Council hopefuls pit experience vs. ideas

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The campaign for the two four-year posts on the City Council has boiled down to a battle of experience versus new ideas.

Candidates Patrick Kelley and Cornelilin Neil Dillard say they have the experience necessary to lead Carbondale through what they see as tough times ahead.

The other two candidates, Henry Fisher and Willie Ivey, have less local government experience than Kelley and Dillard, but say that changes need to be made in some city policies.

Kelley, a 39-year-old associate professor at the SIU Law School and a former city councilman in University City, Mo., from 1978 to 1981, has also served as a public school trustee in Palmyra, Ill. He says his knowledge of legal matters would be helpful in many city issues.

Dillard, assistant director of institutional research and studies at SIU, has served on the Carbondale City Council since November 1981. The 33-year-old, who has lived in Carbondale since 1969, also says he has experience with statistics and budgets to prove he would be a valuable asset to the council.

Both Kelley and Dillard point out that after the April 13 election the City Council will have between two and four new members — a situation they say makes their experience in local government even more important.

Fisher, a 50-year-old landlord, has made no secret of his disapproval of many current city policies. He says several city councilmen would work to reduce taxes, eliminate what he says is a $500,000 surplus in the city's budget, and change what he sees as the city's uncooperative attitude toward business.

Fisher has disputed charges that he is running for office merely to aid his retail businesses by working to change codes that he has given him problems in the past. Last year he received 13 code violation citations relating to his property. He was found guilty on one count of building without a permit and not guilty on a another similar count. The remaining charges are still under consideration.

Ivey, 25, a minister at the Wall Street Church of Christ, says he wants the city to make a stronger commitment to social services. A resident of Carbondale for the past four years, he also says he wants to ensure that the views of all residents are heard in city affairs.

With federal and state funds for social programs quickly running low and a financial support of social services has been a major subject during the campaign.

Dillard says that decisions on social service funding will depend on future events, such as the fate of the proposed state income tax hike and the city's ability to secure outside funding. He also says he is confident that the city's health and child care programs will be funded through next year, but that "it's not wise to speculate beyond that." He says social programs may have to be scaled down to make them affordable.

Kelley agrees that future funding of social services will be affected by external factors. He says it's unlikely that the city will be able to pay for social programs from its general fund and encourages the city to actively work to obtain what resources are available from the state agencies that now allocate federal funds for social programs.

Ivey also says he doubts the ability to "make the numbers." He says he has the experience to do so.

Bevis, Tuxhorn express disagreement on issues

The conference center. Social services funding. Taxes. That's the name of the game as it seems Keith Tuxhorn and Elliott Bevis will disagree about it.

Tuxhorn and Bevis, candidates for the Carbondale City Council seat in the April 12 election, voiced their views about those subjects and others at a candidates' meeting Tuesday morning sponsored by the League of Women voters.

Bevis, a 43-year-old real estate salesman, told an audience of about 40 people that the city should develop some type of downtown improvement project, but be as "un-disruptive" to the area as possible. Bevis previously had advocated building the proposed conference center if the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the city's method of land acquisition and if another developer can be found to replace restaurant owner Stan Hoye, who pulled out of the project last November.

Tuxhorn, a 27-year-old retail clerk, called the city's "quick exit" ordinance "a dangerous precedent." The ordinance allowed the city to seize only property before its value had been determined and last June was ruled unconstitutional by Jackson County Circuit Judge Richard E. Richman.

Incumbent Ann Greeley defeated two other candidates Wednesday night in her bid for the Illinois Senate and Professional Student Council presidential seat.

Greeley, a graduate student in psychology, received 76 votes over her opponent, Neil Katsinas, who received 37 votes, and Thomas F. Gape, a graduate student in environmental design, who received 6 votes.

In February, Greeley defeated Katsinas, a graduate student in higher education, for the same position in a special election which was called as a result of student number being invalidated.

"I believe the council has gained back the respect that has been lost due to the past election mishaps," Greeley said in a speech before the election. "We will continue to oppose unnecessary fee increases and comment on programs which we think are most necessary."

"We have to be concerned about tuition as students, and cuts in personnel, because we are University teachers," she said. Greeley stressed that it is not only students who should be concerned about possible increases in tuition.

