Class of 2000 decides against sorority rush

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Editor's Note:

This is the second story in a continuing series of DE articles focusing on Kristy Schmidt and Melaniee Bardley, two of four individuals from the Class of 2000, selected by the paper for the purpose of profiling their college careers.

As the sorority rush continues on campus, some freshmen such as Kristy Schmidt find themselves interested in joining the Greeks, but have to wait because they are unable to join this semester.

Schmidt, an accounting major from Lisle, said she liked what she saw in the sororities but wanted to wait for a while before she joined.

"I don't know what it is I'll be getting myself into," Schmidt said. "I thought about it, and I am not going to do it this semester."

Schmidt said she got interested in sororities because her brother was in a fraternity and enjoyed his experience.

She said she plans on joining sometime in the future.

Melaniee Bardley, a freshman in pre-law from Gary, Ind., said she could not join because of her busy schedule.

"In high school, I thought it would be something I would do," Bardley said.

"I would like to join a sorority but cannot because I am busy with school and basketball."

Bardley said she is concentrating on her school work and trying to play well for the SIUC women's basketball team.

She said she doubts she ever will have time to join a sorority.

While Bardley and others like her are not rushing, interest in sororities has increased, Alpha Gamma Delta house president Taran Murphy said.

"When I pledged in the spring of '94, there was only one rush a year," Murphy, a senior in political science from Hillsboro, said.

"Now there are two rushes a year. I think people's interest in the Greeks has increased."

Murphy said the reason so many are interested in sororities is the help it gives people with school.

"Sororities help keep you working towards your scholarships and keeps you focused on school," Murphy said.

The Panhellenic Rush started Tuesday and runs until Sunday.

The sororities rushing are Alpha Gamma Delta, Delta Zeta Psi Omega Chi, Sigma Alpha, Sigma Kappa and Sigma Sigma Sigma.

The president of the Panhellenic Council, Karen Gustafson, a senior in psychology and administrative justice from Rockford, said there are 120 women rushing. The quota for the different chapters has not yet been established, so the projected number of new sorority members has not been determined, she said.

State funding provides Medicaid parents with neonatal care without the cost

Paula, a new mother, looks fondly at her newborn daughter Whitney through the thick glass as she lays still in an incubator at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale's special nursery for premature or sick babies.

Whitney, who was born Wednesday, is one of the several infants in the hospital's special neonatal intensive care unit.

"She is doing just fine," Paula said, smiling.

Thanks to $1 million in additional state funding, the hospital will be able to provide obstetrical perinatal care — care before birth or care for premature babies — to 1,100 young Medicaid patients this year without undue financial strain, hospital administrator George Maroney says.

Maroney said the hospital's obstetrics unit will deliver about 2,200 babies this year. Of those babies, half will be Medicaid recipients, he said.

In addition to delivering babies, Maroney said the hospital provides a neonatal intensive care unit for premature infants such as Whitney and infants who are born with infections and other health problems. Of the 200 infants in that unit, 65 percent are Medicaid patients, he said.

State Sen. David Luechtefeld, R-Okawville, said that several years ago, hospitals serving a large number of Medicaid patients were given additional funding because of the financial hardship those services created.

Luechtefeld said that funding has been redistributed during the past two years as smaller hospitals with lower percentages of Medicaid patients received state money for obstetric and perinatal care.

"The intent of the original law was to help hospitals like this, and it was being diluted," he said.

Maroney said the amount of funding Medicaid recipients are given depends on the patients' conditions and the services needed.

Maroney said although the hospital's Medicaid funding was eliminated last year, it did not affect operations. He said another year without the Medicaid payments probably would not have seriously hurt the institution. But he said he was

Man charged with sexual assault

Police flood area, capture man while visiting friends in Marion Wednesday.

By Brett Wilcoxson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Police apprehended a Murphysboro man Wednesday and charged him with aggravated criminal sexual assault and armed robbery following an incident on Tuesday.

At 1:30 a.m. Tuesday in the lot of a vacant house at 506 S. Logan Ave., a male suspect struck a woman with a handgun and forced her between two houses, where he allegedly sexually assaulted her and stole her purse before fleeing the scene, Keith Stiff, Carbondale community resource officer, said.

Lt. Bob Goro, of Carbondale police, said six detectives went door-to-door Wednesday asking questions near the crime scene when they spotted a man matching the description the victim had given them. The suspect fled and escaped the scene when the officers approached to question him.

Goro said the detectives continued the investigation and were able to use Department of Corrections files to identify the suspect as Cordell Gines, 24, a temporary resident of Murphysboro, who was released from Menard Correctional Facility Aug. 30.

Police flooded the area in which Gines was seen with officers and patrol cars. At 7 p.m. Wednesday, Gines was apprehended while visiting friends in the 400 block of South Marion Street, Goro said.

Goro said officers took a picture of Gines and used it in a photographic lineup in which the woman identified Gines as the man who allegedly assaulted her and stole her purse. Police would not release any information on the woman.

Gines is in Jackson County Jail on $50,000 bond. Jackson County Jail officials said bond cannot be posted at this time because Gines was on parole when he allegedly committed the crimes.

Renter's insurance can prevent a loss of all possessions

SOMETIMES IT TAKES A TRAGEDY TO MAKE people aware of things. The fire at Crab Orchard Mobile Homes that destroyed the uninsured possessions of the SIUC students who lived there should serve as an alarm to the rest of the SIUC population.

In the midst of classes, work and social lives, college students who are used to having their parents take care of insurance matters may want to take a closer look at what would happen if a fire or natural disaster destroyed their rented home and all of their possessions. They might find that they, like the victims of the recent fire, could lose everything they own.

STEP ONE OF THE PROCESS IS CALLING UP the parents — many students' belongings are covered under their parents' insurance policies.

Step two is shopping around. One may have the urge to rush the process through and jump on the first policy he or she is offered — don't. The prices and types of coverage vary widely. Some companies will not offer less than $25,000 worth of coverage, an amount that is more than the value of many students' possessions. Others offer as little as $5,000 worth of coverage.

