

State Sen. David Luechtefeld defeated challenger Barbara Brown in the race for the 58th Illinois Senate District by only 127 votes Tuesday, but Brown's campaign manager says the candidate may call for a recount of the votes.

The totals in what was the closest race in the area were not released until after 2 a.m. Wednesday, when Republican incumbent Luechtefeld stood at 40,689 votes to Democrat Brown's 40,562.

Steve Pittman, Brown's campaign manager, said Luechtefeld's slim margin of victory warrants a recount of the ballots.

"With the election being this close and with the fact that a number of precincts in Perry County were counting ballots by hand instead of by machine, we feel it is important to make sure that the count is accurate," Pittman said.

Janette Malafa, Luechtefeld's campaign manager, said she never lost faith that Luechtefeld would emerge as the victor.

"I was surprised that it was as close as it was, but I knew all along that we'd win," she said.

Malafa said a recount will confirm the first count.

She said the manual count in certain areas of Perry County is accurate because election judges from both parties signed the results, certifying they were correct.

Under state statutes, a request for a recount must be filed with the Illinois State Board of Elections within five days of the release of the official results. Don Schultz, the board's director of election operations, said.

Pittman said Brown's campaign will strongly consider filing for a recount immediately after the official totals are released Nov. 25.

Schultz said to qualify for a recount, the losing candidate in an election must have received at least 95 percent as many votes as the winner did.

Brown received 99.7 percent as many votes as Luechtefeld.

Under Illinois law, a recount is not binding.

If it produces a different result from the original count, the contesting candidate must file an election contest with the Illinois Senate, Schultz said.

"The Senate would hear the contest if there is one by a candidate, and they would have the final say on the outcome," he said.

Brown and Luechtefeld could not be reached for comment as of press time Wednesday.

Cancer survivor helps others through shared experience

By Dave Armstrong
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As a survivor of cancer, Michael Grey said he has gained a new outlook on life that helps him share his experience with other cancer patients and his students.

"I now know what a patient is going through from personal experience," Grey, an SIUC assistant professor of radiologic science, said. "I know about the vomiting, the fatigue, hair loss and nausea. It also helps give my students a different perspective on the things they learn."

Grey was diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease, a cancer of the lymphatic system, when he was 27 years old. His first prognosis gave him only six months to live, a prediction that later would prove to be incorrect.

Now 36 years old and in remission of cancer, Grey enjoys hiking, rappelling and swimming.

He also is the vice chairman of the Jackson County unit of the American Cancer Society.

This month, Grey is helping organize events for the Great American Smokeout, which is sponsored by the American Cancer Society. The Smokeout involves volunteers of the society speaking out about the dangers of smoking at area schools.

Grey said his willingness to volunteer his time stems from his fight with cancer. "I had never heard of the American Cancer Society before," Grey said.

"I thought I had some obligation to help out or volunteer in some way, though. I picked the American Cancer Society because it is the largest organization in the U.S. where the foundation of

SIUC students show concern, optimism for partisan split

By Emily Priddy
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some SIUC students expressed concern and some had cautious optimism about the potential effects of the partisan split between the federal executive and legislative branches after Tuesday's election.

Although President Bill Clinton defeated Republican challenger Bob Dole, the Republicans maintained control of both houses of Congress.

Americans can gain much from the division of power between Republicans and Democrats if both parties are willing to compromise, one SIUC student said.

"I'm really happy about the Republicans retaining control of both chambers of Congress," Darik Williams, a senior in political science from West Frankfort, said. "I think it's a sign that the American people want a divided government. I think maybe people are wanting

SIUC law professor new Law Library official

James Duggan, associate professor of the SIUC School of Law, was elected vice president of the Mid-American Association of Law Libraries Oct. 25 and will become president next year on Oct. 27.

The Mid-American Association of Law Libraries covers nine states and is a nonprofit organization whose sole purpose is to promote law librarianship. It is a chapter of the National Association of Law Libraries.

Duggan is the only non-library director who has received this appointment. He will head programs of the association with this appointment.

Duggan has been a member of the National Association of Law Libraries for eight years.

Frank Houdek, director of the SIUC School of Law Library, is the national president of the National Association of Law Libraries.

Less than half possible voters went to polls

Less than half of the voting age population showed up at the polls Tuesday, the lowest turnout since the 1920s, analysts said Wednesday.

State tabulations indicate that 95.8 million people voted, about 48.8 percent of the voting age population, according to Curtis B. Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate. Turnout was down in every state. Gans said, and was the lowest since 1924 and the second lowest since 1824.

Those figures were similar to the estimate by Voter News Service, a joint venture of the major television networks and the Associated Press, which put turnout between 48 percent and 49 percent. VNS editorial director Murray Edelman, who estimated that the figure was closer to 48 percent, based his calculation on actual vote tabulations from every state coupled with estimates of the number of absentee and write-in ballots not yet available.

Other experts said final tabulations won't be completed for months, but that the figures are unlikely to change by more than a few tenths of a percentage point. "It is a return to the pattern of declining participation," said Gans.

Iris Creasy, SIUC American Indian association president, prepares a dough for a taco meal to celebrate American Indian month Wednesday afternoon at Southern Hills area office.

By Mikal J. Harris
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC American-Indian Association has been promoting and sharing its cultural heritage through various programs on campus for less than a year.

Now, the group of 30 members has an entire month of the SIUC calendar to help them.

Getting SIUC to recognize an official month for American Indians for the first time in SIUC history was not as tough as it might sound, Iris Creasy, SIUC American-Indian Association president, said.

"It was just a matter of asking, and they agreed," she said. "I talked to Harriet Barlow, who was the associate director of Student Development, and I told her it would be nice to have American-Indian Month here on campus."

As a result, SIUC will celebrate an American-Indian Month this month, and the association has scheduled special events throughout November for the entire Carbondale community to enjoy. Creasy said the federal government also recognizes November as American-Indian Month.

Creasy, a Cherokee who said she devotes about 30 hours a week to the group, said this month's events are only an extension of the association's interaction with the community.

"Anywhere we get a call, we try to go," Creasy said. "We go into the schools and the churches, and we've done some arts and crafts workshops. We try to include the community as well as the campus."

Creasy said the enthusiasm of sharing American-Indian culture with Carbondale and SIUC also was part of the reason for the group's formation earlier this year.

American-Indian MONTH

Creasy, along with co-founder Anthony Beery, an SIUC graduate student and jeweler, said she founded the organization with the goal of promoting American-Indian student recruitment and retention.

Creasy said there are about 93 identified American Indians on campus.

Creasy said SIUC's official support of American-Indian Month is just another example of the support the group has found in the community after forming the organization.

She said support came in many forms from SIUC staff, faculty, students and Carbondale residents.

One of the association's next events will feature a group of American Indian dancers.

Saturday's Storyteller Day will feature American Indian stories and a dance performance by the American Indian Exhibition Dancers. The event will feature three performances at 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m. at Quigley Hall on campus.

"It's my dream to have exhibition dancers from SIUC," she said.

Creasy said she would like to see the group represent SIUC and the organization in travels and performances.

"That's pretty optimistic, but we're working on it," she said.

The association also plans to

ELECTION '96

Student voter turnout declines

By Christopher Miller
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Voter turnout in SIUC student-dominated precincts Tuesday was significantly lower than in previous presidential elections, county voting records indicate.

Jackson County's lower voting figures follow a national trend of sinking turnout. Tuesday, 49 percent of registered voters showed up at the polls, an all-time national low for a presidential election.

Turnout on Tuesday in Jackson County averaged about 40 percent of registered voters in precincts that have high student populations, namely Carbondale Precincts 3, 11, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26.