"The most important thing to keep in perspective is that we're not the only group that would be affected by a tuition increase," she said. "Other constituencies are just as concerned."
Tuxhorn suggested that, if possible, federal grant money intended for the conference center and parking garage project in downtown Carbondale be used to develop small business in Carbondale. If the center is built, Tuxhorn said, displaced business owners must be compensated fairly to encourage their relocation in Carbondale. And these businesses should be given priority in receiving small business loans which will be available for commercial use in the proposed parking garage building across from the center, he said.

Tuxhorn added that if the parking garage is not built, the city should explore the possibility of revisiting those funds to social programs which are currently tied up in state and federal funding. Tuxhorn said he would support a tax increase if one were needed to keep social programs intact. "It's probably more necessary than people would like to realize," he said.

Bevis said that in the era of belt-tightening, the City Council should continue its "sound fiscal policies." It would be irresponsible, he said, to promise support for a downtown project if funds for that program were needed next year. But he promised not to cut social programs intact. Bevis added that he would oppose any new ordinances designed to control parties, and(2) the solution to these problems, according to Bevis, is "not overreacting, but continued dialogue between student leaders, SIUC administrators and the city. New laws are not the answer either, but enforcement of existing ordinances designed to control parties is, he said. Bevis has opposed a "Party Letter Law," proposed by Tuxhorn, which would require residents to notify police before throwing a large party and hold the host responsible for cleaning up after it. Bevis, who has said the city is overregulated, also opposes new ordinances suggested by Tuxhorn to improve the quality of rental housing. Enforcement of existing ordinances must be toughened, said Tuxhorn, who proposed setting structural and energy efficiency standards which would have to be met by every house rented or sold in Carbondale.

Communitywide effort and cooperation, not new laws, are needed to upgrade hospital conditions in Carbondale, Bevis said.
New Soviet missile sighted, may threaten Western Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has developed a new cruise missile which it may deploy on mobile launchers as a threat to Western Europe, the U.S. intelligence community said Wednesday.

The missile, designated by intelligence officials as the SSC-X-3, is said to have a range of nearly 1,900 miles, more than the American cruise missile which was deployed on mobile launchers as a deterrent, the SSC-X-4, the GLCM, scheduled for deployment in Europe late this year.

U.S. reconnaissance satellites recently detected what analysts believe is a possible mobile launcher for the SSC-X-4 at a test center in the Soviet Union. It was described as a wheeled tractor-trailer vehicle big enough to launch four missiles. Intelligence analysts, speaking only on condition that they remain anonymous, said the Soviets might be able to move such missiles around relatively easily over long distances — and that they could bring more key targets in Western Europe within their range if they were deployed in Europe.

President Reagan, in a retreat from his original call for a mutual ban of European missiles, recently offered to cut back on that deployment if the Soviets agreed to be limited to a shorter-range version.

No measles cases diagnosed

The Health Service is continuing to give measles vaccinations, although no cases of measles have been diagnosed on the SIU-C campus. Several suspicious cases have been reported, but these were not diagnosed as measles.

The Health Service will continue to vaccinate students against measles for the rest of the semester at the Health Service building. The vaccination program at the Student Center will end Friday.

The shot is free and no appointment is needed.

Although the American weapon has a somewhat shorter range, the United States, with the official backing of the NATO alliance but opposition from peace groups in Western Europe, plans to deploy 404 GLCMs and 106 Pershing II ballistic missiles in allied countries starting late this year.

President Reagan, in a retreat from his original call for a mutual ban of European missiles, recently offered to cut back on that deployment if the Soviets will dismantle a proportionate part of its arsenal. The Soviets have balked at that, saying it would still leave the West with a huge advantage because British and French missiles, as well as weapons launched from submarines and aircraft, would not be affected.

CSBO OK's new contract

The Civil Service Bargaining Organization Wednesday approved a new contract for January to June 1982 containing a 3 percent across-the-board salary increase. CSBO members, voting Wednesday and last Thursday, approved the new contract by a vote of 119 to 34, said Debbie Morrow, CSBO member. The salary increase is retroactive to January, she said.

The CSBO Executive Committee will meet with the University's Personnel Department Friday evening to sign the contract, Morrow said.

Respect students’ right to party

"USO, CITY CLASH: vow to work together," was the headline on Wednesday's Carbondale City Council story concerning student parties. Working together -- good news to be sure. But we hope that the one principle "work together" is not just another trite phrase.

Recently a report from City Manager Carroll Fry entitled "Problems and Remedial Measures -- Student Parties" was presented to the council. The report indicated that student parties were the cause for many of the disciplinary violation problems among the city's residents. Residents must help in correcting students those guilty of disturbing the peace and other illegal behavior by filing complaints and serving as witnesses, it said.