THERE ALSO IS A MAJOR DIFFERENCE IN whether a policy covers the replacement value of possessions or the value of belongings adjusted for depreciation. Compact discs can be used to illustrate this difference. A policy that pays for the replacement value of claims will pay the price to obtain a new disc. One that figures in depreciation will give the policy holder the value of a used CD.

Some companies will allow unrelated roommates to split the cost of one policy for a home while others only do so if the roommates are related. This can make a huge difference in the price of a policy.

THE LOCATION OF A STUDENT'S HOME CAN have a significant effect on the price of insurance too. A home protected by the Carbondale Fire Department will typically cost less to insure than a home in the country.

Dorm residents will generally have a tougher time than other students finding renter's insurance; many companies consider the buildings to be a high risk because many units can be destroyed in a single fire. Agents also charge higher rates for easily destroyed mobile homes.

IT IS IMPORTANT NOT TO JUDGE A POLICY ON price alone. Prices may range from less than $60 per year for a brick home protected by the city fire department to more than $200 for coverage on a mobile home in the country. But the payment a policy holder receives in case of a disaster can vary greatly with each policy.

Let the misfortune of others teach you to avoid possible anguish. Look into renter's insurance. A good policy split between roommates can cost only a few dollars a month with a little bit of searching. That's a good amount of reassurance for the money.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Litter is everyone's problem

SIUC is fortunate to have one of the most beautiful campuses around, with Thompson Woods and Campus Lake providing relief from the hectic pace of everyday life.

The Physical Plant employees at SIUC should be commended for helping to keep the campus in good shape.

As I take my daily walk around campus, however, I am disturbed by the amount of trash that is thrown on the paths and sidewalks, beside the beautiful tress, and alongside the peaceful lake.

On most days I try to make it a point to pick up some of this litter, but every day there is more that wasn't there the day before.

If individuals want to throw McDonald's cups and cigarette packages around their own room or homes, it doesn't matter to the rest of us. But for the sake of those who learn and work at SIUC, please don't litter our public areas.

This contributes to the high cost of education taxes (who do you think is paying for the physical plant employees who keep the campus clean?), as well as spoiling the beauty of our surroundings.

For those of us who don't litter, why not make a point of stopping for a minute to pick up the gum wrapper you almost stepped on, or to tell the friend you're with that throwing down the soda can on the grass is unacceptable.

Saluki Pride is not just a sports concept, but a feeling that should govern our behavior around campus.

Protest against high military costs

Monday, Sept. 9, will be a National Day of Action to Protest Military Budget Add-ons. Congress has voted the Pentagon an $11 billion add-on for next year. Clinton will soon decide whether or not to let that add-on become law.

Last year he approved a $7 billion add-on. If this year's add-on goes through, the Pentagon will be getting a total of $18 billion over their already bloated requests for the last two years.

Are you outraged that politicians of both parties have used the nation's poorest women and children as scapegoats, blaming our budget problems on "welfare queens", while the "Pentagon kings" quietly continue their pork practices.

Both political conventions whined, babbled and blathered about family values, children, and the burdens placed by government on future Americans. Then for God's sake, do something meaningful for families and children by creating good-paying jobs (not weapons productions), sound health care and good education.

The children of poor families have a big incentive to join the military. Then all kinds of doors will open for them, because that's where our stolen tax-dollars lie.

The conventions babbled and blathered about our children, but will the "family-values" Democrat Clinton veto the "family values" Republican $11 billion military add-on.

Through the year 2000, Congress' budget plan, according to the Office of Management and Budget, will add $30 billion to an already bloated military budget, while cutting $64 billion from Education, Food Stamps and Child Nutrition, natural resources and the environment.

It would seem that neither party values families or children in spite of the blathering. If you believe that this is not right, and is not the way to save the next generation, write to Congress and the president, and join us in our protest/demonstration on Monday, Sept. 9.

Undergrads finance grad programs

WARNING: This column may contain satire and other thought provoking ideas that may be construed as offensive. READ AT YOUR OWN RISK.

THE LAST WORD

-by jeff howard

Okay, so introductory text books are needlessly expensive. What next? Get a little closer. A little more. Good. I have to keep this quiet for the sake of my grade point average, so don't tell anybody where you heard it. We undergraduates are financing unnecessary graduate programs that exist simply to fund unnecessary professors, so they don't have to necessarily contribute to society through gainful employment.

The scary thing is that higher education is so thoroughly ensconced in its traditional ways that it can't even recognize the problem. This is how the system works: Undergrads are required to take general education and introductory courses. These courses are very large and cannot be taught by a professor alone. Teaching assistants are recruited from a given lot of graduate students to give the professor a hand, and in return, they are given a tuition waiver and a monthly stipend ranging from $400 to $1,000.

It is easy to see how T.A.s are supported by undergrad courses. What is not so easy to see is that often, the entire graduate program is dependent upon the general education courses that the University requires undergrads to take.

I'm a philosophy major. Within the department, there are about 50 undergrads and 40 grads. I have been told by several of my professors that, were it not for the general education courses, the department would not exist. It's a matter of scale. Graduate programs have far fewer students than undergraduate programs, so undergrads subsidize graduate programs through financial surplus achieved by sheer quantity. If several thousand freshmen and sophomores were not required to take one of three or four introductory philosophy courses with dozens of sections each, the graduate department in philosophy would not exist because 40 tuition paying grads could not fund the salaries of the professors and staff. Enough about finances, I think you get the point.

I'm sure you've all heard the crap about the purpose of an education. You know it is to make us more well rounded, ethnically sensitive, compassionate, cultured, etc. Well, it's a bunch of bunk.

The purpose of an education is to develop skills so that we can do the kinds of things humans do, except smarter. An education is practical.

But a Ph.D. is not practical, and we should not be forced to finance Ph.D. programs through our tuition and tax dollars under the guise of social benefit. Let me explain. Contrary to scared cow wisdom, a Ph.D. does not make a person a better teacher or researcher.

