Davies renovation bill is law

By John Ambrosia
Staff Writer

It looks like Davies Gym will finally get its long-awaited facelift.

Gov. James R. Thompson allowed a $3.34 million renovation bill to become law by failing to take action before Thursday night's signing deadline, according to Keith Sanders, SIU-C governmental relations officer. Under the Illinois Constitution, a bill not signed by the governor within 60 days of legislative passage becomes law.

Thompson will hold a press conference at 10 a.m. Friday at the Southern Illinois Airport to ceremoniously sign HB 3290, and to explain his reasons for supporting its passage, Sanders said. The bill passed the General Assembly in June.

The governor's action came as a mild surprise to some University officials and state legislators, according to Sanders, because Thompson had consistently stilled attempts to allocate funds for the project in recent years. Attempts to pass a bill to aid the deteriorating gym began in 1969.

Thompson vetoed Davies Gym bills in 1977, 1978 and 1979. He also dropped the renovation plan from the top-priority list of higher education capital improvements in 1979, after $180,000 for renovation studies had been approved by former Gov. Dan Walker in 1976, Sanders said.

Vice Chancellor James Brown said, "I'm ecstatic over the news that the bill will be approved. This is something we've worked for over a period of months. The building has been put at the very top of our priority list. It's a very important item to us."

Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, who introduced the special Davies legislation in the House, said, "Naturally I'm pleased with the governor's decision. It is definitely for the best of SIU."

Sanders said he is fairly confident that Thompson will release the funds from the Illinois Capital Development Board in the very near future, so work on the 56-year-old gym can start in late fall.

"That building would have deteriorated further, possibly to the point of real danger."

—Rep. Bruce Richmond.

The funds will be used to restore the structure's plumbing, paint, lighting system, ventilation system, faculty offices, roof and gym floor.

Sander said most of the planning has been completed because planning funds had been released earlier.

This was the second time this year that Thompson had considered the Davies renovation. In March, the governor dropped the proposal from the higher education capital improvements top-priority list. Following that action, the legislature passed the bill which became law Thursday.

The increasingly deteriorating state of the structure housing women's intercollegiate athletics and physical education was probably the most influential force behind Thompson's approval, Sanders said.

"I think the governor realized how serious the problems in the gym were and acted accordingly," he said.

Among the problems hampering activities in the building are structural weakness, flooding, ceiling and floor wear, faulty ventilation and air conditioning and what Sanders called "a dangerous problem with the electrical system."

Sanders said the money was badly needed and added he was glad the funds were available this year and didn't require another year's wait.

"Needless to say we're all delighted. If it hadn't passed, we would have to have waited and put it back at the top of the priority list next year."

However, Richmond thinks Sanders may have underestimated the importance of passing the bill this year.

"That building would have deteriorated further, possibly to the point of real danger," he said. "Plus we're saving the taxpayers money by repairing it now instead of waiting for it to completely fall apart and have to spend $20 or $30 million on a new facility."

"It also strikes a blow for the equality in men's and women's sports because it will bring up the level of the women's facilities. It is difficult to field a good athletics program if the facilities are poor, and now this renovation should take care of that problem," Richmond added.

Jobless rate up 3 percent in two months

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

Newly-released Illinois Department of Labor statistics show almost a 3 percent increase in unemployment rates throughout Southern Illinois in the last two months.

Of seven Southwestern Illinois counties, Jackson County ranks sixth in unemployment with a June rate of 9.8 percent, a 2.9 percent increase since April.

Jackson County unemployment rates are based on the number of unemployment claims filed at the Murphysboro Job Service office, not through telephone surveys, and results for one month's claims are not available until about six weeks later. Telephone surveys are used to compile national figures.

Of those in Jackson County filing unemployment claims in July, 64 percent had a college-level education and 13 percent had 16 or more years of school, according to David Koch, labor market economist for the Department of Labor.

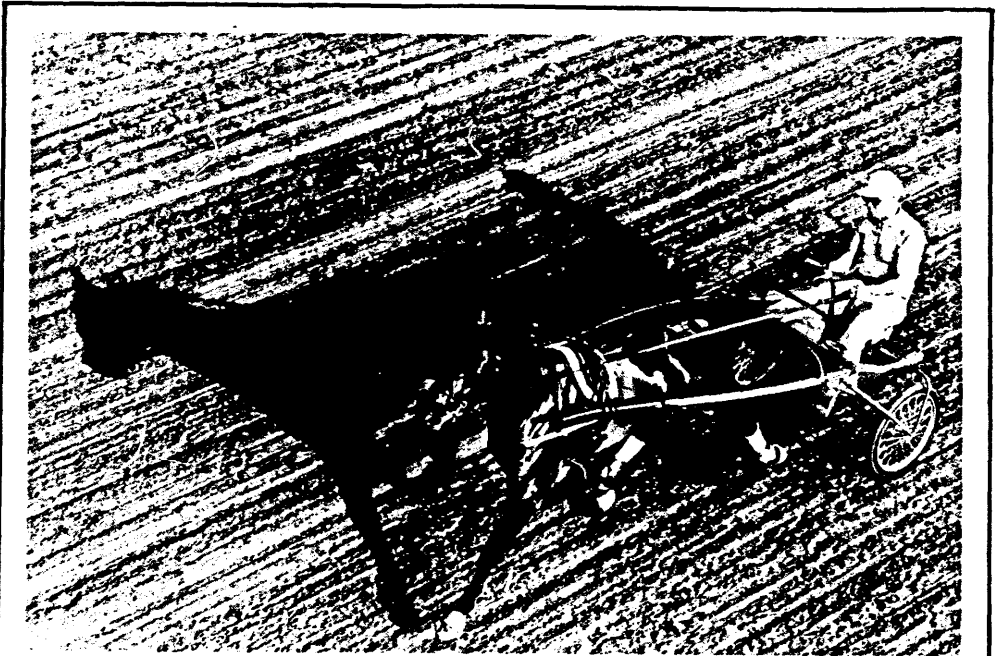

About 2 percent had seven years of education or less and 21 percent had at least some high school education.

The other five counties with higher unemployment than Jackson have rates ranging from about 11 percent to as high as 20 percent.

The June rates are: Alexander 20.3 percent, Pulaski 19.5 percent, Massac 11.9 percent, Union 11 percent, Perry 10.7 percent, Jackson 9.8 percent, and Randolph 8.4 percent

Last Hambo

The 55th annual Hambletonian Trotting Classic will run its last race at the Du Quoin State Fair racetrack on Saturday. Legislation has been passed to create a new harness race for Southern Illinois. But, can the state legislate the prestige and tradition that the Hambletonian holds?

Stable fire classified as arson

By Andy Strang
Staff Writer

The fire that destroyed the old Saluki Stables has been classified as arson by SIUC police, although Robert Biggs, Carbondale assistant fire chief, said he doubts if the cause of the fire will ever be determined.

"The chances of finding out what caused the fire are slim," Biggs said. Officials have determined that the fire started in a loft in the stable, but the fire left the building "too destroyed to find out anything," Biggs said.

Police call the fire arson, although they say it may have been started accidentally. Detective Robert Hopkins, who is investigating the fire for University Security, said that police consider as arson any fire that is ignited by something, as opposed to a fire caused by spontaneous combustion, a fire caused by heat or a chemical reaction.

One of the three buildings of the old Saluki Stables on West Chautauqua Street caught fire at about 11 p.m. Aug. 25. The stables had not been in operation since 1973, and were being used to store old newspapers and farm machinery at the time of the fire.

An investigator from the Illinois Fire Marshal's office and the Carbondale Fire Department are still working with SIUC police in investigating the fire. Police said they do not have any suspects.

Before the fire, police had received complaints from neighborhood residents about young people who used the stable for parties. Witnesses to the fire said a stable door that was normally closed was open at the time of the fire.

Students still in temporary housing

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

University Housing has moved about half the residents in temporary housing into permanent residence hall rooms, but 74 students still remain in temporary housing, according to Sam Rinella, director of University Housing.

Rinella said he thinks most of the students still in temporary housing will probably be moved out during the next two weeks. At University Park, 25 students are still in temporary housing, Rinella said. Nine students are living three persons to a two-person room in Neely Hall and 16 men are living in lounges in the Triads—Boomer, Wright and Allen.

At Brush Towers, 32 students are being temporarily housed with three persons to a two-person room, Rinella said.

At Thompson Point, 24 students remain in overflow housing, Rinella said. They are sleeping on bunkbeds six persons to a room and sharing one small bathroom.

Rinella said that the number of persons in temporary housing at this time is about the same as it has been in recent years. He said the University anticipates cancellations and residents moving out to provide rooms for those students in temporary housing.

Rinella said the University had about 60 no-shows for temporary housing this year. However, he said that figure changes daily as people assigned to temporary housing report to the housing office.

Davies renovation bill is law

Moreover, Richmond said that passing the bill this year would save money on renovation since last year's bill called for about $2.9 million compared with the current $3.4 million.

Brown said, "We've had the industrious support of Rep. Richmond and Sen. Kenneth Buzbee (D-Carbondale) in all our efforts on this bill. We owe them, as well as Gov. Thompson, our gratitude for all the work they've done. Plus there have been many people in our own system who have worked hard towards this goal."

Sanders said free bus service, provided by the University, will take students to the airport to greet Thompson. One bus will be in front of the Student Center, the other in the lot between Anthony Hall and Davies Gym. Both buses leave at 9:30 a.m.

"It's taken a long time and a lot of hard work to reach this stage and I can't say how pleased it makes me feel. This has been a very important item for such a long time, and sometimes the chances looked bad, but we were able to still complete our project," Sanders said.

Carter calls for $27.6 billion tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter Thursday called for $27.6 billion in 1981 tax cuts for individuals and businesses as part of an election-year economic proposal that also aims to create 1 million new jobs in the next two years.

But he said, "I will not accept a pre-election bill to cut taxes." The president also requested congressional authority to spend an additional $3.6 billion in 1981 to retrain workers, weatherize homes, maintain highways, build ports, boost research and development and help economically distressed counties and cities.

Retention of Soviet grain embargo seen

PEORIA (AP) — Recent labor unrest in Poland make it unlikely the Carter administration will lift the Soviet grain embargo until after the November general election, a former top-ranking agriculture official said Thursday.

