Amtrak to run 4 days per week

Starting this summer, SIUC students hoping to hop the train to Chicago may have to make some schedule changes.

Amtrak officials announced Thursday that Trains No. 391 and

No. 392, which now run seven days a week between Chicago and Carbondale, will only run on Sun, Mon, Thu and Fri starting June 11.

Referendum open to vote

Undergraduate vote: Students get a chance to vote on a $15 per-semester athletic fee increase Monday.

By Dean Weaver
Special Assignment Reporter

SIUC students will have a chance to vote on a $15 per-semester athletic fee increase Monday due to some last-minute maneuvering by student government.

A quorum of senators voted at an emergency meeting of the Undergraduate Student Government Thursday night.

The meeting's purpose was to place two referendums on the USG presidential and vice-presidential election ballot and place the athletic fee referendum on the student trustee election ballot.

All students are allowed to cast a vote on the student trustee ballot, but only undergraduates can vote in the USG election.

All three referendums were supposed to be included on the student trustee ballot to give graduates as well as undergraduate students a voice on the issues, but only the athletic fee remains on the trustee ballot. Graduate students will not be allowed to voice their opinion on raising the bar-entry to 21 or approving a 50 cent per-student fee increase to support a college student lobbying group. In Washington, D.C. Patrick Smith, president of GPSC, said the reason his council did not approve the two other referendums on the student trustee ballot was because he was unaware USG was putting the items on the ballot.

For a referendum to be included on the trustee ballot, USG and GPSC must both pass identical versions — this never occurred March 29.

Smith said one of the reasons the two governing bodies were unsuccessful at passing the three referendums was because both groups scheduled their meetings at identical times on the same day.

USG and GPSC met on alternating Wednesdays until spring break disrupted the schedule, Smith said.

Smith said he is concerned about the results of undergraduates passing a 50 cent per-student fee increase to raise money for the United States Student Association in Washington D.C.

Carbondale man gets 40 for murder

By Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A Carbondale man was sentenced to 40 years in jail Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to one count of first-degree murder in the January death of his girlfriend.

James E. Vinson, 31, pleaded guilty in the choking death of Terry Spillers Jan. 17 after an argument at their home at the Town and Country Trailer Park on Route 51.

Spillers, 25, was pronounced dead shortly after her body was found near Carbondale's spillway on Pleasant Hill Road. Authorities said Vinson told them that he and Spillers had argued about her use of drugs.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said Vinson was arrested after he admitted to striking and choking her when the argument escalated.

However, State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec said he did not believe Vinson's statements that Spillers died after Vinson tried to prevent her from taking crack cocaine.

"He was taking money from her to buy cocaine," Wepsiec said.

Initial toxicology reports revealed that Spillers had used marijuana within 30 days of her death, but found no traces of cocaine in her system.

Vinson had been scheduled to appear at a fitness hearing Thursday and before accepting the plea, Judge David W. Watt, Jr. found him fit to stand trial.

"In order to enter a plea, Vinson had to be fit to stand trial," Wepsiec said. "The psychologist examined him and found he was fit."

Vinson received credit for the 80 days he has been in the Jackson County Jail. He could have been sentenced to 20 to 60 years in prison if he had been convicted of first-degree murder at his trial.

Vinson tried to plead guilty at his first appearance court appearance in January, saying that he did not mean to hurt her and he wanted the whole episode to be over.

Watt refused to accept that plea and instructed Vinson to talk to an attorney, according to public defender Mike Rowland, who was later appointed to represent Vinson.

Rowland could not be reached for comment on the plea.

Rec closes earlier due to decreased use

Late night trips to the Recreation Center to work out or play a sport are now a thing of the past. With the center's new, shortened hours, patrons will have to cut the fun short earlier.

As of April 3, the Recreation Center is closing at 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and at 8 p.m. on Friday, compared to the previous Monday through Friday closing time of 10 p.m.

According to Michelle Lovel, supervisor of information services, Recreation Center hours are typically shortened every spring because of decreased usage.

"If people aren't in the building, then why keep the building open?" Lovel said. "If we're used, we'll be open."

She said the administrators use the data they get from the Validyne, the machine that reads the ID cards of patrons, to determine the most cost effective Recreation Center hours.

"What kind of info we get back this year will affect our hours next year."

Unopposed candidate calls for more activism

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Running unopposed in an election might sound like a breeze to some, but Undergraduate Student Government presidential candidate Duane Sherman sees this year's lack of participation as a problem.

"I really wish there were more diversity, more people interested in participating," Unity Party candidate Sherman, the only presidential candidate on Monday's ballot, said.

Duane Sherman

Sherman, currently a USG senator from the College of Technical Careers, has a degree in aviation maintenance, and is working another in aviation management.

Student Elections

He has been a senator since spring 1994, involved in the USG Dry Run Concert and the fundraiser for victims of the recent garden park fire.

Sherman said he is concerned with the lack of interest in USG activities, and encourages all students to participate in student government.

"People say 'somebody else will do it,' but then you get 20,000 students saying that, and nobody does anything," he said. "It's important for students to take the first step if they want something accomplished."

New ideas are always welcome, Sherman said, and anyone with suggestions or plans for the future should run them by the USG.

"A good example is the book exchange," he said.

"That started out as a few screws on a napkin last February, and now other universities are interested in buying the idea to use in their own schools.

"Come in with a project, and if it will help the students, you'll probably get to do it."

The USG Book Exchange was originally Sherman's brainchild, and he hopes to run an improved version this fall with computerized scanning of textbooks to make the exchange more efficient.

Student Programming Council Executive Director Kim Clemens is Sherman's vice-presidential running mate, and one of their primary objectives is to facilitate better SPC-USG coordination.

"Kim really knows the ins-and-outs of that organization," said Sherman.

"USG does lots of events and SPC does promotions, so we can Increase for lobbying group

By Shawna Donovan
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC students will decide Monday by referendum if they want to spend an extra 50 cents to have membership with the United States Student Association, a non-profit and non-partisan student lobbying group.

If passed, the Student Activity Fee would be increased by 50 cents. The group, based in Washington D.C., lobbies Congress, the Department of Education and the White House, according to a USSA field director.

Kellye McIntosh, field director for USSA, said SIUC has been involved with the association in the past, but extra money would give USG full membership benefits.

Membership benefits include having a chief organizer on campus, mailings to federal representatives on student issues and increased involvement in the association.

"The current membership would not pay for the services available with the extra 50 cents will do," McIntosh said. "This will help SIUC students have a stronger voice in Washington D.C."

"It is only a cost of a cup of coffee," she said. McIntosh said the student financial aid issues are currently being critically examined by the Republican-controlled Congress.

"We are urging SIUC students to write to their federal representatives and get involved in student issues," McIntosh said. "We are worried that the Direct Loan Programs and Pell Grants will be cut by Congress." Congressman Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, is on the House

'Fuzzy Heroes' offers adventure without gore

MICHAEL J. DUNN — The Daily Egyptian

Fuzzy Heroes, a game of tactile combat using stuffed animals and action figures, is now available at Castle Perilous, located at 715 S. University Ave.