Teaching has to do with personality. Either you have the right personality to teach or you don't. It's kind of like blond hair; either you have it or you don't. Sure you can bleach dark hair, but everybody knows it's bleached. The same is true for teaching; everybody recognizes an ill-suited teaching personality when they experienced it, regardless of what degrees the teacher might have.

Nor does the Ph.D. make a researcher a better researcher. Rather, it makes he or she just a researcher that spent many wasted years toiling away at some dissertation that no one in the entire universe will ever read, instead of engaging in productive work. A friend of mine is working on his Ph.D. in a science, and the majority of his research doesn't involve research at all. Instead, it involves menial labor and repetitive tasks that any high school kid could do. This doesn't seem like productive work for anyone involved.

This problem is not likely to change in the near future because of Newton's first law of motion and because of self-important professors attempting to justify their own worthless credentials through perpetuation. So beware of big required classes. They serve only one purpose — to subsidize unnecessary graduate programs and professors.

JEFF HOWARD IS A SENIOR IN PHILOSOPHY. THE LAST WORD IS THE SOLE OPINION OF THE AUTHOR AND DOES NOT REFLECT THAT OF THE DAILY EGYPTIAN.

Please think and drive

-by james lyon

There is a simple concept that the rest of the country has seemed to take to very well that some people here in Carbondale have not. That concept is driving, and it is my opinion that Carbondale is a type of D.M.V. penal colony where the hopeless and/or morons are sent.

Complaint #1: When you come to a red light and you want to turn right, well gosh-dam-it Goobler, you go right ahead and do that. It is legal you know, and the rest of the us have been doing it for quite some time. Don't sit there staring at it until it turns green again.

Complaint #2: When you are driving and you glance in your mirror and see cars backed up all the way to Nigeria with people waving their fists — and you know who you are — take the clue, Sherlock, and speed up a little. If this confuses you a little, Speedy, it is the vertical pedal on the right. It sends more gas through the carburetor and makes the engine go faster. Get it?

A simple hint to remember is that most people usually go about five miles faster than the suggested speed limit. And it is just a suggestion.

Complaint #3: And this is a big one. Look — and this means to turn your head and actually check the old blind spot — before you turn into another lane. You know, Luke, there just might be a car in that lane you want to get into, so use your D.M.V.-approved eyes to check behind you. Stop using the Force to guide your way into the next lane. That isn't Obi-Wan you're hearing, it's the radio.

So, in closing, learn to drive a little better. Some people should not be allowed to drive a car, and all of those people live in this town somewhere.

So if any of you accidents-in-waiting see me coming, move out of the way or use a little common courtesy. And if you don't, I have the .45 and a shovel.

Crouch returns to rock Booby's

By Chad Anderson
DE Entertainment Editor

When Randy Crouch traveled to Carbondale recently, very few people — aside from his friends who had convinced him to come from Tehlequah, Okla., to perform — knew who he was.

By the time the crowd dispersed from his July 18 performance at Booby's Beergarden, 406 S. Illinois Ave., Crouch had left a lasting impression on them. He entertained them with the psychedelic sounds of Jimi Hendrix, the fiery blues of Stevie Ray Vaughn and his own original music. But his most memorable trademark is possibly his unique style and showmanship.

Along with his guitar playing, Crouch floored audience by playing an electric fiddle with a wah-wah pedal to songs such as "Purple Haze." But his showmanship does not stop at the fiddle. Crouch also has been known to play guitar on the floor with his foot while playing the fiddle and has listed playing the pedal-steel guitar with his teeth as one of his talents.

This may sound too good to be true, but doubters can check out

Randy Crouch and Flyin' Horse at Booby's Beergarden at 9:30 p.m. Saturday. Crouch said he reglued the neck of his Stratocaster back on in preparation for his visit to Carbondale — probably a repair from his last performance at Booby's Beergarden when he took his only break during his five-hour set to replace two broken strings.

To describe Crouch and his music is difficult. The description he prefers is "the original, psychedelic, hillbilly, grunge fiddler," which was tagged on him by a critic somewhere on the road while touring the great plains of the grain belt.

Although Crouch performed an abundance of cover songs during his debut visit to Carbondale, he said he plans to work in more of his original works to his set this time.

"We're really trying to get into playing some of our new songs and dropping some of the cover songs," he said. "We really practiced on getting them down while we were in Texas recently, and we're going to spring it on y'all."

One of the new songs Crouch said he was planning to perform

Activist files lawsuit to prevent logging, save birds

By Colleen Heraty
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An environmental activist who says he wants to save a bird species recently filed a lawsuit against the U.S. Forest Service's proposal to cut 3,400 acres of pines in the Shawnee National Forest.

John Wallace, an environmental activist from Makanda, said he has evidence that the pine warbler is a native bird species in the Bell Smith Springs area of the forest, located south of Marion, which is scheduled to be logged.

If the bird is ruled by a judge to be native, then according to Illinois law, it would be illegal to log in that area, Wallace said.

U.S. Forest Service officials have said that pine warblers are not native to the Bell Smith Springs area because the area did not contain pine trees originally.

Vern Kleen, an avian ecologist from the Dept. of Natural Resources, disagreed, saying the pine warbler is a native species.

"It is native, but it was not there before the pine trees," Kleen said. "It has just adopted its residence there."

Wallace said there is other evidence that the warbler is native to Illinois because the U.S. Forest Service chose the bird as its management indicator species (MIS) in 1984. Wallace said one of the requirements for a bird to be an MIS is that it must be native.

MIS is used by Forest Service officials to monitor and guide the management plans of a forest by using different species living in a given area.

"I have documentation that this Southern Illinois bird has existed from 1874 until the present," Wallace said. "But my lawsuit is not on the pine warbler. It is based on the fact that the Forest Service considered it to be a native vertebrate species."

In an Environmental Impact Study, the service states that the pine warbler is not native to the Shawnee Forest.

"So I appealed their decision and pointed to all these publications which say the pine warbler inhabits Illinois," Wallace said.

Becky Banker, forest service public affairs officer, said there are no records she is aware of that show the pine warbler inhabited the Shawnee Forest prior to the planting of pine trees.

Wallace said regulations state that officials must maintain minimum viable populations of native vertebrate species and desired non-native species in the forest.

