Budget timeout called in Senate

Newsday

WASHINGTON—Members of the Senate couldn't settle their partisan feud over President Clinton's $16.3 billion economic stimulus package, so, like kids in a playground, each side scooped up its marbles late Monday night and headed home for what's left of a two-week recess.

Although congressional and administration officials expect that a slimmed-down version of the spending bill will be passed after the recess—April 20 at the earliest—Democrats and Republicans are still far from agreement on its elements.

Clinton, after insisting for weeks that his package should be passed quickly and without change, conceded Tuesday that he would now work on a proposal to "address some of the legitimate expressed objections." Congressional sources said that could include cutting at least $2 billion. Republicans, however, have pushed to cut the plan by four times that amount and, in addition, force offsetting spending cuts in other areas.

Before adjourning Monday, three days later than scheduled, the Senate did agree by voice vote to increase the ceiling on the national debt from $4.1 trillion to $4.37 trillion, to keep the government operating until Sept. 30.

Tuesday, despite talk about trying to negotiate, Clinton was far from declaring defeat. Indeed, he renewed his blast against Republicans for derailing a program he believes most people support.

August construction date slated for hotel on campus

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

Plans to build a 160-room luxury Clarion Hotel next to the Student Center are progressing toward an August construction date.

Bill Hurst, president of Choice Hotels, Inc. and developer of the hotel project, said several months of legal and other matters need to be completed before construction begins.

"A month or two of legal housekeeping and purely mechanical, bureaucratic matters have to be taken care of," Hurst said.

James Tweedy, vice president of administration, said the land lease and the enterprise zone are the two most crucial matters that need to be settled.

The enterprise zone is a designated area in Carbondale that makes a wide range of local and state financial incentives available to businesses that expand or locate in the zone.

Some of the financial incentives include no real estate taxes for new construction, a local and state sales tax deduction and no permit fees.

Tweedy said the site for the hotel is not included in the enterprise zone, because the zone ends at Grand and Illinois.

City officials are working with University officials and the developers to expand the

Presidents explore plans to put end to terrorism acts in Iran

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON—Presidents Clinton and Hosni Mubarak of Egypt explored ways Tuesday of bringing new pressure against Iran to curb its sponsorship of terrorism and efforts to disrupt the Middle East peace process.

The United States and Egypt have raised growing alarm in recent weeks about Iranian moves to destabilize the region and increase its arsenal of weapons of mass destruction.

President Mubarak has singled out Iran as the chief outside agitator of a growing wave of Islamic extremist violence in Egypt that has triggered a harsh crackdown by his government.

Clinton disclosed he had ordered a review of whether U.S. officials reacted with enough urgency to previous Egyptian warnings about an Islamic extremist network in the United States.

Mubarak, in an interview with the New York Times on Sunday, said the World Trade Center bombing could have been prevented had the U.S. heeded Egypt's warnings.

Tuesday, however, he stressed that Egypt had no specific foreknowledge of the actual bombing.

At a news conference midway through Mubarak's first official visit to the Clinton White House, the U.S. president said both men were "determined to counter Iran's involvement in terrorism and its active opposition to the Middle East peace process."

"We reviewed the common danger presented by religious extremism which promotes an intolerant agenda through violent means.

We discussed ways of strengthening our cooperation in countering this and other forms of terrorism."

Saluki second baseman Jeff Cwynar takes a cut at a pitch during SIUC's game with Kentucky Tuesday at Abe Martin

Field. Cwynar walked on the at-bat and came around to score, but the Wildcats downed the Salukis 7-5.

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The SIUC baseball team was its own worst enemy Tuesday, as the Salukis committed crucial errors in a 7-5 loss to Kentucky.

After Kentucky scored one run in the second, the Salukis came alive in the fourth. Dave Taylor and Jeff Cwynar walked to lead off the inning, and advanced to second and third on a passed ball.

Consecutive singles by Chris Sauritch and Dan Esplin scored Taylor and Cwynar to give the Salukis a 2-1 lead. Sauritch eventually scored from third on a fielder's choice to make it 3-1.

The Wildcats chalked up another run in the fifth on a solo home run by Jeff Michael, his fourth of the season, to make it 3-2.

SIUC held a 3-2 edge going into the eighth, but then the wheels fell off.

Consecutive singles by UK put men at first and third to set up the first run. Wildcat Brad Hindermand tried to steal second, and Saluki catcher Dave Bernhard fired the

Salukis take pair from Southeast Missouri State

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Editor

The SIUC softball team made it a clean sweep Tuesday, taking a pair of games from Southeast Missouri State at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

"We are pleased with the two victories," SIUC head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "They are tough to beat here. We did a nice job of coming back."

SIUC and SEMO went extra frames in the first game, before the Salukis broke the Otahkians' nine-game winning streak with a 4-3 win.

SIUC scored the deciding run in the top of the ninth inning. Karrie Irvin led off with a double, and was sacrificed to second by Christine Knotts. Mandy Miller plated the game-winning run with a double.

Irvin collected four of SIUC's

10 hits, including a double and a triple. Miller went 2-for-4 with two doubles.

Marlo Pecoraro was 1-for-4 on the day, with her only hit coming on an inside-the-park home run. The round-tripper plated a pair of runs.

Angie Mick went the distance for the Salukis, striking out six and allowing nine hits on her way to her seventh win against three losses.

A home run off the bat of Colleen Holloway got things started for the Salukis in the second game, a 7-5 SIUC win.

Holloway's four-bagger gave the senior center-fielder 13 career home runs, her eighth career school record. Holloway's big fly pushed her past former Saluki Shelly Gibbs, who connected for 12 homers between 1987 and 1990.

Holloway led the hitting parade for SIUC, going 2-for-3 with a triple, home run and three RBI. Jami Koss and Laurie Wilson also went 2-for-3 on the day.

The second game was suspended in the sixth inning because of darkness.

Kristie Spielman picked up the win for the Salukis. Spielman struck out two on her way to her fourth win against no losses. Tania Meier relieved Spielman to record her first save of the season.

Golf team 12th at Shocker Classic

The SIUC men's golf team finished 12th out of 14 teams at the Diet Pepsi Shocker Classic in Wichita, Kan.

