Motorcycle Restriction Criticized

Motorcycle Decision Delayed Pending Formal Statement

A drastic limitation on motorcycle operation on the Carbondale campus will cause local economic chaos and damage to student morale, Bob Drinan, student body president said Friday.

He discussed prospective action while top SIU administrative officers discussed possible restriction of cycle operation at a meeting in Edwardsville.

Attending the meeting were President Delyte W. Morris and Vice Presidents Robert W. MacVicar, John S. Rendleman and Ralph W. Ruffner.

Drinan said that placing restrictions on cycles "would cause students to feel that a grave mistake had been made, and more problems would be created."

"I don't think that the students would in any way cause riots," Drinan said, "but more problems will be created than the motorcycles have ever caused."

"Because action on cycles is being taken during the summer when the majority of the students are not on campus, I feel that student apathy will be increased," he said.

"The students will feel more than ever that they have no voice in the affairs that affect them most."

Drinan said that a decision in the summer lacks the full investigation that it requires. Any decision will be arbitrary, and not based on student opinion, he said.

He said 2,000 students have signed a petition stating they are against restriction of motorcycle operation. He also said that of 105 questionnaires tabulated by the student government, only six students felt that more restrictions should be placed on cycles.

More than 300 questionnaires have not yet been tabulated, but they tend to reflect the student opinion that has already been recorded, Drinan said.

"I strongly feel that a decision at this point to restrict cycle use would prove insensitive to student opinion," Drinan said. "I believe a more significant investigation has to be made considering the full needs of the students."

One question in the partial tabulation was whether motorcycles should be subject to the same regulations as automobiles. Drinan said only six answered "yes," and 99 "no."

Festival on the Green Today Offers Treats for All Ages

"Entertainment Under the Stars," featuring the SIU show wagon, with a hypnotist, magician and members of the Summer Music Theater will be the highlight of the annual Festival on the Green at 8 p.m. today at Southern Hills.

Activities have been planned by the family housing office and the Department of Recreation and Outdoor Education beginning at 2:45 p.m. when a fire truck and clowns announce the opening.

The scheduled events will include a bike and wagon decoration contest at 3 p.m., a firetruck water spray for the youngsters at 3:15 p.m., and playground games and penny carnival booths that will open at 3:45 p.m.

McCoy Says Photocopying by Libraries Doesn't Cheat Authors Out of Royalties

A demand by publishers and authors to include restrictions on photocopying of material by libraries in a revised copyright law is pointless, Ralph McCoy, director of libraries, said.

The publishers and authors charge that they are being cheated out of royalties and commissions by extensive photocopying of materials by libraries for students and faculty members at American colleges and universities.

They have demanded restrictions be set up on the amount of material photocopied and they have suggested a complicated royalties system in which they would be paid for any material copied.

"The publishers are barking up the wrong tree," McCoy said. "The things they charge are simply not the case."

McCoy said that for the most part the materials copied in most college and university libraries across the country are from professional and learned journals where there is no money to publishers or royalties to authors involved.

"There is very little copying of books that would interfere with the sale of any particular book to a student or faculty member," McCoy said.

McCoy pointed out that the nation's librarians and publishers have a "gentlemen's agreement" limiting use of the material from books.

"It is just a gentlemen's agreement and has no legal basis," McCoy explained, "but I'm certain all librarians live up to it as carefully as they can."

He pointed out that even if a library refused to photocopy a chart or a table or a couple of pages from a book for a student it doesn't assure the publisher that the student will go out and buy the book.

The student probably would copy it in long hand or even possibly mutilate the book by tearing out the material he wants.

McCoy said that the development of photocopying equipment for use by libraries has probably cut down damage and mutilation to library materials by 85 to 90 per cent.

"There will always be mutilation, unfortunately," he said, "but there is a noticeable drop in it in our periodicals and journals since we began photocopying service."

He pointed out that photocopying makes it possible for students to get complete and accurate copies of materials they need without running the risk of making errors which often happens when long passages of complicated material

Meeting Outcome Will Be Drafted

The administration's decisions on motorcycle regulations won't be known until early next week.

President Delyte W. Morris and three of his operating vice presidents met until 5:50 p.m. Friday on the Edwardsville Campus. News media waited for a decision on the motorcycle issue.

After the meeting ended, the only decision announced was that Ralph W. Ruffner, vice president for student and area services, would prepare a formal statement on motorcycle policy.

"We hope to be able to release it early next week," a University spokesman said.

