The Campus 10-year Plan Planned University overhaul to transplant Greek Row, update student housing

Plan Highlights

- Building two new housing areas; Lake View housing will be residence hall styled, and Crest Hill apartments will be built in a duplex style.
- Demolishing Greek Row in the next 15 years and rebuild it where Southern Hills family housing is now is on South Wall Street.
- Connect Health Services to the Recreation Center to create more space and increase the efficiency. This plan would increase the number of services offered.

No certainties for costly ten-year plan

Plans to renovate SIUC's historic campus will be reaching final stages next week as officials present the Civitas land-use plan to the Board of Trustees at its April 12 meeting.

As a branch off the land-use project, Larry Dietz, vice chancellor of Student Affairs and Enrollment Management, has created a 10-year plan that takes an in-depth look at the future of University Housing, Student Health Programs, the Student Center, the Recreation Center, Rainbow's End daycare and transportation.

Recommendations from constituents of each area suggested changes like demolishing and rebuilding Greek Row, building two new living areas, tearing down Southern Hills, moving Student Health Programs and expanding the Recreation Center.

Civitas consulting firm was hired by the University last fall to analyze problems on campus and initiate solutions for addressing weaknesses in the University's land use.

The 10-year plan, which will be introduced with the land-use plan at the board's meeting, is a proposal to improve and make dramatic changes in the Student Affairs division of the University.

"What we have is our ideas of where we would like to be heading," said Dietz about the plan. "I think that we are beyond the dream stage. We're moving more toward the think stage."

Dietz said the most obvious changes will be made in the area of student housing. The current housing stock was built in the late '50s and early to mid '60s during the Delyte Morris era, and is now falling behind the times. Dietz said this is an issue that many universities across the state are facing.

"That housing stock, any kind of housing stock that was built then, is showing its age," Dietz said.

To meet the growing demands of students for better housing, future plans include building two new housing areas. Lake View housing will be residence halls styled basically the same as Thompson Point, and Crest Hill apartments will be built in a duplex style. Dietz said the market niche the University lacks is the apartment-style housing.

Apartment-style housing may update old-school look

ANDREA DONALDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

In May 1953, University officials, including former SIU President Delyte Morris, drafted a proposal looking at on-campus housing for the future.

Their plan included the current Thompson Point, University Park and Brush Towers and dreams of two additional housing areas.

As these housing areas age more with each passing year, University officials see a substantial need for improvement. As part of the campus' 10-year-plan for Student Affairs, housing officials and student representatives have evaluated those needs and developed a proposal for change that will be presented at the April 12 Board of Trustees meeting as part of the land-use plan examined by Civitas consulting firm.

The plan includes tearing down Greek Row and building new residence halls in that location, destroying Southern Hills family housing, located on South Wall Street, and building a new Greek Row and building apartment-style housing on the northeast end of campus.

Director of University Housing Ed Jones said the idea of creating a 10-year-plan has been a hot topic at universities across the state. The plan included the future of housing, health services, the Student Center, transportation, Rainbow's End daycare and the Recreation Center.

"A lot of schools across the country are doing the same thing," said Jones, explaining that campus housing is in a similar situation at other institutions.

Thompson Point housing was completed in 1962, University Park triads were built in 1965, Brush Towers was finished in 1968 and Greek Row construction was completed between 1960 and 1962. These buildings were all built with the notion that they had between a 30-year and 50-year-life span, which they are close to meeting.

"[In 1953,] they thought big and

If you give students what they want, the way they want and the quality they want, they'll pay for it.

Larry Dietz
vice chancellor for Student Affairs, commenting on a possible cost increase with the new Housing units that is why we have what we have today," Jones said.

For many years, University Housing has been deferring maintenance on buildings to keep them in livable conditions, but as time has passed, demands have been made to raise quality.

"We want to keep things affordable," he said, "but at the same time we can't nickel-and-dime our way."

The University will continue to put money in renovating the current living areas during the next 15 years. Some improvements have included new carpet and furniture in the commons areas. Officials also plan to replace all of the bedroom furniture during that period.

Though SIUC is currently slacking behind in providing quality housing, Jones, with the help of Undergraduate Student Government and Residential Hall Association members, has devised a plan to help the University come closer to reaching that vision.

The plan, which examined the next 15 years for housing, looks to build two new housing areas for on-campus living. First, Crest Hill apartments would be built in a duplex style and located either on Elizabeth Street, now occupied with University houses, or in the area of the parallel with Mill Street. The general Roland Burris; U.S. Rep. Rod Blagojevich, D-Ill.; former U.S. Associate Attorney General John Schmidt; and former State Superintendent of Education Michael Bakalis.

Democrat candidates are rounding the corner in the race for the 2002 Democratic nomination, while the Republicans are bucking in their stalls waiting for an announcement from Gov. George Ryan.

Possible Democratic nominees include state Rep. Lou Lang, D-Skokie, former Attorney

Mike Lawrence, associate director of the Public Policy Institute, said that despite a large number of possible candidates, the Democrats do not have a clear, strong contender, but added that as the race continues one may emerge from the pack.

Many Democratic candidates say to break a 25-year state tradition of Republican governors is to focus on the important issues and have a strong candidate emerge from the primaries.

"If the Democrats start talking about educating children and health care, Democrats will win an election — those issues transcend politics, they transcend party lines," Lang said.

Northern Illinois native Lang has a history of actively engaging debate in the Illinois House. Although he serves northern district, he refers to himself as the "Southern Illinois candidate." Lang said he has been endorsed by half of the House and many southern county chairman in what he refers to as "Poshard country."

Housing

construction would be done in three phases between 2004 and 2010, costing about $25 million. This housing would be available to undergraduate students.

Jones said he has looked at floor plans of apartments at other universities as models. A plan at Florida State includes four bedrooms, a living room, a kitchen and two bathrooms, while the another plan includes four bedrooms, a living room, a kitchen, one bathroom and a laundry room.

The second housing to be built, Lake View, would be styled similarly to Thompson Point residence halls. It would be built in three phases between 2005 and 2011 and located where Greek Row currently exists. The total construction would run about $31 million.

SIUC currently has 4,530 residence hall beds, and with the addition of apartments and new halls, it would offer 5,309 beds.

The housing plan also looks at potentially tearing down Southern Hills family housing and replacing it with a new Greek Row. The construction of the new greek housing would take place between 2004 and 2007 through outside funding such as money from national greek organizations. Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard said organizations have showed interest in funding new housing or renovation, but he would rather see a new Greek Row.

"There's no use in throwing good dollars into old buildings," he said.

To make up for the loss of family housing, Jones said the plan allows for the construction of 80, 3-bedroom apartment units at Evergreen Terrace, located on Pleasant Hill Road. This is slated to take place between 2004 and 2006 and cost about $11 million.

While the quantity of family and professional housing will be lost, Larry Dietz, vice chancellor of Student Affairs and Enrollment Management, said the quality would make up for it.

"We think that we would have enough space for those individuals in some of our other housing," he said.

Although the new housing, with the exception of Greek Row, will probably be funded through bonds, housing costs will be increased. Dietz said he is confident though that students want the better quality.

"If you give students what they want, the way they want and the quality they want, they'll pay for it," he said.

SIUC's $4,104 fee for room and board is clearly lower than that of its peer institutions and is far below the national average of $4,960 for four-year public institutions. Housing costs at the University of Illinois are $5,578, at SIU-Edwardsville they are $4,736 and at Eastern Illinois University they currently reach $4,596.

Even if SIUC raises room and board fees by 6 percent each year and other universities only raise it by 4.5 percent, SIUC will still barely be reaching middle ground.