The Salukis had been in 11th after Monday's action, before finishing in 12th with a score of 307-306-324-937.

Oral Roberts won the classic with a two-day total of 296-296-303-895.

Individually, Clyde Berning was the top scorer for SIUC with a 75-73-80-228. Berning finished in a six-way tie for 15th place.

Sam Scheibal scored a 71-79-83-223, good for a four-way tie for 35th place.

Chris Pytell was 41st with a score of 82-75-78-235.

Quinn McClure shot a 80-84-83-247 to finish 66th, while Jason Stilley finished 68th with a score of 81-79-91-251.

Brown to Webber: Keep it in perspective, deal with it

The Washington Post

NEW ORLEANS—Nobody knows what Chris Webber's going through more than Fred Brown. Nobody.

Nobody in the whole wide world knows better about the well-wishers and mean spirits, about seeing his number replayed again and again and again, about the forced smiles and new patience born from necessity, about the time and energy consumed over a lifetime dealing with an infamous athletic play. Nobody knows any better the morning after about what Webber faces at the end of this, his sophomore year in college.

In 1987, with five seconds left and his Georgetown Hoyas trailing North Carolina by a point in the NCAA Championship game, Fred Brown mistakenly threw a pass to James Worthy instead of teammate Eric Floyd in Carolina's 63-62 victory.

Monday night, 11 years later, Brown watched on television as Webber, at the same end of the same Superdome court against the same North Carolina Tar Heels, called a timeout his Michigan team didn't have with 11 seconds left in the NCAA Championship game, which North Carolina won 77-71.

A lot of people felt compassion for Webber, but none felt for him like Brown. So Fred Brown sat down at work Tuesday morning and wrote Chris Webber a letter.

"I told him to 'Keep your head high, be aware of what you've done and what you'll have to do to deal with it, but most of all keep it in perspective,'" Brown said. "He has a heck of a career ahead of him. People on the street will continuously come up. They'll want to touch and feel you and try to reach out to you. Then, there are the jerks that will try to rub it in. I know Chris feels bad now and all this is rolling over in his mind. But he's going to have to deal with it. He's going to have to separate the accomplishments from the setbacks and look at his accomplishments. I don't know his inner strength."

It took Fred Brown seven months before he could even watch the replay, until October of 1982. Then he couldn't take his eyes off it. He tried to figure out if he'd come down with nerves, if any of the theories made any sense.

Saluki volleyball team inks four recruits for fall season

By Karyn Vivaric
Sports Writer

After success in recruiting last season brought the SIUC volleyball team two immediate freshman starters to the team, the spikers have recruited four players this season that may have the same kind of impact on this year's team.

After losing middle hitters Dana Olden and Stacy Snook to graduation this season, the Salukis did not waste any time in filling the void by recruiting three middle hitters and an outside hitter.

Middle blockers Kristy Alles, Kelly Parke, Jodi Revoir and outside hitter Rebekah Chappell are the newcomers with high expectations, and could walk into a starting position immediately, Saluki head coach Sonya Locke said.

"We knew that we were going to lose three good players to graduation, and we had to recruit individuals that could put the ball down and block," Locke said. "Each has good blocking control and attack skills, along with valuable experience."

Alles hails from Greeley, Colo., and is a two-sport standout in volleyball and softball at Platte Valley High School.

The team's leader with 83 blocks and 163 kills, Alles went on to be named all-conference, while also being selected to the Colorado High School

Association and Norco Junior Olympic teams.

Locke said Alles will have a little work to do, but she is a hard worker with a big heart.

"Kristy has long limbs and speed, but she will need to work on her strength while she is here," Locke said. "She is a consistent player who has competed against top volleyball clubs across the country."

Alles, who plans to major in psychology, opted to play for SIUC after being recruited by Montana, New York, Pennsylvania, Texas A&M and Wichita State.

A transfer student from Marquette University, Parke could be a force in the middle for SIUC.

Parke Helped Marquette to a third-place finish (14-14) in the Great Midwest Conference last season. Parke put up impressive numbers in her one-year stint with 22 kills and digs, three service aces, five block solos and 10 block assists.

While at Center Point-Urban's High School, Parke was all-conference her junior and senior years and earned All-state honors twice.

"Kelly moves quick, jumps well, and is a good blocker that will provide immediate help at the net with her experience," she said. "She is a great athlete period."

HANOI CALLED ON TO FIND MISSING SOLDIERS — A powerful fact-finding mission in Hanoi to assess U.S.-Vietnamese ties Tuesday called on Hanoi to do more to resolve the sensitive issue of American soldiers listed as missing in action (MIA) during the Vietnam War. In what is likely to prove bad news for a swift lifting of the economic embargo against Vietnam, members of the 12-person team suggested that the Vietnamese still could do more to resolve the MIA issue.

PASSENGER DIES IN SEVERE AIR TURBULENCE — Severe air turbulence over the Bering Sea caused the death of one person and injured 30 aboard a Chinese airliner which made an emergency landing Tuesday at a top secret Air Force base in Alaska. ACCIDENTS, VIOLENCE KILL 3.5 MILLION YEARLY — Every year, 3.5 million people are killed by accidents or violence, according to World Health Organization (WHO) estimates. Another 3.5 million are probably maimed for life while the number injured is thought to be in the region of ten times this figure. On World Health Day, today, the WHO has chosen the theme, "Handle life with care: Prevent violence and negligence."

L.A. MAYOR URGES CALM REACTION TO TRIAL — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley urged a city on the edge Tuesday to calm itself, to lessen its own hysteria, to avoid self-fulfilling prophecies, "based solely on speculation." In an address carried live on a variety of local television stations, the city's chief executive said he had called on Angelenos a year ago not to respond violently to the verdicts in the Rodney King beating trial.

CATHOLICS EXPECT VIRGIN MARY TO APPEAR — The local Catholic diocese has asked the faithful to stay away. But throngs expected to come anyway, for a predicted appearance by the Virgin Mary this Sunday. With crowd estimates ranging from a few hundred to as many as 40,000, traffic congestion is nearly certain and parking will be a nightmare, said Carlton County (Minn.) Sheriff David Seboe. "There have been no arrangements made for anything," Seboe said.

