Food prices rocket at student cafeteria

"The prices are crazy. I never eat here because it's too expensive," Steve Coffin said.

Underwood said there is "no relief in sight," but if costs go down, "we'll certainly re-evaluate our prices."

"I'm not able to read a crystal ball," Underwood said, "But I think we're going to have bigger shortages in bakery goods, for example, than people realize."

The only foods that haven't been increased this year are potato chips, pretzels, and corn chips, Underwood said. "Candy has gone up because cocoa is up," he said. "Cakes and pies are up 5 cents per serving this year because bakery supplies are up."

Underwood said he has increased the prices of coffee and soft drinks rather than those of entrees whenever possible "because a person doesn't live on Pepsi." He tries to "help students out" by having specials from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the Oasis Room. "This week barbecue was marked down 10 per cent as the 'chef's special'."

Underwood said the Student Center cafeterias serve about 6,000 persons a day, "but a lot of those are just coffee or soda drinkers."

"It seems to me there's heavier usage of the center this year, which makes me feel pretty good," Underwood said. "The trend was away from the center for the past few years, and I'm glad to see the kids coming back."

John Marynczak, a senior majoring in math, cited one reason why the trend may be back to the center. "I don't have a refrigerator yet," Marynczak said. "So I've been eating out. I've found out the Student Center is cheaper than any place else in town."

Boyle is out of coma, improving gradually

* WASHINGTON (AP)—W.A. "Tony" Boyle was awake and out of his coma Thursday, hospital spokesmen said, and improving gradually.

Boyle was able to recognize his wife and his doctor when they visited the former United Mine Workers president in the intensive care unit, spokesmen said.

Still, Boyle was being carried on the critical list some 60 hours after taking a massive overdose of barbiturates in what Boyle's doctor called an apparent suicide attempt.

Plato Cacheris, a lawyer for the 71-year-old deposed UMW president, said it was too soon to decide if and when Boyle would be able to appear in court.

Boyle was admitted to the hospital Monday night, on the eve of a court hearing on his removal to Pennsylvania to face murder charges in the death of UMW insurgent Joseph Yablonski, Yablonski's wife, and daughter.

Boyle also is under a five-year prison sentence—which he is appealing—on a conviction of misuse of union funds for campaign contributions.

Budget cuts reduce SIU maintenance

SIU gave out $1.76 million in salary increases this year. The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) surprised SIU officials by releasing an unexpected $824,000 for salary increases based on merit. Orescanin used that, plus another $107,000 allocated by IBHE. The remainder of the $1.76 million came through internal reshuffling by Orescanin.

The only administrators to receive raises this year were Orescanin and Leasure, both of whom were promoted. The number of administrators has remained the same.

Orescanin's budget request for fiscal 1975, already filed with the IBHE, asks for cost of living raises plus 4½ per cent salary increases for faculty next year.

Another $9 million for new programs and nearly $5 million in retirement contributions is in the budget request.

Old parking decals expire Sunday

By Rafe Klinger
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Last year's SIU parking decals expire Sunday and students, faculty and staff members are urged to purchase new vehicle registration stickers by SIU traffic officials.

Prices for parking decals are the same as last year according to August LeMarchal, coordinator of parking.

Blue decals for blue-marked lots are available for full-time faculty and staff and students or part-time employees whose physical condition make them eligible for blue lot privileges. Red decals costing $15 and silver decals costing $5 for the year are available to students and other members of the University community.

If a person is associated to the university and expects to drive on campus, a Yellow sticker, which is free, must be affixed to his vehicle to fulfill University registration requirements, LeMarchal added.

Non-registered vehicles parked in University lots will be ticketed with a $10 fine attached, explained Virgil Trummer, assistant security officer.

Registered vehicles, parked in the wrong lot, are ticketed with a $3 fine which is raised to $5 if not paid within five days. Parking meter fines are $1 and go to $3 if left unpaid within 5 days, Trummer said.

Vehicles of motorists with three unpaid tickets are subject to towing, Trummer warned. Lists of those with three or more unpaid violations are sent from the Parking Division Office to the SIU Security Offices. Security officers will affix a pink warning slip to these vehicles and make a notation of the warning.

After such a warning, the vehicle will be towed away if discovered again in a University lot, Trummer said.

All tickets left unpaid by the end of the month are sent to the Bursar's office by the 15th of the following month, charged to the registrant's account and must be paid there, Trummer said.

As of noon, Thursday, LeMarchal reported 1,080 blue decals, 2,871 Red decals, 473 Red O decals (allowing persons living in on-campus housing to park overnight) and 163 Silver decals sold.

"Right now, sales are running below last year at this time," LeMarchal noted.

All funds collected from registration decals and parking fines are sent to the Treasurer's Office and used for maintenance, improvement and expansion of the University's parking facilities, Trummer added.

Allende supporter executed by firing squad for killing

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A firing squad executed the former leftist governor of Talca Thursday after he was convicted of killing a policeman and attempting to blow up a dam.

The victim was identified by the military government as German Castro Rojas. He was the first high official of the former regime of President Salvador Allende to go before a firing squad. The execution took place in Talca, 140 miles south of Santiago.

A military communiqué also said a 26-year-old man, Teovaldo Saldiva Villalon, was executed in the town of Quillota, 60 miles west of Santiago. It said he was arrested Sept. 17 and found guilty of taking part in an extremist attack on a police patrol.

The two men were the 9th and 10th persons to be executed after summary courts-martial since the armed forces overthrew the Allende government in a bloody coup Sept. 11.

Meanwhile, military authorities relaxed a strict curfew, leaving Chileans free for the first time since the coup to take evening strolls and go out to dinner.

The curfew, enforced by soldiers and police with submachine guns, had emptied Santiago streets daily at 8 p.m., earlier than the normal Chilean dinner hour. On Thursday it was moved back to 10 p.m., a major step toward normalizing life in this battered capital.

The military government continued to raid homes and factories in a hunt for pockets of leftist resistance. But the ruling junta sought to assure Chileans that everything is in order.

The junta, which seized power violently from Marxist President Salvador Allende, also announced that beef will be available in Santiago butcher shops this weekend.

Santiago residents have not been able to buy beef, except on the black market, for months. Long lines formed daily for buying other scarce items such as bread, cigarettes and cooking oil.

The ousted Allende government had blamed the shortages on right-wing sabotage, while anti-Marxists said inefficiency and corruption in Allende's government were the causes.

Carlos Hohmann, a retired government employee who opposed Allende, said that since the coup there has been "a fundamental difference in the distribution of food. There is more abundance."

But headlines still can be seen around the city.

For many leftists, the coup has meant imprisonment or hiding.

Authorities have rounded up thousands of suspected leftists and held them in the National Stadium. The junta's director of protocol, Tobias Barros, said about 1,000 persons have taken refuge in different embassies in Santiago. He said about 500 Chileans have been given safe conduct out of the country.

In other developments:

The junta designated Walter Heitmann, a retired air force general, as ambassador to the United States. It named retired Adm. Karl Olsen as ambassador to Britain.

Authorities said numerous unregistered firearms, including 32 rocket launchers, have been turned in to Santiago churches. The deadline for gun owners to register their weapons or face arrest is Friday.

The weather:

Partly cloudy

Friday: Partly cloudy and cooler with a 50 per cent probability for showers and thundershowers. The high temperature will be in the low to middle 70's. Wind will be out of the NW at 5-10 m.p.h. Relative humidity 60 per cent.

Friday night: Fair and cool with chances for precipitation diminishing to 30 per cent. The low temperature will be in the middle to upper 50's.

Saturday: Mostly sunny and continued mild with the high in the lower to middle 70's.

Thursday's high on campus 77, 2 p.m., low 63, 6 a.m. (Information supplied by SIU Geology Department weather station)

Illinois Supreme Court prevents Urbana man from practicing law

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The Illinois Supreme Court has ruled an Urbana man cannot practice law because he lacks the necessary qualities.

The court said Anthony R. Martin-Trigona "lacks the qualities of responsibility, candor, fairness, self-restraint, objectivity and respect for the judicial system which are necessary adjuncts to the orderly administration of justice."

Martin-Trigona, who passed the Illinois Bar examination in 1970, appealed to the Supreme Court after the committee on character and fitness for the 1st Judicial District said it was unable to certify that he had the required good moral character and general fitness to practice law.

Martin-Trigona's case was transferred to the 1st District, which comprises Cook County, after he complained the committee in the 4th District was treating him unfairly. The 4th District embraces his home county, Champaign.

The court said in an opinion Tuesday that Martin-Trigona acted unreasonably against those opposing him.

About half of St. Louis stations close

By Bob Monroe
Associated Press Writer

About half of the service stations in St. Louis were closed Thursday in the latest protest over Phase 4 retail gasoline price ceilings. More protests were set for this weekend. Station operators everywhere were awaiting the Cost of Living Council's announcement on ceiling price increase expected Friday. One source close to the council said it would be 1 or 2 cents a gallon. But dealers also want new rules that would permit them to pass on to customers any future increase in wholesale prices. The council was said to be weighing such changes. "If they come out with anything less than a pass-through of the wholesale cost and an increase in the ceiling price of one cent, they haven't done anything," said Charles Binsted, President of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers.

"Anything less than that is going to be looked at with great disfavor by the nation's dealers," Binsted said in an interview. "I can tell you that because I've talked with many of them around the country in the last couple of days."

A protest in Manchester, N.H., appeared about ended after two thirds of the stations had closed earlier this week. All but six reopened Thursday after Gov. McDirim Thomson agreed to press for ceiling price increases.

Bill Victory, president of the 600-member Evergreen Service Station

Association, said he hoped that 80 per cent of the 1,000 Seattle area stations would be shut down this weekend.

A protest in western New York State was expected to be involved about half of the dealers from noon Friday until Monday morning.

About 700 dealer members of the Long Island Gasoline Retailers Association voted almost unanimously Wednesday night to shut down unless the Phase 4 controls are lifted, but set no date for the closing.

Nixon said to support proposal for direct election of President

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration said Thursday it supports in principle a proposal for direct election of the president, but objected to some of the measure's provisions.

Appearing before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee for the administration, Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert G. Dixon Jr. endorsed the concept of the proposed constitutional amendment. But he said there should be a runoff between the two top candidates if neither one receives 40 per cent of the vote.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., told Dixon he thinks the runoff provision cost supporters about half a dozen votes in a 1970 Senate battle. He said he has dropped it for that reason even though he personally favors it.

Bayh's proposed amendment would have the Senate and House meet in joint session to elect the president from the two top vote getters if no candidate receives at least 40 per cent of the vote.

But Dixon said that having Congress elect the president would defeat "the core principle of separation of powers."

If it should happen frequently it would be "a long step toward the parliamentary system," Dixon said. In addition, turning over the election to Congress would be "likely to place the president under obligation to those members who voted for him."

Presidents are now elected by the electoral college, in which each state has the same number of votes as it has senators and representatives.

Chile holds three Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Thursday that three Americans are still being held or reported missing in Chile.

The Department expressed "its pleasure that eight Americans had been released by the new military government in Chile."

Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said efforts are being made to obtain information on the whereabouts of Frank Teruggi of Chicago and Charles Horman of New York.

He said Maria Rodriguez, who was initially listed among the eight set free, is being detained in Valdivia.

Information on Miss Rodriguez's home town was not available.

U.S. Court refuses to delay flat-grant welfare payments

CHICAGO (AP) — The U.S. District Court refused Thursday for a second time to order a delay in the implementation of Gov. Daniel Walker's flat-grant system of making welfare payments. Judge Herbert L. Will said the suit asking the delay, which charged that the new welfare system violates state law and the U.S. Constitution, belonged in state courts.

