Ueberroth leads buy of Eastern Airlines

NEW YORK (UPI) — Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo said Thursday he has reached agreement with an investor group led by former Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth to sell Eastern Airlines in a deal valued at $463.9 million.

The deal, subject to a host of contingencies, includes a provision for 30 percent employee ownership of Eastern, and is conditioned on Ueberroth reaching agreements with the airline's labor groups, officials said.

Ueberroth said he planned to meet shortly with union representatives, but he declined to discuss the size of concessions he would seek from those groups.

An earlier bid for Eastern envisioned employee concessions of about $210 million, according to an official of the Air Line Pilots Association.

The chairman of the ALPA at Eastern said he was encouraged by the agreement.

"We look forward to working with Peter Ueberroth and his team over the coming days," said Capt. John Bavis.

In Miami, several hundred union workers greeted the news with shouts, hugs and tears of joy. A group of pilots and flight attendants linked arms and started singing, "Take me out to the ballgame."

Ueberroth described the need for union concessions as one of two major hurdles faced by his group, which also includes businessman J. Thomas Talbot.

The second major hurdle is approval by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court overseeing Eastern's reorganization, he said.

Eastern filed for bankruptcy March 9 after failing to force its pilots to cross picket lines set up March 4 by striking machinists.

Under the terms of the deal, announced at a midtown Manhattan news conference, Texas Air will receive about $200 million in cash and airline assets valued at $79 million. In addition, Eastern will return Texas Air notes held by it in

Parking fines, traffic tickets raised to detour violators

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

Beginning Tuesday, parking and traffic ticket fines will increase, Merilyn Hogan, coordinator of the Parking Division, said.

An increase in the number of motorists parking illegally has prompted the Parking and Traffic Committee to raise fines for parking and traffic tickets, Hogan said.

Fines will rise from $10 to $15 for motorists with no decals on their vehicles, from $5 to $8 for illegal parking and from $10 to $15 for other violations, which include speeding and failure to yield to a pedestrian, Hogan said.

After deliberating on the issue for four to five months, the committee approved the increase to "encourage people to park correctly" and "discourage people from parking incorrectly," Hogan said.

The committee consists of University administrators, faculty and students, Hogan said.

Despite numerous complaints about the shortage of parking spaces on campus, Hogan said there are plenty of spaces available, especially on the east and west side of campus.

Hogan said there is no parking problem at the University, but said there is a "walking problem."

Gus says a 15 minute walk from the arena will save 15 minutes of circling time or a 15 dollar fine.

Areas unrepresented in USG race

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

With all the deadlines to enter the April 19 student government elections passed, five academic units lack representation in the race.

The Undergraduate Student Government Senate allows two representatives from each of the 10 academic units as well as 21 representatives from the combined four geographical areas which include: East and West side of Carbondale, Thompson Point and East Campus.

A total of 51 senatorial candidates will run for the 41 available positions, leaving heavy competition for some seats while others are left virtually uncontested.

The two College of Education seats are left open with no candidates running for them and the School of Agriculture, College of Human Resources, College of Science and the Undergraduate Academic Services have only one candidate running for a senatorial seat.

The two College of Business and Administration senatorial write-in candidates will have no competition.

The heaviest competition exists for senate seats for the East and West side of town as well as for the available East campus and Thompson Point seats.

No code changes for liquor licenses

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The Liquor Advisory Board concurred unanimously with City Attorney Pat McMeen to not change liquor codes limiting the number of liquor licenses for Carbondale at its meeting Thursday night.

The board also discussed changing the license application process for requesting a license after a request has been denied twice by the Liquor Commission.

On Dec. 6, 1988, the City Council discussed "regaining control" of liquor licenses within the city by limiting the number of liquor licenses in Carbondale and prohibiting happy hours and "two for one" specials.

McMeen completed a study in March and sent the advisory board and council her recommendations for the proposed change limiting liquor licenses.

McMeen said the change was "not advisable" and instead, recommended that the City Council establish a policy of imposing stricter penalties for violations of the current codes.

Limiting the number of licenses, McMeen said, could be viewed as a restraint on trade and an attempt to control competition.

"If a cap is desired, it should be applied citywide based on official population," she wrote.

Based on Carbondale's population, the number of licenses could not exceed 51

North takes witness stand in defense

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oliver North, taking the witness stand in his own defense, testified Thursday he had been under White House orders since 1984 to keep the Nicaraguan rebels alive and believed his actions were legal.

"None of the people I worked for ever told me what we did was illegal," said the former staff member of the National Security Council, who is fighting 12 felony charges arising from his activities in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Rainrod straight in his conservatively cut blue suit, North, 45, placed his left hand on a Bible and with a stout "I do!" swore to tell the whole truth about his role in the worst scandal of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

Defense lawyer Brendan Sullivan began his afternoon of questioning by leaning over the lectern and saying with a smile, "So, you're Colonel North."

"Yes, sir," North replied. "I am."

For the next two hours, North told his version of the story to a jury that for seven weeks has heard 42 witnesses explain his arrangements for the secret 1986 U.S. arms sales to Iran and management of a clandestine network that ferried weapons and supplies to the Contra rebels.

North, who was to testify further Friday, began his tale by recounting events in 1984, when Congress banned official U.S. aid to the rebels.

The rebels — who former President Reagan once called "the moral equivalent of our Fighting Fathers" — were formed as a fighting force by the CIA in 1981 in an effort to topple Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Scholar gives Billie Holiday's life another look

Doctoral candidate tries to redeem singer's character

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor
and Jackie Lay
Student Writer

Shirlene Holmes hates being called an actress. "I'm a scholar. At least I try to be," the award-winning storyteller said.

Holmes, a doctoral candidate in speech-communication and Carbondale's 1989 winner of the NAACP Image Award for Arts, most recently finished starring in "No Detour Ahead," a one-woman show about the life of blues singer Billie Holiday, which she performed last weekend at the Calipre Theater.

If the play's lines came easy to Holmes, it's no small wonder. She wrote them.

"Actually, 'compiled and written by' is the credit I prefer," Holmes said, citing research as the root of her art.

Much of the monologue for "No Detour Ahead" includes "things that Billie actually said in her biography 'Lady Sings the Blues,'" Holmes said.

"The legacy of Billie Holiday, her influence musically and socially, belongs to America, not just black America," Holmes said.

"We can't forget our past leaders, even an unhappy example such as Billie," she added.

"We all accept the Diana Ross version, and I have no problems with that," Holmes said, "but don't just look at the myth she's shrouded — this junkie stereotype."

"I'm trying to redeem her character. There are no needs in the show," she added.

In her attempt to portray the person and not the star, Holmes refused to let "No Detour Ahead" become a singing show."

However, classic Holiday blues tunes, such as "God Bless the Child," "All of Me," "Strange Fruit" and "Billie's Blues" were incorporated into the show.

It was 84 years ago today that jazz vocalist Billie Holiday was born in Baltimore, Md. Her father was 15 and her mother was 13; both black. She spent her childhood in squalor and poverty.

According to Holmes' program that relinquishes Holiday history, she experienced many shocks, including the unexpected death of her great-grandmother. She was attacked and raped by her neighbor at age 10. At age 14, she turned to prostitution because of the economic crisis in her life.

Billie also experienced bad health and used drugs heavily. Because of the drugs she was constantly harassed by police.

She was a Catholic growing up in the 30s and 40s. The black churches looked at her as "loose" and didn't accept her. She always felt she could serve God, but he couldn't serve her.

Besides her differences in the church, she faced societal problems. She felt she could never be the perfect woman because perfect women were white.

"The life of the black woman is at the lowest end of the totem pole, yet, we take care of the world," Holmes said. "We take care of everyone."

"Survival in the world was the central issue in Billie's life. She had the image of a sophisticated woman, with fur coats, a painted face (back then there was no make-up available for black women nor panty hose), fancy clothes and a chauffeur. But she had to fight to eat," Holmes said.

Billie also was a co-dependent for men, which always turned out to be the wrong type. They were usually physically and sexually abusive.

"Women are becoming weaker and co-dependent," Holmes said. "They don't believe they are worthy unless someone says they are."

"Although Billie was co-dependent, she was quite bold, resilient and fought men for her right to sing," Holmes said.

One man who was extremely close to her was Lester Young, "her soul mate." From Lester she learned to use her voice as an instrument. With his help, her technique improved and became far more personal.

Her models were Bessie Smith and Louis Armstrong, both musicians. Lester gave Billie the nickname of "Lady Day" and she called him "Pres." There was a sense of royalty within her family.

Billie's music was more personal because it was autobiographical, according to Holmes. "Some people considered her music to be blues because she sang about how she couldn't pay the rent, or how a man wasn't treating her right. But it was jazz," Holmes said.

"Billie set a pace for the jazz artist of today to try to surpass, and it's hard," Holmes said.

Her more popular tunes include "Good Morning Heartache," "My Man" and

Debate team could dispel 'party school'

RESOLVED: THE University debate team is the best in the country.

You'll get no argument from us.

The debate team won the national Cross Examination Debate Association sweepstakes on Monday at the University of South Carolina in Columbia; making up a five point deficit going into the tournament and beating out the likes of UCLA in the process.

This feat in itself would deserve hearty congratulations, but the fact that it marks the fourth year in a row SIU-C has captured the national title, with UCLA being the only other university to do this, deserves something else: Wow!

COACH JEFFREY T. Bile said that having to make up five points going into the final tournament of the season is nothing to laugh about.