MINOR CONVICTED OF DRUNKEN STEERING — A California appellate court ruled Monday that the person who is steering a car, even though someone else is working the brake and gas pedals, can be convicted of drunken driving. The decision stemmed from a case involving a minor, identified only as Queen Elizabeth T., from Alfonso Rivas. But Rivas did not know where she lived, so the girl agreed to steer the car while Rivas operated the accelerator and brakes.

ROCKER SETTLES LIBEL SUIT AGAINST TABLOID — Former KISS drummer Peter Criss settled his libel lawsuit Tuesday against the Star tabloid, which ran a story portraying him as a homeless alcoholic. Terms of the settlement, reached just hours before the trial began, were not disclosed. But Criss's attorney, Antony Stuart, said the drummer was happy with the settlement. Criss was the "catman" in the 1970s "glam" band known for the black and white makeup its members wore on stage.

CHILD CHOSEN TO MAKE LEGO BUILDINGS — Karen Thomsen needed a consultant to construct a series of buildings to illustrate the Homedco's, a home health-care company, annual report theme of "Building for Tomorrow." The buildings were to be erected from Legos. Thomsen, unable to get the name of master Lego builder from the Danish company, called on last year's Lego building champion and resident of nearby Irvine, 5-year-old Thomas Michon.

African-American potential robbed by gangs—pastor

By Thomas Gibson
Minorities Writer

Young African-American teen-agers who join gangs have lost their purpose and in turn have lost their potential—all because of misinformation, a local youth leader said.

The Rev. James Morgan of Monument of Hope Church is working to show African-American youths they can be more than athletes and dancers.

He said gangs have been spreading in the area for the past year or more, and they are formed because many times young people are alienated from their families or come from single parent households.

"Another reason for gangs is for security, and there are not a abundance of jobs in this area for the youth," he said.

Graffiti painted on walls of some schools in the area are an indication that the gangs have influence, he said.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said it is perceived that a gang problem is emerging in the area and has been troubling officials about it but not many have been listening. Police have developed a task force to curb potential gang activity, he said. The officers on the task force have been given training on dealing with the gang situation.

Morgan said one of the solutions will have to be economic empowerment. The young people have nothing to look forward to as far as lucrative careers are concerned.

They go off to college from their respected communities and have nothing to come back to.

He said drug trafficking in Carbondale has been increasing, but the majority of the crimes committed by the youth are survival crimes caused by social neglect of an entire generation. The solution is re-education of history for African Americans.

"Black-on-black crime has been brought on by having been told they have not contributed to society," he said.

If the gang problem cannot be solved before it gets worse, the community will have to be prepared to deal with it, Morgan said.

College students main targets for sexual diseases

By Jonathan Senft
Health Writer

Sexually transmitted diseases are increasing, a recent study shows, especially for people under 25.

According to a report released last week by the Guttmacher Institute, a research institution in New York, 56 million people have an STD and 12 million infections occur each year.

On the SIUC campus, at any given time, one in four students are infected with a sexually transmitted disease, officials at the SIUC Wellness Center said. This is higher than the national average of one in five reported in the Guttmacher study.

The most common STDs on campus are chlamydia, gonorrhea (the clap), herpes, and genital warts. AIDS usually is considered in a different class because it is terminal.

Most do not think these diseases will affect them. However according to the Wellness Center officials, all of the above STDs are asymptomatic, meaning they can take up to eight years to show the signs.

Ten percent of all visits to the SIUC Health Service are STD-related.

Liz Niemann, graduate assistant in sexuality education, said signs to watch for with chlamydia are itching and burning in the genital area in both men and women.

"Signs are also discharge from the genitals and painful urination," she said. "Chlamydia needs to be tested with a culture for accuracy, rather than a blood test."

Signs of gonorrhea can be a green- or yellow-colored discharge from the genital area and a sore throat and swollen glands.

Herpes symptoms include sores on the genital area, as well as aching muscles, fever and flu-like signs.

Genital warts' most prevalent sign is large and small bumps on the genital area, making the arrangement cauliflower-like, Niemann said.

Students who feel they may have the physical symptoms can be treated at the health service, Rob Sepich of the Wellness Center said.

The Wellness Center has counseling programs that can help out how to avoid the STDs. The center has two weekly workshops titled "Birth Control Workshops," which also educate students on the dangers and solutions of STDs, Sepich said.

Niemann said the best way to avoid running into the STD problem is absolute abstinence. However, if students are sexually active, she suggests using condoms, spermicides and practicing monogamy.

Timber loss steals taxpayer's money

THE FOREST SERVICE EARNED $98,002 last year from timber sales in the Shawnee National Forest but spent $878,286, leaving a loss of nearly $800,000 that comes from taxpayer's money.

Those justifying the loss explain that the National Forest Service was established for many beneficial reasons other than economic and that we should not expect timber to be profitable.

Meanwhile, timber sales on a national level have been just the opposite, with revenues for 1992 exceeding costs by $225 million.

There is no rationale for the continued loss of money and taxpayers should not have to carry the brunt of that loss as timber sales from the Shawnee National Forest are being used to subsidize the timber industry.

THIS IS NOT A NEW PHENOMENA. In 1991, the Shawnee National Forest had a loss of $931,396.

These losses occurred because most of the sales were of pine, which has a relatively low market value, as opposed to hardwood, the most profitable type of timber.

Revenue only takes actual income into account, but there are many benefits to be derived not of a dollar value, said Dwight McCurdy, chair and professor of the Forestry Department.

Benefits such as fishing and hunting, wildlife and fish habitats and economic development, community stability, and the scenic value are below cost also. Timber, he said, should not be expected to make a profit.

BUT TIMBER SALES ARE MAKING a profit nationwide because of more forest abundance.

Below-cost timber industries, however, have no congressional mandate, according to Joe Glisson, public education coordinator for the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists.

The Shawnee National Forest is trying to hide below-costs timber sales under the guise of ecological restoration and wildlife habitation, Glisson said.

"Their timber sales come from 100 percent federal taxpayer's money," Glisson said. "In this age of fiscal crisis, it is ludicrous to have below-cost timber sales."

THERE ARE WAYS OF USING forests that are both environmentally and economically conscious that do not involve taking the taxpayer's money.