The Illinois Department of Public Aid plans to put the flat grant plan into effect Oct. 1. Under that system, which affects aid to families with dependent children, many special welfare grants would be eliminated.

Thursday's suit is one of four such actions filed Monday by the Welfare Rights Organization to stop implementation of the system. Three were filed in U.S. District Court and one in Circuit Court.

Will told the attorneys requesting the injunction to combine at least three of the suits. He said the flat grant controversy was important and should be dealt with in total.

On Wednesday, another federal judge also refused to stop implementation of the plan. He ruled on a suit that contended welfare recipients received insufficient notice of the new system and that public hearings should be held on the question.

Attorneys for the Welfare Rights Organization said about 200,000 persons I approximately a quarter of those affected by the change would receive reduced benefits under the flat grant system.

Justice Department asks for police brutality laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department asked Congress Thursday for legislation to make it easier to obtain convictions in police brutality cases.

Deputy Assistant Atty. Gen. K. William O'Connor of the Civil Rights division said most of the 8,000 to 10,000 citizen complaints it receives each year alleging civil rights violations involve mistreatment by law enforcement officers.

"He testified a significant reason for a 'low success rate' in prosecuting such cases is that the government has 'to prove that the defendant acted with the specific intent to deprive the victim of a constitutional right."

O'Connor said that under the administration's proposed draft, a jury would have to find only that a policeman used unjustified force or violence against a citizen while acting under his authority as a law enforcement officer.

"If a law enforcement officer unlawfully assaults or murders a citizen, that is what the jury should be asked to try, not the abstract issues of specific intent to deprive of a constitutional right," he said.

State employees union asks Walker for wage increase

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A union of state employees asked Gov. Daniel Walker Thursday to provide an emergency cost of living raise in salaries and pensions of state employees.

International President Jerry Wurf of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal employees (AFSCME), AFL-CIO, asked Walker to put the proposal before the Oct. 15 special session of the Illinois General Assembly.

Wurf said he made the request in a letter to Walker. "The 3.9 per cent increase which state employees received this month is far short of the 10 per cent annual rate of increases reflected in the consumer price index performance over the last six months," Wurf said.

"As taxpayers, we favor economy in government," Wurf said. "It is unreasonable, however, to require state employees and retired state employees living on fixed pensions to subsidize economy in government. Nor do we believe that any state worker should be locked into a wage scale that limits him to a marginal existence."

Burger rejects plea to halt public testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger Thursday rejected a plea from the National Citizens Committee for Fairness to the Presidency, Inc., to halt public testimony before the Senate Watergate committee.

The Rhode Island-based group asked Burger to enjoin the public testimony pending appeal of dismissal of a suit brought by the group to close off public hearings.

Burger denied the request without comment.

Federal district and appeals courts here rejected the suit, saying the committee and its chairman, Rabbi Baruch Korff of Rehoboth, Mass., lacked legal standing to bring the suit.

Uncle Sam wants you---please!

On July 1, the defense forces of the United States officially abandoned a practice they had depended upon for more than 30 years — the conscripting of manpower — and returned to the voluntary recruiting our democratic society has relied on in times of peace throughout most of its history.

Already, prophecies of doom are being broadcast by opponents of the change.

How seriously should these be taken? Is an imminent return to the compulsory draft inevitable, or even likely?

The University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research (ISR), through its Center for Research on Utilization of Scientific Knowledge, has just released to the Office of Naval Research of the U.S. Navy the results of a survey suggesting fears of impending disaster are premature in at least one vital respect.

The variety of skills that keep the Navy going, the survey report concludes, can be as fully provided by volunteers as they had been by draftees.

In fact, one of the survey findings is that all skills critical to the Navy are available right now in the volunteers already in service.

This determination was made by drawing comparative profiles of three categories of men (excluding officers) now in the Navy ranks: those who joined up rather than go into the Army, the Air Force or another branch of military service (choice motivated); those who joined up not because of any preference for the Navy, but simply to escape being drafted (draft avoidant); and those who joined up only because they wanted to join up (true volunteers).

"An examination of critical skills among the three... shows that there are no differences among the three... (in) critical skill level," wrote ISR scientist John A. Drexler Jr. "By depending largely on volunteers, the Navy should be able to maintain a skill level comparable to that which it obtained under the mandatory draft policy."

This is not going to happen automatically, however. The survey shows that true volunteers have fewer years of formal schooling than choice-motivated men now in the Navy do, and that the volunteers not only recognize the Navy as a means of obtaining further education, but confidently expect the Navy to keep open opportunities for learning by creating and maintaining career jobs in which the new knowledge can be kept at work.

"The implication" of this situation, as perceived in Drexler's report, is that "if the Navy is to continue to upgrade the levels of education among its members as it has in the past, it may anticipate the need to spend much more money on schooling."

True volunteers, the report continued, "are the people who will constitute the larger proportion of the Navy's manpower in the immediate future, (who)...already comprise an increasing proportion of the total Navy population."

The rising cost of schooling is only part of the problem confronting the volunteer Navy. Adequate appropriations directed toward closing the knowledge gap may go a long way in enticing new recruits in the required numbers, but more than money will be needed to hold the recruits in the Navy once they are enrolled.

"It is clearly urgent," the Drexler report insists, "that the Navy consider the values and preferences of volunteers." Some of these preferences are stated as:

- Jobs in which the jobholders are not "bossed."
- Jobs with ample free time between tasks.
- Jobs which "are not constricted by red tape, or by unreasonable or outmoded rules and regulations."

Can the Navy possibly meet these conditions, so foreign to its tightly disciplined traditions?

The philosophy that governs ISR research says it can if the Navy is willing to adopt a more flexible system of governing itself — one in which processes of decision-making can be shared and contributed to constructively by the membership at all levels of the Navy.

True volunteers are "ambitious and upward striving" people, the Drexler analysis points out. They have the fastest promotion rates among first-term enlistees. The younger they are, the more the environment in which they were reared encourages them to expect to influence their work and other responsibilities.

From the survey results, it is not difficult to see a strong possibility of conflict between them and the draft-avoidant enlistees who are now in the Navy. A substantial number of the draft-avoidant enlistees, having found the Navy a satisfactory refuge from the draft, have stayed on, "rolling with the tide" from an apparent lack of inner direction.

In answering survey questionnaires, they did not indicate strong preferences for any of the various job characteristics — circumstances of performance as well as descriptions of the tasks to be performed.

"In a word," the survey report observed, "it may be said that such individuals appeared to be basically inert," tending "to exhibit lengthier periods of tenure in the Navy" than others do and

"less likely to leave after their required period of service."

If the foregoing preview of the Navy's future seems discouraging, as it almost certainly will to critics of the all-volunteer concept, the five-man ISR research team did not intend to create such an impression and does not share the pessimism.

It was unanimous in its view that the military, after holding a monopoly of sorts on manpower acquisition for a generation, must now compete for men in the open market. To have any real chance in the bidding, the military must adopt the standards employed by its competitors — private industry, business, academic, scientific and political institutions.

Because the terms of the marketplace have changed so radically in recent years, especially in regard to youth, which is assuming legal responsibility earlier in life and expecting commensurate prerogatives, one of the most efficient mechanisms for establishing standards has proved to be the survey — guided evaluation scheme — invented by ISR's founder, Rensis Likert. The method requires acceptance of human values on a par with money as forces in motivating people.

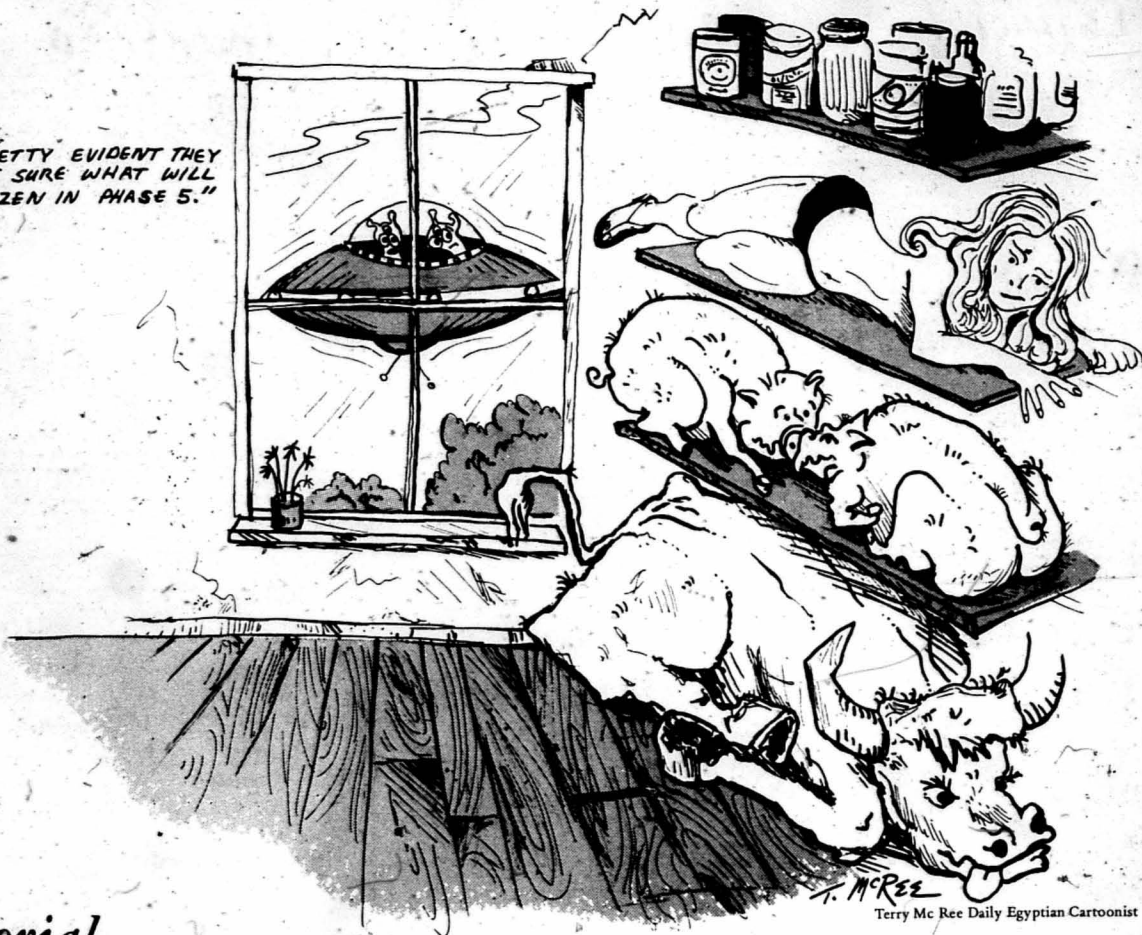

In the ISR survey contracted for by the Office of Naval Research, 2,522 Navy officers and men, assigned in about equal numbers to shore installations and ships at sea, were questioned over a period of months shortly before the July 1 deadline for abandonment of conscription. The survey also confirmed, by a statistical probability sampling of civilian males over 16 years of age, that men in civilian life are much more able to find in their jobs a realization of their personal goals than Navy men can find in their Navy service.

Since men are no longer under compulsion to adjust to the Navy, the Navy plainly needs to adjust to the men unless, as David Bowers, head of the research team put it in one of the two survey reports he wrote, the Navy is "willing to be condemned in some degree a decade or so hence" to the status of a shrunken and weakened shadow of its present being.