IT IS TRUE that many of the complaints against student parties are expressed by the University. That is true that loud music and unlawful behavior is often connected with student parties. But if the city and its residents are in fact serious about "working together," there is another recommendation that should have been included in the report: Just as students should respect the rights of residents, residents, too, should respect the right of the students to have parties.

Carbondale is not a run of the mill town -- it is mainly a college town. With the University comes jobs and money and tax-paying professors and administrators, but, most of all, come students. And with the students come unique problems. One of which are student parties.

STUDENT PARTIES ARE -- as much a part of student life as are books and studying and grading papers. And residents should take this into account before they go running for the police at the drop of a keg to call the police.

Students, for the most part, are young people. And it is the very nature of young people to raise hell -- to blow off steam -- on occasion. Parties help do this. They are an important part of the socialization process. They allow students to meet people out of their own circle -- to learn about other people and to get to know them. Student parties are a cheap form of entertainment -- an alternative to the downtown bars and movies.

HAVE SOME RESIDENTS forgotten what it is like to be young? We do not blame them. We ourselves are kids. We do not want our homes turned into a college party. We are concerned about the students who disrupt the neighborhood. If the City Council and the City residents are serious about "working together" to solve the party problem, then they should remember that students will be students. Before calling the police residents should ask themselves, "If I were a student, what would I be doing tonight?"

Book storage woes? Not in space

At least I have the answer. I've solved the SIUC's library storage problem.

Yes, administrators, you can blow the Bracy Building, bury the Baptist Student Center, wipe out the Stardust, burn down the Lakewood.

You see, I believe the University could do the following: Just as the University could persuade the agency to loan some space to the lighter missions.

SO THIS IS more than just another hotshot suggestion. I urge the administration to think of the possibilities.

The University could use a lot of space in space for $1.6 million. And who wouldn't want to do this? There may be a possibility that we could rent the entire space for $1.6 million. And who wouldn't want to do this?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A youth who was bitten by a deadly Gaboon viper that had been stolen from the National Zoo remained in critical condition today and may suffer permanent damage, doctors said.

Louis Morton, 16, was making progress after being treated with anti-venom serum, doctors at Children's Hospital said Tuesday night. However, doctors said he probably would suffer permanent damage to the muscle and skin around his right shoulder and arm.

The youth was carrying two four-foot-long Gaboon vipers in a plastic bag when he was bitten on the shoulder, authorities said. He had taken the bag onto a transit bus near the zoo late Monday night, according to police. Morton, who lives in southeast Washington, rode about three miles and then got off the bus in the downtown area, slinging the bag over his shoulder, according to transit spokeswoman Marilyn Dicus.

Soon thereafter, he returned to the bus and told the driver he had been bitten by a snake, Dicus said. The driver called police on her two-way radio, and the youth was rushed to the hospital. The vipers were returned safely to the zoo early Tuesday morning, said Laurie Bingaman, who works in the zoo's reptile house.

Desperation propels U2 album

By Andrew F. Zimmer

"And so we are told this is the golden age, and gold is the reason for the wars we wage. Nothing changes on New Year's Day." "War" is the name of U2's new album, and for good reason. The helpless desperation each of us feels as we watch, through the cold glow of our TV sets, pesos children packing machine guns in the hills of El Salvador and Catholic school children during homemade gasoline bombs at Protestant Northern Ireland runs throughout this Irish band's latest effort.

Desperation opens this powerful, long-awaited album, and desperation closes it. Bono Vox, U2's incredibly talented lead singer of "Jerusalem," "How long, how long must we sing this song in the album's militaristic opener: Sunday Bloody Sunday," and he closes on "40" by wondering "When will things change?"

U2, for the uninitiated, is one of the most talented young bands in the world. When their first album, "1980," landed on this side of the Atlantic in 1980, it seemed impossible to believe that these four young men, 19- and 20-year-olds, possessed a wailing, searing, spine-tingling voice that alternately soothes like a wife and puts you in prison, shrugs and screams like a Depeche Mode.

Guitarist The Edge is the perfect match for Vox, his echo-chamber riff slice through each song like an ice pick, and his insidious is eight years ahead of his young age. Bassist Adam Clayton and drummer Larry Mullen Jr. back Vox up the bottom end without overpowering their bandmates' frontal assaults. A classic U2 out is this week's best "New Year's Day," which features Vox on piano, and admits that though the year may change, nothing else really does on this socio-political setup.