The points to determine the national champion debating team are based on its six best tournament scores and Biles said no one had ever made up that many points going into the year-ending tournament. But he said of the debaters: "They just decided they wanted to win it. So they did." By placing two of the two-person debate teams second and third in the tournament it swept by UCLA. The debaters who competed in the tournament were selected from the best of the debate team as a whole, which Bile said includes majors from Russian, philosophy, political science and speech communication.

THE TOURNAMENT debaters were: Mark West, John Lapham, Mike Korcok, Kevin O'Leary, Brian McGee, Stacie Hunter, Chris Carey and T.J. Wolfe. Some of these students will graduate this year but perhaps the ones who don't graduate and their superb coach can continue in their tradition and bring the nation's attention to the University's academic prowess instead of the "party school image."

A different sort of party

THERE WAS A party last Sunday on campus. Thousands of students were invited from every college in the University. Even College deans and parents went to this one.

That's because this party was for the best students on the campus: It was the Scholastic honors day convocation. And that is something to celebrate.

Students with grade point averages of 3.5 or better and members of various honor societies and scholarship winners and other awards and prizes were recognized.

These students are to be congratulated for bringing to this University their scholastic talents and have earned their day of honor each year.

Letters

Coal Research Center change offers an opportunity for growth

Your recent letter from James Swisher, former director of the Coal Research Center concerning his perspectives on the transfer of SIU-C's DOE-funded coal technology research program to the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources was quite interesting in that he wished to correct any "mistaken impressions" communicated by the DOE.

In the spirit of his intent, I feel compelled to correct some of his own mistaken impressions.

First, the $1.5 million which SIU-C has received for the past six years to conduct coal research at the DOE-owned, SIU-C operated Coal Technology Laboratory, will be channeled through the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources to the Center for Research on Sulfur in Coal.

While large scale hardware development is a goal of one of the CRSC programs, these particular funds will be combined with the CRSC's approximate $2.5 million in state funds allocated for research.

This total $4 million will be competed for within the state by approximately six institutions.

The CRSC program, housed at Champaign-Urbana since its inception, will now be housed at the CTL facility, in which ownership will be transferred to SIU-C as part of the agreement with DOE.

Second, the demise of the DOE-sponsored research program at SIU-C was not in any stretch of the imagination attributable to wanting political support, as Swisher asserts.

During the last two years of this congressionally mandated program, our political support in Congress was higher than it had ever been. While we previously succeeded in securing appropriations language in either the House or Senate bill, in the last two years, the program was appropriated in both bills.

SIU-C's loss of the guaranteed $1.5 million program was not a forced change, but rather a voluntary one made in the interest of long term stability. While our previous arrangement could have probably continued for a few more years, it was a politically mandated program that would be threatened as quickly as political actors change.

What we traded was a short term guaranteed research program for ownership of research facilities, a shift of state coal research focus from Champaign to Southern Illinois where it belongs, and a much expanded state coal research budget in which SIU-C coal researchers should have no problem competing.

Depending on one's predisposition and perspective, major change can either lead to doom and failure, or growth and prosperity. I see the new leadership at the Coal Research Center and the above-mentioned changes as great opportunity for the latter. — Susan Morris, Legislative Liaison for Research, graduate school.

Printing photo showed no sympathy

This letter is in response to the DE's coverage of the fire disaster that occurred on Elm Street last weekend. The photo in Monday's edition displaying the victim's body was very distasteful and highly insensitive.

I realize that it is the journalist's job to obtain the most informative and enlightening coverage of a story, but there is a definite line between good journalism and the upholding of moral values.

Was it not enough to show the house and the reactions of the survivors? Do you really feel that the photo actually helped to exemplify the sobering impact of the incident? Or was it just a lack of consideration and compassion toward the friends and relatives of Steve Schaefer, to whom I express my deepest sympathy?

I'm sure that if you were to ask any one of them they would tell you that the experience itself is had enough without having to see such an explicit photo while thumbing through the pages of their school newspaper.

The reality of the situation is vivid enough without having salt rubbed in the wound. A wound, I might add, that is difficult to heal.

I hope that in the future you will at least consider this viewpoint before publishing such inconsiderate and potentially devastating material.

I would hope that among the news-breaking facts that award you a front page story you could at least find room for some sympathy and respect, if not for your own sake, then for the sake of others.

And with all due respect, may you never see an explicit photo of a deceased friend of loved one in your local paper. — Mark Mulvain, senior, recreation.

Opinions from elsewhere

Scripts Howard News Service

The National Register of Historic Places, an agency of the U.S. Park Service, has received a request to designate the Chicago home of Al Capone a historic landmark.

Timothy Samuelson, a Chicago Landmarks Commission aide who initiated the application, argues that Capone was "a historical fact" and that Chicago "cannot pretend (he) didn't exist."

Capone, who died in 1947, may be the Windy City's "most famous citizen," as Samuelson says. But that doesn't mean the federal government should start honoring notorious criminals. The National Register's trash can is the appropriate place for the application.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Carbondale needs to host more metal bands

Party, party, party! Bon Jovi has finally returned to jam at the Arena, and long overdue.

Man I've been really bummed at some of the bogus groups that come to SIU. More Dirty Dancings? Like get real dude. What we need at this school is metal and more of it.

Thanks to those gimps over at the Arena I don't see half the metal I did in high school. Man the only cool bands I've seen in the last year or so were Bon Jovi, Van Halen, Poison, Tesla, Whitesnake, Aerosmith, Dokkin, Def Leppard, Alice Cooper, Cinderella, David Lee Roth, Ratt, and Megadeth. I mean like come on, what about Metallica, Europe, King's X, Ozzy, and Guns and Roses?

Man, nothing steps on my buzz more than a lack of variety. I've banged my head from Bangladesh to San Bernidino and I'm still jammin. Rock on! — Mike Edwards, undecided major.

Trott'n time at the SIU-C horse farm

Area horse owners saddle up, corral mounts for spring show

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

With a great deal of community support, the equestrian team managed to round up more than 700 horses to be used at their spring horse show March 31 through April 2.

"We didn't qualify because the kids were so exhausted and worn down from putting together such a large horse show."

—Myke Ramsey

The equestrian team hosted a national horse show, which qualified teams and individuals to advance to regional competition. Myke Ramsey, faculty advisor and English hunt seat style coach, said.

Because of stormy weather and the abundance of mud, the horse show had to be held inside of the Silver Star Farms, off Route 13 in Carbondale.

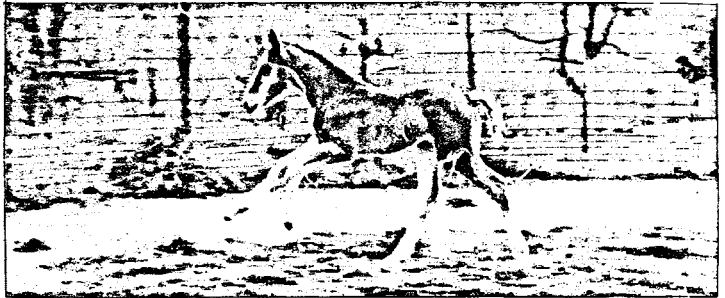

Since the University hosted the show, they had to provide 705 horses for the entries, Ramsey said. The University did not contribute any horses.

Had it not been for the generosity of the Southern Illinois communities, the horse show might not have gone as smoothly as it did, Ramsey said.

"The people of Southern Illinois really came out to show their support," Ramsey said. "They donated all the horses. We couldn't have done it without them."

Ramsey said the horses came from private owners and private farms from all over Southern Illinois.

Although the University did not qualify as a team to go to the regionals, several individuals qualified on their own merits.

"We didn't qualify because the kids were so exhausted and worn down from putting together such a large horse show," Ramsey said. "They did an excellent job with the show."

To qualify for the regional meet, the students had to score a set number of points, Ramsey said. They were given points by the way they performed throughout the show.

Students who qualified for the regionals were Jessica Varsa, Eric Matteson, Jodi Kerkhoff, Joe Greenburg, Jenni Vines, Greg Szidik and Kim Green.

The equestrian team has been an active part of the University's intercollegiate sports program for nine years.

The team is divided into two styles of riding: Western stock seat riding and English hunt seat riding.

The Western style, coached by Myke Ramsey, is similar to the way cowboys would ride horses. It is used to rope and herd cattle, Ramsey said. The English style stems from the traditional fox hunt riding and is coached by Gina Shiplett. The English style includes jumping fences.

To participate on the equestrian team, students must be full time undergraduates and take professional riding lessons, Ramsey said.

Saluki Grande paces victory for horse-rearing program

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The University's horse-rearing program has produced its first cash winner at the race tracks—Saluki Grande.

The 2-year-old pacer has been winning harness races all over the Midwest this year, Sheryl King horse-rearing program director, said.

Saluki Grande is a standardbred pacer, which means he races with his jockey pulled in a harness behind him instead of his jockey on his back.

Although the University no longer owns the horse, the money won from his races goes to the University's horse-rearing program, which is part of the Department of Animal Science, Food and Nutrition.

This year the University received a check for more than $500 for just one of Saluki Grande's performances, King said.

"We have a super horse program here at SIU-C," King said. "We're starting to get national recognition with Saluki Grande."

It was quite a long shot to try to produce a horse that was capable of competing in a formal race and winning, King said.

"The odds of the horse actually winning are about one to every 100," King said.

Saluki Grande was sired by a University-owned stallion named Mightyoret, so she said the potential is still there for future race winners bearing the Saluki name.

The royalties will keep going to the horse program as long as Saluki Grande keeps winning.

The University's horse program is one of a few that is operated almost entirely by students, King said.

"The students are directly responsible for the care and the nurture of all the horses at University Farms," King said.

