Kennedy to arrive at 5 p.m.

By Gary Delsohn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy will participate in a question and answer session with SIU students at 5 p.m. Friday in Shryock Auditorium.

Kennedy, D-Mass., is appearing in Carbondale on behalf of Paul Simon's campaign for Congress. He will attend Simon's $50-a-plate fund raising dinner in the Student Center.

Kennedy will hold a press conference after the session. Gov. Dan Walker, Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan, and Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-West Frankfort, also will attend the dinner.

Gray is retiring from Congress after 20 years. Simon is running against Val Oshel, R-Harrisburg, to fill Gray's seat which becomes vacant in January.

Kennedy was considered by many as the top candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1976, but announced last week he would not seek the office. He said his reasons for declining are personal.

Reasons Kennedy cited are the illness of his two sons, his wife's emotional stress and his responsibility as leader of the Kennedy family since his two brothers were assassinated.

He denounced notions that Chappaquiddick had anything to do with his decision. At the press conference called to announce his decision Kennedy said he had answered all questions concerning the tragedy that took the life of one of his secretaries, Mary Jo Kopechne.

Kennedy also was the target of angry demonstrators in Boston last month for his association with federal busing plans. Boston has been the scene of civil disorder recently because of federally enforced busing. When Kennedy appeared at a public demonstration he was chased from the podium by egg throwing parents.

Committee studies possibility

SIU students may get free legal aid

By Diane Solberg
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Future SIU students may have the services of an attorney at their disposal—without charge.

A list of members for a committee to study the feasibility of obtaining a free lawyer for students is due for Student Senate consideration next Wednesday, according to Forest "Rusty" Lightle, chairman of the study panel.

If membership is approved by the senate, the Committee for a Students' Attorney would begin work next week. Lightle said Thursday.

Lightle, appointed by Dennis Sullivan, student body president to organize the committee said, "The student attorney program is an idea long over due at SIU." Similar committees are already in action in at least four other state universities. It's time we had a program set up here, he said.

Lightle's list of members includes Thomas Busch, assistant to the dean of students, as administration representative.

Robert Dreher, associate professor in the clinical law program and associate professor in the Center for the Study of Delinquency and Corrections will represent the law faculty.

Sullivan will serve as an "ex officio member" and will not have a vote as a member of the committee.

Mike Andrews, forestry, and Tom Jones, administration of justice, were appointed to represent undergraduates. Lightle said.

Forest "Rusty" Lightle

Also listed are Jan Cox, an unclassified graduate student; Art Cernosia, law student and researcher for the ombudsman; Philippe Hone, student senator

Also, Rich Riggio, political science and administration of justice, will represent the Judicial Board since he is chairman. Lightle said.

Lightle said no specific number of members is required for the committee, but he tried to choose students and faculty to represent all portions of SIU.

Lightle said the student government is setting up the committee because no one else is likely to if students don't.

The Northern Illinois University Student Association set up an attorney's program which set precedent for SIU, he said.

Lightle said students can't expect "T. Richard Mager, vice-president for development and services, or any of those fellows to set it up."

Lightle said the biggest problem with the program is securing a budget. If funds come from student activities fees, then the lawyer will not be able to sue the University, he said.

Lightle said he believes the attorney only can be effective if he has the potential to sue the University.

He added, "You might as well not get a lawyer if he's cut at the start."

He said the ombudsman's office refers about 30 to 35 per cent of its cases to legal services. He said an attorney could help ombudsman Ingrid Gadoway, solve students' legal problems.

An attorney could help the tenants' union with landlord problems, he said.

He said he would like to see an attorney help with "not only certain types of individual legal problems, but legal needs of certain student organizations."

Lightle said he attended a meeting of the Illinois State Bar Association where they discussed students' attorney programs as a service. He said he is waiting for a report on the results of that session. He said there is no precedent for setting up an attorney's program.

He said he would like to see third-year law students working with the attorney on cases.

Third-year law students can practice law up to the Illinois State Supreme Court under attorney's supervision. These can screen people and handle actual legal matters, Lightle said.

By screening people, Lightle said he meant the law students would make recommendations on whether a student's reason for using the legal services is justifiable.

SIU may get new president at Thursday's board meeting

By Bob Springer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

By this time next week, SIU finally may have a permanent president.

And it probably be either Warren W. Brandt, Charles A. Leone or Albert Somit.

Student Trustee Matthew Rich said Thursday he expects the Board of Trustees to name a new SIU-C president at its next regular meeting in Edwardsville Oct. 10.

He also said he expects the appointee to be one of the three remaining candidates recommended by a search committee nearly a month ago.

"The board probably will make the decision Wednesday or Thursday," Rich said. He said the decision will most likely come out of one of two scheduled executive sessions preceding the open meeting set for 11 a.m. Thursday.

Rich said the appointment for the $50,000-a-year post vacated by the resignation last March of David R.

Derge will be filled from the list of candidates recommended by the search committee headed by Willis E. Malone. "It is unlikely that it would be anyone else," he said.

Concurrence with Rich's prediction came only slightly from one other board member, Willis Malone.

Moore said Rich was only guessing, but it might be a good guess.

Asked if the board is looking for a decision by their Thursday open meeting, Moore said, "I hope so." He added that announcement of the final decision probably would "be delayed for at least a week or so," while salary and working conditions would be negotiated with the appointee.

Moore said he is not expecting the appointee to be anyone other than those persons recommended by the search committee.

"I have said all along we ought to have someone by the first of November," Moore said.

Concurrence with Rich's prediction was difficult to muster among any other board members.

Trustee Margaret Blackshere said discussion at the Wednesday executive session will "undoubtedly" center around the three presidential candidates, but a final decision may not be forthcoming.

"I know we have not really fully discussed our O'Hare interviews," she said. Making a final decision by Thursday might be "rushing it, and I don't want to rush into it," she added.

Asked if the appointee will be one of the three remaining recommended candidates, Blackshere said, "I am supportive of the search committee's job. I think we must go their way."

Board member Richard Haney said picking a president by Thursday "is a bit premature as far as I am concerned."

Haney said his reaction to the news that George C. Christensen has withdrawn as a candidate is "we did have

Illinois draft evader refuses amnesty

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—An Illinois man who fled to Canada to escape the military draft six years ago surrendered Thursday to federal officials and refused President Ford's offer of clemency.

William Meis, 29, strode into the federal building with his wife, Elaine, and chose instead to stand trial for draft evasion, a felony charge punishable by up to five years in prison.

He was quickly ushered into the courtroom of Judge Harlington Wood, Jr., of U.S. District Court where he pleaded innocent. Meis was freed after his father, William Sr. of Decatur, promised to pay $2,000 if his son failed to appear for trial.

"I really expected President Ford to be more realistic about granting amnesty," Meis told newsmen gathered in a lobby three floors below the courtroom. He believes he is the first man to refuse the clemency offer and risk imprisonment.

Matter of taste

NEW YORK (AP)—Baby may not arrive with a silver spoon in his mouth but chances are he's equipped with his very own sweet tooth. While it may not show, it definitely is there, researchers at Monell Chemical Senses Center at the University of Pennsylvania proved recently.

They offered 2-day-old babies a variety of waters — plain, sweet, salty and even sour. The majority preferred the sugar water and drank more of it, vital to us from infancy to old age. It performs two vital functions for us: it acts as a solvent to transport nutrient materials to cells and helps remove waste products.

Goal report needs input, council says

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Graduate Council unanimously passed a resolution Thursday protesting exclusion of input from students, faculty and administrators to the Board of Trustees Staff when drafting a report on SIU's mission and goals.

When contacted Thursday, James Brown, chief of board staff, said no one was excluded from discussing the mission and goals report.

"I have not yet been informed of the protest made by the Graduate Council and do not care to comment on rumors," Brown said.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) reported on mission and goals in a meeting Tuesday, in Chicago. In a morning meeting, John Grenfell, professor at the Meis said the President should have granted unconditional amnesty rather than link the offer of clemency for draft evaders and deserters to alternative service.

"The provision that bothered me the most in Ford's proposal was that you would have to give up some of your constitutional rights. The concept of involuntary servitude without trial is unconscionable," he said.

He said he hoped by standing trial and refusing the clemency offer he could heighten people's awareness of the reasons young men fled the country during the Vietnam War and why they feel they should not be forced to work to gain reentry to the country now.

"The most important thing is that if we truly want to heal the wounds of the past 10 years and bring Americans together again, then we must treat each other with mutual respect. I don't think the earned reentry program does this," he said.

Asked how she felt about her husband's decision, Elaine Meis said: "I'm very apprehensive at this point. I'm afraid it's a bit overwhelming. I admire him for his courage. I support what he is doing, but..." and her voice trailed off in a sob.

Meis, his wife and his attorneys were joined in the assistant U.S. attorney's office by Meis' parents. The meeting was closed to newsmen.

The Meis' were married seven years ago and fled to Canada in 1968 when Meis was ordered to appear for military induction.

They have lived for six years in Montreal, where William works as a youth counselor and his wife as a teacher. The couple have two children, Jamie, 2½, and Marika, nine months.

four. Now we have three." Asked if the appointee will be one of the remaining three, he said, "I would not want to say yes or no because that presumes I have a closed mind."

Donald L. Hastings, Jr., student trustee from Edwardsville, said he had no idea how the board stood as to picking a president by Thursday.

Hastings said Christensen withdrawing from the race did not substantially change the picture as far as he is concerned. Asked if he has a favorite candidate, without naming anyone, he said, "yes, as I'm sure everybody does."

William Norwood, newest member on the board, refused to comment about Rich's prediction except to say, "We want to do it as expeditiously as possible."

He said Christensen withdrawing from the race caused "no change" in his position in the president search.

Chairman Ivan A. Elliott, as well as Harris Rowe, William W. Allen and Harold Fischer, could not be reached for comment.

Meis traveled to Washington earlier this week where he unsuccessfully attempted to meet with Clemency Board officials.

He plans to stay with his parents, who reside in Decatur, until the trial is completed. His wife said she would return with the children to Montreal at the end of the week.

Jazz concerts planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Six "Jazz for a City Evening" concerts are planned — all by jazz artists — in three parks next to Rockefeller Center buildings.

The concerts are produced by Town Hall and presented by Rockefeller Center Inc.

Music, from 4:30 to 6 p.m. on July and August Wednesdays, will be provided by trumpeter Jimmy McPartland's Dixieland band, pianist Mary Lou Williams, trios of pianists Teddy Wilson and Billy Taylor, trumpeter Thad Jones' quintet and trumpeter Max Kaminsky's Dixieland band.