This straining, "Where do we go from here?" style fits perfectly within the current U2 anti-war mood. "Like a Song," driven by the heavy bottom beat of Mullen, finds Vox both sympathizing with and acolling today's angry youth with. "You say it's time to go it's your time. Angry words will stop the fight. Two wrongs won't make it right.

The pressure to conform is addressed on the almost-funky "Second," which captures the clandestine, candle-lit nature of a budding revolutionary's life. "They're doing the atomic bomb. Do you know where the damndest corners are? Yes they're doing the atomic bomb; They want you to sing along." Vox warns.

While much of U2's "War" follows the title's theme, there does seem to be hope. In the haunting "New Year's Day," which includes violin mood-setting and ethereal-female harmonies, Vox tells us that "The storms will pass, it won't be long now. The storms will pass, but my love lasts forever."

Another love song, "Two Hearts Beat as One," is a barren dance tune that's funky and bouncy, while "Red Light," moves beyond the U2 norm into a jazz-y swing treatment of a hopeless love. "Refugee" finds U2 taking on an African chanting, heavy-percussive flavor to tell the story of a refugee girl's plan to live in America. As usual (except for the every long "40") where The Edge lapses into pointless Roy Buchanan imitations), there is little fault to be found in U2's latest effort.

If you get the feeling this album is worth checking out, you're right. U2 continues to follow it's own path at its own pace and, unlike what the band may think about the world, they'd be smart to just stay the same.

Panel stresses prison reform reexamination of penal laws

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

The corrections system in this country is in big trouble — financially, politically, and ethically — and things have to get to change.

That was the consensus among four panelists speaking Wednesday on “Imprisonment: Trends and Consequences” as part of the 1983 Human Resources Conference.

“The system is crazy,” said Michael Mahoney, executive director for the John Howard Association of Chicago, which is involved in prison reform.

“People have to realize that prison is a valuable, necessary but limited resource, just like any other resource.”

In 10 years, the cost of corrections in Illinois has more than doubled, he said, with a current budget of $265 million for adult and juvenile corrections. And the prison population has more than doubled.

Yet, William Nagel, president of the American Foundation for Adult and Juvenile Corrections, pointed out that the crime rate in Illinois and the rest of the United States peaked in 1975 and has been declining ever since. The American Foundation, Inc. conducts research aimed at humanizing the country’s criminal justice system.

Nagel said that, in the country’s history, there have been four periods of great increases in the prison population: the 1830s, 1880s, 1930s, and 1970s. At each of these times, there was economic uncertainty.

But he said he was not suggesting that unemployment causes the increase but that “we have to find a scapegoat for our uncertainties and fears. We have to become more conservative.”

The consequences are that “the prison population boomed, and we’ve reached a point of such cost that it no longer makes sense.”

The 1978 law mandating determinate sentences in Illinois is seen as a main problem by Nagel, Mahoney, William Lewis, chief circuit judge in Williamson County, and Dennis Waks, Jackson County public defender.

Taking discretion away from judges about sentence lengths, the law was originally a reform of the law, Mahoney said, but the conservatives caught onto it and have made it “ridiculous.”

For example, a bill was proposed to the Legislature that would mandate four years imprisonment for burglary in areas where residents were over 55, he said. The bill passed over the appropriate sub-committees, went straight to the floor, and was passed without the over-55 stipulation.

Waks called the law a “political ploy that, for some reason, Gov. Thompson elected.”

Mahoney added that the offense and length of sentence is a poor decider for who is violent and who isn’t.

“There’s no doubt that there are people in prison who don’t belong. The real question is how do we get them out?”

---CALL YOUR CAMPUS MILLER REP, Mike Fenlli. He can tell you what important products, services, and equipment we have to make your party or event a very successful one.---
In the air, and on the road, and at sea, the Navy demands that you be prepared. That's why Navy aviation demands leadership training. Your path to leadership starts with officer training that's among the most demanding in the military. It's intensive flight training and professional-schooling combined with rigorous Navy flight training. And it's all geared to prepare you and other college graduates for the unique challenge of Navy aviation. The program is tough but rewarding.

One important reward for Navy officers is decision-making authority. In the air, and on the ground, you have management responsibility from the beginning. And your responsibility grows as you gain experience.

No company can give you this kind of leadership responsibility this fast. And nothing beats the sheer excitement of Navy flying.