Richard Bell, assistant secretary for international affairs in the Agriculture Department under President Ford, said the government would not want to be restoring grain sales to The Soviets at a time of possible Soviet intervention in Poland, should the workers strike spread.

Robinson said to be in St. Louis

Staff Writer

Walter Robinson, the Jackson County Board member who mysteriously disappeared five months ago and whose resignation letter was so questionable the board would not accept it, has been working in East St. Louis and apparently is unwilling to verify his resignation, according to a source close to Robinson.

Robinson wants to "remain lost" because "debt collectors have been trying to find out where he is," the source, who requested anonymity, said.

But Norvell Haynes, chairman of Concerned Citizens of Carbondale, thinks he has an explanation for the confusing events surrounding Robinson's disappearance.

Haynes said he believes county officials actually knew about Robinson's whereabouts, but refused to release the information for political reasons.

Haynes has complained to the State Board of Elections and is asking the Illinois Attorney General to investigate.

Since early April, Robinson has been consistently absent from board and committee meetings. On April 19, he seemingly disappeared from the area and was rumored to be running fishing boats for tourists between islands off the Central American coast.

All along he was in East St. Louis looking for a job, finally finding one in city government, the source said.

Speculation about Robinson's whereabouts began when the county board received a letter of resignation, signed by Robinson, and postmarked Carbondale, June 16. The date on the letter raised questions for County Board Chairman William Kelley as to the authenticity of the resignation, since Robinson had not been seen since April 19.

On July 9, the day of the next county board meeting, Robinson was supposed to be in county circuit court for proceedings. He didn't show.

Persuaded by Kelley's comments about the suspicious nature of the resignation, the board decided not to accept it without verification. Kelley then directed the state's attorney's office to find Robinson.

The state's attorney directed the Sheriff's Department to unofficially look for Robinson, even though he was already being sought by police to be served with a subpoena for a routine appearance before a grand jury investigating the courthouse.

A few weeks later, the subpoena expired and the Sheriff's Department stopped looking, according to Woodrow Procnunier, head deputy.

But according to Haynes, everyone at the county courthouse knew where he was and didn't want the news out until after Sept. 4, which is the legal deadline—60 days before the general election—for holding a primary election.

Haynes charged Thursday that Kelley and the board "conspired" to not accept the resignation so the primary deadline would elapse, allowing the board to appoint its own choice to Robinson's seat.

Kelley could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Haynes said Robinson was last seen on April 19 at the Concerned Citizens of Carbondale meeting and that Robinson told him that he planned to wait to submit his resignation until after the general election—so the County Democratic Central Committee could make a recommendation to the board to fill the vacancy.

Haynes said that for some reason Robinson decided to submit the resignation earlier. He said he believes Kelley manipulated Robinson into not confirming the early resignation so that both could have what they wanted.

According to Haynes, Robinson didn't want his constituents to think he was letting the County Democratic Central Committee fill the seat without a public vote. Haynes charged that Kelley and the Committee eventually convinced Robinson to go along with them.

Reporter turnover is problem

This letter is the culmination of several years' frustration in dealing with Daily Egyptian writers.

The "last straw" was an article in Wednesday's edition of the Daily Egyptian. The main headline proclaimed "Illinois Avenue bars may be asked to move." I was quoted in the article as the source of that information. From the tone of the article a reader would come to the conclusion that the city had set out to eradicate bars on Illinois Avenue. An examination of the facts would show that to not be the case. Knowing and sticking to facts is why this letter is written.

It seems as if every year, and sometimes every semester, there is a new Daily Egyptian reporter assigned to cover City Hall. Inevitably the reporter knows little or nothing about the organization or responsibilities of city government in general and Carbondale's in particular. Consequently city staff members spend hours trying to explain how city government works. Oftentimes the new writer has to pick up on a topic that has been ongoing for months or years and city staff is expected to go through the long history so that the new writer can understand the full implications of a topic.

When I received a phone call on Tuesday from a new staff writer asking questions about the city's downtown redevelopment plans, I could tell that the writer had no knowledge of the subject. Consequently, the writer was invited to come to City Hall where we might look at maps and other information while we discussed the city's downtown redevelopment efforts. In a conversation that lasted approximately an hour I explained the history of the city's downtown redevelopment efforts (including the planned convention hotel and parking garage), why it was important to set redevelopment district boundaries, what types of incentives might be available to developers, the roles developers might play in redevelopment.

In the course of our conversation I was asked what would happen to the bars on Illinois Avenue. I explained that City Council policy is to not allow more bars on South Illinois Avenue and that we would, therefore, not encourage redevelopment proposals that were bars. I further explained that if bars were displaced as a result of redevelopment efforts, we would hope to have them relocate elsewhere in the city, not on Illinois Avenue.

At no time did I say that the city has a deliberate plan to go after all the bars and run them out of Illinois Avenue. Furthermore, my comments about using eminent domain and the impact of higher property taxes were lifted out of context. Those comments were made about redevelopment in general and not in the specific context of bars.

Thus, you can imagine my amazement with the headline and article on Wednesday.

I have over the years been tempted to refuse to talk to Daily Egyptian reporters and journalism students (whose class assignments often are published in the Daily Egyptian) due to the numerous reporting errors that occur and the large amounts of time required. I have resisted this temptation out of a concern that to do so would be seen as an attempt to hide something from the public.

I have heard of people in Carbondale who would only talk to Daily Egyptian reporters if they could read the draft story before it was submitted for publication. That is another temptation because it would keep false statements from being published. However, it also raises the possibility of censorship which is an anathema to a free press.

When Daily Egyptian reporters write on items of campus concern, such as bands, registration, or sports, an error in reporting can cause relatively little harm. However, when student writers are covering matters pertaining to local government, a mistake can be disastrous. The Daily Egyptian is read in Carbondale by thousands of people. Conveying a false impression about actions of the city can cause needless concerns and leads to mistrust of the city and (for those who know the real facts) the Daily Egyptian.

I don't know the solution to the problem of a constant turnover of student writers or inaccurate reporting, but I do have some suggestions.

First, the writer should research the topic thoroughly. Read past articles on the subject. Research minutes of prior meetings when the issue was discussed, ask for copies of written reports that may have been issued on a topic.

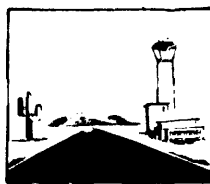

Second, during interviews many written notes should be made.

Third, if the writer is unsure of the facts when writing the article, then more research should be done before submitting the article, even if that means missing a deadline.

Fourth, if the writer is unsure about the subject matter, the person interviewed could be asked to review the proposed article for factual accuracy. Daily Egyptian writers are students learning a trade. One of the lessons to be learned is to avoid mistakes. As a learning exercise it might be useful for student writers to go over some articles with the interviewees to see how well they performed on accuracy.

Finally, extreme care must be taken to not allow personal biases or interests to creep into news articles. Personal opinions should be aired elsewhere in the paper.

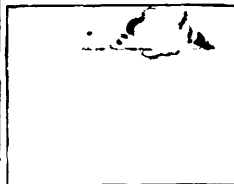

I hope my comments will be accepted in the spirit they were intended—constructive criticism. We all learn from experience and none of us is immune from making honest mistakes. But we need to do all we can to minimize those mistakes—Donald D. Monty, Assistant City Manager for Community Development, Carbondale.

Main issue should be bread, butter

In 1960, Gov. William Stratton of Illinois told Richard Nixon, "You can say all you want about foreign affairs, but what is really important is the price of hogs in Chicago and St. Louis." This year it is axiomatic, and perhaps even true, that the bread-and-butter issue is the price of bread and butter.

But this year, Democrats want to emphasize foreign policy, and not just because their domestic policies are failures. Democrats think they can win by mixing candor and hysteria—by saying Carter is dismal but Reagan is dangerous. So Democrats attack Reagan for opposing SALT II agreements that a Democratic-controlled Senate would not ratify. By announcing that they, unlike Reagan, will not engage in an arms race, they remove all incentives for the Soviets to negotiate mutual limits.

So difficulties with the Republican position are less obvious but more interesting. They derive from the fact that foreign policy depends on domestic factors, on values, discipline, confidence, morale—in short, national character. The Republican platform stresses two themes that are not as harmonious as Republicans suppose.

One is cultural conservatism. The other is capitalist dynamism. The latter dissolves the former.

Karl Marx, who had a Reaganesque respect for capitalism's transforming power, got one thing right: Capitalism undermines traditional social structures and values; it is a relentless engine of change, a revolutionary inflamer of appetites, enlarger of expectations, diminisher of patience.

A wit has said that the modern American's prayer is: "Dear God, I pray for patience—and I want it right now!" Republicans see no connection between the cultural phenomena they deplore and the capitalist culture they promise to intensify: no connection between the multiplying evidence of self-indulgence and national decadence (such as pornography, promiscuity, abortion, divorce and other forms of indiscipline) and the un-sleeping pursuit of ever-more immediate, intense and grand material gratification.

Republicans sense that manners, meaning conduct in its moral aspect, are as deterministic in a nation's life as are materialistic preoccupations. Republicans seem not to sense the effect of such preoccupations on manners.

Today's Republican themes of social decay and national decline are perennial themes of political philosophy, and recurring fascinations for historians. Western philosophy is, indeed, a series of footnotes to

George Will

Plato, whose "Republic" concerns the myriad ways politics decay. The most famous work of history since the fall of Rome is about the decline and fall of Rome.

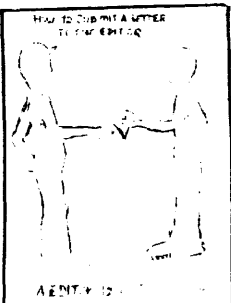

Some reflective Republicans believe—rightly, I fear—that, a century from now, philosophers and historians will study the trajectory of the United States in the second half of this century as the most striking instance of national decline since that of Spain, centuries ago. This nation may be more than halfway through a decline from the security of 1945 to irremediable vulnerability to, and dictated accommodation with, the Soviet Union.

Republicans are today even more mesmerized than usual by various economic facts (Or, perhaps, economic theories) Felix Cohen said that the theories we believe we call facts, and the facts we disbelieve we call theories. They understand that economic vigor is necessary for national survival. They may not understand that the idea that "the economy is king" is just a theory, not a fact.