"Current plans call for the extirpation of this bird, which would wipe it out completely," Wallace said. "That is basically illegal to eliminate a native species."

Wallace also has filed a motion for a preliminary injunction, which would prevent logging companies from going into the Bell Smith Springs area until his lawsuit can be heard.

Area business growing

By Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Five chain businesses are simultaneously working to open in Carbondale, economic growth which one city business developer calls "exciting."

Donna J. Norton, Carbondale Business Development Corp. executive director, said the opening of a Lowe's Home Improvement Warehouse, Schnuck's supermarket, Blockbuster Video, Barnes & Noble Bookseller and Ramada Inn in the city is no coincidence.

When Lowe's committed to opening a 150,000 square foot store at the corner of Rendleman Road behind Vogler Ford, she said, other businesses began to look at Carbondale more seriously.

"Businesses want to follow the big chains because it creates a lot of traffic," Norton said.

"Barnes & Noble had been looking at us for a while and decided to come after Lowe's did."

Norton said Lowe's projected Carbondale sales are $30 million per year, which will mean $437,000 annually in city sales tax revenue. Yearly sales estimates for the other four businesses are not available, she said.

Paul Sorgen, city finance director, said the combined financial impact of the five businesses could not be estimated.

Tom Redmond, Carbondale Development Services director, said construction on the Lowe's store, which will employ 175 people, began in April. "Ic said the store will open in early spring 1997.

"Businesses want to follow the big chains because it creates a lot of traffic."

Redmond said Barnes & Noble and Blockbuster are building at University Place, near the new Lowe's, off Route 13.

He said Barnes & Noble, already under construction, is scheduled to open before Christmas 1996.

Blockbuster will build next to Barnes & Noble, but no construction date or opening date has been set, Redmond said.

He said each business could employ about 25 people.

Schnuck's, which bought the site of the old National supermarket, 915 W. Main St., is scheduled to open in spring 1997 with between 130 and 140 employees, Redmond said.

The Ramada Inn will be located south of Pier 1 Imports, 1401 E. Main St., Redmond said.

Construction is beginning on the three-story hotel, which Redmond said will have 66 units and could employ about 25 people.

Senior citizen bus accident injures thirty, kills one in Washington D.C.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—A tour bus filled with a group of North Carolina senior citizens struck a sport utility vehicle, then crashed into the support of an overhead sign Wednesday afternoon on Interstate 295, sending the sign crashing toward the pavement and onto a delivery truck.

An 80-year-old male passenger on the bus, whose chest was crushed by a table during the accident, was killed; 30 others suffered less serious injuries.

The accident, near I-295 and Pennsylvania Avenue in Southeast Washington, occurred about 3:19 p.m. and shut down the highway in both directions for several hours as workers struggled to remove the massive sign from the road.

Dozens of emergency vehicles converged on the scene, and medical personnel immediately set up a system to assess the injuries of each victim, laying them out on the grass, then routing them to hospitals across the city, according to the severity of their injuries.

But firefighters first had to pry open the door of the heavily damaged bus and then cut away part of its front to extricate passengers.

Authorities at D.C. General Hospital, where the 80-year-old man was taken, said he was crushed as he was playing cards with his wife on the bus. He arrived at the hospital in cardiac and respiratory distress and was taken into surgery, where he died, officials said. He was identified as Eugene Shell, of Roanoke Rapids, N.C. His wife accompanied him to the hospital.

"We're in the dark down here as to what's going on."

Spokesman for Halifax

A woman believed to be a passenger in the sport utility vehicle was taken to the Medstar unit of Washington Hospital Center, where she was treated and released last night. Four other people were being treated last night at the hospital's emergency room.

Two children, ages 5 and 7, were taken to Children's Hospital with minor injuries, and 18 senior citizens were taken by bus to Georgetown Hospital with what a physician described as "mild to moderate" injuries. Two children in the sport utility vehicle were not injured, officials said.

A spokesman for Prestige Bus, of Raleigh, N.C., said the bus was headed back to Roanoke Rapids after a weeklong trip to Canada and was expected there about 7 last night. The spokesman, J.D. Myrick, said the bus was chartered by Halifax Travel, a small, independent agency owned by Grace Fishel, who runs it from her home. She and her husband, Harry, were on the trip along with 24 others; Myrick said. "We're in the dark down here as to what's going on," Myrick said.

A D.C. police spokesman, Sgt. Joe Gentile, said that the tour bus was traveling south on I-295 when it struck the back of a Suzuki Sidekick containing two adults and four children. The impact sent the Suzuki into a tailspin that left it northbound in the southbound lane.

The bus then crashed into a heavy stanchion holding up an overhead sign that covered all four lanes of I-295.

Although the stanchion was anchored with 40-inch bolts in concrete, the impact of the bus knocked it over, causing the sign to partly collapse over the highway.

A delivery truck traveling north on I-295 then smashed into the sign as it fell to the road, and the impact ripped open the left side of that vehicle.

Professional pilot lands high-flying job

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Features Editor

There is nothing more amazing than being able to hear a whole conversation between people and their dog without them even realizing that there is an eavesdropper in a balloon floating above them, a commercial balloon pilot says.

Wil LaPointe, a competitive balloon racer, said after his first flight in a balloon, he knew he wanted to fly in balloons for the rest of his life.

"The serenity when you're floating is amazing," he said. "Sound travels up and down so clearly up there. You don't need to holler to each other. You can just speak normal."

LaPointe and other balloonists will be at the Cascade of Colors Hot Air Balloon Festival at the end Ballooning might not be the most popular or inexpensive sport in the world, but the benefits outweigh the price of competition and the danger involved, balloon pilots say.

LaPointe, a Collinsville, Okla. resident, said he purchased his first balloon as a advertisement for his communication company in Oklahoma.

He said after flying for a few years, he has since quit his job and has become a professional hot air balloon pilot and has been competing in balloon races for the past eight years.

"On my first flight, I got control of the burners and manned it myself," he said. "After my fifth or sixth lesson, my instructor said, 'You should go into ballooning. You're a natural.'"