The salary is exciting, too. Right away, you'll earn about $18,300 a year. That's better than the average corporation will pay you just out of college. And with regular Navy promotions and other pay increases, your annual salary will soar to $31,100 after four years. That's on top of a full package of benefits and privileges.

Before you settle down to an earth-bound desk job, reach for the sky. Reach for a college education! Find out what it takes to be part of the Naval Aviation Team. You could have a desk that flies at twice the speed of sound.

Touch of Nature jogging events set

By Jackie Douillet
Student Writer

A series of runs for joggers is in progress at the Touch of Nature Environmental Center. A High Fashion Run is scheduled for Sunday and runners are encouraged to wear their best running gear. Awards will be given to the best-dressed participants. Each run is 1.6 to 10 miles, depending on the runner’s choice on the road or cross-country. Ray Grimmer, coordinator of the runs, said the runs are a social event and no times are kept.

"The Fun Runs are simply an opportunity for area people to run and enjoy an all-you-can-eat natural breakfast following the run," said Grimmer. On May 1, a movie or running will be shown during breakfast following a run. An Adventure Run is planned for May 15, with an obstacle course after the run.

A Spring Celebration Run is planned for May 21, with swimming, volleyball and a picnic following breakfast. Each run costs $5 and all-you-can-eat breakfast is $3.50 for adults and $2.75 for children under 16. All runs start at 9 a.m., weather permitting. No pre-registration is necessary.

The panelists also said the forced early release of prisoners used by the state is a potential problem. Prisoners are being released, ready or not, because there’s no room to keep them. Mahoney said, “It’s a short-term solution to a long-term problem.”

Lewis agreed. “We’ve locked up too many violent people, yet some of the most violent individuals have been let loose under the deterministic sentence.”

He said, “A horror story is going to reach the public in a few years” when people who need to be locked up are let loose because there’s no space. The panelists said alternatives to imprisonment are necessary and the discretion of sentence lengths needs to be taken away from the legislature and state’s attorneys and given back to judges.

This Desk Can Reach Mach 2.

Some desk jobs are more exciting than others. As a Navy pilot or flight officer, your desk can be a sophisticated combination of supersonic jet aircraft and advanced electronic equipment. But you can handle it. Because Navy aviation demands leadership. Your path to leadership starts with officer training that’s among the most demanding in the military. It’s intensive flight training and professional-schooling combined with rigorous Navy flight training. And it’s all geared to prepare you and other college graduates for the unique challenge of Navy aviation. The program is tough but rewarding.

One important reward for Navy officers is decision-making authority. In the air, and on the ground, you have management responsibility from the beginning. And your responsibility grows as you gain experience.

No company can give you this kind of leadership responsibility this fast. And nothing beats the sheer excitement of Navy flying.

The salary is exciting, too. Right away, you’ll earn about $18,300 a year. That’s better than the average corporation will pay you just out of college. And with regular Navy promotions and other pay increases, your annual salary will soar to $31,100 after four years. That’s on top of a full package of benefits and privileges.

Before you settle down to an earth-bound desk job, reach for the sky. Reach for a college education! Find out what it takes to be part of the Naval Aviation Team. You could have a desk that flies at twice the speed of sound.

Cheating doesn't always pay in Intramural sports program

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

"We have only four players for our intramural basketball game," one team member said to another. "Hey, I have an idea. Let's get John to use Fred's name. Intramurals will never find out."

That isn't exactly true. Intramurals can find out, at least some of the time.

According to Joyce Craven, director of intramurals, the coord' nators of intramurals will press at the problem of fake, fake players to its advisory board this week.

"There are two aspects to this problem," Craven said. "There is the player who uses his real name, just not on the roster. There is the player who uses an assumed name that is on the roster."

Craven said the ineligible player who uses an assumed name is the biggest problem. For example, in a recent intramural final basketball game in the A division, the winning team was found to have a player using an assumed name. The team was disqualified.

"There are certain rules and regulations that students involved in intramurals must face," Craven said. "They are all explained in full detail on the signup sheets. The excuse of 'I didn't know' will not work."

The penalty for ineligible players is simple. If a team is found to be using an ineligible player, the team will not be allowed to participate in the playoffs, and the player caught will not be allowed to play that intramural sport until the following year. Craven said. But the player will not be kicked out of intramurals entirely.

This semester, 10 out of the 22 teams signed up for intramural basketball were eliminated from the playoffs for violating the rules. The intramural department expects that some softball teams will be eliminated also.