Hiram H. Lesar has been serving as interim SIU president since Derge's resignation in March. He has said he would consider the permanent post if asked by the board.

Recreational complex gets underway

By Edward Husar
Student Writer

After 10 years of planning and preparation, construction finally has begun on the first leg of SIU's new recreation building north of E. Grand.

Completion of the $8.9 million recreational facility will be the result of a 1964 campus referendum in which SIU students voted to approve the planning of a permanent structure which would provide facilities for multi-purpose recreational use.

The construction of the base building is now underway. Money from the Student Welfare and Recreation Fund (SWARF), initiated as a result of the 1964 referendum, will be used for the construction of the building and for the development of several nearby playfields.

The base building will house three basketball courts within one gymnasium, several handball and squash courts, a golf practice area, an olympic-size swimming pool and a scuba storage and service area.

Also to be included in the structure are administrative offices, a public lounge, locker rooms and storage space, and a spectator viewing area.

The facilities of the base building will

Weighty matter

LONDON (AP)—Harold Lever, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Socialist cabinet, is doing the job for nothing.

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is a catch-all office whose holder can be used in any sector of government where extra weight is needed. Lever was appointed as economic adviser to Wilson.

But there is a statutory limit of 19 to the number of cabinet ministers, who are paid 13,000 pounds—around $30,000—a year. And there were already 19.

Wilson was so keen to have Lever in his cabinet, however, that Lever volunteered to do the job with no ministerial salary. All he'll get will be the 4,500 pounds—$10,350—a year paid to ordinary members of Parliament.

Lever won't starve. He is a wealthy man in his own right and is married to a Lebanese heiress.

be available for use possibly as soon as fall, 1977, according to Emil Spees, dean of student life and chairman of the Recreation and Facilities Planning Committee.

Spees said plans have been developed for the construction of possible alternate structures which could be added to the base building. These alternates would provide space for additional gymnasiums, squash and handball courts, a larger golf area, a fencing and exercise area, weight lifting rooms and multi-purpose rooms.

The planning board's programming and facilities subcommittee drafted a letter last week to SIU Interim President Hiram Lesar voicing their confidence that the base building successfully will be completed, Spees said.

The letter also requested an opportunity for the committee to meet with the president and other staff to discuss possible sources of funds, other than SWARF, which could be used to finance the construction of one of the two alternate additions to the Recreation Building, Spees said.

The $8.9 million funded for the development of the recreational facility will be enough to complete the construction of the base building, according to Spees. However, he said, additional monies will be needed to finance the construction of the two alternate structures.

A revised budget for the Recreation Building lists the projected cost of the total building in excess of $13.6 million.

Spees said chances are "very minimal" that both alternates will eventually be added to the base building. But the outlook for the construction of the base and the first of the two alternates is "pretty good," he added.

Several playfields for use in recreational and intramural activities will be developed south of E. Grand during the final stages of the building's construction, Spees said.

The Recreation Building, when completed, will house the offices of men's and women's intramurals and recreation. The facilities of the building will be available for organized intramural activities and recreational groups, as well as for individual use during specified times, Spees said.

Spees said he would like to see the Recreation Building operate on a 24-hour basis, adding that the minimum hours of operation, to be determined by economics and usage, would run at least from 6 a.m. until midnight.

Liquor board coed calls for 2 students

By Dave Iyata
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Two more SIU student representatives should be added to the seven-member Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board, student member Bobbi Tally said Wednesday night. Tally is the only student member of the liquor board.

"The liquor industry in this town is supported and funded by students," Tally told the liquor board. "This board should be expanded to allow more student representation."

In August Student Body President Dennis Sullivan appointed Tally student liquor board representative.

A former student representative and now liquor board member Richard Crowell, said "Students live here, in general, for four years, then leave."

"What I'm thinking of is more the long-term goal," Tally said.

Tally also outlined a consumer complaint process. The procedure will offer a way of filing complaints against liquor establishments, and will make city consideration of the complaints mandatory.

The police, code enforcement and fire departments will be required to investigate complaints and issue citations when necessary.

The Liquor Advisory Board will consider a public hearing after a business receives three citations. If the board recommends license revocation, the business may appeal to the board or the local liquor commission.

"We're talking in terms of an out and out crime, and consumer protection," board member Steve Hoffman said. However, "people are very reluctant, when making a formal complaint, to have their names on part of the public record," he added.

Persons could complain through anonymous phone calls, Police Chief George Kennedy said.

In drafting an ordinance acceptable to the city council, the liquor board must keep existing city ordinances in mind.

City Attorney John Womick said. "You might have a fine ordinance and still be in a vacuum," he said.

In other business, the board discussed requiring liquor establishments to file financial statements when applying for licenses.

"In the short time I've been here I have heard that nationally the liquor industry and other industries are totally controlled by organized crime, and that there's no inkling of organized crime near Carbondale," Kennedy said.

"A financial statement tells what you have and where you got it," Kennedy explained. "I think the city has a right to know who is or isn't involved with organized crime," he said.

Shirley MacLaine, Paul Ehrlich, Margaret Mead may come to SIU

Gary Delsohn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Humanities Council is attempting to bring nationally-known speakers to SIU.

Through Liberal Arts 303, "The Role of the Humanities in a Changing World" and a $10,000 from the President's Fund for Academic Excellence, the council has invited anthropologist Margaret Mead, actress Shirley MacLaine and environmentalist Paul Ehrlich to campus in spring.

"The Humanities Council has roots going back to 1971 when the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) designated SIU as 'encouraged to continue to round out existing programs, particularly in the Humanities,'" according to John Hayward, professor of religious studies and council chairman. Hayward said the council was formulated into its present design in spring of 1973 with 16 faculty members representing five schools and colleges, with two undergraduate students and two graduate students.

"The Humanities Council is essentially a voluntary association of faculty and students with a common concern: to highlight questions of value and purpose in all University studies," Hayward said.

"The Humanities Council is not limited to the few departments which call themselves 'The Humanities.' It is a collection of humanists from many departments who want to know not only what people do, think, feel and make—but why," Hayward continued.

"Much academic creativity sits quietly in the library waiting for someone to read it. We think the University should be a living laboratory experimenting with the values and uses of this learning," Hayward said.

Hayward offered some suggestions to help in the realization of this goal. Faculty and students thinking, speaking and writing on what they most want to know and why, "the self-search approach," he said.

"Groups of two or more faculty and students working on a project of common concern" comprises the "interdisciplinary approach," Hayward explained.

The "research approach gives assistance to faculty and students to secure outside funding for research projects in any aspect of humanistic studies."

"To further these ends, the Humanities Council wants to seek out interested faculty and students, keeping a registry of who is interested," Hayward said.

Anyone interested in the council can contact Marc Herskovitz, Humanities Council staff assistant, at 453-2645, or Hayward at 453-3067.

Rapprochement with Cuba

By Dennis Kraft
Student Writer

There is an air of cautious optimism concerning the future of United States-Cuban relations.

Presently, members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are meeting in Cuba with top leaders of that country. It is hoped that some normalization of relations between our country and Cuba will take place in the not too distant future.

This is a situation long overdue. It is a situation that shouldn't have been necessary, but we have seen a hint of the shortcomings in U.S. foreign policy in recent years.

Although both sides have gone into these talks fairly open minded, each has brought up a chief grievance against the other: the Bay of Pigs invasion on the one hand and the placement of Soviet missiles on the other.

It is time for each side to stop dwelling on the past, and to work on more solid, friendly relations for the future.

There are many advantages to be gained by both the U.S. and Cuba by attaining better relationships.

It has been countless moons since a person in this country could walk down to the corner drug store and say, "Give me a Havana!" There should be no dispute to the fact that no other cigar can match the fineness of a Havana.

The top vacation sports in and close to this country are becoming more crowded and expensive each year. It has been simply criminal to let the beautiful casinos and hotels of Havana go to waste. Think of the fun we could have, and oh yes, the boon to the depressed Cuban economy reopening this hot spot could have.

The price in the U.S. of the old nickel candy bar is being raised to twenty cents. The soaring cost of sugar is partly to blame for this atrocity. With the assistance of experts from our Agriculture Department, the ones who have done such a fine job on these shores, the troubled Cuban sugar cane crop could bear record breaking yields, thus saving us all from disaster.

Through thoughtful and open minded negotiations, all of these things and many more can come to pass.

All that need be accomplished by our government is the simple task (we've got experience here) of keeping the term "friendship" out of perspective.

Major powers cause nuclear proliferation

By Adrienne Kaplan
Student Writer

Any effort to control the proliferation of nuclear arms has been difficult due to the lack of cooperation by the major nuclear powers.

One of the earliest efforts to keep secret the knowledge of nuclear explosions was attempted by the United States, Britain and Canada after World War II. They attempted to put the technology of the atom entirely under United Nations control. This was an honest attempt at control, but it was rejected by the Soviet Union, which was stocking its own nuclear arsenal.

In the meantime, nuclear weapons were multiplying in American and Soviet arsenals. Then the United States came up with another idea—the "Plowshares" program under which America supplied nuclear reactors to 26 countries. The idea behind this program was that the United States would be able to retain control of nuclear technology while supplying reactors for use and sources of energy.

The foil to this control is relatively easy to guess. Technicians and scientists all over the world have learned how to make nuclear weapons.

Dr. Fred Ikle, head of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), says there is only one means of control left. He says the only thing to do now is to control the supply of reactors and other related supplies. Yet, thanks to the United States, these reactors are scattered around the globe.

Proliferation of nuclear arms has been of major concern to the ACDA, and Dr. Ikle has been stressing the fact that this very phenomenon could one day get out of hand and even lead to nuclear war.

The threat of this war centers on a handful of countries who have either not signed or refused to ratify the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty of 1968. Only 83 nations have ratified this treaty, and 23 more have signed without ratifying. These countries and others complain that it's not fair to restrain them if the major nuclear powers don't take effective steps towards controlling their own weapons. Yet, rather than set an example for the smaller nations, the major nuclear powers, including the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada, Britain, France, and China, refuse to cooperate and continue to compete in a power play.

Perhaps Dr. Ikle sums it up the best. He refers to nuclear arms as the great accomplishment of our scientists—and he maintains that "it holds both promise and threat: it can keep alive our civilization and it can destroy it."

CUBAN LIBERATION FRONT FREEDOM FIGHTERS IN EXILE AGAINST GODLESS COMMUNISM

"AND ANOTHER THING—IF THE U.S. RECOGNIZES CUBA WILL HAVE TO GO OUT AND GET A JOB!"