A characterizing belief of the 20th century is that we live in an "economic civilization," in the sense that economic supremacy must translate into national security. But economic strength is not sufficient. A more elusive and fragile necessity is confidence, pride, resolve—in a phrase, national elan. What is at issue in this century, and this election, is nothing less than a question of civilization: Has ours the capacity to sustain itself?

Carter's foreign policy reduces to the idea—simple and a priori—that we shall prevail because (or if) we are just. Reagan says, with Raymond Aron, that the tribunal of history is not a tribunal of justice. Rather, it tests a nation's capacity for action.

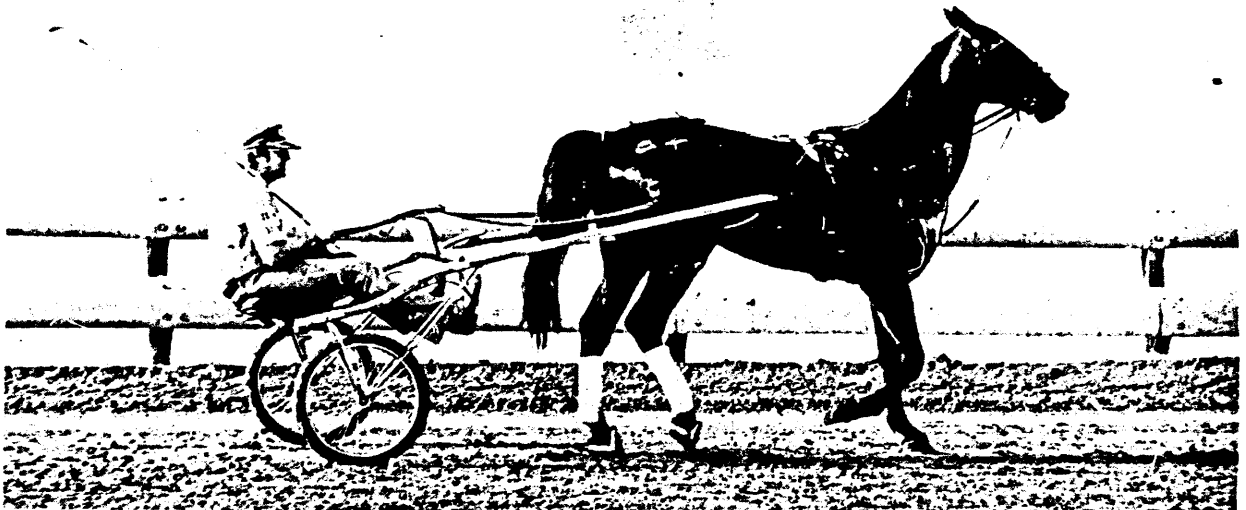

America's individualism has been explicit from the first—from the first paragraphs of the Declaration of Independence. The as yet unanswered, but bound to be answered, question is whether a society so thoroughly given over to the individual's pursuit of happiness is capable of making the unpleasant collective effort necessary to the maintenance of national independence. — Copyright 1980, The Washington Post Company.

Fear not racing fans, for scenes such as this will again be occurring at Du Quoin next year. No, it won't be the Hambo, but it will be harness racing.

Homeless Hambo moves on

By Carrie Sweeney
Focus Editor

For every season there is a change, as the folk song goes.

At noon Saturday, before about 10,000 anxious spectators, the colorful and victorious setting at the Du Quoin State Fair will, like the seasons, change.

Last October, with the announcement that the 55th Hambletonian would be held for the last time at Du Quoin, the future of harness racing in Southern Illinois looked bleak. When the Great Race leaves the spacious surroundings that have been its home for the past 24 years and moves to the Meadowland racetrack in New Jersey, it will take with it all the tradition and honor it holds.

But as with the seasons, a new beginning is only a matter of time.

Legislation approved in the Illinois House and Senate this summer, if signed by Gov. James R. Thompson on Saturday as expected, will give Du Quoin a new race—with a new name and a new beginning.

The "new race," said Curt Greene, public relations director for the fair, will be like the Hambletonian. It will be presented with the same glamour and prestige. But it will not be The Hambo. It is not known whether the new race will survive in the harness racing world without tradition behind it. All that is known is that it will, unlike the Hambletonian, truly belong to Southern Illinois.

The Hambletonian "was like an adopted child," Greene said, his slow and careful words revealing a hint of sadness. "It never really was 'our' race. The new race will be all ours. This will be its home."

The Hambletonian has been an orphan race, fostered by several racetracks, since its creation by Harry O. Reno in 1926. It was on New Year's Day when for $8,000 the New York State Fair at Syracuse gave birth to what would soon be the Kentucky Derby of harness racing.

As if predicting that the $73,451 purse-winning race would be a legend, Reno appropriately named the race after Hambletonian 10, the father of the American Standardbred horse and a legend in himself.

But Syracuse did not want the Hambletonian race and Lexington, Ky., which hosted the race during two rain outs in New York, didn't want it either. However, W.H. (Bill) Cane did. In 1930, home for the Hambletonian became Good Time Park in Goshen, N.Y.

The Hambletonian flourished under Cane's direction. It withstood the criticism of skeptics who said the track was insufficient; it withstood financial difficulties, the war and the Depression. Soon it became the highlight of all the Grand Circuit harness races for three-year-old trotters.

The "Corn Tassel Derby," as it was affectionately labeled, did not, however, survive the death of Cane. When he died, so did Goshen's interest in the race. The Hambletonian once again became an orphan.

In 1957, Don and Gene Hayes brought it to Southern Illinois and the Du Quoin State Fair. The well-kept track, lusciously green and artfully landscaped with a sparkling water course, became more than just home. It became a tradition—a way of life not only for Southern Illinois residents and followers of the Grand Circuit, but for horse lovers all over the world.

"There is much prestige surrounding the Hambo," Greene said. "Many world records have been made and equaled here."

The Hambletonian, later under the direction of Bill Hayes, son of Gene Hayes, and currently under Saad Jabr, flourished. Today, with an expected purse of about $300,000, it is the richest—and toughest—harness race to win.

"It's a grueling race. It takes greatness to achieve victory," Greene said. "When the race first began, the fastest time for the mile track was 2 minutes flat. Today, it's around 1:52.

"When we lost the Hambo, we didn't want to lose the money we received from the state," he explained. "We wanted the money to be used towards a new race that will attract better horses and better participants."

Indications from the governor's office are that a bill will be signed to allow the state's tax share from bets placed on the third and fourth races on Saturday's to go towards the new race. Previously, this money was used for staging the Hambletonian.

According to Greene, harness racing is not a big money-maker for the fair or the state. He said the state receives 5 cents for every $1 bet, and instead of keeping the money, the state gives it back to the race.

"None of the money received from the state goes into a bank account," he added. "It is paid directly into the purses. The fair receives no direct financial benefit."

Greene, who has been with the Du Quoin State Fair since 1977, said he is optimistic about the success of the new race.

"We want to have the same kind of pageantry and glamour for the new event, and still get top-notch competitors, which I think we can do," he said.

Greene added that a name for the new race will be revealed during Saturday's ceremonies. Selected from over 400 entries from all over the world, the name will give the race a new

Bettors make the odds for pari-mutuel Hambo

By Jeffrey Smyth
Staff Writer

The money's in and the bets are down. With dreams of making it rich at the Hambletonian you head for the grandstands. Your $2 could make you $20. You've bet on the No. 4 horse and it's going off at 10-1. The No. 2 horse is at 3-1 so you bet on him, just to be on the safe side.

The horses are being jogged around the track and you look for yours. "She's a winner," you say to yourself. But then you look up on the toteboard. Your longshot is now at 4-1. The No. 2 horse is at 8-1. Who's responsible for this?

You don't have to go far to find out. The Hambletonian Trotting Classic is a pari-mutuel betting race. The odds are made by the bettors. The more people bet on a horse, the lower the odds and vice versa. The No. 4 horse, a longshot when the day began, was actually a popular horse among the bettors and so the odds decreased. The No. 2 horse, which looked like a conservative at the start of the day, didn't attract that much interest so the odds increased.

Bob Fehler, director of pari-mutuel betting for all harness races across the country, said the odds that a horse has going into a race are predetermined by a handicapper. Those odds will change when the betting windows open.

"People are betting among themselves," Fehler said. "We are only a money brokerage. In this type of betting, the people make the odds."

Fehler added that he and eight other people take information given to them from the ticket machines and calculate the odds. When a person buys a ticket the money is sent to a money room to be counted and the betting information goes to the betting room under the grandstands.

"If any of our equipment breaks down," he said, pausing to take a drink of beer, "we have people who can calculate the odds without machines. There isn't a system in this country that hasn't broke down at one time or another during a race."

"People are like insurance. We have over 100 years of experience in just four people here," he added. "If I had to, I could run the whole race (Hambletonian) myself."

Fehler said that he and his staff are unique because more and more racetracks are purchasing better equipment do the same job.

"Before a professional racetrack person could run 10 to 12 races a year. You used to have to be an oddsmen," he said. "Today you don't need the same knowledge. There isn't a handful people in Illinois that could run a race years ago. Today it's a public relations position."

Saturday, at the Hambletonian, it won't be the professionals changing the odds, though Fehler says a majority of the bettors follow the harness racing circuit. It'll be you. You and your $2 get rich quick scheme.

By Jeffrey Smyth
Staff Writer

At one time there were many of them all across America. Their services were needed to help keep the country moving. Almost every town had one and almost everyone who owned a horse frequented him.

As long as a horse could walk it needed shoes and the town blacksmith was the person that supplied them.

Today the craft of shoeing a horse and shoeing it correctly is known only by a few. But the few who know it are in great demand by men who make their living on training and racing horses.

In harness racing, most trainers agree that there are but 100 good blacksmiths in the country. Good doesn't mean being able to nail a U-shaped metal plate to the hoof of a horse but rather to meet the specifications that each trainer wants for each horse.

"Anyone can shoe a horse," Steve Waller, trainer-jockey for the Triple G Stables, claims. "But you can really screw a horse up if you don't shoe him correctly."

