Students offer views on Clinton

Clinton to arrive at Air Force base, speech site unknown

By David R. Kazak

Costello Spokesman Brian Lott said White House officials told him that it is Clinton's intention to speak at noon Sept. 11, and although White House Spokeswoman Laura Schwartz would not confirm any specific times or locations, she did say Clinton will arrive sometime Anticipation is mounting around campus about the upcoming visit of President Clinton. Some students say they are curious what he has to say and why he picked SIUC.

"I think anytime you see the president it's going to be exciting because he's the most important guy in the U.S.," Patrick Hewitt, a junior in athletic training from Broadwell, said. "I guess he picked SIUC because it's in the heartland and Illinois is an important part of his campaign."

Tara Marshall, a senior in theater from Mason City, said it is great that Clinton is coming to SIUC when he could go to a bigger or more prestigious school in Illinois.

"A lot of people's first reaction, though, is that he is just trying to get more votes, and he doesn't really care about SIUC," Marshall said.

Brad Blades, a junior in business management from Marion, said the thrill of seeing a president up close and in person electrifies most students.

"This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to see the president actually in the same place as you," Blades said.

"I would like to see him."

Hewitt said he is less interested in what Clinton has to say than he is about simply seeing the president.

"This is the closest I'll probably ever get to seeing the president," Hewitt said.

Robin Myers, a graduate student from Pennsylvania, said she is interested in what Clinton is going to talk about.

"I would like him to address the issues we've been hearing about—the cuts in loans and grants, especially for graduate students," Myers

Students lose jobs, protest

By Signe Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

At least 26 students lost their on-campus jobs this week when the Lakeside Deli and Saluki Grill drastically reduced hours of service.

The grill and deli reduced hours Tuesday to combat what administrators say was improper use of the facilities, but some student workers at the grills say the cuts are unfair to them.

Both facilities, originally open 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., now do not open until 5 p.m.

University Housing decided Friday to reduce the hours, and some students say they did not receive notice until the changes went into effect on Tuesday.

Student worker Megan Fleming, manager of Lakeside Deli, said she was told to fire 16 of 24 students on Tuesday by an administrative official.

"The administration just told us Friday we were closing down. Some didn't even know until they saw the paper Tuesday," Fleming said.

Student worker Rick Shadid, manager of the Saluki Grill, said University Housing took polls last year across campus to find out what the students were wanting in their food service. Eighty-five percent of

Location of China for women's conference creates controversy

By Dustin Coleman

Xinyi Zhou, a graduate student in business and administration from Changchun, China, said she remembers how her grandmother had to act while she lived in a country that was unfair to women.

"She was supposed to stay home and take care of the family and couldn't work outside," she said. "Chinese women could not even show their teeth while they laughed, even though men could."

But Zhou said times have changed and conditions for women have become better. She said, this is why, Beijing, China was a good choice for the location of the United Nations Conference on Women.

The logic behind choosing China as the location has been criticized by many world leaders.

China, a country that has one-fifth of the world's population, and as many women as North America has people, has been under fire for low standards of human rights.

China's policies on one birth per family, forced abortions and rumors of the killing of newborn females have drawn criticism from human rights activist around the world, including first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Tuesday, Clinton spoke at the women's conference. She criticized many countries, including China, on their treatment of women.

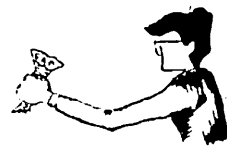

Kitty Trescott, a member of the U.S.-China Peoples Friendship Association, said she commends the focus that Mrs. Clinton has taken at the conference.

"It isn't just China that is known for the treatment of women that we would consider inhuman," she said.

BOSNIAN SERB COMMANDER MAIN NATO THREAT —

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina—Indicted war criminal, chess master, aficionado of table tennis and political theory, Ratko Mladic, the charismatic commander of the Bosnian Serb military, has made himself the key figure in the Balkans this week by defying NATO airstrikes and refusing to withdraw his heavy weapons from around Sarajevo. The stance of the stubborn Serb general has quickly become the first concern of NATO leaders, who fear the Serbs may simply endure bombing attacks until the West's limited target list is exhausted and its newfound resolve falters. As a result, Mladic's motivations and his ability to sustain his tough policy are crucial to the outcome of the current crisis and, in the long run, to the resolution of Bosnia's war.

FRANCE REBUFS CRITICISM OF NUCLEAR TEST —

PARIS—France Wednesday rebuffed the tide of global condemnation provoked by the first in a planned series of underground nuclear explosions in the South Pacific and said it will complete a testing program it considers necessary to ensure a future nuclear deterrent. Prime Minister Alain Juppe's government said after a cabinet meeting chaired by President Jacques Chirac that France will stand "absolutely firm" against the surge of worldwide protests and retaliate against any trade or diplomatic sanctions instigated by opponents of its nuclear tests. Apart from political opposition, domestic and foreign protests have focused primarily on environmental concerns. Japan, Australia and New Zealand have led the chorus of Asian and Pacific nations protesting France's perceived arrogance in testing weapons half a world away from home.

COAL BURNING PROCESS INCREASES ELECTRICITY —

WASHINGTON—A small engineering company in Kennebunk, Maine, has developed a ceramic technology that it says can dramatically increase the amount of electricity generated from burning coal. Hague International said the new ceramic air heater technology produces 20 percent more electricity per pound of coal than conventional power plants, thus both sharply lowering the cost of power and reducing pollution. The technology could be used to rejuvenate more than 280 aging power plants across the United States, said Stephen B. Young, program manager at a test site for the technology in Kennebunk. "Making ceramic heat exchangers that can provide the high-temperature, high-pressure air that a gas turbine needs to operate is not easy, but we have done it," Young said.

MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEM SPENDING EXPANDED —

WASHINGTON—The Senate voted Wednesday to expand and accelerate plans for a national system of defenses against ballistic missile attack as part of a military spending package for next year that would force the Clinton administration to buy more weapons than it wants. But the legislation, scaled back to avoid Democratic delaying tactics, stops short of original Republican plans to commit the United States to deploy a missile-defense system in seven years. The administration said that would have broken the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty and stalled arms-reduction efforts. Instead, the legislation requires only that a missile-defense system be developed by 2003, with Congress having to vote again before it could be deployed. Even with the bipartisan compromise on missile defense, Minority Leader Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., said the legislation is still too weapons-heavy and faces a presidential veto that Congress would be hard-pressed to override.

In the Sept. 6 issue of the Daily Egyptian, Don Priddy of the Carbondale Police department said he incorrectly described the procedure for handcuffing Carlton Alexander. In the story, Priddy said Alexander was handcuffed in the front. Priddy said he meant to say Alexander was cuffed from behind and then manipulated the handcuffs to the front.

Student government focuses on Clinton visit

By Wendy J. Allyn
and Marc Chase
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Officials from two SIUC student government groups say they know they will play a role in making students aware of the presidential visit scheduled for Sept. 11, but are still unsure of their specific duties once the president arrives.

Duane Sherman, Undergraduate Student Government president, said at an emergency meeting Wednesday that he is counting on all the senators to help prepare the campus for President Bill Clinton's visit.

Sherman said USG will be posting fliers around the campus and the city to advertise the visit. He also said a team of White House officials met with him Wednesday and asked USG to pass out handbills on the day of the visit.

Signs will be posted around campus Sept. 11 to direct students to the site where Clinton will deliver his speech, Sherman said.

He said students with SIUC identification cards will receive preferential seating in the speech area.

Dan Piper, USG governmental affairs commissioner, said the White House has not confirmed officially if Clinton will be speaking at a Death of Education rally sponsored by the United States Student Association.

Piper said USG will be collecting student signatures on USSA petitions opposing government cuts to student financial aid and will sponsor voter registration drives during Clinton's visit.

"Petitions are being distributed by the student power committee through USG," Piper said. "Let's spread the word and get a lot of people signed up."

Bill Karrow, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said he also met with the White House officials yesterday, but is still unsure of GPSC's official role in preparing for Clinton's visit.

He said GPSC is currently contacting other regional universities, inviting the schools to participate in campus activities when Clinton arrives.

"GPSC is now calling 44 universities in the area and encouraging those universities to participate," Karrow said.

Area farmland to be restored as wetlands

By Lori D. Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Mississippi River Corridor Project recently received a $9 million grant to assist in turning farmland back to wetlands.

Louise Odegaard, forest supervisor for the Shawnee National Forest, said there are two wetland projects including the Inahgeh Wetland project in Jackson, Union and Alexander counties and the Tanahkwe Project in Jackson and Monroe counties, Odegaard said.

The Inahgeh Project is comprised of 10,000-11,000 acres, and the Tanahkwe Project is comprised of more than 3,700 acres.

The project will involve planting trees and plants in an attempt to turn the land back to its natural state, Odegaard said.

The money is from the Emergency Wetlands Reserve Program that was established after the 1993 floods to help the land recover from the floods, and prevent future flooding, Odegaard said.

"I think it's fantastic. I see it as a real opportunity to preserve (wetland) along the Mississippi River. We're not out to take the farmer's land. They (the farmers) are only selling us marginal farmland. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity."

Jim Wallace of the Resource Conservation and Development Area said project leaders are addressing public concerns including: the loss of county tax, loss of drainage maintenance assessment, blocking of existing drainage system, and the loss of farmland.

"What we're seeing here is an extremely cooperative effort," Wallace said.

Wallace said the project is an effort through three agencies: the Natural Resources Conservation Service, the Forest Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Agency.

All persons involved in the project are willing to sell their land, Odegaard said. She said people are coming to the project leaders asking them about the project and signing up.

Holly Harris, Student Environmental Center representative, said, "I think it's top priority to leave the natural wetlands and restore the wetlands. That land isn't suitable for farmland because of its tendency to flood."

Odegaard said the project is expected to take six to nine months.

SIUC debate team to begin season, U.S. policy to Mexico topic for year

By Jeremy Gripps
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although they may not actually influence U.S. foreign policy, a group of SIUC students will spend the next week debating whether the United States should change its policy towards Mexico.

The SIUC Debate Team is busy researching their debate topic, "The US should substantially change its foreign policy towards Mexico," before they begin their first tournament of the semester at Southwestern College in Winfield, Kansas on Sept. 15, team members said.

Greg Simerly, director of debate, said the team spent Labor Day weekend researching and preparing their arguments.

"We examined each of the terms and phrases," he said. "We determined that the topic will be broad. Foreign policy encompasses anything that goes on between the U.S. and Mexico."

Members divided into units of two to develop their arguments, Simerly said.

"They got together to develop an affirmative case proving that the topic is true," he said. "As a group, we're working on a negative case proving that we should not change our foreign policy towards Mexico."

Simerly said the team is composed of twelve members who are, for the most part, juniors and seniors, but this year's team has one freshman and three sophomores.

"We have a variety," he said. "We have students from a large range of majors, among them speech communication, finance and political science."

Saluki Currency Exchange re-opens after closing due to insufficient funds

By Lori D. Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Following a temporary closing because of insufficient funds, the Saluki Currency Exchange, 606 S. Illinois, reopened for business Aug. 29.

The Exchange closed last month after a money order could not be cashed and was returned to an exchange in Chicago.

Kathy Parks, manager of the Exchange, said it was closed for several days during an audit.

Michael Goldman, of the Department of Financial Institutions, said a receiver has been appointed to run the Exchange following the audit results.

Following an examination, the department felt someone other than the owners should be running the store, and the owners cooperated, Goldman said.

Goldman declined to comment on why the owners were no longer running the store.

"We felt it was better for the community to get the store open,"

Goldman said.

Parks and her employees are happy to have the business up and running again.

"We're glad everything is back to normal. If you had a money order in the past, it will be honored," Parks said.

The Exchange offers check cashing, money orders, Western Union, travelers checks, Public Aid checks and food stamps.

