Quayle, Bentsen clash

Candidates question qualifications for office

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Vice presidential candidates Dan Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen tangled sharply in their debate Wednesday night over the youthful Quayle's ability to step in and run the country.

Democrat Bentsen, a 67-year-old senator from Texas, and Republican Quayle, a 41-year-old senator from Indiana, duelled over a variety of issues, from farm policy to campaign financing, but the reporters asking the questions repeatedly turned to Quayle's ability to handle the job of president in the event GOP candidate George Bush was unable to finish his term.

The two debated before a national television audience and a sometimes wildly partisan crowd of about 7,000 in Omaha's Civic Auditorium.

Ticking off his 12 years in Congress, eight of them in the Senate and on the Senate's Armed Services Committee, work on reducing budget deficits and writing a job training bill, Quayle said, "Age alone ... is not the only qualification. You've got to look at experience and accomplishments. ... Have I made a difference? Yes I have."

"I know what it takes to lead this country forward," he said.

But it was when Quayle, who has been buffeted with questions about his leadership abilities since he was selected by Bush, compared himself to President John Kennedy that the debate struck its sharpest moment.

"I served with Jack Kennedy," Bentsen snapped at him. "Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine. You're no Jack Kennedy."

"That was uncalled for, senator," Quayle shot back.

Quayle spent much of his time aiming his shots past Bentsen at Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, calling Dukakis one of "the most liberal" gover-

CENTRALIA — While the vice-presidential candidates were debating the issues, the congressional candidates were debating over the vice presidential candidates.

"I think Lloyd Bentsen will be a great vice president," Glenn Poshard, Democratic candidate for Congress, said during a debate with Republican candidate Patrick Kelley Wednesday night.

The debate was the third between the candidates vying for the position being vacated by long-time seat holder Kenneth Gray, D-West Frankfort.

"I'm glad Michael Dukakis has the courage to choose someone that doesn't align with him on all the issues," Poshard said.

He used this time to defend prior allegations by Kelley that Poshard would be ineffective in Washington because of his differences with the Democratic platform.

Kelley has made several references to Poshard's views on abortion, gun control and gay rights, which stray from the Democratic platform.

Kelley continued his attack on the Democratic party saying that choosing Bentsen for vice president was an attempt by Dukakis to rid himself of the liberal label the Bush campaign has placed on him.

Poshard defended Dukakis' choice by attacking Bush's choice of

Union reps will meet, decide vote

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Representatives of the Illinois Education Association and University Professionals will meet this morning in Springfield with an Illinois Education Labor Relations Board agent to set a date for a collective bargaining election.

The mechanics of the actual election will be determined at this meeting, IELRB executive director, Robert Perkovich said.

The IELRB decided earlier that Edwardsville and Carbondale should hold separate elections.

IEA president Gary Kolb said, "Edwardsville should get collective bargaining, but it will be nip and tuck for the Carbondale campus."

The employees voting in the election are usually tenure track faculty and the department chairs, but Perkovich said other staff could be included.

At the first election, faculty will choose among the IEA, UP, and no union representation. If one item does not win by more than 50 percent, a runoff will be held.

Another meeting must then

Council hears zoning law controversy

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Home owners from a neighborhood zoned for no more than two unrelated persons, a R-1 zone, said four unrelated students are living in a house in their neighborhood.

Joan Meade, a spokeswoman for home owners on South Dixon Street, a residential neighborhood zoned R-1, asked the City Council Tuesday to "put strong teeth in the (zoning) law that was written to protect us."

In a prepared statement, Meade told the council that four students living in a house at 506 S. Dixon St. have three automobiles, two motorcycles, two motorscooters, and four bicycles, which are parked in the street, the driveway and on the lawn.

The vehicles make for "unsafe and unsightly conditions," Meade said.

Meade also lambasted landlords for renting to students where the landlords know the neighborhood is R-1. She also said the University is not providing information on the zoning laws.

Outside the council chambers Meade told Morris McDaniel, code enforcement director, that a goal of the

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel's elections committee Wednesday disqualified American-born Rabbi Meir Kahane's ultra right-wing party from November parliamentary elections, charging the party was racist. # Aerobics class out of room to be out of breath

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

Increased frustration, along with heart rates, is on the rise because of lack of space in an aerobics class at the Student Recreation Center.

According to several University students who attend the advanced class regularly, Karl Gray's class has the music, the moves, and usually no room.

"It's a lot of fun and a good workout," said Marie Magnelia, senior in finance. "The class has a lot of variety, but I think the lack of space is awful. They ought to let us use the other side of the gym."