ELECTION '96

Slim victories may mean more compromise

By Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The slim Democratic majority in the Illinois House resulting from Tuesday's election means more compromise will be necessary in next year's legislative session, state Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, says.

Democrats won 60 House seats while Republicans won 58 Tuesday, which means the leadership of the House and all of its committees, after two years of Republican control, will again be Democratic.

In 1988 and 1992, voter turnout in those predominantly student-populated precincts was 61 percent and 51 percent, respectively.

However, turnout also was down more than 12 percent countywide, from 70 percent in the previous two presidential elections to 57.4 percent this election, Jackson County Clerk Irene Carlton said.

Blair Brnicky, a senior in radio/television from Calumet City, said even if people are dissatisfied with the candidates, they should choose one.

"I just voted because I felt it was my social responsibility," Brnicky said. "Some people think that no matter who's in office, nothing's going to change. That's not an excuse."

Jeff Kennel, a junior in radio/television from McHenry, said he did not vote because it was not that important to him.

"It seemed like you were voting for the lesser of two evils," he said. "I've got better things to do than study the candidates."

Carbondale Precinct 3, which includes the area behind the Student Recreation Center, had a 24.2-percent voter turnout, the lowest of any precinct in Carbondale.

Precincts with few students had turnouts ranging from 50- to 75 percent.

The highest rate of turnout in student-dominated precincts was 55 percent in Precinct 24, which includes Evergreen Terrace, a housing area for non-traditional students. Precinct 23, which includes Bush Towers, was second highest at 45 percent.

John S. Jackson, dean of SIUC's College of Liberal Arts, said the results of Tuesday's election appeared to be a vote for the status quo.

"Students are either satisfied with the status quo or they just don't care," Jackson said.

Without a controversial issue or national crisis to galvanize voters, interest in the election is likely to be low, Jackson said.

"In the absence of the compelling issues, people can be distracted by the frivolous," he said.

Republicans retained control of the state Senate.

Bost, who was first elected in 1994 when Republicans took the House, said it will be a little more difficult to move his legislation through the House with a Democratic majority. Bost defeated his Democratic challenger John Rendleman Tuesday.

"It'll be a unique and different experience for me," he said. "It'll be different because the players will change a little bit."

Bost said he will have to build a coalition of representatives from both parties to move important legislation through the House next year.

"Before, I could say, 'Mr. Speaker (state Rep. Lee Daniels, R-Elmhurst), this is important to my area. When can we get this moved?'" he said.

Because just two votes separate the House's makeup, Bost said every legislator must have that bridge-building approach.

"The amount of bills moved that are strictly Democratic or strictly Republican [supported] will be very, very few," he said. "There's going to have to be more consensus, or nothing will be moved."

see COMPROMISE, page 7.

E DITORIAL

Hyperbole, blame no help in solving Halloween problem

SOME PEOPLE AROUND HERE ARE PRETTY creepy.

Take, for instance, the person who took issue with a student who had two letters published in the Daily Egyptian recently, one harshly criticizing the city's policy on the Halloween "celebration." Instead of calling Wilkinson or writing a letter to the DE, the person decided to anonymously send the student's parents a copy of the letter along with a weird, handwritten note deriding the student and his parents.

As the student who wrote the letter has noted, sending the mail to his parents was pure cowardice. Whoever wrote the letter should have left the student's parents out of the issue. It seems contradictory to demand responsibility from students and then harass their parents about their actions.

SETTING THE OBVIOUS TASTELESSNESS aside, the incident is a good example of how many people are spending their time and energy on the Halloween issue, but accomplishing nothing to solve the problem. The community, both students and residents, need to quit placing blame on groups and start looking for solutions.

The student who wrote a letter comparing Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom to a Nazi leader and a group of people who dumped flyers on the Strip with a cartoon portraying SIUC students as babies show that the "phantom writer" is not the only person dealing with Halloween the wrong way.

These people are entitled to their opinions but they should take a step back and evaluate their actions; are they really doing anything to help alleviate the troubles surrounding Halloween?

Probably not. What they are probably doing, however, is giving those who disagree with them another reason to do so. Nothing will be accomplished by actions like these.

The past several years have shown that the community needs to modify its approach to Halloween, but doing so will be much more complex than calling city officials oppressive and generalizing students as a bunch of spoiled partiers with no grasp of what it means to be responsible.

People who want to be part of the solution also should educate themselves about the issue before spouting off their opinions and proposals.

THE RECENT TOWN MEETING HELD BY THE city was a small, but good step in the right direction. It also illustrated some problems with the way people approach Halloween, however. Some students who spoke in favor of finding a way to have a party demonstrated their ignorance of the situation by proposing solutions the city has already tried such as outlawing glass bottles at a street party.

One person on the other side of the issue wrongfully stereotyped students as people who do not follow rules, noting that he saw three students arrive at city hall without feeding the parking meters. Plenty of students pay the meters when they park and plenty of non-student residents do not. To lump all students together as a group of scofflaws does nothing to help reach a workable solution. Although such comments did not do anything to find a solution, city officials should be commended for their quick action to get community input on the subject.

It is time to place hyperbole and blame aside in favor of brainstorming and compromise. It may not be as easy as pointing fingers and putting people down, but this is the only way Carbondale will solve the problem of Halloween.

L ETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student not living up to title

After reading the article in the Nov. 5 Daily Egyptian, I have some things to say to Mr. Hale.

Let me start by stating that I will refer to you as Mr. Hale throughout this letter.

A reverend is a man of God. I do not know what God you praise, but the God I worship is a creator of all and loves all people.

Mr. Hale, you are full of hot air and have a very shallow mind. I hope you never see me in a public atmosphere because I love an African-American woman.

I hope this is eating at your mind and heart that a white man loves and cares for an African-American woman.

God created people to be equal, but I am proud to say the "white man" will never be equal to the "black man."

Do you honestly think that a white man could survive the torture that many black men, women and children have lived with for centuries?

Mr. Hale, it is men like you who are turning our country into a society full of racism and hatred.

Also, I have a comment on your statement, "the superior does not run from the inferior." Let me tell you a thing or two.

In this situation, you are the inferior, and the man upstairs is the superior. If you believe you will get into the mighty kingdom of heaven, you will be surprised when the mighty one turns you away.

Finally, you stated that one of your main tasks is to "straighten out the befuddled thinking of the white man."

In my opinion, you need to straighten out your befuddled mind. This white man's mind is far from being befuddled, and I stand up for what I believe in.

Mr. Hale, take your head out of your butt and let us face reality. Racism does not belong in our society.

Mr. Hale, you should not use God as your scapegoat to promote racism.

Andrew H. Maisonneuve
junior, physical education

Racism based on pre-judgements

Once again, here we go on the race issue.

There are two words that seem to constantly get mixed up when we speak of the negative aspect of race relations, and they are prejudice and racism. Let us examine these words.

If you truly believe that whites cannot jump, dance or whatever, you are pre-judging them. And when you step on the court or the dance floor, you may be in for a big surprise.

However, if you are SIUC's head basketball coach, none of whom have ever been black, and you believe this stereotype and use it as a reason not to have whites on your team, you are practicing racism.

Too many times in these discussions, each side only wants to hear things to back their argument, so I will try to be fair.

Yes, there are blacks out there who practice racism. For example, one night I was standing in front of the Funky Pickle on the Strip, and a white guy walked through the crowd and was physically and verbally harassed. This was an example of black racism, however rare it might be.

This act was reprehensible and can never be justified. But that was an experience that I have rarely seen in my 26 years.

All too often, when it comes to the subject of racism, someone will trivialize it with issues that really have nothing to do with the subject.