Trainers want different fittings for each of their horses. And they have these specifications printed on a card that they give to the blacksmith, John Robson, blacksmith of six years, said while shoeing a horse. It's self-survival for a blacksmith to meet the specifications because if it isn't done right, the trainer won't come back, he added.

Robson said that it isn't easy to become a blacksmith because one must start as an apprentice. Finding someone to learn under isn't easy.

"The first thing is to get someone to accept you," Robson said, while examining a shoe his apprentice Terry Heflin worked on. "Someone older. That's hard because most of them want nothing to do with you. I got started with someone who was about to retire.

"You start by watching them. Watching everything they do," he added, while fitting the shoe to the back right hoof of a colt. "You can usually determine if you're going to let a guy stick with you or not by the way he trims a foot or if he gets the correct angle."

Robson said the shoe must fit "as naturally as possible" to the horses' hoof. The trainer's specification card shows him how high they want the hoof to rest on the shoe. It may mean filing the hoof or the shoe down. In any case, knowing how to angle the horse's toe to the correct specifications is an essential part of the business.

"The trainers know how the horse stands," he said, pausing to pound a red-hot shoe that he just took from a small "coal ford" (furnance). "Country smiths shape the foot to fit the shoe. I make the shoe fit the foot. You have to get the toe length (length of hoof) right also."

Robson said a horse usually needs new shoes every two weeks. He starts with a standard shoe that has pre-punched nail holes in it. These shoes vary in design. Some are aluminum, which he said is used to keep the horses hoof closer to the ground when running. Others have a full or half swedge (groove) around its rim. The full swedge, he said, is the most common shoe used on dirt tracks.

"The swedge fills up with dirt and gives the horse more traction," he said, standing with his back to the horse, hoof between his legs, scrapping manure and dirt from the toe.

"On clay tracks you don't need near as much traction so you use a different shoe."

Robson then works the blank—heating it, pounding the identity and will, in some way, tie the race to Du Quoin, he said.

In 1981, the fair hopes to offer a purse of about $500,000—second only to the Hambo itself, Greene said.

There are many theories as to why the Hambletonian Society, a 21-member board which oversees the race, voted to move the race. One speculation has to do with the fair's profit from betting. According to Greene, Du Quoin has an inexperienced betting audience whereas bettors in New York are pros.

"The people around here come to enjoy themselves—to watch the races. It's not like in New York where last year the betting average per capita was $180 a day," Greene said. "Last year at Du Quoin, the average was $28 a day."

"The reason the Hambo Society decided the move was necessary will remain speculative. I think one of the major reasons was because the crowd at Du Quoin just wasn't big enough. Meadowlands can

The Hambletonian Society, he explained, is racing's establishment. It is made up of prominent people—owners and drivers alike—all who have a significant stake in the racing industry.

As workmen ready the field for the 19 entries that will contend for the Hambletonian title for the last time in Du Quoin, it is easy to anticipate an emotional farewell. Along with the excitement that harness racing alone provides, there will be an added sensation when all the pride and tradition of its 24 runnings is relived.

The season will change for the Du Quoin State Fair on Saturday. In some respects, it will be a time for sadness and a sense of defeat. For no longer will it be the foster home of the great orphan race.

Yet, it will also be a time for victory and celebration. For it will mark the birth of a race that the Du Quoin State Fair can call its own.

desired angles, cutting for size and then nailing it on the hoof. On the front hoofs Robson may place a plastic or leather pad between the shoe and the hoof to absorb shock.

Robson is paid well for his work. He receives about $50 for each horse he shoes and shoes about six a day. It takes him one hour to shoe a horse on his own and about 40 minutes with the help of his apprentice. He works four months on the road and spends his winters shoeing for the Triple-G stables in Florida. "Most blacksmiths work themselves," he said, taking a cool drink as the trainer takes his newly shod horse away. "I have trouble with my back, so Terry is a help. I'm also giving him a trade."

At $50 an hour. That ain't bad hay.

Hambo horse tells all!

Straight from whose mouth?

By Ken Mac Garrigle
News Editor

She makes a living by pulling a cart around an oval dirt track. "Never been any faster."

She's worth close to $300,000. "If she races good, no one can beat her."

She's fast. Very fast. Her time of 1:56 1 is the fastest ever by a two-year-old pacing filly.

"She's favored. I'm sure Favored to win the filly portion of the Hambo. Favored to bring home a big payday for those who ride her, those who train her and those who own her."

"She's a nice mare, but Jesus she's a simple son of a bitch," her driver, not jockey, Steve Waller says about Heather's Feather, a horse that may be going places.

Heather's a fine stubborn mare. Prettiest mare in all the land, as the song goes. Yet this lady likes to have things her own way—just about all the time. Those that know her say she's skilled and binding fast, yet "temperamental" and headstrong. She can be a pain in the horse's arse at times, yet this free spirit backs up her defiant attitude with wins.

"She has ideas in the race," Bo Karlsson, one of her grooms, says with a thick Swedish ac-

Add leadership to your college schedule.

College military science courses are courses in leadership development. They offer you management experiences which will benefit you in any career, civilian or military.

You can take the first courses as a freshman or sophomore without obligation. Advanced courses, in your junior and senior years, lead you to a position of responsibility as an officer in the active Army or Reserves.

As an Army ROTC student, you'll have the opportunity to apply for full tuition and selected fees scholarships. And you'll earn nearly $2,000 during your last 2 years of college.

Don't wait until after college to get practical management experience. Add leadership to your class schedule now.

Annie trotted a horse one day and she's a groomer ever since

By Linda Albert
Staff Writer

Amid the inelegant surroundings and the group of young, male groomers at the Du Quoin State Fair horse stables, a slender, wiry woman struggles with determination to hang the heavy iron gate that will keep a trotter secure in its stall.

"I've worked with horses for nearly 25 years now and I enjoy my work as much as ever," the tired worker said. "But, you know, I've found that I just can't lift the heavy equipment and harness carts like I used to."

Some call her grandma. Others call her mom. But most of the Garnsy harness racing stable workers of Pampano Park, Fla., just call her Annie. Having celebrated her 60th birthday last week, Anna Rowand is a self-made woman whose years of hard, laborious work show in the scars that mark her face and body and the callouses that cover her hands.

discussing Heather's Feather, a horse he must baby-sit each day.

"She has to have her own way," he continued. "She's a little crazy. She has ideas sometimes. She don't like other horses. She kicked them away. She kicks a lot."

She loves beer as well. Drinks coffee, eats doughnuts. Likes to go out at night and eat grass and get drunk, according to Karlsson.

Yet she gets the job done come race time.

"She's like a woman," says Diane Eakin, another of Heather's grooms. "She likes to be spoiled. You have to fix her up and treat her right." She paused, reflected for a moment. "And she's temperamental." "She's a typical female," agrees Waller. "You never know what she's gonna do next."

He grinned, because in the back of his mind and in the back of those that must deal with this free-willed lady is the thought that what Heather's Feather is going to do next...is win at Du Quoin.

Annie trotted a horse one day

"I don't come from a background of working with horses," Annie said as she broke the twine to open a bail of hay for the two-year-old pacer Mechete Almhurst. "A friend who owned some trotters let me jog an old, calm and gentle horse one day. That was a cinch and I've been working as a groomer ever since."

Traveling the Grand Circuit of harness racing for 12 years with Garnsy Stables, Annie and the other groomsmen work an average of 21 weekly races during one March to December racing season.

"After our winter months of training the horses in Pampano we move on to races in Kentucky, New Jersey, New York, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. Right now it's Du Quoin, which many harness racers consider the best in harness competition," she said as she lit a cigarette.

Moving the Hambletonian to New Jersey just won't be the same in New Jersey, it'll be too commercialized. There is real tradition with the race here in Du Quoin and this part of the country is just beautiful."

Although the salary is enough to live on, said the silver-haired groomer, at each new stop she always looks for the most inexpensive motel she can find. One that has a good hot shower and a soft bed.

While working in Du Quoin, Annie has made her bed outside Mechete Almhurst's stable, along side the other groomers.

Before her grooming days, Annie graduated from two colleges, worked as an assistant statistician for brokerage houses in Los Angeles and Chicago and served as a Lt. j.g. in the Navy during World War II.

Divorced several years ago, Annie explained that she has no real family to speak of, although she has one son who she has seen only once in 17 years.

"He's a wandering soul and I don't know him very well," she said with a trace of sadness in her voice. "But I don't like talking about that much."

"There's something special about working with harness racing that I didn't find while working with show horses," she explained. "I admire the trotter's ability to stay consistent at one speed and then be able to maintain that same pace at a much faster speed. It takes many long hours and a lot of patience to develop that preciseness."

Unlike most men or women her age, Annie's average day begins at 3:45 a.m. when she cleans the stall, waters and feeds her horse and then jogs him for the first of several jogging sessions.

After the workout she bathes him, covers him with the proper cover for the weather and walks him until he is bone dry. Once again he is cleaned, curried and Annie brushes him and puts clay into his hoofs to protect them.

"Harness racing is a little like drugs. Once it gets into your system you're lost without them," Annie said with a soft chuckle.

In the nine years that she has been coming to the Du Quoin State Fair, Annie has never worked with a Hambletonian entry. A few years ago, however, she worked with a two-year-old trotter named Burning Speed who was a top money winning colt.

"I thought for sure I'd finally gotten a Hambo entry, but by the time she was three years old she wasn't sound enough to qualify," Annie said.

Admitting that sometimes she feels odd being the oldest worker in the stables, Annie said everybody gets along just fine, with a few squabbles now and then.

"I don't plan on retiring," Annie said with a smile of contentment. "I'm going to work as long as I'm able."

Things you always wanted to know about the great race

By Carrie Sweeney
Focus Editor

The name Hambletonian was derived from the famous race horse sire, Hambletonian 10. Purchased by William Rysdyk in 1849, Hambletonian 10 is the direct male ancestor of 99 percent of all the American standardbred trotters and pacers. Sired from a distempered 25-year-old horse who sold for $10 and whose dam was a crippled mare, Hambletonian 10 reportedly earned his master $200,000 in stud fees.

In 1939, while the Hambletonian was hosted at Good Time Park in Goshen, N.Y., the traveling trophy tradition began. Signifying the greatness of the race, the huge reverse bowl is decorated with a bas-relief head of a harness horse.