Morris, Ruffner, John S. Rendleman, vice president for business affairs, and Robert W. MacVicar, vice president for academic affairs, met Friday in Edwardsville.

One of the issues was whether University regulations on motor vehicles should also incorporate motorcycles. The effect would be generally to ban their operation by students who reside within a two-mile radius of campus.

The vice presidents met in both morning and afternoon sessions at Edwardsville, with the afternoon session starting about 3 p.m. and continuing for nearly three hours.

The Student Government Office had a copy of a letter from Rendleman to Paul Isbell of the Services Division.

In it, Rendleman wrote, "Upon my recommendation, President Morris has approved the classification of motorcycles as motor vehicles and the application of the motor vehicle regulations beginning with the fall term, 1966."

"I realize that this is contrary to the recommendations of the Vehicle Traffic and Safety Committee. However, the Traffic and Safety Com-

2-Day Conference Scheduled For Expert Briefing on Nepal

SIU faculty members and others interested in Southern's forthcoming education development program in Nepal will be briefed by experts here next Thursday and Friday.

SIU has a contract with the agency for International Development to help Nepal bring about a strong program of education in the mountainous Asian kingdom. John O. Anderson, University director of the Communications Media Services, will be chief of party for the education team to be recruited.

First session of the two-day conference, starting at 9 a.m. Thursday in the University Center, will feature Leo Rose of the University of California, an authority on the Nepalese political system, and Hugh Wood of the University of Oregon, a close student of the history and educational development of Nepal.

Other visitors scheduled to appear at the conference include John Hitchcock of the University of California at Los Angeles, a leading anthropological authority on Nepal who will head a panel discussion on problems of a developing country.

Others are Clarence Gray, officer in charge of Nepalese affairs for the Agency for International Development, and Joseph Toner, formerly AID mission director in Nepal, who will be the luncheon speaker on Thursday.

'FUR COATS! THEY'RE FINE FOR US, BUT ...'

Skunk Hits It Big

Pelt Passion Prompts Peal of 'What Fur?'

From Fashionable Femmes in Fox or Cur

By Pam Gleaton

"What fur?" is a familiar question in this part of the country. It means "why" or literally, "What for?"

Now "What fur?" is the question asked by ladies of high fashion as they discuss their latest discovery.

Fur, any kind you care to name, has become a status symbol for the style conscious Miss or Mrs.

The height of fashion is to have your ski parka lined with mink, or to wear a little suit, all Russian sable, or maybe seal, costing thousands of dollars.

Fur coats are still the favorites of many, and why not, with the variety of furs available.

Mink, chinchilla, lamb, beaver, fox, leopard, skunk (yes, that's right, skunk), calfskin sable, rabbit, French rabbit (ever so much more sophisticated than the regular old American rabbit), jaguar, lynx, cabretta leather, suede, and all those fake acrylic fur fibers—these are the main fashion furs for the year.

Two of the most charming entries in the fur market are Indian lamb paw and Kalgan lamb. The lamb paw fur makes a shaggy coat that looks as though it can't find its mamma. It can be worn for daytime or evening. The Kalgan lamb is a bit more sophisticated, perfect for every day wear when it is bound in leather.

One of the fun furs for this season is rabbit, dyed almost any color imaginable, and even designed into a "checked" "great" coat of dark blue and bright green. Another rabbit coat has stripes, running round and round.

Some of the prettiest rabbit coats are those in pale shades of cream and tan, cinched at the waist with a leather tie. "For tall slim girls only" the label should read. Otherwise the wearer is going to look like a sack of cornmeal.

For $400 you can get a very fancy rabbit indeed—a jungle-stenciled black and white coat flounced in coq feathers. It looks as though it just walked out of Za Za's closet.

Now for that skunk coat I mentioned. The furs have been worked in a pattern of black and white horizontal stripes. The coat itself is designed much like the lamb great coats, with a leather cinch at the waist. All of this is $700—skunks never had it so good!

Despite the trend toward unusual furs, wild coats and other clothes, the old standards, especially mink, are still holding their own.

Most of the coats being shown are mink. The news in mink is the way the furs are worked and the couturier shaping of the coats. The swirling sweeping mink with the over-size collar is out; the neat little coat that hugs the body almost as close as do cloth coats is in.

The queens of the fur trade are still sable, chinchilla, and of course, royal ermine. Moving up fast is the "princely fur," Swakara, South West African Persian—broadtail Lamb.

Swakara has the advantage of being worked almost like cloth. It is often styled into fitted coats in the latest Paris styles.