Let me help you understand the message. If we look at racism as a cruel circle, we can imagine a Carbondale where the only bar that plays any sort of rock, hard rock, country and folk was located in the basement.

It would be a place where the mayor, city manager, police chief, landlords, president of the park board, SIUC's chancellor, principals of both high schools and all newspaper editors, TV anchors and football coaches, and especially the person who interviews you for a prospective job, were black.

Now stop and read that part again. Realize that this is the reality for blacks in Carbondale and most other places in this country. The same people have had these positions for years.

And if you believe that none of them has, at one time or another, used their power to practice racism, then you are in one of the same categories as a racist — ignorant.

Remember, tomorrow is always a brighter day, so carry an extra pair of shades for your neighbor.

And for the young kids who may read this, remember, white men can jump, and do not let anyone tell you any different. Keep hope alive.

Jihad Baker
junior, physical education

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Hazardous waste an issue for all

Throughout the world, the treatment of hazardous waste has been a continuing controversy for a few decades. For the last decade, it has been a specific concern of citizens in Southern Illinois. The use of a hazardous waste incinerator at the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge has generated much debate but little consensus among citizens, local representatives, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Fish and Wildlife Service and the Illinois EPA. As the workers at the site near completion of test burns, many questions are left unanswered. In the past year, my study of the issue leads me to believe that the project needs to be stopped.

The intended use of incineration is to clean up PCB-contaminated soil at an efficiency of 99.9999 percent. There are several problems with this claim. The most highly debated problems are the emission levels of dioxin, a persistent toxin, and its threat to the area.

The EPA's standard for "negligible risk" is one extra case of cancer per million people. In its public information, it offers little detailed information of the full impact of dioxin on public health. It is true that we have dioxin contamination at or near risk levels for cancer and other non-cancer disease. The non-cancer effects of dioxin tend to be lifelong and multi-generation, manifesting at levels as low as 100 times less than those associated with cancer. Attention deficit disorder and other learning disabilities, abnormal menstruation, disruption of adolescent sexual development, endocrine system dysfunction, chloracne and weakened immune systems, especially in children, are just some of the health problems in humans related to low-level dioxin exposure. This means we need to be reducing our level of exposure instead of increasing it.

The agencies involved in this operation have asserted that the dioxin that will result from the incineration will be confined to the refuge. Studies of incineration by geophysicists and other environmental scientists show that wind fluctuations will carry dioxins in high concentrations over 15 miles, while lesser concentrations can travel more than 1,000 miles.

Please note that these are the likely effects if the incinerator works without error. In 1993, though, an EPA memo admitted that of the 184 hazardous waste incinerators operating throughout the country, none were operating in compliance with regulation.

The WTI incinerator in East Liverpool, Ohio, was given a full-burn permit by the state even though it had failed the test burn. It would be allowed to burn until the permit was renewed about six years later. U.S. EPA official William Sanjour stated that incinerators, "tend to depress any area in which they are located, from the point of view of economics, public health, the environment and morale."

Many alternatives to incineration have been shown to eliminate risk of exposure to humans and wildlife, but bureaucratic agencies and competing waste technologies have pushed incineration for reasons other than local public interest. This is a complicated issue in itself.

The use of incineration at Crab Orchard has far-reaching implications towards a national issue of hazardous waste. There seems to be a trend where state and federal agencies make inappropriate decisions that benefit large-scale manufacturing and waste treatment industries.

Governmental agencies like the EPA historically have been two steps behind scientific experts, health advocates and public interest groups' call for major policy changes like the ban of incineration, the ban on "free chlorine," reduction of industrial waste and the use of alternative treatment methods. Sluggish bureaucratic policy only seems to change when citizens become well-informed on the issues that affect their lives and take appropriate action.

Hazardous waste definitely is an issue we all need to become involved with, as we are responsible for its existence. This will be the necessary course if we wish to have a healthier existence for ourselves and future generations.

topic: Africa involvement

"Central Africa is being remade. Tens of thousands are dying. Hundreds of thousands are on the move. A government is near collapse. War is imminent. And the Clinton administration has effectively fallen silent.

Since the end of the Cold War, more than one million Africans have died in Angola, Burundi, Liberia, Rwanda, Somalia and in several other less-publicized killing fields. Greater carnage may lie ahead since the disastrous U.S. intervention in Somalia. Africa has received a pittance of attention in U.S. policy circles. Earlier this month...Secretary of State Warren Christopher... made his first visit to sub-Saharan Africa. Quoting from a speech... Christopher assured reporters that the U.S. continues to have a strong interest in Africa. Bowing to the view of many Africanists that too much negative reporting is one reason why it is so difficult to build a domestic constituency for Africa, he emphasized the democratic success in Mali and South Africa.

Two weeks later the Africa team struggled with another African tragedy of potentially epic proportions. This time, in eastern Zaire, where as many as 500,000 people are on the move to escape the crossfire of an almost unfathomable array of antagonists.

...It is entirely possible that the result of a great debate on Africa would be a national decision to not make major commitments, sending a clear message to Africans that they are on their own. That would be unfortunate. But it would be better than the nebulous state of affairs."

more of a compromise between the two parties."

Williams said a partisan split between Congress and the White House can be positive because it brings both Democratic and Republican views into the spotlight.

However, some students suggested that with a Democrat in the White House, GOP dominance of the legislature could spell gridlock.

Audrey Craddock, a freshman in Spanish from Marion, said she is afraid partisan concerns may limit the nation's progress.

"I think (GOP control of Congress) is going to make it a lot harder for the president to do a lot of the things he wants to do," she said. "They're not going to want to pass the bills he wants to pass."

John Jackson, dean of SIUC's College of Liberal Arts and political science professor, said the division will make it difficult to accomplish anything, but he said Clinton's willingness to compromise when necessary may help.

"I think it's pretty evident that he can and will compromise and has a record of trying to do so," he said. "I think it remains to be seen what the Republican leadership will want to do."

Students also had varying opinions about why Dole lost the presidential election.

Margaret Little, a pre-med student in SIUC's MEDPREP program from New Haven, Conn., said one reason for Dole's loss can be attributed to negative campaign tactics.

"I got sick and tired of listening to the venomous insults that (Dole) kept spitting out toward Bill Clinton," Little said. "He never gave me any indication as to what he was planning to do for the country."

Jackson said Dole's failure to state a clear reason for running hurt him.

"He never really articulated a theme about why he was running and what his vision and his plan for getting us to the 21st century were all about," he said. "As it went on it degenerated into 'I'm a better man than Bill Clinton.'"

Dole also may have been hurt by the government shutdowns that occurred when Clinton and Congressional Republicans battled to balance the federal budget in 1995, Little said.

"I think that really hurt him (Dole) because it put a lot of innocent people out of work," she said. "It was all just an attempt to muscle the president into signing a (budget) bill that he didn't agree with."

Williams said Clinton also had an edge over Dole in his ability to draw support from female voters.

Williams said nominating a Republican woman as the party's presidential candidate could give the GOP a boost in the next election.

"In 2000, I'm really leaning toward a woman being a viable candidate for president or vice president," he said.

Experience

the workers are volunteers.

Grey said the American Cancer Society uses his experiences to help console those who have found out they have cancer.

"I have experienced all three treatments of cancer — chemotherapy, surgery and radiation therapy," he said. "I know how much of an impact it is to have the doctor say to someone that they have cancer. People just need to confront cancer and find out how to heal."

Steve Jensen, the director of radiologic sciences at SIUC and one of Grey's former professors, said Grey jumps at the chance to help other people fight cancer.

"I've known a lot of people who have come out of fights with cancer, but I have never known anyone to succeed so much after cancer or help so many other people with their fights," Jensen said.

