Planning commission OKs apartment plan

By Scott Freeman

A new apartment complex on the city's northwest side received approval from the Carbondale Planning Commission Wednesday night.

The commission held an open hearing to approve a change of zoning on a back lot bordering West Sycamore Street that would allow the applicant, Albert Pavesi of Chicago, to begin developing the property.

City planner Tom Redmond said that 14 notices of the zoning change were sent out to property owners.

He said the city was "unaware of any opposition" to the requested change.

The land is currently zoned RT single family residence, and pending approval by the Carbondale City Council Sept. 9, the land will be rezoned to allow for developing a secondary business use. Commissioner James Bastian pointed out that if done properly, the complex could be an asset to the area.

"I don't intend to rent these apartments to students," said Pavesi. "I want my renters to be a mixed group of working people, preferably married, and students.

Bruce Harris, special agent for the Wildlife Service, said the alligator was illegally brought into the state and thus is illegal to possess.

It is illegal to possess a two-year-old alligator in Illinois without a permit. Harris said the alligator would be released into the wild. However, since the alligator is a "special use" alligator, it may be released into the Wildlifemama, Harris said.

"We have the alligator and the owner of the alligator," said Pavesi. "We need to let the authorities know that they are going to be released into the wild."

Engine explosion causes fatal British airliner fire
MANCHESTER, England (UPI) — An explosion in an engine compression chamber caused a Boeing 727 fire that killed 54 people, the chief of Manchester Airport said Thursday. The blast ruptured the fuel lines on the jetliner, drenching the aircraft with aviation fuel and igniting a fire that engulfed the plane in flames within minutes, said Gil Thompson, chief executive of the airport. The British Airways pilot received a signal that the engine was on fire as the plane approached takeoff speed and immediately cut off the engine.

Soviets deny use of chemical spy dust
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Embassy Wednesday denied the Kremlin uses potentially cancer-causing chemical dust to trace American diplomats and accused the United States of "a slander campaign to poison the pre-summit atmosphere" before a superpower summit. White House spokesman Larry Speakes, in California where President Reagan is vacationing, said the government has not received any formal confirmation or denial from the Soviets. He said, however, that Soviet charges that the U.S. accusation was part of a public relations campaign to poison the pre-summit atmosphere are "not true."

Army officer suspect in Greenpeace mining
AUCKLAND, New Zealand (UPI) — A woman arrested on murder and arson charges in the mining of the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior was identified as a French army captain, police said Thursday. Prime Minister David Lange had said Tuesday that if it could be proven that French government agents were responsible for the July 10 sinking of the environmentalist, anti-nuclear group's flagship in Auckland harbor, he would consider it an act "just short of war." The suspect was identified as Dominique Prieur, who was said to be a captain in the French army.

Gandhi's party warned of more violence
NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's ruling party said Thursday it wants to press ahead with a return to proportional rule in Sikh-dominated Punjab despite fears of a new wave of terror by Sikh militants in the northern state. Opposition parties and several Sikh leaders have urged Gandhi to delay elections scheduled for next month in the wake of Tuesday's assassination if Harchand Singh Longowal, president of the Sikhs' mainstream Akali Dal political party. One of his bodyguards was also killed and three other people injured in the attack.

Vietnamese set to discuss Amerasian issue
BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnamese officials released 112 more Amerasian children Thursday for transport to the United States and said they intend to hold their first talks with U.S. refugee officials next week. The children, fathered by U.S. servicemen and other Americans stationed in Vietnam during the war in Indochina, arrived aboard a regularly scheduled Air France flight from Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. Vietnamese officials had invited international sponsors who received the children that they expect to return to Bangkok next week with another group of Amerasians.

Bankruptcy filing puts lawsuits on hold
RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Lawyers representing women suing A.H. Robins over the Dalkon Shield went before a federal court Thursday but were told the pharmaceutical's bankruptcy filing had put their cases on hold. About 24 lawyers appeared before Judge Robert Merhige, who has approximately 300 Dalkon Shield contraceptive damage cases pending in his court.

Senator criticizes FDA NutraSweet stand
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Howard Metzenbaum accused the government of "serious improprieties" Thursday in approving the artificial sweetener aspartame and asked an appeals court for permission to join efforts to ban the substance known as NutraSweet. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, asked the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to allow him to file a brief in support of the suit brought by the Community Nutrition Institute against the Food and Drug Administration and G.D. Searle & Co., manufacturer of NutraSweet.