The pardon of Calley

By Jon Kartman
Student Writer

Judge J. Robert Elliott's overturning of former Army Lt. William Calley's My Lai murder conviction once again points up the tragic, yet inevitable conflict of two essential rights: the right of the public to be informed and the right of a person to a free trial. In this case, Judge Elliott rightly decided that Calley had not been accorded due process of law and that pre-trial publicity had denied him the right to a fair trial.

Calley's case, like those of Lee Harvey Oswald, James Earl Ray, Sirhan Sirhan and several others is not simply a case of murder. Wound within the facts of the case is a public, political and emotional issue. In this case it is the Vietnam War.

The simple reporting of the facts of the case, which by their nature had to be reported, is enough to dismiss any charges brought up. Though Calley was convicted of the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians, almost six hundred were killed in the March 1968 slayings. Many people in this country who had heard of the case or had seen the picture of the slain civilians searched for someone to be accountable for the incident—be it the U.S. Government and their foreign policy, the armed forces, President Johnson, the fabric of American society or William Calley.

Bike lanes a solution

By Chris Buciak
Student Writer

A severe parking and traffic situation exists on the SIU campus. There are too many cars and bikes and not enough places to put them. Clearly defined bike paths are sadly lacking, and too many parking permits are issued than are parking places. Parking garages and a few green bike paths are not the solution. A concerted effort of research and development is needed to end this problem. The University of Illinois at Champaign has a system of clearly defined bike paths where only bikes, and not pedestrians or cars, can enter. Nor can the bikes stray out of. Why can't "The Second Jewel of Illinois" do something like this?

But the public disclosures and discussions of the facts of the case did more than ruin Calley's chance at a fair trial. In that discussion, there seemed to be a new examination of the basic reasons of why the U.S. was in Vietnam, and the news media's purpose in existing is to stimulate those kinds of discussions.

Unfortunately, amid this glowing achievement by the American press stands two terrible eyesores.

First, a man has been denied his right to a fair trial by the actions of the news media. This is not the first time this has happened. Newspapers declared that "Sheppard Must Swing!" The trial of Bruno Hauptmann for the killing of the Lindbergh baby could easily be called a circus. Who can forget the hordes of newsmen in Dallas in 1963?

Second, the person or persons who "wasted" those villagers will in the eyes of the law go unpunished. It is of little solace to relatives of the dead that the American citizens were informed instead of the killers being punished.

In the end, a higher purpose may have been served, though at a terrible cost. In this case, it was right for the press to act the way it did and for Calley's conviction to be overturned.

Perhaps some future case will allow the adoptions of a set of guidelines fair to all in the fair trial-free press conflict. Until then, the contestants in this battle should bear in mind that the conflict is between two essential rights, and not between the limits of their respective powers.

The charisma of Governor Dan

By Jerie Jayne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

When friends offered me a free ticket to the Coal Conference Dinner Tuesday night I decided to drop the books and go. Who could refuse a free steak dinner and a look at the charismatic governor of our state?

I had never seen Governor Dan, despite the fact he's done more bar hopping in Carbondale than I have.

I arrived early to find my friends hadn't. I sat in the lobby feeling slightly nervous. I wasn't there on exactly legitimate terms. Looking around the lobby I began to feel slightly out of place. I thought I had made the supreme sacrifice by donning a dress. I didn't know this dinner was supposed to be Cinderella's grand ball. I forgot to wear my evening gown, hairpiece and two tons of makeup. I admittedly looked out of place with so many elites and so few peons.

I was contemplating leaving, when my friends arrived and saved my free meal. We entered the ballroom.

Imagine if you can, a dimly lit Student Center Ballroom full of tastefully decorated banquet tables.

Evaluate CIA honestly

To the Daily Egyptian:

I wish to have an opportunity for rebuttal. The editorial against CIA and FBI recruitment tried to defend individual freedom in Chile while completely ignoring its erosion at SIU (remember the compulsory fees).

Four student organizations, some of them supported by compulsory fees, have protested the presence of the CIA and FBI on campus. "C.I.A. F.B.I. OFF CAMPUS," read one sign. I think this protest was a bold attempt at censorship, which is painfully ironic considering that one of the sponsors was the Committee to Defend the Right to Speak.

Evidently, members of these groups fear the establishment of a secret police in the US. This is again ironic since one of the sponsors, the Young Workers Liberation League is an arm of the Communist Party-USA whose parent in the Soviet Union practically invented, developed and refined the trade of secret policing. We can even thank the Soviet Union, Stalin and Beria for giving it a bad name.

Furthermore, consider the "approved" analysis of the Chilean situation published in the Soviet Press, the journal World Marxist Review, for instance. The Communists admit to a number of errors:

1. The counter-revolutionary press, for example, the paper El Mercurio, was not silenced quickly

At the front of the room on the left hung a huge white sign with "ILLINOIS COAL 2" written on it. In the center was the SIU insignia, a round sign encircling some building in the center I've never seen before. Another huge sign loomed to the right. "MINES TO MARKET: THE CHALLENGE." Not bad at all for a coal dinner.

People were buzzing around like flies trying to find seats near the front. The tables for the University and state officials were placed perpendicular in front of us so we could gaze at them in all of their glory. Our sorority sisters and fraternity brothers were there in what had to be the latest of fall fashions. Yes, we were under the pretense that we were prepared to meet the governor.

A middle-aged couple sat across the table from us. They were very friendly and full of conversation. At the beginning of conversation the gentleman remarked, "I wonder how many here are free-loading tonight."

I just kind of shrunk in my chair and tried to look innocent. "Yea, I wonder how many people are doing that," I said.

The meal came before anyone discovered my secret. I have only one thing to say about the meal. If the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, enough. 2. The Allende government moved too slowly politically and economically to prevent the counter-revolution from preparing its forces. 3. The nationalization of private business without compensation was not speedy enough. 4. The Chilean Communists failed in creating enough grass roots support from workers and peasants which could act as an extra legal power apparatus under Communist control. 5. The seizures of farms and some factories by Maoists and Trotskysts antagonized potential sympathizers and aroused reactionary elements. 6. Communist penetration of the armed forces was not sufficient to stop the coup by the higher military brass.

I am not prepared to defend the CIA. I think that its activities can be better done by private organizations—such as INCA, established in New Orleans around 1960. The CIA certainly is a tax burden and a source of embarrassment to many Americans. But I do have an interpretation: The youthful revolutionaries are trying to shift the blame for the failures of their elders onto the CIA.

Whatever the case may be, the CIA can only be evaluated honestly within the overall political context.

Political endorsements needed

To the Daily Egyptian:

That the Daily Egyptian has a policy review board comes as no surprise. That this board has powers of censorship (7 Sept. DE, p.8), while no surprise, is a deeply troubling issue, especially in the light of John Shely's statement that, "The University right now cannot afford to start building a list of influential enemies."

As a tax supported entity, the DE has not only the Constitutional right to make political endorsements, but the moral obligation to do so. If in the course of its reporting duties the DE discovered some "influential enemy" engaging in miscreant behavior, its tax supported status would oblige it to make public such fact, even if such a move be not exactly politic.

Few public educational institutions in the United States are so sophomoric as to engage in censorship of their newspapers, whether they be institution affiliated or not. While SIU needs the money that politicians seem so unwilling to cough up unless it is in their benefit (i.e., re-election), SIU also needs a sense of participating in quality education. That those goals may here conflict might oblige a consideration of more moral concerns, such as the import of the Constitution, than most politicians are willing to engage.

We therefore challenge the Daily Egyptian to engage in quality education, to disallow the concerns of politicians, to exercise the freedom of the press, and to endorse whatever political candidates they feel are worth endorsing.

Unity Point referendum

To the Daily Egyptian:

Taxes, rising cost, inflation and lack of impacton funds cause one to think twice in voting October 5, the date of the Unity Point School District Referendum for needed classrooms. One can appreciate the sacrifice demanded to provide for unquestionable needs. On the other hand, classroom overcrowding of 37 in some rooms, library, art, music and audio-visual areas housed in the hallway are urgent problems, which are facts called to attention by a two-year study of the school board.

Much of school enrollment is transient; some university housing constituents are not property owners; senior citizens may find it difficult to help with non-involved generational needs. On the other hand, in the past, citizens have provided well for our present setting and we reap this inherited setting only to be stewards for the future children in Unity Point. University housing voters might do well to vote, with others as their commitment. Register now!

Prosperous property owners will be hardest hit, only knowing that Unity Point School is bettered because of their citizenship.

Taxes are difficult to pay, and one cannot rationalize his own responsibility because impacton funds are unavailable. If there is another avenue to build classrooms other than passing the October 5 Bond issue, the taxpayer would be greatly relieved. On the other hand, there isn't! The real issue is that a $30,000 property owner will pay $40.50 yearly for this needed school addition. Hesitation?...yes! Deprivation to our children...no! The $40.50 will be difficult to pay....on the other hand? Vote on October 5! (eligible if lived in Unity Point School District 28 days and registered in Murphysboro).

Barbara Atkinson

Unity Point School District

then let's not be sexist about it. You can get a woman on the same terms. Governor Dan paid for our steak dinner with all the trimmings. I was half in love with him before I saw him.

I hadn't even finished my meal before my partner on the left was jabbing me in the elbow.

"Pssst, look to the left," he said.

I turned to see Governor Dan shaking hands with the people behind me. He was table hopping as well as he bar hopped. I was really going to see him.

The whole thing was beginning to seem like a dream. I was there, but I wasn't. I mean I didn't belong there. This wasn't my game. The worst part was, as he came closer and closer I became less cynical.

Images were hopping into my head. There were a lot of Blacks in the room, something you wouldn't see if Ogilvie were governor.

As he greeted our section of the table, he smiled and extended his long arms around the shoulders of the couple across the table from us.

"You know," he said to the gent. "I really envy you who you're sitting across the table from. He winked at the male sitting next to me and said, "And I'm not talking about you either. I'm talking about those lovely young ladies next to you."

That did it. I blushed. Governor Dan called me lovely. I just sat there woefully like some love struck idiot staring and smiling at him. Now I love the meaning of the word "charisma". If I was 18 years younger, he would have picked me up and kissed me.

I watched Governor Dan go around the room. His steel blue eyes twinkled and his laugh filled the room with a light air. He was working his most potent political magic — charisma.

He joked playfully with the audience for about fifteen minutes. He even had us believing he was going to read a 25-page speech. He pardoned us at 9:00 p.m. It was time all the Cinderellas and Prince Charmings to go home. But, you know, if there had been a polling precinct outside the ballroom door, I would have voted for him.