Along with making improvements in student living areas, University Housing also looks to build its own new house. It wants to centrally locate all housing offices in one main building on campus. They are currently split up in different buildings across campus.

While Jones' major task was looking at the housing facilities, he also evaluated the living environment in the residence halls using the 1953 motto, "The fusion of living and learning." The housing mission is to provide "a high-quality, affordable living/learning environment that contributes to personal development and academic success."

"A dormitory is a place to eat and sleep," Jones said. "A residence hall is a place to live and learn."

The vision of University Housing is "to be recognized as the standard of excellence by which other housing departments are measured through expansive programs and services."

"We are not there," Jones said. "We are not close to there at this point."

But Jones showed confidence in University Housing's portion of the 10-year plan, saying it is feasible and will probably happen.

"I look and I think about the vision that has already occurred here and I think because of that past, I have confidence it will happen in the future," he said.

ALEX HAGLUND - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Josh Erickson speaks out to his supporters and curious onlookers at the free speech area of campus near the student center. Josh, whose name has been on signs and T-shirts around campus, revealed himself on Thursday afternoon, and talked about his experiences with Christ.

Josh revealed

DAVID OSBORNE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The mystery of Josh was revealed Thursday afternoon, though most of those in attendance were in on the secret. Josh Erickson, a junior in forestry from Wyanaet, stepped up to a microphone in the Free Forum Area and offered a short religious testimonial, speaking to a crowd of less than 50.

Nearly three-quarters of those on hands wore orange T-shirts emblazoned with the words, "I agree with Josh," identifying them as members of the Campus Crusade for Christ. Most of the rest represented the Vineyard Campus Fellowship and the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, co-sponsors of the event.

Fliers began appearing around campus earlier in the semester asking the question, "Do you agree with Josh?" Erickson said the fliers were deliberately vague so as to draw people in by their curiosity.

Erickson also wanted to avoid marketing the event as a Christian event.

"A lot of people have ideas what a Christian group is going into it," Erickson said. "I think that would turn people away if they knew it was a Christian group."

Erickson downplayed the lack of attendance, though he was expecting more to stop by and listen.

"Numbers aren't that important," said Erickson, "it's the message that's important."

Even the urging by the other members of Josh's group

Enigmatic speaker emerges from the shadows, speaks to small turnout failed to drum up any interest. Students in orange T-shirts stood in the Faner breezeway and on the sidewalks near the Free Forum Area telling passers-by "Josh is coming" and urging them to come hear what Josh had to say. Most walked by without comment, though some had jokes for the group. One student quipped: "I don't know who Josh is; maybe he's the Antichrist!"

One of those that did stop by, came strictly for entertainment. Joe Lasky, a junior in photography from Springfield, said he always comes down to hear "crazy" Christians preach.

"I was kind of let down today; there was no fire and brimstone," Lasky said.

Even with the low turnout, Erickson was pleased with the way the event turned out.

"I don't think a more detailed posting would have helped," Erickson said.

Numbers aren't that important, it's the message that's important.

Census flak far from over

Carbondale officials continue to pursue discrepancy in figures

MARK LAMBIRD
DAILY EGYPTIAN

An alleged severe undercount in student population will draw Census officials to Carbondale later this month to address the concerns of the city. City officials met with Census Bureau representatives in East St. Louis to discuss the problem Tuesday. During the meeting, Census officials said they are looking into several geo-coding errors across the state. Geo-coding errors result from numerical codes for states, counties or other designations not being properly entered into the computer.

Assistant City Manager Don Monty, among those who attended the meeting, said Census officials are coming to Carbondale to discuss the problem later this month.

Numbers for the 2000 Census released in March showed a decline of 6,352 people in Carbondale from the 1990 Census count.

Monty said the undercount was in census tract 113, which includes the SIUC campus. Tract 113 dropped in population from 6,729 in 1990 to a paltry 487 in 2000.

The United States Census Bureau uses a numerical code to enter information into computers to be processed. These numbers include designations for state, county, minor civil divisions, towns, tracts and blocks. Tracts and blocks are the smallest of the designations.

"Monty said the numerical code is most likely the reason Carbondale lost such a large amount of its population.

"The census uses numbers to enter data," Monty said. "It is easy to enter in a few numbers wrong and change which town will receive those people."

The neighboring town of Murphysboro had the opposite problem. The population of Murphysboro increased by 4,119 from 1990. Murphysboro City Administrator Gene Biby said the 50 percent increase is most likely an error.

Biby said Murphysboro will gain $120 per person or $494,280 a year. Carbondale stands to lose nearly $800,000 if the numbers are not fixed. State and federal moneys would be reduced from the mistake because they are usually allotted based on population. One area in particular is the motor fuel tax, which goes to improve infrastructure throughout the city.

Southern Illinois stands to lose overall from the latest census numbers. As a state Illinois experienced growth overall in the past decade but did not keep up with some others, so the state will lose a congressman.

Southern Illinois currently has three congressmen — Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, in the 12th district; David Phelps, D-Eldorado, in the 19th district; and John Shimkus, R-Springfield, in the 20th district. The 19th district is the largest congressional district east of the Mississippi River.

Scott Selinger, a member of the Illinois House Democrats staff, said it is too early to speculate which districts are going to lose out.

"In all likelihood the redistricting issue will go to the Illinois Supreme Court to be finalized," Selinger said.

Under the wire, USG approves election format

Archer drops 80 percent RSO requirement

CHRISTIAN HALE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Gearing up for the elections on April 18, Undergraduate Student Government scurried Wednesday night to implement a restructured constitution and a new election reform act.

Some concern regarding the number of signatures needed on candidate petitions was voiced by senators since the election reform act lowered the required amount, differing with the constitution.

The constitution requires 50 signatures for senate candidates and 300 signatures for presidential candidates.

The new Election Reform Act, drafted by USG Election

Commissioner Marty Obst, requires only 25 signatures for senate candidates and 100 for presidential candidates.

However, with implementation of the new constitution structure, followed by the approval of the election reform act, a possible problem with candidates not gaining enough signatures was avoided.

Thursday night was the first meeting for candidates to meet with Obst to obtain the list of rules that must be met and adhered to during their campaigns.

Some issues from earlier in the semester returned to the floor on Wednesday night, including USG President Bill Archer's 80 percent registration policy and the official return of Rob Taylor to USG.

An earlier issued policy requiring that 80 percent of each SIUC student group must be registered to vote in order to receive funding was struck down by Archer.

Shortly following Archer establishing the policy, senators and students voiced concern over the constitutionality of a student government president implementing such a policy.

Archer said the whole idea behind the policy was to raise student awareness that they had the power to change things, but apparently students didn't realize this.

"One reason I've eliminated the policy is because I didn't want whoever wins the election to use the policy to discriminate as to who received funding and who didn't," Archer said. "I didn't want selective enforcement to occur."

Selective enforcement of constitutional rules and guidelines is one of the allegations made by Taylor concerning his arrest and removal from the Feb. 7 student government meeting.

At Wednesday night's meeting, Taylor was voted back onto the senate. During the time between his removal and Wednesday night, Taylor attended every meeting as a proxy, sitting in the place of absent senators.

"It didn't have to be this way. It was an administrative problem. I think they are so arrogant and manipulative," Taylor said, regarding his removal and arrest.

He said he thinks certain members of the administration think they can intimidate students and keep the problems in-house so nobody can understand the problems plaguing USG.

"Having me hauled out of the Student Center in cuffs was an intimidation tactic saying to the student body 'You better fall in line,'" Taylor said.

Taylor was arrested following his refusal to leave a student government meeting after questioning why his name was removed from the roll call.

After some shouting and arguments broke out among senators, as well as the audience, Taylor was arrested for disorderly conduct and processed at the SIUC Police Department. He was released on his own recognizance.