Hartigan files downstate environmental lawsuits

By William Walker
Staff Writer

Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan has filed a series of environmental lawsuits against 18 counties in southern Illinois and open dumps in southern Illinois. He also announced the appointment of a special assistant attorney general, announced at a press conference Thursday.

The lawsuits, which are the result of a lengthy investigation called Project Clean Sweep, charge the landfill operators with open dumping and failure to comply with existing operating regulations set forth in the Illinois Environmental Protection Act.

Owners of the landfills were charged with allowing the illegal activity to continue, and in some cases charges of air pollution and operating without the required permits. Four of the sites are in the St. Clair County; three each in Macoupin, St. Louis, and Jersey counties.

A staff report issued before the filing of the lawsuits said the investigation revealed "a number of serious deficiencies at the vast majority of sites inspected." Violations include failure to cover a place of dirt on the landfills daily, litter scattered across the landfills, disease-carrying animals present at the sites, strong odors and leachate, which is the leaking of overflow water into the soil.

The biggest problem is the failure to place a cover of dirt on the dumps daily, because this leads to the other violations, said Robert Mueller, deputy chief of the attorney general's environmental control division. By law, refuse must be covered daily with 6 inches of topsoil.

The lawsuits seek court injunctions to prevent future violations at the sites, imposition of fines up to $10,000 plus $1,000 for each day of the violation and payment of court costs.

Project Clean Sweep is an ongoing investigation that will result in a number of lawsuits being filed against defendants in the north part of the state, Hartigan added Thursday.

In a press release, Hartigan said he intended to implement the attorney general's environmental control division by law, refuse must be covered daily with 6 inches of topsoil.

The lawsuits seek court injunctions to prevent future violations at the sites, imposition of fines up to $10,000 plus $1,000 for each day of the violation and payment of court costs.

Should the president choose the same course of action again, Saunders said he wants the range committee to focus on the planning process to determine if merit compensation for civil service employees is possible, and if so "to give the community say on determining it."

"THIS TIME, I want them to have a policy when they take action," said Hindsmers. "I would like them to look beyond just next year and be thinking of the future."
Liquor laws should be fairer

BOOZE MAKES everybody angry - even those who don’t drink - because they can’t drink. Legal drinkers are angrier because minors cause most alcohol-related problems, like traffic accidents, and give bad name to those who act responsibly and legally.

There is a solution, however. It gives all responsible persons the chance to enjoy alcohol and it punishes those who abuse the privilege.

First, lower the drinking age to 13. Eighteen-year-olds are treated as responsible adults in every other respect of the law, and they are of draft age, so they should be allowed to drink. Besides, it’s a farce to think that any 18, 19 or 20-year-olds who want to drink will have much trouble finding someone else to buy it for them.

Second, in order to purchase alcohol — whether you’re 18 or 19 — require each consumer to buy an Alcohol Purchasing Stamp from the state and have it put into a drivers license or state-issued identification card.

WHY THE STAMP? It gives each person over 18 the legal right to buy boozes while restricting — with the same equal respect of the law — those who abused their privileges. It would certainly only those who have broken the law in regards to alcohol. If someone of legal drinking age breaks the law — for example, by being convicted of drunken driving — their stamp would be revoked.

Underage drinkers are going to think twice before drinking because, under the new law, if they are caught, they won’t be eligible for a stamp until they are 21. Likewise for legal drinkers who buy boozes for minors. They won’t get their stamp back for a year, and each alcohol violation will result in the loss of the right to buy and drink publicly.

The time it takes to have the stamp reissued will be longer with each new violation until those who habitually violate the drinking laws will have their privileges permanently revoked. Revoking the stamps on only drivers licenses or state-issued IDs, fabrication of age or identity will be made more difficult.

Evil Fun! It’s just like a game of pin the tail on the donkey in a way. But for the most part, people want to have fun and the younger generation is looking for an opportunity to be able to have a good time.

Using stamps will also run into trouble in the future of the law. The state would require stamps to be used for the sale of alcohol, which could be a problem with the state扫描结果.jpg

With the benefit that can be realized, a bus system for SIU- C makes perfect sense. But the problems that plagued past attempts must not return.

Madeliner says that he doesn’t want to move too fast on this project; he wants to study past problems thoroughly as well as a viable option. He’s not here.

Most importantly, he wants a sound method of funding. Under consideration is a plan to receive funding from all parties that might be affected by the University, the city, local businesses — as well as the students.

This is for real drinking. Past problems must be solved and perhaps a system like NU’S won’t be feasible here.

But some system is needed. Madeliner, the University administration, the city, local businesses and any others involved must work as quickly as possible to develop a system that will work.