Milk substitute to help orphan pony survival

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Four-week-old horses are being fed milk substitutes instead of regular milk as part of an eight-week project.

The University's horse rearing program agreed to take on this project, which is sponsored by Land O' Lakes, a dairy company.

The program has purchased 11 foals, young horses, who were only a week old when they first came to the University, and the students were instructed to divide them into two feeding groups, Gary Gow, a herdsman for the University horse farms, said.

Each group was given a different type of milk replacer; only Land O' Lakes knows the difference in the two formulas, Sheryl King, horse rearing program director, said.

Serum could raise mare fertility rates

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The University's animal research laboratories is developing a vaccine that would boost fertility rates in female horses.

"We're searching for ways to reduce the number of uterine infections in mares," Sheryl King, assistant professor of animal sciences and equine specialist, said.

Uterine infections are the leading cause of low fertility rates in horses, King said. The researchers want to find ways to create a vaccine that would stimulate secretory immunity in the mare's uterus.

Secretory immunity involves mucus secreting from the mare's uterus, King explained.

Many vaccines have been developed to kill bacteria in horses as well as other livestock, but none have been successful in preventing uterine infections, King said. For some reason the vaccines do not create sufficient immunity in the uterus.

The leading cause of uterine infections in mares is a bacteria called streptococcus zooepidemicus. Researchers from animal research laboratories are working in conjunction with the University's School of Medicine in Springfield to develop a vaccine that would act directly on the uterus.

This vaccine would raise the fertility rates in the mares and prevent infection at the same time.

The School of Medicine is working to identify the bacteria and make the vaccine. The department of animal sciences is studying and administering the vaccines to the horses.

"Right now, horses show the lowest fertility rates among all livestock species," King said. "Annual live foal rates in the United States stand at only 50 percent."

This project could take several years before it can successfully work on horses, but it has already shown signs of success with mice.

A developed localized immune reaction in the uterus has been localized in the mice.

It's the goal of the department of animal sciences to adapt the technique to the horses, King said.

"We want to create a vaccine that would attack the bacteria from the inside, where it does the most damage," King said.

Lynn Wagner, senior in equine science, has to provide a little encouragement for this 2-week-old colt on his way from the barn to the pen at the University's horse farm.

"We keep a record of their growth and other vital statistics," Gow said. "At the end of the eight weeks, we'll give our report to the Land O' Lakes company."

At this point, no difference has shown up in the foals receiving the different types of milk replacers, Gow said.

The company plans to market their milk replacer, or folax formula, after they make refinements based on the reports from the University, Gow said.

This substitute will greatly benefit the foals in case their mothers die, which is a common occurrence during the birth of foals, King said. The milk replacer will provide the foals with all the nutrition they need.

Since the foals are handled so much, and they are constantly around people, they are extremely gentle and affectionate, King said.

"Sometimes when I go out there, the little horses will almost knock me down to lick my face and nuzzle me," King said. "They are the gentlest horses I've ever worked with."

Gow said that one horse will roll over on her back so she can have her belly scratched.

"I've never seen horses that act so much like puppies," Gow said. "They (the foals) are so much fun to work with."

The results from the experiment should be known by the middle of June.

"Them There Eyes."

In 1939, Billie decided to include in her repertoire a dramatic, socially committed song against lynching entitled "Strange Fruit." It too was a great success.

It was around this time in her life that Billie began wearing the gardenia in her hair, a habit which started out as something to cover up a burned spot in her hair and ended up being a superstition. It also was her way of showing that God was always with her.

Billie died in 1953, just after cutting her last record. She was taken to Metropolitan Hospital in New York after a serious attack of hepatitis, which also affected her heart.

She died on July 17, at the age of 44, with policemen surrounding her death bed, according to the program.

"All she wanted was to be loved and respected, while being recognized for her craft," Holmes said. "She had a uniqueness."

In her rendition of Holiday's life, Holmes wanted to show the audience a side of Billie that had never been captured by anyone else who portrayed her.

In "No Detour Ahead," Holmes took her audience through four phases in Billie's life.

The first phase was an introduction of a few songs that she sang. The second was based on an interview, in which Billie talked about her life across a table to a silent, invisible character.

The third phase took the audience into Billie's room at the sanitarium, where she exposed the drug tracks on her arms and faced herself, her mother and guilt. The fourth phase involved audience participation.

Holmes also passed out a questionnaire for the audience to fill out at the end of the play, as part of her performance dissertation. The questions asked for views on the play itself. The results showed people were pleased to reconsider the story and found Billie Holiday a relevant topic.

They enjoyed her being alive again. They enjoyed going into the sanitarium with her because they felt closer and understood Billie more, and they felt happy to see a woman fighting back.

"Most people felt inclined to gravitate toward involvement in the fourth phase," Holmes said.

Holmes said her artistic mission in "No Detour Ahead" was to communicate realistic social images to young blacks who have "lost touch with their roots. They need to see this side of Americana."

"Each life is a text we can study for our learning," Holmes said. "That's where I come in. That's my duty as an artist; to pay back the debt I owe to the Black community — past and future generations — by using my gift."

"You see, I am the hope and the dream of the slave," Holmes added. "Through performing, I hope to be a part of the stirring. That's all I can do. The audience does the rest."

USG, from Page 1

Debbie Hughes, USG election commissioner, said the deadlines have passed and no new candidates will be allowed to apply for the open senatorial seats.

However, the USG Senate is empowered to make appointments to fill empty seats within the senate as needed. Since the elections last year, only nine of the senators who ran for a position remain on the senate, everyone else has been appointed.

The USG Senate is expected to make appointments to fill any seats left open after the elections.

Also running in the elections are three president-vice president teams that will appear on the ballot.

Brian Skinner and Chuck Hagerman will run under the Next party, Charles Loiseau and Brian Hawkins will run under the First party and Tim Hildebrand and Lisa Sproule will run under the Progress party. Bill Hall and Jim Williams will run against each other for the student trustee positions.

Polling places will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. on April 19 at the following locations:

- Student Center
- Grinnell Hall
- Trueblood Hall
- Lentz Hall
- Communications Building
- Lesar Law Building
- Technical Careers Building

A lifetime of history through a journalist's eyes

By Beth Clavin
Staff Writer

"I want to be a newspaperman."

These were the words of 18-year-old Virginia Marmaduke to her father more than 60 years ago.

And become a newspaperman, or woman, she did.

Marmaduke, better known as "the Duchess," spent 30 years in what she describes as the "fast lane of Chicago journalism."

Marmaduke, who was born in Carbondale, but grew up in Chicago, worked for the Chicago Sun-Times, Chicago Tribune and did several Chicago radio and TV shows during her career. She now works part time with University Relations.

Marmaduke, 80, studied journalism at the University of Iowa and worked at the Herring Daily Journal for 13 years, while she was married to the late Harold Grear. After that, she knew she wanted to be a general news reporter.

"I didn't want society. I didn't want cooking. And I didn't want fashion. And that's where most of the women were in my day," Marmaduke said

CBS director to speak at lecture

Lane Venardos, director of the CBS special events unit, will be the guest speaker for this year's Virginia Marmaduke Lecture, which will be at 7:30 p.m., April 11 in Lawson 221.

Venardos, a 1966 graduate of SIU-E, started work in Chicago at WBBM news radio. In 1974, he joined "The CBS Evening News" and held three different titles before becoming the show's executive producer.

Among Venardos' assignments, he has produced "The CBS Evening

News with Dan Rather" and served as the executive producer of news specials during the Reagan-Gorbachev summits. He also supervises CBS's coverage of the space shuttle and was executive producer of "48 Hours on Crack Street."

from her cozy apartment in Pinckneyville, where she now lives.

Marmaduke said she was lucky her editors gave her a chance to do just what she wanted. For Marmaduke, establishing equality with male reporters was something she did from the start.

"I worked awfully hard at it, and I let my fellow men police reporters know I wasn't using my sex to scoop them," she said. "I wanted to compete on the same level with them."

"You can't think that just because you're born a little different than a man you have more right to chance because you don't," she said. "If you get an exclusive interview with sex, you only hurt yourself with your fellow newspaper people and it's not worth it. Not in the long run."

Marmaduke proved her worthiness as a reporter by going further than the average reporter to get a story.

"To cover a circus parade, she'd ride an elephant," Maury Falstein, former picture editor at the Sun-Times and long-time friend of Marmaduke, said. "She wouldn't just cover a story."

"She was very innovative," he said. "She did a great job."

It was at the beginning of her Chicago journalism career that Marmaduke got the nickname, "the Duchess." Marmaduke said it was her first day at the Chicago Sun.

"I was the new babe in the newsroom," she said. "I was standing next to my editor trying to be nervous because there were 31 men staring at me. I knew what they were thinking. They were thinking 'Will she or won't she?'" Marmaduke laughed. "You know they were."

Marmaduke said her editor, Tom Michelmore, looked up at her and said, "Marmaduke! That's a hell of a name for a byline in a newspaper. I'm not gonna yell 'Miss Marmaduke!' every time I want you."

"So he stood there thinking a little while," she continued, "and pretty soon he said, 'Well, I've read your application for the job. You said you weren't married. Your name's got a 'duke' on the end of it, but you haven't. So we'll call you Duchess."

After working for the Sun-Times until 1955, Marmaduke said she was lured by the "green pastures of radio and TV." She began on an NBC radio station with a 15-minute insert in the evening news called "Features in the News." Soon after, she had her own morning show, "Coffee with the Duchess."

Marmaduke then went to WLS-TV and had a night show, which she describes as a cousin to Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show." Called "A Date with the Duchess," Marmaduke gathered people she had interviewed while she was a newspaper reporter and held question and answer sessions with them.