"What fur?" can mean anything from ermine to rabbit, but the fun is still in the wearing, not the talking. All you need is about $300 for the simplest little dyed lamb, or maybe $10,000 for a Russian sable.

Philosophy Picnic Set for Sunday

The social issues of science will be discussed by Alfred Lit, professor of psychology, at the philosophical picnic at 5 p.m. Sunday at the dome on Lake-on-the-Campus.

Lit will discuss the place of science in society, including a scientist's qualifications to discuss social problems, and when he speaks only as a citizen. He also will discuss the role of testing and its intrusion into the rights and privacy of the individual.

The value of studies of other civilizations and the right of non-Americans will be topics covered.

Lit will also discuss the limitations of science and the area in which the scientist has control over the social and biological world in which he lives.

Morris Tells of Italian Tour, Visits to Educational Center

In informal discussion with SIU Board of Trustees members prior to their meeting in Edwardsville, president Delyte W. Morris told of visiting international educational centers while on a trip to Middlebury College Graduate School of Italian, the Syracuse University program in fine arts, and Gonzaga in Florence, a full-year co-educational program offered by Gonzaga University. New York State University at Buffalo conducts a program at Sienna, John Hopkins at Bologna, and Portland, Ore., State College has a one-year program at Pavia.

Of particular interest to the Morrises was the Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies, located in the late Bernard Berenson's famous Villa I Tatti at Settignano, near Florence. Berenson, who died in 1959, once wrote that the metropolis of Florence had spread its influence not only upon Italy but "upon the entire white man's world, and beyond it, at a time when Italy was a mere geographical expression."

Morris also said that the city offers special advantages to the scholar because of its galleries, churches and palaces with exceptional collections of art, its museums and its historical monuments.

Firearms Bill Isn't Solution to Crime

Stripped of extravagant interpretations from the left and right, the pending firearms legislation in the U.S. Senate appears to be a commendable proposal, but its effectiveness is doubtful.

Contrary to the utterings of many lobbyists and columnists, the bill would not ban the ownership of firearms or even seriously curtail their sale.

And contrary to the boasts of President Johnson and blurbs from his aides, the proposal would probably fail to prevent tragedies such as that in Austin, Tex.

The main clauses of the bill would ban the interstate mail order sale of concealable firearms, such as pistols and revolvers.

It would also regulate the sale of rifles and shotguns through mail order houses by requiring an affidavit stating that the person ordering the gun has not been convicted of a crime of violence and is eligible under local law to purchase a weapon.

The mail order house would have to send a copy of the affidavit to local police.

This part of the bill is commendable. But would it stop the deeds of men like Charles Whitman?

It's doubtful. Would it prevent shooting in riots like Watts and Cleveland? It's doubtful.

Claims that it will stop men like Whitman and Lee Harvey Oswald from killing innocent people seem only to be a means of gaining public acceptance for passage of the bill.

As for curbing crime and violence, its effectiveness is doubtful. It could be something like the Volstead Act. If people want booze, they'll get it one way or another.

The same is true of juvenile punks and other kooks who can find many ways other than mail order houses to arm themselves.

Outlawing Cycles Is Shirking the Problem

To the editor:

Had I heard Miss Perez's comments on motorcycles in a conversation, I would have felt only sorry for her attempt to support an argument with unsupported conjectures. However, since the Daily Egyptian has chosen to print these unsupported conjectures in the form of an editorial, I feel obligated to reply.

"The world, it seems," Miss Perez, "is finally waking up to the fact that motorcycles are dangerous weapons—much more so than cars."

Dangerous weapons? Much more so than cars? How much more so... the Daily Egyptian is responsible to evaluate and interpret statistics for its readers, but where are your statistics? Where is your evaluation? You didn't have any! This is only unsupported opinion which has no place even on the editorial page.

And, you even had the gall, Maggie, to quote a spokesman of the Health Service as to the accident rate of cycles. The Health Service, if you will recall from an issue of the Daily Egyptian printed last year, lists burns from exhaust pipes as motorcycle accidents. Do you suppose burns from auto cigarette lighters are listed as auto accidents?

Also, Dr. Clarke said that roughly 25 per cent of the cyclists would be involved in accidents this year. Thank goodness you disputed this estimate with their own figures.

Health Service reports said there were 84 cycle accidents in a three-month period, and, assuming this was an average three-month period, this means that in one year 336 cyclists will be involved in accidents. That's 14.4 per cent of the cycles registered now and doesn't even allow for the fact that there are many more cycles here than the registration lists indicate, or for the fact the Health Service has padded its accident figures with such items as burns by exhaust pipes, or for the fact that 84 accidents in a three-month period probably represent a figure for a period of peak cycle use.