Pat Arey, a staff worker at the American Cancer Society, said Grey is one of the key members of the Jackson County unit because of his personal experiences and willingness to speak to others about them.

"He really puts his heart and soul into his work," Arey said. "We use him as a spokesperson who is certainly qualified for the job. Aside from being very dedicated, he makes whatever he is working on a lot of fun."

Grey said he believes he has done a lot of internal healing in the past years, and he wants to pass that on to other sufferers of cancer.

"I want to live each day to the fullest," Grey said. "I want to impact people as much as I can and get my message out that prevention is the best treatment for cancer. I don't consider myself to be in remission. I see myself as cured."

THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW

Students can participate in a local showing of the Rocky Horror Picture Show

By Travis DeNeal

The local "Rocky Horror Picture Show" crowd can do the "Time Warp" again when the Student Programming Committee stages its annual show dedicated to the movie that initiated the idea of audience participation.

For $1, moviegoers can simply watch the movie in the ballrooms, but to get the full Rocky Horror experience, the audience is encouraged to wear outrageous costumes and purchase available bags of props which will sell for $1 to $2. Mark Dutter, vice executive director of SPC, said,

"This is an interactive show that incorporates the crowd with the movie," Dutter said. "The crowd is supposed to say certain things or throw objects (from the prop bags) at the screen through the course of the movie."

Dutter said most people who attend Rocky Horror events are seasoned veterans who know both the actual script and the audience's lines by heart.

"Most people have seen the show a lot and know exactly what to do," he said. "And for the people who don't know the instructions, we'll be helping out."

"We'll even have a person emceeing who will be telling everyone to get ready (to yell or throw things)."

For those unfamiliar with the movie, the story involves a conservative young couple who accidentally meet a bisexual mad scientist who is creating a male paramour ala Dr. Frankenstein. The scientist, Dr. Frank N. Furter, actually is the leader of a band of hard-partying aliens being investigated by the U.S. government.

The entire show is a twisted musical masterpiece that follows the couple through their transition from shy conservatives to swinging extroverts thanks to the epicurean Furter.

Alan Owens, a senior in computer science from Johnston City and avid Rocky Horror fan, said crowd participation is the lynchpin of the movie's popularity.

"You don't go to a movie and do the things that are done at a 'Rocky Horror Picture Show' screening," he said.

Owens, an old hand at the Rocky Horror game, has seen the show at least 40 times since his virgin experience in 1988. He said most fans have seen it quite often and continue to watch it frequently.

"Every so often, my friends and I get together and have a Rocky Horror party," he said.

Though many moviegoers dress as characters from the movie, Owens said he rarely participates in the costume part of the live screening.

"I went as the biker (Eddie) twice because it was fun, but now I just go to watch the show and everybody else," he said.

"I identify with Eddie since I'm a big, mean guy," he added jokingly.

The shows will be at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. tonight in the Student Center ballrooms.

URBAN SHAKESPEARE

Take the fast-paced trend of an urban, other-world movie theme, combine it with the timeless, classic writings of playwright William Shakespeare, and you have director Baz Luhrmann's new release, "William Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet."

The very title conjures up thoughts of Old-English players in tights and the hardwood stages of Shakespeare's historic Globe theater. But that is not the case in this wonderful version of "Romeo & Juliet."

All of the same dialogue from Shakespeare's original play is there all right, but the movie is set in a fictional alternative urban world — Verona Beach — where civil war between two family dynasties, the Capulets and the Montagues, prevails.

The setting is neither in the past nor in the future. Scenes shift back and forth between the settings of a bleak, war-torn city, where it is Capulets v. Montagues v. the cops, and the sexy, sandy shorelines of Verona Beach.

Caught up in this struggle are Romeo (Leonardo DiCaprio), son of the Montagues, and Juliet (Claire Danes), daughter of the Capulets, who fall hopelessly in love with one another, despite the bloody feuds between their families.

Both DiCaprio, a young actor who received a Best Supporting Actor nomination for his role in "What's Eating Gilbert Grape?" and Danes ("My So-Called Life") masterfully capture the youth and vibrancy befitting of the classic lovers. DiCaprio and Danes are young actors, but they already have had several movie successes. And if their performances in this movie are any indication of their future work, then look out, because these two are going places.

Their energetic performances in the love scenes and their moving portrayal of tragedy will make audience members reminisce about their first love and shed a tear for the sad situation the two characters are trapped in.

But it is not just youthful acting that makes "Romeo & Juliet" great. Audience members also are treated to performances by Paul Sorvino ("Good Fellas"), who plays the Mafia-like godfather of the Capulets, and Brian Dennehy ("Silverado"), the head of the Montague family. Both Sorvino and Dennehy do an excellent job of capturing the crime-boss aura of two rich and powerful families at war with one another.

The dialogue may seem a bit strange to viewers at first. After all, city punks and mobsters recite the original Shakespearean script. But audience members should not be turned off by this. Just sit back, watch, and appreciate how the message of the script, now celebrating its 400th anniversary, transcends time. This movie will not only be enjoyable for seasoned Shakespeare connoisseurs. Luhrmann does a great service for the play by placing it in a quasi-modern setting that young people also can relate to.

Chase's Video Pix: Off-the-Wall with the Bard

If you're looking for some more off-the-wall Shakespeare, Tom Stoppard's "Rosencrantz & Guildenstern are Dead" is the perfect selection. The film is a hilarious, but potentially confusing, spoof that originally was written for the stage.

The film focuses on the two characters for which it is named, who are both characters from the Shakespeare classic, "Hamlet." In the original play, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern were friends of Hamlet, the prince of Denmark. The two were "beseeched" to spy on Hamlet by the prince's evil uncle who killed Hamlet's father to acquire the crown.

Unlike Luhrmann's "Romeo & Juliet," Stoppard's film is set in the original time period for which it was written. But the dialogue switches back and forth between the ridiculous conversations of Rosencrantz (Gary Oldman) and Guildenstern (Tim Roth) and the actual "Hamlet" script.

Roth ("Reservoir Dogs") and Oldman ("Bram Stoker's Dracula")

have an identity crisis throughout the film. Because they are only fictional characters in the play, "Hamlet," they lack identities unless it is time for them to go on stage and act out their parts. Both characters, and other characters in the movie, constantly forget which one is Rosencrantz and which one is Guildenstern.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern spend the entire film trying to find out who they are, except for the few scenes where their characters are again relevant to the play. For those brief moments, they again remember their identities.

The dialogue and performances of Roth and Oldman are hysterically funny. Their performances are more zany than a Three Stooges' episode. Though Roth's character is the one with the brains, Oldman's character accidentally stumbles upon many cutting-edge scientific discoveries in the downtime when the characters' identities are not relevant to "Hamlet."

This movie can be incredibly confusing, however, unless the viewer is familiar with the "Hamlet" story line. Because "Rosencrantz & Guildenstern" is a play within a play, it is important to watch "Hamlet" or read the script before viewing this film.

A great version of "Hamlet" was released five years ago starring Mel Gibson as Hamlet and Glenn Close as Queen Gertrude. Check this one out, too.

REVIEWER'S CHOICE

The BEATLES

The Beatles
The White Album
EMI Records Ltd. ~ 1968

"The Beatles," or better known as "The White Album," was the fab four's last masterpiece — even though some would be quick to point out that "Abbey Road" was noting short of brilliant.

The Beatles always did their own thing, and this album built the bridge between counter culture and pop culture.

The album is a compilation of mostly individual efforts by John, Paul, George and Ringo, but somehow group members remained on the same page well enough to collaborate on each other's efforts.

McCartney may have been the one member more than any other to kee; the group's songs poppy and commercially viable, but he lets the world know there is a side of him often overlooked through the song, "Why Don't We Do It in the Road?"