LaPointe said most pilots are either sponsored by corporations or private individuals. He said he usually pays for the balloons out of his own pocket.

He said a sport balloon, which is smaller in size than special-shaped balloons, costs between $15,000 to $25,000.

He said the special-shaped balloons cost more than $100,000.

Tom Forenz, a balloon pilot from Canada and a SIUC graduate student, gives balloon pilot lessons throughout the year at the Southern Illinois Regional Airport.

Forenz said the competitive aspect does not keep balloon pilots interested in the sport. LaPointe said the top prizes in competitions do not exceed more than $3,000.

"It's a tough field to make a living out of it," Forenz said. "If you get bored with the flying, then you can go into competitions, but it's not the money that keeps these guys coming back."

"You just have to take a ride to understand."

The first hot air balloon was designed and flown in France by the Montgolfier brothers in 1783, according to Aerostar, an international balloon manufacturing company.

In the first balloon ride, the platform carried a sheep, a duck and a rooster. Wicker baskets did not become a reality until 1963.

LaPointe said with the continuing advancement in hot air balloon equipment, the sport has become more competitive. He said in 1964, only four hot air balloons existed. Twenty years later, 10,000 balloons existed.

LaPointe said hot air balloons are powered by a burner that can be compared to 150 house furnaces. The actual balloon is made of 1 1/2 miles of nylon fabric, which retains the moisture in the balloon. If the moisture gets out, the balloon will lose its velocity.

LaPointe said he has never had any close calls in his eight years of piloting, but he said he loves taking up people who are scared of heights.

"They are amazed," he said. "It's nothing like they expected. You can move up or down. You just glide with the wind. You're at the mercy of nature, and it's extremely exhilarating."

Iraq's air defense never obliterated in Gulf War

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—At the start of the Persian Gulf War five years ago, U.S. and allied aircraft rained tons of bombs and missiles on Iraq, rendering its air-defense system inoperative at the end of the conflict.

How is it, then, that the system posed enough of a new threat this week to warrant the launching of 44 U.S. cruise missiles against Iraqi air-defense sites, particularly since international trade sanctions were supposed to have inhibited Iraq's ability to rebuild its military machine?

The answer, say experts on Iraq, lies in the fact that President Saddam Hussein's extensive network against air attack was never really obliterated during the Gulf War. A substantial portion of it survived the pummeling by allied aircraft, which had been intent on shutting the system down, not blowing it to pieces.

"We didn't go in there to eviscer-

"We didn't go in there to eviscerate the whole network."

Col. David Deptula,
U.S. Air Force

ate the whole network," said Air Force Col. David Deptula, one of the architects of the air campaign. "The aim was to suppress their defenses. So it's not surprising the Iraqis would have some operable components today."

Saddam's main air-defense command centers, located deep underground in hardened bunkers, escaped elimination. And numerous above-ground antennas and radar facilities that were struck have since been repaired from large stocks of spare parts that Iraq had on hand before the war, experts say. The Iraqis also have shown some resourcefulness in obtaining parts from abroad, despite the sanctions, and gone on to establish new missile sites.

"Much of their anti-aircraft equipment is the same used by former Warsaw Pact countries," said a Pentagon official, "and there are lots of spare parts out there now on the open market that the Iraqis could get."

Still, for all its resiliency, the Iraqi system suffers from significant shortcomings, including reliance on outdated Soviet-era technology, a lack of airborne monitoring equipment and a loss of foreign technical assistance.

Iraq's air-defense network was patterned after the Soviet model and built largely by the French. Known as KARI (the French name for Iraq, spelled backward), its hub is in Baghdad.

The network branches into several regional operations centers, which in turn control tracking centers, aircraft interceptors, surface-to-air missile batteries and anti-aircraft guns in their respective regions.

One regional center is in Tallil, among the sites targeted in this week's cruise-missile attack.

The Iraqi system contains considerable redundancy, with one center able to pass control to another if damaged.

There is some overlapping coverage by radar dishes. And hundreds of mobile anti-aircraft missile launchers can shift locations to set traps for enemy aircraft.

"The Iraqis stopped operating their air defenses after the first few days of fighting in 1991 to spare what they could," said Michael Eisenstadt, who worked on the government's official study of the Gulf War's air campaign and is a senior fellow at the Washington Institute for Near East Studies, a non-profit research group.

"As long as they weren't challenging allied aircraft, they were not targeted. As a result, their losses were reduced, and they emerged with a large part of their system intact."

Little consensus exists among U.S. experts about just what percentage of Iraq's pre-war defense system survived, according to Anthony Cordesman of Washington's Center for Strategic and International Studies. But Cordesman himself estimates Iraq retains at least 380 Soviet-made surface-to-air missile launchers, about 80 French-made Roland units and "large numbers" of portable Soviet-made anti-aircraft systems.

Brazilians debate racism in aftermath of song ban

Los Angeles Times

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil—Tirica is one of Brazil's most popular singers, a former circus clown who sings childish ditties, a man of humble origins and mixed race.

But Tirica, according to some Afro-Brazilian leaders, has recorded a song that is insulting to blacks. A judge in Rio de Janeiro agreed: She ordered his record pulled from the shelves. The singer and his record company, Sony Music, have been hit with criminal and civil actions accusing them of racism.

In the aftermath, Brazil has experienced a rare nationwide debate on race. Political leaders, intellectuals and people on the street have all weighed in. It seems fitting that the catalyst for this discussion has been a song, for music is the celebration of Brazil's multiethnicity.

The Tirica case is more complicated and contradictory than it seems, mirroring the dynamics of race in Brazil. After years of scant attention to the problem, the Brazilian government has led a frank examination of racial inequality. President Fernando Henrique Cardoso created a commission this year to aid blacks and people of mixed race, who account for 44 percent of the population of 160 million and suffer disproportionately from poverty, crime and other social ills.

Black activists, meanwhile, are campaigning for racial solidarity—a march last year honored Zumbi, the leader of a 19th-century slave revolt—and political power. One of them, a leader of the attack on Tirica, is Ivanir dos Santos, a candidate for deputy mayor of Rio in the October elections.