The former owner of the Exchange could not be reached for comment.

SIUC Physical Plant repairs far past due

AFTER BEING OUT OF COMPLIANCE WITH Illinois Environmental Protection Agency regulations for at least 10 years, the Physical Plant here at SIUC is finally undergoing much-needed repair and renovation. While the repairs are certainly good news, the Daily Egyptian can't help but point out that the repairs should have been made long ago.

The plant, which provides the campus with the steam used for heating and cooling, was in sorry shape. The coal-fired boilers, which date back to the 1950s, were deteriorating and had an increasing chance of breaking down. And the electrostatic precipitators, which were designed to remove more than 95 percent of the fly ash emitted by the plant, have not been working properly since they were installed in 1983, according to Physical Plant Director Harry Wirth. Fly ash is an airborne pollutant. The plant continued operation under these conditions because Gov. Jim Edgar was unwilling to fund the repairs until recently.

THE ILLINOIS GENERAL ASSEMBLY APPROVED $29 million for the plant repairs back in 1991, but that money was frozen by Edgar. According to Wirth, that money has just now been made available to the University. In 1991, an IEPA engineer described the violations at the physical plant as significant, even though the plant is small and does not emit as much fly ash as commercial coal-burning plants. For Edgar to allow this problem to go unchecked for so long is inexcusable.

This is not to say that all of the blame for the Physical Plant's problems should fall on Edgar. The plant's precipitators were designed to remove 95.6 percent of the fly ash emitted by the plant, which is 3 percent above the 92-percent level required by the IEPA. However, IEPA engineer Pat Dennis told the Daily Egyptian in 1991 that most commercial plants design their new plants for a much higher efficiency than is required so problems do not arise again right away.

ACCORDING TO DENNIS, THE UNIVERSITY opted for less-costly designs which require more maintenance. The physical plant, which one IEPA official described as old and understaffed, could not handle the required maintenance, according to Dennis. To make matters worse, Wirth said the company that originally sold the precipitators to the University has gone out of business, making parts impossible to find.

The new power plant design should decrease sulfur dioxide emissions, and the new filters should work better than the malfunctioning precipitators. The DE is glad to see the changes finally made. The installation of an emergency natural gas boiler will help the plant avoid closures during repairs in the future. And the fact the plant will also generate a portion of the University's electricity is exciting.

BUT THE RENOVATIONS ARE LONG OVERDUE. The smoke from the plant falls on the citizens in the northwest section of Carbondale. It is impossible to put a price on environmental quality. It affects our health and well-being. No matter what cuts it would have caused, Edgar should have released the funds for the repairs earlier.

Pact with the devil? U.S. plan for peace in Bosnia overlooks original cause of war

By Walter Russell Mead
For the Los Angeles Times

AS NATO warplanes thundered in the Balkans last week, the Clinton administration looked to be on a roll. Three weeks ago, its Croatian surrogates smashed the Serb militia in the Krajina, destroying the myth of Serbian invincibility and putting the United States back in charge in the Balkans.

There won't be any more nasty cracks from French President Jacques Chirac about filling a vacuum as leader of the Free World; for now, at least, Bill Clinton dominates the NATO alliance.

But let's not get carried away. A number of problems remain before Clinton can ride off into the sunset.

The Bosnian government, for starters. The "51-49" division of Bosnia's territory — 51 percent to the Croats and Muslims, 49 percent to the Serbs — has never been popular in Sarajevo. Fifty-one percent for the Croat-Muslim "federation" is much less than meets the eye.

Under the Clinton plan, the 44 percent of Bosnia's prewar population that is Muslim will end up squashed into about 20 percent of the territory.

Croats do better. With less than a fifth of the prewar population, they end up with 30 percent of the land.

The Serbs also do well. With slightly over 30 percent of the population, they stand to get about half the land.

True, the U.S. plan requires that the Serbs give up some of the 70 percent of Bosnia they currently control, but this is still a win.

The Bosnian government always hated this plan and only accepted it to spite the Serbs. Accepting the plan made the Muslims look cooperative, but since the Serbs wouldn't sign, the Muslims didn't have to worry.

Now the Serbs say they are basically willing to accept this package; will the Bosnian Muslims — and their political supporters in the U.S.

"The Great and Terrible Wizard of Oz launching the air strikes doesn't want anybody to look at the little man behind the curtain giving in to Milosevic."

Walter Russell Mead
Los Angeles Times

Congress — still accept what is essentially a negotiated surrender?

Our newfound partnership with Slobodan Milosevic, leader of Serbia and, by most accounts, the chief instigator of the Bosnian war, reveals just how muddled our position has become. Late in the week, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke reported jubilantly that Milosevic had agreed to act as the spokesman and ultimate decision-maker for the Bosnia Serbs in a new round of negotiations.

It was easy to see why this news made Holbrooke happy. For more than a year now, the more radical Bosnia Serbs have been at odds with the Serb government in Belgrade. The Yugoslav Serbs don't care very much about how many rocky valleys and low-grade sheep meadows their Bosnian cousins get or don't get from the Muslims.

They care very much, however, about the economic consequences of the U.N. sanctions that have isolated Serbia and wrecked its economy. Clearly, if Milosevic has taken control of the Bosnian Serb negotiating team, peace has come closer.

But hold on for a minute here. Does anybody still remember what this war is about? The war broke out because the Bosnian Serbs wanted to secede from Bosnia and join a Greater Serbia that would be ruled from Belgrade by — Milosevic.

The Bosnia Muslims and Croats didn't want this to happen, and the United States backed that position. Supposedly, this is a war to keep the Bosnia Serbs separate from Milosevic's Serbs. So who are we trying to put in control of the Bosnia Serbs? Milosevic.

Hello? Here's the deal behind the new, "tough" NATO policy in the Balkans: The Serbs get to keep most of their conquests, and their "special relationship" with Belgrade gets the blessing of the Western world.

Milosevic gets his Greater Serbia in fact, if not in name.