Letters to the Daily Egyptian

The Daily Egyptian welcomes expression of opinions from all members of the University community. Writers are requested to be concise and, in the event the subject has a time element, to bring letters to the Daily Egyptian newsroom as early in the day as possible. The editors reserve the right to condense letters to permit a larger variety of opinions, to correct minor typographical and grammatical errors, and to edit out material that is considered libelous or in bad taste. Letters should be typed, double spaced, and accompanied by the full address and signature of the writer.

Student Senator Bragg accuses Egyptian

To the Daily Egyptian:

As a Student Senator who takes his job with a certain degree of seriousness, I feel that I can no longer sit back and by my silence condone the weekly trivial, tedious personal attacks that take place in this paper.

I have been a religious critic of Student Body President Dennis Sullivan and Daily Egyptian writer Diane Solberg. I have made every attempt to be constructive and honest in my criticisms. I have told President Sullivan that I did not approve of his "Mad Bomber" sign in the Student Government (the disapproval being one of taste rather than principle), and I talked personally with Student Editor Jeff Jouett about my concern with Solberg's frequent misquotations and questionable paraphrasing. In both cases, I hoped to remedy situations rather than hurl accusing rhetoric.

I have demanded that Student Body Vice-President Robert Seely proclaim the resolution naming "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" the Senate theme song and Diane Solberg as mascot as "frivolous and dilatory", a power granted to him in the rules of procedure, in an attempt to end this series of slander and atrocities.

It seems that the over-used cliché "let's get our shit together" is quickly beginning to show that the young of today are as hypocritical and bigoted as the institutions we are trying to change. Acquiring a student editor for our newspaper has gotten us nowhere but farther apart than we were before. The idealists in the Senate are too preoccupied with clever rhetoric and accusations to get together and put our hopes of unity and reform into effect.

What I'm saying, in short, is this: If you've got something constructive to say, say it. If not, keep your mouth shut. The people who are trying to get something done are having enough trouble without a few immature people who are trying to be cute making fools out of the rest of us.

Committee to study students' problems

A committee is being formed by administrators to study architectural barriers for disabled students as a result of Wheelchair Action demands presented last week to Bruce Swinburne, dean of student affairs.

Wheelchair Action, a group of 20 disabled students, demanded easier access to campus buildings, orientation programs, more scholarships and the elimination of a graduate rehabilitation course requiring mandatory acquaintance with a disabled student.

Michael Winter, Wheelchair Action President, said Hollis E. Merritt, assistant to the president, and Swinburne will form the committee when they get a more detailed list of building barriers.

Winter said he spoke to Guy A. Renzaglia, director of the Rehabilitation Institute, about changing the requirements for the course.

"I'm pretty satisfied. He's going to change the requirement of making graduate students get acquainted with a disabled student," he said.

Winter plans to speak to Joseph N. Goodman, acting director of the SIU Foundation, Monday to talk about more academic scholarships for students.

"The Foundation solicits a leaflet with a picture of a disabled student, but there is no money given directly for disabled students," Winter said.

Dance program will be moving

By Tim Hastings
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Seven original solos will be presented in "Dances From the Summer," Monday and Tuesday.

The seven solos are environmental dances designed to be executed in specific settings both indoors and out.

The Student Center escalators, a courtyard at the Faner building, and a neck of the woods near Lake-on-the-Campus, are of a few of the sites.

The dances are choreographed and performed by students from the Life Dance Environment Workshop taught summer quarter.

The workshop was originated and taught by Lonny Gordon, assistant professor of theater. The workshop has been offered for two summers.

The choreography must harmonize with the setting Gordon said. The shapes of the movement should either enhance or contrast the shape and design of the location.

For example, a dance set near trees might inspire the dancer to make graceful, billowing movements like the tree branches. Douglas Bush does his dance in the halls of the Neckers Building. Bush said his movements were inspired by the color of the building and the texture of its bricks, beams and glass.

"The dance couldn't be done anywhere else but at Neckers," Bush said.

Bush said he isn't self-conscious about dancing in such a public place. In fact, he thinks of the passersby as a part of the dance.

Other performers are Belinda Engram, Susan Hickey, Maura Junius, Patrick McHale, Robin Miles and Patti Tedrow.

If either the Monday or Tuesday night performance should be rained out, "Dances From the Summer" will be rescheduled for Wednesday night. Although there is no admission charge, a voluntary donation will be requested.

Design class to brave Current River on rafts

By Dan Ward
Student Writer

Would you take a three-day cruise down a fast river on a reed raft?

If you are in Larry Busch's Design 201 class, you may be doing that this weekend. If not reeds, your raft may be made of styrofoam, old lumber or milk jugs. In fact any material can be used if the builder keeps efficiency in mind.

The design students were asked to plan and build an entire support system for a 35 to 40-mile trip down the Current River in Missouri. The system is to include food, shelter and a craft of some kind.

"There is a necessity for teamwork," said Busch. "The students learn teamwork and how to make creative use of 'what you've got'."

This trip is the fifth of its kind in recent years. Busch described its predecessors as "moderately famous."

"We get along great with the rangers and local people. We've only had a few craft that haven't made it, and of course we clean up whatever disintegrates."

"It's remarkable that so many make it. I'd say that 99 per cent of them have made it in the past," Busch added.

Busch stressed that the raft trip will not all be fun and games.

"There are times when you are cold and hungry and wet and don't know where you are, but when it's over you say, 'Wow! That was great!'"

"Of course, this is a design class. General efficiency and a novel use of materials are paramount. We assign custom projects for those who don't go."

Successful crafts made by design students last year included a reed kayak, a raft made of styrofoam and a raft supported by 80 milk jugs. The milk jug raft cost the students 85 cents to make, Busch recalled.

Busch's adventurers will leave for Missouri at 8 a.m. Friday from the Design Department complex. Their embarkation point is Ivan Buren, Mo., and those whose craft survive the river will be picked up at Donphan.

DEERE and COMPANY, Moline, IL: SCHEDULE No. 1: Openings for BS Degree in Marketing Business or related.

Territory or Area Managers in sales, service and parts. To represent the Company in either Ag, Industrial or consumer Products by traveling within an area and establish, maintain and develop an aggressive and efficient dealer organization.

Dealer Management Representative. Assist the dealer in interpreting financial data and training of accounting personnel. Assist the dealer with implementation of new accounting practices and with the development of new management techniques.

Financial Services Representative - Markets John Deere Financial Plan to Agricultural, Industrial and Consumer Products dealers. Provides assistance to dealers with insurance problems and retail financial problems. Acts as liaison between the dealer, branch or region and John Deere Financial Services.

SCHEDULE No. 2: Openings for BS Engineering, Accounting, Business or Manufacturing related.

Product Engineers are the "idea" men in the John Deere organization. Their projects range from minor refinements of existing products to total new design of a radically new product concept. Once these ideas are converted into prototype hardware, they must be tested in simulated and actual field conditions to prove the performance, durability, and reliability.

Manufacturing Engineers turn the design engineer's "brain child" into a reality in a manner that will allow it to be mass produced in sufficient quantities to meet sales demands and at a cost that will allow us to economically sell the product at a competitive price. Divisions within manufacturing engineering include: process and tool, incentive and standards, plant engineering and mechanical services. Materials Engineers at John Deere work in these broad areas, Applied Mechanics, Chemical, Foundry, Metallurgical, Standards, and Welding and Manufacturing processes. Work may involve development of information on properties of materials, trouble shooting production processes in factories, challenges in foundry technology, consultant metallurgist on metal application and non-destructive test methods, and providing engineering management decisions in the areas of eng., manufacturing and purchasing.

Business Systems Departments at the units have computer terminals in hook up with central computers at Deere and Company. Computer Programmers work in support areas for these facilities. Promotion to an Analyst position exists for a person who demonstrates ability and motivation during the training he receives as a Programmer.

Internal Auditing Staffs examine the accounts of the individual manufacturing and marketing units to verify compliance with accepted accounting procedures and with Company accounting policies. Also conduct operational audits to evaluate performance within different functional areas of the operating units.

'Jack and Jill' play enjoyable

By Tim Hastings
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A talented and energetic cast make the adult version of Jack and Jill an enjoyable show.

The show will be playing at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is $1. For reservations call 453-2291 between 1 and 4 p.m. weekdays.

All the actors in the Reader's Theater production, "Everything You Have Always Wanted to Know About Jack and Jill," can move and read well.

With these abilities they come out on top of the multi-media show running this weekend in the Calipre Stage.

Judy Yordon, who compiled and directed the show, has expanded the plot of Mother Goose's "Jack and Jill." In the new version, Jack and Jill fall in love, marry, and even have a child.

The expansion goes deeper. Jack and Jill become symbols of all young couples. The script borders on the allegorical by suggesting that Jack and Jill are a modern version of Adam and Eve, who experienced a similar fall from grace.

Once Jack and Jill are established as symbols, the play turns into a discussion of changing sex roles and human relationships in general.

In a satirical poem, "Woman" we find out that Jack is a charter chauvinist. Wife Jill mistakenly thinks having a baby will save their shaky marriage.

It is easy to tell that Andrew Smith and Edie Reese, who play Jack and Jill, love to act. They have an urge to communicate that lights up their faces.

However, Smith is limited by playing a character whose emotions never change.

Yordon's version, Jack is hyper-sensitive and fearful. He is afraid of going up the hill, afraid that his love of Jill is not real, and he is afraid of becoming a father.

Linder gives a memorable portrayal of a worm. Linder combines the speech pattern of Grandfather Clock with a serpentine lisp to create the worm's voice.

As a lonely child without any playmates, Roberta Deason comes through as "adorably pitiful" in the Sandy Duncan fashion.

A Review

This monotonous emotional state is a flaw in Yordon's script. It becomes tiring to watch Smith trapped in this constant mood of tension.

Yordon has met the challenge of directing a show that contains so many transitions from straight dialogue to group poetry readings. She keeps both cast and the audience alert by sending the chorus through a circus full of movement and clever business.

A highlight of Yordon's staging is a poetic conversation between a personified knife and a cut. Half the chorus members pantomime the knife and the rest pantomime the cut as they recite the poem.

With his very flexible voice, Louis

BAC, APA strive to lift womanhood

By Pam Black
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Black Affairs Council in conjunction with Alpha Phi Alpha will sponsor the third annual Miss Ebonyess Pageant, Oct. 27, in the Student Center according to Charles Johnson, acting chairman of the pageant.