By Kristi Doherty
Daily Egyptian Reporter

G.I. Joe smacks Curious George with his left hand. George drop kicks Joe and rolls over. Uh-oh, look out, Joe's mad now!! He gets up and slowly walks to George with a menacing snarl, but wait, he's yawning. All of a sudden, Joe passes out! George wins!!!

No, this isn't a psycho cartoon gone awry. It is the tactical combat of noble stuffed toys and action figures.

Fuzzy Heroes is a basic wargame that pits stuffed animals and action figures against each other in their individual attempts to simultaneously be personally independent and loyal to mankind. The game is for all ages, including the college boy or girl who hasn't picked up a toy in, say, 6-10 years.

The off-the-wall, zany, and somewhat booming business of the Fuzzy Heroes games and books is bringing the creator of it all, Chris Clark, to Carbondale this weekend to demonstrate and host a tournament at Castle Perilous, located at Suite 203, 715 S. University Ave.

Clark, a 1984 graduate of the University of Illinois, started the Fuzzy Heroes business as a side job. A college friend told him there was no way he could make the idea work, and to prove him wrong Clark went into business that day with $2,000. Today the company makes $165,000 a year.

The Fuzzy Heroes game is based on three books: "Fuzzy Heroes," on combat rules and history; "Fuzzy Sooperheroes," portraying society opposing other petty approaching renegades; and the spy-versus-spy "Under the Covers." Each book contains a scenario that teaches children a different way to approach events throughout life.

One important lesson is that the conflict is based on loyalty or independence — the toys themselves are not evil, Clark said.

Clark said he went into the business because he had experience with Dungeons and Dragons and wanted to give children a game that did not contain all of the unnecessary violence and gore.

"I've been in gaming since 1976, and in recent years the games for kids have become gory. This game is designed to be no gore, no pain in the combat. The critics just slowly lose energy," he said.

Friedel best choice for student trustee

ALTHOUGH THE SIX CANDIDATES FOR SIUC Student Trustee have brought up a number of issues and concerns, law student Stephen Friedel stands out as the best-informed, best-qualified person for the job.

All of the candidates have experience as leaders in activities on campus and are familiar with the University hierarchy, but Friedel's background seems best-suited to the position he is seeking. As president of the Student Bar Association last year, Friedel represented law students' interests by publicly urging the Board of Trustees not to raise tuition levels and asking the board to chart out where additional money collected from students would be allocated. Based on the adversarial role he has taken in the past, Friedel has shown that he is not afraid to ask questions and demand that students' voices be heard.

The same could be said for candidates Andrew Ensor and Monty Peerbhai, who in past leadership positions have proven themselves willing to fight for students. However, these candidates' adamant views sometimes lead them to become too emotional about the issues and could damage their credibility.

On the other end of the scale, candidate Courtney Macke, has much past experience working directly with the SIUC administration, but his personal ties to some officials make him a potential insider. And while candidates Jason Ervin and Craig Adams both appear willing to work with the students, they seem uninformed on many issues.

FRIEDEL'S BACKGROUND AS A LAW STUDENT gives him an advantage that previous trustees have lacked: He understands the University's legal position and can decipher the massive, jargon-laden paperwork generated by and for the board. At the same time, he does not profess to know everything about every issue. Fielding a question about housing fees at Wednesday's debate, Friedel said he lacked sufficient information to take a position but would research the matter and form an opinion based on his findings.

Friedel also seems to understand the trustee's position better than his opponents. He is concerned with being an advocate for the students on the BOT. He realizes that the student trustee has only an advisory vote when decisions are made, but he sees the position as an opportunity to make information available to the public that students at large cannot normally find out on their own. Friedel says he will serve more as a student delegate than as a trustee, listening to students' concerns and relaying those concerns to the board.

LIKE THE CURRENT TRUSTEE, FRIEDEL WILL be participating in an off-campus program next spring. However, while Mark Kochan's internship took him to Chicago for the semester, Friedel's externship is in an office an hour and a half from SIUC. While participating in the externship, Friedel will reside in the Carbondale area. He also will maintain a graduate assistantship and attend some classes, which requires his presence on campus on a regular basis. The externship should not interfere with Friedel's ability to keep in touch with his constituents and represent them fairly.

Friedel's experience, understanding of the office and willingness to work with his constituents make him the strongest candidate for the job, and the DE urges his election.

The endorsement represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board. The endorsement decision was reached by board members based off of the candidates' presentations at a public forum and written responses to a DE questionnaire. No endorsements were made for USG president because only one student is in the race. The DE encourages students to exercise their right to vote in Monday's election.

Letters to the Editor

Proposed fee increases deceiving

With promises of "free admission to all games in all sports" and "students will be able to ride the buses for free," SIUC administrators Jim Hart and Lawrence Juhlin have recently been heard promoting a proposed athletic fee increase and the institution of a new transportation fee, respectively.

If the athletics fee increase is approved, it will cost every SIUC student $106.00 per year. The "mass transit" system will cost each student another $50.00 per year. For those who attend in the summer, these obligatory annual fees will be even higher.

To lend the appearance that these hefty fee increases benefit the general student body, SIUC administrators place a peculiar twist on the word "free."

If "free" means, as it says in the dictionary, "at no cost," then neither a seat in the arena nor a spot on the bus can accurately be described as free.

Only those who regularly attend a variety of SIUC sporting events or ride the buses daily will come out ahead by paying these new and more burdensome fees.

Everybody else should tell these slippery administrators to stop being so facile with students' scarce funds.

Prayer neglects some religions

This letter is in response to Ms. Opie's letter on graduation prayer. I would like to point out a couple of things that she has overlooked.

The first thing is that she said they — the U.S. government and SIUC administration — "...are eliminating any acknowledgement of God and our Christian heritage." Let me remind everyone that we are not all Christians!

What prayer would you like us to recite? How about a prayer from the Koran? Should we perhaps chant a few mantras?

The point is that there are many different religions in this country and most have representatives here at SIUC.

The Freedom of Religion clause guarantees the equal protection of all religions. If we said a prayer for all religions, then graduation ceremonies would take forever.

She also says that we should put it to a student vote. That's fine if you are part of the Christian majority that is bound to win by sheer numbers alone.

I am not one of the majority, and I would not want to participate in Christian prayer.

Graduation is for everyone, regardless of race, religion, or anything else. We need to make sure that we do not infringe upon anyone's freedom on that momentous day.

Each person is free to engage in a prayer of their liking — if they want to pray at all — on their own, without having to include the entire graduating class.

So, if you really want to pray at graduation, then what you should be pushing for is a moment of silence. This would allow each individual the time to express their own personal religious beliefs.

Free expression with flag warranted

It saddens me to think that any misguided, though patriotic, soul might have actually fought or even died for the American flag. I would prefer to believe that their efforts were on behalf of the country itself — the land, its people and their ideals.

One of those ideals is freedom of expressions, nobly enshrined in the Constitution as the First Amendment. The right to speak freely has a long history of tests and trials. It is a building block at the foundation of democracy, and any free-thinking people will not allow this right to be chipped away. The hardest test of this right is whether or not we are willing to extend it to those with whom we disagree. We don't have to like what people may say or their methods in saying it, but we must grant them the right to have their say.