The spin doctors want to call this a victory, but let's get real. This is appeasement with air strikes. First bomb Vienna to show how tough you are, then let Hitler take Czechoslovakia.

It is a terrible settlement for the Muslims, much worse than the one national security adviser Anthony Lake and President Clinton denounced as an immoral, cynical sell-out in 1992.

But it remains the best settlement possible without massive ground intervention.

So, you may be asking, why all the air strikes? Was it to "bomb the Serbs to the negotiating table?" No. They were already there.

The so-called "parliament" of the rebel Serbs had agreed to talk peace on the basis of the latest U.S. peace plan.

Last week's wave of air strikes was about spin. "NATO Bombs Bosnia" is a prettier headline than "U.S. Bows to Belgrade Demands."

The Great and Terrible Wizard of Oz launching the air strikes doesn't want anybody to look at the little man behind the curtain giving in to Milosevic.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Open discussion between Congress, militia exemplifies nation's democratic tradition

The dust and chemicals had hardly settled after the infamous Oklahoma City bomb attack when American television screens were filled with reporters, commentators and ivory tower analysts of every hue, accusing self-styled peoples' militia and other so-called anti-government zealots of being directly or indirectly involved in the incident. The men and women in camouflage fatigues were shown carrying out military maneuvers in the backwoods and expressing their real and imagined grievances against the government.

Just when I was beginning to get sick of the way the not so disinterested media were exploiting the tragedy, some leaders of the much maligned militia made a television appearance that left an indelible impression on me.

When I switched on my television set on June 15, I was taken aback by the sight of some camouflage fatigued leaders of America's self-styled militia testifying before a Congressional committee. This came as a surprise to me since it was common knowledge that the militia hated the government of the United States with a passion.

As was to be expected, the hearing turned out to be a war of words, a heated exchange in which verbal missiles flew thick and fast. Commander Norman Olson of the Michigan Militia did not beat around the bush. He fired the first salvo, as it were, at point blank range. He said something to the effect that the government had become a "wayward child" who needed a good, old-fashioned spanking. Senator Arlen Specter, Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Terrorism, Technology and Government Information, returned with a blistering barrage. He accused the militia of promoting "lawlessness in the name of patriotism."

Senator Dianne Feinstein followed up with a volley at the militia movement, accusing it of promoting hatred and violence under the guise of freedom of speech.

All that can be said of the hearing is that both sides stuck to their guns to the bitter end.

When the dust had settled after the verbal skirmishes, there was a clear winner. Score one for democracy.

This heated exchange of words rather than gun fire is one of those healthy activities that are unique to the United States.

Events throughout the world have shown that militia have been the bane of the twentieth century. In fact, in much of the world, the word "militia" is synonymous with terror, civil wars, murder and mayhem. In the last several years, the world watched while militia and other rag-tag private armies brought Lebanon to its knees, paralyzed Britain with fear, dismembered Yugoslavia, and decimated Somalia, Liberia and Afghanistan ... the list goes on.

In all these cases, governments took the proverbial "mad dog approach" to the militia problem. They either tried to exterminate the militia or totally ignored them. The result was bloodshed upon bloodshed. The lesson of the visit of the militia to Washington is that human beings can solve their problems with one of their most potent weapons — their tongues. Thanks to the ubiquitous media, the world watched the war of words between the Congressional and militia leaders with a mixture of fascination and surprise. Though one has the impression that the hearing sometimes degenerated into a dialog of the deaf, the exercise was a lesson in freedom of speech and expression.

The Oklahoma City bomb attack did have a positive outcome after all.

Hillary Clinton hits nerve in China

Los Angeles Times

"If there is one message that echoes forth from this conference, let it be that human rights are women's rights and women's rights are human rights." With that, Hillary Rodham Clinton crystallized the issues that have brought tens of thousands of women to Beijing for the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women. Her speech Tuesday helped to refocus attention on conference matters: education, health care, reproductive rights, violence against women and girls and denial of human rights.

At the same time, the first lady put Beijing on notice that its human rights record and other repressive policies have not gone unnoticed during the U.N.-sponsored gathering.

A sign that her words hit a nerve among Chinese authorities was that more than 12 hours after Mrs. Clinton delivered her speech there was no report in China's official media of the address.

Outside of China, the Vatican, which has been critical of some of the reproductive and family planning issues to be discussed at the conference, endorsed the address.

Mrs. Clinton was careful not to overtly criticize China, but she indirectly condemned its coercive one-couple, one-child population control policy.

The first lady also gave a voice to the frustration of delegates of Non-Governmental Organizations, whose meetings have been confined to an area 30 miles north of Beijing and stifled by heavy and intrusive Chinese security.

Mrs. Clinton complained that it is indefensible that many NGO delegates who wished to participate in the U.N. conference have not been able to attend — or have been prohibited from fully taking part.

students polled wanted what the two snack bars became this year, an alternative to eating cafeteria food at any time.

As a result of the poll, University Housing extended the services offered by the grill and deli, allowing the facilities to accept meal cards and meal transfers.

"There were never any limitations set on the plan," Shadid said. "The only limit they did set was it would be $3.50 for each meal. They never said what could or could not be bought on the meal card; just that the card would equal $3.50 each swipe."

Edward L. Jones, director of University Housing, said he went to the Saluki Grill three to four times to evaluate the situation but never went personally to Lakeside Deli.

"If I have to look at every piece of housing to make a decision, then why do I need people to work for me?" Jones said. "It would be impossible for me to go to every place when making a decision for housing."

Elizabeth Fulk, Lakeside Deli's other student manager, said they should have never bothered hiring anyone. "People came in for two weeks, worked their butts off and then found out that they're fired," Fulk said. "Business went up completely, but they still shut us down. We were fine, but they never saw that because no one came over to evaluate us."

Jones said he knew nothing about the terminations, and felt it was uncharacteristic for this to be happening.

Some student workers, including Fulk and Shadid, said they suspect the administration of cutting hours because of a drop in the cafeteria's business and the increase of business in the grill and deli.