And then you commit the unpardonable sin of presenting the same figures to your readers that Thomas Lefler gave to the Vehicle, Traffic and Safety Committee; to wit, the violation figures which do not break down into moving and non-moving violations, which do not break down into student and non-student violations, which do not take into account the age group of the cycle and automobile operators.

Perhaps the Vehicle, Traffic and Safety Committee will accept such figures. However, please don't assume that your fellow students will accept such meaningless figures.

I am vitally interested in the safety of motorcyclists, although I do not presently own a cycle. Also, I will not be affected if the rules are changed. However, if cycle safety is what you and the University really want, then let's deal with that problem instead of merely sweeping it under the carpet by virtually outlawing cycles.

Do British Back U. S. In Asia?

LONDON—Viet Nam, which has always been an ideological issue in Britain, is becoming an increasingly important political question.

America's fight against the Viet Cong from the start has been opposed vehemently by the left in and out of government. But since the first of the year the whole character of opposition has changed and broadened.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson has hotly denied that he supports America's position in return for U.S. economic assistance to save the pound. Nevertheless, since he came to power 21 months ago his government has been forced repeatedly by circumstances to turn across the Atlantic for help.

It has, of course, been forthcoming. But Washington has its own war-complicated economic problems and, coincidentally, is lonesome in Viet Nam.

Part of the price Wilson has had to pay for that help is political ambivalence at home. His disassociation from American bombings of oil refineries near Hanoi and Hai-phong left him wide open to charges of inconsistency.

Although practically nobody considers Viet Nam to be truly a British problem, it is beginning to exert significant political controversy as what might be called a reluctant national issue.

Concern with the conflict and America's role in it has widened in the last few months. What the British public, as opposed to the highly publicized vocal radical minority, think of its country's support of the American position was probed recently by two unusual national opinion polls.

Their findings were somewhat less than unanimous, but they did show an unexpected degree of public support. The National Opinion Poll in the Daily Mail concluded British opinion had moved against America. The Gallup Poll in the Sunday Telegraph found the opposite.

In both instances, however, the gap was within five per cent.

The question asked was whether Britain was right or wrong to support America in Viet Nam.

Temporary Homes Can Be Forever

From Iowa City, Ia., comes a dismal commentary on current life in the United States.

It seems that Robert Glesne, when three years of age, moved with his parents into temporary housing for married University of Iowa students.

That was 19 years ago. Since then Robert, now 22, has married, and as a student at the University of Iowa has moved back into the same temporary housing.

Possibly Robert is now looking forward to receiving his degree and leaving his temporary housing to obtain a job—from which part of his earnings will go to pay the temporary taxes to reduce the national debt, now at a temporary ceiling level.

Apathetic Student Speaks; Cycle Restrictions Unfair

To the editor:

It is not very often that I take time from my busy schedule and studies to comment on the current events of this University. In this sense, I suppose, I am as apathetic as any other SIU student.

However, there are plans afoot on our campus that have so enraged me that I feel I must say something with the hope that the majority of other usually apathetic SIU students will also voice their consternation. I speak of the wholly unfair encroachment on our liberty of movement, the proposition that the same unjust restrictions that forbid certain students from having automobiles be applied to the ownership of motorbikes as well.

There have been many complaints raised about the so-called "nuisance" of Carbondale's hundreds of cycles. First of all, there is the old pat complaining about the lack of parking space both on campus and downtown. No one ever stops to think that perhaps the answer to this question is to build more parking space! SIU students support the town financially. Rather than complaining about the lack of parking space, it would make much more sense if the local merchants would band together in strong opposition to this proposal. Students ride their cycles to many places in this area, including places of business.

I am shocked that the administration is backing up this proposal. Has it been taken into consideration that students must travel to widely separated points in Carbondale? Has the lack of decent bus service, or the cost of taxis been taken into consideration from the students' standpoint in backing up this thing?

I suggest that all students voice loud opposition to this proposal. Our freedom of transportation is being attacked and if we don't fight for it, we deserve exactly what we get. These are important rights worth fighting for.

The matter of safety is really the only substantial argument that the proponents of this proposal have. However, has any SIU vice president taken the time to discover the proportion of cycle accidents in respect to the number of cycles owned and driven here? Isn't the safety hazard to be expected when the condition of Carbondale streets is also taken into consideration? And wouldn't there still be a proportional number of accidents even if this unjust law were imposed?