President Bill Clinton has a plan to save $274 million from 1994 to 1997 by phasing out below-cost timber sales.

In this scenario, the Shawnee National Forest would have to raise the timber prices to account for the $800,000.

According to environmentalists, Clinton's plan would encourage private industry because as timber sales go up, farmers would be able to grow forests and sell timber for a profit.

Thus, Clinton's plan to eliminate below-cost timber is a step in the right direction as it takes the burden off of taxpayers and gives private industry an incentive to grow their own forests.

NOT ONLY IS INDISCRIMINATE CUTTING of timber on public land a poor environmental move which destroys wildlife and habitat, but it obviously is not a smart economic move.

Below-cost timber sales should be eliminated in a move to relieve the taxpayer and protect the environment.

Letters to the Editor

Sexuality without doubt a person's own decision

The potential for ambiguous sexuality and love exists in all of us, regardless of aberration. Even the most conservative moral-imbued psychologists today will admit to that.

In each of us, for the most part, there are masculine and feminine gender qualities which are learned from lifetime interaction with any person possessing these traits. Some advocates of gender-different relationships ignore the fact that such coupling can occur between members of the same sex, although gender difference does not necessarily need to exist for compatibility. There are those who can block the same-sex potential as easily as they learned to do with many other outlawed cultural deviancies, while others continue struggling to squelch their innate desires.

The issue of such separation isn't one of homosexual or heterosexual subclasses. Disregard the prefixes, and it comes down to simple sexuality, or pure attraction. If a person's sexuality is expressed by love, affection, desire, and caring, then directing one's own sexuality towards one class exclusively is superficial. The only mental illness I see occurring in homosexuals is the depression and frustration associated with irrational self-shame, guilt and fear imposed by public superstition, myth and ignorance.

Sexuality is without a doubt a personal decision and no one else's. True desire cannot be manipulated by social norms or politics. The two separate classes of homosexual and heterosexual are pejorative enemies, socially grouped for members' security: a security that emanates from learned fear. Proposed heterosexuals appear so secure in the decision they made, yet we consistently hear or read about homophobia. The Civil Rights Movement should be an example to us all that these two groups can live together without fear, without labels and perhaps even some day with understanding. Is the difference really that compelling or hardly there at all?
 — Christian Hott, junior, art and design

Paper should be responsible in printing controversial letters

In response to the letter printed in the March 31st edition, written by Marc Perry and titled "Homosexuality: A Mental Illness," it not only can be said that Mr. Perry needs to substantiate his claims with facts, but also that the editorial staff should start taking some responsibility with what they allow to be printed.

First, and foremost, homosexuality is not considered a mental illness by the American Psychological Association and has not for quite some time. Nowhere can it be found in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual currently being used for categorization of all mental illnesses. Perhaps it still is considered an illness by those who do not know enough about homosexuality or of the right of an individual to freely love their life as they choose. This right, however, does not include writing or publishing inciting articles.

Perhaps Mr. Perry can be excused from his statements on the basis of ignorance but this does not reduce the responsibility the editorial staff must take for printing such statements.

It is clear from the history of printing similar articles that the staff is only interested in controversy without regard for the consequences which may incur. Also, justifying the publication of such material under the guise of equal representation is not an adequate defense.

I harbor nothing but contempt for the writers of such unfounded gibberish as for those who continue to encourage this libelous writing by publishing it.

If the Daily Egyptian is truly dedicated to quality journalism, it will discontinue the practice of printing indiscriminately and irresponsibly. — B. Moss, senior, psychology

Homosexuality no longer viewed as mental illness

In response to Marc Perry's well-stated assertion that homosexuality is a mental illness; I find it refreshing to find an engineering major to be so informed about the field of mental illness.

You have, however, an outdated diagnosis. Mental health professionals and professional publications no longer view homosexuality as a mental illness, and they have not viewed it that way for at least 10 years. You are misinformed.

Recent research has found that there is probably no single mental or physiological cause for homosexuality, but that it is a result of many factors. Homosexuality is simply a matter of orientation. Attempting to change that orientation is similar to an attempt to write with the non-dominant hand — it can be done, but it is not quite as natural. It is a matter of what works best for an individual.

Homosexuality is not a perversion; it is a lifestyle. A woman may bond with another woman to build a tax-paying, voting, and responsible life together. They are bonded beyond sex to friendship, partnership and emotional support to build a fulfilling and satisfying life together. Men, also, not because they are perverts, may prefer to be with a man in all of the above ways. Research has also shown that long-term monogamous homosexual relationships are mutually satisfying to an equal or greater degree as that of heterosexuals — in every sense of the word. This is not because they desire a sex change.

So hey, Marc, build some bridges of sensitivity and education before you cross the river to another subject out of your personal experience. May God bless you. — Lorraine Browning, undergraduate, psychology

Rend Lake program offers hunting for disabled people

By Angela Hyland
Environmental Writer

The satisfaction achieved through deer hunting can now be experienced by those with disabilities, local park rangers say.

A program offered at Rend Lake, about 30 miles northeast of Carbondale, will enable individuals with a class 2-A physical disability card to participate in deer hunting, said Mike Edwards, a park ranger with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Rend Lake. This card is available to individuals unable to walk 200 feet or more unassisted.

Volunteers from the surrounding area are working to make the program possible, he said.

"They'll assist them with tracking the deer and with getting in and out of their blinds," Edwards said.

Many at SIUC could benefit from such a program, said Kathleen Plesko, coordinator of disabled student services at SIUC.

The student body at SIUC has a lot of non-traditional students, Plesko said.

"Many of them used to be involved in manual labor and became disabled in their 30s or 40s," she said. "That population in particular will benefit from programs like this."

Plesko said the hunting program can help individuals with disabilities become more accepted into mainstream American life.

"One of the recurrent problems men always have when they're restricted to the use of a wheelchair, in my experience, that they're not able to do these favorite ritual activities," she said.

The program at Rend Lake will make it possible for disabled hunters to take part in all aspects of shotgun hunting, Edwards said.

Blinds will be constructed on ground level and will consist of bales of straw stacked around a wooden floor, he said.

The site will be in areas normally closed to hunting, such as campgrounds and recreation areas that are closed for the season.