For some student workers this means a reduction in their federal work study and their cash flow, Shadid said.

Eric Roach, who managed the Saluki Grill in the mornings, said he lost his work study and has a wife and child to be worried about. Roach has classes and another job and could only work mornings.

Shadid said he doesn't understand why the administration cut the hours at all. "The hypocrisy—asking all the students what they want, giving it to them, and then closing it down," he said. "They acted as if the problem was within these walls and not within the system that they made. Now they come in here and tell us we don't have a job because of their decisions."

Jones said the move to reduce hours is in reaction to overuse and misuse of the grill and deli by students. "The main problems (were) people buying non-food items on their meal card—laundry detergent and bulk items that do not meet a meal equivalency," he said. "The grills were constantly being overrun—some people were abusing the grill and the purpose for it."

Shadid said in an effort to make the grill and deli more receptive to students needs, the administration decided this semester to let students use their meal cards at both facilities. However, no one was told that students had to buy food on those meal cards. He said there were very few times laundry detergent was bought on those cards.

"That soap comment was B.S., and Jones knows it," Shadid said. "There were maybe three times someone bought detergent and it was after that they said not to sell it, not before. Yeah, people did buy chips and soda, but why not? You can eat it later. These people are all over 18. Shouldn't they be the ones to decide what does and doesn't count as a meal?"

Mary Morgan, assistant director of the University cafeterias, would not reveal who made the decision to fire the student workers, and would make no further comment at press time.

said. "It would be nice if he's going to be concerned about the cuts the Republican Congress is trying to make."

A shuffling of priorities may be in store for some students who want to see President Clinton but have classes on Monday that might conflict with their objective.

"If he comes I'll check him out if it's not going to interfere with my classes," LaShawna Penny, a junior in finance from Chicago, said. "I'm not going to break my neck to go."

Kim Blum, a senior in journalism from Lake Zurich, said a rumor has been circulating on campus that students may not have to attend school Monday because of the president's visit.

"I've heard more students be excited about getting out of classes than about the president coming, which is sad," Blum said.

Blum said she is not enthused about Clinton's visit.

"I can't stand him," Blum said. "I'm not into someone who sends our troops over to other countries to die when we should be doing things here in our own country."

Mary Oswell, a freshman in political science from Cartersville, said Clinton is going to talk about issues students should be interested in.

"It is an honor the president picked SIUC," Oswell said. "Students should want to listen to him speak at our University, it's something to be proud of."

Debaters who remained in Carbondale during the summer met each week for practice debates and discussions in preparation for this fall, Simerly said.

First-year coach Steve Hunt, a graduate majoring in Speech Communication, said he was happy to be a part of the SIUC Debate Team.

"I was really impressed by the amount of work and commitment this summer," Hunt said. "In 11 years of debating, I've never been as excited to begin a season as I am now."

Jeremy West, a junior in Speech Communication from Puyallup, Washington, said he is also looking forward to the new season.

"There has been a lot of progress during the last two years," he said. "This fall, we have a bigger team and a lot of hard workers."

Pointessentials II

Three of St. Louis' finest fly into Hangar 9 on Saturday

By Dave Katzman
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

Radio of a different hue

What's in a name?
A potential lawsuit if you are Radio Iodine, which shared its old moniker, 9 Days Wonder, with five other bands in the area.

Earlier this year, the group changed its name, which would usually present a problem with press kits, CDs and other paraphernalia emblazoned with the old name.

Lead vocalist Ellen Persyn said the name change came at the right time, coinciding with the release of "Never Meant To Lie" on the "Pointessentials II" compilation, a collection of St. Louis music put out by KPNT-FM.

"We had it a lot easier than other bands when they change their names," she said.

Persyn said each band member wanted a different name, but she had the final say because of a phone call.

"The only reason we picked 'Radio Iodine' is because The Point (KPNT) called us and said that 'Pointessentials II' is going to print and they had to know our name," she said.

The name change should not confuse too many people who were familiar with 9 Days

Radio Iodine's name change does not leave fans wondering about its sound.

Wonder. Persyn's Annie Lennox-influenced voice is unmistakable in its feeling and intensity, its softness combining with the heavier, industrial-tinged instruments in a strange yet effective manner. Its anomaly of a sound has perked up the ears of both TVT and Sony Records, which have requested more material after hearing its demo. Although Persyn would like to get signed to a major label, she said she is not willing to "jump through hoops" by playing games and kissing ass.

"If we get signed, cool," she said. "If we don't, that's fine — we'll move ahead as a band."

Radio Iodine recently hired a manager to take some of the stress off of Persyn's shoulders and to handle the major-label interest.

"We need somebody who has more experience in the music industry and who can negotiate and take charge of these things, too," Persyn said.

The band plans to record a 5-song EP in November, regardless of whether it gets signed or not.

When Radio Iodine played Pinch Penny Pub in July, the police shut down the outdoor gig because of excessive volume. Persyn said the police probably did not like the sight of the bassist leading a mosh pit, either.

After the show, look for Persyn and back-up vocalist / guitarist / bassist / keyboard player Anna Berry kicking back shots of an odiferous black liquid.

"She's the only one who does Jaegermeister shots with me," Persyn said. "The other guys in the band are too wimpy."

Radio Iodine headlines the Pointessential II showcase beginning at 9:45 p.m. Saturday at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave. Cover is $3.

Bionica combines different tastes to create new flavor

By Dave Katzman
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

When I was younger, I used to go down to the local convenience store to make a concoction known as a kamikaze: A mix of all five slushie flavors that combined to make a unique new flavor unlike any I had ever tasted before.

Bionica, from Edwardsville, leaves a similar taste in my mouth.

"Since we have different musical interests, we all combine them and work off each other," Robin Bettenville, vocalist/rhythm guitarist, said, scoffing at the frequent comparisons to Jefferson Airplane, Concrete Blonde and The Cranberries.

Lead guitarist Dylan Shade said he refuses to categorize Bionica's music.

"We're just doing rock music in the '90s," he said. "We're definitely not just sitting around and recycling our favorite songs."