The Office of Naval Research's sponsorship of the ISR survey expressed the Navy's desire to adapt. The remaining question is how. The details are to be spelled out in a latter series of survey reports. Although addressed to the Navy alone, their efforts may, in time, be felt throughout the defense establishment.

What the Mirror is all about

For those students and faculty on campus who still do not know what the Mirror is, it is a booklet designed to provide undergraduates and faculty alike with an objective and accurate evaluation of instructors and courses offered at SIU. The Mirror has steadily improved with each issue, but will never reach its full potential until a larger percentage of instructors participate.

For those who are not familiar with the Mirror's operation, questionnaires are sent to teachers who write their classes evaluated in the Mirror. The questionnaires inquire about the ability of the instructor, the quality of the texts, tests, and are distributed to students by the instructor.

The Mirror staff, which is made up of five student employees, then read each student's response and write an evaluation from the data. Computer print-outs, supplied by the testing center, are also published in the booklet. These print-outs, along with the written survey, shed important information about the instructor and the course. These results are placed on flats by the students, and the camera ready copy is then sent to the printer.

At the present time only about fifty-five per cent of SIU's instructors participate in the Mirror. Several reasons have been cited for their lack of participation, but none of these reasons seem valid enough for an instructor to refuse participation.

The reason most often cited by instructors for not taking part in the booklet is teachers do not trust the accuracy of the Mirror's reporting and do not want to leave themselves open for misinterpretation. While there was substance to this reason when the first few issues of the Mirror appeared, the booklet has matured and improved with age. In fact, since the Mirror has improved, some teachers use this as an excuse to keep students from finding out they are poor instructors.

Another reason cited by several teachers for not participating is they feel it is absurd to be evaluated and judged by students. As a matter of fact, student evaluations of instructors may be the best form of evaluation because only students can judge him on how much they learn from a course and its instructor.

The Mirror has not always been distributed on time. This has been pointed out as another reason for lack of participation. This problem was due to a shortage of the paper the Mirror is printed on. This problem will be eliminated in the future. Bids will be taken from different printers each year for a contract to print one year's issues of the Mirror. Since the printer will know months in advance he will be printing the booklet, he can order the paper well ahead of time.

The purpose of evaluating teachers and courses is not to scare students away from courses, but to give them more than a mere sketchy description of the classes. At the same time, the Mirror is designed to serve as a guide for positive improvements in the instructor's teaching method. Unfortunately, according to Robert K. Flack, supervisor of the Mirror, "many of the poor instructors realize their shortcomings and do not desire to have their ineffectiveness published, and it is these instructors who could benefit most from the Mirror; yet, quarter after quarter, their classes go unnoticed, unchanged, and unimproved."

Large scale teacher participation is the only way for the Mirror to reach its full potential. When and if this occurs, the booklet can play an ever greater role in developing academic excellence and promoting a more scholarly environment. As Ross Scalise, former coordinating assistant of the Mirror once said, "The Mirror depends upon the cooperation of the instructors of the individual courses. The omission of classes from the Mirror might well be an evaluation in itself."

Mediocreman and Spiro-hero . . .

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

Faster than a Senate confirmation. More Powerful than Phases I through IV. Able to straddle tall issues in a single straddle. It's . . .

MEDIOCREMAN
As we join Mediocreman today, kids, he's in his stuffy Oval Office disguised as the mild-mannered President. His pretty secretary, Lotus Lane (who doesn't know his true identity), enters, looking worried.

Lotus: Terrible news, sir. What with Watergate and inflation, your popularity's at an all-time low. There's even talk of impeachment. You simply must do something drastic.

Mediocreman: Well, Lotus, I could give another State of the Union Address. Lotus (angrily): Your 15th? Who listens? (stomping out) Oh, how I wish Mediocreman were here.

Mediocreman: Hmmm. Lotus is right. This sounds like a job for . . . Mediocreman
(He steps into a phone booth beside his desk and whips off his stuffy old blue suit to reveal underneath a stuffy old gray suit, the uniform of . . . Mediocreman! He presses a secret button and up through a trap door pops his loyal sidekick. . . Spiro-Hero!)

Spiro (saluting): I'm glad you called, Chief. I wanted to thank you for your support in my hour of trouble. I mean when your press secretary was asked if you still had confidence in me, he replied with two words, "no comment." I sure appreciated that second word.

Mediocreman: Don't mention it, Spiro. But I've got to get the public's mind off my troubles. What we need is a big splash in the press.

Spiro: I'm always glad to speak your mind in public, Chief. You want me to get in another fight with the press? It's a pleasure to loyally take my lumps in your cause.

Mediocreman: The problem I'm thinking of, Spiro, is corruption.

Spiro: Oh, don't worry, Chief. I've loyally been telling everybody you didn't know a thing about Watergate.

Mediocreman: It's not Watergate.

Spiro: Then it's San Clemente. I've loyally been saying it shows how intelligent you are, snookering a smart man like Bob Abplanalp deal like that.

Mediocreman: I'm referring to . . .

Spiro: Raising dairy prices in return for a campaign contribution? A few more pennies for milk is a small price to pay. I always say loyally, for having you in office. Or is it the ITT merger? The Vescoe deal? The . . . Whose head do you want, Chief? I'll loyally serve it up on a platter.

Mediocreman: Frankly, Spiro, yours. I read where you accepted a basket of fruit from a Baltimore admirer. (sternly) If there's one thing I cannot tolerate around here, it's any hint of corruption.

Spiro (bewildered): But I'm innocent, Chief.

Mediocreman (clapping him on the shoulder): I knew I could count on your undying loyalty, Spiro. And look at the bright side: the press won't have you to kick around any more.

Lotus (entering later with a stack of newspapers): Great news, sir. The press is full of nothing now but talk of Spiro's resigning. I'll bet Mediocreman is behind this. He's saved your bacon again. Oh, why can't you be more like him?

Mediocreman (winking into the camera): As you go through life, kids, remember that submitting a resignation is better than being impeached. So always keep an eye peeled for somebody who'll submit one.

Letters

Mr. Thornberg has raised a few interesting questions about book prices. What for example is a "reasonable" return on used books? Intuitively, buying a book for say $3 and selling it for $9 is an outrage to morality and common sense. What then is a "reasonable", intuitively, price? Being generous, let us say 10% of the cost instead of 200%. The merchant buys a book at $8.00 and sells at $8.80. This leads to the second question: How many books would a man have to sell at a return of 10% to pay rent, taxes, insurance, food, clothing, employees, etc? Let us say he pays rent of $200 per month. Divide $80 into 200 which gives 250 books per month just to pay the rent.

In other words in order to ensure that my hypothetical business does not go out of business at a 10% return, someone would have to guarantee the bookstore that 250 people go to this place to buy one book per month. Many bleeding hearts and hand-wringers over the subject of prices think such a policy is not only defensible but an obligation. Hence the creation of compulsory rental schemes that are an insult to any democratic people, which through sheer deception make some students benefit at the expense of the rest, and at the expense of bookstores not having the benefits of being a university monopoly. Such a system, which only pays the price and does nothing to cut costs, is supposed to be reasonable and fair.

It is about time colleges taught their students one ecological fact: There is no such thing as a free lunch.

Cat control

To the Daily Egyptian:
Re: Beth Nash's Letter

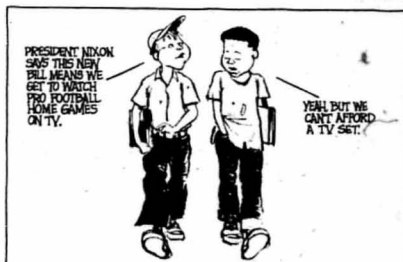

Any person who owns a cat (or any animal) must realize that they have taken the welfare of a living creature as their responsibility. This is not a small matter. For aside from the question of the animal's happiness, there is the question of common sense in regard to the many responsibilities involved in the ownership of an animal. If the person is not willing to accept the responsibility, no matter what the cost, the pet should not be obtained. An animal is not a status symbol, a toy, or something you get because "everyone else has one"; it is a voiceless creature that feels pain, needs affection and care and has certain rights—one of which is to live a happy life.

Spaying does not cost $40. If the cat is not pregnant, spaying costs $20 for the surgery, $3 for anesthetic, and $2 per day (2 days) for use of the "recovery" room—totaling $27. If a person waits until the cat is already pregnant—lack of planning ahead—the cost will be $37. These amounts may seem excessive to some individuals, but this should have been considered before obtaining a pet.

Last year approximately 25 million dogs and cats were "disposed of." The cost to taxpayers and humane societies is around $100 million annually. It is somewhat of a misconception to think that it is cheaper to take several litters of 4-8 kittens to a humane shelter per year for euthanization.

The animals cannot help themselves. It is up to us—species of the highest intelligence???—to solve this problem which is now in epidemic proportions.

Greek life hits renaissance as membership ranks climb, founders' ideals reactivated

Joann de Fiebre
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Mrs. Harris, who has served as an advisor to sororities for the past two years, said student interest in fraternities and sororities is "very much on the upswing."

"We began to notice an increase in student interest last year when membership in fraternities on campus increases 100 per cent," she said. "This is not only true at SIU, but all across the country."

She added that over 200 students participated in the Welcome Week Festival held to acquaint new students to Greek living and over 400 students have participated in rush.

Students at SIU becoming more interested in "Greek life" Nancy Harris, assistant to the dean of Student Life (advising fraternities and sororities) said in an interview Thursday.

She said fraternities and sororities are becoming more concerned with "fellow human beings" and are not "hazy" people just interested in "Hell Week" and parties.

"Greeks have returned to the concept of brotherhood and sisterhood that the founders established the group on," she said.

Mrs. Harris attributed this increase to the restructuring of Greek ideals and the end of campus activism.

"Belonging" to a group was not an "in thing" during the period of campus activism, she said, but the trend toward this is "coming back to people who have common concerns."

Mrs. Harris said fraternities and sororities offer many advantages to students who become members.

"Students in fraternities and sororities are able to share in small group experiences by identifying with people with common interests and goals," she said. "There is also an advantage in terms of accessibility to close and lasting friendships."

In addition, she said students in fraternities and sororities have an opportunity to gain leadership experience by taking part in an experimental leadership program sponsored by the Department of Higher Education and the Student Life office as well as belonging to various councils.

Mrs. Harris said fraternities and sororities help students with their education by offering tutoring services and scholarships.

Mrs. Harris said she is a "great believer in Greek living and will be promoting all the opportunities fraternities and sororities offer students."

She added that most students are "not aware of all the things the Greeks are doing."

"Every fraternity and sorority has its own service project," she said. "Last year $1,000 raised from the all-campus variety show was donated for SIU student scholarships."

Mrs. Harris said her major responsibility will be to serve as an advisor to sororities and act as a liaison between the University 22 fraternities and sororities and national organizations.

Mrs. Harris received a master's degree in Higher Education from SIU in 1972 and is currently working toward a Ph.D. in Education.

She has held positions in the Office of the Dean of Students, the Office of the Dean of Student Services, the Student Activities Center and the Office for Fraternities and Sororities. She was also a teaching assistant for the Department of Higher Education's experimental leadership training program for fraternity and sorority members.

'The Devils' true story, but lacks affectiveness

By Glenn Amato
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Ken Russell's 'The Devils' is a true story, carefully documented, historically accurate — a serious work by a distinguished filmmaker acclaimed one of the cinema's outstanding talents" — so drools the publicity release from Warner Brothers-Seven Arts, the film's distributor.

About the truth, the documentation and the historical accuracy there can be no quibbling; anyone who read Aldous Huxley's 'The Devils of Loudon,' upon which Russell's film is based, can testify to the validity of the bizarre incidents depicted in this 1971 release.