"These are areas where deer aren't regularly harvested," Edwards said. "Without this, we'd probably be overrun with deer."

To take part in the November and December hunt, interested individuals should apply immediately, Edwards said.

Applications will be taken until April 22.

into rubble. His non-appearance bolstered U.N. fears that the Serbs had agreed to attend only to buy time to wipe out the last Muslim enclaves in the almost vanquished east.

On the first anniversary of the start of the deadly siege of Sarajevo, slim hopes of a breakthrough to peace were shattered by the warlords' intransigence, and the evolving failure of a 10-day truce was underscored by the persistent crackle of sniper fire.

Although the Serb rebellion against Bosnian independence actually began weeks earlier in scattered rural locales, much of the world regards April 6, 1992, as the opening offensive in what has become the most vicious and deadly conflict to befall Europe since World War II.

It was a year ago that Bosnian Serbs, armed and encouraged by the Serbian regime in Belgrade, fired on demonstrators marching in support of ethnic tolerance and moved their tanks and mounted guns to the hills overlooking this once-peaceful and integrated city.

The yearlong siege has created a ghastly vista of urban ruin. Charred hulks of apartment buildings flank Sarajevo's eerie streets. Windowless streetcars and crushed cars stand frozen where mortars struck them. Curtains—the only reminders of habitation—billow out of empty high-rise offices.

zone into the area where the hotel will be constructed.

Twede said the financial incentives that come with the zone are crucial to the financing of the developers.

Jeff Doherty, Carbondale city manager, said expanding the zone is not a difficult process. He said the local governments involved, the city of Carbondale, Murphysboro and Jackson County, must pass resolutions to expand the zone and a public hearing must be held on the matter.

Twede said the SIU Board of Trustees also must approve the land lease and the enterprise zone before the plan can move forward. The matters will be presented to the trustees Thursday at their regular board meeting.

Hurst said the goal is to begin construction in August and have the hotel open for business during the 1994 fall semester provided the weather cooperates during construction.

Choice Hotels Inc. won the bid to construct a campus hotel in February proposing construction of a four-star Clarion Hotel with a restaurant and space for conferences and other activities.

James Twede, vice president for administration, said the campus and the community must support the hotel by attracting conferences and other activities that can be hosted in the hotel.

"It's been hard for the city and the University to attract large numbers," Twede said. "Now we can attract big conferences that might go to St. Louis."

He said the local hotels will benefit also, because some people attending conferences will want to stay in less expensive hotels.

Another benefit the hotel will add is a student internship program for the hotel/restaurant/tourism department in the College of Agriculture.

The students will be able to complete an internship on campus in a large chain hotel.

Patricia Welch, associate professor of animal science food and nutrition, said all the students in the hotel/restaurant/tourism department are required to complete two internships in either the hotel, travel or tourism business and students usually fulfill these internships in other cities.

"It is difficult for our students to do this in Carbondale because of a lack of facilities," she said. "It will also give us the opportunity to do hands on lab work with some of our classes."

Welch said her department is very excited about the program and the hotel developers have expressed a definite commitment to working with the students.

"It is good to see industry and education working together," she said.

"The American people. I'm sure, are disappointed to find that a program that would put a half-million people to work and that has the support of the majority of the United States Senate cannot be brought to a vote in the Senate because democracy and majority rule is being undermined," Clinton said during a morning photo session with visiting Egyptian President Poini Mubarak.

Later, during a news conference, Clinton added, "We will see when Congress comes back whether the Republicans are committed to putting the American people back to work or just playing politics."

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., shot back with some rhetoric of his own. "The White House still doesn't get it," Dole said in a statement. "It isn't gridlock and politics. It's about protecting the American taxpayers from spending billions of their dollars on pork projects."

Lock-In to gather local teen-agers for prevention issues conference

By Sanjay Seth
City Writer

The idea of locking in 150 adolescents together overnight at the SIUC Recreation Center might raise some eyebrows, but not in the case of a community-sponsored prevention conference.

The Sensible Teens Explore Prevention VII Lock-In Conference will bring together 150 youth from high schools in Jackson County, for activities starting at 8 p.m. on April 23.

Planned events include four prevention workshops presented by community agencies, several workshops ranging from karate and wrestling to the climbing wall, and even a presentation by Mary Kay Cosmetics.

Julie Lawrence, community development coordinator of the Adolescent Health Center in Carbondale, which is the sponsor of the lock-in, said the conference gathers kids from different walks of life in one place to have fun and face the facts of growing up in the '90s.

"It is really important that these youth be given a mouthpiece about feelings they have," Lawrence said. "The lock-in addresses these issues well."

Tom Kadela, an senior in school work who is the coordinator of the lock-in, said the prevention of destructive behavior will be the central theme in the workshops.

Kadela said funding for the lock-in has deteriorated through the years, but participation has grown. "We fight to keep it going," Kadela said. "We operate at a real deficit, but we make sure the kids that are chosen can attend the conference. We need as much help as we can get in terms of moneys and volunteers."

Participants who are unable to pay the $10 fee are subsidized, sometimes from the wallets of the center's staff.

The basis of the conference and workshops is to show adolescents that there are positive role models out there and that one can have fun in a positive, healthy way without alcohol, drugs and sex, Kadela said.

"I think it is important to realize that the college populations are not the only groups that have contemporary problems," Kadela said. "Kids having kids at the age of 10, that's just one problem we often witness here."

Workshops will include:

- "Down But Not Out" will be presented by the Jackson County Mental Health Youth Services Program, and will attempt to make the signs and symptoms of depression and suicide more evident to outsiders.

- In "Parents Just Don't Understand" Jeffery Kellogg, Carbondale child psychologist, will host a talk-show-type role play. Kadela said adult volunteers act as parents and are put in the spot light. This will be a good chance for the participants to learn how to communicate effectively with parents about problems or other areas.

- "It's Okay to Say NO Way!" will feature a panel of teen parents who will speak on sexual practices, with a focus on abstinence. Kadela said the Adolescent Health Center will also speak on realistic issues of the '90s such as AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, and the use of contraceptives.

- "Lean On Me" will focus on responsible behavior, racial relationships and resolving conflicts without negative confrontation, while instilling communication skills and self-esteem. Kadela said this would be another interesting workshop because of the ethnic origins of the presenters. Larry Barnett, the principal of Lincoln Junior High School and Chris Strom, a police officer in the Carbondale Police Department, who works with youth.