Whatever musical cubbyhole Bionica fits itself tucked into, all its critics must agree at some point that it is rare for a band to achieve such notoriety in such a short span.

Shade got together with bassist Oblong DeSoto and percussionist James Harper Jr. in October 1993 before begging DeSoto's roommate Bettenville to sign up a couple of months later. "The musical style changed from an ambient instrumental thing to more of a vocal-oriented songwriting thing," DeSoto said about Bettenville's arrival.

Bettenville said she used to play folk music with her father on open-microphone nights in area coffeehouses, while DeSoto played funk bass and Shade played metal with Harper.

All of these diverse styles came together to form "Poison Eye," a 10-song demo that was enough to send St. Louisian tongues wagging, and the group was selected as one of the best new bands in the 1994 Riverfront Times poll.

Fellow Metro East resident and former Dazzling Killmen bassist Darin Gray, a friend of the band, forwarded a tape to legendary producer Steve Albini, who has recorded the

Headtrip's music a Window into its sound combination

By James Lyon
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The term "overnight sensation" is often used to refer to bands that have been around for years but have only become famous in the present. In the case of Headtrip Window, the title is not only deserving, but an understatement.

Headtrip Window has literally come from nothing, hitting the St. Louis area with a sound the members refer to as a spiritual "in-your-face" type of rock coming from the hearts of people who love what they are doing.

"The majority of the bands I see don't look like it's coming from the heart," Scott Davis, the band's lead guitarist and back-up vocalist said. "That's why we are different. That's what separates us."

The band's logo consists of four panels that look exactly alike, joining to form a window representing the four members of the band coming together as one sound on the stage.

"Every person has their own view, and everyone has their own outlook, but when the four of us get together, our sound is e n e r g y - p a c k e d," Greg Morris, the bassist, said.

"It's been a ride. In four months the band has gone from creation to market air play," Bill Davis, the band's manager said.

The group was formed in February of this year, and not long afterward was getting played on St. Louis' KPNT FM, and being praised in several magazines. But perhaps the best example of its success is the single, "Free Your Mind," which was recorded in a basement.

"It's really impressive when they (KPNT) believe in us that much," Davis said, commenting on how much KPNT wanted to use their music.

According to Davis, KPNT puts out a very popular compact disc each year showcasing local bands. This year disc, Pointessential Vol.2, out sold Michael Jackson's HIStory on its release day in St. Louis. Out of more than 200 submissions,

Punkinhead's Razorback funk-rock preludes fellow Arkansasian's visit

By Mary Rose Roberts
Daily Egyptian Reporter

President Bill Clinton, who plays the saxophone, is not the only Arkansas musician shaking up the town. His competition, Punkinhead, is a group specializing in rock-soul and funk.

Groove-oriented Punkinhead is a combination of original songs and sounds—a tossed salad of sorts—mixing influences from the Dead Kennedys, James Brown, George Clinton, Stevie Wonder and one of keyboardist Eric "Shecky" Mills favorites, Steely Dan.

"Steely Dan is a group of intelligent musicians both musically and lyrical while appealing to the masses," he said.

Mills said the energy in Punkinhead's live show is as important as music when performing.

"We try to be entertainers instead of shoe gazers," he said.

"American Dreaming," Punkinhead's second release recorded in 1994, discusses the life and themes in the 1990s.

"The album is positive with a dose of reality," Mills said.

Mills said the sound differs from the groups first release, "New South Soul," because of the extra guitar sound.

"The first album is diverse, touch-and-go, New Orleans-type funk music," he said. "The second is more rock than funk."

Mills said aspects that make Punkinhead unique are the lack of a front man. Also, each musician shares responsibility for their band including finance, publicity and lyrics written by Charlie Platt (drummer), Chad Tolten (guitar), and Mills.

"Sometimes our fans take our lyrics too seriously," Mills said. "We do not pretend to have answers. We just write how we feel."

When Punkinhead opened for James Brown in 1994 at the Kansas City Spirit Fest, Mills said it was incredible to play in front of 30,000 people on a large stage instead of 30 in a small venue.

"It was a magnificent learning experience," he said. "We saw how things are run during large productions."

The bands name was the nickname of Platt's grandfather when he was in World War II.

"It is an unpretentious, unassuming name," he said. "A name is a name as long as people can remember it."

In addition to playing at the Hanger 9 last November, Punkinhead has played in Atlanta, New Orleans and Memphis. The band performs tonight at the Cubby Bear in Chicago.

Punkinhead plays tomorrow at 9 p.m. at Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave. Cover is $3.

likes of The Jesus Lizard, P.J. Harvey and The Pixies in addition to Nirvana's "In Utero," agreed to produce Bionica's debut CD, "Crown of Tongues" in Chicago Dec. 1.

DeSoto is hesitant to predict the outcome of the working arrangement, but he said he realizes the potential of having Albini's name grace the disc's credits.

"It will be the blind leading the blind to see what happens," he said. "I think it will be a great opportunity to have his name on our record. That alone could push us over the edge."

The edge DeSoto spoke of would not necessarily be fame and fortune, but the opportunity to avoid the doldrums of typical work, Bettenville said.

"All of us have experienced the nine-to-five job, but (playing music) is definitely the thing we want to do with our lives," she said.

Shade said he is flattered by the band's placement on the "Pointessential II" compilation, but he is not sure about the motive behind KPNT-FM's "Pointessential" series.

"I see it as doing good and, at the same time, it's a big corporate suck-up," he said. "They've made great strides in bringing local talent to a national level. Overall, they've done a lot of good for us."

Bionica plays at 9:45 p.m. on Saturday at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave. Cover is $3.

"Free Your Mind" was picked to go on the disc, but the station wanted a better recording.

Rather than picking another group to fill the vacancy, KPNT postponed the band's deadline so that it could go back and make another recording.

After all the publicity, however, Scott and Morris said that their music is still the most important part of their success, and that their writing and lyrical content has done nothing but to continually improve.