Dos Santos paints Sony as a corporate villain and Tirica as a society whose camouflaged racism has been exposed by the furor.

"Brazil is not a racial democracy

"I have been talking about [the song] with my friends and we feel ... it's not racist."

Wellington Evangelista,
Black Brazilian

as Brazilian diplomats have always claimed," he said.

Dos Santos said his role in the controversy is unrelated to his candidacy for the Workers' Party, which is trailing in opinion polls. And he criticized "the disrespect of a multinational like Sony, which would not have done this in the United States. ... Tirica is exactly the expression of Brazilian racism, a 'mestizo' (person of mixed race) who lacks ethnic consciousness and self-respect."

On the other side, black elected officials and musicians have risen to the defense of the singer. Judging from the news media coverage and random interviews in downtown Rio, many black Brazilians are dubious of the validity of the protests and feel they are overblown.

"I have been talking about it with my friends and we feel the same way: It's not racist," said Wellington Evangelista, 16, an office messenger. "This is all political. There are many forms of discrimination in Brazil that they should be fighting instead."

The song is entitled "Look, Look, Look at Her Hair." It makes fun of a black woman's hair, comparing it to a Brillo pad, and says she smells bad because she has not taken a bath. Evangelista claims it is an affectionate joke about his wife.

His critics retort that prejudice in Brazil often masks itself in casual insults and malicious humor.

"This is a symptom of the lack of self-awareness among Brazil and the Brazilians about racism," said Carlos Hasenbalg, a leading scholar on race. "It is concealed, cordial, but it sometimes appears in explicit form. ... Tirica has done what people of greater learning would never do because they know it is politically incorrect."

In this case and others, the leaders of the protest are copying the tactics of the U.S. civil rights movement. But for decades, said Hasenbalg, such tactics have failed to generate widespread support for Brazil's black activist groups, which remain small and splintered. The nation's black politicians win elections by assembling coalitions based on labor unions and left-leaning political movements, rather than racial blocs.

But Brazil is a different world from the United States; the "bipolar model of identity, black and white," does not apply, Hasenbalg said.

"People don't think like that here," Hasenbalg said. "Race is seen as a continuum. ... Racial groups do not have boundaries."

In the United States, race relations were forged by segregation; the society imposed strict barriers and defined individuals with any African heritage as black. Brazil has a history of intermarriage among descendants of African slaves, native peoples and immigrants from Europe, the Middle East and Asia.

was about finding life on Mars.

"I had written the song a while ago, and then when they found life, I thought it a good time to bring it out," he said.

No matter which songs Crouch plays, it is guaranteed that he will put on a good show. His sound, style, showmanship and talent is what makes Crouch one of the most unique acts touring.

His mixture of bluegrass, blues, rock, and folk music cover all spectrums of the music world and fuse to form a Randy Crouch and Flynn Horse song.

Crouch has gained a reputation around Carbondale, even though he has only played here once.

The success of his debut performance earned him two additional dates in Carbondale (Saturday and Oct. 5 at Booby's), and he said he is working with Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., on setting up some dates to play when he returns to the area to play in Springfield.

"I'm really looking forward to playing because everyone had such a great time last time," he said. "I'm concentrating on getting a network established."

"I'd like to be able to swing through Carbondale and also play the Springfield scene as well."

Newsday

AMMAN, Jordan—In the rugged mountains south of the Black Sea lies the land of the Kurds, a tribal, nomadic people whose clamoring for a homeland has gone unheeded during this century of nationalistic fervor.

Scattered through what is now Turkey, Iraq, Iran, Syria and parts of the former Soviet Union, there are nearly 25 million Kurds, united over 4,000 years by a common language and culture, but divided by national boundaries — the largest ethnic group in the world without a homeland.

In the hours after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein marched to the north of his country and took control of the Kurdish city of Irbil last weekend, the Kurds were the topic of passionate and sympathetic discussion in national capitals throughout the world.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the United States fired 44 missiles into Iraq in what President Clinton said was a response to Hussein's "violence and aggression" against the Kurds.

"Our objectives are limited but clear: to make Saddam pay a price

"Our objectives are limited but clear: to make Saddam pay a price for his most recent act brutality."

Bill Clinton,
President

for his most recent act of brutality," said Clinton.

Yet the reality was that only three days after Hussein's conquest of Irbil, the Kurds were already virtually irrelevant to the crisis they sparked, and the byzantine internal problems of their acronymic political factions were receding once again into the background, as the world turned its attention to bigger, strategic questions like how to dislodge Hussein, keep the oil flowing and contain Iran.

That's the way it has always been for the Kurds: They're pawns in a greater geopolitical strategy, proxies in a bigger war.

Their aspirations and troubles are of concern to only a handful of scholars around the world; their history is a depressing tale of internal divisions urged on by the cynical rivalries of their more powerful neighbors.

According to legend, the Kurdish people came into being 1,000 years before the coming of Islam at the time of the tyrannical leader Zahhak, who had snakes growing out of his head.

Zahhak was told by Satan that he would be cured if he fed the snakes each day with the brains of two young people.

But the executioner charged with providing the brains took pity on his victims and spared one each day — substituting the brains of a sheep.

The survivors were smuggled to the safety of the mountains, according to the story, where they founded a race of mountain dwellers. To this day, it is said that the Kurds have "no friends but the mountains" — a phrase many believe accurately sums up Kurdish history.

The Kurds speak a language of their own, they have their own customs and culture, their own geographical territory in the mountains — and a rich history that peaked in the Middle Ages with the dynasty of Saladin, who defeated the Crusaders of Richard the Lionhearted and reconquered Palestine for the Muslims.

But throughout the 20th century, none of the states that host them has recognized the Kurds' claims to independence.

Nearly 3.5 million of the Kurds live in what is now northern Iraq, where the years under Hussein have been particularly difficult. In the late 1980s, angered by their continuing struggle against him, Hussein answered with mass deportations, the destruction of Kurdish towns and villages and a scorched-earth policy in the countryside.