- FACES, a theatrical group coordinated by Lawrence, will present a drama about contemporary issues facing youth in the 90's.

Parents have not been forgotten for the night. A workshop on how to communicate and interact with adolescents will be conducted by the AHC.

Cellular phone industry booms with technology

By Mikael Pyrtel
Business Writer

When cellular phones were introduced to the market, the primary users were business professionals who spent a considerable amount of their time away from the desk.

Now even SIUC students love them.

Since the phone's introduction in Southern Illinois in December 1990, the industry has grown as more people begin to discover the convenience and availability of cellular phones.

But the future of the industry still is debated.

"Everyone uses them for all kinds of reasons," said Melenh Hacker, market manager for ConTel Cellular of Carbondale.

"From the 16-year-old daughter who gets one from her father to the 84-year-old person making shopping trips. Everyone from all socioeconomic backgrounds uses cellular phones."

Sonja Wuehr, a senior in child and family from Morton Grove, said her parents got her a cellular phone for her safety, and considers it a good investment.

"I use it when I travel to and from Carbondale," Wuehr said.

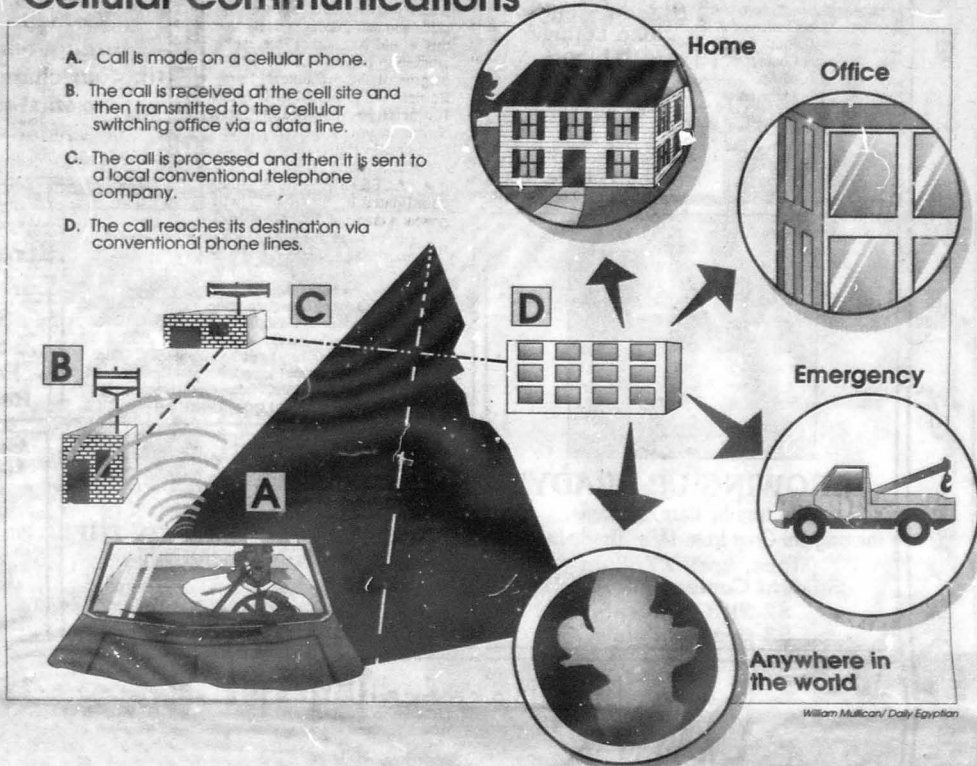

"In case I break down I can call someone for help so I do not have to flag down a lunatic."

Hacker attributes the growth of the cellular phone industry to its convenience, versatility and youth.

"The product is still new and people are just finding out more information on cellular phones," she added.

An hour of someone else's time can mean the difference between life and death for those in need of blood. The Red Cross blood drive is looking for those willing to donate that hour.

The blood drive will start April 19 and take place at various places in Carbondale, not limiting itself to the SIUC campus, coordinator Vivian Ugent said.

"The Red Cross will supply a variety of times and places so that people from all around the community will feel encouraged to donate," she said.

The dates and times for the drive are as follows:

- Monday, April 19: SIUC Recreation Center 12 noon to 8 p.m.
- Tuesday, April 20: Kmart on E. Main, Carbondale 4 to 8 p.m.
- Wednesday, April 21: SIUC Student Center 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- Thursday, April 22: SIUC Student Center 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- Friday, April 23: St. Francis Xavier Church on the Corner of Poplar and Walnut 1:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Many times potential donors are lost because they feel they are not eligible to donate, but requirements are not as complicated as some may think, Ugent said.

Donors must be 16 or older, and must weigh more than 110 pounds.

Ugent said the most important step in the blood drive at this point is that people sign up to donate ahead of time. What is most important for the blood drive on the whole, however, is that people donate altogether.

"People, if possible, tend to donate more often if we can ask them personally," she said.

"Often, it is quite a task to do, we can use all the help we can get," she said.

in Herrin, said the Southern Illinois system is expanding with technology. Even with the expansion of the cellular industry, Hacker does not forecast that the cellular industry will take over.

"What we see is the communications service industry expanding," she said. "We do not see it taking over the home-based systems."

Patrick O'Neill, SIUC assistant professor in radio-television, however, does not share the same speculative viewpoint as the GTE-controlled cellular service.

"With our current telephone service you call a number not a person," O'Neill said. "It does not make sense to have your phone at home if you are out."

The next generation of cellular phones will be called Personal Communication Services (PCS), O'Neill said.

The PCS phones would be smaller than the current cellular phones and less expensive.

"Contrary to the cellular system, which sends calls through large cells that cover a couple of miles, the PCS system would send calls through smaller cells called micro-cells, which would cover a few blocks," O'Neill said.

Because of the potential of mobile phone units, O'Neill believes that it will lead to increased competition.

"If we go to a wireless phone system that will increase the chance of telephone company competition," he said.

Use of tobacco growing among teens, children

The Washington Post

The start of baseball season brings a reminder of a bad habit practiced by some players and emulated by a growing number of youths: the use of chewing tobacco or snuff.