"We're not in this for the glamour, we write music that comes from the heart," Scott said.

"The first time I picked up a guitar, I just knew that was what I wanted to do. I can still sit back and try to listen to our music objectively, and still like what I hear."

"We get up there, and all we do is play to the people," Morris said, adding that the audience can really see how much emotion goes into their music.

"If people would give unsigned talent a chance, they'll find there is a lot of good music out there," Scott said.

"It doesn't matter whether you like our music or not, but you can still listen to it and know that there is a force behind it."

Headtrip Window plays at 9:45 p.m. on Saturday at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave. Cover is $3.

States worry that generous social programs will bring welfare immigrants

The Washington Post

MINNEAPOLIS—It was word of Minnesota's generosity that made Allena Volante pack up her 6-year-old daughter and leave suburban Dallas a month ago. She said she believed she would find here what she could not in Texas: social programs that could ease her life as a struggling single mother.
 "I didn't want to come," she said, "because it's too cold."
 But her sister, a Minnesota resident, told her that Volante could qualify for state medical assistance here.

"Medical was the biggest reason I came," she said, describing how her asthma would send her to the emergency room and leave her with a $3,000 bill she could not begin to pay.

Although she was working as a data entry clerk in Texas, she could not get insurance through her employer and "it wasn't worth the hassle" to apply for Medicaid because she did not believe she would qualify.

Studies show that families like Volante's, who move solely in pursuit of higher welfare benefits, make up a small fraction of the thousands of newcomers to Minneapolis each year. But that handful is driving a contentious debate over whether the state, with its unstinting package of social programs, has become a "welfare magnet" for the poor from states with lower benefits or tougher eligibility requirements.

increase attendance, so whenever someone else wants to pitch in I'm going to support it."

Loeke said she hopes many of the fans will depart McAndrew Stadium following the game and spill into Davies Gymnasium to watch her team take on Austin Peay.

Mike Trude, intercollegiate athletics director of marketing, said the Athletic Department and the Alumni Association feed off one another and that is why each one is so successful.

"You can't have one without the other because they parallel each other," he said. "The alumni association speaks out across the country and many of the questions they are asked concern athletics."

"The alumni association provides answers to those questions which support athletics."

Trude said the promotion can greatly enhance the attendance during both the football and volleyball games.

"I think anytime you can get people in the stadium, it's a great idea," Trude said. "Giving people free tickets provides them with an opportunity to watch a game they may not have otherwise had.

"It opens the door so they can see what they have been missing, and hopefully it will make them return," he said. "I know they will be impressed with what they see on Saturday."

Scott could not indicate how many tickets had been picked up as of Wednesday afternoon. However, he said several sites have reported that the tickets are going fast and he urges members to pick up their tickets as soon as possible.

Alumni Association members can pick up tickets at either the Stone Center, or the 2nd floor of the Student Center through Sept. 8.

doing it, or don't want to be there, I'm going to leave," she said. "It's just something I like to do."

Hudgins' desire to succeed does not end when she leaves the clubhouse.

Hudgins, an Academic All-MVC selection, has made the Dean's List four times at SIUC, maintaining a 3.65 grade point average.

"If you want to succeed in life, you have to be well rounded," she said. "I put hard work into everything I do."

Hudgins said she is approaching the upcoming season with confidence.

"If you stay positive, then positive things will happen to you."

Northwestern's win no fluke

By Ivan Maisel
Newsday

They've already named the Notre Dame highlight film. "Monty Python and the 200th Victory." Or maybe it is "The Emperor Has No Uniform."

Northwestern's 17-15 victory over Notre Dame was no fluke. But no one is mentioning the Wildcats as a challenger for the Big Ten championship just yet. That means Notre Dame, despite its tradition, despite NBC, remains ordinary.

The Fighting Irish won only two of their last seven games last season for a reason. Repeat after me: They're average. Of course, try telling that to Northwestern.

"We can't just think of this as another game; it is Notre Dame," says Northwestern tailback Damell Autry, who rushed for 160 yards on 33 carries in South Bend, Ind. "They have Touchdown Jesus, the Golden Dome. Playing here just isn't normal."

Pregame ceremony to have foreign flavor

Six to be inducted into Saluki Hall of Fame at football game; Three members from overseas

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Six former SIUC athletes will be inducted into the SIU Hall of Fame this fall, for their outstanding contributions to Saluki Athletics.

Standout athletes from cross-country/track, swimming and diving, and softball will be honored prior to the Dawg's home football opener Saturday vs. Murray State.

The inductees include: Vivian Sinou, Chris Bunyan, Elvis Forde, Richard Theobald, Shelly Gibbs, and Wendy Irick.

SIUC athletic director Jim Hart said he couldn't imagine six more deserving athletes to be inducted.

"These individuals represent a number of our most successful sports," he said. "In honoring them, we relive some landmark accomplishments in the history of our program."

Theobald was the first men's diver to ever receive a scholarship at SIUC. He made the U.S. National Team four times as an undergraduate. He was also an NCAA All-American his junior and senior year in the one and three meter springboard.

He is now the head diving coach at Auburn University, and has produced 15 All-Americans and two national champions.

Theobald said he was surprised he would be inducted into the SIUC Hall of Fame.

"I never thought I'd be inducted," he said. "When I saw the first pictures go up in the hall of fame, I thought those people looked really old. I guess that makes me feel really old being inducted, but I'm also excited about it."

Sinou was the first and only SIUC cross-country champion in the Gateway conference. She won 13 of 19 meets during her last two seasons and set a school record, which still stands, to win the 1986 Illinois Intercollegiate.

Sinou said running at SIUC, and especially training in Carbondale, has been a positive point in her life.

"I really enjoyed training in Carbondale with all the rolling hills and color changes in the fall," she said.

"That was important to me because I ran about 70 miles a week alone."

Sinou also said she never thought about being inducted into the hall of fame.

"I never really thought about it while I was running there," she said. "It's quite an honor, and I'm really surprised about it. The best part about running was that I got to visit 39 states and all the campuses I ran at. Not many people can say that."