What is bothersome — no, sickening — is the fact that Russell seems incapable of drawing any affective point from the story. It is merely related in a tone that can only be described as hysterical.

'The Devils' concerns a scandal that rocked the French provincial town of Loudon in the sixteenth century. Urban Grandier (Oliver Reed), a parish priest, has a taste for women and power. (Taste, hell — this fellow is a glutton.) Unknown to him, he has excited the sexual fantasies of Sister Jeanne (Vanessa Redgrave), the hunchbacked prioress of the local Ursuline convent.

She imagines herself and the other nuns to be possessed by devils when Grandier enters into a "profane" marriage with a local virgin. Sister Jeanne pinpoints him as the sorcerer and he is arrested, tried and burned at the stake.

Abandoned bikes to be auctioned by Police Dept.

About 80 bicycles and various bicycle parts will be put on auction by the Carbondale Police Department next month.

The bikes will be chosen from among those recovered by police after they were stolen or abandoned. Following recovery they were stored in a city garage, but have remained unclaimed.

Police are currently taking an inventory of the bicycles to be put on auction.

Tom McNamara, administrative assistant to the chief, said the sale would take place on or about Oct. 20.

Brazilian tribe uses

Communist Chinese pots

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Members of a Brazilian government party who made contact with an isolated Indian tribe in the northern Amazon state of Para found the Indians using pots and mirrors stamped in English. "Made in the People's Republic of China."

Huxley's documentary took great pains to establish Grandier as political victim, of Cardinal Richelieu's using the church and the Jesuits to break up provincial power and create a nation-state.

limbs being smashed, grotesque exorcisms with huge enemas and flesh being burned in a manner that suggests he is displaying a prime cut of meat being readied for a medieval barbeque.

Enough said. I will not comment upon the performances, since they are characterized chiefly by ranting; nor will I note the music, which sounds like warped Muzak. It is a pretty vile business.

The film, sponsored by the Student Government Activities Council, will be shown at 6 p.m., 8:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Sunday in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is $1.

Russell uses the sensational externalities of the case as an excuse to show naked nuns whipping themselves into sexual frenzies, maggots crawling over skeletons.

Chavez concludes talks with Teamsters officials

By Robert A. Dobkin
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Farm labor leader Cesar Chavez concluded negotiations with Teamsters officials Thursday amid indications of a tentative agreement to end their bitter organizing fight in California's grape and lettuce fields.

The AFL-CIO issued a brief statement saying the talks had ended and that an announcement was expected Friday.

"The parties completed three days of negotiations and have made progress towards a resolution of the issues," and AFL-CIO spokesman said. "The AFL-CIO negotiators and the Teamsters negotiators will report back to their principals and we expect an announcement tomorrow."

No details were disclosed, but the statement indicated all that remained was final approval from AFL-CIO President George Meany and Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons.

Labor sources close to the negotiations also supported that view but would give no details.

Chavez immediately flew back to California and could not be reached for a comment. A Teamsters spokesman declined comment. High-level discussions between AFL-CIO representatives and Teamsters officials opened here Tuesday with the negotiators joined Wednesday by Chavez, president of the AFL-CIO United Farm Workers union.

The meetings were the first since Chavez broke off negotiations in Burlingame, Calif., on Aug. 10 after learning that the Teamsters signed contracts the previous day, with growers in the Delano area. Fitzsimmons later repudiated the Delano contracts and indicated a willingness to end with jurisdictional fight.

Pressure groups on watch; attorneys are taking notes

By Margaret Gentry
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department lawyer thought the request was all right, but the congressman was squirming as if his phone call might be considered improper.

Over and over, the congressman insisted he wasn't trying to pressure anyone. Then he asked the lawyer meekly if he could tell him the status of a case affecting a constituent.

Before Watergate, said the lawyer relating the incident, the congressman would not have been so careful to avoid the appearance of pressure.

Nor would the lawyer have been required to write a memo about the phone call filing one copy in his personal records and another in the case record.

All Justice Department officials now are required to keep such records as one step in Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson's campaign to erase the public impression, fostered by Watergate and related scandals, that the government acts when powerful people pull strings. The regulation requires each department employee to keep a written record of oral communications with anyone he would not normally deal with in the routine handling of lawsuits, investigations and other pending matters.

Richardson said that includes members of Congress and their employees, White House and other government officials, and private individuals not directly involved in the matter. He said it does not include newsmen.

J. Stanley Pottinger, assistant attorney general, said the number of outsiders approaching his civil rights division office has declined but probably not because of the order itself.

"If I got many of these calls, I would regard this memo business as a nuisance," said Irving Jaffe, acting assistant attorney general in charge of the civil division. "But I don't get many. It hasn't been burdensome."

"It's the kind of thing most of us would make a memo of anyway," said Henry E. Petersen, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division.

Pottinger reported a total of 73 calls to his division, including one from a member of Congress, 21 from congressional staff members, 11 from pressure groups, and 32 from federal, state and local officials and private citizens.

The file also included eight memos of calls from newsmen. Pottinger said some employees are evidently under the mistaken impression such records are required.

Richardson said he hoped the rule would serve two purposes: providing "a contemporary record of contacts with the department that can be called upon should the need arise to rebut some accusation of improper influence," and discouraging "approaches to the department by those who are not confident of the purity of their motives."

Cold and impersonal

Faner Building viewed as 'concrete zeppelin'

David Kornblith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The new Faner Building, alias the "concrete zeppelin," will not win any beauty contests, many SIU students seem to agree.

The 900-foot humanities building "does not fit in with the rest of the campus," said Mike Murnane, a Health Education major from Indianapolis. Murnane, who had a class in the new structure, added, "Even though the building is contemporary it is not attractive."

The unattractiveness of the building is due to the large amount of concrete used, said Sandra Moore, a freshman psychology major from Chicago. Ms. Moore spotted "the eyesore because it is the only building on campus that is almost all concrete."

The "cold and impersonal" structure, as described by students, was planned by a firm in Philadelphia known as Geddes, Brecher, Qualls and Cunningham. Geddes, the dean of architecture at Princeton University, contributed most of the plans, said Dave Grobe, space administrator for the Facilities Planning Office.

Grobe added that the "Faner Building was designed by a company that puts its personality into its work."

Grobe agreed with students, saying Faner does not match the rest of the campus, but each building is unique.

The plans for Faner were agreed upon by the SIU Board of Trustees, said William C. Hart, campus architect. The Board sent a resolution to the Illinois Building Authority, a state agency that owns all major state buildings, which gave the final O.K. to start the building.

Presently, 15 of the proposed 39 classrooms are open, Grobe stated. Section "A," which was supposed to have been opened this quarter probably will not open until the beginning of next year, he added.

Plans for opening Section "A" had to be delayed until the State appropriated funds to lay down carpeting in the offices, Grobe said. The carpeting could not be ordered until the money was there, he explained.

Grobe said he was hopeful that Sections "B" and "C" would be opened by the summer of 1974.

The Faner Building will also be housing three new departments, Grobe said. The Facilities and Planning, Economics and Alumni Departments will move into the offices upon completion.

Grobe explained that the Social Welfare and Community Development Departments, which were originally scheduled to be housed in the Faner Building, will have to be moved to make room for the other three.

needs check before pull

NEW YORK (AP) — If you plan to pull a trailer, camper or boat this summer, check your owner's manual or your dealer first, says the Modine Manufacturing Company, maker of automotive cooling systems.

Many cooling systems are not designed for trailer towing applications and may require a larger radiator or transmission oil cooler. A quick check now may prevent a several hundred dollar repair bill later this summer.

Energy crisis spurs use of synthetic fuel tanks

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — The energy crisis has accelerated the production and use of synthetic petroleum tanks that hold up to as much as 100,000 gallons of fuel.

When manufacturers, municipalities and farmers are able to obtain an unexpected supply of fuel, the "rubber tank" can be inflated on a temporary basis to store the motor, aviation and other petroleum products.

Court rules Jesus, White House apart

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Court of Appeals says either the government or the Baby Jesus must stay out of the Christmas Pageant of Peace near the White House this year.

Apparently, Jesus will be the one to go.

"That's the way I would see it right now," said Arthur J. Lamb, chairman of the weeklong event. "A lot of people are upset, but it looks like we have no other choice."

The court's decision Wednesday applied to a longstanding suit which sought an outright ban of the nativity scene, traditionally part of the display that includes the national Christmas tree, from the 19-year-old pageant.

Instead, Judge Edward A. Tamm, Harold Levethal and Roger Robb imposed conditions under which the manger could remain—but they probably can't be met this year.

In effect, the court gave the government the option of withdrawing its full-fledged sponsorship of the event — although it still would be allowed to contribute technical and financial help — in order to avoid the church-state conflict.

Even though the dozens of performers and most of the trees, lights and other exhibits already are contributed by private interests, Lamb says federal planners like himself are too far along to pull out now.

"Our solicitors are working on it," said Lamb, a National Capitol Parks official. "But the way I see it, in order to make sure that we have a Pageant of Peace the nativity scene will have to be removed." The lawsuit was filed four years ago by an Episcopal minister, the president of the American Ethical Union, a rabbi, a Roman Catholic priest and an atheist.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported to the Daily Egyptian that a room rental charge will be added to the menu price for groups less than eight in the Student Center restaurant.

The rental charge instead pertains to the private meeting and dining rooms in the Student Center.

Gallery will house display of functional Indian artistry

By Dave Stearns
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The functional artistry of the American Indians will be on display Sunday through Oct. 26 at the Mitchell Gallery.

Consisting of 90 pieces of pottery and ten Navajo rugs, the exhibition, titled "Naked Clay" is from the Museum of the American Indian, the most prominent Amerindian museum in the country.

"The term 'primitive' cannot be applied to these objects which are worth the envy of more grandiose cultures in the world, said Evert A. Johnson, University Galleries

Placement slates exam for state department job

The Career Planning and Placement Office at SIU will offer an examination Dec. 8 for student job-hunters interested in an overseas position with the Department of State.

Issued by the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, the competitive written test will determine candidates for career appointments as foreign service officers or information officers.

Dick Kalina, placement consultant, said the test offers a good opportunity for all students, because eligibility is not restricted to certain majors. The State Department has indicated if wishes to have as broad a recruitment base as possible.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens at least 21 years old although 20-year-olds who have completed junior year of college are eligible.

Deadline date for filing an examination application is Oct. 31. The applications are available in the Career Planning and Placement Office, Woody Hall, room 302.

Depending on "qualifications, successful candidates will be appointed at a salary between $9,520 and $13,329. New officers will serve in probationary status until their first promotion.

Curator. "Even a cursory examination of this exhibit points to a richly endowed oboriginal past that, by contrast, illustrates the great impoverishment of our present-day mass-produced machine made items."

Johnson said this is the first time the New York museum has put together a traveling exhibit of the art.

"We think the exhibit is timely with the minorities movement in this country. But the main reason we have the exhibit is because it is very good art," he explained.

The art objects were made by the Indians—for functional purposes. Johnson suggested that the Indians "valued the quality or ordinary, everyday existence much more than the majority of contemporary Westerners do."

"These Indian arts are elemental—so rooted in a simple earthy way of life, in tune with nature, that a pure and honest strength ensues. They have an integrity utterly lacking in incongruity, facetiousness or shallow gaudiness."

The tradition of Amerindian pottery—with a history dating back 4,000 years—continues today, Johnson said, with the same archaic tools of production such as the dug fire pit (instead of a fueled kind) and without a potter's wheel.