Marmaduke said her time as a newspaper reporter helped her a lot with her radio and TV career.

"I was able to use the experience of interviews in a way that other interviewers of radio and TV that hadn't had that newspaper background couldn't do," she said.

After her time on radio and TV, she wrote features for the Chicago Tribune Sunday magazine and worked for a year-and-a-half as vice president of the Consolidated American Life Insurance Co., where she was in charge of all public relations.

It was then that former Gov. Otto Kerner asked Marmaduke to be the public relations director of the Land of Lincoln pavilion at the 1964 New York World's Fair, which she describes as "one of the highlights of the closing of my public career."

The Illinois pavilion honored Abe Lincoln that year and it was the second-heaviest, attended pavilion, beaten only by the Vatican's pavilion.

Marmaduke said one experience at the fair will always remain one of her fondest memories because it was the only time she really got "sat on."

The scene happened when Gina Lollobrigida, Italian film star, visited the pavilion as her first stop at the fair. Marmaduke asked the star why she chose to visit the Lincoln pavilion first.

"Why, because I'm a Lincoln scholar," Lollobrigida replied. "I have read everything ever written about Lincoln in Italian."

The press clapped as Lollobrigida said, "I hope you know now that Lincoln doesn't just belong to you."

Marmaduke also tells of a series of reports she did called "Seven Letters to London."

She said she visited the Lord Mayor of London, where she noticed he had a very soft, luxurious chair to sit in. When she got back to Chicago, she asked former Mayor Daley if she could sit in his chair. She did, and she found it was very hard.

"I opened my story by saying, 'Come on, Chicago. Give Mayor Daley a chair that's as comfortable as the Lord Mayor of London gets.'"

After the Worlds fair Marmaduke, at age 57, said she had to ask herself, "What should I do now?"

"I said to myself, 'You're too old to chase fire engines anymore. You're too old — you'll be trying to tell the bosses how to run it.'"

Marmaduke decided to return to her home ground and do something she had always said she would do — build a log cabin on the ancestral land she had inherited.

Marmaduke lived on the farm, located nine miles south of Pinckneyville, with her mother and aunt until her mother died at age 93 and her aunt was moved to a nursing home.

She then sold the house, "not the farm. The farm land will be donated to the SIU-C College of Communications and Fine Arts upon her death."

She said, "Now I can do things for other people that make me feel good — like my work at SIU."

Marmaduke has been a firm supporter of the journalism, radio and TV programs at SIU, establishing a scholarship in her name. She also helps with the WSIU-TV telethon, and was a volunteer consultant to former SIU-C President Albert Somit before assuming her present duties.

"They all make me feel like I'm needed and that is the thing that keeps me going," she said.

Through her work with the WSIU festival, Marmaduke has become friends with Erv Coppi, promotions director of

Virginia Marmaduke

WSIU Broadcasting Service and former host of "Movie Theater." The two have done the festival together since 1963.

"She's quite a character," he said. "I consider her a dear friend."

"There's a chemistry between us," he said, explaining their work with the festival. "We argue with each other and people love it."

Coppi and Marmaduke also have narrated the Murphysboro Apple Festival since 1983.

Her present employer, Jack Dyer, director of University public relations, also had nothing but compliments to give to Marmaduke.

"I can't say enough about Virginia," he said. "She provides a tremendous amount of expertise and impeccable contacts in Chicago."

"She was at the apex of journalism in her career," he said.

Dyer gave some examples of Marmaduke's popularity, including her receiving a note from John Chancellor.

Another occasion occurred when Dyer accompanied Marmaduke to the Chicago Sun-Times.

"Work came to a standstill so they could come and talk to her," he said.

According to Dyer, Marmaduke is recognized wherever she goes.

"We were walking down Michigan Avenue in Chicago and a man came up and embraced her," Dyer said. "It was Bill Stratton, ex-governor of Illinois."

In addition to her work at SIU-C, Marmaduke is working on her autobiography.

"It's 13 chapters and each is a little story about something or somebody I interviewed," she said.

One chapter of the book, entitled "Mingling with the Biggies," tells about her coverage of politics, such as spending 20 days with Dwight Eisenhower on his campaign train and covering the 1948 Democratic convention when Harry Truman was nominated.

Marmaduke said she is concerned with the way politics are covered by today's journalists, such as the controversy around the rejected nomination of John Tower as defense secretary.

"If I had written back then all we knew, we probably wouldn't even be a democracy anymore," she said. "I think it's a shame and I just don't think that we elect a man who has to be a saint."

Marmaduke used President John F. Kennedy as another example.

"Sure he chased the girls and they chased him, but he had the knowledge, the ability and the know-how to run this country. And what he did on his own time — we weren't paying him for what was not our business," she commented. "It was a business between him, his wife and his God — not the great big general public."

Marmaduke said she has two rules for journalists to follow: Don't drink on the job and don't date a married man.

Marmaduke said that today, journalists think that is the way to go. "It's not the way to get ahead — not in the real world," she said.

"I sure found out that by not sleeping with (her fellow workers), I stayed friends with them forever."

One of Marmaduke's fondest memories was when she was honored on Ralph Edwards' "This is Your Life" in 1963.

"I kept thinking, 'How awful to get scooped in front of the nation,'" she laughed.

These and other memories are stored on "Marmaduke's Brag Wall," located on one wall in her apartment. The wall is covered with pictures of her and the stars she has interviewed, awards she has received and memorabilia from the 1964 New York World's Fair, among others.

Although she was known as "the Duchess" in Chicago, Marmaduke said she is known as "The Beer Bread Lady" in Southern Illinois because she enjoys giving her close friends a loaf of "Newspaperman's Beer Bread" when they've accomplished something.

Marmaduke said she got the recipe from a police reporter while she was working at the Chicago Sun-Times in 1948.

"The reporter said, 'All good newspapermen go to bed with a little beer on their breath, and in the morning they'd love to have a fresh one but they know they can't,'" Marmaduke said.

"So, he said to put some of his beer bread in the toaster, stand over it while it's toasting and take three deep breaths and it'll really get your day started."

In addition to her other accomplishments, Marmaduke has been press adviser for her cousin, state Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin; was the first woman named to the Chicago Board of Health; and was voted the Chicago Press Veteran of the Year in 1979, the only woman ever chosen for the honor.

Locally, Marmaduke has been active with the pressroom of the Du Quoin State Fair, the Easter Seals Telethon and the Chamber of Commerce.

Her most recent venture is helping kids learn how to read newspapers. She is sponsoring 28 kids at the Pinckneyville Junior High School as part of a regional effort with several Southern Illinois communities.

She meets with the class every Friday and has the kids choose their favorite article of the week from the Southern Illinoisian, which is helping to sponsor the program.

What's next in Virginia Marmaduke's life?

The Duchess said there's only one more thing she'd like to see in her life. "I'd like to live long enough to see one of those little green men from Mars," she said.

One thing's for sure. Marmaduke will never get bored. "Let everybody know you're for free, and they all want you," she laughed.

Marmaduke said there is a slogan she uses now to describe her life. "I've got arthritis, so I don't walk well. I've had cataracts, so I don't see well, but I sure talk like hell."

Look out Southern Illinois, the Duchess is still going strong.

Prof finds beauty in hobby; finding and polishing rocks

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Beauty can be found in common places. John H. Hall, a University professor in chemistry, finds beauty in rocks.

Hall is a rock hound. He collects rocks and minerals that reveal their beauty through cutting and polishing. As a member of the Southern Illinois Earth Science Club, he and other rock hounds in Southern Illinois have interests in earth science, anthropology and archaeology.

Hall estimated there are at least 100,000 rock hounds in the United States, who hunt, swap and buy rocks that reveal nature's beauty.

"Every February, in a dinky town, called Quartzite (Ariz.), rock hounds descend on the tiny town with their travel trailers and RVs to bring the population to about 10,000," Hall said.

The Midwest, however, does not lack rocks and minerals with the sought-after beauty.

Hall and other members of the club travel to Bedford, Ind., to collect rocks that, to the unexperienced rock hunter, look like "average" stones. However, these rocks can be cut open and reveal quartz crystals in greens, blues, purples, reds and others throughout the spectrum. The rocks, called geodes, are sometimes completely filled with the quartz and the stone is called agate. The design within is usually in a swirled pattern. One time when he went to Bedford, Ind., to hunt for the geodes and found a tremendous amount of them just off to the side of a road. "Seeing an opportunity to obtain the rocks without much effort, Hall began to pile the rocks into the trunk of his car. By the time he was satisfied with the amount he had collected, he had filled the entire trunk with the geodes. "In about 15 minutes, I had filled the trunk to the top," Hall said. When he began to drive off, he noticed it was difficult to steer the car. "The front wheels of the car weren't touching ground," he said. "I had to take some of the rocks out of the back and put them up front to redistribute the weight."

Hall and other members of the club travel to Bedford, Ind., to collect rocks that look like "average" stones to the unexperienced eye.

Hall's interest in rocks has continued for more than 35 years. But he does more than the average rock hound. He turns some of his prized rocks into jewelry.

To accent his rocks, Hall sets them in silver. About 10 years ago during the summer, his wife, Lila, took a course in silver working at the University, he said. "It was a natural outgrowth of the hobby," she said. "There's only so much you can do with commercial mountings."

On the surface, the silver working process looks simple. With the right equipment and the imagination one can create imaginative jewelry.

There are two ways to work with silver for Hall's purposes. First and more time consuming is fabricating jewelry from silver. Hall takes silver plating and silver wire and heats and reshapes it to the design he wants.