"The purpose of the pageant is to uplift black womanhood at Southern Illinois University," Johnson said. Over 50 applications were accepted by the two groups before applications were closed Sept. 27, he said. Any woman was eligible to enter the contest, Johnson said.

After the first interview with judges who asked questions on various topics, 20 women were left to vie for the title, he said. The women are judged on their knowledge and talent according to Johnson. During the final judging, women will be judged on their ability to react under pressure of lights and an audience, Johnson said. One of the main questions the contestants are asked is "Why do you want to be Miss Ebonyess?" he said.

Students and faculty members have volunteered to act as judges, Johnson said. The five judges are Bontia Pope, graduate student, psychology; Helen Ellison, staff assistant at Grinnell Hall; Sarah Smith, John Holmes, academic advisor, Communications and Fine Arts; and Beverley Cox.

"Miss Ebonyess serves as the black representative of campus functions," said Carl Flowers, Alpha Phi Alpha member. This is the main responsibility of Miss Ebonyess, Flowers said. A committee is looking into the possibilities of offering Miss Ebonyess a scholarship this year, he said.

The theme of the pageant is "The Black Woman, Pride of our Existence, Threshold of our Lives," Johnson said.

A cocktail party will be held Oct.

13 for the contestants, Johnson said. The purpose of the cocktail party is for the judges to see how the participants react in a social and informal atmosphere, he said.

Johnson said he hopes to have a float for the contestants in this year's homecoming parade.

The 20 semi-finalists will participate in a talent presentation Oct. 18 to 20, Johnson said. The ten finalists will be selected at the presentation, but will not be announced until the evening of the pageant, he said.

Following the Saturday evening pageant, a dance will be held. The rock group "Heart" from Mt. Vernon will provide entertainment during the dance and also during intermission of the pageant, he said.

The singing group "The Tools of Pleasure" will also provide entertainment, he added.

The Oct. 27 pageant will be televised on Carbondale Cable 7.

J-Board panels may reduce membership

By Lenore Sobota
Student Writer

The judicial boards on East Campus may be reduced to seven members each because of a lack of student interest.

Will Travelstead, assistant dean of student life, said a "possibility" of a cutback in the size of the nine-man panels exists because "there are not enough students to man the number of panels we need. We need at least two separate panels at East Campus."

Last week a full session of hearings had to be canceled because there were not enough J-Board members present to constitute a quorum.

The problem is not new to East Campus. Last year the J-Board, operating with three panels, had to cancel several hearings, Travelstead recalled.

The J-Boards hear cases involving violations of the Code of Student Conduct and can take disciplinary action ranging from a verbal reprimand to expulsion from the living area.

Carl Harris, East Campus coordinator, has expressed concern over this lack of participation by students.

"If we get no support or interest from the students," Harris said, "other means must be found" to maintain an atmosphere conducive to learning.

"I don't know what the problem is over here. It is in the best interest of the students to participate. This is the sixth week of school and we still do not have a viable judicial board on East Campus. If this doesn't change, something has to be done."

"There are only two other options open, pure administrative action or a combination of one to three students sitting on a panel with administrators. This is not what I want to do," said Harris.

Neither Travelstead nor Tom Campbell, East Campus J-Board adviser, feel the student judicial system on East Campus will have to be eliminated. Travelstead said if the reduction of the number of J-Board members did not solve the problem adequately, Thompson Point J-Board members could be utilized.

Presently there are 10 new members on the East Campus J-Board and 10 who returned from last year, according to Campbell. When the cases begin to mount up later in the year, more panels will be needed.

"Right now we can run it with the people I have, but we are at just the bare minimum. We have enough that we can run the system, but it's not too smooth," said Campbell.

Thompson Point is not having the same difficulty in finding students to serve on its J-Board. George Jones, Thompson Point J-Board adviser, said he presently has 23 people serving on the J-Board. There will be two nine-man panels with five people serving as alternates.

Nancy Harris, Thompson Point

coordinator, said the Thompson Point J-Board has received good support from the residents and from the housing staff.

George (Jones) sent applications to the SRAs and RHCs to give to students who were interested in serving on the J-Boards and this has helped a lot," she said.

Campbell said informing the residents about the J-Board was his biggest problem. Thompson Point has a public address system in the dining hall which was used to let residents know volunteers were needed, Campbell said.

"I think they [the East Campus residents] don't know about it. I had to rely on flyers and the East Side Story," Campbell said.

Thompson Point has 1,200 residents while East Campus has in excess of 3,000. "Thompson Point residents are closer together," Campbell said, "and word travels fast."

To become a member of the judicial board area residents must fill out an application and then be interviewed by a committee consisting of a representative of the resident hall staff, the student president of the House Executive Council or his designee, the area judicial board adviser, and the secretary for the committee.

Campbell does not think the interviewing process is a major problem in getting volunteers. "The interview is really no big thing. It only takes 15-20 minutes. It is just part of the application process," he said.

Until last year, J-Board members at Thompson Point were elected from the residence halls. Last fall both systems were changed to the application-interview process to provide for more effective screening.

Guitar wizards

Kottke, Lang and Fahey

By M.C. Jolls
Student Writer

"Takoma Records is widely ignored as a freckle on the soft white underbelly of the record business. Intrepid and enterprising, this indigestible little company has an unblemished record. The unblemished record can be seen in its glass case at the Takoma archives between the hours of 6 midnight and 12."

This is John Fahey's curious description of his own record company, the same unknown company that prompted Leo Kottke, a good friend of Fahey's, to commercial awareness.

Leo Kottke is a name familiar to most contemporary music fans in the Midwest. He plays six and 12 string acoustic guitar, and plays it better than most. Appropriately, Fahey also plays guitar, and along with Peter Lang, a third friend who also plucks steel strings, the three wizards have released an album called, "Leo Kottke-Peter Lang-John Fahey."

Under the obscure Takoma label, the album acts as a promotional disc for the great unwashed. It's a classic for avid fans, and an accomplished collection of guitar music.

"Kottke-Lang-Fahey" is divided into three sections, with each artist performing four cuts. There is no double tracking, and no other instrumentation or vocals. The album is electrically recorded, producing incredibly clear tones and a pure hollowess not normally captured by stereo.

Kottke opens up the album with a rendition of "Cripple Creek," a song he later did on his well known "Mudlark" album. All of Kottke's performances on the "Kottke-Lang-Fahey" LP are previously unreleased recordings of 1968. Yet, he's sharper than ever, exploding with strong riffs, sweet harmonics and strumming with the electrifying intensity that has become his unmistakable characteristic.

Following "Cripple Creek" is "Ice Miner," another song which was redone on the "Mudlark" album. "Ice Miner" is a soft and pleasant melody inspired by Kottke's childhood observations of an ice mine in Big Lake, Minn.

Finishing his cuts on "Kottke-Lang-Fahey" are "Red and White" and "Anyway." "Red and White" is an example of the expeditious talent Kottke possesses for plucking the strings. The dexterity and quickness in his right hand is phenomenal, which sometimes becomes only a blur as witnessed in his concerts. With "Anyway," Kottke produces the "crying sound" that can emerge from string vibrations. A mournful little piece, "Anyway" lies comfortably in the tradition of a Kottke blues.

Other than being a Minneapolis resident, like Kottke, not much is known of Peter Lang. Lang describes himself in this fashion: BORN: Minneapolis, Minn. 1948 to sturdy immigrant stock (3rd generation). WEIGHT: 223. HAIR: Vanishing. HEIGHT: 5-feet 11 inches. EYES: Green. VIRTUES: Never had the mumps, shows regularly. LAST PROJECT ATTEMPTED: 30 pushups for Young Athletes for Christ.

Aside from these obscure facts of Peter Lang, his music speaks sweet and pure. Interestingly enough, Lang seems to fit as a go-between of the other two musicians. Using the virtuosity of Leo Kottke and the methodicalness of John Fahey, he combines the two styles to produce his own compositions. Even the placement of his songs on the album, between Kottke's and Fahey's, assumes that he is a student of both artists.

"St. Charles Shuffle" and "As I Lay Sleeping" fit into the Kottke gender, while "When Kings Come Home" and "Thoth Song" are definitely of Fahey's nature. Perhaps Lang's "When Kings Come Home" is his most memorable work. It is a beautiful escaping melody that drifts over echoing vibrations and gently embeds itself into the soul. His adaptness for either style is outstanding.

Blues researcher, turtle connoisseur and premiere fundamentalist of guitar variations John Fahey remains a padrone. Beginning with several obscure 78s for the Fonotone label, and the storied 95-copy release of his first album "Blind Joe Death" (1959), Fahey's mastery of classical, folk and blues guitar styles, and his seemingly effortless virtuosity places him in the selected category of guitar legends.

"On the Sunny Side of the Ocean" is characteristic of the style exhibited on his "America" album. The music is continual with no pauses. One basic rhythm melody underlies a constant, while counterpoint is employed on top and below. This is the most characteristic key to Fahey's compositions.

A soft simple mellow tune is the basis for "Sun Flower River Blues," the second cut by Fahey. Intriguingly, Fahey works around the main melody, imposing other styles with delicate finger work. "Revolt of the Dyke Brigade" works much in the same pattern.

Fahey's introduction to the guitar came at the age of 14 when some of his friends acquired guitars and began to experiment.

From rags to obscurity, Fahey generates his most illusive style with "In Christ There is No East or West." An adaptation of an Episcopalian hymn arranged by Fahey, "In Christ..." expressively and appropriately ends the album.

What "Kottke-Lang-Fahey" will do on the record charts requires no bold prediction—it will go nowhere. But by using Leo Kottke's name, the album gives fresh exposure to rookie Peter Lang, and ironically, new paths to the Master. If anything, it is hoped that the new Takoma release vibrates some new members into the fascinating guitar world of either Leo Kottke, Peter Lang, or John Fahey.

Voters face school bond issue

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A bond issue referendum in the Unity Point School district calling for a 27 cent tax increase per $100 assessed valuation will come before voters Saturday.

The referendum will decide whether a learning resource center and two classrooms will be added to the Unity Point School. Luther Deniston, president of the Unity Point Board of Education, said the last referendum was in 1966.

The Unity Point school is located south of Carbondale on U.S. 51 and serves children from Southern Hills and Evergreen Terrace.

James Patton, district superintendent, is optimistic about the referendum. He feels the district has a definite immediate need.

According to a release issued by school officials, the school library is located in the hallway. Patton said some classes have almost 40 students.