The Navajo blankets in the exhibition—a counterpart to the pottery—"are equally fine as objects of esthetic enjoyment," he said. "One can still see fine weaving utilizing the same designs and materials made by contemporary Navajos," some of the rugs date back to the 1800's and are quite rare, Johnson said.

"It is heartening to realize that the horrors of inequities of white domination have neither destroyed nor altogether debilitated a fine tradition of craftsmanship and artistry that is one glory of the Indian," he said.

Exhibitions hours are 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Special federal grand jury opens investigation on Agnew; lawyers plan to end inquiry

By Lee Linder
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP)—A special federal grand jury opened in an unprecedented investigation Thursday, a political graft probe including Vice President Spiro T. Agnew. At the same time, Agnew's lawyers planned to go to court to stop the inquiry.

One of the lawyers, Judah Best, said in Washington that a motion would be filed, possibly as early as the first of next week, seeking a temporary injunction to halt the grand jury proceedings. Such a move had been expected from the lawyers Thursday morning before the jury session started.

"We are going to file," Best said, adding he did not feel that Agnew's argument against the grand jury probe would be hurt by filing for an injunction after the investigation was underway.

Three witnesses appeared before the grand jury during the first hours of work, but only one of the witnesses could be identified. He was William J. Muth, former vice president of the Baltimore City Council, now the office manager of an engineering consulting firm, Hurst-Rosche Engineers, Inc. Muth has been an Agnew fund raiser.

"The investigation of the vice president is a lot of bull," Muth said as he left the federal courthouse after testifying.

Agnew was notified last month by federal prosecutors that he was under investigation for possible criminal violation of tax, extortion, bribery and conspiracy laws. He has insisted he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

The allegations against him center on kickbacks from contractors during the 1960s when Agnew was chief executive of Baltimore County and then governor of Maryland. There also have been published reports which Agnew has denied that he received illegal cash after becoming vice president in 1969.

In a related development, three CBS television newsmen were detained by federal marshals after they were found on the roof of an eight-story building next door to the federal court house where the grand jury was sitting. Marshals said the men were filming the court house from an angle at which they could see the grand jury room.

At one point, U.S. Atty. George Beall, who is conducting the probe, personally questioned the men who were identified only as Herbert Alston, Al Colby and Dan Bowers. The men were released after several hours of questioning but their film was confiscated.

The grand jury session was being conducted under conditions of strictest secrecy. The corridors leading to the grand jury room were sealed off by federal marshals so newsmen could not see who was coming or going.

If and when Agnew's lawyers file a motion to stop the grand jury proceedings, the case will be heard by U.S. Dist. Court Judge Walter Hoffman of Norfolk, Va. He was appointed supervising judge after all nine District Court judges in Maryland disqualified themselves because they were either friends or business associates of Agnew. Edward S. Northrup, chief judge of the U.S. District Court in Maryland, said in an interview that Beall and Agnew's lawyers have "a gentlemen's agreement" that the lawyers will notify Beall in advance of their legal filing.

"Then there will be no evidence presented to the grand jury until Judge Hoffman acts on the matter," Northrup said.

If Hoffman refused to grant the temporary restraining order, Agnew's lawyers would have no appeal, Northrup said.

If the temporary order were issued, the judge said, there must be a hearing on it within 10 days. At that hearing, the constitutional question of whether a vice president can be indicted while in office would be argued and probably decided, he said.

Meanwhile, in Washington Agnew spent a relatively routine day, going to Capitol Hill briefly to perform his duties as president of the Senate, then putting final touches on a scheduled trip to the West Coast this weekend.

His office said tentative plans called for Agnew to fly from Washington to Palm Springs, Calif., Friday morning, speak to a Republican Women's group in Los Angeles Saturday, then stay in Palm Springs through Sunday.

In the House of Representatives, debate continued over Agnew's request Tuesday for a House investigation of the charges against him. That request was turned down Wednesday by Speaker Carl Albert on the grounds that the matter was before the courts.

Thursday, 14 Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee introduced a resolution calling for the committee to undertake the kind of investigation Agnew had requested.

A request for Albert to reconsider came from House Republican Whip, Leslie C. Arends of Illinois.

Albert said all the resolutions that have been introduced in the last few days by Republicans supporting Agnew's request have been referred to the House Rules Committee, over which the Democratic leadership has firm control.

State agencies launch drive against diseases

The Departments of Public Instruction and Public Health, have launched a cooperative effort to enforce regulations for immunization against childhood diseases in areas of Illinois where compliance is lagging.

Illinois law requires children entering grade school to be immunized against measles, rubella, polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough, calls for booster shots for children entering the fifth and ninth grades.

"It's time school districts, and health officials take the lead in seeing children are protected," State School Superintendent Michael J. Bakalis said in a press release.

Laurence W. Martin, superintendent of Carbondale's elementary schools, said the school system has been looking out for the health of the city's young pupils.

Martin said the elementary schools have always adhered to the regulations regarding child immunizations, and this year is no different.

"Our nurses are out checking on the appointments and sending out notices to those who don't have them in yet," Martin said in a telephone interview Thursday. "Of course it's difficult for some to get appointments."

Revenue sharing allocations have been a partial remedy to this delay. Funds awarded to the Jackson County Health Department have enabled it to conduct physicals and administer shots to children in families unable to afford the required physical, Martin said. The average cost of the physical plus shots is $27.

Martin said he hopes the elementary schools can make use of the new SIU medical school once it gets off the ground.

Whatever means is taken to provide the necessary shots is worth the time and expense, Bakalis said.

"It is a senseless waste when a child falls victim to a disease which could have been prevented with proper immunization," Bakalis said. "It only takes a minute to provide that protection."

Degree program discussed

SIU, NABA may form cooperative

By Marcia Bullard
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A cooperative educational agreement between SIU and the National Business Aircraft Association (NABA) may be established in the near future.

NABA officials will visit SIU within the month to review the aviation technology program and discuss the possibility sending some of their people here to earn baccalaureate degrees, said Gene Siebert, manager of the Southern Illinois Airport.

Siebert returned Thursday afternoon from a NABA convention in Dallas where foundations for the cooperative program were laid. President David Derge and several other SIU officials also attended the meeting.

Siebert said many of the NABA personnel have associate degrees in aviation, but are interested in studying for bachelor's degrees. A recent Technical Careers degree established in the School of Technical Careers (STC) would provide them with that opportunity.

SIU is also investigating an internship program with NABA for students here. NABA is composed of nearly 500 corporate members, including most of the suppliers to the aircraft industry.

"We're very optimistic about the prospects of this program," Siebert said Thursday. "We have to be cautious with something of this magnitude, but I would say response to our suggestions was very good."

He said only one university of the 25 represented sent administrators to the convention to offer similar programs. Siebert was elected president of the University Aviation Association at the meeting.

Donations of aircraft equipment to the STC aviation technology and flight training programs may also result from the convention, Siebert said. Most aircraft equipment at STC is donated.

That's a long range situation, though," he explained. "People have to know who you are and what you are doing before they will give you equipment."

Vice President for Development and Services T. Richard Mager, who accompanied the group, will not return to Carbondale until Monday. He reportedly was to attend another meeting before returning to campus.

Astronauts ready for trip home

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—The Skylab 2 astronauts underwent another medical examination aboard the USS New Orleans Thursday and prepared to fly home to Texas for a reunion with their wives.

Astronauts Alan L. Bean, Jack R. Lousma and Owen K. Garriott are making a recovery from their 59½ days in the weightlessness of space that's "just short of amazing," doctors said. But the three are "still a little weak in their feet, as you would expect."

Dr. Edward Burchard, one of several doctors examining the astronauts, said, "They all feel fine and look good."

The astronauts were to leave the New Orleans later Thursday and go to nearby North Island Naval Station to board a C140 Air Force transport for a flight to Ellington Air Force Base, near Houston.

Forestry prof presents paper to world group

George Weaver, assistant professor of forestry, recently presented a research paper at an international meeting of scientists in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

His paper on "Biomass Distributional Patterns in Adjacent Coniferous and Deciduous Forest Ecosystems" was given at sessions of the Working Party on Forest Biomass of the International Union of Forest Research Organizations. About 100 scientists from the United States, Canada, and Western Europe participated in the meetings.

Enroute to the Vancouver meetings, Weaver spent five days in the Pacific Northwest developing instructional materials in dendrology and studying growth patterns and kinds of tree and plant groups in the National Forests and parks of that region.

A native of Anna, Weaver received his bachelor's and master's degrees from SIU in the early 1960's and received his Ph. D from the University of Tennessee last year. He taught in Dongola and Anna schools between 1961 and 1967. He was a botany instructor at SIU for one year before joining the SIU forestry department faculty in 1971.

The transport was to arrive at Ellington about 7 p.m. EDT.

The astronauts were to spend Thursday night at home, but their children won't be there.

The spacemen are under a week-long limited quarantine designed to protect them from infection. Doctors are concerned that they lost some of their natural immunity to disease during their long space voyage.

Bean, Garriott and Lousma returned from history's longest space voyage Tuesday, splashing down in the Pacific Ocean after almost two months aboard America's space station.

Apple a day

School lacks money

Day Care Center charges clients for nursery service

By Joann de Fiebre
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Day care service for SIU student-parents has become a victim of the rising cost of living.

Pulliam Hall Day Care Center, formally a free nursery school for pre-school children of student-mothers at SIU is now charging for its services.

Jeanne Bortz, assistant director of the Division of Continuing Education for Women (CEW), which is in charge of the day care center, said the charge is necessary because funds were not available for the upkeep of the nursery school.

"We couldn't get funds to pay for the expenses (of the school) and salaries of the graduate students (who teach in the center)," she said.

"Before, money came out of state funds but the funds were cut and there was no money left."

Mrs. Bortz said the fee, which is 50 cents an hour per child, will be kept at a minimum so students can afford to use the school.

"If I find that we can make it for less, we'll lower the rates," she said.

Mrs. Bortz said the day care center "serves as a learning experience for the children, and not just a babysitting service," and is open for the convenience of student-mothers.

She said children can be placed in the day care center a "maximum of 11 hours a week" while the mother is at class.

The center also will try to accommodate children "if, on occasion, the mother needs to write a report or use the library" outside of class time, she said.

Mrs. Bortz said the day care center is able to handle 15 children during the morning and afternoon sessions with five openings for emergencies.

"We don't just serve 15 mothers," she said. "We have children in one or two hours at a time. This way we can serve more students."

Mrs. Bortz said she doesn't expect enrollment in the center to drop because of the charge.

"Last spring, 20 mothers wanted to make use of the center," she said. "We also sent out a questionnaire (asking if the mothers would use the center if there was a charge) and only one mother replied that she couldn't afford it."

The Pulliam Hall Day Care Center is open in cooperation with the Department of Child and Family and is staffed by two graduate students from the department.

The center is open from 8:30 a.m. noon and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. three days a week Friday. Children accepted.

School lacks money

Day Care Center charges clients for nursery service

By Joann de Fiebre
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Day care service for SIU student-parents has become a victim of the rising cost of living.

Pulliam Hall Day Care Center, formally a free nursery school for pre-school children of student-mothers at SIU is now charging for its services.

Jeanne Bortz, assistant director of the Division of Continuing Education for Women (CEW), which is in charge of the day care center, said the charge is necessary because funds were not available for the upkeep of the nursery school.

"We couldn't get funds to pay for the expenses (of the school) and salaries of the graduate students (who teach in the center)," she said.

"Before, money came out of state funds but the funds were cut and there was no money left."

Mrs. Bortz said the fee, which is 50 cents an hour per child, will be kept at a minimum so students can afford to use the school.

"If I find that we can make it for less, we'll lower the rates," she said.