The largest starting field in the past 54 Hambletonian seasons was 23 in 1953. While in Du Quoin, the largest field was 22 in 1974. The smallest field represented was six in 1921.

Bonefish, in 1975, is the only winner of the Hambletonian that did not win either the first or second heat. Bonefish, the sire of Netted in this year's contenders, won the third and fourth heats.

In the 24 years the Hambletonian has been raced at Du Quoin, the world trotting record for three year olds has been covered or equalled on nine occasions. The world record breakers were Emily's Pride in 1973, Floris in 1963, Ayres in 1964, Super Bowl in 1972, Flirth in 1973. Bonefish in 1975, Steve Lobell in 1976, Green Speed in 1977 and Speedy Somolli in 1978.

In 1960, Du Quoin Fair saw its first four-heat race, something that had not been seen at the Hambletonian since 1934. Winner Blaze Hanover, who took the first heat in 1:59, lost the second and third sets to Quick Song and Hoot Frost. But, he stretched in the fourth to win a record purse of $144,590.

Kerry Way, a Gainesway Farm filly, became the 11th and last filly to win the Hambletonian. She did so by winning two consecutive heats with times of 1:58 and 1:59.

Drivers Delvin Miller (Devil Hanover) and Joe O'Brien (Leonard Hanover) will both be making their 26th appearances in the Hambletonian.

Bill Haughton, Stanley Dancer and Howard Beissinger, who all have leading contenders for this year's race, have each won three Hambletonians and between them have won nine of the last 12 races.

Teachers' union strikes

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—The staff members of Illinois' largest teacher's union usually are providing professional strike assistance this time of year. But Thursday they were in strike themselves—against, you guessed it, the teacher's union.

The tiny union of 52 professional union employees has refused a 3 percent pay raise offered by the 60,000-member Illinois Education Association and has been on strike since last Friday.

Even more ironic, this strike comes at a time when dozens of Illinois teachers were on strike in various school districts around the state.

Larry Lawley, head of the little union, claims management is "flim-flamming" the 3 percent offer to make it appear as if it is about 9 percent.

"It's certainly ironic," he said. "When it comes to negotiating with its own employees, they whistle a different tune."

"It's exactly what they chide school boards for doing when they bargain with teachers," he added. "They're flim-flamming he offer that they have on the table."

IEA vice president Reg Weaver acknowledged the offer is only 3 percent in new pay, and said the teacher's union is outing fringe benefits when it talks about 9 percent.

Weaver refused to characterize the IEA's bargaining stance as "flim-flamming."

PUSH: Promotions exclude blacks

CHICAGO (AP) — The civil rights organization Operation PUSH charged Thursday that black firefighters were unfairly excluded from the 102 promotions of city firefighters announced earlier this week. The newly appointed fire commissioner, William R. Blair, said Tuesday that 52 firefighters would be promoted to the rank of fire engineer and about 50 more to the rank of fire lieutenant, effective immediately.

The Rev. George E. Riddick, a PUSH spokesman, said at a news conference Thursday that the new promotions will see "at most 15 (black firefighters) move to the rank of lieutenant and engineer."

Of 600 or more lieutenants, only 45 to 50 are black, Riddick said. He also said fewer than 15 of the 250 captains and only one of the 100 battalion chiefs are black.

Song remains the same despite new guys in Yes

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer
With special thanks to Mike Bell.

Despite the absence of its two oldest members, Yes continues to produce a sound that reflects over ten years of semi-progressive, classically rooted rock 'n' roll.

Yes fans won't be surprised to hear that the group's new album, "Drama," doesn't stray far from the typical Yes style of abstract lyrics, classical timing, bits of baroque sound and distinct mood and tempo changes. What comes as a surprise is that the group can continue to sound the same without Jon Anderson and Rick Wakeman True. Wakeman has left the group before and it maintained its style, but one wonders how two new members could change the group so little.

The new guys, keyboardist Geoff Downes and bassist Trevor Horn, both from a group called Buggles, succeed in playing and sounding like the same Yes of five years ago. Downes and Horn had one pop hit with the Buggles, "Video Killed the Radio Star." Thankfully, that bubblegum gook isn't an indication of what to expect out of Downes and Horn on "Drama." Some parts of "Drama" have definite traces of New Wave, particularly: "White Car" and "Does It Really Happen" on side one. However, for the most part, the album is reminiscent of "Fragile" without the technical brilliance and orchestration. Downes doesn't use an artillery of keyboard trickery, but he sticks with the flamboyant and driving style.

The classical riffs are there, the meaty instrumentals, the two and three-part songs and the lyrical obscurity.

Compared to Yes' last effort, the whimsical "Tormato," a rather overdrawn album full of fairy tales and flying saucers—"Drama" shows that Yes has left its days of "flash-rock." "The Yes Album" and "Close to the Edge" behind and has become more of a song band. The lyrics, though still abstract, seem to have more direction and the inclusion of semi-New Wave sounding synthesizer backdrops offer a more upbeat collection of songs.

An afterthought: The album's dramatic art and cover design is done by Roger Dean and Magnetic Storm Ltd., the same outfit that traditionally designed past Yes album covers. (Album courtesy of Plaza Records.)

Anderson campaign media expert's hands

WASHINGTON (AP)—Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson, strapped for cash and falling in the public opinion polls, gave New York media consultant David Garth full control Thursday over running his campaign.

In a major staff shakeup, three senior campaign aides resigned, informed sources said. All were veterans of the Illinois Republican congressman's 14-month quest for the White House.

The sources said Anderson lost deputy campaign director Edward Coyle, campaign treasurer Francis Sheehan and chief scheduler Michael Fernandez.

At the same time, the Anderson campaign canceled a planned four-day whistlestop train tour across five states, partly because there was not enough cash on hand to pay for the trip.

In the new campaign staff alignment, campaign spokesman Michael Rosenbaum said Garth would move from his New York office and become campaign director in Washington.

Michael MacLeod, the current campaign manager, will remain but play a clearly subsidiary role to Garth, a New York advertising whiz who gained a reputation for crafting television commercials to elect underdog New York politicians to office.

Coyle and Sheehan both were top aides in the 1976 presidential campaign of Rep. Morris Udall.

Fernandez, 30, a Harvard Law School graduate, worked in a number of other campaigns, including California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s presidential campaign earlier this year.

All three aides had been

Cars' new album re-establishes the art of 'drone-beat' sound

By Randy Lynch
WIDB Music Director

In 1978, the New Wave sound began to establish itself. Elvis Costello and Devo found a truly devoted cult audience. Blondie and the Talking Heads found that if they added a hint of a disco beat, they could reach beyond the die-hards to a mass audience. But only the Cars jumped into the limelight with the new sound that was an instant commercial success.

Review

The Cars hit the charts with the release of "Just What I Needed" and stayed there for months on the strength of the follow-up hits "My Best Friend's Girl" and "Let the Good Times Roll." By giving FM radio programmers the sound they wanted plus hooks and choruses that the adolescent record buyers could relate to, the Cars came up with the biggest debut LP since Boston.

But these days, the New Wave is at an ebb. Of the hundreds of new bands with albums out last summer, only a score or so have been heard from again. But, with the release of their new album "Panorama," the Cars have re-established the state-of-the-art of the "drone-beat" sound.

It is perhaps the Cars' keenness of sight that is their greatest asset. As the title would suggest, the band has observed the "Panorama," the big picture of the music industry, looking for the next trend. The songs on the album are evidence that the Cars are in the process of creating that trend.

The tunes still sound like Cars tunes but the arrangements lean more towards the keyboards than before. The hooks and fills which have distinguished the Cars' sound from the start were originally guitar oriented, but are now mostly synthesized. Elliot Easton's guitar work is still distinctive, but Greg Hawkes' keyboards now dominate the mix.

Ric Ocasek is still the driving force behind the Cars, having once again written all the cuts. His purely objective approach to songwriting has maintained the Cars as forerunners of the musical vogue. However, Ocasek's observational distance is a drawback when it comes to conveying some emotion.

As the Cars' music strays further from the mainstream, so do Ocasek's lyrics. He attempts to bridge the chasm between himself and the listener by writing in first or second person, but some of his futuristic metaphors are so oblique that they are incomprehensible.

For instance, a song with a simple title like "Gimme Some Slack" sounds like something that even the most average of listeners could relate to. But when it starts with lyrics like "I wanna shake like liguardia..." Ocasek may as well be speaking in tongues.

Bassist Benjamin Orr and David Robinson on drums form the beat that fuels the Cars. Producer Roy Thomas Baker fills every space between the beat with a whoosh or a beep backed by the ever-present drone. Baker is as good a producer as anyone, from a technical standpoint. However, there is evidence of overindulgence on his part without the innovation to justify it.

If the Cars continue in the same vein, they be the band who, like Chance the gardener, "likes to watch." Rock music needs bands that do more than just care about "being there" when the new trend hits. However, if you've been missing out on the drone-beat sound, "Panorama" will give you a good view of what it looks like from the top.

Complaint filed in midst of tight race

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Aides to Democratic congressional candidate David Robinson filed a complaint Thursday alleging that veteran Republican Rep. Paul Findley is abusing his mailing privileges to help win re-election.

Findley's top aide in Washington denied that the 10-term congressman was doing anything improper with his "franking" privileges.

Congressman Findley adheres to the regulations and rules very strictly. This is the first complaint he's had in 20 years," Robert Wichser said by phone from Washington.

Robinson and Findley are locked in a heated struggle in the 20th District in Central Illinois. Findley acknowledges that it is his toughest campaign since he was first elected in 1960.

Stephen Stone, Robinson's campaign manager, filed the complaint with the federal agency that ensures members of Congress don't abuse their taxpayer-funded mailing privileges.

"The action I'm taking is a very serious one," said Stone.

"The incumbent in a congressional race gets enough benefit from his incumbency."

Members of Congress are allowed to mail information free to their constituents under their "frank" or signature.

Stone claimed Findley has exceeded the limit of six mass mailings in a calendar year, has exceeded guidelines on "laudatory" material and is also sending out campaign information.

He noted a list Findley's Washington office recently had mailed out, which included a schedule of campaign appearances.