The flag is a symbol of the country. As such, it is held in reverence and high regard when we feel proud of our country. But when we feel that the country has gone off the right track, when the government is at odds with the interests of the people, the flag is no longer a symbol of pride but a symbol of oppression. The flag becomes a target. It is an appropriate target for protest because of its power as a symbol.

If we hold in contempt those who use this symbol as a part of their protest against the government, we would be losing sight of one of the core principles for which it stands. Some say that defacing the flag is an attack on the country; this group of protesters felt that the country was already under attack from Newt & company. Don't let flag waving, by either side, get in the way of the issues.

Allmon said Amtrak officials need to re-evaluate their current situation in order to keep what customers they have now.

"Some students do not have access to vehicles and by changing the schedule, they may have no way to get home," he said. "Amtrak would benefit more if they left the schedule the way it was."

"People are going to find alternate means of transportation," he said.

Steven Taubenkibel, public affairs spokesman for Amtrak in Washington D.C., said the reason for the scheduling cuts were to reduce a cost crisis.

"We (Amtrak) were facing a deficit and had to reduce some service," Taubenkibel said. "This decision is in accordance with a basic plan established last December."

Included in the list of Illinois cuts are the No. 311 and No. 312, on the Loop run from Chicago to Springfield, which will be eliminated, saving Amtrak an annual $1.6 million.

Train No. 300, 302, and 305 running from Chicago to St. Louis, will also be eliminated at an annual cost of $2.9 million.

The Ann Rutledge, which runs from Chicago to St. Louis and servicing Springfield will continue. Also continuing is the Texas Eagle, which runs daily between Chicago and St. Louis, and to Texas three times a week.

"These efforts are designed to reduce our deficit and keep Amtrak in service and running," Taubenkibel said.

Nadsem Khan, a senior in management from Chicago, said he used to extend his weekends to take the train back to Carbondale on Tuesdays. He believes the cuts will not improve Amtrak's deficit.

"I guess if they are in bad shape they have no choice but to make some cuts, but they should not have cut out Carbondale," Khan said. "I don't think the cuts will help. It is rare when they do, I mean every time this stuff happens it is blamed on cut" كس.

كس gets a lot of business from the small towns between Carbondale and Chicago, and if they lose those passengers it will only contribute to the deficit," he said.

According to Taubenkibel, Amtrak does not have any plans to increase ticket prices anytime soon. "As of right now nothing has been determined as far as ticket prices," he said. "Right now we have no plans to increase fares."

Brian Rutzen, a junior in history from Chicago said he takes the train home once in a while and although the service cuts may not have an effect on his travel plans, he does not like the service Amtrak offers its customers.

"I do not like taking the train because it is way too expensive," Rutzen said. "Why spend $68 on a train ticket that takes 6 hours, when you can spend $100 on a plane ticket and be home in less than an hour."

Rutzen feels Amtrak's decision to make the cuts does make sense. "I think the cuts are necessary because they don't get enough business," he said. "They are not serving people the way they should."

"They need to cut down on the service because people are not spending money on the tickets," he said.

Kallie Bartosh, a freshman from Palatine said she used to look forward to weekly visits from her boyfriend who takes the train from Champaign.

"I can see how it will put a damper on travel plans," she said. "My boyfriend used to take the train down here on Tuesdays. I guess he won't anymore."

Amtrak relying on Congress' cooperation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Amtrak President Thomas Downs on Thursday sliced away more national passenger trains by cutting daily service on many routes and eliminating the once-famed Broadway Limited between New York and Chicago.

The cuts—some to take effect June 11 and others Sept. 10—eliminate about 12 percent of Amtrak's train miles and are expected to save $99 million. It is possible that individual states will provide enough money to restore some of the cuts.

The trims are supposed to let Amtrak survive despite declining federal subsidies, fare competition from low-priced airlines and rising maintenance costs fed by old equipment and facilities.

"This is not our best of days," said Downs at a news conference. The cuts should allow Amtrak to balance its budget if Congress approves the system's diminished $260 million operating subsidy for fiscal 1996, he said. But there is no guarantee Congress will do so.

The cuts spare north-south service along both coasts. But the rest of the "national" passenger system will be only loosely connected by a spindly web of trains, many of them running only three times a week. Several routes were reduced in frequency or eliminated in a first round of cuts in December.

Amtrak carries about 22 million passengers annually over 24,500 route miles on 212 trains a day—122 in the Washington-Boston corridor.

Downs said Amtrak has squeezed every possible savings from its route system, and any other cuts would simply cause the national system to "unravel." Eliminating remaining long-distance service would save only $40 million a year, he said.

Key members of Congress have warned Amtrak they would not vote to subsidize the heavily traveled coastal corridors unless the nation's hearland also has trains.

No state with Amtrak would lose all service.

Only Oklahoma, South Dakota, Maine, Hawaii and Alaska have no Amtrak service.

said Lovel. The current hours are a compromise in the competition for funds, she said. "We are trying to meet the people's needs," Lovel said. "That's what we're trying to do with the programs we offer, the facilities we have and the hours we're open." Marie Figueroa, a senior in consumer economics from Aurora, said the administrators should cut morning hours instead of night hours. "I bet many people don't come here at six in the morning," she said. "A lot of people don't come in until the afternoon or the evening." Lovel said there are usually fewer people late at night than early in the morning. "Typically at 8 or 9 o'clock (p.m.), usage drops off," Lovel said. "(Between 5:30 and 7 (a.m.), there's usually a few hundred people." However, Lovel said she was not sure if more people would ultimately be affected if morning hours were shortened instead of evening hours. Some students feel inconvenienced because their busy schedules do not allow them much time to use the Recreation Center. Jason Adams, a freshman in political science from Chicago said the shorter hours leave him less time to work out after studying. "When I come in to lift and get ready through my program, the Rec is already closing," he said. "Why would they make the hours shorter when the days are getting longer?" Matt Boegler, a sophomore in industrial technology from Chester, said the shorter hours will cut into his lap swimming time. "I have a job and a lot of times I can't get up here till late in the evening," he said. "It might be a wise choice but I think a lot of kids will be disappointed." Blaine Muscat, a senior in advertising from Dundee said he sometimes has a busy day and does not have any free time until the night. "Sometimes I can't come in until late because of work or class," he said. "What are they gaining by cutting one hour?" Other students said they work out at other times in the day and would not be affected by the shortened hours. David Lowery III, an undecided freshman from Moline, said he does not mind the change in hours because he works out early. "(The shorter hours are) probably kind of bad for the people who have late classes. Some people like to come in at nine to work out for an hour," he said. Steve Cox, a junior in advanced technical studies from Libertyville, said the change in hours does not bother him. "I'll just work around their schedule," he said. "If they're going to close a little earlier, I'll just come in a little earlier."