Perhaps the proper way to achieve better safety habits among the cycle drivers is to impose more stringent penalties against those who consistently break the law. I'm all for safety, but not for the gross manipulation of student rights.

This proposition is unfair, and I feel that all of us should attack it through our student government representatives. Mr. Drinan, our eyes are upon you!

Crockett, Washington Star

Conozca a su Vecino

'El Maguey y el Pulque'

Una de las plantas del Nuevo Mundo que los españoles encontraron en uso entre los indígenas fue el maguey o meli que es quizás de todas la más útil. El nombre científico es Agave americana. Debido a su aspecto general: hojas anchas y fibrosas de un verde grisáceo, con pías a lo largo de las orillas, muchas personas creen que se trata de un cacto, pero el maguey no es cactácea sino amarillidea, es decir, una especie de amarilis.

De las hojas del maguey, llamadas pencas, se saca la fibra para la fabricación de hilos o cuerdas. Esta fibra se denomina "ixtle", y las cuerdas que se hacen con ella, "mecates". El hilo se usa en algunas telas burdas, principalmente para la fabricación de costales.

Casi todas las partes de la planta son de tanta utilidad en la vida diaria que al maguey se le ha llamado "el árbol de las maravillas." Lo de "árbol" proviene de otra característica del maguey. Al llegar a su madurez, la planta lanza su borhordo o tallo que sostiene la flor. Este crece hasta un diámetro de unos quince centímetros (seis pulgadas) y llega a alcanzar una altura de cuatro o más metros (unos quince pies), dando a la planta el aspecto de un árbol. Cuando tierno, el borhordo así como las pencas largas y carnosas se asan y forman un alimento muy nutritivo. El borhordo crece rápidamente, llegando a la altura de madurez en sólo unos cuantos días. Todo el alimento almacenado por la planta durante los siete años que transcurren después de su germinación o su plantación sirve para dar al borhordo la oportunidad de crecer rápidamente, florecer y madurar la semilla en un espacio de seis u ocho semanas. Secas, las pencas sirven de leña en las zonas frías donde mejor florece el maguey, y donde no hay árboles.

A los viajeros por tierras aztecas les intriga el pulque, la bebida que se hace de la savia del maguey. Esta se llama "agua miel" o "tlachique" y se consigue cortando el borhordo precisamente durante los primeros días en que comienza su rápido crecimiento. Herida así, la planta no puede restañar inmediatamente el líquido que da origen a su veloz florecimiento, y del hueco que queda al cortar el borhordo, los campesinos chupan el líquido con una especie de pipeta hecha de un guaje largo.

Esto lo hacen tres veces al día raspando cada vez el interior de la herida para que siga saliendo el líquido que de otra manera se secaría. El campesino que hace este trabajo se llama "tlachiquero". Al fermentarse el tlachique se forma la bebida de origen precolumbino que llaman "pulque."

El agua miel o tlachique es muy nutritivo, tanto por el contenido vitamínico como por el azúcar y minerales que contiene. Así lo es también el pulque que si se elabora con cuidado e higiénicamente forma una bebida de cualidades superiores al extracto de malta. Generalmente, sin embargo, no es nada cuidadosa la elaboración de la "cerveza azteca" y se forma un líquido lechoso, altamente embriagante y peligroso debido a los congéneres alcohólicos que contiene.

Si dice que en tiempos precolumbinos se tomaba el pulque sólo en ceremonias, y el consumo se limitaba a la nobleza y a los sacerdotes. Se atribuye el descubrimiento del pulque a una princesa tolteca, "la bella Xochitl" (Flor).

Cuando los españoles conquistaron el reino azteca ellos prohibieron durante algún tiempo la fabricación y consumo del pulque, pero el lucro posible mediante su venta a la población conquistada despertó la avaricia de aquellos y se constituyó en un monopolio gubernamental. Hoy día el gobierno trata de disminuir tanto la elaboración como el consumo de tal bebida.

One Wedding Same as Other, 'Cept for Her Father, Mother

By Ed Rapetti

"The Johnson administration has set another dangerous precedent," my good friend Claxon B. Horn, senator from Upper Sandusky, declared, "by allowing the television networks to cover the wedding of his daughter, the minor bird."

Horn, a conservative democratic liberal progressive who was first elected to Congress during the Roosevelt (Teddy) Administration, rumbled on and declared that 'ol T. R. wouldn't have none of that carrying on.

A young reporter attending the press conference asked Sen. Horn why he thought the coverage of Luci's wedding was dangerous.