Findley campaign official Don Norton acknowledged earlier this week that the list of campaign appearances was mistakenly sent out at taxpayer expense. He said the Findley campaign reimbursed the government for that postage.

But Wichser denied that Findley had sent out seven mass mailings, saying there have been only three district-wide mailings and one to Springfield residents.

Any mailings addressed to a specific person, not just "Postal Patron" are allowable under the franking rules, Wichser said. He said schedules of "Town Meetings" are also allowable.

"In each case, the items he (Stone) has referred to have been approved by the franking commission before they were sent out," said Wichser.

University family housing filled and the waiting lists are long

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

All University family housing units are filled and the waiting lists for apartments are long, according to Betty Waller, family housing business manager.

Waller said there are no vacancies at Evergreen Terrace, located southwest of campus, or at Southern Hills on the far southeast end of campus. But Waller said applications for the two locations are still being accepted.

She said some residents move out without giving the required notice which makes some units available for persons on the waiting lists.

"Anyone interested should apply," Waller said. "Although the waiting lists are long, and housing seems to be much tighter this year than usual, some of those people applied over a year ago and aren't even in town anymore."

Residents in family housing are required to give the University 30-days notice before vacating or they are charged an extra month's rent, Waller said. Those sudden vacancies make room for more families, she said.

Waller said interested families should inquire despite the waiting lists because lists for some apartments are shorter than others. The apartments at Southern Hills and Evergreen Terrace vary in size and rent.

Evergreen Terrace has two- and three- bedroom apartments ranging in price from $168 to $183 a month. Southern Hills has furnished and unfurnished one- and two- bedroom apartments ranging from $156 to $186 a month, Waller said. The apartments at Evergreen Terrace are not furnished.

Married graduate and undergraduate students may live at Southern Hills if they can show proof of marriage, Waller said. Southern Hills also has 12 apartments for single students, but the wait for those apartments is usually at least a year.

Evergreen Terrace is subsidized by the Federal Housing Administration. Students must meet FHA financial need requirements in order to live in the complex, Waller said.

FHA regulations state that the income for a family in Evergreen Terrace may be no more than $14,100 for a two-person family, $15,900 for a three-person family, $17,650 for a four-person family, $18,750 for a five-person family.

BYRNE VISITS EUROPE

PARIS (AP)—Mayor Jane Byrne of Chicago began a 12-day European visit to improve her city's international image Thursday with meetings in Paris with French cultural and diplomatic officials.

She will remain in Paris for four days.

Mayor Byrne said she and her cabinet officers will meet with their French counterparts in the Paris city government and will study urban renewal projects in the city.

Chicago police arrest three; seize $5 million in cocaine

CHICAGO (AP) — Police arrested two men and a woman and seized $5 million worth of cocaine, six pounds of marijuana and a high-powered rifle at a North Side condominium, an official said.

Marty Holtzman, 30, was arrested late Wednesday night in his North Side apartment as he returned from Miami carrying 10 pounds of "95 percent pure" cocaine, said police Lt. Lawrence S. Forberg.

Arrested with him were Arnaldo Narquez, 38, of Miami and Dianna Martinez, 38, of Brooklyn, N.Y., Forberg said.

All three persons were held Thursday on charges of possession of a controlled substance, possession of marijuana and unlawful use of a weapon. Court dates and bond had not been set.

Forberg said eight officers were waiting for Holtzman in his $100,000 condominium when he came in carrying a brown leather suitcase. The lieutenant said the suitcase contained four plastic bags, each containing about 2½ pounds of cocaine.

The marijuana and rifle were found in the apartment, he said.

East meets West as 2 stores move into new locations

NEW YORK (AP)—East is East and West is West, but sometimes the twain do meet. Neiman-Marcus is coming to New York and Abercrombie & Fitch has gone to Dallas.

The Abercrombie store opened in Texas on Thursday, with the same kind of exotic merchandise that once drew well-heeled sportsmen, including Theodore Roosevelt, to New York to suit up for adventure.

Neiman's will open its New York area branch, in the Westchester County suburb of White Plains, on Sept. 8. The merchandise, said spokesman Keith Nix, will be suited to the "very affluent market with well-educated and conservative tastes."

It's not exactly an even swap. Dallas gets to keep its Neiman's. And New York hasn't had an Abercrombie's since late 1977 when the chain went bankrupt after 85 years in business and the Madison Avenue store and eight branches around the country were closed. Even the fittings were sold. The bear's head sent on the auction block. So did the life-size papier-mache horse.

The name Abercrombie & Fitch was bought by Oshman's Sporting Goods of Houston. The company says the Dallas store—practically right across the street from a Neiman's branch—will be followed by a New York Abercrombie's within two years.

"The adventure comes to Dallas," announced an advertisement for Abercrombie's in a Texas magazine. "We've hunted with Teddy Roosevelt deep in the interior of Africa and we've landed benefish in the shallows off Belize. And now we've opened in Dallas."

While Abercrombie's was lining up exotica like elephant guns to tempt the Texans, Neiman's, which is famous for the extravagant and sometimes outrageous items in its Christmas catalogue ("His" and "Her" airplanes, anyone?), was getting ready for New Yorkers.

The store isn't in New York City itself. Neiman's is owned by Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc., of Los Angeles, the same firm that owns Bergdorf-Goodman. Nix, said Bergdorf, is already "firmly entrenched" in the city on a block-long chunk of Fifth Avenue between 57th and 58th Streets. So Neiman's opted for White Plains, about 45 minutes north of Broadway.

The company took over a store once used by Bergdorf's and refurbished it. Nix won't say how much the remodeling cost. The White Plains branch will be Neiman No. 13. The chain already has branches in Texas—three in Dallas and one each in Fort Worth and Houston, and in Atlanta, Bal Harbor, Fla.; Washington, D.C.; Northbrook, Ill.; St. Louis and Newport Beach and Beverly Hills, Calif.

Neiman's president Philip Miller said Westchester is different from Texas. "It is not the same acquiring society that is very evident in Texas," he said. "It's a society that I think is more established and is perhaps more investment-oriented than spending-oriented."

Miller said the price range will be medium to high—we haven't changed that. But there will be plenty of gift items for under $10 as well as furs and jewelry at $100,000 plus.

Campus Briefs

Recreation for Special Populations: an Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports program, is taking applications for coach for the wheelchair basketball team (SIU Squids). Applications are at the Recreation Center Information Desk.

Memorial Hospital is offering a diabetes mellitus workshop for health professionals 8 a.m.-4 p.m., Sept. 5, in the second floor classroom of the Family Practice Center. The workshop is designed for nurses and dietitians who want to learn more about the disease and its management and is accredited for 8 contact hours by INA. There is a fee of $15. Lunch is provided. Those interested should preregister Friday by calling Marlene Matten at 549-0721, extension 141.

The Carbondale post office will operate on a holiday schedule during Labor Day, Sept. 1. There will be no regular residential or business mail deliveries and access to lockboxes will be the only lobby service available. Special delivery and express mail will be delivered during the holiday weekend. Mail pick-up from collection boxes will be on holiday schedule as posted on individual boxes. Self-service postal centers will be available during the holiday at the student center and at the main post office by the University Mall.

SOAR will sponsor a free bike tour 8 a.m. on Saturday and a one-day rock climbing seminar on Monday. Participants should register in advance. For details, contact Clem Dabrowski at 457-0348.

A photography exhibit by James Sudalnik, Ph.D. student in Educational Media and former producer-director for Triton College, will be featured through Sept. 7 at the Student Center Exhibit Area on the second floor.

The Shawnee Food Network will hold its annual general membership meeting at 7:30 p.m., Sept. 24, at the New Life Center on Grand and Illinois Avenues. Members and general public are invited.

WHAT'S THE WORST THING THAT COULD HAPPEN??

You pick up the telephone, ask some questions and make an appointment to speak with one of the SIU faculty. You go to the appointment, find out that not only could you be on scholarship next year, but you could be on the payroll of one of the largest and most prestigious organizations in the world with a starting annual salary of $12,700 after graduation. You also learn that this organization will pay you at least $1,800.00 even before you graduate. Then you go home and think it over. You came away with some valuable detailed information at no cost or risk to you in any way. Call us at Air Force ROTC today. What's the worst thing that can happen??

Hot, cold feds say Dirksen Building temperatures may 'impede justice'

(CHICAGO (AP)) — One federal judge says he caught a cold because of the heating system, another threatened to hold the landlord in contempt of court because of the air conditioning system.

Now, the U.S. attorney says he has been threatened with losing his office space because he complains about the temperatures in the Dirksen Federal Building.

However, a GSA spokesman denied a threat had been made. U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Sullivan says he received what he considers a threat in a letter from the General Services Administration, which manages the building. In the letter, GSA regional administrator Clarence S. Sochowski suggested Sullivan's offices might be relocated to another building.

"That is a veiled threat" to "get us off their backs," Sullivan's executive assistant Beverly Parkhurst said Wednesday.

She said Sullivan's staff, as well as employees in other federal offices there, have been complaining for almost two years about temperatures that reach the 90s during the summer and the 50s during the winter.

"The FBI, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Immigration and Naturalization Service — you name the agency in this building and almost every one has had difficulty with the GSA in terms of heating or cooling as well as other problems," Mrs. Parkhurst said.

A number of U.S. District Court judges have criticized the GSA from their benches.

Last fall, Judge John Powers Crowley, charging that the heat in his courtroom was disrupting his proceedings and impeding justice, threatened to hold the GSA in contempt of court.

Judge Prentice Marshall, trying a heating and ventilating bid-rigging case, in June sentenced two contractors to offer their services to the GSA as part of their probation.

And last week, with perspiration visible on the foreheads of his jurors in a criminal case, Judge Marvin E.

Aspen had to call a recess in a trial, his court clerk said. The judge sent both attorneys in the case and the 12 jurors downstairs to the GSA building manager's second-floor offices to complain about the temperatures.

In the summer, "Lawyers can't work because of the heat or have to directly spend time calling GSA people to get adjustments," Mrs. Parkhurst said. "And they (GSA) come in here and take our time when they are supposedly doing something — all they do is swing thermometers around. They say they are making adjustments but they are just swinging thermometers around and they are absolutely incompetent."