Known also as spit tobacco, the stuff is part of baseball lore and, according to a 1991 federal survey, still is used by up to 45 percent of professional players.

It may look harmless to see a pitcher chewing tobacco, a small line of brown juice dribbling from the corner of his mouth as he winds up to throw the ball. It also may seem just part of the game to catch a player in the dugout "dipping" some moist snuff between his gum and his cheek or to watch a batter warm up at home plate, his cheek puffed out with a wad of tobacco.

But, as Surgeon General Antonia Novello noted at a press conference last December, "chewing tobacco and moist snuff can be deadly." According to a recent report by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, nearly one in five high school boys now uses spit tobacco.

Among white males the rates are higher. One in four teen-age Caucasian males uses chewing tobacco, according to the CDC.

"Kids not only spit it, they chew it, they suck it, they swallow it and in the long run, they can pay for it by getting oral cancer," Novello said.

New technology, equipment contribute to medical costs

By Chris Labyk
Wellness Center

To Your Health

Almost everyone is aware of the health care crisis in this country, but most are unaware of how each person may contribute to rising costs.

Technology, equipment and new procedures contribute to the rising health care costs. The development and perfection of technology is expensive.

There is a slow shift from treatment to prevention. Most people are reluctant to pay for a helmet but do not think twice about spending $300,000 on a head injury case. Heroic efforts are valued by society, including saving lives with transplants, saving premature babies and providing dialysis.

People rely too much on the medical system to "fix" them and they want something done now. Patients may demand services or medication they may not need at the time. Many patients have unrealistic expectations of their doctors. Just as there are people who are not patient enough, there are some people who delay seeking care when needed. It is true that many health problems cost less when treated early.

Those who have insurance are shielded from the actual cost of services, and they have little knowledge about the true costs. These people often do not see the bill, so what does it matter if an unnecessary test is ordered or they spend extra day in the hospital? Someone is paying the bill, usually the employer.

There are many things health care consumers can do to alleviate the stress on the health care system:

- Become an educated consumer; learn how to collaborate with your health care provider.
- Realize that more than 70 percent of illnesses are self-limiting, meaning they will go away on their own in time. Learn self-care strategies and educate yourself on signs and symptoms that warrant further investigations.
- Practice prevention: "It's cheaper to put a fence around the cliff, than an ambulance in the valley."
- Use the emergency room for true emergencies, not as a place for routine care.

Places on campus offer health resources on illness and treatments. The library, the Student Health Assessment Center in the Student Center and the Health Advocates office all have information.

Tournament MVP Williams finding it all hard to believe

Los Angeles Times

Donald Williams simply could not imagine it. Not last season as a backup freshman point guard. Not when his basketball world was crumbling.

Williams could not comprehend going from North Carolina's high school player of the year to a seldom-used reserve for Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels.

It is the same frustrating feeling many former high school stars have had in Chapel Hill, N.C., where basketball is steeped in team unity.

But now, standing before thousands of adoring North Carolina fans in the middle of the Louisiana Superdome, Williams had trouble believing he was a member of the NCAA champions.

He had been so frustrated a year ago that he contemplated leaving North Carolina for a program that better suited his quick-draw style. But parents, friends and teammates consoled him, and eventually he dedicated himself to succeeding at North Carolina.

His patience warmed the hearts of not only his teammates, but Smith, who needed an outside shooter to replace Hubert Davis.

Pat Sullivan, a 6-foot-8 junior, was one of the returning players who spent time with Williams, exchanging horror stories of freshman seasons.

"It's something we all go through," Sullivan said. "I told him to forget about last year. It takes a lot of character to realize that you're not going to be the man anymore."

Williams, 20, has erased all the bad memories after tearing through the NCAA tournament with outstanding perimeter shooting. Duplicating his total against Kansas in Saturday's semifinal, Williams scored 25 points Monday night to lead North Carolina past Michigan, 77-71.

After scoring nine points in a first-round victory against East Carolina, Williams found the touch that made him so special two years ago at Garner (N.C.) High. He scored 17 against Rhode Island, 22 against Arkansas and 20 against Cincinnati, including the big free throws in overtime.

"When he's on a streak, we screen for him and look for him," Smith said of Williams. "He was in a different zone. I thought he was going to make it every time he went up."

Even that might be too much for Williams, a 6-foot-2 sophomore whose overall game is improving with his shooting. He made eight of 12 shots Monday, and five of seven from three-point range. He also made five three-pointers against Kansas.

After Davis graduated, many believed North Carolina was suspect from the outside. But those who watched the Tar Heels play pick-up games over the summer knew otherwise.

His teammates saw Williams' shooting ability. Smith a disciple of patient offenses, saw it, too.

When Williams returned for his sophomore season, Smith told him he would move to the shooting guard position, his natural spot.

"As long as I am making it, I have the green light to keep on shooting," said Williams, the tournament's most valuable player.

Williams broke three Final Four records. His 10 three-pointers in two games bettered the nine of Indiana's Steve Alford in 1987 and Nevada Las Vegas' Anderson Hunt in 1990. Williams' three-point shooting percentage for a championship game, and for two games, set records.

Williams, who made 22 three-pointers in the NCAA tournament, made his first Monday at 8 minutes 2 seconds of the first half.

"After that, I had a sigh of relief," he said. "Coach Smith told me to move quickly without the ball and I would get open."

Hailing from Oakdale, Minn., Revoir earned all-conference, metro and state honors while playing for Concordia Academy, sparking her team to a third-place finish in the state tourney last fall.

Locke said Revoir is probably the most versatile and physical of the incoming recruit class.

"Jodi is an impact player who has a good head for the game, and was very heavily recruited," Locke said.

"She is a good jumper with good speed and Lori (Nishikawa), my assistant, took one look at her and said we needed her."

Revoir, who plans to major in forestry, chose SIUC over Connecticut, Kansas State and others.

Chappell comes to SIUC from Huntley High School, where she is a two-sport specialist in volleyball and basketball.

In volleyball she led her team to an 118-22-2 record during her four years and helped it to a conference championship and a fourth-place state ranking last fall.

Locke said Chappell is the best skilled player of the group.