Harrison also continues his emergence from behind the song writing of Lennon and McCartney with songs like "Savoy Truffle," "While My Guitar Gently Weeps" (on which Harrison's good friend Eric Clapton played guitar) and "Piggies" — all of which are light years ahead of the group's other songs.

Even Starr gets a chance to display his work with "Don't Pass Me By."

With this album, The Beatles took an even more political stance than with "Sgt. Pepper's." This is exemplified through songs such as "Piggies" (hopefully self-exclamatory), "Dear Prudence," "Blackbird" (McCartney wrote this one about civil rights struggles) and "Glass Onion," which looks back through the window the world uses to display the four members as demigods.

Some say it was egotistical of The Beatles to release a double album. But hey, it was the bloody Beatles, and it sold.

Allen Ginsberg
The Ballad of the Skeletons
Mercury Records ~ 1996

When Allen Ginsberg was searching for a young, artistic guitarist to work with to produce "The Ballad of the Skeletons," he sought the recommendation of Paul McCartney. And McCartney did offer his suggestion: he recommended himself.

The combination of one of the finest beat poets and one of the finest modern musicians produced a retro-spect effect of today's world. "The Ballad of the Skeletons" is politically minded poetry, written by Ginsberg, that displays today's sociological problems in much the same fashion that the beat generation and the counterculture painted similar problems of the 1950s and 1960s. Listeners should take note of Ginsberg's and McCartney's efforts because they are the individuals who shaped the world we live in today. Ginsberg's poetry tackles such topics as political gridlock, right-wing conservatism, AIDS, racism, abortion, family values and the United States' world polling. "The Ballad of the Skeletons" is not rock, hip-hop, blues or anything along the categorical lines of music. It is spoken word about the diseases society and culture are suffering from. It cuts through the distortion and tells it like it is.

Grateful Dead
The Arista Years
Arista Records ~ 1996

This two-disc compilation concentrates on displaying the Dead's later "studio" works off such albums as "Shakedown Street," "Terrapin Station," "In the Dark," "Built to Last" and "Go To Heaven."

But to balance the album out, live selections from "Reckoning," "Dead Set" and "Without A Net" also are included. "Eyes of the World," off "Without A Net," contains a sit-in performance by jazzier Branford Marsalis on tenor and soprano saxophones.

A major plus for this compilation is the good popout of studio and live music it offers. While the Dead's live music is well suited for a concert setting or background music, it tends to come off a bit long-winded when it's the center of attention.

The three to five-minute studio tracks get straight to the point — verse, chorus and bridge — minus the interludes and solos.

Of course there are going to be songs left off this compilation that fans can't believe were overlooked, but every Dead fan has his or her own favorite(s) from the group's endless assortment.

Uncle Jon's not Dead in more ways than one

Band returns to Carbondale roots, to play at Hangar

By DUSTIN COLEMAN

With a name like Uncle Jon's Band, it would be hard to imagine that a band would be anything but a Grateful Dead cover band.

"That is really unfortunate," lead singer Jon Gram said. "Because we do play some Dead, but that is such a small part of our play list. The original conception was in the vein of the Allman Brothers." But aside from the homage to the Grateful Dead song, if the band's name rings a bell, do not be surprised. Uncle Jon's Band formed in Carbondale in 1981 and played its first gig at the Great Escape, which is now the Java House. Gram describes the group as a rock band, which plays covers from bands like the Allman Brothers Band, the Beatles and a few Grateful Dead songs. The band also plays a couple of originals.

Through the years, the band has gone through some changes. Before departing from the band in 1993, Gram was the only remaining original member.

This weekend, the band is scheduled to play two shows at the Hangar 9. The shows mark, to the day, the 15-year anniversary of the band's first gig.

But more important than the anniversary is that the original line-up will be making the crusade to Carbondale for the reunion show.

"There was a very strong need to reinstate what the band used to be," he said.

"I mean, we all had something in common."

It was formed by a very special core of people.

When Gram quit, the lineup at the time continued and still continue today to play under the same name. So now, as Gram points out, there are two incarnations of the same band.

Gram said at first he thought it would be difficult for a reunion tour to ever happen because each of the original members is leading different lives now.

Bass player Pete Frisina is a county planner in Atlanta. Drummer Jonathan Levine is an entertainment agent in New York City, currently representing the band Live. Beth Forrester, percussionist, is an engineer in Chicago. Guitarist Eugene Watson is a woodcrafter in Chicago. Gram heads the Jon Gram Band.

But when inquiries were made, Gram said there was an overwhelming response to the reunion.

"It was very surprising," he said. "Everyone was very enthused about getting back together."

Other stops on the tour include Champaign, where the band will play Mabel's, and in Chicago, where they will play at the Cubby Bear.

"Mabel's is a big venue in a town where there is a big University," he said. "It has always been a good place for us. Chicago obviously is a good place to play because of the population."

Gram said he has been back to Carbondale several times throughout the years, and he still has a special place in his heart for the town.

"Every time I go down to Carbondale, it feels like going home," he said.

"The makeup of the people in Carbondale seems a little more hippie-like than other places. And that is a real nice feeling."

AMY STRAUSS — The Daily Express

Story by Lisa Pangburn

The bright lights and colorful decor give an exciting welcome to Teresa Reedy as she prepares herself to board the boat. She reaches into her pocket and pulls out her identification card to give to the guard standing at the door. The guard looks over her ID and motions her onto the boat.

Reedy, a senior in animal science from Villa Grove, is not planning a long cruise across the ocean to another country. She is taking a two-hour riverboat cruise to gamble some money and hopefully win.

Out for a good time

Reedy, along with many other people, goes to riverboat casinos to get a taste of a real casino and have an evening away from home.

"I don't go down there thinking I'm going to win a million dollars, but it's still fun," she said. "It's a good time

Reedy also said Player's Casino in Metropolis is an interesting place to go just to watch people.

"Some people have won a lot of money there," she said. "It's enticing to watch big spenders and people who really know how to play the different games. If I went more often to watch, I would learn some really good strategies, but it's not really that important for me to win a lot of money. I just go for the entertainment."

Mike May, a senior in radio/television from Chicago, was a big winner on a riverboat and said he thought he should spread the wealth.

"I won something like $700 on the boat," he said. "It was so great when I won that money because I was really down (on money) at the time. So I threw this huge party and had free food and beer. Everyone had a real good time."

However, not everyone wins at riverboat gambling. And more often than not, people will walk away with empty pockets unless they are careful, a riverboat veteran said.

Jaime Kelly, a senior in aviation from Lemont, said he enjoys riverboat gambling but forces himself to leave his credit cards at home and take a limited amount of cash.

His system includes keeping a specific amount of money in a pocket that he is not spending out of and splitting his wins between the "spending pocket" and the "nonspending pocket." That way, he said he will not lose everything.

"You can really put yourself in the hole if you aren't careful," he said. "I've left the boat many times with nothing left, but I still go back because it's all for fun."

"If people keep in mind to be responsible with their money and play games where they know what they're doing, it is a good time. I mean, you can't sit and play poker if you don't know how to play. You really can't pick up games there when it comes to cards."

Some good odds

Jahnae Erpenbach, retail marketing and sales director for Player's Casino, said a lot of students drive down to the riverboat in Metropolis because it is only a 45-minute drive from Carbondale.

"Sometimes we run student proto get a bunch of people together and drive down to Metropolis to gamble. It's not like we're big spenders or anything, but it's a change of pace."

motions, but we are always running some kind of promotion," she said. "We always have some kind of give-away. We have given away houses, cars, ski boats, and this month we are giving away over $100,000 in cash."

Erpenbach said the security is strict, but if people play by the rules, there never is a problem.