He said his specialty is "channel work." With this he combines silver and different colored stones. The work is similar to that of making a stained-glass window. He creates the base of the jewelry out of silver and cuts the stone to fit in the channel work. It takes precision cutting and polishing for the pieces to fit.

From this process he has created belt buckles, pendants, pins and bolos which are commonly known as western ties. Some of his designs include birds, other animals and flowers.

Hall and other members of the Southern Illinois Earth Science Club will exhibit their works Saturday and Sunday at the Cartersville Junior High.

From 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, members of the club and rock and mineral dealers will display and sell their creations.

Hall said the group has been sponsoring the event for about 22 years. Among some of the items on display will be Indian artifacts, rare rocks and minerals, gemstones and fossils.

Hall gleans his designs from other commercial mountings he has seen and from nature. At the show, Hall will demonstrate his silver-working talents.

"At the show, I will demonstrate how to make a daffodil from silver. The geometric shapes in nature provide very good design. I start out with the shapes and modify them."

The second way Hall creates in silver is casting. Hall will make a design out of wax, then encase it in a material similar to plaster of paris, called investment. The wax design and the investment are put into a cylinder about seven-inches high.

Once the investment dries, the wax can be burnt out of the cylinder, leaving a hollow space occupied by the wax. The resulting mold is put into a large round pan connected to a spring so it can spin. Molten silver, heated to about 1,300 degrees Fahrenheit is poured into a cylinder that acts as a funnel into the mold.

The spring on the pan is released, and with centrifugal force, the silver is forced into the mold.

Once the pan stops spinning, the mold is put into water to dissolve the investment, leaving only the silver design.

To create a silver pin, Hall purchased a dried seahorse from a store that sold seashells and the like. Since the seahorse was organic material, it could be burned out of the investment like the wax designs.

The result is an authentic seahorse set in silver.

Growing up in Minneola, Kan., a small wheat-farming community south of Dodge City, science caught Hall's interest at an early age. While in junior high, he would help set up chemistry experiments for the other students.

In high school he excelled in chemistry and understood the concepts presented to him. "The theories and concepts were totally new and exciting to me," he said with a smile on his face.

Hall has amassed a large collection in his home. He has one room in which the walls are lined with glassed-in cabinets containing his prizes.

"Once in a while the rock hound has to be a 'Leverite,'" she said. "Leave it right there."

Class A, four Class B and three Class D.

Currently, there are 11 Class A, three Class B and one Class D liquor licenses in Carbondale.

A Class A license allows businesses to serve any packaged alcoholic beverage while a Class D license permits a business to serve beer and wine only if the restaurant sells at least 50 percent food and non-alcoholic drink.

The Municipal League also expressed concern for eliminating happy hours and "two for one" specials because it could be viewed as price fixing, according to the report.

The council imposed a ban on the sale of beer in pitchers but repealed the ban in 1987.

"No information is available that indicates that happy hour and similar activities increase underage consumption," McMeen said in the report.

Board member Jim Sinnott said, "I kind of like the free enterprise system myself."

Mark Robinson, board member, said that controlling liquor licenses is "none of our business."

In conclusion, McMeen recommended that no cap be placed on the number of liquor licenses to control underage drinking because "there is no rational connection between the two as the number of licenses on Illinois Avenue has not increased since a previous restriction was repealed in 1985."

Currently, there are 11 Class A, three Class B, and one Class D liquor licenses in Carbondale.

In 1980, the council approved an ordinance prohibiting the issuance of new licenses on South Illinois Avenue to prohibit the expansion of liquor establishments in that area.

The cap on licenses was enacted in response to the annual Halloween celebration.

However, the council repealed the ordinance in 1985 because it was believed that the limitation restricted growth, affected competition and encouraged licenses to evade the liquor laws because they did not fear revocation.

McMeen also recommended that competition be permitted to control the number of establishments in the city.

"Such a restriction will probably result in a challenge as there have already been a sufficient number of public statements regarding 'controlling competition' and 'protecting current businessmen' to bring into question the action of the council," she added.

The board also discussed establishing a waiting period for resubmittal of a denied liquor license application.

Board members agreed to send a recommendation for advice to McMeen concerning a six-month waiting period after a second license denial.

The business requesting an application could only come back before the board with new information pertaining to the license.

the amount of about $185 million.

Ueberroth's group also would receive a 20 percent stake in Eastern's former computer reservation system — Systems One Corp. — which was sold by Eastern to another unit of Texas Air for $100 million, as well authority for one route linking Miami and London.

The group also would retain proceeds from the sale of Eastern's Northeast shuttle to real estate developer Donald Trump for $365 million.

Ueberroth's group would own about 30 percent of the carrier, while employees, including both union and non-union groups, would hold another 30 percent. The company will be known as Eastern Airline Employees and Service Co.

"This agreement brings forth a new concept of airline ownership," Ueberroth and Talbot said. "If approved by Eastern's unions and the bankruptcy court, in excess of 60 percent of the company will be owned by people working for Eastern Airlines."

Lorenzo said Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., Texas Air's investment banker, has advised the Ueberroth group that it will provide $300 million of debt financing to complete the transaction.

Equity financing for the group will be provided by Ardsheil Inc.

Ueberroth revealed that two weeks ago he received a phone call from Michael Milken, the head of Drexel's "junk bond" unit, who is now on leave of absence from the company after his 98-count indictment on securities law violations.

Troupe to perform 'The Fantasticks' at Shryock

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

"The Fantasticks," the world's longest-running musical, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, is coming to Shryock Auditorium at 8 p.m. April 21.

Performed in New York City for 28 consecutive years, seen in nearly 70 countries and produced more than 9,000 times by school, amateur and stock companies, "The Fantasticks" is the American theater's longest-running show.

The musical will be performed by the Nebraska Theater Caravan, the same company that brought "A Christmas Carol" to Shryock in 1966 and 1967.

Tickets are on sale at the Shryock Auditorium Box Office for $10.50 and $12.50. For ticket information, call the box office at 453-3378.

Ironically, this record-breaking production began its life in 1960 as a floundering, off-Broadway musical comedy that wasn't expected to last out its opening week in a playhouse that seated only 135 people.

In 1966, after 10,403 performances at the Sullivan Street Playhouse, "The Fantasticks" again refused to die.

THE THEATER had announced the closing of the production, but the demand for tickets was so great that the show is still playing there. Today, audiences still come to remember this world of musical romance.

"The Fantasticks" is a playful variation of the Romeo and Juliet theme, as young lovers meet secretly despite a bitter feud between their fathers.

Actually, the fathers are friends who have planned the marriage of the boy and girl all along and congratulate themselves on their knowledge of child psychology.

To justify the marriage, the

fathers stage an elaborate abduction of the girl by a bandit, complete with sword-fights and Indians as the boy attempts a rescue.

A realistic portrayal of maturity for both boy and girl results from the abduction.

ALTHOUGH THE story appears simple, the style of the show is unusually sophisticated.

"The Fantasticks" makes use of ancient theater techniques such as the narrator chorus from early Greek drama, the platform stage and stock types from Commedia Del Arte (Italian theater), the mute prop-man from Chinese theater and the Elizabethan use of poetry and linguistic magic.

"The Fantasticks," written by Tom Jones and directed by Carl Beck, is accompanied by classic songs like "Try to Remember," "Soon It's Gonna Rain" and "They Were You" by Harvey Schmidt.

The Nebraska Theater Company brings classical literature to life onstage for young audiences and the communities it visits.

CARAVAN MEMBERS are art ambassadors who spend their time rehearsing, performing, traveling and teaching workshops.

This is the 13th consecutive year the Caravan has engaged on a 32-week tour across the United States and Canada.

In all, the troupe has performed for more than 1 million people in 286 cities.

Academic affairs vice president position filled

Mary L. Higgerson proud of position after two-year wait

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

Experience on almost every level at SIU-C is something Mary Lou Higgerson, recently named associate vice president for academic affairs and research, can boast about.

Higgerson was named to the position on March 31 after serving as acting associate vice president for almost two years.

"I'm very pleased because I view this as a positive evaluation of the job I've been doing," Higgerson said of being named for the position. She said it felt good to have gotten the job that she has been acting in for so long.

SHE WILL not officially hold the title of associate vice president until July 1 after the appointment is ratified by Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit and the Board of Trustees.

"I've had ample time to prove my abilities, and everything is business as usual," she said. "The office still looks the same."

Higgerson has been at SIU-C for 16 years and during all of those years except for one she has held an administrative position.

The position of associate vice president for academic affairs and research is the highest level she has reached. She said one of the reasons she was chosen for the position of acting vice president was because "my learning curve was shorter than some, and there was no need for a Mary Lou Higgerson transition time."

ALTHOUGH THE position has brought her to more people's attention, she said it is easier than some positions she has held.

"The volume of the work and the deadlines are the biggest things," Higgerson said. Getting the course catalogues together, making one word changes in the course descriptions and working on the RAMP planning document are examples of some of the tasks she performs.

Higgerson said she also deals with students who are either having academic, financial or legal problems. The student who overcharged on the VISA or is flunking out are those students, and she said she misses working in a more positive atmosphere with students.

THE ARMY ROTC, the Clinical Center, the Undergraduate Academic Services Offices and Aerospace Studies also report to her office.

As acting associate vice president, Higgerson makes $58,332 a year or $4,861 a month.

Higgerson didn't plan to become an administrator. She said one thing just led to another.

"I always felt a sense of accomplishment on the administrative and management side," she said. "I organize, it's something that comes fairly easy to me and it's something I find enjoyable. I typically end up doing administrative tasks."