In the winter, she said, temperatures are so cold that "secretaries can't type." She said the temperature problems occur routinely and consistently.

"They tell you everything from 'We've fixed it' to 'We are fixing it' to 'It can't be fixed because of energy guidelines,'" she said. "You might believe (Continued on Page 29)"

EPA approves gas-saving device

WASHINGTON (AP)—A device motorists can use to improve gas mileage has been given a stamp of approval from the Environmental Protection Agency, the first such gadget to win government approval.

The EPA said the "Pass Master Vehicle Air Conditioner Compressor Cut-Off Device" can result in gasoline savings of up to 4 percent on cars using air conditioners.

The device, which sells for under $15, disengages the air conditioning compressor from the engine during heavy acceleration, allowing a car to speed up without the extra power demand from the air conditioning compressor.

The cut-off device is connected to the car's intake manifold and is activated when it senses the vacuum drop which occurs during peak demands of power such as starting from a dead stop, passing or climbing hills.

"Since typical heavy accelerations last only about 5 to 30 seconds, most people won't notice any change in the air conditioning level in the passenger compartment," the agency said.

Numerous products are on the market which claim to improve gas mileage, but the EPA said the Pass Master was the first of 40 devices it had tested which showed a "statistically significant" improvement in mileage.

The agency said the Pass Master, which is manufactured by Hale Industries of Cocoa, Fla., has "no safety problems, should be easy for the average consumer to install and generally reduces pollutant emissions from the tailpipe."

College receiving heavy response to questionnaire on student retention

By Karen Clare
Staff Writer

The responses to a survey on student retention are coming in greater numbers than expected, according to Mary Lou McCauliff, assistant dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, and she couldn't be more surprised.

McCauliff, who is heading the college's research on student retention, said the responses are coming in even before the last batch of questionnaires has been mailed out.

The study, which began last spring, is an attempt to find out why students who were in good academic standing and those who were enrolled in college dropped out of school before completing their degrees.

McCauliff's first task was to identify students who left SIUC between 1975 and the spring semester 1980. McCauliff said she picked 1975 because campus unrest in the last 1960s and early 1970s may have had a major effect on student retention rates.

After obtaining a list of students to be surveyed, McCauliff composed a questionnaire to determine the students' reasons for leaving. "Were they concerned about the faculty, the quality of instruction? We want to find any possible reason why they left," she explained.

Over half of the more than 2,000 questionnaires have been sent out and the remainder will be mailed Friday. McCauliff said she was concerned that many former students wouldn't respond, but she said the response, so far, has surprised her.

"People have been phoning in to thank us and tell us their survey is on the way," she said.

The results of the survey should be completed by late fall. McCauliff said the results will indicate whether the reasons students leave are college-related or campus-related. If reasons are related to the college, the college can use the information to improve the curricula, course requirements or academic advisement in the college's various departments. If the causes are campus-related, the information can be passed on to the appropriate offices.

The study is the first student retention study conducted by a college at SIUC. McCauliff said it could set a precedent for student retention research by other colleges at the University.

Hostage's family says mail, prayers have been comfort during long wait

GLOBE, Ariz. (AP) — Boxes stacked in the hallway are stuffed with letters postmarked from West Germany, England, Canada, Mexico and New Zealand, as well as from all over the United States.

They've been arriving since Nov. 4, 1979.

Kindness and concern from people around the world have helped ease the anxiety, anger, sorrow and sleepless nights which the family of 22-year-old Marine Sgt. Jimmy Lopez has experienced the past 300 days — the time Lopez and 51 other Americans have been held hostage in Iran.

"What's really touching to me is that a lot of mothers have sent a prayer or poem that sustained them at the time their sons were at war," said Mary Lopez, a mother of six and grandmother of five. "It's such a personal touch and I know that they really care."

Then there's Lucille, a woman who began writing to the Lopez's 9-year-old daughter, Marcie, last December.

"Periodically, Marcie gets a little package with some little surprise inside," said Mrs. Lopez. "She doesn't know Lucille but she loves her."

Their neighbors in this copper mining town of 9,000 have also tried to comfort the Lopezes. The family is Roman Catholic, and solace has come from many other religious denominations.

"About a month ago, or maybe longer, these two ladies and a man drove up," recalled Jesse Lopez, a timekeeper for Kennecott Corp. "They got out, and they had a yellow rose floral arrangement. They were from a Methodist church group."

Local Mormons organized prayer services for the family. And from their living room window, the Lopezes can see across the hills to a large cross that is lit up nightly on behalf of Jimmy Lopez.

"The caretakers are Catholic but the Baptist church pays for the cost of the electricity," said Mrs. Lopez.

The family's calendar doesn't record the length of the hostage situation—which remains deadlocked with the Iranian Parliament yet to decide the captives' fate.

"I know it's been a long time," said Mrs. Lopez. "but I don't keep track of the days. This week I'm being reminded that it's 300 days. Yesterday is gone by and forgotten. I look forward to tomorrow, that some good news may come in."

There are signs of strain, however. Jesse Lopez continues to smoke, a habit he didn't have until his son was taken captive. He is trying to finish a rock wall in front of the hillside home—a project Jimmy started when he was in high school.

"I take my frustrations out on that," said the elder Lopez.

Mrs. Lopez says she has trouble sleeping, so she works on jigsaw puzzles in the middle of the night.

Lori, 16, who had been a cheerleader since seventh grade, dropped out of school this year. "She doesn't really feel like it now," said her mother.

She and Marcie make sure the vigil candle on the fireplace mantel is always lit, and that the yellow ribbon around the mail box—the symbol of waiting used by other hostage families—is secure.

Two new acting directors named

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Two new persons have been named to head the Radio-Television Department and STU Broadcasting Service.

K.S. Sitaram, professor of radio-television, was named acting director for the Radio-Television Department and Jim Moore, Broadcasting Service engineer, was appointed acting director of Broadcasting Service. Both posts were formerly held by H. Eugene Dybvig, who returned to teaching duties Aug. 15.

In the past, one director headed both the Radio-Television Department and Broadcasting Service, which operates the WSU-FM and two Public Broadcasting Service outlets, WSU-TV and WUSI-TV. However, a department study conducted last year concluded that the operation of the two units could be improved by having two directors, according to C.B. Hunt, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts. Students in the Radio-Television Department use WSU equipment and studios in "hands-on" courses.

The reorganization will not affect the way student programs are handled because the two directors will work together on matters that apply to both units, Hunt said.

Hunt said meetings will be held within the department during the next two to three weeks to discuss other recommendations from the study. Representatives from the department will then meet with administrators in the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research.

The department study was conducted by members of the radio-television faculty. Their findings were reviewed by several experts from outside the department who gave additional recommendations, Hunt said. A department study is conducted every three years, he added.

Sitaram has been a member of the broadcasting faculty since January 1979. A specialist in broadcasting and communications theory, Sitaram has taught at the University of Hawaii, Governor's State University and Utah State University.

Moore joined Broadcasting Service in 1964 as a broadcast engineer and was made chief engineer in 1976. Before coming to SIUC, he was a broadcast engineer at WHBQ-TV in Memphis, Tenn.

Teachers remain out in 13 districts

By The Associated Press

Teachers remained on strike Thursday in 13 school districts in Illinois, but in five other districts teachers ended their walkouts and returned to their classrooms.

Settlements were reached in Carlyle, Metropolis, Carrollton, Litchfield and at Belleville Althoff Catholic High School, sending nearly 8,000 students back to school.

The Collinsville Education Association has been ordered to court Friday in Madison County to show why they should not be held in contempt of a 2-year-old strike injunction. Classes for 6,500 students have been delayed since Monday.

Strikes also continued in Johnson City, Murphysboro, East Richland School District in Olney, St. Joseph-Ogden High School in Champaign County, Mounds-Meridian, Benton Elementary, Carlinville, Elverado-Elkville, Cartersville, District 230 in Chicago's southern suburbs, Franklin in Morgan County and Ilini Bluffs in Glasford.

About 17,000 students are affected by the walkouts. Students joined teachers and parents on the picket lines Thursday in several communities.

Carlyle teachers accepted a 14 percent wage hike and a one-year contract in an agreement hammered out Wednesday in a Clinton County courtroom under the supervision of Circuit Judge Ronald Niemann of Salem.

Teacher spokesman John Reed said the board granted the teachers complete amnesty but will dock them two days' pay and force them to make up another two days missed during the four-day strike.

Metropolis teachers accepted a 9 percent wage increase offered after two days of intense negotiations in the Southern Illinois city. The 145 teachers voted late Wednesday to return to classes.

The 44 teachers in the Carrollton district accepted a two-year settlement of 18 percent with the board agreeing to let them distribute the raise as they want over the two years.

The board also docked the teachers one day and offered a non-reprisal clause.

Ben Copenhaver, a spokesman in the GSA regional office, denied that the agency's letter to Sullivan was intended as a threat. He said part of the letter did mention a possible move but was in response to earlier correspondence Sullivan has had regarding the need for expanded office space.

Copenhaver said the GSA is aware that some of the tenants have been "displeased" but added that heating and cooling problems in the building have been only "periodic."

"At times in the winter, some of the heating units have malfunctioned ... most of the building functions fairly normally within the president's energy guidelines," he said

This is the course the Du Quoin State Fair's 10,000-meter race will follow. The race starts at 7:30 a.m. Saturday in front of the main grandstand at the fairgrounds.

Du Quoin racing not just for horses

By Scott Stahmer

Associate Sports Editor
Hambletonian Day's racing card at the Du Quoin State Fair isn't just for horses. The B & J Olympia Beer Distributing Company is sponsoring the Great People Race Saturday at 7:30 a.m. on the fairgrounds. The 10,000-meter (6.2-mile) race is open to all runners—as long as they're human—and will be split into 10 age groupings for men and women. The divisions are 19 and under, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49, 50-54, 55-59 and 60 and older. There is no entry fee, but all runners must turn in $50 in pledges from sponsors. That money will go to the Easter seal Society.

For younger runners, a one-mile fun run will be staged on the dirt track in front of the State Fair grandstand. The entry fee is a $10 minimum donation.