"We have such good odds on the electronic machines (slot machines, etc.)," she said. "People will win something 92 to 93 percent of the time on them. Also, people can now bet up to $1,000 on the crap tables and $3,000 for blackjack."

Erpenbach said Player's offers 890 electronic games and 50 table games, including a table for Caribbean Stud Poker.

"This game is where people will lose big or win big," she said. "We had a woman who had just had a baby, and she won over $100,000. It's winnings like that one that keep people coming back."

Riverboat casinos don't only offer gambling; some students work on riverboat casinos to make money.

It's best not to cheat

Rolando Fuentes, a graduate student in educational psychology from Redbud, worked security on the Casino Queen in East St. Louis three years ago. He said his duties included keeping an eye on about 35 monitors that viewed the entire casino with the exception of the restrooms. "My job was to watch for people Illinois Church Action on Alcohol Problems, an anti-casino group, recently has sought pledges for a non-binding, statewide referendum from incumbents to end riverboat gambling.

Anita Bedell, the group's executive director, said she fears that lawmakers may vote to add more riverboat casinos to the 10 already in Illinois after the election because of a task force on legalized gambling.

If lawmakers go along with the proposed pledge, the next statewide referendum would be in 1998.

Even though groups are fighting against riverboat casinos, the Illinois Gaming Council has set strict standards on who is allowed onto the riverboats.

Adrienne Levatino, spokeswoman for the council, said regulations are necessary for the businesses to run legally.

"No one is allowed on the boats unless they are 21," she said. "This is because alcohol is sold. Also, any money that is won is subject to be taxed — and anything over $10,000 that is won — must be reported to the IRS."

 - Harrah's Casino - Joliet
 - Hollywood Casino - Aurora
 - Par-a-dice Riverboat Casino - East Peoria

The strategy

The average cruise on riverboats in Illinois lasts about two hours, and most riverboats do not charge a boarding fee.

When the two hours of the cruise are about to end, Reedy plays what she says is her last slot game and wins nothing. So she pulls another $20 out of her pocket and goes to exchange it for more tokens for the slot machines and chips for the blackjack table.

"Right now I have more money than I came with, so the worst I could do is come out even," she says with a hopeful grin. "I just have so much fun down here that I never want to leave, but I will not leave with empty pockets this time."

She moves over to one of the blackjack tables, lays down her bet, looks at her cards, asks for one card and turns out a blackjack.

"Twenty-one," she yells. "I new I had a good luck streak coming along if I would just keep playing."

cheating, like counting cards or sliding dice and that type of thing," he said. "I was basically damage control."

"I was in constant contact with security and pit bosses on the floor, but mostly we watched employees. It is real hard for a patron to cheat, but for dealers, it wouldn't be that hard."

Fuentes advised people not to try to cheat because he said they would get caught.

"The casino is run in paramilitary style. Everything has a close watch on it, and almost everything is controlled in some sort of way," he said. "People should really be careful when it comes to gambling, because even if you come and play one game, you only have a 50/50 chance of winning."

"When you continue to play, you are lowering your odds by each game. The more games you play, the more money casinos will take from you. It's a very cut-throat business, but the riverboats, in my opinion, are excellent for the economy."

Not everyone willing to ante-up

However, not everyone agrees with the idea of riverboat gambling. In the past year, riverboat casinos have taken a beating from special interest groups that wish to extinguish gambling and all that comes with it.

Stephanie Tebow
The Hillary Trap
Bone Books
1996

By attacking first lady Hillary Clinton, local author Stephanie Tebow enviably has placed her conservative beliefs underneath the interrogation lamp in "The Hillary Trap."

"The Hillary Trap," which was published by Bone Books, is the conservative women's literature dream come true because this book is used to vent Tebow's frustrations and political ignorance of Hillary and the feminism movement.

It was no coincidence that the book was published during an election year, even though this book probably had little or no influence on the general voters who picked up this book.

Tebow's arguments, although well thought out, are only interesting facts that may or may not be true, considering that she never interviewed Hillary or anyone who is close to her.

In fact, Tebow, who is a local businesswoman and a Carbondale resident, admitted she did not know the first lady personally but went ahead and wrote this book from what little knowledge she had of the first lady.

The book's 226 pages are drenched in conservative, down-to-earth explanations of how Hillary is power hungry and essentially is a bad example for America.

At some point, Tebow's language and arguments are so cheesy that, while reading it, you would have to eat crackers just to swallow what she is trying to feed you on the pages.

"Women are not alone in their confusion about the fellas. In the '70s, the boys found adolescence to be torture," she wrote to explain how women are confused about how to act because of the distorted feminism.

Tebow said she tackled the idea of analyzing Hillary after several years of watching the first lady rise to power and become an integral part of her husband's political career.

She said that Hillary, instead of moving the liberation movement forward, has moved liberation backward by being aggressive and power hungry.

Tebow's main argument against Hillary and the feminist movement is that she has used her position and image to gain an enormous amount of influence and power while compromising her goals.

In her book, Tebow offers this explanation:
"I want you to understand that I do not necessarily dislike Hillary...Power is the one component sought after most vigorously. It may well be the word that lures us to the same trap — the Hillary Trap, that is. When solely in search of power, goals become secondary. This shifts the focus of any plan away from accomplishment and achievement to all encompassing pursuit of power."

Tebow's down-to-earth writing is easy reading for those who have a short attention span. Even her father Frank Tebow's quirky poetry about the Clintons is somewhat humorous.

Overall, Tebow dares to go against the feminist norm and questions Hillary's ethics and political maneuvers but fails to follow through with any concrete rational explanation.

Internet no longer man's playground

By BRIAN T. SUTTON

The Internet a year ago was not a playground for women. It was a playground for men to send pirated copies of games and to post pornography.

Not anymore. Women have begun to become an influence on the Net. They use it as a resource tool to communicate everything from medical advice to all-female bands to philologists on the world to a guide to movies.

Grrrls are not mousy push-overs, but women who kick ass and take names. They also enjoy a little romance with some respect. Rush Limbaugh might call them feminazis, but they are strong-minded, independent women who want you to know it.

GRRRLS ON THE WEB:

<http://www.voyagerco.com/gg/gg.html>

Guerrilla Girls. "We could be anyone: we are everywhere!"

They are anonymous feminist artists who wear gorilla (hal) masks and dub themselves the conscious of the art world. They make posters using humor and an in-your-face, challenge-that-fact style fighting sexism.

One poster proudly states, "The Internet was 84.5-percent male and 82.3-percent white. Until now." complete with a woman in a gorilla mask.

They also sell the posters because riot grrrls have to pay the rent as well as change the world.

<http://www.grrrl.com/>

This is a site started by a woman who found the Web dull, male, white, and lacking good fetish essays. An essay about bondage bras is an eye opener.

Other than a few essays ranging in topics, she put facts about her idols and general links for women. She has the most comprehensive list of grrrl links.

<http://www.girlsonfilm.com/index.html>

The Girls on Film page is all about "Chicks. Flicks. Politicks." This site was raved about by the venerable movie critic Roger Ebert (the short, fat one), and that was before the page redesign.

The girls review movies and have feature stories and columns. One feature story is about the necessity of rape scenes in films which generated so much e-mail that they wrote another story.

<http://www.gogirlmag.com/>

"Go, Girl!" is an online magazine about sports and fitness that tries to encourage women to play sports to boost health and self confidence.

The design of the page looks like it is drawn by the cartoonist who draws "Cathy," rather than riot grrrl style, but still is independent in its focus.

Gore set for career as contender in 2000 race

The Washington Post

LITTLE ROCK, Arkansas—In his victory speech here Tuesday night, Vice President Gore spoke of "an America in transition to a new era."