OTHER CAMPUS positions Higgerson has held include associate dean, College of Communications and Fine Arts; acting chair, theater department; ACE Fellow in academic administration, office of the president; and associate professor, department of Speech Communication.

Keith Sanders, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, said he first met Higgerson in 1973 when she became a faculty member of the department of Speech Communication.

"She was an outstanding faculty member, and I'm delighted that she is now an associate vice president," Sanders said.

"WHEN I became dean, I asked her to stay on as my associate dean. She's smart, has good judgment and can do a job with only minimal instructions," he added.

He said Higgerson has an excellent sense of humor. He remembered that during the interviews for the associate vice president position, a dean said he thought she was only interviewing for the job to get away from the dean of CCFa.

Her response was that there's no way to escape the dean of CCFa, Sanders said.

DURING COLLEGE she was always changing her major and finally graduated with a degree in speech from Clarion University in Pennsylvania. She also received a master's degree from Central Michigan University and a Ph.D. from the University of Kansas.

Her master's degree is in speech communication with a specialization in communication theory. Her Ph.D. is also in speech communication with a specialization in organizational communication.

Higgerson considered going into law, but at the time it was hard for a woman to get a scholarship for law school, and she was paying her own way.

"I TURNED down a fellowship at Purdue to go to Central Michigan University. That was a good decision," Higgerson said.

Her participation in debate is the reason she gives for the Purdue scholarship and for the interest from CMU.

"What was important to me as an undergraduate was debate. I'm convinced it was debate that opened the door for me," she said.

At CMU, Higgerson said she gained good experience in her major, and she attributes it to the fact that the school was small and the faculty at the time was outstanding.

"THEY WERE much more committed to building the program (communications) there, and, therefore, paid more attention to students than I think Purdue would have. I received intensive one-on-one training," she said.

She said all of her professors at CMU went on to better positions. For example, the chairman of her department became the president of Ball State University.

Speaking about the different directions she went during college and her professional career, Higgerson said, "I have changed. That slows you down in some ways."

"SOME PEOPLE start out in zoology and never leave zoology. Well, I didn't do that, but I think I'm now old enough to where that's been an advantage.

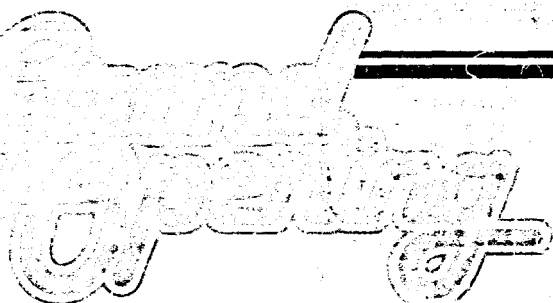

"For a while, it makes you look like you don't have focus, but you reach a point where it becomes an advantage to have been a little more of a generalist."

Marvin Kleinau, chairman of the speech communication department, said he first met Higgerson when she was a debater at Clarion. "She was an outstanding, successful debater," he said.

Higgerson came to the speech communication department in 1973 as an instructor. She brought skills in organizational communication, which hadn't been introduced to the department before, Kleinau said. Organizational communication is the study of how organizations operate.

"SHE WAS one of the best teachers in the department, and the dean (CCFA) swiped her from us," Kleinau said.

"The story of Mary Lou's life is that she becomes so valuable that the next highest rung steals her."

In January 1981, she married Richard Higginson, who heads the legal staff at SIU-C, and they have a 4-year-old daughter named Kendra.

Higginson said she doesn't have any problems juggling her job and family because she has a lot of support.

Instead of day care, they had a private baby sitter from the time Kendra was a few months old until she turned three and was able to go to preschool.

THE FAMILY unit is a concern of Higginson's, although she feels secure in her mother role. "I worry a lot about the family unit, and we try hard to keep a family unit," she said.

"There are a lot of households where two people have to work. But you hear about latchkey kids and we worry about that and are determined to avoid that as best as we can," Higginson said.

Because she and her husband were already separately established in their lives, Higginson said it made the transition to married life easier.

"I was kind of braced for this transition you read about. You have your own space that now you're going to have to share. It was the easiest (transition) I've ever had to make," Higginson said.

HIGGINSON IS able to flow with the changes in her life and has been able to succeed in the numerous positions she has held.

The position of associate vice president probably won't be any different.

Annual World Health Day festival to feature contests, seat belt test

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

This year's World Health Day, celebrated around the world every April 7, comes to John A. Logan College.

The first observance of World Health Day was on July 22, 1948 which marked the signing of the World Health Organization's constitution. In 1949, the date was changed to April 7 because most schools around the world are closed in July.

"Participation by children of every age is important. A positive behavior towards health care can start with the elementary level," Kyaw Naing, director of health education at the Jackson County Health Department, said.

Themes have been practiced yearly since 1950. They try to convey an important topic and touch on health concerns.

World Health Day also gives communities a direct chance to reflect on and address problems in the United States. Serious health problems still arise from dangers such as tobacco use, AIDS, drug and alcohol abuse, poor nutrition, poor exercise habits and environmental pollution.

World Health Day has been celebrated in the Southern Illinois area for four years and the celebration has grown each year, Naing said.

Around 250 elementary children will be participating in today's activities, Naing said.

McDonalds also has donated prizes for the poster contest, he said.

The events occurring today include Vince and Larry-the crash dummies and demonstrations of the seat belt convincer-where individuals can actually experience a test crash.

Smokey the Bear and the U.S. Forrest Service, McGruff the Crime Dog and the Carbondale Police, Woody Owl and Ronald McDonald also will be there.

Other events, lectures and booths include the SIU-C and Jackson County Health Department's Seat Belt Safety Program, organ transplant and donations, State police, the American Red Cross, and international exhibits.

James leads Phillies to 8-3 victory over Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chris James drove in four runs and Steve Ontiveros scattered five hits over eight innings Thursday, leading the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Ontiveros, 1-0, won his National League debut, striking out five and walking one. Steve Bedrosian finished. Paul Klugas, 0-1, worked seven innings while giving up seven runs, three earned, also in his National League debut.

Bob Dernier opened the game with an infield single. After Dickie Thon fanned, Tom Herr singled Dernier to second. Mike Schmidt was safe at first on third baseman Vance Law's error to load the bases.

Around the Major Leagues

James' sacrifice fly advanced all runners. Von Hayes followed with a line single over shortstop Shawn Dunston, scoring Herr and Schmidt to make it 3-0. Hayes went to second on the throw home and scored the fourth unearned run on Ricky Jordan's single to center.

Thursday's game between the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Mets was postponed because of rain. It will be made up as part of an Aug. 10 two-night doubleheader.

Dodgers 4, Reds 1
CINCINNATI (UPI) — Tim

Leary pitched a five-hitter and spotted Rick Mahler's Cincinnati debut Thursday, helping the world championship Los Angeles Dodgers to their first victory of the season, a 4-1 decision over the Reds.

Leary, the UPI Comeback Player of the Year last season, struck out seven and walked two in gaining the victory. The only run he allowed came in the ninth on Jeff Reed's RBI double.

Mahler, making his first appearance in a Cincinnati uniform after pitching the past 10 years for the Atlanta Braves, took the loss, giving up six hits and two runs, one of them earned, over seven innings.

The Dodgers grabbed a 1-0 lead in the third when Mike Scioscia walked, went to second on Leary's sacrifice, moved to third on Alfredo Griffin's infield single and scored on Kirk Gibson's single.

Expos 3, Pirates 2
MONTREAL (UPI) — Tim Wallach capped a three-run, eighth-inning Thursday with an RBI single and Pascual Perez made his first start since reinstatement from substance rehabilitation, lifting the Montreal Expos to a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Perez, who missed all of spring training, rejoined the Expos March 30 after being cleared by the Commissioner's office. Perez was admitted to a rehabilitation clinic in early February for violating his aftercare program for a substance abuse problem.

Brewers 3, Indians 1
CLEVELAND (UPI) — Gary Sheffield hit a solo home run in the eighth inning to break a scoreless tie and Chris Bosio pitched a three-hitter Thursday to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-0 triumph over the Cleveland Indians. Bosio retired the last 16 Indians he faced in going the distance.

eyes, and 'hat, combined with his aggressiveness, work together in his favor,' Stewart said. "Anytime an athlete works his hands and eyes so well he usually makes a good transition defensively."

Dave Wyss adds some offensive punch. The senior from Joliet Catholic High School leads the team with 15 RBIs and five doubles.

The Redbirds' top pitchers have been freshman righthander Cory Tasche, who has a 1.04 ERA in four appearances, junior righthanded transfer from Oakton Community College Ed Stryker (2-1, 2.14 ERA), senior righthander Scott Brown (2-2, 4.18 ERA), senior righthander Paul Wagner (2-3, 5.08 ERA), and sophomore righthander Scott Behrens (2-3, 5.17 ERA), who has fanned 20.

The Salukis are likely to start Sean Bergman (3-2, 2.70 ERA) and Dale Meyer (2-3, 4.08 ERA) on Saturday, and Chris Bend (3-1, 5.29 ERA) and Doug Shields (2-2, 5.71 ERA) on Sunday. Bend leads the team with 26 strikeouts.

Utility player Ed Janke has the highest batting average for the Salukis, hitting .478. Shields, who starts in centerfield when he's not on the mound, has a .414 average.

Shields, a native of Cincinnati, leads the Salukis with 25 runs, 36 hits, 10 doubles, 55 total bases, 19 RBIs, and 11 stolen bases.

The two home runs by Tim Davis Wednesday gave him the team lead with four. The player most likely to be walked has been Dave Wrona, who has been the recipient of 16 base-on-balls this season.