In 1988, the Iraqi forces used chemical weapons against the Kurds, leading to a mass exodus of refugees, while the international community sat by silently.

ANNOUNCEMENT

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY at CARBONDALE

1997 OUTSTANDING SCHOLAR AWARD

A $5,000 SIUC Outstanding Scholar Award for 1997 will be awarded to recognize and to promote research and creative endeavors to an SIUC faculty or staff member who has made outstanding contributions to his or her discipline and has thus become widely recognized for these achievements. The award is made solely in recognition of scientific, educational, artistic or literary achievement; the recipient is not required to render future services to the university as a condition to receiving the award.

Eligibility. All SIUC faculty and staff members involved in research and creative activity are eligible for the award. Once nominated, the nominee may remain eligible for consideration for two additional years. This will require agreement on the part of the nominee, to be obtained again by the nominator. The supporting documentation may be updated at this time. Emphasis on service and/or teaching will not be considered as these are already honored through other awards. This award is permanent recognition of outstanding scholarship and is, therefore, awarded only once to an individual.

Nomination Process. Nominations for the award may be proposed by colleagues, associates, supervisor or subordinates of the nominee. The nomination should be supported by a detailed statement of the nature and importance of the accomplishments sought to be rewarded. A separate submission of relevant supporting documentation, such as curriculum vitae, list of scholarly and creative activities, and special awards will be requested at a later date (see below). The name, address and phone number of 6 references external to the University must also be included in this later submission as potential contacts by the committee. The nomination letter and the packet of supporting documentation should then be forwarded to the Graduate School Office, Attention: Outstanding Scholar Award Committee.

Deadline Date: for nominations with statement of nature and importance of accomplishments only is Friday, October 4, 1996.

Deadline Date: for supporting documentation is Friday, November 1, 1996.

Contact Person: Sandra Ballestro, Graduate School, 453-4521.

CROSS COUNTRY

Invitational poses challenge for runners

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC Women's Cross Country Coach Don DeNoon and Men's Cross Country Coach Bill Cornell both agree that Saturday's 16-team Memphis Invitational will offer some tough competition.

Both teams will travel south

Saturday to compete in the annual event.

DeNoon said three teams have caught his eye this year.

"Northern Alabama has a good program," he said. "I also look for Southeast Missouri State University and Western Georgia University to be competitive."

However, DeNoon said his team consists of a competitive group of athletes this season as well.

Raina Larsen, a junior in physiology from Waterloo, has really stepped up this season and has been running No. 1 in practice, according to DeNoon.

"Raina is running at another level this season, much higher than last season," he said.

Last season Larsen claimed the No. 2 spot for SIUC in the Missouri Valley Conference meet, finishing 16th in a field of 82.

DeNoon said Jenny Monaco, a freshman in Spanish from Palatine, has stepped into the No. 2 spot consistently during practice.

"Jenny is a fire plug," he said. "She doesn't give an inch, and she stays right up with Raina during practice — sometimes running out in front."

Monaco said with the amount of depth the team has, the group will do well in its season opener.

Kelly French, a junior in respiratory therapy/health care management from Barrie, Ontario, is running in the No. 3 position for the team, despite some physical problems, DeNoon said.

"Kelly has been having good practice sessions but has had some problems with her asthma," he said.

DeNoon said French will compete Saturday.

French said the team has been running consistently in practice, with a big group of runners in the lead. She said the meet this weekend will have a big impact on the team.

"If we do well in this meet, it will boost our confidence," she said. "If we don't run well, it could be a long season."

Colleen Bouck, an undecided sophomore from Mokena, has stepped up from fifth last season to fourth this season, followed by Kim Koerner in the No. 5 spot, DeNoon said.

Koerner, a senior in physiology from Murrayville, has been prone to injuries, but this season she is running injury free, DeNoon said.

Cornell said a good finish for the men could be a big confidence builder for them as well.

"This year looks to be an exciting year," he said. "If the team can finish well at this meet, it will give them some encouragement and confidence to win."

Cornell said he sees the University of Mississippi and MVC member Southeast Missouri State University as the team's toughest competition.

The team ran its time trial faster this season, but Cornell said he expressed a need for the freshmen to step up with better times this weekend.

"We have a young squad overall," he said. "Eric (Rushing) and Matt (McClelland) need to come through for the team."

Andy Bosak, a freshman in physical education from St. Catherine's, Ontario, is sick, but with the team's depth, Cornell doesn't see his illness as a problem.

Bosak said he sees the meet as a learning experience for the team.

"This meet will give our new guys some experience," he said. "It will also give the veterans a chance to get their feet wet."

Bosak said he believes the first meet will be the beginning of a long season. He said the team's finish will reveal some of its capabilities for future meets.

"I think this meet will give us some indication of how the team will react to other teams," he said. "But the team will learn meet by meet."

The men's and women's meets begin at noon Saturday.

"It's going to be a good ballgame Saturday. This is our first test, and you have high expectations. Everyone wants to do well, and our kids are ready to play."

Scott also is ready — ready to play, ready for revenge and ready to win.

"I don't care where I play," he said. "I want to win, and that's the attitude on this team. We want to win for us and our teammates, and we want respect on our field."

Saturday's kickoff is at 1:30 p.m.

CBS back into college football

The Baltimore Sun

When UCLA meets No. 2 Tennessee Saturday night (8 p.m.), the game will be another step along the road the Volunteers hope will end at the Sugar Bowl, the site of the national championship game Jan. 2.

For CBS, the game means a whole lot more.

The Bruins-Volunteers game kicks off CBS' weekly college football schedule, one that the bruised and battered, but not bloodied network hopes will re-establish it as one of the big players in sports television.

"I feel whole (professionally) for the first time in a while," said Jim Nantz, the lead voice of CBS' college coverage.

In the early 1980s, CBS began to amass a college football schedule to rival that of ABC, the long-time leader on the college gridiron scene.

But CBS foolishly let its deals with the College Football Association after the 1989 season lapse under the tight-fisted reign of former network president Laurence Tisch, assuming, perhaps, that with the strong National Football Conference package of the NFL, its college fortunes would be fine without the colleges, save for the occasional bowl games.