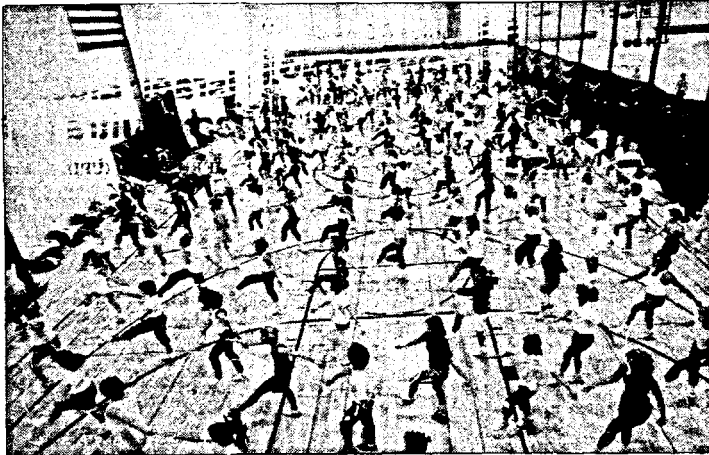

Gray, senior in advanced technical studies and administration of justice, instructs the usually filled-to-capacity class in the West Gym at the Recreation Center, which is the smaller half of the multi-purpose gym.

"EVERYONE'S GETTING pretty frustrated and they (the students) think we're getting the shaft," Gray said, referring to participants who would like to have the class held in the larger side of the gym.

"People have paid their fees and I think they should be able to go wherever they want."

Kathy Rankin, assistant director of the Recreation Center, agrees.

"The students pay their fees," she said, "and our goal here is to serve the needs of students as best we can. We don't have any more room. The gym is a multi-purpose room and we try to have as many things going on in there as possible."

Students must squeeze together to work out in the popular advanced aerobics class held from 5 to 6 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Recreation Center.

LISA JANASIK, junior in foreign language and international trade, said she understands that the administration has its problems too. "I understand they want to please everyone by having a lot of things going on, but it's only for two days a week," she said.

Gray teaches the class from 5 to 6 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays but basketball and intramural volleyball are scheduled at the same time in the East Gym.

Rankin said she realizes there are more people in the aerobics class during that hour

"... we've had to resort to bodyguards to throw people out ... because people won't limit themselves."

—Kathy Rankin

than in the East Gym. However, members of games who are playing at that hour are part of a larger group, she said.

"THERE ARE more people playing scheduled games than people in aerobics in that one hour," Rankin said. "If we got together all the people who play volleyball and basketball, there would be a larger number of them than in aerobics."

Rankin said Gray's class is one of the most popular classes right now and that he does a good job, but it's dangerous to have so many people working out without adequate space.

"The students are driven," she said. "They do what they want, so we've had to resort to having bodyguards throw people out. Until it slacks off, we will have to have someone to monitor the people because they won't limit themselves."

LAST THURSDAY, before starting his routine, Gray asked students that if they come to class ten minutes before five and they see the floor is full, do not participate that day. Three minutes into his routine, five more students came in and squeezed in among the others.

Rankin said she doesn't know what the capacity for the gym is, but at one time there were about 200 people in Gray's class.

"There's always one instructor who catches the fancy of a large group," Rankin said, "but some people are going to Karl's class when they are not at that fitness level. They're going just because it's Karl's class and they are not maximizing their workout by being in a class they are not ready for."

THE ADMINISTRATORS at the Recreation Center also are frustrated with the lack of space, Rankin said, but everyone will have to be patient until the Recreation Center's addition is completed in fall 1989. There will be an aerobics room in the new facility, Rankin said, and both the gym and the aerobics room will be used for the "five o'clock crunch."

But there are plans to move Gray's class to 3 p.m. in the spring to help alleviate the space problem, Rankin said.

Chris Haddad, junior in pre-law, summed up the situation.

"It's good music and good moves, but first come, first served. It's a pain."

Guidelines on rape omits victim's rights

HALLOWEEN AND the infamous weekend bash are looming on the SIU-C horizon. Now would be a good time for the University to assess its policies and procedures toward rape on campus.

The potential for rape is highest during highly attended events such as Carbondale's Halloween celebration, especially when alcohol is involved.

THIRTY-SEVEN incidents of rape have been reported in Carbondale this year, already three more than the total for 1987. This number does not necessarily mean that more rapes have occurred this year as compared to last, because, as studies have indicated, about 90 percent of the victims never reported their assaults to the police.

SIU-C'S POLICY toward rape is a standard one, but falls short of providing the best assistance to victims. Just two years ago, during hearing procedures, a rape victim was asked if she would discuss the events of the incident with the accused rapist. Although the intentions of the person in charge of the hearing procedure was to gather all of the facts, the request was highly insensitive to the victim.