SIU-C announces volleyball schedule

1989 team facing East Coast competition

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The 1989 volleyball regular season fall schedule released Thursday by first-year coach Patti Hagemeyer has a definite East Coast flavor, more so than schedules in the past.

"It's a good stepping stone for us," Hagemeyer said. "The East Coast is a good place for this program to start."

Generally speaking, East Coast volleyball is not considered to be up to par with competition from the West Coast and Midwest — with teams like Penn State being the exception.

The Salukis, who were 15-19 last season, open the season with the 12th edition of the Saluki Invitational against Georgia, Butler and Oklahoma.

They then depart for Washington D.C. and the Georgetown Tournament, featuring the Hoyas, Northeast Louisiana, Providence and Rutgers.

After the annual match against St. Louis, coached by former Saluki Janet Baier-Howe, the Salukis will play Villanova, Eastern Michigan, Bowling Green State and Northern Illinois at a tournament in Ypsilanti, Mich.

This marks the first interruption in four seasons that a Southern Classic will not be held in Davies Gym.

"The East Coast is a good place for this program to start. It's a good stepping stone for us."

—Patti Hagemeyer

"We simply couldn't get teams in it," Hagemeyer said. "But the Classic will be back in either '90 or '91."

Following a match against Arkansas State, the Salukis will make a Windy City recruiting appearance by playing De Paul and Illinois-Chicago. This marks the first return to the Chicago area since the Salukis played the University of Illinois (Champaign) in Glen Ellyn and Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind. in 1987.

The Gateway Conference schedule starts Oct. 13 in a home match against Western Illinois. The Salukis will take part in the four-team Memphis State Tournament between the conclusion of the conference season and the start of the Gateway Tournament.

The schedule has 27 matches, fewer than Hagemeyer would have preferred. "It's not as many matches as I would have liked," she said. "But it leaves plenty of time to practice."

court to be successful. She is intense on the court and means business when she plays."

Olden, a 5-10 middle blocker, played basketball, track and volleyball at Muncie South Side High School. Olden, 13, has a 28-inch vertical leap. The daughter of Robert and Doretha Olden, Dana wants to major in marketing.

"Dana is a very raw athlete who has played volleyball for only the last two years and has not yet come into her own," Hagemeyer said. "But she has all the physical tools and realizes what it will take to come into her own."

Olden was a captain of her volleyball team at South Side. She will now be the teammate of Patty Puelling, a redshirt freshman who played at cross-town rival Muncie Burriss High School.

Likewise, Snook will pair up with sophomore middle blocker Amy Johnson, who played at Harding High School in St. Paul.

Although Hagemeyer still has an additional scholarship at her disposal, she has decided to save it for next year because the Salukis will graduate only one player — junior Nina Brackins.

Women's golf team to face rugged Big Ten competition

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Headed for Bloomington, Ind., this weekend, the women's golf team has adopted a new battle cry. "Bring on the Big Ten."

Even though only six of the Big Ten conference's teams will be at the Indiana Invitational Saturday and Sunday, that is more than enough for coach Diane Daugherty to swallow.

"This is a big tournament," Daugherty said. "There is a lot of tough competition."

Along with the host Hoosiers, the Big Ten will be represented by Illinois, Purdue, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Also in the tournament are Notre Dame, Missouri, Western Kentucky, Northern Illinois and Gateway foes Northern Iowa and Illinois State.

"They are forecasting snow up there," Daugherty said. "The weather has not been cooperating at all. We haven't had a lot of practice. It seems every day we are saying 'Can we practice or not?'"

The Salukis will enter the tournament after a photo-finish qualifying round, cut short to 27 holes because of the weather. Freshman Gina Giaccone edged freshman Debbie Minter in sudden death.

Daugherty said the tournament will be a tough physical test for the Salukis.

"We will play 36 holes Saturday, and that's tough," Daugherty said. "It will be a physical endurance contest. If we can get three rounds somewhere around 320, I'll be happy."

given to the Salukis by the country club, but sees success down the road in the Gateway Conference becoming tougher without a true home.

"It will be harder and harder to pull off Gateway Championships," Daugherty said. "Wichita State is awfully funded, and they have their own course. They are an up and coming program to watch."

Daugherty said she does question the University's commitment to the women's golf program after the Strategic Planning Committee report said golf and tennis would be maintained as long as the funds were available.

"I don't know how much commitment you can read into that," Daugherty said. "I think my own department supports the sport. Without our own golf course, we will always be at the mercy of outside influence."

Trevino surprises golf world to capture early Masters lead

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Lee Trevino, an outspoken critic of the Augusta National Golf Club and the tradition-minded officials who run it, shocked the golfing world as well as himself Thursday with an 5-under-par 67 that made him the oldest player ever to lead the Masters.

With a huge grin on his face, Trevino walked into a room overflowing with journalists, laughed loudly and said:

"I'll bet I'm the last person you expected to see here today. I didn't expect it, either."

Trevino, 49 and the winner of six major championships, is making his 18th and what was expected to be his last trip to the Masters.

last year, after missing the cut, he said he would "get down on my knees and pray they don't invite me back."

When the invitation came, however, he immediately accepted. Nevertheless, because this is the last year of a five-year exemption he received for capturing the PGA Championship in 1984, it seemed likely this would be his final appearance at the tournament he dislikes so much.

"If someone had wanted to bet me that I wouldn't break 76 today, I wouldn't have taken a quarter of it," Trevino said.

"And I'm a betting man. I may shoot 80-80-80 (during the final three rounds), but this shows me there is still a spark there. I can still start a fire if I find the right kind of wood."

Trevino claimed a one-shot lead over 1987 British Open champion Nick Faldo, who eagled the 13th en route to his 4-under 68. Two shots back at 2-under 70 came Don Pooley and Andy Bean while Ben Crenshaw, Seve Ballesteros and Tom Purtzer posted 1-under 71s.

That likelihood changed dramatically, however, when Trevino played a bogey-free round in high winds — turning in a score made all the more impressive by the fact that he played only nine holes of a practice round this week and did not make a single trip to the putting green.

It was the lowest score he has shot in 63 competitive rounds at the Masters.

Among those at even-par 72 were Tom Watson, Larry Mize, Fred Couples, Hal Sutton, Scott Simpson and leading money winner Tom Kite — who bogeyed three straight holes beginning at the 13th.

Men's track team at SEMO for dose of good opponents

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Men's track coach Bill Cornell is looking for a good challenge from a field of over 15 teams at the SEMOtion Relays this weekend.

"The competition will be intense this weekend," Cornell said. "When you win a relay at a competitive meet like this one, it's an accomplishment. I think we have a few relay teams that can challenge for top spots."

The Salukis are in good shape after last weekend's win over Georgia Tech and Georgia, but that doesn't mean they are slacking off in practice.

"The guys are working hard in practice," Cornell said. "Practice this week has been terrific. I think the guys are realizing what it takes to win the conference. They've shown me that they want it this past week."

As the conference championships near, the Saluki are contending in several individual events with a number of Salukis leading the Missouri Valley in their respective events.

Pole vaulter Mike Michels, who suffered a leg injury last weekend, leads the conference with a vault of 16 feet 6 inches.

Triple jumper Leonard Vance, indoor MVC champion, continues to outjump the conference with a season-high of 50-9½. Also the 4 x 400 has the fastest time this season, 3 minutes 9.74 seconds.

The Salukis are making progress towards a conference championship in May, but Cornell said that there is a long road to victory.

"We have to make sure we run hard as a team each week. We are really starting to gel, we have to keep moving forward."

Women to defend two titles at tough SEMOtion relays

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The women's track squad will travel Cape Girardeau, Mo., this weekend to compete in the SEMOtion relays.

The Salukis come off last week's Western Illinois Relays in which they captured eight first-place finishes. This weekend SIU-C will have to contend with Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas State, Murray State and conference foes Western Illinois and Indiana State.

"It's a much stronger field than last year's," coach Don DeNoon said. "It should be very competitive. Missouri is very strong in both the running and jumping events. Kansas is always very competitive, and so are Western and Indiana State."

The women Salukis will be defending a number of titles from last year's SEMOtion relays — the distance medley and the 4 x 800 relay.

The distance medley team of Jane Schumacher, Dora Kyriacou, Rosanne Vincent, and Lisa Judiscak ran to victory in the event in a time of 11 minutes 53.48 minutes.

The 4 x 800 relay squad of Danielle Sciano, Michelle Sciano, Judiscak, and Vincent also pulled out a victory, with a time of 8:58.70.

Another returning winner is Christiana Philippou. Philippou won the triple jump last year in a distance of 39 feet 10¼ inches. She will also contend for the long jump title.

The Salukis will again be without the services of distance runner Lisa Judiscak and sprinter Angie Nunn. Judiscak is out with a back injury that has hampered her for most of this year. Nunn, who initially was diagnosed as having a hamstring pull, has a tear of her hamstring. Dora Kyriacou, who has missed the past two meets with a leg injury will again be out of action.

League action for women's tennis

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The women's tennis team will travel to Macomb this weekend to do battle with conference foes Illinois State, Indiana State, and host Western Illinois.

Coach Judy Auld said Illinois State will be the toughest challenge, but any of the three teams could be competitive.

"Illinois State is good, we beat them 5-1 last fall but the match was a lot closer than the score indicates."

score indicates," Auld said. "Indiana State has all its players returning so they have good experience. Western's No. 1 singles player is out, and she was all-conference a couple times. That weakens them a little."

Missing from the Saluki lineup for the weekend will be Julie Burgess, because of a graduate entrance exam that she must take Saturday.