"We hope that players have the integrity not to cheat," Craven said. "But it happens and we have to get tough."

Craven figures the only way this problem could be totally stopped would be if each player brought his student ID to every game. But there are a few drawbacks to this idea. Most students play games in sweats, and most sweats don't have pockets. So it would be the responsibility of someone in intramurals to hold on to the IDs, and in the process, they could be lost during the game.

Also, there are a lot of Hs whose pictures don't resemble the person.

"Taking these drawbacks into account," Craven said, "we are open for suggestions."

If a team wants a new player on the roster, the process is easy. The student interested in signing up for the team must go into the intramural department and sign up.

"How much easier can we make it?" Craven said. "It sure saves everyone a little embarrassment when they get caught."

Harper is looking toward the draft later this month although he says his agent stays in touch with the Denver Gold, which drafted him in the United States Football League draft.

Quarterback Rick Johnson has the same professional ambitions, and through a loophole in the eligibility rules, the veteran quarterback has an outside chance to realize them. Johnson had thought his career was over last season, but he was later tentatively quarantined because he had not seen action as a freshman. Johnson had a good season in 1982, but will need a great 1983 to have a chance to be a pro footballer. "I don't think he's as concerned about breaking records as he is with improving," said Dempsey, who said that his quarterback was ready to take the "next step" in his maturation as a quarterback.

"He feels that this is his extra shot, that this is a blessing," said Dempsey. "He understands more. He has a better understanding of what his reads are. He's starting to register."

Johnson is still bothered by a shoulder he separated at Florida State last year, but that injury still ranks as one of the Salukis' minor injuries (there is the usual quota of sprains and pulled muscles) and we have a real threatening one, like Ed Norman, who was later Richard Blackmon's broken hand, or Tony Wreem's knee injury.

Struggling tracksters hope to quick pace at relays
By Ken Veritas

Time for reflection of the men's baseball season is upon us. If you ask the one who knows best, "They are a bunch who know they can't win and aren't satisfied with that. I've had this before. It gets me down. They're so sure that they were going to have a good track season..."

But all the Salukis' efforts, they have made up their minds to do nothing about it. It's evident in all that they have done since this bunt at all.

The Salukis, last year's NCAA Coach of the Year, 23-year veteran, owner of most of the conference titles than any other coach.

His team is preparing in Saturday's Woodgol Relays in Knoxville, Tenn., and the thought of it makes him more anxious to get underway, facing the facts, and the fact that there isn't much he can do about it.

"I don't get too much into the Salukis gaining the form that destroyed most complementary.

"To have this thing change around, he would have to be 100% sure I'm doing something right and that we're going to do it if we can..."

He's been with the team for three years in a row.

The Saluki will work out for four or five days per

Dempsey said he was happy with the outcome of the initial

Golfers face survival challenge and battle with weather
By Sherry Chenhall
Staff Writer

Survival is the key to a successful weekend for the men's and women's golf teams, ac-ording to coach Mary McIlvain.

The big obstacle in the path of the golfers is an uncontrollable one, the weather.

Mary McGarr said all the teams SIU-C will compete with are the same boat, which can almost be taken literally, considering the amount of rain that has saturated Midwest golf courses the past week.

The lady golfers will have to fight for their survival,

"Every one of us is planning to be there..."

The men's golf team will play to Champaign with Anderson, playing in her first annual. McGarr said the six ages have a definite problem for the women's team, but most of the problems are handled in the winter months.

The men's golf team will play to Champaign with assistant coach Brian Wallace to compete in the 15th Annual Invitational, hosted by the University of Illinois.

The 36-hole tournament played at Orange Course at Sauve, was moved out last week, but coach Eric

Beard said he's optimistic about getting all 36 holes in this year.

"The course is really good, but the weather for the weekend made promoting," Beard said.

"We're still going to miss in the forecast for most of the week, but we're hoping for a break in the weather this week..."

Mary McGarr said SIU-C can challenge for the tournament crown if everyone plays well.

But the Salukis will be strong challenged by Indiana, the conference's defending champions, and Ohio State, tournament favorite.

Iowa-Iowa State: State tournament in two weeks, or Kim Oliver.

McGarr said SIU-C can claim the tournament crown if everyone plays well.

But the Salukis will be strong.

If we can get up and down and hit the ball straight, we'll score," McGarr said. "We've been playing solid, and I hope we can continue to peak. Now it's a question of what the weather. We've had a lot of rain, but we have all the other teams."