The Jackson County State's Attorney's Office has decided not to prosecute Taylor's case. The Carbondale City Attorney's Office has said they are unaware of any case against Taylor.

Taylor has received notice that Student Development Judicial Affairs is requesting a hearing to understand the events that occurred on Feb. 7.

Cemetery Club a comedic look at death

Stage Co. play teaches lessons with laughter

If not hit by a bus or taken at 50 by an aneurysm, one may make it to old age with relatively fine health and quick faculties.

Yet death still advances. It takes your neighbor, robs you of your childhood or cohort without warning or steals your spouse of 30 years.

The "Cemetery Club" is an aging threesome who gathers at their husbands' graves every month. In the Stage Co.'s teeny-tiny theater space, the cemetery and the living room are adjacent. First in cookie-baking Ida's living room, the long-time friends tell stories about the time they met their husbands or the hi-jinks of part friends. Then in the cemetery, each one chats with her deceased mate as lighting illuminates the single actress, leaving the rest of the set in darkness.

The music of Frank Sinatra and Johnny Mathis, which plays between set changes, adds to the feel of the ladies choke-hold with the past. The premise is gloomy, but the play is comedy with few sad moments.

The Urge returns to give us some more

STORY BY GINNY SKALSKI

Making its eighth appearance at the Copper Dragon Brewing Co., The Urge will blast into Carbondale Sunday for a dynamic and energized performance.

The Urge's music, deemed "ska-core," combines punk, ska, reggae and even hip-hop at times to create songs that hypnotize concert-goers to become animated. Lead singer Steve Ewing transforms the crowd with his powerful voice.

Thrust into the national spotlight with its 1998 hit "Jump Right In," The Urge is recognized by their hits "All Washed Up" and "Brainless" off the 1995 album "Receiving the Gift of Flavor" and more recently "Too Much Stereo," the title track of the band's latest album.

The Urge energizes the audience with its lively performance. Sweat-drenched bodies collide as the crowd jumps and shoves each other in the aggressive pit the bard has become known for.

The band calls St. Louis home and began playing in Carbondale about 10 years ago. The Urge was called in to replace a band that canceled its gig at Hangar 9, according to James Karayiannis, general manager and promoter of Copper Dragon and Pinch Penny Pub and longtime fan of The Urge. The show ended up being the first performance the band did in front of a crowd.

THE URGE

Their shows are always real tight and put together. They're creative and every song they have has an original sound.

JAMES SZALAPSKI

Remaining true to its roots, The Urge continues to jam in Carbondale, where years earlier they would crash at house parties because they couldn't afford a hotel. The band frequently adds fans' names to the guest list whenever they see fit.

"If a fan has ever done anything for the band, the band pays them back," Karayiannis said.

Formed in the mid-'80s, The Urge is now made up of Ewing, trombonists Matt Kwiatkowski and Todd Painter, saxophonist Bill Reiter, drummer John Pessoni and guitarist Jerry Jost.

Frequenting at least six Urge shows, James Szalapski, a sophomore in music education from Chicago, said the band's personable interaction with the crowd

Rodney Crowell returns to his roots

'The Houston Kid' is both a celebration and lamentation of Texas life

JAY ARNOLD
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The roots music revival is to country music what the alternative movement was to rock. Some have called it alt country. One of the long-time standard-bearers of this movement is Sugar Hill Records. Sugar Hill operates out of offices in Durham, N.C., far from the bright lies of Nashville and the cookie-cutter assembly line music it produces. The best benefit of their placement and philosophy is the ability of artists to record albums without label interference.

One of Sugar Hill's latest releases is from the near-legendary Rodney Crowell, "The Houston Kid." Crowell has certainly earned his chops in the world of music. Regarded by many as a songwriting treasure, his songs have been recorded by a who's who of American music. A short list includes luminaries such as Johnny Cash, Willie Nelson, Jimmy Buffett, Rosanne Cash and The Oak Ridge Boys.

The album is a collection of 11 songs presenting a semi-autobiographical view of Crowell's first 20 years growing up on the mean streets of Houston. He refuses to turn a blind eye to subjects like poverty, child and spousal abuse, alcoholism, drug addiction and crime. At the same time, it wasn't always bad as he relates the joy in a greasy cheeseburger, skinny-dippin' and live rock-a-billy shows. In a Sugar Hill promotional flyer Crowell says, "This record isn't all about me, but it is definitely all about me and the people who grew up around me."

All the songs are quite good, at a minimum, and a number of them truly shine. Oddly enough, my three favorite songs are right next to each other in the middle of the album.

The sixth track, "I Walk the Line (Revisited)," stands out as quite possibly the most fun of the songs on this often-bleak album. Crowell tells the tale of scudding down a back country road with his dad and grandpa in a '49 Ford on an early-morning fishing trip and hearing Johnny Cash sing "I Walk the Line" on the radio for the first time. I'll save the real treat about this song for those who go and listen to it. It is worth every cent you pay for the CD, I guarantee it.

The next track, "Highway 17," is in marked contrast to its predecessor in both its tone and outlook. It's the story of a small-time hood who robs liquor stores and filling stations to support his "five kids and a wife with one dress." After jobs he buries his loot out on Highway 17. He gets pinched, does six years in Huntsville, Texas' toughest prison, and comes out a changed man in a changed Texas.

"U Don't Know How Much I Hate U" is one of the most enigmatically titled and cleverly crafted love songs I've heard in quite a while. Simultaneously lamenting and rejoicing in an ex-lover's qualities, Crowell give us an anthem to love lost.

To be honest, there are a number of twists and turns the entire album makes. It's hard to write about it without giving away the surprise, the big finish. This album is like 11 little "Sixth Senses." You'd love to let the cat out of the bag and reveal the big secret, but it would just ruin it for those you told. The best I can do at this point is suggest you go out, find it, listen to it and not tell your friends about it, except to tell them to go out, find it, listen to it and then talk about it with that elite circle that have heard it. Yes, it's that good.

With "The Houston Kid" Crowell is poised to solidify his position as a titan of roots music and stands shoulder to shoulder with other giants like Robert Earl Keen, Guy Clark, Steve Earle and the late, great Townes Van Zandt.

some artists their first on-stage experiences."

DJ Quest of Chicago radio station WGCI 107.5-FM will host the concert. After the rappers finish, an open mic will follow so even the audience members will have their opportunity to shine. Previous open-mic'ers have been asked to perform in the following year's show.

"I had to keep bringing back the open mic because it has been very popular since the first show," said Papillon, who will also appear on stage as a prelude to her second released CD, "Evolution of a Butterfly."

Munia Lee, a senior in business administration from Chicago, is familiar with rappers Mello and Don Papillon and is looking forward to Friday's concert.

"I've known Mello since I came here two years ago and he's gonna succeed. He works just that hard," Lee said. "He has a lot of different styles and anything he puts out, I listen to."

Mello started rapping at the age of 8, inspired by such rap pioneers as LL Cool J, Run DMC and Kool Moe D. Rap allows him to "be who wants to be and do what he wants to do," and lets him vent negative emotions.

"Instead of going outside to fight, I put it on paper. I can get paid for the way I feel instead of destroying something," said Mello, who recently released his fifth CD. "The only thing I'm going to destroy is the mic — verbal slaughter."

happy for his wife who adores acting.

"Anyone she can get on stage, she has fun," Hanes said. "It's great that there are places like the Stage Co. where she and all the gals can do things like this."

The "Cemetery Club" is less about death and more about those still living. Doris (Mary Beth Hileman) just can't move on. Promiscuous Lucille (Heather Holland) is relieved her philandering husband is in the grave and not alive causing trouble.

"At least I know where you are at night," she chides the tombstone.