House committee approves revision of clean water act

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON—A House committee Thursday approved a sweeping revision of the federal Clean Water Act that critics said would sacrifice most of the United States' nation's wetlands and ease pollution restrictions on communities, farms and factories. Environmentalists accused the Republican controlled House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee of trying to scuttle a 23-year-old law that both political parties agree has worked well in cleaning up the nation's waterways. But Pennsylvania Rep. Bud Shuster, the panel's chairman, insisted the bill does not endanger clean water. Instead, the measure injects "common-sense" and "flexibility" into a law that has grown too rigid and costly, he said.

— Repeal of a requirement that coastal states adopt enforceable controls on polluted runoff from farm fields and city and suburban streets, the source of most pollution tainting the nation's waters today. Instead, states must devise plans for reducing runoff that rely mainly on voluntary actions and incentives, and they have 15 years to demonstrate "reasonable progress" toward cleaning up streams—longer if the federal government does not provide all promised funds. The bill would authorize an increase of $1 billion in the $2 billion a year distributed to states for upgrading sewage treatment plants, and it allows the money to be spent for a broad range of pollution controls, including farm and urban stormwater runoff. But environmentalists questioned whether a Congress bent on balancing the federal budget really would appropriate additional money for pollution control, and they pointed out that the law extends deadlines for cleanup if full federal funding is not forthcoming.

The 296-page bill was overwhelmingly approved, on a vote of 42-16, at the end of a three-day review, during which outnumbered Democrats and some Republicans tried unsuccessfully to alter the measure. The bill is slated for a full House vote later this spring. Similar legislation has yet to be introduced in the Senate.

Major changes proposed in the House bill include: — Narrowing the definition of what is a wetland and authorizing regulators to bar development only on the most valuable acreage. The Interior Department warned that would remove as much as 80 percent of the nation's 105 million acres of wetlands from protection, including large parts of Florida's Everglades and the Great Dismal Swamp, which straddles the Virginia-North Carolina border. In an echo of a "Contract with America" bill passed earlier, the measure also requires the government to compensate landowners if protecting a wetland reduces that part of the property's value by 20 percent or more.

Kessinger, who have been together for a year and a half and since have been practicing in Kessinger's barber shop in Murphysboro.

Kathleen Shaffner, graduate assistant for special programming, said Arts Cafe is an ideal place for students to give form to their art—whatever it may be.

"We really want (Arts Cafe) to be something that can grow with the input of all the students," she said. "We're open to ideas. If there's anything someone wants to do, we'll try to make sure it gets done."

She said in the future, with student input and corroboration, the Arts Cafe will feature all varieties of artistic expression.

"Art comes in many forms, so we're looking to do everything," she said. "We want dance, performance art, storytelling, music, poetry—whatever people have and want to share. We're all artists in some way."

She said she hopes the cafe will be a place of artistic inspiration.

Arts Cafe will happen from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. in the Big Muddy room. There is no admission: Drinks will be provided.

SIUC colleges to honor students

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Undergraduate students who have excelled at academics will be recognized for their achievements during Campus Honors Day April 9 at SIUC.

A total of 1,723 students will be honored for high grade point averages, scholarships, awards and prizes received during the past year.

Awards in agriculture, business and administration, education, engineering, liberal arts, mass communication and media arts, science, social work and technical careers will be giving during the ceremonies.

Each academic unit on campus will honor their academic achievers with certificates and other awards.

Donald Elkins, associate dean in the College of Agriculture, said it is important to have honor's day because it gives the administration a chance to recognize students who have worked hard throughout the year.

"Everyone in the college consider this to be the highlight of the year," he said. "It is nice to be able to give something to students for the hard work they put in."

Linda Siebert, chief academic adviser in the college of business and administration, said sometimes academic achievement goes unnoticed and honor's day is a good way to show students the University appreciates their hard work.

"We hear a lot about athletics and the bad aspects of the school," she said. "This calls attention to students who have worked hard."

Last year, after each academic unit held their ceremony, SIUC President John Guyon hosted one reception for all units in the Student Center. This year each unit will hold individual receptions which may boost attendance, Siebert said.

"Last year's was too large and impersonal," she said. "This year everyone will be encouraged to make contact with administration and faculty."

Budget Committee which examines funds for student financial aid.

Dan Piper, USG governmental affairs commissioner, said 2,500 SIUC students received campus-based aid and 1,000 students receive Perkinson Loans.

"The youth is being targeted because they don't have a voice in D. C.," Piper said. "USSA is the only voice."

USSA helped USG and Jackson County deputy registrars register 70 students to vote in October.

The association also consulted the student candidates in the recent city government election.

Other membership schools include University of Wisconsin—Madison and University of Colorado—Boulder.

Illinois schools that are interested in becoming members are SIUC, Northwestern and DuPage Community College, McIntosh said.

The membership benefit package will be tailored to what SIUC needs, she said.

they haven't supported in a vote," he said.

However, Smith was not concerned about graduate students getting a chance to vote on raising the bar-entry age.

"I don't think it matters much because graduate students are over 21 and could care less about the entry age," he said.

The SIU Board of Trustees will have the final say on the athletic fee increase with a vote expected in May.

The specifics about the implementation of the 50 cent USSA have not been determined.

Carin Musak, vice president of USG, said arrangements have been made so the ballots will be ready for students by Monday, election day.

COBA to set precedent at 11th annual banquet

Additional activities, award recipients highlighted

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

At this year's College of Business and Administration Annual Awards Banquet, something will happen that has not in the 10-year history of the banquet. Every award recipient will be an SIUC alumnus.

The 11th annual banquet, held to honor business professionals for success in their field, will be the flagship of COBA activities Friday and Saturday and will accompany other activities, including a gathering of high-level business executives.

Shirley Kinley, assistant dean of COBA, said it is a coincidence that the Southern Illinois Business Leader award is going to an alumnus, but there was a deliberate effort to make sure the recipient of the International Entrepreneur of the Year was a COBA alumnus.

"Of course the Alumni Hall of Fame has always been for alums," she said.

"But in the past we have given the international entrepreneur of the year to famous people associated with famous businesses.

"Dave Thomas, the founder of Wendy's is an example. But this year, Kinley said Tom Keon, COBA's new dean, wanted to change that practice.

Keon said, "The reason I wanted to honor an alum with that award is because we have many graduates who are just as high profile as past recipients."

"We are not lowering the standard of the award by giving it to one of our alums. Our graduates are on the same level of success," Keon said.

"When it comes down to it, there are strangers and there are COBA family members. It only makes sense to give the award to a family member."

"It definitely is something I would like to see continue in the future."

This year's International Entrepreneur of the Year winner is Bruce E. Fohr, founder and president of FMR Associates Inc., a business which analyzes struggling businesses and charts a course for future success.

Fohr earned bachelor's and master's degrees from COBA in the mid-1970s.

Other weekend activities are designed to offer business students an opportunity to ask questions about life in the world of business and promote themselves.

COBA Council, a group of students representing all COBA registered student organizations, will take advantage of the twice-a-year gathering of COBA's External Advisory Board by holding both formal and informal meetings with its members.

The Board consists of high-level business executives who meet with the dean to help guide the college's programs and direction.

Jason Rosendahl, COBA Council spokesman, said the caliber of the members is very high, pointing out one member is Caterpillar's executive vice president, F. Lynn Pfeeters.