The release said because of enrollment and construction cost increases, it is necessary to build the addition now to reduce "enrollment pressure," meet state teaching requirements, and the construction costs in two years when the addition should be ready for use.

The 27-cent increase, according to the release, could be less if the district sells bonds for less than seven per cent interest but cannot be more because of state law. The tax will cover total cost of the expansion estimated to be a maximum of $320,000 over a 20-year period.

The polls, located at the Unity Point school, will be open from noon to 7 p.m.

Better Ways head reacts to requests

By Jerie Jayne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Chris Ervin, president of Better Ways, a group of 20 disabled and non-disabled students, gave her reactions to the demands given to the administration last week by Wheelchair Action.

Wheelchair Action demanded easier access to campus buildings, orientation programs, more scholarships for disabled students and the elimination of Rehabilitation 591, a graduate course requiring students to acquaint themselves with a disabled student.

"We have not talked. Our groups are entirely separate. I think Better Ways is more moderate," she said. "We're more concerned with interaction and awareness of disabled students. We're trying to put the human aspect into it," she said.

Ervin agreed several buildings are inaccessible to students, but in most cases it is not feasible to put in elevators.

"The old buildings were built before the disabled were allowed to come out of the closets. If a disabled student can't get to a class, they should move the class," she said.

She said some buildings should be corrected. The group is in favor of installing an elevator in Health Service and making computers in Faner accessible to disabled students, she said.

Ervin said she will observe the rehabilitation course before she makes a decision.

"I'm not going to make a

Ervin favors more academic scholarships for disabled students.

"If you work at it, money can be found anywhere. But there are not enough academic scholarships. Most of them are based on income," she said.

Design names new teacher

K. James Ferguson, director of interior design for the Bank Building and Equipment Corporation of America, was recently appointed an adjunct professor in SIU's Interior Design Department.

Department Chairman Paul Lougeay said Ferguson received the appointment "as a result of his previous personal and professional contributions to SIU and the Department of Interior Design."

According to Lougeay, Ferguson has conducted an intermediate interior design course every spring at SIU for the past three years. The course is based upon the designing of commercial and public buildings.

Ferguson, who works in St. Louis, visits the campus periodically to present a building design problem to the class.

Students are given the floor plan and elevations of a bank building and are asked to plan and locate offices, teller windows, bookkeeping departments, internal and external communication systems, accounting systems and public facilities.

Ferguson then critiques and comments on their solutions.

Austria's music is tops, says returned professor

By Debbie Drew
Student Writer

Dan O. McClary, an SIU professor of microbiology, believes Austria is "the greatest cultural center in the world as far as music is concerned." McClary stayed two weeks in Vienna, Austria, where he attended an international symposium on the biology of yeasts. He said he spent a week "fooling around," traveling and sight-seeing in Austria.

"They are very proud of their music," McClary said. He said symphony concerts were performed twice a week in the courtyard of the city hall, and light classical music was played in the city park. Austria hosts many music festivals for high school bands from the U.S., McClary said.

"Of course, they're proud of their concert halls and their opera which they're famous for," McClary said. "They are a highly cultured people, especially in regards to fine arts," McClary commented. "Every building is covered with statues and monuments. Everything is covered with gold. In the cathedrals you see crucifixes plated with 24 karat gold."

McClary says he thinks religion is important to the Austrians as indicated by the number of churches. He said that St. Stephen's, a cathedral at the center of the city, is the most important cathedral in Vienna.

"I went to my first Catholic mass mainly because they were going to perform Haydn compositions," McClary said. "They had a stringed orchestra and a choir. The chanting and the religious ceremonies were incidental. I think most of the people came to hear the music."

McClary believes Austria's political policy of neutrality encouraged many international meetings to be held in Austria. He concluded that the country was benefited economically and politically by its neutral position.

McClary described the people as friendly and helpful. He said their dress was similar to Americans and some men had long hair.

"It was hard to get a glass of water in the restaurants though," McClary said. "The Viennese do not drink water with their meals. They drink wine or beer."

During the symposium McClary participated in a panel discussion on the yeast cell cycle. The chairman of the panel, John R. Pringle, had invited McClary to attend the conference.

Goulet in concert for Parents Day

Robert Goulet will appear in concert at the SIU Arena at 8 p.m. Saturday highlighting Parents Day 1974.

He will perform on the circular stage in the center of the Arena. The 24 piece Ralph Sharron orchestra will accompany Goulet. Comedian Ronnie Schell will also perform. Schell formerly played "Duke" in the television series, "Gomer Pyle."

Goulet's role as Sir Lancelot in the Broadway musical "Camelot" launched his career. Since then, the Canadian singer has appeared in several other musicals on television and nightclubs across the country.

Senate bill calls for more racks

In action at the Student Senate meeting Wednesday night the senate approved a bill introduced by David Stevens to urge the campus facility departments to provide more bike racks on campus.

Stevens said that anyone who has walked out of the north door of the Student Center "realizes that that is a mess."

He added that blind students are "going to kill themselves."

Stevens urged immediate action on the bill in order to solve the growing problem of bikes illegally parked because there are not enough bike racks.

The senate voted to pass the bill and sent it to a committee to make specific recommendations to campus officials.

Tickets will be on sale until 4 p.m. Saturday at the Student Center Ticket Office or at the door until Saturday night. Phone reservations can be made by calling the Arena Special Events Ticket Office, 453-5321. Ticket prices for the general public are $4, $6 and $5.50. Tickets for SIU students cost $4, $4.50, and $5.

Energy shortage generates mail

NEW YORK (AP)—The energy crisis is fueling a return to the era of written communication.

That's the view of Harry J. Cooper, executive director of the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers. He said that the rising cost of gasoline is keeping social visits to a minimum and leading to a renaissance in communications.

"We can see the trend emerging because of the increase in popularity of friendship cards," Cooper said. "These all-occasion cards afford space for personal messages.

SIU services plan assistance

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

When the freezing rain, slushy streets and sidewalks and bitter cold winds come with the winter months, handicapped students at SIU may find it a little easier to get to class than in past years.

Mike Ryan, chairman of the Student Health Advisory Commission, said his organization and Specialized Student Services are working on a program that will assist handicapped students in getting to class during the "bad weather months."

"This will be a volunteer program that will be concentrated in the dorms," explained Ryan. "Most of the handicapped students are located in Thompson Point dorms or the Student Baptist Center. We hope to get students from these areas to volunteer a couple hours a week of their time to assist handicapped students in getting to class."

He said this could be done by giving a student confined to a wheel chair a push or a ride. If students will offer to assist a handicapped person when both are going in the same general area it would be great, Ryan added.

Ryan made it a point to mention that handicapped students are very independent according to what he has witnessed and said the two organizations are not trying to "pull anything over the eyes of the handicapped students. We realize they have a difficult time getting to class during the bad weather and we just want to be of some help."

Once they get some volunteers, Ryan said they hope to make a list of people the handicapped students could call on if they need some assistance getting to class.

Mayor convicted

BROOKLYN, Ill. (AP)—This small Southern Illinois village learned Thursday from the county prosecutor it no longer has a mayor.

State's Atty. Robert Rice told the board of trustees that Mayor George Thomas, recently lionized by a national news magazine for his efforts against crime, automatically lost the post last Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to federal extortion charges.

Mayor since 1971, Thomas said he took $4,000 in kickbacks from contractors who built a municipal sewer project.

Mace said the trustees will have to appoint someone else.

Jan Kuse, a member of Student Health Advisory Commission working on the program, said there are a lot of possibilities they are working on.

"We've been trying to get feedback from people who have ideas that could be used. So far things have been suggested like putting sand on sidewalks, chains on the tires of wheelchairs and giving rides in cars or vans."

She said they are going to ask handicapped students on campus what they have done in the past. However she already had an idea what most of them do.

"When the weather is bad most of them don't go to class. Even when it rains many of them will stay home and if it rains for several days they miss a lot of class."

Kuse is an attendant for a handicapped student. "Most of the time when they miss class we try and find out what they have missed."

Kuse said the organizations are planning on having the program in operation by the time the winter weather arrives and are hoping most of the handicapped students on Thompson Point and in the Baptist Center will take advantage of it.

"They should appreciate the program because even students who are not handicapped would like a ride to class during bad weather," Kuse said.

Dancers' performances show precision, rapport

By Deborah Singer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Moving sculptures created by starkly beautiful figures surrounded with sound and enhanced through lights. This was the performance by the Viola Farber Dance Company Wednesday evening in Shryock Auditorium.

The 11-member company at times projected the energy of a group twice its size. Seeming possessed, they moved from patterns of frenzied activity to softly weaving shapes engaging one or two bodies in lyric motion. Constantly separating, only to join together again creating a new form more arresting than the one before.

Under the direction of Viola Farber, the company works together as an entity. Larry Clark, a three-year veteran of the Farber Company said, "Viola is just beautiful to work with."

And the company that Farber has molded with her care and compassion works beautifully for her. Executing her most complex choreography with the precision of finely tuned machines, the rapport between dancers is an almost tangible object.

Communion is essential between dancers. They must be so acutely aware of each other that a mere change in breath rhythm becomes the cue for a movement.

This is especially important in Farber's work because the movement and pattern shapes become so involved. Although they

Moving sculptures

Anne Koren and Ande Peck of the Viola Farber Modern Dance Company rehearse in Shryock Auditorium for their Wednesday evening performance as part of the Convocations series. (Staff photo by Bob Ringham)

The second study was a solo, choreographed and performed by Farber. Titled "Defendant," the piece makes a personal statement about Farber, the woman. It is at once both humorous and pathetic. Set within a rigid technical framework, Farber seemed to be taking an intimate look at herself.

She was able to hold the audience breathless. That one lone figure cutting, rolling and floating through space was captivating. She pranced like a wild stallion with only her own breath for accompaniment.

The third and final number of the performance was "Willi I." Once again choreographed by Farber, with music provided by Lucier, the piece brought many images to mind.

At times reminiscent of a lover's lament and at other moments evoking thoughts of a celebration the movement, as seems to be consistent throughout Farber's work, changed constantly.

Very harsh movement melting into soft and gentle shapes conjured visions of the lovely Sirens waiting to Homer and his men. This was enhanced by the gothic sounds of bells clanging and crashing in the background. Thunderstorms and the clapping of a horse hooves fully round out this dramatic study.

The entire company including Farber, Slayton, Finch, and Clark along with Willi Feuser, Anne Koren, Susan Matheke and Ande Peck performed in "Willi I."

The pictures created by the Farber Dance Company will be slow to leave the mind. As will the warmth and vitality of this remarkably exciting group of dancers.