When the widowed Romeo, Sam the butcher (Nick Earl), begins courting their club mate, Ida, the two scare him off, fearing the loss of togetherness for different reasons.

Christian Moe, whose namesake is on the University's Christian Moe Laboratory Theater, directs the play. Moe, an SIUC theater professor emeritus and former chair of the department, has written and/or directed hundreds of plays locally.

"It's a good portrait of middle-class New York women and their loss and regeneration," Moe said of his decisions to direct the play. "It's also an accurate portrait of widowhood, but it's not negative — not a downer."

Mary Beth Hileman, an Anna resident for 38 years, likes to joke that acting is her real job and working as a nurse in Union County Hospital is her hobby. From the age of seven, she entertained neighbors under blankets strewn over a clothesline. Hileman likes that the play depicts the sometimes ugly truths about the golden years, but does so with humor.

"You get in your 50s and you think about your spouse dying. What would you do? Some remarriage, some would never, just like these women," Hileman said. "They tell each other stories, and they've all heard them before, but we like hearing them again."

The "Cemetery Club," though hitting more cliques than poignant plateaus, still manages to resonate for people of all ages. Don teaches that clinging to the past can be deadly. Ida reminds that a new chapter must be written in life when one closes. The character Lucille warns that no one who lives a lie truly lives. Most importantly, it offers these lessons with laughter.

Last year 61 abused and neglected children were ushered into the court system in Williamson County.

Joanne Swafford knows all too well the pain these children feel. The Marion resident's personal experience with childhood abuse prompted her to become a volunteer Court Appointed Special Advocate three years ago and offer children the support she never had.

"No one stood up for me or protected me back then," Swafford, 56, said. "Now that I'm older, I can have the satisfaction of making a difference in just one child's life."

Advocates are trained community volunteers appointed by a judge to speak up for abused and neglected children in court. The first Advocate program began in 1977 as the brainchild of a Seattle judge, and more than 900 nationwide volunteers exist today.

The workers are strictly volunteers ranging from married couples and full-time workers to retirees and part-time students. The Williamson County program, the nearest Advocate service in Illinois, currently has 36 volunteers serving 55 children, according to director B.J. Pressley.

In recognition of Child Abuse Awareness Month, Pressley, Swafford and other volunteers are decorating a wreath with 61 lights to represent the children brought into the system last year. Blue ribbons, the symbol for child abuse awareness, will also decorate 30 of the candles to represent the children who received advocates.

The candlelight ceremony will take place on the steps of the Williamson County Courthouse, and the wreath will remain on display inside the courthouse until the end of the month.

Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard, who established the Poshard Foundation for Abused Children in 1999, will also speak at the ceremony and lauds the Advocate program as an invaluable asset for the area's children.

"It's an incredible organization, one of the best volunteer organizations concerned about the welfare of children that exists," Poshard said.

While the program serves as the main voice for abused children and has made important strides, Pressley is still not satisfied with the 30 blue ribbons — she wants to see 61 of them.

"We just didn't have enough volunteer for all of the children," Pressley said. "We're always looking for more volunteers who are committed and who can stay in there for the long haul."

The average length of a court case for an abused child is two years. During that time, the child often has multiple social workers, judges and foster homes. The volunteers are typically the only source of stability in the child's life.

Laurie Carver is one new volunteer working to provide stability on her first case. She became interested in the Advocate program after searching for some way to become involved in her community and decided that child abuse awareness was the perfect outlet for her.

"It's just a shame when we complain that we live in a horrible world and then not do anything about it," the 35-year-old Carver said.

After completing 30 hours of classroom training, Advocate volunteers observe courtrooms to become acclimated to the judicial process. Once they are assigned cases, Advocate sort through records, case files and family history as well as interviewing people involved in the child's life.

The main goal of the program is to place children in stable, permanent homes, a process that can take anywhere from several months to a few years. According to Pressley, volunteers often develop personal relationships with the children they represent which last long after a case is settled.

"Initially we're only required to see children once a month, but it doesn't take long before you're hooked on once-a-week visits," Pressley said.

Swafford, who has worked with a total of eight children, believes she has a slight advantage over those volunteers who have never experienced abuse, and she knows that her presence is a source of comfort to the children she represents.

"When they grow up, they'll remember way back then someone was on their side, and someone really cared about them," Swafford said.

Although she is tackling her first case, Carver already has a clear sense of purpose about what she is doing and who she is helping.

"If you do what you can in your own backyard or hometown, there's a greater effect on humanity," Carver said. "That's what (Court Appointed Special Advocate) does; it not only serves the children, but it makes people aware."

Honors ceremonies to recognize achievement

University awards certificates, scholarships

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Krisina Scott's goal will be fulfilled Saturday as she accepts her "Most Distinguished Senior" award from the Student Alumni Council.

"I figured there were a lot of people more qualified, but I wanted to try," Scott said. "It's been a goal of mine since I was a freshman. I wanted to leave a mark."

Scott is one of hundreds of students to be honored this weekend for University Honors Day and the Student Alumni Council Super Student Program.

Honors Day is a decades-old ceremony to honor students with high academic achievement. The main reception will take place from 2 to 3 p.m. Sunday in the Student Center Ballrooms.

The day is split by college into multiple ceremonies, each taking place at a different time and location. During the ceremonies, students are individually recognized with a certificate for their academic work.

Stephen Foster, associate director for Records/Recognition, is organizing Honors Day. Foster said students' names are listed in the program books and the colleges usually take the time to honor students in honor societies and the University Honors Program.

Foster said although he is unsure how long the event has been a part of campus, the importance of it keeps it a priority.

"We're recognizing what's most important and that's academic achievement," Foster said. "It's historically been a good day and it's a positive reinforcement of why we're all here."

Also part of the weekend is the newer Super Student Program, sponsored by the Student Alumni Council. The program began in 1986 to honor the top 25 seniors at SIUC and award two $500 scholarships to juniors.

The Student Alumni Council ceremony will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday in Student Center Ballroom D.

The requirements include a 3.5 GPA, active involvement in two Registered Student Organizations and part-time employment.

The senior requirements are similar, but focus more on community service and only ask a 2.75 GPA. All award-winners are selected by a committee from the Student Alumni Council.

Tuesday Ashner, assistant director of constituent relations for the Student Alumni Council, said the group began its Honors Day to recognize its peers. Conducting the ceremony during University Honors Day weekend made sense.

"It's students helping students," Ashner said. "Everybody would I prefer to be recognized by their peers than a suite like me."

Surveyors look to improve skills

Surveying in high demand

LIZ GUARD
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Tim Hejny went to class today, but to a class different than most at SIUC. Hejny, a senior in civil engineering from Joliet, was in class for three hours measuring the topography of land.

The land surveying program at SIUC, which is a specialization within the Civil Engineering Department, is the only one in the state that offers the 24-semester-hour coursework required to become a professional land surveyor.

The demand for land surveyors is as high as it's been in 25 years, which may explain why there is a waiting list to get into the program at SIUC. The job is in high demand because a building literally cannot be built without the services of a surveyor.

There are about 60 students enrolled in SIUC's program. The students have class each week and a lab session where they go out and get practical experience using the machines and surveying the land.

Thursday, a class of about 10 students from Roy Frank's class were working on a proposed project for SIUC. The students frequently work on proposed projects for free to gain experience in the field.

Frank, an associate professor in civil engineering and the lone professor in SIUC's surveying program, said the program has done several other service projects including work for the Carbondale Park District and the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

"We provide services for organizations and it gives the students first hand, real-world experience," Frank said.

The class worked from about 9 a.m. to noon at the SIUC rugby fields planning for a proposed football stadium.