The patriarch of the portico literally pounced on the young fellow shouting, "Dangerous, why is it dangerous? Why listen boy, what if them Republicans start demanding equal time? Why boy we'd have nothin' but weddings on TV from now 'till the next election. You bet it's dangerous. Could damn near wreck our whole economy."

"But senator," the young fellow replied, "that wedding was a very important news event. We couldn't ignore it, could we?"

"You bet your newsy nose you could have ignored it, sonny. Why thousands of people get married every day without the hoorah and hullabaloo of that Johnson affair. "Seriously, fellas, don't you think you could have spent your time a lot better by doing something' more worthwhile, like makin' some more Batman episodes?"

"But senator," came the retort from the persistent neophyte, "that was the daughter of a President that got married. How could we ignore it?"

"Well sonny, between me and you I honestly feel that you couldn't very well have ignored it. After all you covered Gracey Kelly's weddin' and of course Queen Liz got her share of publicity when she married the Greek feller, Prince Phil. I would imagine that the Big Texan would have been kind of miffed if lil' Luci don't get any attention from the press boys and you TV fellas.

"But I'm gonna just leave you guys with this one question-How much do you think Luci and Mr. Nugent are gonna change the course of history? Unless LBJ decides to give 'em Texas for a wedding present?"

mittee unanimously interpreted that motorcycles are motor vehicles. As such it does not seem reasonable nor appropriate to not apply the regulation of the Board of Trustees which do address themselves to motor vehicles."

Rendleman said in his letter that other factors contributed to applying the regulations to cycles. One factor listed was that cycles provided greater mobility for students during the June riots. He also said that the original reason for restricting cars, such as danger and distraction from studies, also applied to motorcycles.

He added that there was still sufficient time to allow students to make changes in their plans if cycles were regulated. And fourth, he said progress made in voluntarily alleviating the cycle problem had not been great enough.

Space Cutbacks Seen With Higher Prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, in the wake of steel price increases, said Friday that the government will cut spending for such efforts as the space program "if particular segments of our economy continue to raise their prices."

Johnson made no direct reference to this week's round of price increases in steel. However, it was clear that his statement was prompted by the industry's move.

Johnson issued the statement upon signing a bill authorizing $5 billion for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration during the fiscal year that began July 1.

"If particular segments of our economy continue to raise their prices and increase the cost of this and other programs, it will be necessary for the government to further reduce its expenditures, particularly in those areas where prices are rising in an inflationary way," he said.

The White House Thursday labeled the steel price increases as inflationary, but the industry called them inconsequential and modest.

They amount to $2 to $3 a ton.

Johnson said maintenance of the space program depends on the cooperation of major business leaders and union leaders.

Johnson said: "They must recognize in their price and wage decisions that there is a third party in the board room, in the union hall and at the bargaining table—the people of the United States. If we are to continue our space effort and continue to make the magnificent progress represented by our past achievements, we can do so only if business and labor leaders will make their contribution by responsible pricing and bargaining decisions."

Despite administration criticism, all major companies in the industry have adopted the increased prices.

Provision Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP)—An open housing provision survived a crucial test in the House Friday when an attempt to knock it out of the 1966 civil rights bill was beaten 198 to 179.

Luci, Pat Take Marriage Vows at Noon; All Is Ready and Weather Looks Good

WASHINGTON (AP)—The last sentimental touches were added, the bridal party rehearsed, the White House primed and the church prepared for the noon wedding today of Luci Baines Johnson and Patrick John Nugent.

The Washington weather looked cool and good for the nuptials of the President's daughter and her tall fiance from Waukegan, Ill.

Chances of rain "near zero," the forecaster said.

The White House was agog with excited bride and bridesmaids putting the last-minute touches to their pink-and-white bridal gowns, their hairdos and their parts in the big wedding at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Luci finally decided on the sentimental items—something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue, and a sixpence for her shoe.

The bride-to-be slept late Friday and expected to be up late at a wedding-eve dinner and dancing party given for the bridal party by her future in-laws, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard P. Nugent.

Sixty-four wedding-party guests were invited to the last of the long round of pre-nuptial celebrations. It promised to be one of the gayest amid the elegance of one of Washington's newest private clubs—the Georgetown Club.

Before the afternoon's wedding rehearsal at the church Friday, a bevy of bridesmaids headed for the salon of the Johnsons' favorite French hairdresser, Jean Louis. And it got so busy there that at one point a Secret Service man was answering the telephone.

Among the final pronouncement from the White House was official word of the wedding day costumes to be worn by Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Nugent.