At that very moment, he was undergoing a seismic political transition of his own. President Clinton had just ended his last campaign. Gore, without saying so, was beginning the long process of staking claim as the Democratic front-runner in the 2000 presidential race.

"He starts a new career today," Clinton-Gore media adviser Bob Squier said Wednesday morning, as Gore prepared to return to Washington. No longer can Gore reply, "one at a time," when supporters shout "2000!" Everyone knows he's running for president, and he brings significantly more stature and experience to the task than he did when he made an ill-fated bid in 1988.

other loyalties.

"Typically, higher education has not been a partisan issue," he said. "It tends to reflect individual legislators' ties to campuses [in their districts]."

Bost, who is on the House Higher Education Committee, said the change in power in that committee will not matter much because there are no major proposals it will consider next session.

"The main legislation we want to get done is that bonding authorization [to fix the failing SIUC power grid]," Bost said.

House minority leader Mike Madigan, D-Chicago, is expected to be elected majority leader in January. Madigan was majority leader before the 1994 Republican takeover.

Tom Cullen, a Madigan spokesman, said the Democratic Party already has plans for the next session.

"We're planning to introduce legislation to give college tuition grants and/or tax credits to middle-class families," Cullen said. He said in the next legislative session, Democrats will introduce legislation for more stringent nursing-home standards.

Awareness

participate in SIUC's Women's Awareness Month by bringing Cherokee Joyce Dugan, the first female chief of the Eastern Band of Cherokees, to campus in March.

The American Indian

Association also is working with the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau in promoting the Spirit of the Midwest Pow Wow that will take place April 5 at the SIU Arena. Creasy said the Pow Wow is expected to attract many tourists, and fellow American Indian Association member Sheila Teague, a graduate student in industrial technology from Kosciusko, Miss., said excitement about the event is building.

"Everybody's excited because this is the first time there will be [a Pow-Wow] in the Carbondale area," she said.

For more information about the American Indian Association and their November events, contact Sheila Teague at 549-8105.

Giants' training to be put to test against Panthers

Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—The progress was maddeningly slow at times, and often appeared stagnant, but the New York Giants' offensive line recently has markedly improved. The timing is perfect, because Sunday it faces its biggest test, in the team's biggest game in two years.

The numbers say it all: The Giants have allowed 32 sacks, second most in the NFL. The Carolina Panthers have recorded 32 sacks; most in the league. "They are very, very good at what they do," Giants offensive coordinator George Henshaw said.

The Panthers demonstrated that in the preseason finale when they had six sacks while handing the Giants a 34-7 defeat. The Giants' line was unable to handle Carolina's 3-4 defense and its aggressive blitzes, leading to fears realized during its early-season struggles.

This week's big question: Is the line better suited to handle the Carolina challenge than it was in August? The answer: It had better be.

"I think that was in the stage when we were trying to figure out what to do with the 4-3, then someone throws a 3-4 at us," tackle Scott Gregg said. "I think we're to the point where we can make calls, and I think I'm recognizing things a lot better now than I was at that time."

The Giants have allowed four sacks in their past 11 quarters, and did a good job Sunday against the Arizona Cardinals, who turned up the heat after rookie Danny Kanell replaced quarterback Dave Brown in the first quarter. They ain't seen nothing yet. Said Henshaw: "Carolina will probably blitz more in the first quarter than Arizona would in a whole game."

The line will need help from backs, tight ends and receivers to handle the multifaceted attack. The Panthers' big weapons are outside linebackers Lamar Lathon, who leads the NFL with 9 sacks, and Kevin Greene, who has eight. Lathon's previous regular-season encounter with Brown came in 1994, when as an Houston Oilers he knocked him out of a game with a concussion on a helmet-to-chin hit.

"When they blitz, they're for-real blitzes," Henshaw said. "Those two guys are dominant players."

The Panthers are the most devoted practitioners of the trendy zone blitz, in which they rush four to six men, drop linemen into coverage and play zone defense behind the blitz. Carolina Coach Dom Capers said his team's focus will be to keep the Giants from establishing the run to keep his rushers off balance.

Besides talent, the Panthers are loaded with experience, which makes the complicated attack practical. The Giants' oldest defensive starter is Corey Miller, who turned 28 last month. Ten of the Panthers' 11 starters are older than him, and seven are over 30. "I think they have the most experience in the league, bar none," center Brian Williams said, "and I think it shows."

Card said it's nice to see her hard work pay off with a national ranking.

"It feels really good," Card said. "It was a pretty big accomplishment for me, and I guess it just shows hard work and perseverance pays off down the road."

But Card said she is not counting on the ranking to do much for her tennis game. She said she has done well in the past without the ranking and will continue to do so in the future.

"I try not to worry about the rankings because rankings come and go," Card said. "I think I have always been motivated, so I don't think this will change my motivation."

Card will be teamed up with junior Sanem Berksoy in the doubles competition. But the team is at somewhat of a disadvantage because the pair has not played doubles on the same team all year. During the season, Card and junior Helen Johnson make up the No. 2 team, and Berksoy and Gardner are the Salukis' No. 1 team.

Card and Berksoy are unsure of how they will do at the Rolex Tournament against the best doubles teams of the region but said they will do their best.

"I don't have much experience playing doubles with Molly," Berksoy said. "But I don't think we will have a problem adjusting. We will just do the best we can."

Card's work ethic and ability on the court will be put to the test in Madison, and she said she is looking forward to the challenge.

"I know the past couple of weeks I have been working hard on my game," Card said. "It's kind of the luck of the draw in a tournament like the Rolex."

"I feel confident in my game. Win or lose, I am ready to play."

does a nice job for us."

But Fisher's leadership qualities go beyond the volleyball court. Fisher was named to the dean's list for spring semester with a 3.77 grade point average.

"I'm pretty good in the classroom," she admits.

Fisher also was named to the all-academic team at the Purdue Invitational earlier this season.

Fisher said her actions also affect her younger sister.

"I have always tried to protect her," Fisher said "I would never want her to be disappointed in me."

Fisher recalls a time when her sister asked her why she couldn't get the kind of grades she does.

"I told her if I can do it, you can, too," she said.

Fisher also tries to set an example through her overall personality, and said her teammates often give her a hard time about it.

"I don't swear," Fisher said. "I don't do a lot of things, and my teammates would all probably call me a goodie-two-shoes."

Teammate Laura Pier, a sophomore in early childhood education from Michigan City, Ind., said Fisher is in fact a "goodie-two-shoes," but said she sets a good example off the court.

"She's somewhat of a motherly figure," Pier said. "She's always there for us, and she always cheers us on when we're low."

But the way Fisher helps pick the team up is not the only thing that makes her motherly, Pier said.

"She (Fisher) gives great hugs," Pier added.

Westbrook says he should start

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Frustrated at still being a part-time player three weeks after he returned from a knee injury, Washington Redskins wide receiver Michael Westbrook said Wednesday he thinks he should be back in the starting lineup.

"I think I've come back and proven that I'm healthy again — finally. I don't understand why I'm not starting," Westbrook said. "I'm not going in the game and dropping balls. I'm getting open. When the play is there for me to make it, I make it."

Meanwhile, middle linebacker Rod Stephens, who has started all 25 games he's played for the Redskins in two seasons, did not practice Wednesday and is questionable for Sunday's game against the Arizona Cardinals at RFK Stadium.

"Rod is our biggest concern and we'll have to see how he is as the week goes on, but there is no way of knowing until Friday," Coach Norv Turner said.

Stephens did not remember on which play he hurt his ankle in Sunday's 38-13 loss to Buffalo, though he experienced some soreness after the game. More pain and swelling arrived Monday and remained Wednesday.