"If they put in a football field, they'll build a road and a parking lot going to it, and we'll give them our measurements," said Ryan Lovelace, a graduate student in the surveying program from Carterville. "We also did work for a church in Goreville and gave them the surveying measurements so they could build and design."

Students in the program at SIUC got into the field for several different reasons.

"I got into it because I like being outside and I didn't want to work in an office," Lovelace said.

Josh Barrett was also interested in working outdoors, but knew there was money to be made in the field.

"I've already got about three or four jobs lined up for when I graduate," Barrett said.

"A lot of students have job offers after their sophomore year and employees are just waiting for them to graduate," Lovelace said.

Land surveying is a job for those who have a love for the outdoors, but it is not an easy one.

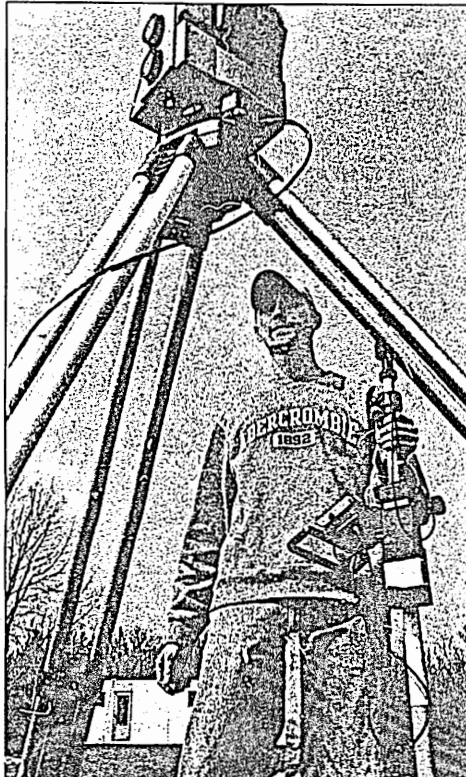

Math skills, geometry in particular and a vast knowledge of computers are essential. If pursuing a job in land surveying, one cannot expect the average nine to five work day.

"In the summer we work from daylight until the jobs done. Twelve hours is the typical work day for a surveyor,"

Lovelace said. "And if you're working at an hourly rate, which most jobs do, at 60 hours a week, you make pretty good money."

Making money is not the sole reason for going into the land surveying field. Sam Phillippe, a senior in civil engineering with a specialization in land surveying from Champaign, chose land surveying as a major because of a love for the work.

"My dad's a surveyor and I did a lot work with him over the summers. It's real interesting work," Phillippe said. "It's neat to drive by on a highway and say 'Hey, I helped build that,' or 'That building couldn't have been built without me.'"

Local church hosts World Hunger Sale

Officials in charge of sale hope to beat previous record

MATT BRENNAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The basement of the University Baptist Church was empty on Wednesday afternoon, but Saturday, the basement, a room upstairs and the yard will be crammed with items for the World Hunger Sale.

The sale will take place between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday, at 700 S. Oakland Ave., and is sponsored by Church Women United, a group of 16 Carbondale churches.

Some of the items being sold include plants, household items, furniture, clothes, toys, books, baked goods, jewelry and other things. Larger items in the sale include a color television, exercise equipment and a computer.

Last year the sale raised $9,400 for hunger and this year they hope to raise more. The sale consists of items donated from various people within the community.

"While we hope we reach a new level, a lot depends on the donations that come in," said Margie Parker, president of Church Women United and chair of the hunger sale.

The group has been sponsoring the sale for 27 years. For the first 15, the sale was at St. Francis Xavier Catholic church in Carbondale, but then the sale outgrew the church, so they moved it to the University Baptist Church, Parker said.

The sale will also include an auction at 10 a.m. Some of the auction items include Beanie Babies, an 82-piece Craftsman socket set and some assorted silver dishware items.

Parker believes that hunger is an important and worthy cause for donation.

"Famine seems to only be covered in the news when it reaches epidemic proportions," Parker said. "But it is an ongoing problem for at least one-fifth of the world's population. Even in the United States and in our own community, there are people without enough food to eat."

Some of the money is donated to Atuck Community Services, to buy snacks for their after school tutorial program for children.

"The children haven't eaten since 11 a.m., and by 5 p.m. they're starving," said DeLores M. Albritton, executive director of the program. "Every little bit is needed."

"We really would like to have a variety of housing available to students," he said.

"Most institutions of our size with locations like ours, house a higher percentage of the students. And I am interested in expanding that."

Although creating these new housing areas would increase room and board fees, Director of University Housing Ed Jones is confident students would pay the extra dollar for better quality.

"We want to go to medium price and high quality," he said. "That's our strategic plan."

SIUC room and board is currently the lowest among its peers, at $4,104. The national average for housing cost at a four-year public university is $4,960 and in the Midwest the average is at $4,715.

The housing plan, which focused on the next 15 years, also suggested tearing down the Southern Hills family housing located along South Wall Street. This area would be replaced by a new Greek Row.

Dietz said he is having a "Greek Summit" April 23 to bring together all of the greek organizations to discuss their interest in housing and get them involved.

Another major issue addressed in the 10-year plan is Student Health Programs, which is currently located in Kesnar Hall and Beimfohr Hall, both on Greek Row. The proposed plan would increase the number of services offered through SHP and potentially move the facilities near or connect them to the Recreation Center.

Cheryl Presley, director of SHP, said some additional programs would include expanded hours, a contracted dermatologist, updated training for nurses in wound care and a two-solid-week immunization clinic.

The largest proposal would be to connect health services to the Recreation Center to create more space and increase efficiency.

"We can't expand our services to broader services unless we have a place for students," Presley said. "We don't have space [right now]."

Connecting the two services would also integrate ideas like sports medicine and nutrition, making it easier to provide better services.

"It would just be such a nice way to provide the services for the students," Presley said.

Bill McMinn, director of Intramural Recreation Sports, said this type of structure would set SIUC ahead of competing universities. There are currently only a handful of schools working with such facilities.

"I think we would be on the cutting edge if we are fortunate enough to get support for the facilities," he said.

This proposal for expansion would add structure on the east end of the Recreation Center. The center was built in 1977 and provided for about 80,000 users. It expanded in 1989, and it is currently used by about 670,000 people each year. McMinn said with such high numbers, he sees a need for expansion.

"We're [much busier] than we've ever been," he said.

Presley said they will most like try to fund the construction with bonds, but they will also look at outside funds such as donors, gifts and grants.

"We're looking at the whole range," she said.

Additional changes on campus will include renovating and maintaining the existing buildings. Although there are no significant changes proposed for the Student Center, Dietz said there will probably eventually be discussion of adding a hotel area.

"I expect the issue will raise its head," he said.

For most of the structural changes of housing, Dietz said the University will look to bonds. And changes to SHP and the Recreation Center are proposed to be paid through bonds and eventually repaid through student fees.

"All of this is a plan," he said. "We don't have the money to do anything yet."

Though housing is a large issue, Dietz said it and health services weigh in about the same right now — both high priorities with great importance. He said the plans were strongly developed and will probably have pretty good outlooks.

"I think they represent some good thoughts on all this," he said, "and I think they are pretty reasonable plans."

GOVERNOR

the 1998 gubernatorial election, has announced publicly that he will not take another shot at becoming the state's highest authority.

Pohshard said to students in a journalism and political science class Tuesday that he believes Burnis will win the Democratic nomination because of the name recognition he accumulated serving as Attorney General. Burnis is an SIUC alumnus and lost the Democratic nomination to Pohshard in the 1998 campaign. This will be his third time to vie for governor.

Among other try-again Democrats, John Schmidt is working again to win the bid he lost to Pohshard in 1998. Schmidt, who was endorsed by the Chicago Tribune during the 1998 primaries, had an active agenda to restore the coal industry in Southern Illinois and a plan to provide statewide communication from Cairo to Chicago, both poles of the state.