A Review

also work off of sound cues, company members must depend solely upon one another to achieve the timing which makes their work so fluid.

The performance opened with "Spare Change." Choreographed by Farber with electronic accompaniment from a work by musical director Alvin Lucier the piece is a constantly changing life form. With rhythm, pattern and level changes throughout, there are a myriad of events happening on stage.

Duets formed frequently and the paired dancers worked well together. An outstanding couple was June Finch and Jeff Slayton, Farber's husband. The entanglement of their finely honed limbs conveyed a feeling of architectural design.

Lucier's music creates an environment which totally envelops the dancers. They work with and against each other and there is always the feeling that the next movement is inevitable. As is the sound that's woven around and through the dancer's bodies.

LETTER TO PAUL SIMON

Sept. 30, 1974

Dear Mr. Simon:

In reply to the Candidate Questionnaire to which you responded on September 11, 1974, could I ask that you please omit the political rhetoric and clarity questions number 2 and 3? Perhaps a few medical facts from the realm of Biology, Genetics, Embryology, and Fetology will give you the insight to support a Human Life Amendment to the Constitution to protect the right to life from the moment of fertilization to natural death. Did you know that it is FACT that at eleven weeks after fertilization the baby in the mother's womb is completely formed; all organs are functioning; arms and legs move; it inhales and exhales amniotic fluid; sucks it's thumb, etc? Did you know that it is FACT that at eight weeks the baby is completely formed with some of it's organs functioning and that an EKG of it's heart can be made? Did you know that it is FACT that most abortions take place in the 8th to 12th week after fertilization? Ask yourself this question, "Is the being that is killed by abortion human or non-human?" In 1973, about 1,000,000 abortions were performed in this country. Do you know that at six weeks after fertilization, brain waves can be measured with an electroencephalogram? Or that at 18 days after fertilization, the human heart has it's first pulsation? The FACT is that at the moment of fertilization a new human life is created.

In legal abortion the mother is given the choice; the baby has no voice. There are some who believe that tragic circumstances justify abortions and still others simply believe that there are already too many people alive and that abortion should be regarded as merely another social convenience or necessity. It is tragic to witness the endless accounts of the hundreds of thousands of unwanted mothers to be, not to mention the married women who simply do not want the baby they have conceived, who view legalized abortion as a way to solve a social problem. Is it morally right? The legalization of abortion is simply an adjustment if not a surrender to a moral climate in our country which our government (we the people) must correct. We acknowledge that ours is now a permissive society obsessed with the idea that there should be no restraint on human behavior. Have we ever in civilized society given to one person, the mother, the complete legal right to kill another person, the baby, in order to solve that first person's personal problem? If government can give approval to the destruction of the unborn human being and do so on the grounds of tragic circumstances, can it also on future occasions give its approval to the destruction of the very old, the very sick, the very severely handicapped, who, like the unborn child, may be unwanted by those around them?

Regardless of the highly sophisticated arguments of those who favor legalized abortion, there is still something to be said for the commandments which Moses brought down from Sinai. Our Declaration of Independence states that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness. Our Constitution was drawn up by legislators with strong moral convictions. We, the American voters, will vote for legislators who have strong moral convictions. We need a Human Life Amendment. The voter will vote PRO LIFE. Will you, Mr. Simon?

Thank you.

Sincerely,

CANDIDATES QUESTIONNAIRE 24TH DISTRICT

Mrs. JoAnn Schefers, District Director

751 Livingston Street
Carlyle, Illinois 62231

CANDIDATES:

Val O'Shel
Paul Simon

Question No. 1:

If you are elected (or re-elected) would you sign Representative Hogan's Discharge Petition - which is now in Don Edward's Sub-committee of the Judiciary?

Candidates Response:

Val O'Shel: Yes

Paul Simon: I would not, because there are substantial legal defects to the amendment as now drafted, as the counsel for the National Right to Life Committee has pointed out. I would sign a petition or support a motion to force committee consideration of all of the proposals before that committee. I believe anything as serious as an amendment to the federal Constitution deserves careful committee consideration, but I do not defend the inaction of the House Committee.

Question No. 2:

Would you co-sponsor any of the amendments which would carry the wording "TO PROTECT THE RIGHT TO LIFE FROM THE MOMENT OF FERTILIZATION TO NATURAL DEATH"?

Val O'Shel: I will firmly support amendments that contain a human life statement that will override the Supreme Court decision on abortion.

Paul Simon: I recognize the fundamental sacredness of life and I believe some legal barriers are desirable in the matter of abortion. I do not believe an abortion should be as easy to get medically as the removal of a wart. If this can be accomplished without an amendment to the federal constitution, I would prefer that.

Question No. 3:

Would you vote for an amendment carrying the same wording?

Val O'Shel: Yes

Paul Simon: See Question 2

Question No. 4:

A "death with dignity" philosophy and legislation is now entering into the political arena. Would you vote for legislation that would permit a person or other persons to terminate their own life or another's, for any reason?

Val O'Shel: No

Paul Simon: No

Photographer gets curse from Nixon

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Former President Richard M. Nixon angrily cursed at a news photographer who tried to photograph him in a hospital corridor Thursday, the photographer and witnesses said.

Kent Henderson of the Long Beach Independent Press Telegram said Nixon's face contorted and he yelled, "You god-damn son-of-a-bitch" when he saw the photographer waiting outside an office where Nixon had just completed tests.

Henderson said he was so shocked he didn't get off a picture before an attendant whirled Nixon's wheel chair around and pushed him back into the office he had been leaving.

Henderson said he heard the corridor doors crash against Nixon's wheelchair as he was wheeled away.

The incident occurred early this morning after Nixon was taken from his sixth-floor room at Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach to the first-floor nuclear medicine division to continue tests to determine the cause of his plebitis.

Henderson and a hospital photographer arrived outside the office after Nixon was inside hoping to take pictures of him returning to his room.

After waiting outside for some time, Henderson assumed that Nixon had left. However, the photographer continued waiting, and when Nixon finally appeared the confrontation took place.

Evaluations will begin

General Studies instructors will, for the first time this year, be evaluated by the General Studies Division (GSD), according to Dean of University Programs Kenneth Serfass.

Instructors who are being considered for salary increases, promotions or academic tenure, will have credential evaluations made by the General Studies Division according to their assignments. All the other traditional evaluation procedures will also be used, Serfass said.

Until this time, GSD had no input into the instructor's evaluation. "This input by General Studies," Serfass said, "will help give faculty members an opportunity to get better positions and pay increases and will reward instructors for innovative and constructive teaching methods."

Serfass said GSD will rely on

Birth control clinic set

The Night Birth Control Pill Clinic is holding a special Monday at the Health Service (HS) from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

At the clinic, an examination, pap smear and gonorrhea screening will be done for those persons who wish to acquire a birth control pill prescription, according to Don Knapp M.D., medical director of the HS.

"We hope to see between 50 and 60 patients in those two hours. No appointments are required."

Knapp said prescriptions for pills will be $1 per month and $3 for the pap smear.

"For this kind of service it would cost $15 to $25 or more away from the University," said Knapp. "We're not trying to drum up business, though. This clinic is available for anyone who wants it."

evaluations by the students, department chairman and the instructor's peers, in making its recommendations.

The student will be the benefactor of the program, said Serfass. "He will be given a wide opportunity to voice an opinion about what should be taught, how it should be taught and the quality of instruction he receives." He said this approach can go far in proving to students that the University cares and has students' education as its primary concern.

SIU receives $50,000 gift

An electron beam unit, a PT 6 turbine engine and some glassblowing molds are among gifts which have come to SIU through the SIU Foundation, according to Joseph N. Goodman, foundation executive director and acting director of development.

The PT 6 turbine engine, valued at $50,000, is the gift of United Aircraft of Canada, Ltd., to be used by the University's aviation technology program.

General Electric Co. has presented a plasma arc electron beam unit for use by the School of Engineering and Technology. The unit, valued at $10,000, will be used in the school's manufacturing processing laboratory in machining extremely hard materials.

Crown Corning, Ltd., of Sydney, Australia, has given the University glassblowing molds, with an estimated value of $4,800, following a two-month visit to Australia by Bill H. Boysen, assistant professor of art, to conduct workshops and demonstrations of glassblowing under sponsorship of Crown Corning and the Australian Council for the Arts. The glass company financed and built the mobile glassblowing unit used by Boysen for the tour.

Goodman said the Foundation has received approximately $49,000 in grants and "in kind" during the period Apr. 1 to Aug. 31, 1974, not including the electron beam unit.

Crescio unloads a bomb on opponents

By David Hamburg
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

"Yes...planned perfect!"

So stated a happy, emphatic Jackie Crescio in reference to the Rist Team quarterback's 43-yard touchdown bomb hauled in by Cathy Lies.

The play, which caught everyone by surprise, swelled Rist Team's margin of victory over Second String Team to 11-0 in women's flag football action Wednesday night at McAndrew Stadium.

Second String Team, suffering its first defeat in three games, just couldn't move the ball against a thrashing Rist Team defense. At least it couldn't move the ball forward, as signal-caller Diane Bednarczyk got nailed in her own end zone twice—once in the first half by Diane Ellison, and once in the second half by Kathy Andrews.

In fact, its offense was so stifled that not one pass could be completed, not one drive could be sustained. Marty Ferry's interception was the only glimpse of light that Second String Team would see in the entire game.

Meanwhile, Rist Team, now 3-0, pushed relentlessly toward its opponent's goal line. Ellison and Kathy "Stretch" Vondrasek each were credited with a pass reception, while Lisa Millar grabbed two, including one for an extra point conversion.

Rist Team's ferocious defensive play was highlighted by interceptions by Lies and Jan Winkler.

With only two games remaining on the agenda, Rist Team must be stopped, or it will run away with the flag football crown.

SIU women

The first home women's cross country meet ever highlights this weekend's sports activities for SIU.

The harriers host Murry State in a meet beginning at 11:30 a.m. Saturday on the men's cross country course.

The field hockey squad will travel to Berkeley, Mich., to competition Friday through Sunday against Michigan, Ohio and, maybe, Canadian schools.

The Saluki female golfers play 18 holes at the University of Missouri Friday and 18 more at Stevens College Saturday in a two-site, 36-hole weekend tourney.

The volleyball team, fresh from three straight wins last weekend, travels to Charleston to face host Eastern Illinois and Indiana.

Decatur is the site of the Millikan Tennis Tournament, which the women Salukis will compete in Friday and Saturday.