From now until the conference championships April 27-29, the Salukis will face only conference opponents. Auld says that the team must perform well for each match.

when there is a noncontact situation."

Young said he felt the Salukis were deep in talent and a strength is the team's togetherness.

"They are playing together as a group of men on a mission," Young said. "When you have as much competition as we do you have kids pushing each other. We are strong from top to bottom, and I think that is evident by the number of kids succeeding."

The Salukis, who open their 1989 schedule at Nevada-Reno in September before playing five home games in McArdrew, have 52 of 64 lettermen returning. SIU-C will play four of its six Gateway Conference games at home, including Western Illinois, Illinois State, Eastern Illinois and Southwest Missouri State.

The Salukis nonconference competition besides Nevada-Reno includes Murray State, Arkansas State and Northern Illinois.

LeFevre one win short of 400th in long career

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

A coaching milestone awaits men's tennis coach Dick LeFevre this weekend if his team can defeat either Western Kentucky or host Louisville.

LeFevre's next victory will give him 400 career wins and will make him only the sixth active Division I coach to obtain this total. But according to LeFevre, the number of wins isn't that important.

"I feel old when I think of getting 400 wins," LeFevre said. "It is meaningless. It's the winning of each of those matches that counts, the total is just a number."

LeFevre, SIU-C men's tennis coach for 34 seasons, will count on his 3-17 team to get past Saturday's opponents.

"Louisville and Western Kentucky are kind of the same," LeFevre said. "They both usually have tough people at the one and two singles spots."

To battle the powerful first and second singles of Louisville and Western Kentucky, the Salukis will need strong performances from alternating No. 1 and No. 2 singles Jairo Aidana and Joe Demeterco. Aidana sports a 6-14 record this season.

Volleyball coach announces signing of 2 recruits

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Volleyball coach Patti Hagemeyer went back to her old stomping grounds in the North Star State and then snared a Hoosier along the Olden of Muncie, Ind., signed national letters of intent last Friday — one day before the April deadline.

Hagemeyer, who promised when she was hired as volleyball coach Feb. 11 to pursue a recruiting policy that sought true athletes over skill players, released the recruits' names Thursday.

"I feel very fortunate to (sign athletes) a month and a half after the signing date," said Hagemeyer, who came aboard three days into the national signing period. "I didn't expect to do that until next year."

Hagemeyer, who grew up in St. Paul and played volleyball for the University of Minnesota, is actually completing her second recruiting effort of the year. As an assistant at Notre Dame, she was instrumental in securing three oral commitments to Notre Dame before being named as the Salukis' coach.

With the Salukis, Hagemeyer had to essentially start from scratch. A delay in the hiring process resulted in the loss of all the recruits pledged to former coach

Debbie Hunter, who left SIU-C Jan. 1 to accept a position with the U.S. Volleyball Association.

The Salukis graduated four players — two setters, an outside hitter and a middle blocker — from last season's team, which went 15-19.

"I think we satisfied two very important needs of the program," Hagemeyer said.

Snook, a 5-9 middle blocker, played softball, track and volleyball at Wayzata High School, which is in the Minneapolis suburbs. Snook, 18, has a 24-inch vertical leap. The daughter of Steve and Barb Snook, Stacy plans to major in commercial graphics.

"What impressed me was Stacy's work ethic," said Hagemeyer, who had met Snook at the Midwest Volleyball Instructor's Camp last season in St. Paul and recently saw her play in a junior tournament in Las Vegas.

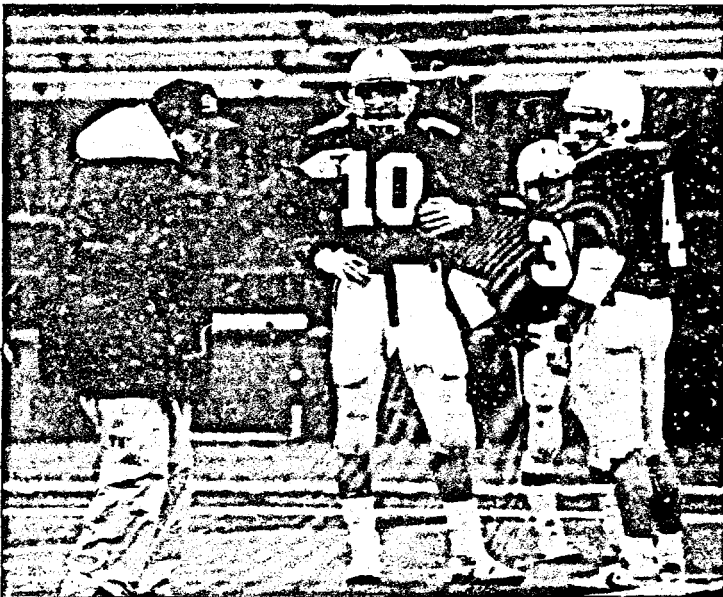

"Our team needs another player that enjoys working hard," Hagemeyer said. "Stacy is someone willing to put in the effort on and off the

New head football coach Bob Smith gives instructions to quarterback Fred Gibson (10) during football practice Thursday afternoon. The Salukis will scrimmage Saturday Morning at 9:30.

New football coach pleased with progress team making

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

The football team will tackle McAndrew Stadium at 9:30 Saturday morning for their second scrimmage of the spring season.

Head coach Bob Smith said he came out of the first scrimmage pleased with the result, and excited about the start of the fall season.

"I'm not sure what it is yet, but there's something about this group of kids I see," Smith said. "I was very favorably impressed with what I saw in our first major scrimmage. We're certainly not in a position yet where we want to talk much about individual standouts, but Fred Gibson turned in a fine job for us at quarterback."

Gibson, who will be a junior in the fall, hit on 10 of 13 passes for 91 yards as part of the Salukis' new pro-set offense.

Overall, the Salukis gained 463 yards in 90 plays with almost half of the yardage a result of completing 22 of 39 passes.

Defensive assistant Ralph

Young said the Salukis will try to carry the success of the first scrimmage through Saturday.

"It will be an upbeat tempo," Young said. "This is the third week of practice, and things are getting very competitive."

Although the chance for injury is there, Young said the coaches and players don't let it deter from the work at hand.

"From a coach or player standpoint, injuries are a part of a game," Young said. "A lot occur on walk-throughs

Golf coach wants new Saluki home

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Politically, Diane Daugherty is a new kid on the block. Professionally, Daugherty can hold her own.

Together, the Saluki women's golf team might end up with a new home.

"The park district is building a golf course," said Daugherty, elected Tuesday as a write-in candidate to the Carbondale Park District. "If at all possible, I would like SIU to be able to play there."

The third-year coach said the district plans to break ground in August, with tentative plans of completion by Spring of 1991.

Daugherty's concern over finding a home for the Salukis is because of restrictions put on the team at their current home, the Jackson County Country Club.

The Salukis are not allowed to use the driving range at the country club, and are not allowed to use the course on weekends.

"When we can't play and can't practice and have to take two days off, that hurts us," Daugherty said. "You can bet other teams don't take two days off. The fact that we don't have a University golf course hurts us."

Daugherty said she appreciated the arrangements

Rain hampers baseball team

Weather playing havoc with Itchy

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

This season, the green tarp that protects the infield at Abe Martin is getting to be as much of a fixture of Saluki baseball as 26-year coach Itchy Jones.

The Salukis had their third game of the season rained out Thursday, as Southeast Missouri made the bus trip from Cape Girardeau to Carbondale for nothing.

With a continuation of rain in the forecast, team members are hoping they will see less of the tarp and more of their coach, who needs just two victories to reach the career 706-win plateau.

The Salukis, who are 12-11 and riding a three-game win streak, are scheduled to open the Missouri Valley Conference season Saturday with a noon doubleheader against Illinois State, which is 11-11. They will also play the Redbirds in a twin-bill Sunday.

"Through the years we've always had a good series against ISU," said Jones, who is not paying much heed to the attention on his approaching coaching milestone.

Last season, the Salukis beat the Redbirds 1-0 and 9-5, and lost 5-2 and 10-8 to give SIU-C a 41-34 series advantage.

However, a changing of the guard has taken place in Normal. Most notable is the retirement of long-standing coach Duffy Bass, who chalked up 713 victories in 25 seasons.

Also gone are two top pitchers who entered the pro ranks: Dan Freed, now with the Montreal Expos and Bruce Prybylinski, with the New York Yankees.

That left first-year coach Jeff Stewart, formerly an Saluki baseball coach Itchy Jones nears the milestone 700th career coaching victory. This is Jones' 22nd season. His current record is 698-224-5 leaving him two games shy. Games this week:

assistant at Kansas State, with some big holes to fill. Some holes are so big that a preseason poll of conference coaches picked the Redbirds, who were 21-25-2 in 1988, to finish last in the Missouri Valley.

"We're a young team not blessed with a lot of experience, so our older kids will have to provide leadership," Stewart said.

Coming through so far has been Tony Simmonds, a sophomore shortstop leading the team with a .352 average. Besides Simmonds' bat, his glove has proved steady, fielding the last 41 chances without an error.

"He's got good hands and

Men's golf team in third place after first day of SIU-E Invite

The men's golf team is in third place after the first day of the 11-team SIU-Edwardsville Invitational at the Belk Park & Tamarack Country Club.

The host Cougars' B-team and Tennessee-Martin are tied for the top spot with 303 while the Salukis are three strokes back at 306.

The SIU-E A-team is in fourth place at 310 and Lewis College rounds out the top five at 316.

Junior Mike Cowen and freshman Sean Leckrone are the top Saluki individuals; tied with two other golfers for third at 75.