In 1998, Bakalis also expressed interest in the office.

Bakalis has served as Illinois State Superintendent of Education and Illinois State Comptroller. He was appointed by former U.S. President Jimmy Carter to Deputy Undersecretary of Education in the U.S. Department of Education. He is presently on the faculty of the Kellogg Graduate School of Management at Northwestern University.

Blagojevich, the Chicago native who has a record in Congress for being tough on criminals and supporting gun control, courted Southern Illinois Jan. 23 to announce his possible run for governor. He stressed issues of importance to the southern districts such as equal education funding and increased tourism.

While many Democrats are emerging from the woodwork as possible candidates, Lawrence said the Republicans are waiting for Ryan to announce his future plans before breaking into the race.

Lawrence dismissed rumors that there were any Republican contenders at this time, saying that "Springfield is a town that loves rumors."

However, Lawrence said Lt. Gov. Cerinne Wood is interested in statewide office, and also pointed to Jim Ryan, who he believes would be a strong Republican nominee, but will likely not contend the governor if he chooses to run again.

And despite poll numbers that are not at an optimum level for Gov. George Ryan, Lawrence thinks he will run again.

"I think there is a possibility he could win re-election, but the poll numbers indicate he would have a tough time," Lawrence said.

Although Lawrence, who served as former Gov. Jim Edgar's press secretary, said Edgar has said publicly that "he would not rule out running for office," he does not expect him to run for governor.

Speaking to a class of SIUC students Thursday, Edgar did not rule anything out but said he did not have any plans at the current time. Edgar served as governor from 1990 to 1998 and left office with good pole numbers and a clean public record added you "never say never."

Candidates file for contention in the primaries December 2001 and Ryan does not have to make an announcement until then. In Aug. 1997, Edgar made the announcement that he would not seek re-election and his predecessor, former Gov. James Thompson, announced this in July.

Lawrence said that although many Republicans would like to see Ryan announce soon, the governor will likely hold off until late summer or fall.

Purdue expels student involved in weekend riots

MATTHEW MCGUIRE
TMS CAMPUS

Purdue University expelled a 19-year-old student who was charged with manufacturing an explosive device during the riots that followed the women's basketball team's 68-66 loss to Notre Dame in the national championship.

School officials also issued summons for eight other students to appear for disciplinary hearings in connection with the melee on the West Lafayette campus last Sunday night and offered rewards of up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone responsible for vandalism in the riots.

"We intend to do all we can to track down those responsible for these actions," said university police chief Linda Stump.

The expelled freshman engineering major was allegedly preparing to throw a Molotov cocktail at parked cars

Sunday, April 1, before police stopped and arrested him. He will have the opportunity to appeal the university's decision.

Five students and one former student were arrested after Sunday's riots with charges ranging from disorderly conduct to illegal possession of alcohol. Additional charges could come after police review videotapes made of the Sunday night's riots where revelers overturned cars, started fires and pelted police with rocks.

The university placed damage estimates at about $60,000, including $22,000 in damage to cars, $10,500 in broken university windows buildings and $10,600 in sports equipment when a shed was burned. The city of West Lafayette, which also managed by rioters, has not yet released damage estimates.

The university's recent actions follow university president Martin Jischke's promise to "take disciplinary action against any students known to have been involved."

Stanford University forging new pact with Nike

ANNE ROCHELL KNIGSMARK
TMS CAMPUS

Over the objection of a growing number of faculty members and students, Stanford University is negotiating a new, expanded agreement to have Nike provide its sports teams with equipment and uniforms.

In a letter sent Tuesday to Stanford President John Hennessy, more than 80 professors, students and other members of the university community said Stanford should not do business with Nike because of human rights abuses at its contractors' overseas factories, particularly in Southeast Asia.

Stanford Provost John Etchemendy said the university has researched Nike's labor practices and concluded the sporting-goods giant has made improvements. And Stanford has asked for an "opt out" clause in the contract, which means any student or coach may choose not to wear Nike apparel or use Nike equipment.

"We're making it so that no team and no coach will suffer financially from a student's decision to opt out," Etchemendy said.

However, the university might have to pay Nike for each student who opts out; Etchemendy would not say how much.

In Tuesday's letter, students and faculty members said "NIKE... has a well-documented record of human rights abuses in the past." It accuses Nike's subcontracted companies overseas of using child labor, paying inadequate wages, sexual harassment, forced overtime and firing union organizers.

"Does that matter?" the letter asks. Nike's Web site says the company has a "code of conduct" that its contracted factories are supposed to follow or be subject to fines. And the company says it sends independent monitors to the factories to ensure safe and fair working conditions.

Stanford sophomore Lauren Dietrich, who plays lacrosse, said she's not satisfied with the "opt out" clause. She thinks it should be reversed.

"Why do we have to opt out? I feel like students should be able to opt in if they want to wear Nike," she said. She'd like to opt out, but feels uncomfortable wearing a uniform that differs from those of her teammates. She said she may simply cover all the Nike "swooshes" on her team clothing.

"I hope the university actively promotes this option," Dietrich said. "The swoosh represents Nike and all its practices, including its labor practices, which are questionable. Putting it next to the Stanford name on the uniforms links the two."

Under the new contract, Nike would provide all but one or two of Stanford's 35 teams with clothing and equipment, all bearing Nike's logo, the swoosh. The university is negotiating for one overall agreement, instead of allowing teams to negotiate individual contracts that, at other schools, are lucrative for the coaches, Etchemendy said.

"This has nothing to do with advertising for Nike, from our perspective," Etchemendy said. "The advantage of this contract is that it provides us with equipment for our smaller sports, which we wouldn't be able to equip otherwise."

Stanford received praise a year ago for becoming the first school with major sports teams to empty its arenas of corporate advertising. But some advertising is needed to offset costs, Etchemendy said. So its student athletes will continue to wear shorts, jerseys, socks and shoes adorned with the Nike swoosh.

Nike has said a winning athlete wearing the swoosh is its best form of advertising.

"The Stanford drama department sells advertising in its programs," Etchemendy said. "Athletics sells ads in its programs as well. We try to make advertising unobtrusive, but there are trade-offs. It's a source of revenue."

Nike is one of several American companies that have come under criticism in recent years for manufacturing goods overseas under allegedly unhealthy and cruel conditions. Nike has said it has taken steps to improve conditions in its factories. Nike has 25 employees who monitor activities in its contracted factories, compared with one or two at other major athletic apparel and equipment companies, Etchemendy said.

Dietrich and the others who signed Tuesday's letter would like Stanford at least to take steps to ensure Nike operates "in a fashion consistent with the values of the university." For example, more than 200 colleges and universities have joined one of two non-profit groups that monitor overseas factories. Stanford has not joined either and does not plan to, Etchemendy said.

Lack of affirmative action has not hurt California admissions

CARRIE STURROCK
KNIGHT-RIDDER TRIBUNE

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — The percentage of minority students admitted to the University of California has nearly reached affirmative action levels, according to figures released Tuesday. In addition, the system admitted 10 percent more Californians than last year.

Of the students the UC system admitted for the fall 2001 freshman class, 18.6 percent were black, Latino, Chicano and American Indian. That's a percentage point increase over last year and just shy of 1997's 18.8 percent, the last time the university used racial preferences in admissions.

UC officials believe outreach efforts and a new program that admitted the top 4 percent of each high school regardless of students' SAT scores may have played a role in the increase.

Asians are not considered underrepresented because of their high numbers. Although admissions and enrollment figures tend to correspond, the makeup of the freshman class won't be known until classes start in the fall.