Support, especially from the students, should be given for this project.

Doonesbury

What the heck is the moral majority doing in South Africa?

Yes, I know they say they're good people, but... I'm not so sure.

The Stamp will cost about five dollars a month per person. It’s a lot of money to spend on a growing problem. A certain portion of the revenue will be earmarked for state alcohol and substance abuse education.

There is one minor complication to this proposal, however. It’ll never pass. No politician — remember that the root of the word “political” is “politics” — will let his or her right mind touch it. Not that it isn’t a viable solution to a growing problem, but it would open a can of worms in the already saturated society where the worms would jump out of the can and change the politician.

It would also run into trouble with the Reagan administration which is denying federal highway funds to states that don’t raise their drinking age to 21.

If passed, everyone would be too shaken up from dodging potholes to enjoy a beer after work.

There are solutions to problems like drinking laws, however. The state of South Dakota is a prime public to swallow. Ask the city of Carbondale, it took them 10 years to get the prohibition of a restaurant representative just to say SIU IDs can’t be used for alcohol-related purposes.

Letters Policy

Signed articles, including letters, Viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinion of the author only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee. Those whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, and two staff members are a Journalism School faculty member.

Letters submitted by mail, fax or e-mail will be processed at a later date, although they may be published on an expedited basis if necessary. All letters will be reviewed for content, length and style prior to publication. All letters must be double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be subject to space restrictions. All letters must be from students, staff members or faculty members of each and department, non-academic staff, no bylines will be given for preference. Students ages 16 and under should also include the names and titles of their parents or guardians. Letters, whether original or submitted by mail should include the author’s address and telephone number. Letters which for verification of ownership cannot be made will not be published.

Nicaraguan information not truthful

The Witnesses for Peace gave an excellent example of the old adage "it's all in the telling." The "fact finding tours" for select anti-Reaganite groups is conducted by one of the organizations to sign the "Pledge of Resistance" to Reagan's aid to freedom fighters in Central America. They hold Professor's name and the U.S. Army's promise to peace and justice (but never, for the truth) to Nicaragua to dig up the same old dirt that can be found in any war.

have collected and dug on Indian sites in this region out of the same basic curiosity that motivates all scientific research. Their collections deserve to be preserved and studied. However, the public must be made aware of the vast amount of information lost through such activity in contrast to that obtained through current scientific research. Furthermore, currently active amateur archaeologists and other members of the general public need to be made aware of the sites preserved on state and federal lands.

It is clear that Mr. Brumleve would benefit a great deal from basic technical information in construction in curation and exhibits preparation while at SIU-C. The hand-written labels in the cases are quaint, but full of spelling, grammatical, and factual errors. An awareness of the 7,000 or more years of Indian culture... presented just by the artifacts he exhibited in the Student Center could also be obtained through Archaeology courses in the Department of Anthropology. Other members of the student body are encouraged to examine the cases outside the department offices on the third floor of Faner Hall or to contact the Curator of the Center for Archaeological Investigations to obtain more accurate information on local Indian culture. -Don Thieme, anthropology.

Respect for archaeology needed

As a member of the ar-chaological research community at SIU-C, I am strongly appalled by the installation of exhibits from the Colben Museum in the Student Center. This museum serves an important local function and in no way conflicts with the museum's mission. The Winston's efforts to stamp out marijuana growing. There is no convincing evidence that the chronic use of cannabis does serious damage to the body or the mind. The same can't be said for alcohol or tobacco.

The Attorney General dredges up the hackneyed claim that marijuana is a "gateway" to the use of harder drugs like cocaine and heroin. The only way to avoid this assertion can be judged by the fact that some 65 million Americans have tried marijuana, but only 2 million Americans have tried heroin. Must be a narrow gate.

THE JUSTICE Department also laments the danger created by growers who use vicious booby traps to guard their sites from law enforcement officers and thieves.

got nabbed for trying to supply the first group. The National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws estimates the annual national cost of enforcing laws against illegal drugs at $2 billion. Where on earth is the point? The administration claims marijuana is a dangerous drug, a point no doubt savored by the local cocktail or an after-dinner cigar. In fact, despite exhausting research, no one has ever found in ordinary use.