COBA Council President Felicia Banks said the informal discussion with the board members will be Friday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

She said there will be a formal question and answer session about what business leaders are looking for from business students and other topics from 3 to 5 p.m.

"We are also having a picnic Saturday at noon at Evergreen Terrace. Everyone is invited to attend, but the main activities will be honoring COBA's student organizations," she said.

Other business leaders receiving awards at the banquet tonight are Laura F. Claxton Eader and James T. Claxton, founders of CrownLine Boats Inc. in West Frankfort. Claxton and Eader will receive the Southern Illinois Business Leader of the Year award.

Clark said the books and games contain a lot of humor that will appeal to young and old alike.

"The story is there to keep the kid's interest and for parents it contains a lot of tongue-in-cheek humor," he said.

Clark said Fuzzy Heroes is a wargame based on the critter with which you choose to fight. An evaluation of your fighter by its size, color, number of limbs and number of bony protrusions gives the player a set of statistics. The game is then played with a tape measure, three six-sided dice, paper and pencils.

Combat and scoring are determined by the number of hits you can take before you fall asleep, how hard your hits are, the number of attacks you can have, and the critter's movement.

The Fuzzy Heroes does have a line of stuffed toys that follow the story line, but these are not required to play the games.

"We make the characters real common so kids can find something they already have to play with," Clark said.

He said if a critter can win two or more battles it will receive the official title of "Knight of the Stuffed Table."

Although the game is geared towards kids, Clark said he has been on college campuses, where students have shown up in large numbers.

He said the game is not hard to learn, either.

"Frankly, I can teach the basics to a seven-year old in five minutes," Clark said.

"To teach all the avenues, it would take several weeks."

Clark and the Fuzzy Heroes will be at Castle Perilous on Saturday for the event and to teach all those who dare.

The games begin at 11 a.m., and stuffed animals will be on hand and ready to brawl.

SIUC students gain insights from work in legislator's office

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For three political science majors at SIUC, working at state Rep. Mike Bost's (R-Illinois) Carbondale office is beneficial to their budding political careers.

Robert Ludwig, a sophomore in political science and speech communications from Centralia, said he finds the work to be exceptional experience.

"After working for the Bost campaign he (Bost) spoke to me about a possible intern position. Since local politics is something I want to do and will strive to do, this is a way for me to get a foot in the door," Ludwig said.

Ludwig currently is taking 21 hours of classes, is an Undergraduate Student Government senator, is involved with the College Republicans and is the campaign manager for the Unity party.

"In other words, I don't get much sleep," he said.

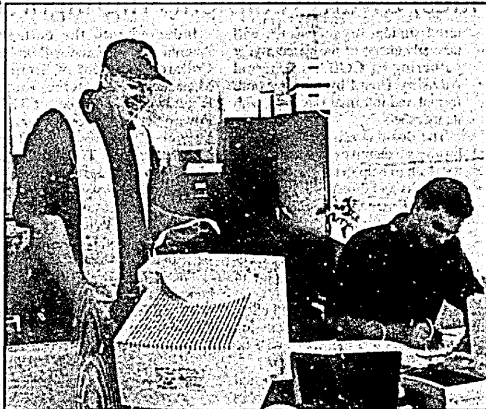

"I go to class in the morning, come here in the afternoon and usually have a school function to attend each weeknight, then it's homework time," Ludwig said.

Jason Svanda, a junior in political science from Murphysboro, said he worked for the Bost campaign last year and officially started an internship at the Bost office which he hopes will benefit his possible political future.

"I'm looking to get into a lobbyist position in the future. This job has taught me a lot about what their job pertains to," he said.

His duties at the office vary from helping with the filing systems to handling constituent calls.

Rob Ludwig, a sophomore in political science and speech communications from Centralia, along with Jason Svanda, a junior in political science from Murphysboro, takes care of some last-minute duties Thursday afternoon before the end of the work day. Ludwig and Svanda are employed at the office of state Rep. Mike Bost as experience for future careers in politics.

information pertaining to a bill pending in the state legislature," Svanda said.

Svanda said he goes to school in the morning, works at the office in the afternoon and works a second job at night.

Angel Longshore, a senior in political science from Anna, said she enjoys working for someone she can trust as well as agree with politically.

"I see this job as a stepping stone into the realm of politics — it will complement my degree in political science," Longshore said.

"I hope to be a campaign manager or lobbyist after school, so this should give me some good experience."

Longshore said she worked with Bost during last year's campaign as well as his first one.

Last year, she was the governor for the Model Illinois Government and was president of the senate in the Model Illinois Government the year before, she said.

Model Illinois Government is a college organization comprised of the top political science majors in the state.

It is a simulation of the senate, house, supreme court and all executive offices involved in the Illinois government, Svanda said.

Svanda served as treasurer on the Model Illinois Government last year.

Ludwig advised students to take advantage of opportunities to work in their chosen fields while in college.

"I recommend anyone wanting to go into political science in the future to pursue an internship like this one at the office. It's experience that can't be simulated in the classroom," he said.

The Unity party opposes raising the bar entry age to 21, but if it does happen, Clemens said USG, working with SPC, could provide better entertainment alternatives.

"In its constitution, the USG is made responsible for providing student programming," she said.

"Working with SPC would improve USG projects — I can't imagine anything better."

Unity party candidate for student trustee Courtney Macke said participation in USG can at times be a more practical learning experience than classes.

"I have learned more from my extracurricular activities than I do in 50-minute class periods," he said.

Single-brain protein possible link to treating human memory

Newsday

By manipulating a single brain protein, scientists at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in New York have enabled fruit flies to form a permanent memory quicker, a breakthrough that could one day lead to treatments for a number of human memory disorders.

The researchers say the flies aren't learning any faster, and they aren't any smarter. They're just consolidating long-term memory faster.

The flies need only one lesson, researchers said, to remember something that once required 10 lessons.

The study, to be published Friday in the journal Cell, tested a fly's ability to avoid an odor paired with a shock.

"It's the human equivalent of photographic memory," said Tim Tully, a senior staff scientist at Cold Spring Harbor and the lead investigator in the study.

"They instantly lock these memories in."

Ultimately, the hope would be to tinker with similar human genes that could help restore memory in people with mind-robbing disorders like Alzheimer's.

The study's finding was heralded by the researchers as a major breakthrough, a view shared by other experts.

Campus Lake to benefit from prairie restoration

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In an effort to beautify a barren strip of land and provide a botanical sample for study and wildlife habitat, volunteers will plant native prairie species west of Campus Beach Saturday.

The area, measuring 40 feet by 1,200 feet, was clear-cut by Egyptian Electric Co-op last August to prevent trees from tangling up power lines.

A group of people who use the Campus Lake path for exercising and enjoying nature and who were concerned about bicycling and skating safety presented a petition to SIUC to resolve the problem.

Many who signed the safety petition also expressed concern about the clear-cut area beneath the power lines. SIUC Administration suggested putting together a group that shared interest in the lake and surrounding woods. Friends of the Lake on the Campus was the result.