"We're especially pleased with the high increase in underrepresented students who were admitted," said Dennis Galligani, associate vice president for the UC system student academic services. "Certainly we'd like to believe the investment in our outreach efforts is paying off."

Such increases in underrepresented minorities are not true of the university's most selective campuses. While UC Berkeley saw underrepresented minorities increase to nearly 16 percent of the total number of admitted freshmen, the percentage lags behind the 1997 level of 22 percent.

Overall, the UC system admitted 46,130 students who are Californians, a 10 percent increase over last year. Nine out of every 10 admitted freshmen are Californians.

For the first time, the UC system admitted the top 4 percent of each high school in the state regardless of the students' SAT scores as long as they had taken the required courses. While the program appears to have increased applications 13.6 percent among underrepresented minorities at participating public high schools, UC officials haven't analyzed whether it impacted admissions increases.

"I do believe the (program) is a piece of it," Galligani said. "I don't think it's any one thing but a combination."

In 1995, UC regents banned the practice of using racial preferences in college admissions. Voters outlawed it one year later when they approved Proposition 209.

Since then, the university has initiated or proposed a number of programs aimed at diversifying its eight undergraduate campuses.

U. of Arizona president donates $1,000 to riot information fund

MATTHEW MCGUIRE
TMS CAMPUS

University of Arizona president Peter Likins is donating $1,000 to a reward fund to help catch the rioters from Monday night's melee after the Wildcats lost the NCAA men's basketball national championship to Duke.

The money is going a Pima County organization that fields calls from tipsters and offers rewards if the call results in an arrest and indictment.

The university's news office has already received one call from a tipster looking to share videotape of the riots with university authorities, said university spokesman Vern Lamplot. Since the riots took place off campus, the call was referred to the local police.

Police have already arrested 17 people involved in the riots, including seven students. Cost of the damage to 22 businesses is estimated at $20,000, stemming from Monday night's rampage, when revelers made their way through the off-campus nighttime stretch breaking store windows and overturning cars. At least three vehicles were set on fire.

Police fired stun grenades and rubber pellets into the crowds - estimated at 2,000 - that began to wreak havoc just off the Tuscon, Ariz., campus.

The seven students who were arrested will not be subjected to disciplinary action from the university since the fracas took place off-campus, beyond the university's jurisdiction, according to associate dean of students Alexis Hernandez.

Dahm trying not to break

Creighton pitching staff looking to clean up act in weekend set with the Salukis in Omaha, Neb.

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Things haven't turned out the way Creighton baseball head coach Jack Dahm envisioned this season.

Last year, his squad took the Missouri Valley Conference by storm, winning 21 of 24 games en route to finishing third place in the conference with a 38-23 record overall.

But as Dahm's Bluejays (10-16, 3-9) prepare for the Salukis (12-17, 6-6) in a four-game series, which starts at 2 p.m. today, he worries about his pitching staff.

"Our pitching is really struggling," Dahm said. "I guess in the last 13 of 14 games, they have given up at least nine runs."

The Bluejays' pitching staff has an 8.70 ERA. Last year, they pitched 4.97 as a team, so Dahm's concerns are without warrant.

"We have 31 wins returning from our pitching staff last year," Dahm added. "They're just not throwing the ball very well right now."

Namely, Dahm was looking to senior pitcher Dan Gooris, a Skokie native, to give him some quality innings

SALUKI BASEBALL

• SIU PLAYS A FOUR-GAME SERIES VERSUS CREIGHTON UNIVERSITY IN OMAHA, NEB., STARTING TODAY AT 2 P.M. SATURDAY'S DOUBLEHEADER BEGINS AT NOON AND SUNDAY'S FINALE STARTS AT 1 P.M.

this year, Gooris (0-1) pitched to a 7-win 4.24 ERA performance last year. But he's struggled thus far to a 10.20 ERA in 18 innings.

"He's nowhere near performing how he did a year ago," Dahm said. "We just hope he can get that turned around. Mechanically, Danny is doing some things wrong, and he doesn't feel too good about it. He's battling those two things right now."

Gooris is projected to start against Josh Latimer (2-3, 3.69 ERA) today. The remainder of the projected starting pitchers were not known for the Salukis, but Bluejays Cory Slining (1-3, 6.32 ERA), Tom Oldham (1-1, 7.84 ERA) and Prentice Lofstedt (0-2, 12.00 ERA) are slated for starts in the remaining three games.

With Gooris' struggles, Dahm is in a bind.

"We really don't have a staff ace," Dahm said. "Nobody is really performing well. I think our entire pitching staff has lost their confidence."

With the weekend series kicking off a seven-game homestretch for the Bluejays, Dahm is looking to the series as a time to rebound.

"We're looking forward to this weekend," Dahm said. "We're looking forward to being home. Hopefully, we come out and play a little bit better."

His time in the limelight

Fifth-year senior making big contribution to men's golf team

JENS DEJU
DAILY EGYPTIAN

It has been five years since Mike Hudek, the senior member of the SIU men's golf team, first arrived in Carbondale, and he's loved every minute of it.

"It's been a great experience, something that I'll never forget," said the senior from Frankfort. "I'm really glad that I had an opportunity to play a sport down here and be in some of the places that I probably wouldn't have had the chance to go to if I wasn't playing."

Although Hudek, who redshirted his freshman year, has been a Saluki for so long, it is now that he is making his biggest contribution to the team, and will look to continue to do so this weekend at the Ball State Invitational in Muncie, Ind.

"He didn't play much earlier on. He would maybe go on one tournament here and there, but that was about it," said SIU head coach Leroy Newton. "Now he's like our No. 3 or [No.] 4 guy. He's hitting some 74s, 75s and 76s, which he didn't do in the past."

Newton said what has pleased him the most about Hudek is that he never gave up during all the time when he wasn't playing.

"I wasn't playing bad, but I was always missing qualifying by one or two shots," Hudek said. "Over the past four or five years I've been down here, I always played worse in the fall. I've never played really great in the fall, so in the springtime, I usually come around. It was frustrating to sit at home, but I'm happy everything's working now."

Newton said Hudek has been playing better recently than he had been and he is expecting him to be a big contributor at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships April 30 in Silvis.

"There's one tournament I can't go on because of class, but I've got two left, this one coming this weekend and conference," Hudek said. "My confidence is pretty high right now, I hope it carries over into the conference and I play well there."

In addition to playing better, Hudek said he has also enjoyed the trips more and become closer with his teammates.

"Our spring break trip to New Orleans was a blast," Hudek said. "It was the first time that we've gone on a spring break trip since I've been here and it was probably the most enjoyable experience that I've had down here."

During his time here, one thing he has always done is been a leader and help his teammates out.

"He's been a good asset to the team, helping out all the younger players and letting them know what to expect and what goes on just because he's been here so long," said sophomore Kurt Pfaff. "He can give us advice on what's going on, what to expect at a tournament and he's just a good guy to have on the team."

"While he may be a respected leader on the team, Hudek can't escape the old-man label that comes with being the elder Saluki."

"We kind of hassle him about that, how he's been here for so long. He's been here for like what, five or six years," joked Pfaff. "We always give him crap about that, so it's always fun, he's always giving stuff back to us too."

Men's tennis hit road after 10 day break

JENS DEJU

It has been 10 days since the SIU men's tennis team took the court against someone other than themselves.

That stretch will finally come to an end this weekend as the Salukis travel to face Missouri Valley Conference rivals Wichita State University Saturday in Wichita, Kan., at 1 p.m. and Southwest Missouri State University Sunday in Springfield, Mo., at 10 a.m.

The players are concerned about how the layoff will affect their play, but they are confident they will be able to work through it.