Bowling meeting

The SIU bowling club will hold a meeting Monday at 6:30 p.m. in meeting room A, on the third floor of the Student Center.

Upcoming tournaments and activities will be discussed.

The SIU Bowling Club is open to all SIU students.

Fulton doubtful for meet

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

It may not be full steam ahead for Fulton.

If not, the Saluki harriers' hopes could easily be sunk for Saturday's Indiana Invitational at Bloomington, Ind.

Lanky junior Tom Fulton, a season-long leader on the squad, had to sit out Wednesday's practice with a bad blister on his foot, and his status for Saturday is doubtful.

"We can't spare him," mused Saluki coach Lew Hartzog Thursday. "We're counting on one of the other kids to move up and take a solid fifth, but that would leave us two gaps to fill."

With or without Fulton, SIU does not rank as a major contender for the meet crown. In fact, the battle may be for second place behind nationally second-ranked Western Kentucky.

Hartzog's choice to win the NCAA finals this year boasts the course record holder—as well as the meet's individual favorite and another All-American.

Nick Rose's 29:03 for the six-mile run is the alltime best on the Bloomington course, but his Western Kentucky teammate Dave Long looks like a good bet to threaten the mark.

Tony Stayings, an All-American along with Rose, should make the favorites hard to stop.

Indiana, running A and B teams is expected to provide the top challenge, thanks to its knowledge of the course. Steve Heidenreich, who left the Salukis in the dust in a dual meet two weeks ago, could challenge Long, but Hartzog contends that Western Kentucky has six runners who can defeat him.

Another top individual threat is former Indiana All-American Pat Manderia, now running for the Chicago Track Club, one of three meet entrants with no school ties.

Kentucky's Jim Buel, who won this year's Kentucky Invitational, and Alabama's Steve Bolt are other top-notch runners vying for first.

"On Indiana's release, we are not one of the meet favorites," said Hartzog. "Western Kentucky is highly favored, and then you have to consider Wichita State, who won District Five last year."

SIU, mentioned on the release along with Memphis State and Murray State as "some of the more balanced teams," is rated behind the three previously-mentioned teams and defending Southeastern Conference champ, Alabama.

"I'm not pressuring the kids a great deal on this meet," explained Hartzog. "Rather, I want them to get used to the track at Indiana for the Central Collegiates and, hopefully, the nationals, if we make it."

"I felt that, after the race at Illinois State, we weren't sharp at all and it showed against Murray State," he said. "I could beat them down at a time like this, so I'm taking it easier. I hope we will run well, and I'm sure that on Saturday morning, we'll be pressuring each other to do so."

Twenty-two teams, including 200 runners, are entered in the meet. Each team's first five will be scored, and each team's next two will count as displacers.

In other words, if a team's sixth runner places 93rd, it won't be 93 more points for his team, but it will make the next finisher count as 94th.

Other entrants in the meet are: Air Force, Auburn, Butler, Cincinnati, Eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee State, Indiana Stryders, Kentucky, Moorehead State, Purdue, SIU-Edwardsville, Chicago Track Club, Wright State and Kentucky Track Club.

Third annual Bike-a-thon

The SIU Cycling Club will sponsor the third annual Bike-a-thon Sunday, Oct. 6, to raise funds for the American Cancer Society.

Two routes have been formed for the 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. ride. A 22-mile "tour of the Lakes" encompassing Crab Orchard Lake, Devil's Kitchen and Little Grass Lakes, is set for the better riders, and a 2.2 mile ride is slated around Lake on the Campus for the less advanced riders.

Riders must register (parental consent for under-18) and are urged to begin signing sponsors now.

Riders must check in at one of two check points the day of the ride. Check Point 1 is the start of the Lake on the Campus trek, and Check Point 2 is at Grand Ave. and Giant City Blacktop for the 22-mile ride.

After the ride, participants will have their Ride Cards stamped "end," and mileage will be totaled. The following week, riders should return to their sponsors pick up their contributions.

Minor first aid and bicycle repairs will be handled at both check points.

The ride will be held rain or shine.

Flyers prefer to move football via the airways

By Bruce Shapin
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

The forward pass was popularized by Notre Dame's Knute Rockne in the early 1900s.

Dayton coach Ron Marciniak is probably glad that Rockne revolutionized the game with the pass, because throwing the pigskin is his favorite offensive weapon.

"We love to throw the ball as much as possible," Marciniak said Thursday as his team prepared for the Salukis. SIU travels to Dayton this weekend for a Saturday night contest.

"Tom Vosberg, our quarterback, has done a fine job thus far," said Marciniak. Vosberg has attempted 105 passes, completing 45, for a 42.9 average. Included in those completions are seven touchdown passes.

Dayton is 2-2 on the season, losing its last two games to Bowling Green and Central Michigan.

"We're working hard to improve our defense," said Marciniak. "I know our defense is better than what it has shown the last two weeks." The Flyers have given up 309 and 384 yards respectively to their last two opponents.

Marciniak said his backfield has had a difficult time so far this season. "We have to learn how to hang onto the ball." So far this season Dayton has fumbled 12 times, losing the ball to its opponents on six occasions.

Marciniak is a former Saluki football coach. He was the offensive coordinator for the Salukis in 1967-68.

"Dayton has a very fine passing game," said coach Doug Weaver. "I expect we'll see about 30 passes or more, which is a lot."

Weaver said that even though Dayton is famous for its passing game, he is not counting out the possibilities that it may run the ball.

"Sometimes when a team like Dayton has lost two ball games in a row you tend to regroup your offensive plan," explained Weaver. "They may just decide to run the ball a lot against us. It will really depend on what turns out to be successful for them."

Weaver is hoping that the offense can sustain a few long scoring drives against the Flyers. "We've got to make points and keep the ball away from the other team's offense. If we can do that our defense will be rested when they come on the field and then they're more likely to cause a turnover."

"The morale on the team is still good," commented Fred McAlley, SIU's starting quarterback. "Even though we've lost the first three games of the season, no one is giving up."

Ken Seaman has worked on his kicking game this week after missing two of three field goals against Indiana State.

"Seaman told me that he has discovered what he was doing wrong," explained Weaver. "Ken said that he was bending his lead foot too much."

Sports of Sorts

By David Hamburg
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Hallelujah!

Major League baseball has taken another giant leap forward.

I say "giant" because that's about the only way to describe a purely attitudinal change requiring 27 long years.

That's how long it's been since baseball opened its gates to black ball players. And now that the sport is inundated with talented blacks, the wheeler-dealers behind the desks figure the time is ripe to allow one to actually manage a whole team.

Frank Robinson is the lucky man, as he has been signed as player-manager for the Cleveland Indians. For how long, it is uncertain.

One thing that is certain, however, is that you don't find many marginal black baseball players hanging around the major leagues. Either you're black, perform beautifully and stick around, or you're black, perform not so beautifully and get kicked into oblivion.

So you can bet your bat that the first black manager is going to be an established baseball warrior with credentials sky high.

And Frank Robinson fills those requirements.

The 39-year-old veteran is the only player in history to win the Most Valuable Player award in both leagues, and one of only 11 who has captured the Triple Crown (batting average, home runs and runs batted in). He, also, is fourth on the all-time home run list.

But doesn't it seem a bit strange that you can't find one manager in the major leagues today, who, in his most bizarre fantasies, could come anywhere near Robinson's stature?

Remember Walter Alston's accomplishments on the diamond?

No?

Well, that's okay. There were none. Yet Alston has managed the Dodgers for 21 years.

How about Dick Williams, or Earl Weaver, or Danny Murtaugh?

Zip! Zap! Zilch!

Nope. In order to be offered a managerial post, when your skin is of a darker shade, you must be top-notch all the way.

When Robinson inked his contract Thursday, it was as if World War III had just ended. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn got in on the festivities and admitted it was the first time he had ever witnessed a managerial signing.

Even President Ford (oh, no, not again) got into the act, wiring his congratulations to Robinson. I honestly wonder if he said, "Congratulations, Frank. You're a credit to your race."

All I can say is that Robinson is a credit to the game of baseball.

The baseball big-wigs think they are doing Robinson a tremendous favor. But all they are really succeeding in doing is emphasizing their underlying racist tendencies.

Why all the hoopla? Is it really such a big deal?

I mean, before this magnificent baseball "first," was the top brass worried that a black manager would pose a threat to the game?

If I'm not mistaken, this is 1974. And put simply, baseball should stop running its business as if it were 1874.

"I want to be judged by my expertise on the field," said Robinson at the Cleveland Indians' press conference.

But he said something else, too. Something stated very succinctly and something that underscores the total absurdity of the situation.

"I was born black," Robinson said, "and now that I'm a manager, I guess I have to be a black manager."

Aaron may play again

By Ed Shearer
AP Sports Writer

Atlanta (AP)—Henry Aaron, holder of more lifetime batting records than any other baseball player in history, appears headed for the American League to conclude a brilliant career as a designated hitter.

The aging Atlanta Braves slugger, who will be 41 years old next February, said Wednesday he will reach a decision within 10 days whether to retire or play another season, "but this will be my last game in a Braves uniform."

Aaron apparently has fallen into a financial squabble with Braves executives who have offered him a front office position next year, but not another $200,000 contract to play baseball.

"Titles," Aaron snapped Wednesday shortly before playing his 3,076th game as a Brave, one in which he said farewell with a home run on his final at bat. "Can you spend titles at the grocery store?" Executive vice president, assistant to the executive vice president, what does it mean if it doesn't pay good money? I might become a janitor for big money."

It is believed the Braves offered Aaron as much as $75,000 to serve in the front office. The all-time home run king also has four more years to run on a $1 million contract with a firm that manufactures television sets. He receives $50,000 quarterly on that deal.

The ordinary citizen could purchase plenty of groceries with that kind of money.

It's been a strange final season in Atlanta for Aaron. He could step down as an active player in style. He already holds what he calls "the Cadillac of baseball records," jumping past the legendary Babe Ruth on his first swing of the bat in Atlanta Stadium this year. That came on April 8 when he became the home run king with No. 715.

Oddly, it was on the first swing of the year, April 4 at Cincinnati, that Aaron tied Ruth's record 714, and he homered on his last swing of the year Wednesday night against the Cincinnati Reds.

Water polo tonight

The SIU water polo squad will host the University of Missouri at Rolla, at 7 p.m. Friday in Pulliam Hall Pool.

Saluki mentor Bob Steele said he doesn't quite know what to expect from the Miners, who are 2-1 on the year. But he expressed confidence in his team's play and attitude.

"Oh yeah," he said, "we think we'll win. We always think we'll win."