Friends of the Lake on the Campus, along with Egyptian Electric Co-op, the Illinois Department of Conservation, Saluki Volunteer Corps, SIUC Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports and SIUC Physical Plant Grounds Department joined their efforts to restore the area since December.

The area will be divided into smaller plots for planting, Edith Summey, a member of Friends of the Lake on the Campus, said.

"We'll disperse the people with the plants in the whole area so the seeds and the plants will be evenly distributed," she said.

Species to be planted include whorled milkweed, goldenrod, nodding wild rye, and coneflower. Participants will have a chance to win prizes donated by several area merchants.

Todd Fink, an Illinois Department of Conservation Region 5 natural heritage biologist, ordered the plants and seeds in December. He delivered them last week and they are in cold storage awaiting planting, Summey said. Summey said the planting may lead to future projects. "Through this activity, people will have the opportunity to identify themselves as being interested in lake improvement projects," she said.

Fred Sloan, emeritus professor of education, said the project will add to the already-beautiful campus.

"Overall, I think we have one of the most beautiful campuses in the world," he said. "Our landscaping, trees and vegetation is just something to marvel at."

Illinois and other Midwestern states once had long stretches of prairie. But as the impact and development of settlers increased, the prairies declined. Today, the "prairie state" of Illinois has less than 1/100 of one percent, or 2,000 acres, of actual prairie, according to Bill McClain, natural areas project manager for IDOC.

McClain said there were 22 million acres of prairie in Illinois in 1820.

"It was the prairie that made Illinois the rich agricultural state it is today," he said. "The black soil comes from the prairie."

Volunteers will meet at 9 a.m. Saturday at Campus Beach. Garden tools will be helpful and participants are encouraged to bring a snack or lunch.

For more information, call the Student Center Recreation Desk at 536-5351 or the Student Development Office at 453-5714.

Clinton agrees to sign tax-break legislation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—President Clinton Thursday agreed to sign a Republican-sponsored tax-break bill and angrily defended himself in a meeting with House Democrats against a charge that his reluctance to fight the GOP on all fronts leaves the impression he lacks conviction.

More than 150 congressional Democrats and some of the president's aides had recommended he issue the first veto of his presidency to reject legislation that includes a multi-million-dollar tax break for media giant Rupert Murdoch. That break was attached to legislation in the Senate that reinstates and expands a tax deduction for self-employed workers who buy their own health insurance. It permits them to deduct 25 percent of the cost of the premiums for 1994 and 30 percent this year.

Clinton said the legislation is "good for the country," because of the health-care insurance provision and for that reason he would sign it. But several Democrats had argued that Congress would have stripped

"(Clinton will) take the gloves off (and) set forth a positive vision for the country"

Bill Richardson

Democratic representative from New Mexico out the Murdoch tax break if the president had vetoed it and insisted on a clean extension of the insurance provision. They said he would be contributing to business as usual in Washington by agreeing to the bill.

Some House Democrats saw much political potential in vetoing the legislation and blasting Republicans for giving breaks to friends of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. Gingrich has a book deal with Murdoch's publishing firm, Harper-Collins, but he has said he opposed the break and noted it was sponsored by Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill.

The president was asked to veto the legislation at a White House session he held with four dozen House Democrats to discuss a wide range of issues. At the end of the session, Rep. Lloyd Doggett, D-Texas, told the president that the public perception is he lacks conviction and won't stand firm for his principles, according to two attendees.

The two described Clinton as exploding in anger, recounting controversial positions he has taken over the past two years and suggesting House Democrats who spent the last election cycle fleeing from him showed little of the conviction they were seeking from him.

But Clinton, attendees said, pledged that with the first 100 days of the GOP-controlled Congress over, he intended a more-focused, aggressive period in which to contrast Democratic ideas versus Republican ones. That process is billied as starting Friday with a presidential address in Dallas, and continue through April with extensive presidential travel and speechmaking and perhaps a primetime press conference next week.

One congressional Democrat said Clinton lectured the group that they ought to start defending him and standing together on principle to provide a united Democrat front.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," the legislator said of Clinton's burst of anger, which this Democrat admired as a sign Clinton was going to launch into a more-aggressive offense. Many Democrats have been uncomfortable with Clinton's strategy of accepting some GOP proposals, trying to negotiate on others, and rejecting selected ones only at key moments and on big issues.

Another congressional Democrat who was at the session, Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., said Clinton had "energized" the Democrats and he predicted he would "take the gloves off, set forth a positive vision for the country," and contest the GOP. The American people, he said, "are waiting for him to make his case."

Clinton Thursday left the politicking to his press secretary, Michael McCurry. He launched a pre-emptive move on House Republicans who were preparing to accuse the administration of stonewalling Republican requests for information for congressional oversight hearings and inquiries.

A roar for the Bear

The Washington Post

AUGUSTA, Ga.—Those low rumbling roars reverberating all across Augusta National Thursday could only mean one thing: Jack Nicklaus was bearing down the back nine, stalking birdies and the lead in the first round of the 59th Masters.

When this day of history—and some mystery as to how Nicklaus again managed to summon the old magic—had ended, the 55-year-old, six-time champion shot a 5-under round of 67. That left him only a stroke off the lead shared by three co-leaders: Phil Mickelson, the 24-year-old left-hander who many have said has the potential to be the finest American golfer of his generation, defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal and South African David Frost.

Nicklaus already is the oldest man to win a Masters, accomplishing that feat at the age of 46 in 1986. Thursday, his four-birdie, one eagle, one bogey total matched his best-ever start in this first major championship of the season, a score he had posted three times before on the opening 18 holes—including his second victory here in 1965, six years before Mickelson was born.

Mickelson was asked if one name on the leader board jumped out at him. He studied it for a while a few minutes after his round, then smiled seeing Nicklaus' name

CBS lambasts HBO remarks about Masters golf tourney

Los Angeles Times

Is Augusta National really the American Singapore?

That's what HBO dubbed it in a segment of its inaugural "Real Sports With Bryant Gumbel."

Frank Chirkinian, CBS' longtime golf producer who will be working his 37th Masters at Augusta this weekend, called the Singapore analogy ridiculous.

"How many domestics have they hung at Augusta lately?" he said.

Chirkinian was referring to the hanging in Singapore of Philippine maid Flor Contemplacion last month. She was accused of killing another Philippine maid and her 4-year-old charge, but some claimed the 4-year-old drowned in a tub, and that relatives then killed the maid in a fit of rage and framed Contemplacion, who wasn't given due process.

Singapore is also where American teen-ager Michael Fay was flogged last year.

Chirkinian appeared in the HBO piece, complaining about the Masters tradition of having the defending champion put the green jacket on the new champion.

He called the ceremony, which is conducted in the confines of the Butler Cabin away from the crowd, "sanitized," and said, "You can just hear the TV sets clicking off."

But after viewing the HBO piece written and narrated by Frank Deford, Chirkinian was complaining more about it.

"It showed a lot of the current tabloid mentality in television," Chirkinian said of the HBO show. "They went out of their way to say disparaging things."

Chirkinian, calling the Masters the best-run golf tournament in the world, acknowledged that it is run autocratically, adding, "But it's effective."