THERE IS little indication that the University's procedures have changed. Very few victims have gone through the procedure in the past few years, but this does not mean success.

The Rape Action Committee has said the University's policy toward rape is "inconsistent." On such a sensitive subject, the University cannot afford to be inconsistent.

THE UNIVERSITY must work closer with Women's Services and RAC to establish a strong policy against rape. Campuswide educational programs on rape and sexual assault should be instituted to teach students, faculty and staff of prevention methods and how and when sexual assault is most likely to occur.

THE UNIVERSITY also must develop a written policy condemning rape and other sexual assaults, revise the code of student conduct to specifically instruct victims of their rights, such as the right to have someone accompany them through the procedure and the right not to have irrelevant sexual history of the victim questioned.

The University cannot prevent a rape from happening, but officials can provide clear, concise and easily accessible information to potential victims.

Letters

Fists prevent rapes

The standard rape articles that have recently been appearing are as usual, appalling. To suggest that prevention can be achieved by their methods is to lead unknowing men and women to become victims of this crime.

"Men need to listen to women. If she says no, listen and stop." (quote from the Oct. 5, Daily Egyptian).

C'mon lets look at reality for a moment. If they were that sensitive to listen they probably would not be putting the women in that position to begin with. If rape is an act of violence then it takes an act of violence to stop it. Getting angry and assertive is not enough. You must follow through with effective measures.

Many of us on campus who are trained in self-defense, I'm sure, would be willing to help others learn to protect themselves, but this training isn't pleasant.

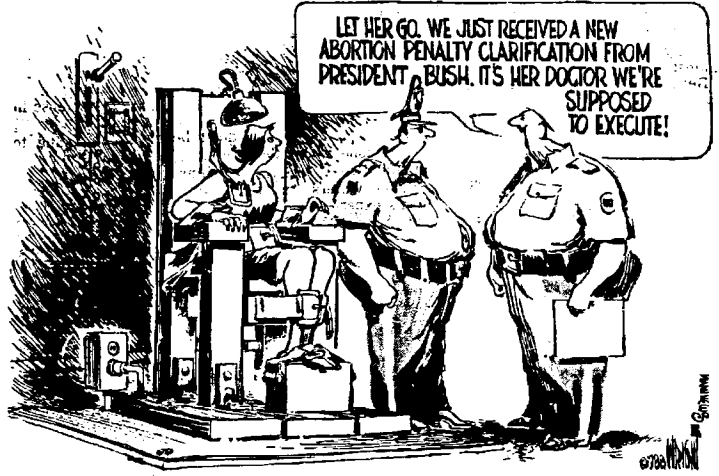

But rape isn't pleasant and so the means to defend yourself must be equally unpleasant. In fact vicious might be a better word. In any case, lets stop pretending that guidelines can prevent rape. Fists prevent rape.—I. Bofanik-Kaplan Hall, law student.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Viewpoint

Bush, Reagan backed parole, furlough programs that failed

As every good Republican knows, Mike Dukakis is soft on criminals. Listening to George Bush, I get the feeling that his opponent secretly hangs out in bars with ax murderers.

As Bush keeps repeating, Massachusetts had a program that let some felons go home on weekend passes.

To Dukakis' embarrassment, one of the felons was a killer who spent his free weekend raping a woman and stabbing her male companion.

Bush says: "I think that Governor Dukakis owes the people of the United States an explanation as to why he supported this outrageous program."

I AGREE with Bush that murderers should not be allowed to roam the streets.

However, there are those who say that maybe Bush should offer an explanation for a similar case in which he had a role.

In fact, a look back in history shows that the same sort of thing once happened to President Ron, the Great Communicator.

First the allegations against Bush:

A Texas newspaper recently dredged up the fact that Bush helped found a chain of halfway houses for ex-cons in Houston.

At first, the halfway houses took in criminals who completed their terms, but later broadened their policies to take in men who hadn't finished their sentences, but were on parole.

ONE REASON they did this was that Texas, like Illinois, Massachusetts and many other states, has more prisoners than it has cells. So all over the country, criminals are being released as early as possible.

Bush, who used to be suspected of having liberal tendencies, thought the Houston halfway houses were wonderful institutions.

That's understandable, because he helped them raise funds to get started when he was a congressman. And later, as vice president, he spoke glowingly of their good works when they received a White House medal.

Unfortunately, the halfway houses that Bush praised didn't have an impeccable record.

It seems that about a year before the vice president gushed about the neat job the halfway houses had done, one of their paroled residents engaged in a bit of mischief.

THE PAROLEE became friendly with a minister who was nice to him.

Unfortunately, their friendship ended when the parolee raped and murdered the minister's wife. He has since been executed.