"That's a factor," said senior Val Epure. "It's probably going to affect us a little bit, but Wichita State is really going to be the toughest since it's going to be the first one. Once we get back in it, into the rhythm, it's going to be a lot easier."

The Salukis (2-7, 0-1 MVC) will be looking for their first conference win of the season against two teams that are no pushovers.

"Wichita State is a really strong team," said SIU head coach Missy Jeffrey. "They've won the Missouri Valley Conference more than any other team, 10 times more, they've won it 20 times."

Even though the Shockers have that successful a history, Jeffrey is not worried because she feels her players will be able to exploit their weaknesses.

"We've got a good chance if everyone plays really well and take advantage of any opportunities they have," Jeffrey said. "We cannot let any matches slip away, it's going to be that close. If we can win any matches, we've got to win those and we can't let any opportunities slip away."

An interesting sidenote to the match will be a rematch between SIU's Peter Bong and Wichita State's Gustav Peterson.

The two met in January at the MVC Individual Championships in the consolation bracket during Bong's first collegiate tournament.

While Peterson came in with all the credentials, having defeated the 4th and 82nd ranked NCAA players, as well as the 36th and 191st ATP Tour players, Bong came away with the win.

"It was a great win for Peter when he played him before," Jeffrey said. "We had scouted him and he didn't know anything about Peter. Peter played him perfectly and the guy's obviously going to remember him, because I'm sure he hasn't lost too many matches since."

Opp named head coach

SIU women's basketball can move forward with permanent head coach

JAVIER SERNA
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

After weeks of uncertainty, SIU Athletic Director Paul Kowalczyk removed the interim tag from SIU women's basketball head coach Lori Opp.

Opp was able to breathe a sigh of relief Wednesday night when Kowalczyk informed her of the decision via a phone call.

"Of course, it was a huge relief," Opp said. "We've been in limbo for quite some time, so it's nice to go forward with some things. It's good to finally know and go on like I'm actually the head coach at Southern Illinois."

After former head coach Julie Beck's resignation last August, Opp was given the position as an interim. Opp was among three possible candidates for the job including Keila Whittington, an assistant coach at the University of South Alabama, and Shelly Etheridge, head coach at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

While Opp's 2000-01 Salukis went

7-20, South Alabama had a 12-13 campaign and Division-II Missouri-St. Louis went 14-13. Opp was the only candidate with head coaching experience at the Division-I level.

"I knew everybody else had as much as a chance as I did. We did the best we could as a staff this year," Opp said. "We made some strides and we were competitive in our games. I think our players are doing the right thing in the classroom and as people. Hopefully all those things contributed to me being selected."

And Opp, who has carried out head coaching duties since the season ended, will no longer be disadvantaged in her recruiting efforts.

"It was hurting our recruiting," Opp said. "Anytime you're unable to tell the young ladies you're recruiting whether or not you're going to be here, I think it's real difficult. And of course, with the announcement there was a national search, they were very aware of the fact that it was uncertain."

"I'm looking forward to the opportunity to hopefully turn things around and do much better than we did this year."

Softball tries not to make too much of weekend opponent

Second-place Salukis battle first-place Illinois State in Normal three-game series

COREY CUSICK
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

Hey everybody, the Saluki softball team is playing the Illinois State No-Names this weekend.

At least, that's the way they're looking at it. After disposing of third-place University of Evansville Wednesday afternoon, the second-place Salukis bounce right back for a road trip to battle first-place Illinois State University Saturday and Sunday for a three-game Missouri Valley Conference series.

But the Salukis (23-9, 9-1) are going to treat the Redbirds (19-9, 8-0) the same as they would 4-7 Indiana State University — or anybody else for that matter.

"To me, I'd rather they be nameless, faceless opponents and we'll just go out like a machine and get our job done," said Saluki head coach Kern Blaylock. "If we put too much pressure on it, that's when you get into trouble."

The Redbirds have won 12 of their past 14 contests, with the two setbacks coming to then-No. 2 University of Iowa March 27.

But the Salukis are hot as well, winners of 13 of their past 14 ballgames, while senior hurler Erin Stremsterfer hasn't been defeated since her March 9 loss to then-No. 4 University of California.

Stremsterfer and the staff will be tested against the Redbirds' prolific offense, which boasts five players hitting above the .300 mark, with senior April Schemmann leading the way with her MVC-best .419 average and 24 RBIs. Junior Shae Wesley ranks second in the Valley with her .349 mark.

The No. 1 offense clashing with the No. 1 pitching staff in the league should provide a competitive series.

Stremsterfer leads the league with her 17-2 mark and 214 strikeouts, while sophomore Katie Kloess and freshman Mary Jaszczak have contributed:

The Redbirds are led on the mound by Nicole Kurth and her 11-2 mark with a solid 1.56 ERA.

But the Salukis are not doing anything special to prepare for the undefeated Redbirds.

"We're just going to take it exactly like we played the [Evansville] game," Stremsterfer said. "Just come out hard and battle, and if we don't get runs in the first couple innings, we'll keep battling to the end."

Stremsterfer said the Salukis should be fired up to play a team the caliber of the Redbirds this weekend, but must maintain that same intensity against every Valley opponent.

"You just take care of everybody, because otherwise somebody's going to come up and get you at the last minute," Stremsterfer said. "No rollercoasters."

Mother to daughter, wood to carbon: Auld has seen women's tennis evolve up close

CLINT HARTING
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

Judy Auld has seen the sport of women's tennis evolve immensely in her 27 years as head coach of the Salukis.

Respect for women's tennis was hard to come by in the early 70s, until legends such as Billie Jean King transcended the sport.

Now women's tennis has garnered more respect and popularity than that of the men's today.

Wooden rackets, simple in design, have evolved into high-tech carbon fibers, and titanium weapons utilized in today's game.

Women players have evolved from fundamentally sound technicians, to a more modern athletically strong force.

All of these evolutions of the game have taken place during Auld's tenure. But one particular change may have started to evolve right in front of Auld.

A night in 1983, one of Auld's inaugural players Sue Briggs was inducted into the Saluki Hall of Fame. Briggs was being inducted based on her remarkable base-line savvy, poise, and Saluki stats, which includes the women's tennis career best singles winning percentage of .779.

A one-year-old baby was in attendance that evening as Auld reheard the accomplishments of her player.

This baby girl, Sarah Krismanits, was the daughter of Sue. Just as Sarah grew, and evolved, so did the sport of women's tennis.

And 18 years after her mother's induction, Auld now coaches Sue's daughter, Sarah. Sarah, now a freshman at SIU, provides Auld a first-hand look at the evolution process in action.

"It's uncanny," Auld said referring to the resemblance of both mother and daughter. "Their mannerisms, their looks, even their walk."

Sarah said despite her and her mother's resemblance, her style is different.

"She helped me develop my two-hand backhand, and we were both taught by my uncle, but I am physically stronger than my mom was, or so she tells me," Sarah said.

This newly evolved type of player like Sarah has been developed to handle the fast-pace changes of women's tennis, as Sarah's mother points out.

"I don't think our games are that similar. My strengths were battling the baseline, while her strengths deal with power," Sue said. "She hits the ball harder than I did."

Sarah, although almost identical in looks to her mother, has formed to fit into the modern state of women's tennis.

Who would win if mother in her prime, wooden racket and all was to face the strong-serving, hard-hitting carbon racket wielding daughter in her prime?

Where would one of the only people to coach both mother and daughter place her money?

"Well they are two different types of players, I can't really say. Sarah has a little bit more versatility as far as serve and volley, Sue was just solid in a lot of different areas," Auld said.

Sue doesn't believe she has ever completed a match against her daughter, citing her coaching instinct as taking over.

"Maybe it's good that we don't know," Sue said.