However, when the NFL left CBS for Fox in 1994, the Eye was sent on a downward spiral that only lately has started to reverse.

An easy way out of the tinspin was to go back to the colleges, through the acquisition of Big East and Southeastern Conference games, along with a share of the Bowl Alliance.

This is all a part of the plan to make an all-out assault on the NFL when the current television contract expires after next season.

"Football, for television, is America's sport. A lot of us have felt that if you don't have football, you're really not a full-service sports department. This is hopefully the start toward getting into football for real," said Rick Gentile, CBS Sports programming chief and the No. 2 executive in the department.

VOLLEYBALL

Salukis face Purdue in tough invitational

By Kevin DeFries
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With one win under its belt, the SIUC women's volleyball team travels to Indiana today with a new level of confidence.

After beating Southeast Missouri State University Tuesday night for its first win of the year, SIUC will compete for its second straight victory tonight at the Purdue Invitational in West Lafayette, Ind.

However, Saluki volleyball coach Sonya Locke said this weekend's competition will be even tougher than what the team saw at SMO.

The Salukis go up against Florida State at 5 p.m. today and against invitational host Purdue at 2:30 p.m. Saturday. The Salukis then turn around and take on Miami of Ohio at 5 p.m.

Locke said the tournament is stocked full of competition, but she said the team is looking forward to the challenge.

"These teams are very good," she said. "They (Salukis) are excited about the level of competition that we're going to face this weekend."

Florida State has all of its starters returning from last season, when FSU finished with an 11-19 record in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Seminoles lead the overall series against SIUC 3-1.

Outside hitter Lindsay Fisher, a sophomore in biological sciences from Rantoul, said the team is ready for the tournament.

"We're not intimidated by them at all," she said.

Fisher helped lead the team to its first victory over SMO by setting a personal record of 19 kills.

The Boilermakers return to the Big Ten conference this season with four of its starters. Purdue finished last season with an 8-20 record but leads the series 4-1 over SIUC.

"After (Tuesday's) win, I think we're going to go in there with a lot more confidence," Fisher said.

"If we would have gone in 0-5, it would be a totally different story. But now we know how to win, and we know what it feels like."

The Salukis lead the series over Miami (Ohio) 4-0, but the Redskins have four starters returning and finished with a 24-7 record in the Mid-American Conference last season.

Series records have no relevance in the Salukis upcoming season, Monique Galvin, a sophomore middle blocker in journalism from Chicago, said.

Galvin believes the SIUC team, though full of new faces, is ready to play.

"This year, it's a totally different team, and it's a totally different ballgame," she said. "We're going to produce."

Locke said succeeding against the teams SIUC will face in the invitational will take a lot of hard work — especially on the road.

"It's important for anybody going into this weekend to really expect to play well, to play hard and to expect that they're going to have to work really hard to earn any kind of victory in this tournament," she said.

Fisher said she believes the win against SMO has lifted the team's spirits and will be a definite booster.

"We feel a lot better about ourselves and as a group," she said.

Salukis seek to avenge loss

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

Since 1994, Saluki defensive lineman Arglita Scott has lived with a painful memory — SIUC's 35-26 season opening loss to the University of Tennessee-Martin at McAndrew Stadium.

UTM is back in town, and Scott is ready to avenge the memories of 1994.

That year was Scott's freshman season and also was Coach Shawn Watson's first year at the helm of Saluki football — the year each was rudely introduced to UTM Coach Don McLeary.

For Scott, now a junior, Saturday's matchup at McAndrew Stadium is both a game and a personal vendetta against McLeary's Skyhawks.

"Me and UTM go back a ways because I played defensive end on the team that went 1-10 with them," Scott said. "For me, it's revenge because I felt embarrassed."

SIUC held a 17-14 lead over UTM at halftime but could not stop the opposing team's third-quarter aerial attack that resulted in three touchdowns from 86 yards, 36 yards and 17 yards to outscore the Salukis 21-3. SIUC added another touchdown in the fourth quarter but could muster no more offense.

"They beat us on three passes and I felt embarrassed," Scott said. "We all played hard that game. The defense played real well in that game back in '94."

"We owe them."

SIUC is UTM's first opponent of 1996, but it is hard to say what they will bring into McAndrew Stadium this time around.

Nonetheless, Watson remembers what they brought in '94.

"Tennessee-Martin has always been a good football program," Watson said. "Two years ago when we played them, they were a very fundamental and a very sound football team."

"They give you a lot of things that you have to look at real close."

As expected, Saluki junior quarterback Steve Luce will make his first appearance against UTM this weekend. His counterpart will be senior Jeff There's always going to be somebody fresh coming at you on the outside to rush the passer. I put pressure on the quarterback. That's what I do best."

Last Saturday, the Salukis recorded seven sacks against Central Arkansas.

Watson said he is unsure of what McLeary has assembled this year at UTM. He said there are no exchanges of film, so little is known about UTM's game plans.

"They're playing their first game, which is somewhat of an edge for us because we have the butterflies knocked out of us," he said. "But the other thing is we don't have a lot of film on them. There will be the element of surprise that they will have on us there."

"We're looking forward to playing them."

However, Watson is sure of one thing — whatever McLeary has assembled, it's going to be solid.

"Coach McLeary has always put on a good product down there," Watson said. "They have that element of creativity in which they use a lot of motions and different things to throw the football, as well as run it on offense; that's going to present a defensive problem."

Peering over from the opposite side of the fence is McLeary, who has 13 years of head coaching experience behind him. McLeary has compiled a 49-63 record at UTM and expects Saturday's contest to be as competitive as the one in 1994.

"In '94, we were very fortunate," McLeary said. "We got some big plays in the second half that made the difference. It was a very competitive game and a good matchup."

However, SIUC's revamped pass rush will attempt to keep McCrone under wraps.

Scott said SIUC's pass rush has a lot more depth than it did in 1994, which he hopes will keep McCrone guessing all day.

"One of the advantages is definitely going to be that we are all fresh," Scott said. "We're always going to be fresh."