Forde was a two time Olympian, and ran for SIUC's '84 track team.

He competed for SIUC only for one year before running for his native Barbados in two Olympiads.

Forde helped the Salukis to a fourth place finish in the indoor meet for the NCAA National Championship.

Outdoors, he lifted the SIUC mile relay team to an American collegiate record at the Drake Relays and a fourth place finish at the NCAA, where the Salukis placed fifth overall.

Gibbs was one of only two players to be named All-conference in both the Gateway and Missouri Valley conferences in her years on the Saluki softball squad.

She held 20 school records, and played in 182 games by the time she graduated.

The 1990 team she played on was the first in school history to be nationally ranked.

Irick was an 11-time NCAA All-American, eight time Gateway conference champion and a six time National Independence Champion. She also an 1986 World Championships Trials and 1987 World University Games Trials participant. She also competed in the Goodwill Games both years.

Bunyan is one of three two-time All-Americans at SIUC in cross-country.

He finished third out of 6,664 runners in the 1983 Boston Marathon, and won the St. Louis Marathon the previous year.

In '83 he lifted the Salukis to a fourth consecutive MVC title in cross-country, and then placed 20th at the National Championship meet. Bunyan became the school's second ever MVC cross-country champion in '84, ran the two fastest times in school history, and then finished 21st at the NCAA meet.

SIUC golfer above par on, off links

By Melanie Gray
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC women's golf coach Diane Daugherty calls Molly Hudgins a classic overachiever.

The senior has climbed many mountains throughout her time spent at SIUC.

Hudgins was No. 3 in scoring for the Salukis last season. An 83.3 stroke average ranked her 15th in the Missouri Valley Conference. In last season's MVC tournament, she finished 12th in a field of 46.

After a long struggle, Hudgins has earned the position of team co-captain. She was a redshirt freshman and used the experience to improve on her fundamentals. Hudgins raised her stroke average to 85.5 her sophomore year on the squad.

Six to eight hours of her day are spent on the golf course, but Hudgins said she does not mind. "The minute I don't have fun

Alumni Association to help pack 'em in

By Michael DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Nothing increases fan support more than giving away free tickets to a sporting event.

In conjunction with Saluki Athletics, the SIUC Alumni Association will give away free tickets to its members in an effort to promote attendance during Saturday's football and volleyball matchups.

Greg Scott, SIUC's assistant director of Alumni public relations, said the ticket promotions are designed to put more fans in the stands.

"This promotion provides us with an avenue to help out Saluki athletics," Scott said. "We really want to drum-up support for the athletes. They like to look up into the stands and see the seats filled with fans— hopefully this will help do that."

On Friday, the volleyball squad will play their season opener against Indiana State in the Saluki Invitational.

Saturday afternoon, the football Salukis play host to Murray State in their home opener at McAndrew Stadium beginning at 1:30 p.m. Volleyball action resumes at 4 p.m., pitting SIUC against Austin Peay.

Scott said the ticket promotion also allows the Alumni Association to show people some of the advantages of being an alumni member.

"We (Alumni Association) purchase the tickets from the Athletic Department and distribute them to our various districts," Scott said. "A member can go to any one of 16 Southern Illinois district sites and pick up their free tickets."

Scott said Saturday marks the first time the promotion has been held for football and volleyball games.

"We've done this for basketball for the past five years and it has proven to be very successful," he said. "This year we wanted to do it for both the football and volleyball teams in order to show our support for them as well."

Scott said both the football and volleyball teams look very good this season and believes a lot more fans will show support for both teams.

SIUC volleyball coach Sonya Locke said she highly supports the promotion idea.

"Anytime someone wishes to promote our volleyball matches, I'm all for it," she said. "We want to see more fans at our matches."

"We do a lot of promoting ourselves and promoting is meant to

see ATTENDANCE, page 14

All aboard: Now is the time to get on the Saluki bandwagon

A lot of exciting things are happening around SIUC this semester—let's make a list.

Clinton's visit.
Mass transit.
Saluki football.
Saluki football??

Oh yes, the football team is a group to get excited about. It's been awhile, but the Dawgs have a team that SIUC can be proud of.

I know, the Salukis have only played one game, so isn't all the hype premature?

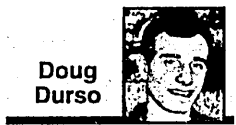

I don't think so.
Watching the Salukis beat Southeast Missouri State 30-27 last Thursday, I can't help but enjoy the way this season is coming together.

No, SIUC probably won't go 11-0 and might not win the Gateway conference, but the Salukis will be competitive in every game.

Even last year, fans could see the rise of intensity and emotion head coach Shawn Watson and his coaching staff have brought to this team, and with a year of familiarity, the Dawgs are heading in the right direction.

Against 20th-ranked SEMO the Dawgs offensive line manhandled the Indians defensive front and the Salukis' stable of talented running backs sliced through the Indian's defense.

Doug Durso

From the Pressbox

Reggie Kennedy, the Salukis starting quarterback, did not have a great game, but it was his first collegiate start— let's give him some time.

Last year the defense gave up 32 points a game and gave up an average of 405 total yards a contest. In this year's first contest, SEMO scored 27 points, but one touchdown came on a fumble return.

Another score came at the end of the game when Southern had in a pre-vent defense.

Against SEMO the Salukis gave up 115 passing yards down from an average of 158.6 a year ago.

Sure, the Salukis had some problems against SEMO, including a missed extra point, blocked punt, two turnovers and 14 penalties for 108 yards.

These problems will have to be corrected for the Salukis to have a successful season.

I can't blame fans if they're a little skeptical about jumping on the Saluki football bandwagon after last season's 1-10 record, and granted it's hard to get behind a team that compiled a 7-26 record over the last three campaigns.

However, the pieces are starting to fall into place and the program is gaining momentum, so the time to jump aboard is now.

I don't know how many games the Dawgs will win this season, but I can guarantee the squad will be fun to watch and win more than one.