Two Homers Hurt

Wildcats Nip Salukis In Collinsville Game

The Parsons College Wildcats, displaying their power in one big inning, nipped Southern 3-1 Thursday evening in the opening game of the Collinsville Baseball Tournament.

The Salukis managed to out-hit their opponents 8 to 7, but the big blows in the fourth frame gave Parsons the winning margin.

Ben Urso greeted losing pitcher Skip Pitlock with a home run in the Parson half of the fourth to put the Wildcats out in front. After Pitlock fanned Bob Smith, Mike Bottom doubled. Catcher Frank Favia then blasted a pitch over the right-center-field fence for a two run blow.

Pitlock ended the inning by striking out winning pitcher Harvey Amen and leadoff man Tom Lolos.

Southern managed to come up with its lone tally in the fifth.

Villarete Loses in 3rd Round Of Nassau Bowl Tennis Meet

Jose Villarete, SIU tennis player from Manila, the Philippines, was stopped in third-round action of the Nassau Bowl Tennis Championships being held in Glen Cove, N. Y.

Australia's Owen Davidson whipped Villarete, 6-4, 6-2. Davidson is one of the top Australian amateurs on the summer tour. Villarete is experiencing his first summer on the circuit.

Mike Sprengrmeyer, another SIU varsity tennis squad member, was eliminated from the prestigious tournament in the second round of play. Sprengrmeyer lost to Roy Moore of South Africa.

Moore was seeded seventh in the tournament pairings.

Cubs Win 4-3 in 10th Inning On Santo's Two-Run Bloop

CHICAGO (AP)—Ron Santo's two-run bloop single with one out in the 10th inning enabled the Chicago Cubs to defeat San Francisco 4-3 Friday.

Santo accounted for all four Cubs' runs, slamming solo homers in the second and ninth innings.

Tito Fuentes' homer in the top half of the 10th inning had given the Giants a 3-2 lead.

Santo's game-winning hit came off reliever Frank Linzy and followed singles by pinch hitter Lee Thomas and Adolfo Phillips and an intentional walk to Billy Williams.

The Cubs had tied the score 2-2 when Santo led off the ninth inning with his 25th homer of the season.

Pitlock, now 2-4, went five complete innings, giving up seven hits while fanning five.

In a two-inning relief stint, Rick Iverson held Parsons scoreless and hitless.

Winning pitcher Harvey Amen also went five innings before being relieved by Paul Zahn in the sixth. Zahn allowed one safety in relief. Amen is now 6-1 for the summer.

Southern was scheduled to meet St. Louis University in a Friday evening contest, with Don Kirkland as the likely starter.

Bob Ash should get the starting nod for today's game against Offutt Air Force Base.

In Sunday action, the Salukis will meet Lincoln in a noon contest before once again facing St. Louis that evening.

The loss to Parsons evened Southern's league mark at 10-10, while the Wildcats, who have already clinched the pennant, sport a 15-1-1 mark.

have to be copied by hand.

McCoy said the library limits the number of copies a person can obtain of any one piece of material and refuses to copy complete books.

"We will make only one copy of a page of material for any customer," he said, "And we don't copy complete books, even out-of-print ones."

He added that photocopying complete books would be foolish because of the expense. For example, a 300-page book would cost $15 to copy. In most cases the book can be bought for much less than that, he said.

In some special cases the library even requires that the customer produce written authorization from the publisher or author to do extensive copying.

"And when we are unable to get additional copies of a book because it is out of print, we never photocopy it ourselves. We order a copy from University Microfilms, a firm that has a royalty agreement with publishers and authors." He added that he felt reasonably certain that the violations of copyrights and other charges leveled by the publishers and authors were minor.

Brewer's Rally Ties Goalby For Cleveland Open Lead

CLEVELAND (AP)—Steady Gay Brewer charged in with three-under-par 68 Friday and tied Bob Goalby for the half-way lead in the $100,000 Cleveland Open tournament with a 36-hole score of 135.

It looked like a three-way tie for the lead when Phil Rodgers also came in with a 68, but the LaJolla, Calif., golfer was disqualified for failing to sign his score card.

This marked the second time this season a tournament leader was disqualified for not signing his card. Doug Sanders was the victim after the second round in the Pensacola Open, where he held a four-stroke lead.

The 35-year-old Goalby, whose best finish this year was a tie for third in the New Orleans Open, shot a 67 Friday morning with the help of an eagle and assumed the early lead.