"I can barely walk," Stephens said, though he added he had a similar ankle injury while playing in Seattle and recovered enough to play the following game.

If Stephens, 30, can't play, Patrice Alexander would take his spot in most situations. Stephens comes out on passing downs and Marcus Patton calls defensive signals. Patton would do that in normal downs if Stephens is out.

As for Westbrook, he missed the last two preseason games and the season-opening loss to Philadelphia with a sprained left knee. He returned for the second game, started and had four catches in the win over Chicago. He had two catches against the New York Giants but partially tore the posterior cruciate ligament in the same knee and did not play in the next three games.

Henry Ellard, the team's leading receiver with 29 catches, has started every game at one wide receiver spot (though he has a sore groin muscle). Leslie Shepherd has started in Westbrook's place. Westbrook was in uniform for the past three games, but Shepherd remained the starter and Westbrook played only when the Redskins added a third receiver.

"It's hard to make a lot of plays when I'm only in once or twice every series," Westbrook said.

For the season, Shepherd has 16 catches for 237 yards, including two touchdowns, and has scored twice on reverses.

Westbrook was asked if he believed he had done enough in the past three games to get the starting spot back from Shepherd.

"I don't remember how it became Shep's spot," Westbrook said. "I thought the idea was when Henry or I went down, he would step up and play, which he's done very well."

Westbrook's diving 27-yard catch set up Terry Allen's second touchdown run against Buffalo.

"When I'm in, that's what I'm all about and everybody knows that," Westbrook said. "I'm just getting a little frustrated. I understood why I was not starting before, but now I don't."

Free meal gets Harrick in hot water

The UCLA Bruins have bid farewell to Coach Jim Harrick for violations regarding his expense account and recruiting. According to the results of an internal investigation by the school, on Oct. 11, a recruiting dinner was attended by five current student-athletes while only three recruits were present, which is a direct violation of an NCAA rule that states, "an institution cannot provide a free meal or entertainment to a member of an institutional group that assists in the recruitment of a prospect during an official visit." Harrick led the Bruins to the 1995 NCAA championship and compiled an overall record of 191-63 at UCLA. Steve Lavin will step in as interim coach.

Hamstring may keep Elway out Sunday

Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway may not see action in Sunday's game against the Chicago Bears because of a hamstring injury. The Broncos, who lead the AFC West, listed Elway as "questionable" for the game. Elway injured his hamstring in the fourth quarter of Monday night's 22-21 victory over the Oakland Raiders, but stayed in the game to engineer his 33rd career fourth-quarter comeback. Despite a noticeable limp, Elway threw a 49-yard scoring pass to Rod Smith with 4:14 left to seal the victory.

NFC, AFC announce weekly honors

Atlanta Falcons running back Jamal Anderson, San Francisco defensive end Roy Barker and Giants kicker Brad Dalriso have all earned NFC player of the week honors. AFC honors went to Buffalo Bills running back Darick Holmes, San Diego Charger linebacker Junior Seau and Seattle Seahawks defensive end Mike McCrary.

Brumfield's condition getting better

The condition of Cincinnati Bengals guard Scott Brumfield continues to improve. Brumfield suffered a cervical spinal cord concussion injury in Sunday's game against the Baltimore Ravens. Team physician Dr. Robert Heidt said Brumfield's condition is satisfactory and added, "we are cautiously optimistic about his continued recovery."

Wetteland, Clemens top free agent list

World Series MVP John Wetteland of the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox veteran pitcher Roger Clemens were among nine players who have filed for free agency. Wetteland had an American League-leading 43 saves, a 2.83 ERA and 69 strikeouts to help lead the Yankees to their first World Series crown in 15 years. Clemens was 10-13 on the year with a 3.63 ERA and 257 strikeouts in 34 starts. Yankees catcher Joe Girardi and infielder Tony Fernandez also filed for free agency, as did Montreal Expos pitcher Mark Leiter, Houston Astros pitcher Doug Drabek, San Diego Padres pitcher Fernando Valenzuela, San Francisco Giants second baseman Robby Thompson and Chicago Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg.

11/7/93

Barry Sanders carried the ball 29 times for 187 yards to lead the Detroit Lions' offense in a 23-0 shutout against Tampa Bay. Sanders' performance was his second highest rushing total, behind his 220-yard field day against Minnesota in 1991. The win gave the Lions their first shutout since 1983 and a 7-2 record, good enough for their best start since 1962.

TENNIS

Netter gets national ranking

By Kevin DeFries
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In light of a national ranking, Saluki junior tennis player Molly Card gets to end her season by competing among the best tennis players in the country.

Because of strong outings on the court in the spring, summer and part of this fall, Card was awarded with a 110 national ranking by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association ranking committee Oct. 14.

Because of the ranking, Card was given the choice by Saluki Tennis Coach Judy Auld of going to either the Rolex Tournament in Madison, Wis., or the ITA Rolex II Midwest Championships in Bloomington, Ind., Thursday through Sunday.

Both offer tough tennis competition, but the Rolex Tournament in Madison features some of the best in the nation — just the place for Card to show off her new 110 national ranking.

"I chose the Rolex because it's a great experience, and it's something that I had to qualify to get into," Card said. "I figure you never know if you are ever going to get that chance again, and it's something that I have wanted to do since I have been in college tennis."

This fall, Card won the No. 2 singles at the Saluki Invitational, was second at the Memphis Invitational and was a consolation runner-up at the Louisville Invitational.

Like she has done all season, Card will have to remain on top of her tennis game because some of the top teams in the nation reside in the same region as SIUC. Teams such as Notre Dame, No. 8 in the nation, the No. 9-ranked University of Wisconsin and the 24th-ranked Wildcats from Northwestern University will be attending.

"Teams like that will bring almost their whole squad, and their whole squad is very strong," Auld said. "It's definitely the cream of the crop."

Although Card was named as one of the top players in the nation, she was not a shoe-in for the Rolex because she is the No. 2 seed for the Salukis. Any Division I school whose coach is a member of the Intercollegiate Tennis Association automatically is allowed to bring the No. 1 singles player and singles team, but SIUC's No. 1 seed, Liz Gardner, elected not to go.

Card was accepted on an at-large bid. "She (Card) had some good wins on the summer circuit," Auld said. "She was in the middle of the pack as far as getting an at-large bid."

VOLLEYBALL

Sophomore chosen to co-lead spikers

By L. Bruce Luckett
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC women's volleyball co-captain Lindsay Fisher expects to be a leader both on and off the court.

Though only a sophomore, Fisher, a biological sciences major from Muncie, Ind., was chosen along with senior defensive specialist Becky Chappell to lead the team and said she enjoys the position as one of the younger players.

"I try to lead by example more than anything," Fisher said. "I won't say much; I just try to do it. It's a big honor. It shows that the team respects me, and it makes me feel good to know they feel comfortable talking to me." While the responsibilities of leading a team may seem endless, Fisher said her job of being a captain is a little less demanding than her senior counterpart. "I don't really feel a whole lot of pressure because Becky (Chappell) is a captain also," Fisher said. "She's a senior so she gets a lot more of the responsibilities and pressure put on her."

Yet Saluki Coach Sonya Locke said Fisher does what needs to be done.

"She does her job, and when she needs to say something, she does," Locke said. "But if that (saying something) is not called for, she doesn't."

Fisher comes from a family of athletes, including a younger sister who plays on a nationally-ranked high school volleyball team in Indiana.

Fisher, a middle blocker, has led the Salukis in either kills, digs, aces or blocks in at least one or more matches this season, and Locke said that is because of her work ethic.

"She's aggressive on the court, and she always does her best when she's out there," Locke said. "For the most part she