Awards given will include Hambletonian Day T-shirts for all finishers, and trophies will be awarded to male and female winners in each age group. Special trophies will be presented to the male and female runners with the lowest time overall, and to runners who raise the most money for the Easter Seal Society. The race will be held entirely within the confines of the Du Quoin State Fair complex, with the first 1½ miles to be run on the Hambletonian dirt track. After that, the course is composed of asphalt and gravel roads that traverse a rolling, wooded section of the fairgrounds. Water and first aid will be available at one-, three- and five-mile check points, as well as at the finish line. Free beer and Gatorade also will be provided at the finish.

There is no race day registration, but entry forms were still available Friday at the Du Quoin State Fair's main gate and the Easter Seal Society office at 801 S. Oakland Ave. in Carbondale.

Maturity should bolster harriers

better than they did last year, and from what they've indicated so far they will, then I have to say we'll be one tough team," the coach said.

Lettermen Mike Choffin and Bill Laser will be joined by newcomers Mike Keane, Tom Breen, Craig Schwartz and Jorge Carreno to complete the SIU roster.

Keane, a sophomore who sat out last season, as did Breen and Schwartz, are being counted on by Hartzog to provide much-needed depth during SIU's typically difficult schedule.

The Salukis open their season against state-rival Illinois at Midland Hills Country Club Sept. 13. SIU then takes to the road for its next two duals, Sept. 20 at Illinois State and Sept. 26 at Kansas. The dual season closes at home against Murray State, Oct. 3.

"We could go through the dual season without a win," Hartzog said. "Illinois didn't lose anyone. ISU lost only one runner, Kansas is always good and Murray has all their Englishmen back.

"Sure, we've got our work cut out for us," Hartzog added. "But what the hell, if you're going to run, you might as well run against someone good. That usually brings out the best in the athletes."

When the dual season ends, SIU will travel to Bloomington, Ind., for the Indiana Invitational on Oct. 11. The following weekends, SIU will compete in the Illinois Intercollegiate, Missouri Valley Conference championships and the NCAA District V meet.

"Illinois State is the team to beat in the Intercollegiate and the Valley meet," Hartzog said of the MVC's newest member. "I seriously don't like losing to ISU, but I can't avoid them anymore."

Statistics takers are needed for cagers' practices

Women students interested in taking statistics during the men's basketball team's practices should contact Assistant Coach Tim Somerville in the basketball office in Room 118 of the Arena.

Somerville said the statisticians will be responsible for keeping track of shooting, rebounding and defensive statistics during Saluki practices, which will get underway Oct. 15. He added that anyone interested should enjoy and know something about basketball, although no experience is necessary.

Somerville said three or four statisticians will be chosen, and anyone interested should contact him within the next few weeks.

1980 Hambletonian has no clear favorite

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

A trotter's a horse, of course, of course. But which of the trotters should you endorse as a sure bet to win the Hambletonian Trotting Classic Saturday at the Du Quoin State Fair?

It's one of those years where you wish horses could talk because even the shrewdest of harness racing experts come up empty when you ask them if there's a prohibitive favorite.

In past years, there have been entries that stood head and shoulders above the rest, but the field for Du Quoin's grand finale this year is not one of the most outstanding to come along in recent history.

Early this summer, a pair of 3-year-olds from the Swedish stable of Hakan Wallner and Jan Johnson showed signs of going to the head of the class. The year's fastest mile among 3-year-olds was turned in by Nettle at one minute 56.2 seconds, while Rodney's Best had chalked up six straight stakes victories at one point in the season.

But persistent injuries led to the scratching of both horses Wednesday morning prior to the drawing for post positions. It left a field of 19 horses to run in two elimination heats; the first starting at 1:50 p.m. and the second at 2:10. The top five finishers from each race will run at 3:20. If no entry has won two races after that one, the winners of the first three will run at 4:40.

The purse of $293,570 is the second highest in Hambletonian history. Half of it will go to the winner.

As of Wednesday afternoon, the unofficial odds listed three 2-1 favorites: Noble Hustle, which will line up on the inside rail in the first elimination heat, Thor Viking, the post-sitter in the second heat, and Dixon Hanover, which will be three positions from the inside rail in the second heat.

Beverly Hills, Cal., and driven by Doug Ackerman, Noble Hustle was voted Two-Year-Old Trotter of the Year in 1979 after taking 11 wins in 19 starts. This year has been shaky, however, as a cut just above the hairline on his right front ankle took a great deal of time to heal and set his training back severely. He did run his season's best mile of 1:58.2 last week in the Horseman Futurity at Indianapolis.

Thor Viking, one of four Hambo entries from the Wallman-Johnson stable, has had only two victories in 16 starts this year, but has the second-highest earnings in the Hambletonian field with $159,536. His best time this year was 1:57.8 at Syracuse on August 16.

Dixon Hanover, which will be one of two entries to be driven by Johnson on the day (the other is 15-1 shot Speedy Bones in the first heat) has not impressed this season, starting only seven times and finishing third once.

There will be two entries from the stables of famed trainer-driver Billy Haughton; Final Score in the first heat and Burgomeister in the second heat. Neither entry drew a good post position as Final Score drew no. 8 and Burgomeister No. 9. Robert Haughton, a son of Billy and a driver himself, admitted both post positions hurt the Haughtons' chances.

"I still think anything could happen," Robert said. "Our horses are the sharpest we've ever seen them. I'll admit the post hurt us a little, but that's the way it goes."

Final Score, which will be driven by Robert's brother Tommy, was listed at 4-1 with the field's fastest time this year, 1:57.2. Burgomeister will be guided by Billy, and is listed at 5-2. Burgomeister was owned by Peter Haughton, another young driving star who was killed in a car accident last January in New Jersey.

"A lot of us are pulling for Burgomeister," Robert said. "Since my brother owned him, he's become kind of a sentimental favorite with us. Even my father says Burgomeister could out-trot Final Score. We worked him Wednesday morning and he looked pretty good."

Other entries which looked good in the odds were Wonder Child, (3-1), to be driven by Hugh Parrshall in the No. 5 spot in the first heat, and Nevelle Impulse, (5-2), to be driven by Dick Macomber in the No. 4 spot in the second heat. Nevelle Impulse is this year's top money winner with $163,000.

"Drawing No. 4 won't hurt our chances too much," said Macomber. "It's as good as anything else because this is the kind of year where you have several contenders that are right up there together."

Two drivers will probably be attracting as much attention at the Hambletonian as the horses. Billy Haughton and Howard Beissinger have each won three Hambos, and between them have won nine of the last 12. Beissinger will guide Choctaw Brave, a 15-1 shot, from the No. 2 spot in the first heat. He also will be driving Super Crown, an 8-1 choice, from the No. 6 position in the second heat.

Tickets are $15, $7 and $5 and will be available at the grandstand box office Saturday.

Lathan's act is geared toward Saluki success

By Rod Smith

He's got a tough act to follow and some big shoes to fill.

Raifield Lathan, a senior and two-year letterman for the Saluki football team, has his work cut out for him this season. Lathan will take over the split end position vacated by all-Missouri Valley Conference wide receiver Kevin House, now playing for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League.

"There's no way I can fill Kevin's shoes," Lathan said. "I'll just go out and do my best to contribute and help our football team."

Although Lathan will inherit House's wide receiver slot, he may wish the speedy split end were still around just for his passing ability.

Last year, Lathan was on the receiving end of two long bombs from House on the end-around pass. He caught a 41-yard pass from House that set up a touchdown in the 41-38 Saluki win over Indiana State as well as a 60-yard TD reception in a 45-28 victory over New Mexico State. He finished the season with three catches for 114 yards for an average of 38 yards per reception.

The Springfield native admitted that House helped all the receivers.

"Me, Kevin, Daryl Leake and Mark Remphill all learned from each other," he said. "Kevin had techniques of his own that helped me, and he taught me how to concentrate and catch the ball. He and I had been together the longest of the receivers. He was really helpful and taught me a lot."

In his senior year, Lathan and his classmate, flanker Daryl Leake, are now considered team leaders.

"Me and Daryl help teach blocking by the receivers and try to set an example for the freshmen," the 5-9, 160 pounder said. "Sometimes in practice we have trouble in blocking technique, but once you're on the field in the game, that cornerback has to be worried about you going for the bomb and running pass patterns. Once the game starts, you can cut him or take him straight on. He loses the advantage of knowing when a run is coming like in practice."

Last year, Lathan alternated downs with Leake at the flanker, or slotback, position, bringing in plays from the sidelines. The two receivers, along with sophomore speedster Marvin Hinton, will probably fill the same role this year. Lathan said the receivers can easily adjust from the slot to the split end positions.

Lathan, who has 4.5 speed in the 40-yard dash, is looking forward to a big year.

"They used to double-team Kevin, but they don't know what I can do yet," Lathan said. "We've been watching films and reading scouting reports, but once you're on the field, it's just you and the cornerback, one-on-one. We have a balanced offense, both running and throwing, and have confidence in both our quarterbacks in getting the ball to us."

Depth, maturity should bolster cross country team

By Rick Klatt

Maturity, team depth, and a schedule that would put many a cross country runner into hysterics, highlight the 1980 SIU cross country team.

"We should be vastly improved over last year," Coach Lew Hartzog said of his squad which has only one senior listed on the 14-man roster.

"The team is definitely good," Hartzog continued, "but it's up to the runners themselves just how much better they're going to get."

Tom Fitzpatrick, a three-year letterman, replaces graduated Mike Bisase as the team's token senior. Fitzpatrick, along with juniors Bill Moran, Karsten Schulz, Chris Riegger, and sophomore Tom Ross will form the nucleus for what Hartzog labels "still a very young team," despite having seven upperclassmen on the roster.

"Maturity will be the key to our season, especially the maturing of Schulz, Moran and Ross," Hartzog said.

same in 1980. Ross should also be score well. But question marks surround Moran and Riegger.

"I think Moran suffered 'sophomortitis' last year,"

Hartzog said of the Riverdale native.

"Same type of thing with Riegger," Hartzog added. "He had a super first meet, finishing second for the team, then took a nose dive. Why, I don't know. But I do feel both will do fine this season."

Although there isn't a Sebastian Coe or Steve Ovett on the squad, Hartzog does put emphasis on the performances of Moran and Fitzpatrick as indicators of how competitive the Salukis eventually will be.

"If they run consistently