Obviously, Bush isn't in favor of ministers' wives being murdered. But there are those who might say that since he condones halfway houses accepting dangerous criminals, it's poor sportsmanship for him to carp about Dukakis.

But, then, if consistency and logic were part of partisan politics, most campaigns would be completed in a week or two.

Now, let's look back to when Ronald Reagan was governor of California.

Reagan was proud of his prison reform program. As he said at the time: "California has become a model in correctional systems for the whole nation, and we have had great success."

ONE OF THE ELEMENTS in the system that made Reagan proud was a work-release program. Another was a furlough system, much like the one that has caused all the criticism of Dukakis.

Sadly, there were a few glitches in Gov. Reagan's system.

One of the glitches occurred when a criminal, who was out on a 72-hour pass, murdered a Los Angeles policeman.

Another glitch was when a woman in Orange County was murdered by a couple of guys who were on their 72-hour furloughs.

Yet, I don't recall that when Reagan ran for president, anyone beat on him for these atrocious crimes. Nobody blamed him and his prison reform programs for the murders, or said he was soft on criminals.

IN FACT, when the murders occurred, the Los Angeles Times wrote an editorial that began:

"Gov. Reagan's position on penal reform in California leaves him vulnerable to superficial, but mischievous, criticism." Take note: When it was Gov. Reagan, the criticism was "superficial" and "mischievous."

But Dukakis coddles criminals.

There must be a valid reason why it's OK for Bush to support a halfway house program that led to the murder of a minister's wife. And for Reagan to support a furlough program that led to the murders of a woman and a cop. But it's wrong for Dukakis to have supported a furlough program (started, incidentally, by a Republican predecessor) that led to a rape.

The only thing I can figure is that maybe Bush's killer and Reagan's killer might have been Republicans.

nors in the nation who is "simply out of step with mainstream America."

Bentsen, who generally concentrated on differences between himself and Quayle, scored Bush for the Reagan administration's association with Panamanian military leader Manuel Noriega, indicted by two grand juries on drug trafficking charges.

It was when Quayle compared himself to President John Kennedy that the debate struck its sharpest moment.

On farm policy, Bentsen said Republicans had driven farmers off their fields and into cities, and Quayle — with the debate raging in the heart of the farm belt — countered that Dukakis and Bentsen did not understand farm policy.

Bentsen, however, said Quayle had been "of no help at all" when it came to passing major welfare reform legislation, and noted that Quayle had voted against child nutrition and immunization programs.

When Quayle was asked what he would do first if Bush, as president, died or was killed, "Age alone is not the only qualification," Quayle said, saying voters must evaluate his experience of 12 years in Congress. While serving in the House and Senate, Quayle said, he had "made a difference."

Quayle avoided the debt run up under Reagan and Bush and again turned the question into an attack on Dukakis's record, saying the governor ran up a greater debt for Massachusetts than all his predecessors combined.

Quayle cited the accomplishments of the Reagan administration and charged that Dukakis had "fought us every step of the way." He said a Bush-Quayle administration is "going to build on that and make it even better."

In another volley, Quayle was asked whether the military should take a bigger role in the war on drugs, including sending special forces to try to break up South American drug cartels.

The Indiana senator stressed that, while the Reagan administration already is using the Department of Defense in some interdiction efforts, "I don't believe we're going to turn the Department of Defense into a police organization."

In addition to trying to attack drug suppliers, Quayle

said more should be done to curtail demand for illegal substances and to improve drug education programs.

In response, Bentsen attacked Quayle for hiring as a campaign adviser Stuart Spencer, who also served as a paid consultant to Panamanian strongman General Manuel Noriega.

Dan Quayle for vice president, saying at least he didn't choose him for good looks and youth.

"What a nice way to choose a candidate," Poshard said.

Poshard also questioned Kelley's alignment with the Republican party.

"Do you intend to go along with our leadership? Do you?" he said.

Kelley said that he and Bush agree on all the issues and there is no reason to stray from them.

Poshard then questioned

how Kelley could vote on Reagan administration issues such as acid rain legislation, social security and college grants and loans.

But the battle didn't end there.

The war on drugs also brought a heated confrontation between the candidates.

Poshard supports use of the military in ending the drug problem in America, saying it is "a national security issue."

Defending his stance, Poshard reminisced about his days in the Army. When he returned from Korea, Poshard went to New York city to ease racial tensions.

said. But she said it is an important issue since the 1992 debate will probably include either Bush or Dukakis as the incumbent president.

"It's always hard to persuade someone with the power of the White House behind them to take part in a debate," she said.

And if 1992 is anything like the situation in 1980, the debates may again end up as "organized bi-partisan rallies for the candidates."