Mrs. Bortz said the day care center "serves as a learning experience for the children, and not just a babysitting service," and is open for the convenience of student-mothers.

She said children can be placed in the day care center a "maximum of 11 hours a week" while the mother is at class.

The center also will try to accommodate children "if, on occasion, the mother needs to write a report or use the library" outside of class time, she said.

Mrs. Bortz said the day care center is able to handle 15 children during the morning and afternoon sessions with five openings for emergencies.

"We don't just serve 15 mothers," she said. "We have children in one or two hours at a time. This way we can serve more students."

Mrs. Bortz said she doesn't expect enrollment in the center to drop because of the charge.

"Last spring, 20 mothers wanted to make use of the center," she said. "We also sent out a questionnaire (asking if the mothers would use the center if there was a charge) and only one mother replied that she couldn't afford it."

The Pulliam Hall Day Care Center is open in cooperation with the Department of Child and Family and is staffed by two graduate students from the department.

The center is open from 8:30 a.m. noon and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. three days a week Friday. Children accepted.

Anyone interested in the center should contact the Division of Continuing Education for Women, 453-3381.

Nation heading for hills to get meat

By F. RICHARD CICCONE
Associated Press Writer

Roast venison, barbecued elk and squirrel stew may turn up on a lot of dinner tables this fall and winter as a substitute for roast beef and steak.

Americans fed up with high prices of beef, roast and poultry are hungry for meat and there are indications they will be tramping into the woods in record numbers shoot it.

"The rabbits and squirrels are going to have a rough time of it," says a Connecticut official.

Arthur Neil, a Massachusetts official, agreed. "From the number of telephone calls we have been receiving, it is anticipated we are going to have a lot of hunters who had n't hunted before," he said. "A lot more meat hunting will be going on than sport hunting."

Alaska, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Nevada, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah and Vermont already have received more license applications than in the past.

In many other states, some officials predict increases but no figures are available because license deadlines are not until October or November.

Idaho's 9,772 available nonresident elk and deer licenses were sold out a week before the hunting season started. "The woods are jammed with people hunting for the first time in their lives," reported a resident of one hunting area.

In Colorado, applications for elk license are up 33 per cent over last year when the state had 30,000 requests for 15,000 available licenses. There are 17,000 available licenses this year.

Connecticut, which requires persons who have not held a license in 10 years to take a safety course, has a record number of applicants for the course.

Mutiny, misconduct charges on ex-war prisoners dropped

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of the Navy John W. Warner dismissed mutiny and other misconduct charges against two former war prisoners Thursday but formally censured them for "failing to meet the standards expected to officers."

Warner said that evidence collected in a three-month investigation warranted further legal steps that might have led to court martial trials for Navy Capt. Walter E. Wilber and Marine Lt. Col. Edison W. Miller, highest rankers yet accused of misconduct while prisoners of the North Vietnamese.

But the Navy secretary decided it was more important to spare other former POWs "the disruptive effects of such proceedings."

As he announced letters of censure, Warner said that Wilber, 43, of Columbia Crossroads, Pa., and Miller, 42, of Newport Beach, Calif., will be retired "in the best interests of the naval service."

Even before Warner acted, Wilber had requested retirement and Miller, granted 60 per cent disability, was getting out of the service on medical grounds, a Pentagon spokesman acknowledged. Both men have served in uniform about 25 years and are entitled to retirement with pensions.

Warner's action leaves charges pending against four Army and Marine Corps enlisted men accused of misconduct while POWs. They already have been cleared once, but new charges were filed against them in July. Three other Army enlisted men have left the service after being cleared of similar charges.

The allegations against Wilber and Miller were filed by Rear Adm. James B. Stockdale, who was a senior POW during the years in which they were in captivity.

After Warner's decision was announced, the Navy quoted Stockdale as saying that the censure and impending retirement of Wilber and Miller "adequately serve the cause of justice."

Pilot blamed for Chicago plane crash

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Chicago plane crash that killed a congressman and the wife of convicted Watergate defendant E. Howard Hunt was caused by pilot error — not by sabotage, the National Transportation Safety Board said Thursday.

Forty-three of the 61 passengers and crew members died when the United Air Lines jet crashed into a residential area near Chicago's Midway Airport. Two other persons on the ground were killed in the crash and in the resulting fire. Five homes were destroyed.

Among those killed in the crash last Dec. 8 were Rep. George W. Collins, D-Ill., and CBS newswoman Michele Clark.

The safety board said the probable cause of the accident was "... the captain's failure to exercise positive flight management." This resulted, the board concluded, in the plane losing its air speed and going into a stall on a landing attempt.

The board said it found no evidence of sabotage or foul play in connection with the crash. Chicago legal researcher Sherman Skolnick had claimed the plane was sabotaged because, he claimed, 12 of the passengers were directly linked with Watergate. He said some of those passengers had documents on them that linked President Nixon and former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell with Watergate. Mrs. Hunt had $10,000 in $100 bills in her purse when she died.

The safety board, noting the "allegations of foul play which have been injected into the publicity surrounding this accident," said it condition that would have incapacitated the crew or of any interference with the crew in the performance of their duties.

"The finding of elevated levels of carbon monoxide and cyanide in some of the victims was consistent with death due to smoke inhalation in the conditions existing during the post-crash fire," the board added.

That statement referred to autopsies that showed traces of cyanide and carbon monoxide in the blood streams of some of the victims. The two chemicals are formed when wool, cotton, paper or plastic decompose during fires. Traces of the chemicals have been found in victims of other aircraft fires.

The board said its investigation showed the aircraft and its engines and flight controls were airworthy at the time of the accident.

It said the plane's captain had called for the first and second officers to read out a checklist while the plane was approaching the runway.

This meant the first officer could not make "any of the required altitude callouts," the board said, "nor does it appear that he was monitoring air speed and rate of descent."

The safety board said cockpit recorders showed the airplane's stall warning device went off just as the air traffic controller at Midway warned the pilot he missed his landing approach.

The pilot applied immediate thrust to the engines, the board said, but forgot to retract his spoilers—the moveable sections on the top of the wing that can be raised to speed up descent.

As a result of the spoilers' position, the plane did not level off, the board said. Instead of applying more power—a tactic that would offset the effect of the spoilers, the board said—the pilot, changed the angles on his wing flaps to 15 degrees.

This caused the plane to settle even more, the board said. The wing flaps then were changed back to their original position of 40 degrees and full thrust probably was applied, the board said. "At this point, however, the angle of attack may have been so high as to make recovery impossible even with full thrust developing."

The board said 20 seconds elapsed between the time the stall warning went off and the time the plane crashed.

In summary, the preponderance of evidence indicates that the rush of cockpit activities during the final descent caused a breakdown of the safeguards inherent in the task-sharing of a crew," the board said.

"The error-provoking environment set the stage for the crew's failure to notice that the spoilers were still extended at level-off and to arrest the rapid deterioration of air speed that followed."

Although it was snowing in Chicago at the time of the crash, the board said it found no evidence of icing in the plane's engines. It also found "no evidence of any medical ruled out the possibility that ice on the wings could have contributed to the accident.

The board recommended the Federal Aviation Administration reassess the methods used to familiarize flight crews with the effects of spoilers on aircraft. It also said the FAA should alert pilots to the hazards of the improper use of spoilers.

Mother clowns with happiness

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Virginia Streavel turns off the roles of housewife and mother by becoming a clown in her own world of make believe.

Seated at her dining room table, Mrs. Streavel turns herself into a happiness merchant.

"I'm beginning to feel like Lulu Belle," she said, rubbing white makeup onto her face.

She added big, wide, red lips, a few freckles and big, floppy eye lashes and donned a costume featuring gay pantaloons.

"I feel different," she said. "My character changes." Lulu Belle twirled in a pirouette. "Now I'm Lulu Belle. I'm a clown. I feel like a little girl."

Mrs. Robert Streavel, 50, had disappeared. She no longer was a housewife and a mother of three, but Lulu Belle, a happiness clown well-known around Dayton.

Mrs. Streavel often disappears. Sometimes she's Lulu Belle. Sometimes she's Hazel the Witch. Sometimes Mae West. Twice a year she's the Easter Bunny and Santa Claus.

"I enjoy making people smile," she said. "I'm really not professional. One of the biggest thrills I've ever had is working with the clowns at the Shrine circus."

Princess Anne, Mark to record wedding album

LONDON (AP)—Britain's Princess Anne, her husband-to-be Capt. Mark Phillips, the Archbishop of Canterbury and prestigious Westminster Abbey choir seem an unlikely group to make a hit record.

But the royal lineup may knock the Rolling Stones and other rock kings off their thrones at the top of the best-selling record charts.

A 50-minute longplaying album will be recorded by the British Broadcasting Corp. Nov. 14, when Anne marries Phillips.

The BBC plans to press 100,000 copies of the record. A first pressing of this size is usually reserved for big-name entertainers guaranteed to have a smash hit.

"It's the level of the Top 10 album, the sort of level you expect with the Stones and other regular chart-toppers," said Roy Tempest, sales and marketing manager of the BBC's record division.

The BBC had a surprise hit with Anne's brother Prince Charles six years ago when he was invested as Prince of Wales in a colorful and ancient ceremony at Caernarvon Castle in Wales.

The recording of that solemn ceremony sold 44,000 copies and BBC executives expect even bigger things from the wedding.

"I couldn't believe it at first," Tempest recalled. "But it proved to me that this sort of thing, if well packaged and presented, will compete with the Top 10 pop albums in the business."

Garrison freed, found innocent

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Controversial Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison was acquitted Thursday on charges of obstructing law enforcement by taking bribes to protect illegal gambling.

The federal jury deliberated more than three days before delivering its verdict.

The verdict ended a trial of six weeks.

Tempest is a onetime show business agent and promoter who handled a stable of rock 'n' roll groups.

Anne's wedding to Phillips, a commoner, has aroused massive interest in Britain. The couple's romance and secret engagement kept the nation talking for months. The controversy over the cost of their wedding has stirred many objections from critics who claim that Anne's mother, Queen Elizabeth II, should foot the bill instead of leaving it to the taxpayer.

The prospective bride, 23, and her 25-year-old groom are well known public figures—Anne as a princess who often struggled off the stiff conventions that bind the royal family and Phillips as the handsome cavalry officer who wooed and won her.

"We're calling the record 'Music for a Royal Wedding' because we feel commentary can be a bore after the second playing," Tempest said.

So after initial scene-setting words from a commentator, the Archbishop of Canterbury reading the marriage vows and Anne and Phillips saying they will, it will be all music.

Musicians and singers performing at the wedding will get a recording fee. But profits from record sales will likely be donated to charity by Anne.

Day leaving Sept. 30

Continuing Education dean to retire to life of travel

Raymond Harlan Dey, head of extension and continuing services at SIU since 1946, is retiring Sept. 30 to a life travel crafts.

Dey at various times in the past 27 years has been director of Placement Services, dean of the Summer Session, dean of Adult and Technical Education, professor of administration and supervision and University Dean of Extension Services. Since 1972 his title has been dean of the Division of Continuing Education.

He has seen the University's extension services grow from 22 classes taught by traveling faculty members in a dozen Southern Illinois communities, enabling public school teachers to pick up a few hours of credit to a far flung complex of activities now designated as "continuing education"—campus conferences, seminars, lecture series, workshops, foreign study and tours, off-campus educational centers.

"In those early years, many of our Southern Illinois teachers held only two-year teaching certificates, and our extension classes made it possible for them to complete their degrees and obtain permanent certification," Dey recalled. "I got to know hundreds of them personally as we added Saturday and night classes on the campus so they could advance more rapidly."