Chirkinian said the thing he would change first if he had more control would be expanding the coverage from nine to 18 holes.

"We've been ready to do 18 holes for 15 years," he said.

Also, he wasn't happy with the stuffed shirts at Augusta when, after last year's Masters, they told him to take Gary McCord off this year's coverage.

McCord's transgression, you may recall, was saying the greens at Augusta were so slick that they seemed to have been groomed with "bikini wax" and saying some bumpy ground looked "suspiciously like body bags."

During a conference call with reporters this week, Chirkinian was asked why he had not backed McCord as a matter of principle.

"How would you like to go back to management and the stockholders and the affiliates and tell them, for the sake of principle, we just lost the Masters?" he replied.

So instead of McCord at the 17th hole, it will be Jim Nelford, a Canadian commentator CBS uses occasionally.

No question the Augusta stuffed shirts are open to criticism, particularly when you consider how long it took before an African American was invited to the Masters. Lee Elder, in 1975, was the first.

But one good thing the stuffed shirts do is limit CBS to four 60-second commercial spots an hour. Normally on golf, CBS has 10 90-second spots an hour.

There are only two sponsors—the makers of a luxury car and an insurance company. No promos are allowed and no breaks for local stations.

Youth movement underway

Los Angeles Times

LONG BEACH, Calif.—There is a youth movement under way in Indy car racing.

In the first three races this season, no winner was older than 26. Canadian Jacques Villeneuve, the Miami winner, will turn 24 on Sunday.

Fellow Canadian Paul Tracy, who won in Australia, and Robby Gordon, last Sunday's Phoenix winner, are both 26.

Add to that group the name of Bryan Herta, 24, of Valencia, Calif., the surprise pole sitter at Phoenix, and you have the look of the future in the PPG Cup Indy Car series.

For years, the dominant drivers were A.J. Foyt, Mario Andretti, Johnny Rutherford and the Unser brothers, Bobby and Al, some of whom raced into their 50s.

Before they began to retire, a small wave of newcomers, notably Rick Mears, Bobby Rahal and Emerson Fittipaldi emerged.

Al Unser Jr. and Michael Andretti brought second-generation talents to the sport before their fathers called it quits, but hard as it is to believe, both are in their 30s, virtual old-timers on the circuit.

better are making key mistakes and we have to get that taken care of this weekend," he said.

For the Salukis to be successful this weekend, the team will need to have more pitching like McConnell's effort against EIU. The Saluki hurlers' current earned-run average of 6.44 is last in the MVC.

However, the Dawgs have been getting unexpected plate production from junior college-transfer Mike Russell, who has broken into the starting lineup with a batting average of .310. Russell now has SIUC's longest hitting streak at six games.

While SIUC has been struggling in conference play, Creighton has been on a tear. After losing their first league game to Indiana St., the Bluejays have ripped off five wins in a row and taken 10 of their last 11 contests.

Creighton's strength has been its pitching, with two pitchers in the conference's top six. Brian Fassbender is 4-1 with a 2.72 ERA, while two-time MVC Pitcher-of-the-Week freshman Drew Council is 7-1 with a 2.77 ERA.

Callahan said even though Creighton has the best record in the conference, SIUC is a lot better than last week's four losses to the Redbirds showed and the Salukis aren't ready to back down.

"We respect Creighton as one of the best teams in the MVC, but we certainly feel we are a much better team than the one that faced Illinois State," he said.

The action in Omaha begins on Friday with a single game at 3 p.m., followed by a doubleheader Saturday starting at noon. The series will wrap up with a single game set to begin at 1 p.m. Sunday.

O'Bannon top choice for award

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—UCLA's Ed O'Bannon is expected to add to his collection of postseason hardware at Friday's 19th annual John R. Wooden Awards presentation at the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

The UCLA senior forward, who helped lead the Bruins to a 31-2 record and the NCAA championship, is the favorite for the Wooden Award, given to the nation's best college player.

O'Bannon joins a list of finalists that includes Wake Forest point guard Randolph Childress, Michigan State guard Shawn Respert, North Carolina forward Jerry Stackhouse and Arkansas forward Corliss Williamson.

According to the award organizers, four of the top five finalists and most of their coaches are expected to attend.

time in school history in the 100-meter hurdles at WIU, despite taking second place in the event.

Morrison is joined by fellow sprinter Katrina Daniels and distance runners Jennie Horner and Deborah Dachler as leaders of the women's team.

Women's coach Don DeNoon said he likes his athletes' chances if SIUC's relay teams can come up with some strong finishes.

"I can see us being a serious contender in the relay competitions this year, winning maybe two, three or even four of the six races," he said.

"If we can do that, we should be able to bring home the trophy," DeNoon added.

The SEMOtion Relays begin today at noon. The relays will continue through Sunday afternoon, according to Hines.

RANKS FACING RANKS:

In the twin bill against Creighton, SIUC's hot bats will get one of their biggest tests to date with Lauren Kennedy taking the hill for the Bluejays. The senior pitcher is 16th in the nation and tops in the MVC with a 0.73 ERA.

MVC RANKS:

The Bluejays' and the Salukis' team batting averages of .324 and .321, respectively, are the top two in the conference. SIUC's individuals who strike the top of the MVC list are Daenzer with hits (36), Lis with doubles (9) and RBIs (24), and Knotts (7) with triples.

CARRYING THE LOAD:

Saluki ace pitcher Jamie Schutteck is 9-3 while the rest of the staff is 5-7, and with the MVC season underway Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer is running out of patience. Alternatives, including staff by committee when Schutteck does not pitch, are under consideration.

"It's time for someone to step up. We have no more patience in a sense," Brechtelsbauer said. "I mean, we're halfway through our season and we're not seeing what we need to see. We talked about all sorts of possibilities. In my mind, if we don't find anyone who wants to step forward, we may do it by committee."

SEWING UP DA GLOVES:

A strong correlation can be drawn between the vast improvement of the Saluki defense and the fact that the squad has won seven of its last eight games. SIUC fielders averaged 2.9 errors per game in their first 16 contests, but have limited themselves to an average of one mistake during each of their last eight games.

"They're playing incredible defense," said Schutteck, who lost games earlier this season due to a struggling defense behind her.

SEMO Relays today

Cinder squads set to test national field

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

SIUC renews its track-and-field rivalry with Ohio Valley Conference power Southeast Missouri State today when the Salukis cross the Mississippi River for the SEMOtion Relays.

Both the men's and women's squads will take part in the 14th annual event, which has attracted 20 teams from across the Midwest to Cape Girardeau for the three-day spectacle of strength and speed.

High-profile schools at the event include Missouri, Tennessee-Chattanooga and Western Kentucky, in addition to Missouri Valley Conference foes Bradley, Northern Iowa and Illinois State.