"Debates are one of the few forums we have available to call the issues to the public's attention," she said. "It's valuable under any circumstance to see the candidates side by side responding to the same questions."

group is to make all the residential neighborhoods in Carbondale R-1 zoned.

A 1986 poll taken by the city found that Carbondale had more restrictive zoning in single family residential areas than 16 of 17 midwest college communities surveyed.

Although R-1 zones have existed since the 1960s, the law was changed in 1985 to make it easier for the city to prosecute suspected violators, Donald Monty, community development director said.

The change shifted the burden of proof from the city having to prove they are related to the residents having to prove they are related if they have different surnames.

Police Blotter

A University student, arrested and charged with theft of a stolen vehicle and five lesser charges, will face an undetermined trial date after leading SIU Security on a chase.

Steven A. Matthews, a junior in electronics technology, led police on a chase by motorcycle and on foot the morning of Sept. 15, police said.

Matthews, 20, has been charged with possession of a stolen vehicle, fleeing to elude, resisting and obstructing arrest, speeding over 65 miles an hour in a 45 mile-an-hour zone, no valid registration, and violation of classification.

The motorcycle is reported to belong to Jason Scott Fitz of the Chicago area.

Arrest occurred Sept. 29, and Matthews plead not guilty to the charges. A trial before Judge David W. Watt Jr. has not been set.

Unknown intruders entered a residence on North Springer Street Tuesday night and stole two piggy banks filled with an undetermined amount of change, Carbondale Police said.

Michael Beasley, 27, of 704 N. Springer St. reported that someone broke into his residence through a back door between 7 and 8:33 p.m. Tuesday filled with change, police said. Damage to the door was listed at $100.

be called to set the date for the next election, Perkovich said.

The votes are counted the night of the election by the IELRB. Perkovich could not say how long this process would take.

"This is not a typical case, Perkovich said. "It is hard to give any predictions about the election logistics."

After a winner is declared in the second election, the parties have five working days to file objections to the elections. A party would file an objection if it felt the election had been tainted, Perkovich explained.

After an objection is filed, the IELRB would investigate the proceedings and another meeting would be held to set a new election date.

If no objections are filed within five working days and the winner is a union, the union then becomes the representing body of the University employees.

If the faculty decides it does not want collective bargaining, both unions said, they will file a petition calling for another election in one year, the earliest another election could be held.

Telefund ahead of schedule

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Not even the world of answering machines will stop the SIUC Foundation's fall telefund from making its goal and then some, the acting assistant director of annual giving said.

Midway through the fifth week of the nine-week telefund, more than $96,000 has been raised, Laura Davis, acting assistant director, said. "The telefund is going very well," she said. "We are way ahead of schedule in what's being pledged."

Volunteer callers have run into a problem with more alumni having answering machines, she said.

"More callers have said they are talking to answering machines than in past years," Davis said. "We hope it doesn't become too big of a problem. I don't know if people aren't home or they are just screening their calls."

The College of Education has raised the most money during the past two year's telefunds.

There has been an overall increase in the amounts that each college or department is raising, Davis said.

The Foundation contracted the Executive Marketing Service to help update the addresses and telephone numbers of the University's alumni.

The College of Education, which begins its calling sessions tonight, has raised the most money during the past two year's telefunds.

This year, the College of Education has set a goal of $60,000, John Allen, the campaign's coordinator, said. "It's our largest goal," he said, "but the College of Education is also known for having the largest number of alumni."

Money raised during the telefund has allowed the college to give away more than $29,000 in awards to students, Allen said. "The biggest pledge of this fall's telefund was $2,000 from a pledge through the College of Agriculture, Davis said.

USG questions interviews

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

By interviewing members of executive appointed boards and panels tonight, the Committee for Internal Affairs may discourage people from joining those boards and panels, the USG president said.

The committee, which consists of six USG senators and the senate pro tempore, has advisory power to recommend or disapprove of appointments to various boards and panels by the USG president.

President Bill Hall said the personal, five-minute interviews held by the committee tonight may offend some of the new members.

"There is no requirement in the constitution that they (appointees) be subjected to grilling" by the Committee for Internal Affairs, Hall said.

John Grigas, USG Academic Affairs Commissioner, said the issue has been blown out of proportion and the interviews are a "waste of time."

A five-minute interview cannot determine the fate of an executive USG appointment, Grigas said, but if the committee does not recommend the appointee, the senate traditionally goes in favor of the committee suggestion.

Committee for Internal Affairs Chairwoman Juliana Taylor said the committee will only review the appointments to ensure that they meet the qualifications to sit on USG panels.

If the committee finds that an appointee is unqualified, another interview will be called to thoroughly explore the discrepancy, Taylor said.