But Brewer, the tour's fourth leading money winner, rallied for a share of the lead. He and Goalby were seven under for the 36 holes as the field of 144 pros seeking the $20,000 first prize continued its assault on par.

The front-runners withstood a brilliant 64 by veteran Julius Boros that set the course record over the Lakewood Country Club's par 36-35-71, 6,777-yard layout.

Two strokes off the pace at 137 was a group of 10, including Labron Harris Jr., Thursday's first-round leader with a 65, who flipped to a 72.

Reading Skill Is Important

By Bonita Troutt

Ralph Waldo Emerson said "If you would learn to write, 'tis in the street you must learn it."

Robert D. Faner, chairman of the Department of English, said, "If you would learn to write, you must first learn to read."

"I can tell by the way a student writes what his reading habits are," Faner said.

A recent article published by the Christian Science Monitor quoted statistics showing that 50 per cent or more of all high school graduates are not prepared for a freshman course in college English.

"Any statistical report can prove anything," Faner said, "but if it is true that students are not prepared for college work, it may be because we haven't really helped the public school teachers as much as we should. We haven't integrated their program with ours as much as we should."

In the last five years a dramatic change has taken place in the desire of professors English to train teachers of English, he said.

SIU now has a full professor who assumes the responsibility of supervising the training of prospective teachers of English. Progress has been very much increased and intensified under his direction, Faner said.

"All too often the public

Anita Kuo Named To National Office

Anita B. Kuo, assistant dean of students for off-campus housing at SIU, was appointed chairman of the national Off-Campus Housing Committee at the annual meeting of the Association of College and University Housing Officials held this week at Purdue University.

The committee consists of seven housing officials from universities located in as many geographical areas in the country. The committee will develop a series of studies on trends and developments in off-campus housing, and will also plan a session on off-campus housing to be presented at the next annual meeting of the organization next summer in Seattle Wash.

school teachers of English are overloaded. In order for a student to improve his writing, he must write a good deal and it is absolutely essential that what he writes is fully and elaborately criticized. The public school teachers do not have time to do this," he said.

The high school student today does not have or does not take the time to read enough, Faner said. If he did, his writing would show it. An

"A" paper invariably comes from one who reads a lot, he said. "It is through reading that a persons learns to express himself."

The statistical report also pointed out that 90 to 100 per cent of all school dropouts do so because they cannot read as well as the others in their classes.

It is true, Faner said, that students who find themselves in academic trouble are usually poor readers.

"You can't get an education if you can't read. Preparing every lesson becomes a chore because the student doesn't know how to comprehend what he reads."

The profession of English has been criticized for being slow to respond to the "innovations of the '60s."

"Instructors of English are inclined to be conservative," Faner said. "However, we are participating now in a federal program called "Project English" whose headquarters are in Urbana." Roy Weshinskey, instructor in English, and Ellen Frogner, of the University School, are conducting experiments in cooperation with this project.

A number of new grammar texts are being devised, Faner said. The old historical kinds of grammar did not help people express themselves. The new grammars are designed to do this, he said.

Faner said that last fall Charles D. Tenney, vice president for planning and review and professor of English, taught English for the first time in 25 years. In comparison with his earlier teaching, he said he found fewer very poor students and also fewer generally superior students.

"Good spelling habits must be developed in the lower levels of school work," Faner said. The only way this can be accomplished, he said, is for all instructors, not just teachers of English, to require correct spelling in all the student's work.

"Unfortunately, college freshmen are no better prepared today than in previous years," Faner said. "There are too many diversions during high school days. The high school student is busy from morning to night. He has no time to read."

Kapusta Named Author Of Research Report

George Kapusta, supervisor of SIU's Southwestern Farm Research Center, has been named by the North Central Weed Control Conference to summarize all research reports on field corn weed control for the organization's annual research report. Kapusta also will judge grain and crops exhibits at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield Aug. 11.

James A. Tweedy of Cobden, a horticulturist who joined the SIU plant industries faculty July 1 as an assistant professor, has been named to judge vegetable exhibit entries at the State Fair the same day.

Edelman Gets Appointment

Milton T. Edelman, associate dean of the Graduate School, has been appointed to a 20-member commission recently organized to study public employment in Illinois.

Gov. Otto Kerner established the group, Advisory Commission on Labor-Management Policy for Public Employees in the State of Illinois, by an executive order effective Friday.

In establishing the commission Kerner noted the need for an in-depth study to note the effects of recommended policies on the general public, in addition to assuring government employees their full rights as individuals and as members of an employe group.

Edelman has arbitrated about 200 labor disputes.