"Rebekah is extremely well trained and technically sound, and is one of those players that you know you have to have," Locke said.

"She'll need to gain some strength, but she'll come right in and help at the outside position."

Chappell plans to major in special education, and picked SIUC over Connecticut and Mercer.

ball into center-field, allowing Billy Thompson to score from third and tie the game at 3-3.

Saluki hurler Dan Linton hit Eddie Brooks in the back with a pitch to put runners at first and second with nobody out.

Linton kept the rally going by throwing a wild pitch that advanced the runners to second and third.

After Chris Gonzalez was intentionally walked, Paul Morse singled to knock in two more runs for a 5-3 Wildcat lead.

A sacrifice advanced Gonzalez and Morse to second and third for the first out, and then Linton helped himself by throwing Gonzalez out at home on a missed squeeze play.

Morse advanced to third on the play and scored on another wild pitch by Linton to make the score 6-3.

After the Dawgs closed to within 6-4, another mistake gave Kentucky an insurance run.

Dan Esplin caught a fly ball in left field for the second out of the inning, but committed a throwing error to allow a runner standing on third to score and give the Wildcats a 7-4 edge.

SIUC head coach Sam Riggelman said he would rather not see the last at-bat when the Salukis are home.

"We had the right people at the plate in the bottom of the ninth, but we've created that situation too much this season," Riggelman said.

"I don't want us to bat in the ninth when we're at home."

Linton pitched 8 1/3 innings, giving up 10 hits and 6 earned runs. Linton had some control problems, as he hit five batters, walked three and uncorked a couple of wild pitches.

Riggelman said Linton's performance was a step up from his last one.

"I was encouraged by Linton's performance on the mound as he pitched much better than he did against Creighton last Sunday," Riggelman said.

Cwynar and Sauritch had two and three hits, respectively, with Sauritch collecting a triple to go with his two singles.

Riggelman said defensive lapses are hurting the team.

"It was the small things on defense that cost us," Riggelman said.

The Salukis (14-12) will be at Eastern Illinois today for a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. SIUC will be back at home this weekend for a three-game set with Northern Iowa.

Webber 'should hold his head up proud'—Howard

The Hartford Courant

They were sitting there side-by-side at the losers' postgame press conference, Michigan center Juwan Howard telling the world that Chris Webber "should hold his head up proud."

But Chris Webber was not holding his head up proud. He was burying it in his hands.

Sunday, when his head was high for all to see, Webber had recalled the pain of losing to Duke last year in the NCAA championship game. It was, he said, "the lowest moment of my life."

So how did this rank?

Slowly, Chris Webber lifted his face from his hands and spoke in a voice that could best be described as an anguished rumble.

"It's the same," he said. "It's exactly the same."

It was mere minutes after jubilant North Carolina had begun celebrating its 77-71 victory. A victory ensured when Webber, Michigan's greatest player, committed Michigan's greatest goof.

With 36 seconds left and North Carolina leading by two points, Webber did one of those routinely remarkable things that made him the most heavily recruited high school player in the country two years ago, and the superstar on this team of stars.

Jammed too far under the basket by two Tar Heels as teammate Jalen Rose clanged a three-point attempt, Webber somehow reached back with his right hand—like an outfielder reaching over the fence to save a home run—and caught the rebound one-handed. In the same motion, he bounced it off the basketball and into the basket to cut the Carolina lead to 72-71. No wonder his teammates call Webber "The Hand."

It gave Webber a team-leading 23 points (11-for-18 from the field) and 10 rebounds to go with his three blocked shots and one steal. And it gave Michigan a chance to win on its last possession, after North Carolina's Pat Sullivan made only one of two free throws to give the Tar Heels a 73-71 lead with 20 seconds left.

It was nine seconds later that Webber, bringing the ball upcourt after getting his 11th rebound on Sullivan's miss, called timeout.

But Michigan had already used its allotted timeouts. The Wolverines didn't have any left.

Rose and the other Michigan players knew that. Coach Steve Fisher had told them they had no timeouts left when Michigan had taken its third—and last—timeout with 46 seconds left.

"At first," said Rose, "I was hoping that the ref didn't see him (signal)."

But the official did see. Michigan got the timeout, and North Carolina was awarded a two-shot technical foul. Carolina's Donald Williams made both to make it 75-71.

Which was how Chris Webber came to be sitting on a dais in front of the national sporting press with his head buried in his hands.

"I don't remember," Webber said, when asked if he recalled that the Wolverines had been warned they were out of timeouts. "That probably cost us the game."

It was a bizarre twist in this glorious championship game, yet it oddly paralleled a similarly strange occurrence in the Superdome 11 years ago, the only other time a Dean Smith-coached North Carolina team won the national championship.

Remember how Georgetown's Fred Brown suffered momentary brainlock and passed the ball to North Carolina's James Worthy in the final seconds, unwittingly sealing the Tar Heels' 63-62 victory?

When Brown messed up that day, Georgetown Coach John Thompson won hearts across the nation by swallowing him up in a forgiving bear hug.

Michigan Coach Steve Fisher had no bear hug for the 6-foot-9, 245-pound Webber. Just reassuring words.

"It was an awful way for our season to end, and no one feels worse than Chris, but we wouldn't

Webber faces music, press

As reporters questioned Juwan Howard, the only other Michigan player at the news conference, Webber buried his head in his hands. When his obligation was finished, he left the Superdome without returning to the Wolverines' dressing area, where he would have faced more reporters.

Bruce Madej, Michigan's assistant athletic director for media relations, said that Webber, distraught after the game, did not want to make the NCAA-mandated appearance at the news conference, but went at the urging of Madej and Percy Watson, a Michigan assistant coach.

"Let's face it, Chris did not want to go," Madej said. "I told him, 'That's the only way you can answer all the questions.' Watson said the same thing. So he went in, and we told him we'd try to help him (evade the media) after that."

be here if not for Chris," Fisher said.

"Chris Webber is a special person, a special player. He's going to go on and grow from this and be stronger for it. No one said everything was going to be fair."

Rose, the Michigan point guard, met Webber when they were 13. They grew up in Detroit, played AAU ball together, came to Michigan together. They are best friends.

"It might be hard," Rose said, "but I'm gonna help him."