"Then we began adding graduate classes to the extension program so they could upgrade themselves professionally, and adult credit and non-credit classes in a variety of non-academic subjects."

SIU-Edwardsville is the outgrowth of Dey's action in opening a study center at Belleville to serve students in the metropolitan areas around East St. Louis.

It was Dey who first suggested the idea of setting up vocational classes at old Ordnance Plant near Carbondale to teach such subjects as welding, auto mechanics, drafting, secretarial work and other skills.

"There was widespread unemployment in Southern Illinois, and at the same time our area business and industries were short on skilled personnel," he said, "so these classes met two needs."

From that concept sprang Vocational Technical Institute, which, under its own dean, became a pattern for similar manpower training programs across the country.

Popularity of a journalism class taught by an SIU professor in Menard State Penitentiary at Chester in 1956 prompted Dey to begin offering other courses to the prisoners.

During his six years as dean of the Summer Session, Dey administered the programs offered by 56 University departments. He provided funds from the Summer Session budget to inaugurate a summer music theater, a summer touring theater and a touring art exhibit.

Dey explored the potential of summer charter flights to Europe

for students to study foreign language, music, history, marketing and other subjects "on site."

Last year, as the "women's lib" movement burgeoned, a special section in Dey's office was created on Continuing Education for Women, to develop adult courses and lectures for women. Even a child-care service is provided to help mothers attending the sessions.

The extension or continuing education services are an "across the board" arm of the University, Dey pointed out. The Division has no faculty of its own, but draws on teachers and specialists from all branches and departments for their expertise. Faculty members who travel to area communities to hold credit classes generally do so as a part of their regular teaching load, he said.

"I have been amazed at their dedication," he said. "In the old days, after World War II, when gasoline and tires were still scarce, we sent many of them to their classes by taxi. Often a cab would leave the campus with a load, dropping off one at Chester, the next at Waterloo, another at Belleville and the last at Edwardsville. All would have to wait until the Edwardsville class was over for the return journey, and the whole party would reach Carbondale at 1 or 2 a.m."

Dey a native of Plainview, was a public school administrator before coming to SIU. A graduate of the University of Illinois in electrical engineering, he had completed the master's degree at that institution in educational administration.

He had taught at Pana Twp. High School, and had served as superintendent of public schools at Rosamond and Rankin and of Carbondale High Schools. After joining the SIU staff, he continued his education at Washington University, receiving the doctorate in educational administration in 1952.

He is a member of the Illinois and national education associations and the state and national adult education associations.

Dey and his wife, the former Elma Wittman of Nokomis have three children Marcia, Patricia and Clifford.

The Deys plan to keep Carbondale as their base of operations, but travel looms large in their future (a nephew of Mrs. Dey's will live in their home during their absences.) They recently bought an Airstream trailer, complete with radio, stereo and facilities for television and air-conditioning which they plan to install before starting out.

"I grew up in a farm, and never lost my love for the outdoors," Dey said. "We started camping when the children were small, but when they married and moved away we abandoned camping in order to spend our vacations with them. Now, with leisure time, we plan to travel in comfort two or three months at a time, returning periodically to Carbondale."

Both Dey and Mrs. Dey (who retired July 1 as a General Studies adviser in the Advisement Center) are musically inclined, and both play the piano and organ. Dey also is an enthusiastic do-it-yourselfer, and expects to spend a great deal of time when in Carbondale working in his well-equipped shop, which affords both carpenter tools and welding facilities.

Brandt says U.S. presence in Europe essential to world

CHICAGO (AP)—West German Chancellor Willy Brandt said Thursday the continued presence of combat-ready U.S. forces in Europe is essential to world security.

"The presence of American troops must not be reduced in status to a symbolic contribution," said Brandt, a day after President Nixon's administration narrowly beat back a Senate attempt to reduce by 40 per cent U.S. forces stationed on foreign soil.

"Their combat efficiency is necessary for the military balance between East and West," Brandt said in an address before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations. "The potential of the United States and their commitment to and in Europe cannot be replaced."

Brandt, who will meet with President Nixon in Washington this weekend, said, "So much is now in a state of flux, the principles which bind us and our interests together need to be reaffirmed."

He said the obligations and rights under the Atlantic Alliance must be coordinated with those of the European Community.

He called for "... a declaration on the basic order of relations between the United States and the members of the present European Community and the future European Union."

He emphasized the new Atlantic document must "describe our security in the most substantive terms possible."

Brandt said that in the monetary field West Germany has shown it is prepared to make sacrifices.

"However, on military questions," he continued, "there is a psychological limit which I consider to be a political circumstance of the first order ... Neither for our relationship with our neighbors in the East nor for our relationship with our friends in the West would it be a good thing for the specific weight of the German Armed Forces to be considerably strengthened."

The chancellor asserted that the U.S. and the European Community face a common task "of fundamentally harmonizing their interests with those of that important industrial and trading nation of Japan for their mutual benefit."

"We have neither the right, nor are we in a position, to leave the country in the role of a dynamic outsider—a role from which it has really long since detached itself," he said.

Brandt said securing the balance of power in this world may take until year 2000 and will be decided "by the credibility of our vision."

Earlier, the chancellor told a luncheon sponsored by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley that the cooperation and the start of integration of Western European states in the European Community has given a new self-confidence in Europe.

"This new European self-confidence is one of the most productive forces of this century and it may be one of the most positive, not only for Europe."

"In saying this I am not overlooking the fact that in the process of its unification Western Europe will have to take on more responsibility of its own."

Senate refuses to slow Trident sub development

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate refused Thursday to block the Navy's full speed ahead schedule for development and production of a $13 billion fleet of Trident submarines.

By a 49 to 47 vote, the Senate turned down an amendment to a $21 billion weapons authorization bill to stretch out production two years, and delay completion of the first 10 of the larger vessels by two years.

The Navy proposes to get the first of the 540-foot submarines, equipped with a new longer range 4,000-mile Trident missile, ready for launching by 1978.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren said President Nixon was "extremely gratified" with the rejection of the Trident amendment. Warren also restated the President's delight with the defeat of a move Wednesday to cut U.S. troop strength in Europe.

The Trident slowdown was proposed by Sens. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., and Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., senior members of the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on research and development.

They argued that the Navy plan to pull all 10 Trident submarines under construction before the first can be tested in operation risks, without military justification, costly engineering errors.

China inquires about joining Western monetary system

By Fred Coleman
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—China took a first step this week toward joining the Western world's monetary system by formally challenging Taiwan's membership in the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank.

Officials announced Thursday that Peking had officially inquired about membership in the fund and bank in letters received Wednesday at their headquarters in Washington.

The executive boards of the two institutions will consider the Chinese inquiries in October, they said.

Tanzania, an East African nation that receives most of its aid from Peking, told the annual meetings of the fund and the bank here that China should be admitted because it is an important aid-giving nation.

IMF officials said the Tanzanian speech was the first official bid to consider Peking's membership.

A spokesman for the fund said the Chinese letters to Washington "certainly are a challenge to Taiwan's membership," although it was not clear whether the Chinese had formally applied to join.

The question of Chinese membership came as the 126-member nations of the United Nations IMF were trying to work out a new monetary system for financing world trade. These deliberations have excluded Moscow and Peking, which together represent more than one billion people.

State surplus from 1973 put at $110 million

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Gov. Daniel Walker's budget director estimated Thursday the state has a surplus of about $110 million left from fiscal year 1973 revenue that might be spent in 1974.

Director Harold Hovey made the calculation in a budget briefing for news media. A surplus of $100 million was estimated recently by state Controller George Lindberg Jr.

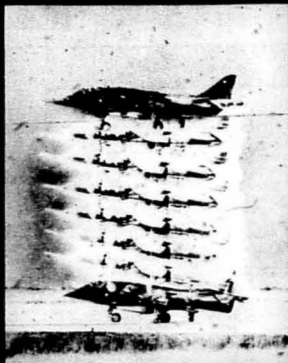

Newsman questioned Hovey about the availability of the $110 million for spending by the General Assembly in its October sessions.

The director said if the General Assembly overrides any of the vetoes of Walker of appropriation bills totalling about $500 million, the reinstatement of those vetoed appropriations could cancel the $110 million.

The budget director also noted that Walker has vetoed the tax relief plan of House Speaker W. Robert Blair, estimated to cost about $170 million in 1974, and substituted his own plan.

It will cost about $110 million Blair has declared he would seek an override of the this veto.

Man twice tried for murder of black leader Medger Evers arrested with live time bomb

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Byron De La Beckwith, tried twice but never convicted in the 1963 murder of civil rights leader Medger Evers was arrested Thursday as he drove into New Orleans with a ticking time bomb that was set to go off later in the day.

Acting on information, New Orleans police intelligence officers were waiting for Beckwith and stopped him as he drove into the city limits at about 3 a.m. In addition to the dynamite time bomb, police said Beckwith carried three rifles, a pistol, several boxes of ammunition and the barrel from a .50 caliber machine gun.

Officers said the bomb, containing "a large amount" of dynamite, was pre-set to explode some time within 12 hours of when it was found. They would not place an exact time. A spokesman said police have a theory on what Beckwith was planning to do with the bomb. They declined to reveal the theory, saying that to do so would be commenting on the evidence.

Beckwith was ordered held for U.S. marshals while federal officials prepared a charge in connection with the time bomb.

In a brief news conference at Parish Prison, Beckwith, a 52-year-old Greenwood, Miss., salesman, said, "I was coming to New Orleans to sell china."

Asked about the dynamite in the time bomb, he replied, "I'll just say a lot of dynamite is used in the Delta to blow up stumps." He would not say if he planned to blow up any stumps in New Orleans.

A police spokesman refused to give any details about what led them to the arrest, or about what had caused intelligence officers to be involved, except to say they had information that Beckwith was coming to New Orleans to commit a crime.

At a bond hearing in Criminal District Court, Beckwith was booked on state charges of aggravated assault, carrying a concealed weapon and attempted aggravated arson.

As Beckwith looked on, Magistrate Robert Collins asked the basis of the arson charge. A spokesman for the district attorney's office said he did not know, but it must be valid since intelligence officers "very, very rarely make arrests."

Police said later that the intelligence unit specializes in subversive activities, civil rights, and organized crime.

Beckwith was ordered held on $8,500 bond on the state charges, and he immediately began efforts to raise it. However, before he could post the necessary $850 to get a bonding company to bail him out, federal officials asked the state to hold Beckwith for them in connection with the explosives.

Asked if the arrest by intelligence officers had anything to do with the recent announcement that a person or persons had planned to kill President Nixon in New Orleans, a spokesman said, "No."

Beckwith appeared somewhat thinner than he did 10 years ago when he was tried twice in the Medgar Evers murder case in Jackson, Miss. Both those trials ended in hung juries, and technically Beckwith is still charged in the case. However, authorities have said that realistically the case is dead.

Evers, a Mississippi field secretary for the NAACP, was shot to death in his carport on June 12, 1963. A rifle was found nearby, and the FBI said a fresh fingerprint on its scope was Beckwith's.

Beckwith took the stand in his first trial and testified for 2½ hours. In the second trial, a Greenwood policeman testified Beckwith was in Greenwood more than 50 miles away at the time Evers was killed.

Beckwith, who maintained his home in Greenwood since the trials, ran for Mississippi lieutenant governor in 1967 and lost.

City plans to construct shelters at bus stops

A plan to put up shelters at Carbondale grade school bus stops is well underway, explained Burton Bond of the SIU School of Technical Careers.