Politics frustrate bowlers

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By John M. McGuire
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

SYLVANIA, Ohio—It is 9:30 on a Tuesday morning at Norm Sobocki's Showcase Lanes in Sylvania Township, next door to Toledo. Sobocki's never closes.

The free coffee pot is on, and the thump of bowling balls and clatter of pins do not disturb the intensity of Nora Nause, 37, who in halting English talks about the need for "a new government!" She bangs her small fist on the scoring table.

Later that night, workers from the Jeep plant will gather for their weekly league. Like as not, the talk, between rounds of Stroh's, will at some point center on the fate of the old auto factory, which a national magazine once described as looking like a New England linen mill.

THE "61" building, as it is known, was built in 1907. It is an economic mainstay here. The Chrysler Corp. said it would keep the Jeep works open at least through 1992. Jeep employs 6,500. There was a recent callback of 175 laid-off workers because production is up. But the bowlers worry.

Political analysts are calling them the bowling-alley crowd. They see them as a key element in this fall's election. In the Midwest, some 2 million bowlers go to lanes like the Showcase. Many of them have been "Reagan Democrats," white, usually ethnic, middle-income people attracted to the GOP's strong national defense positions, its flag-waving and tough-on-crime appeals. They moved away from their traditional political loyalties as sure-fire Democrats.

ON THIS morning, Nause and Vicki Montgomery were on Lane 19, to the right of a group of older women, a retired lady's league. Nause and Montgomery, who is 30, know each other through their membership in the Judson Baptist Church.

Nause grew up on Surigao Island in the northern Philippines and became a citizen in 1981. She married an American sailor from Toledo, Mike Nause. He works for the CSX Railroad as a signalman-foreman. They have four daughters, ages 15, 12 and twins, 11.

Dressed in aqua Bermudas and a pink T shirt from the Wild Rapids Suntan Club, Nause's dark eyes take on a sheen as she says, "You have to vote. I don't like either of them, but you have to vote so the whole government doesn't go down."

"I LIKE to get a good government. Why don't they make more factory work, so all the jobs don't go overseas? I buy clothes and look at the label. And I say, 'Where is the U.S.?' Instead, China and Japan. Impossible to find U.S. But when I vote, I will have to go, 'ennie, mennie, mo.'"

"Why don't they (the government) make more factory work, so all the jobs don't go overseas?"

—Nora Nause

Montgomery nodded. If she votes, she will probably cast her ballot for Vice President George Bush because of the abortion issue: "I do not agree with abortion."

Like Nause, she does not like either candidate. Montgomery and her husband, Joe, an electrical technician at an East Toledo refinery, have three children, girls 11 and 8, and a boy, 10.

SCHOOLS ARE an important issue to Montgomery. "I know a lot of kids who leave school without learning anything," she says. At Longfellow School, where her children go, she says she knows of situations where students were passed to the next grade with five failing grades.

"I talked to a teacher and she said she could only flunk so many kids. I don't think the schools back up the teachers. And there are very few teachers serious about teaching kids, and neither candidate is really talking about this."

Neither candidate is talking about much of anything, in the opinions of Montgomery and Nause. Besides schools and abortion, Montgomery is concerned about what is happening to older people.

"THERE ARE not enough funds to help senior citizens," she says, citing the close-to-home case of her 65-year-old, widowed mother-in-law. "Her husband didn't leave her much insurance, and she's having a very hard time. Social Security isn't very much, particularly with her medical expenses."

Perhaps it was the distraction of political talk, for Montgomery's next ball left a six, seven, 10 split. "Come on, come on, pick up two," shouted Nause. Montgomery did. Looking up from the scoring table, Nause says she might make up her mind about the election after the debates. She will vote, and as a recent immigrant she said she knows what this country ought to be about, Nause said.

HER DARK eyes widening, she adds: "I have to know. I had to take a citizenship test."

Pettit asks for change in tuition

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

To maintain quality public higher education, Illinois needs a tuition policy that will set limits and keep a balance between state institutions and allow for flexibility in setting tuition within guidelines, Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said.

Pettit and others from Illinois universities Tuesday asked the Board of Higher Education to reopen the question of statewide tuition policy.

A decision on the policy will be made at the next Illinois Board of Higher Education meeting in December, Pettit said.

Pettit testified Tuesday, asking the Board of Higher Education to re-open the question of a statewide tuition policy.

In a written testimony, Pettit said there shouldn't be any implied differences between the quality of public and private universities. "Public universities should provide access to high quality educational opportunity through general revenue support; they should not have to rely on tuition revenue to buy quality."

He said public institutions should be able to agree that costs to students should be minimal.