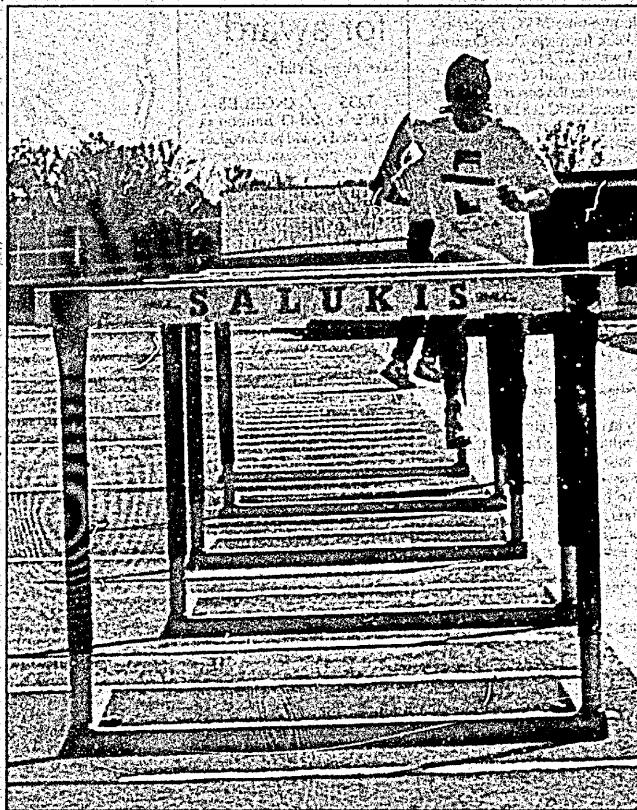

SEMO Director of Sports Information Ron Hines said the SEMOtion meet has grown into one of Cape Girardeau's largest annual events.

"It's an outstanding event that has developed over the years," he said. "A lot of great track teams have come and gone over the years, and we really try and set it up to be a first-class event."

"I don't have any definite facts on it, but the people at the bureau of tourism say this is the single biggest attraction of the year. There's not a hotel room (available) in town."

The Saluki men's team — anchored by distance specialist Neil Emberton, discus and shot putter Brian Miller and high jumper Cameron Wright — is fresh from competing in last Saturday's Hot Springs Classic in Arkansas.

Men's coach Bill Cornell said his team is gaining strength each week, and he's looking forward to getting a look at some of the MVC competition.

"We finished behind Northern Iowa and Arkansas, and we know we'll see them in the MVC championships," he said. "Illinois State will be at this meet, so we'd like to have another strong showing like we did at our place two weeks ago."

"Every week we get a few more guys off the trainer's table, so hopefully we'll be getting stronger approaching conference time."

On the women's side, SIUC has put together two straight first-place finishes at the Saluki and Western Illinois invitational.

Saluki softball waxing poetic

The MVC season is fresh underway;

Just as Saluki litters are pounding away;

But overall pitching hasn't supported the bats;

Let us look at it further as we go inside the stats.

TEAM IN THE RANKS: SIUC's bats are cracking lists around the country. The Salukis (14-10) are currently ranked 16th in the nation with their average output of 5.73 runs per game, while their team batting average of .321 ranks them 19th in the country.

INDIVIDUALS IN THE RANKS: Saluki junior center-fielder Christine Knotts is ranked second in the nation in triples with 0.32 per game. Sophomore catcher Becky Lis is ranked 13th with 1.05 RBIs per game and in doubles with 0.41 per contest. Sophomore shortstop Dawn Daenzer sits at number 23 in the country with her .451 batting average.

OPPONENTS IN THE RANKS: The Saluki's Saturday opponent, Creighton (21-6), is moving toward the national top 25 as the team received 14 votes in this week's poll. The Lady Jays' solid 1.34 team ERA ranks them 15th nationally in that category. CU's Missouri Valley Conference opener is today, hosting Evansville in a doubleheader while the Salukis (1-1 in MVC) travel to Wichita State for a twin bill today.

Men netters reeling, but women near MVC top

By Cynthia Sheels
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Battered by the tempest created by Tulsa's Golden Hurricanes and plowed under by Wichita State's Shockers, the SIUC men's tennis team suffered two losses last weekend in conference action.

Bojan Vuckovic was the only Saluki netter successful against both teams, defeating Simon Evelyn of Wichita and Jason Hie of Tulsa. Vuckovic's spring record is now 5-7 playing in the No. 3 singles flight.

The Canes stormed past the rest of the Dawg competitors, leaving the Salukis on the short end of a 1-4 loss.

Two games — against Mick Smyth in the No. 4 singles flight, and Kei Kamesawa in the No. 6 flight — were suspended due to withdrawals.

Saluki netters Andre Goransson, Alaf Merchant and Jack Oxler were defeated in straight sets by their TU opponents. SIUC's doubles pairs suffered the same fate, going 0-3 for the day.

Play against Wichita State produced the same results, as the Shockers sent a 1-6 jolt through the Salukis.

"Drake will be better... but if we play exceptionally well we have a shot."

Judy Auld
women's tennis coach

The losses against Wichita State and Tulsa left the Salukis at 0-4 in conference play, and 4-9 for the spring season.

The SIUC women's tennis squad now heads to Terre Haute, Ind., to take on Indiana State (ranked fourth) and Drake (ranked seventh) in the conference.

Sporting a 3-1 record, the Saluki women are currently one spot away from the conference's top spot. SIUC women's tennis coach Judy Auld said a win in both matches is crucial.

"In order for us to get one of the top three seeds heading into the conference tournament we need to beat Indiana State and then Evansville on Tuesday," Auld said.

"Drake will be the better of the two opponents this weekend, but if we play exceptionally well we have a shot."

Liz Gardner, playing in No. 2 flight singles slot, will be looking to extend her 13-game winning streak this weekend.

The only blot on Gardner's sparkling 15-1 record came from a nationally ranked player.

The Salukis are also counting on strong performances from Molly Card, Sanem Berksoy and Helen Johnson.

Each is carrying an 11-5 record for the spring season.

Showdown with Creighton on SIUC baseball plate

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sometimes the best way to turn things around is to get out town and away from everyday distractions — that is just what SIUC's baseball Salukis are doing.

The Salukis look to break a five-game Missouri Valley Conference losing streak when the ball club heads to Omaha this weekend for a four-game series against Creighton's league-leading Bluejays.

The Bluejays come into the contest with a 10-2 league record and a 20-9 mark overall, while the Salukis are 3-5 in the MVC and 13-13 on the year.

SIUC does have some momentum going into the weekend after pummeling Eastern Illinois 12-2 Wednesday.

The best news in that game for the Dawgs was the pitching of Mike McConnell, who went seven strong innings. McConnell allowed only one run on six hits against the Panthers.

Saluki baseball coach Dan Callahan said the team needs to put the string of MVC losses behind it and move on.

"I told the guys that I'm not down, and I don't want them to get that way either," he said. "They have to remember they are the same team that won three out of four at Bradley, the same team that gave 3rd-ranked Miami all they wanted, and the same team that won seven of eight during one stretch early this year."

Callahan said that during the recent skid the Salukis have been prone to beating themselves.

"Most of our problems were fundamental mistakes and mental errors," he said. "It bothers me when we work hard at doing things a certain way, and then the approach changes once the game starts."

"That kind of thing happened too often last weekend... at the plate, on the mound and in the field. Veteran players who should know