The shelters would be constructed as a training project for the Golconda Jobs Corps at no cost to the school system.

Burton, who chairs the committee planning the project, said the local PTA is seeking support in the neighborhoods for the shelters, so permission can be granted to place them on private property away from the street.

The committee's task force and the PTA met Friday to decide on the priority of shelter locations. Once the plans are finalized and support of homeowners is obtained, Burton said, the proposal would go to the City Council for its approval.

If the City Council gives the green light, the first few 5-foot by 8-foot wooden structures will be built in time for the winter season, Burton said.

'Firing Line' on WSIU-TV

Show to debate energy crisis

William F. Buckley's "Firing Line" program carried weekly by WSIU-TV will delve into the issue of "The Energy Crisis and Energy Policy." The guests will be Morris Adelman of M.I.T. and Jock Ritchie, president of Asiatic Petroleum Corporation. WSIU-TV will broadcast the program at 7:00 p.m. Friday.

Have you had any difficulty buying gasoline this summer? Did your city experience a brown out? Is America in a position to be blackmailed by Middle Eastern oil kingdoms? Is there an energy crisis facing the nation and the world, or is the fuel supply being shrewdly manipulated by a few elite sources for its own ends?

For months the debate over these and several related questions has been raging and increasing in volume. There is a difference of opinion; and each side, disputing the other's facts, can present strong arguments. The government seems to be caught in the middle as the representative of an uncertain public. With all the dispute and doubt, clear answers or solutions seem to be a long way off.

Adelman, in the department of economics at M.I.T., is an expert on the energy situation regarding the economics of the petroleum market. Earlier this year he appeared on the NPR program "Cambridge Forum," discussing whether American's energy system is collapsing. He has authored a book called "The World Petroleum Market," prepared on behalf of the organization of Resources for the Future, and last spring he published an article in Foreign Policy. "Is the Oil Shortage Real?" He argues that not only is the world energy crisis a fiction, but also that to the extent there is a foreign policy problem, it is in considerable part caused by inept policies of the U.S. government.

Jock Ritchie has been president of Asiatic Petroleum Corporation for six years. British born and educated, he has worked for Royal Dutch Shell, (of which Asiatic is a subsidiary) in the Middle East, South America, and Europe in various capacities. He first became involved in international oil dealings in 1938. Recently he has spoken at university sponsored petroleum seminars and on occasion has crossed verbal swords with Professor Adelman on the issue of the world petroleum supply.

Nixon nominee rejects price controls

WASHINGTON (AP)—The newest member of President Nixon's inner circle of economic advisers has called for a quick end to the government's Phase 4 price control program, saying it is both bad economics and bad politics.

William Felner, nominated Monday by Nixon to his Council of Economic Advisers, said Thursday he favors allowing prices to change according to market forces.

He added he doesn't think prices will increase too much if controls end now.

"I wouldn't expect everything would come down in price, but I wouldn't expect a really large rise," Felner said at a news conference.

Felner, 68, a retired Yale University economics professor, also said he thought the traditional goal of 4 per cent unemployment is no longer realistic.

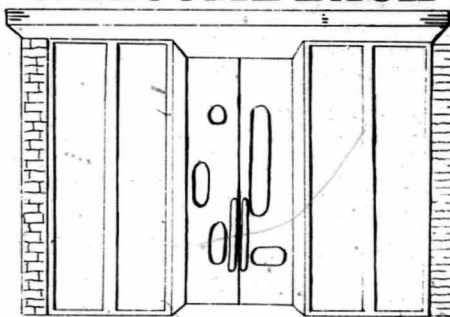

The nomination of Felner to the three-member council must be approved by the Senate. It was unusual for a man in his position to state his views publicly before Congress has had a chance to question him.

Fonner lawyers try to win acquittal for lack of evidence

DECATUR (AP)—Defense
lawyers in the Burton D. Fonner murder trial fought Thursday to win him a quick acquittal, saying the state failed to prove it was he who slashed the throat of undercover agent Peter Lackey.

Judge John B. Wright of Circuit Court listened to 22 minutes of argument from defense attorney Robert Owen, a brief rebuttal from chief prosecutor Thomas Burnham and then said drily: "The motion is denied." The ruling had been expected and moves the trial to the stage where Owen will begin Friday to put defense witnesses on the stand.

Earlier, Burnham had called his 46th and final witness and, after a brief questioning, declared at 2:26
p.m.: "The prosecution rests."

In asking Wright to acquit Fonner immediately, Owen argued that there "just isn't any evidence in this case to corroborate what might be called a confession."

A girl friend of Fonner, Barbara Bett, 23, of Jerseyville, had testified he admitted to her that he killed

Lackey, an agent of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation who had arrested him on narcotics charges.
"And the confession, itself, has deficiencies," Owen said.

"The confession was only a garbled statement from a girl who was questioned and questioned for hours," he said.

Burnham told Wright that if the judge believes "this jury, right now, could return a guilty verdict that you should not overrule, then we would proceed."

SIU coach named college tennis editor

SIU tennis coach John R. (Dick) Lefevre has been named college tennis editor for the magazine "Tennis, U.S.A." the official publication of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association. Lefevre will write a monthly column on intercollegiate tennis activities and personalities. His first column will be in the November issue in which he explains the many college tennis organizations and associations that exist. "More than 1,000 colleges now have tennis teams," Lefevre said.

Before moving to "Tennis, U.S.A." Lefevre spent two years writing a column for "Tennis" another net magazine. Lefevre's other publications include an article in the "World of Tennis-73" a year book dealing with intercollegiate tennis in the U.S.

"I have accepted to write another article for the 1974 year book," he said.

In 1955 Lefevre published a book entitled "Tennis-Methods for Group Instruction" which is still in use at many colleges.

Lefevre has coached the Saluki tennis team since 1955. In 1961 he was named "Tennis Coach of the Year" by the Rockne Foundation.

Reds suspend Tolan for rest of '73 season

CINCINNATI (AP) — Outfielder Bobby Tolan was suspended by the Cincinnati Reds for the rest of the regular baseball season, the Reds announced Thursday.

Bobby Howsam, president of the NL West division winners, said in a statement Tolan "has been suspended for a continued refusal to take and participate in regular batting and fielding practice and for a lack of interest. I feel his attitude has been divisive."

Tolan, who turns 28 in November, came back from a serious Achilles tendon injury in 1972 to bat .283 and steal 42 bases. He is batting .206 this year.

Terriers to attempt to upset Tigers

Carbondale High Terriers will attempt to stop the Herrin Tigers win streak at 20 games when the two teams meet at 8 p.m. Friday at Blyer Field in Carbondale.

"Herrin has a good ball club but we've got one of the toughest schedules in Southern Illinois," said Vern Pollock, coach of the Terriers.

"Our offense is not as bad as some people have made it seem," Pollock said. "If I didn't think we could beat them I'd tell them not to bother to show up," he added.

Cards stay in pennant race

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis' Reggie Cleveland faced only 27 batters—the minimum number possible in a regulation nine innings—and shutout the Chicago Cubs 2-0 on a one-hitter Thursday night.

Ken Rudolph's sixth inning single was the only hit Cleveland yielded.

Cubs' pitcher Burt Hooton then attempted a sacrifice bunt but wound up grounding out into a double play. After that Cleveland took care of the next nine Cubs in order.

Cleveland, who struck out three and walked none, was given all the necessary runs on Lou Brock's two-run homer in the sixth inning.

The victory kept the third-place Cardinals' hopes alive in the National League East, moving them 2½ games behind first-place

'Looking for volunteers'

YMCA provides activities for all

By Kenneth Pilarski
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

"YMCA" literally stands for an organization of young men, but the Jackson County YMCA, 2500 West Sunset Drive, offers a program of activities for persons of both sexes and all ages.

The "Y," open from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Sunday, offers a variety of activities for every age. Activities for preschoolers include gym and swim, gymnastics, creative dance and mom-and-tot swimming.

Gymnastics, karate, creative art, dance, swimming lessons, archery, soccer and trampoline instruction are just a few of the classes offered for youth. The adults can participate in such activities as knitting, gymnastics, exercising, swimming, tennis or volleyball.

Membership in the Jackson County YMCA is open to everyone at $25 per year. Benefits of membership include reduced fees in most classes (usually one-half of the non-member fees), program director Mary Ann Stonecipher said.

"For those who cannot afford to pay their fees a scholarship is offered by the 'Y' in which the fees are adjusted to meet the financial needs of the person," she added.

The "Y" also provides a babysitting service for parents who work or attend school. The service runs from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The fee is 40 cents per hour per child for "Y" members and 60 cents per hour per child for nonmembers. All ages of children are accepted. Two experienced babysitters are on duty at all times.

A fully equipped weightlifting room is available to all adult members and nonmembers over 18 years old, Ms. Stonecipher said. Non-members may purchase a card for $7.50, good for 12 admissions or may pay 75 cents for each visit, she added.

Supine press, two-arm press, two-arm curl, prone arch back and supine lateral raises are some of the fundamental exercises that can be performed with the dumbbells or barbells in the weight room.

The "Y's" classes run on the same schedule as the SIU quarters Ms. Stonecipher said. "This makes it convenient for the many SIU students who volunteer to help us," she added.

"We are always looking for volunteers. We can never get enough," she said.

West ready to quit 'bad team' Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Wilt Chamberlain is gone and Jerry West says he's almost certain to quit—which would leave the Los Angeles Lakers with only two-fifths of the starting team that made a shambles of the National Basketball Association two years ago.

Chamberlain jumped Wednesday to the San Diego Conquistadors of the American Basketball Association. He will serve as coach and, unless the Lakers succeed in court, as a player, too.

Forward Jim McMillian was traded to Buffalo for 7-foot center-Elmore Smith—"a move for the future," Pete Newell, general manager, had said. Now it's a deal for the president.

West, 35-year-old perennial all-pro guard, says he wants his contract renegotiated for security, not money. He said he doesn't want to play for what he calls a bad team and adds that it's "99 per cent I won't play."

In addition to West, only Happy Hairston, a forward, and guard Gail Goodrich remain as veteran starters of the 1971-72 championship team that won 33 straight games and 69 for the regular season, both league records.

West, after observing an intrasquad game, said, "Right now the Lakers are a last-place team." He added, "The main thing is I don't want to wind up on a bad team. Right now that's what the Lakers are."

Aaron's long march on home run mark delayed by rain-out

ATLANTA (AP)—Hank Aaron's march toward Babe Ruth's record 714 career home runs was delayed Thursday night when the scheduled baseball game between the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves was rained out.

The 39-year-old Atlanta Braves star remained two shy of Babe Ruth's all-time record of 714 home runs going into Thursday night's game against the Dodgers.

After that record falls, Aaron said, "There's just nothing left to do. I can't catch Ty Cobb in hits. I'll let that one alone."

Aaron currently ranks No. 4 on the all-time hit list behind Cobb's 4,191, Stan Musial's 3,630 and Tris Speaker's 3,515 hits. Aaron currently has 3,503 and should soar past Speaker early next season.

"Four-thousand," he said. "That's a lot. I look at my little old 3,500 and see how hard that was to get."

Asked if he might play only a part of the year and then retire, Aaron said, "No. I'll definitely play next year."

However, he added, "I don't want to play any longer than next year. I would like to see my kids before they get out of school."

Aaron says he believes he can end up with 735 lifetime home runs, which is only 23 more than he currently has.

"Only?" he asked. "What do you mean only? That's a lot for a 40-year-old man."

He also said he has some special ways to celebrate his 714th and 715th home runs.

"I'm not saying right now what they'll be," Aaron said, "but they'll be special, and different for each home run."