Without an enforceable tuition policy, the governing boards are making individual tuition policies. This is causing a significant difference in the tuition rates among the state universities, Pettit said.

"Public universities should not have to compete for revenue advantage on the basis of their willingness to hike tuition to unconscionable heights, but that is precisely the path we have begun to ravel in Illinois," he said.

An 18.3 percent tuition increase for SIU-C and a 14.2 percent increase for SIU-E will be voted on Oct. 13 by the SIU Board of Trustees, Pettit said.

Pettit said that the increases of the last two years were needed to meet the ongoing cost of operating the two universities because of inadequate state funding, and to waive the increase for ISSC grant recipients.

The IBHE tuition policy says that tuition shouldn't go above one-third of the total instructional costs, Bill Hall, resident of the undergraduate student government, said. If the increase is approved, the SIU campuses will exceed that figure, he said.

Pettit is taking a leadership role in asking for a strong tuition policy, but Hall said he doesn't see any solutions coming from the board.

Pettit said that the chancellors from the Board of Governors and Board of Regents, the executive director of a community college, the Private College Association, a professor from Northwestern, and the Illinois Student Association also spoke about the tuition policy.

Federal grand jury indicts 15 for roles in sports gambling

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fifteen people were indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on charges of operating a multimillion-dollar sports gambling operation in the southwest suburban area and using threats of violence to collect debts.

Thomas Orlando, 36, of Palos Hills, the alleged ring leader, was named in an 18-count indictment with racketeering, racketeering conspiracy, extortion, witness tampering, conducting an them chose to call it," Ingram said.

Ingram's protest stemmed not only from the fact that he disagreed with the call, but that the referees were not in agreement on the decision. However, a five-member committee upheld the disqualification.

Despite this setback for the American team, Ingram said he returned home with fond memories.

"I wouldn't trade the experience or opportunity. It was just a great experience."

illegal business and tax evasion, said James Houlihan, an agent with the Internal Revenue Service.

The operation was headquartered at Orlando's house, but other sites were used, as were portable cellular phones to avoid detection, authorities said. One of the gambling dens is said to have cleared more than $290,000 during a five-day period last January.

Authorities said the operation has been in operation since 1978.

The defendants also are accused of attempting to bribe sheriff's deputies to get them to destroy or alter records of gambling raids.

our losses." To be victorious Saturday in Charleston, Rhoades said the Salukis have to do the same things they've been doing.

"I know it sounds like a broken record, but we have to be consistent on offense," Rhoades said. "We have to stop some of the turnovers we have been having."

"Defensively, we have to go back to not giving up so much yardage."

The Salukis' defense, which came into last week's game allowing opponents just 98 rushing yards a game, saw Arkansas State tally 408 rushing yards last week.

Rhoades said the kicking game, which has been a thorn in the Salukis' side for most of the season, turned around for the better last week.

"We had a lot of improvement in our kicking game and I just hope it carries over."

Even though the Panthers have dropped their last two games, Rhoades said the Salukis can't anticipate getting an easy win.

"There is an old cliché which says when these two teams meet, you can throw out the records. I think that applies whenever any two teams in this conference meet. "It doesn't matter whether they are swinging up, down or all around. I think the league is pretty balanced talent wise, and since the teams are located pretty close, there are some natural rivalries."

The Salukis' fourth quarter comebacks don't mean the players are just standing around for the first three, Rhoades said.

Injuries mounting as Salukis prepare for Eastern

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Injuries are beginning to stack up around the Salukis' training room. With the heart of the Gateway schedule coming fast, Coach Rick Rhoades has been forced to do some quick shifting of players to keep things alive on the line. Linebacker Kevin Kilgallon, who suffered an ankle injury, will not play against Eastern Illinois Saturday. Junior Brian Miller or freshman Tyrone Johnson will take Kilgallon's spot, Rhoades said.

Quarterback Fred Gibson has been a question mark all week with a swollen knee, but Rhoades seems to think the sophomore will make it.

"I feel a lot better about him than I did after yesterday," Rhoades said.

If the Salukis would lose

Gibson's services, freshman Scott Gabbert has seen some action this season and Rhoades said junior Reggie Edwards is showing a lot of improvement after coming off a knee injury.

Because the Salukis have won three straight, Rhoades said momentum will be helpful in getting through games but the season is far from over.

"The team is probably thinking about finishing toward the top of the Gateway, but I hope they don't spend a lot of time thinking about it," Rhoades said.

"We have to concentrate on doing the job in the classroom and having great practices. At the end of the year is the time to sit down and see where we are."

"We have matured a lot up to this point and have had success. We'll see how mature we are with that. If we start to think we can just roll the white helmets out, then we will go the other way real fast."

Rhoades said the Salukis' luck so far has produced a healthy mental atmosphere among his players.

"Winning breeds winning. We gain confidence from winning and character from

Ingram relates Olympic experiences

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

For swimming coach Doug Ingram, the experience of being a voting delegate for the aquatic congress and chairman of the U.S. Olympic Swimming Committee at the Seoul Olympic Games can mean a lot more than nice snapshots and South Korean souvenirs.

Ingram was able to bring back advanced training techniques that the Salukis can utilize.

He cited the athletes and coaches from Eastern Bloc countries as the competition to watch and learn from.

"They've taken what we knew and added to it, and now we're trying to learn from them," Ingram said.

In particular, Ingram said the East Germans had perfected a more efficient stroke technique. They also employ innovative dry-land exercises.

"The advantage I had was getting to be friends with some of their coaches," said Ingram, who added that those nations follow training procedures different from what they release. "What they publish is not what they do. You have to get to be friends with them and dig deep."

Ingram said some of the performances he saw will not be forgotten.

He was very impressed with 1,500-meter gold medalist Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union. Ingram said Salnikov, 28, was not considered to be a contender for the event.

Salnikov surprised the doubters with a win in which the entire crowd chanted his name as he finished.

"I didn't know I'd ever have tears in my eyes watching a Soviet, but I did. It was just an awesome performance,"

Ingram's views on Seoul Olympics

ON PROTESTS:

"We went to the Army base for autographs and to visit with the sick and injured soldiers. There was a demonstration outside the gate. They started throwing rocks. But when the (police) saw we were an Olympic group, they ran out there and started cracking heads."

ON CHEATING:

"I don't know of any."

ON SPORTSMANSHIP:

"I think everybody realizes what it took to get there. There is a lot more camaraderie among the top athletes."

ON SOUTH KOREANS:

"Almost overly abundant in their hospitality. Koreans were so aware that this was their chance to show the world themselves."

ON SECURITY:

"The security was not very good, not as tight as the media built it up to be. I've seen a lot better security."

ON CULTURE:

"In America, people consider it impolite to bump into someone. To Koreans, it's just the way they have to get around in crowds. When you ask them a question, it is like losing face if they can't answer you — so they tell you something even if they don't know the answer."

Ingram said. Ingram related his perspective of Greg Louganis' qualifying dive on the springboard, when he struck his head on the board.

"He came up out of the pool shaking his head," Ingram said. "The blood was mixed with the water making it look like there was more than there was. They just stitched his head up right there, and he came back and nailed the next dive."

Louganis came back to win two gold medals.

As a delegate, Ingram was part of the committee to review and prepare understandable rules for the swimming portion of the aquatic events, which encompassed swimming, diving, synchronized swimming and water polo.

For the U.S. swim team, he was poolside to handle any problems that may have arisen from referees and judging.

"Once the Games started, if there were any unusual situations or protests I would have to step in," Ingram said.

Ingram did have to fill that role. Though most events went smoothly, he did have to intercede on behalf of Mary Waite in the 200-meter individual medley.

Waite was spotted making an illegal kick during a portion of the race.

"I saw the referees discussing it, but only one of

New York and Oakland win first baseball playoff games

Rookie leads Mets

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The first game of the National League playoffs showed why the unsung star is likely to be — Gregg Jefferies of the New York Mets.

New York's young infielder got three singles in four at-bats against Orel Hershiser on Tuesday night and his hit leading off the ninth started the Mets' winning rally.

Jefferies is a rarity in that he might be better than his already considerable minor-league buildup.

"He came up late in the season," Los Angeles catcher Rick Dempsey said. "We played one series against him and he impressed us with his bat. You've got to give him

Henderson's single in eighth lifts A's 2-1

BOSTON (UPI) — Dave Henderson, a postseason hero for Boston two years ago, singled home Carney Lansford in the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning Wednesday to lift the Oakland Athletics to a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

Henderson, nearly the goat of the game in the seventh inning, hit an RBI single to right that enabled Oakland to hand Bruce Hurst only his third loss in 16 decisions at Fenway Park this year.

Lansford, who won a batting title with Boston in 1981, led off the eighth with a double and Henderson followed with his single.

Henderson was a hero for the Red Sox in game 5 of the 1986 playoffs when he hit a home run in the ninth inning against California that enabled Boston to stave off elimination. The Red Sox went on to beat the Angels in seven games.

The Red Sox put the tying run on second in the ninth when Jody Reed doubled with two out. After Rick Gedman walked, Dennis Eckersley, the major league leader in saves this season, struck out Wade Boggs, the major league's leading hitter, to end the game. It was Eckersley's sixth save against the Red Sox this season.

Eckersley worked two innings in relief of winner Rick