A COMMISSION of experts convened by the National Academy of Sciences concluded in 1982 that the only real harms associated with marijuana is damage to the lungs in heavy users, similar to that caused by cigarette smoke. (Most users smoke only a couple of joints a day, minimizing the danger.) It also raises the remaining health risk, which is hazardous for people with cardiovascular ailments. The commission urged that possession of the drug be decriminalized. Harvard psychiatrist Lester Grinspoon, in his book on marijuana, concluded that "there is no convincing evidence that the chronic use of cannabis does serious damage to the body or the mind. The same can't be said for alcohol or tobacco."

The Attorney General dredges up the hackneyed claim that marijuana is a "gateway" to the use of harder drugs like cocaine and heroin. THE JUSTICE Department also laments the danger created by growers who use vicious booby traps to guard their sites from law enforcement officers and thieves. But this is not the result of marijuana growing. It is the result of laws against marijuana growing. If the government is to be held accountable, cannabis producers would have no more reason than wheat farmers to buy-toy-trap their fields.

DEALERS HAVE REALIZED THE DANGERS TO CIVILIZATION.

THE AMERICAN public is aiming at destroying a quarter of a million plants.

Nineteen years ago it was possible for Jimmy Carter to say that marijuana is a dangerous drug, while-crowding to decriminalize the possession of small amounts. But regular popular attitudes have turned around. Some 387,000 people are arrested in 1982 just for using it. Another 68,340

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)

Former U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson III said Thursday only personal considerations are holding him back from deciding to enter the 1986 race for Illinois governor.

"I would make my decision solely on political considerations I'd be running," Stevenson said in a telephone interview from his Chicago law office. "On political considerations I'm 100 percent sure, personal considerations are running about 50-50."

Stevenson said he met privately Wednesday with Chicago Mayor Harold Washington, U.S. Sen. Paul Simon and possible gubernatorial candidate Patrick Quinn and came away "encouraged" by what he heard.

"I ASKED for their advice and I was encouraged by what they said," Stevenson said, declining to answer specifics about the conversations other than to say none of the three had committed to another candidate.

"I did not want to make the mistake of getting into a primary contest if they had commitments to Neil Hartigan," the former senator lost to Thompson in 1982 by 5,074 of the 3.6 million cast.

HARTIGAN is expected to announce his political plans Sept. 10.

"Thompson is trying to run on my (1982) platform," he continued. "Hartigan doesn't know what he's running on. Nobody knows. Even his staff doesn't know."
Contract talks fail with UPI and employees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contract talks between United Press International and its employees union broke down early Thursday, with the company charging the union "flatly refused" during six days of federal mediation to discuss further wage and benefits concessions.

President William Morrissey of the Wire Service Guild that UPI has said yet to show it takes the union's problems seriously or that it "appreciates the sacrifices" of employees who took 25 percent pay cuts last year to keep the wire service alive.

UPI, WHICH has been operating for nearly four months under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, contends the contract modifications are critical to assuring profitability that would attract a buyer.

The company said in a message to employees it was "deeply sad to see" the union has "refused to consider any concessions aimed at a successful restructuring of the company."

"It seems futile to continue talks with a committee, some of whose members have openly advocated the demise of UPI," the message said. "Federal mediator Ed McMahon has reluctantly adjourned the sessions, saying the mediation process has been exhausted."

GUILD NEGOTIATORS said in a bullet in their members they had "NEVER flatly refused to consider proposed concessions..." and accused the company of refusing to respond to their proposals for alternative cost savings.

However, the statement also said, "The union believes it would be irresponsible to give further concessions to a "management team" which only speculates that more givebacks would enhance its ability to sell UPI.

The talks broke down minutes after midnight, ending a six-hour session, in which McMahon pressed both sides to resolve their impasse. Earlier Wednesday, there had been hints of progress toward settling jurisdictional issues.

A SPOKESMAN for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said "there was no movement" in the negotiations and McMahon would deliver a report on the talks to U.S. Bankruptcy Judge George Bason.

The talks were triggered when Guild negotiators, who have refused for weeks to budge on the proposals for concessions, recently threatened to urge a strike if UPI persuaded the bankruptcy judge to terminate the existing contract.

At Bason's urging Aug. 2, the company withdrew its motion to void the contract, the union postponed a strike authorization vote and the two sides agreed to engage in mediation.

JULES TEITELBAUM, a New York lawyer for a committee of UPI's unsecured creditors, called the latest impasse "a problem that requires a solution" if UPI is to attract a purchaser.

Teitelbaum indicated he may intercede in the dispute on behalf of the creditors. Nogales said the company is "exploring every option to expedite these discussions" — including refiling a motion to terminate the contract. He asserted the talks to date have "dwellen on 'ideology and politics' rather than economic realities."

MORRISSEY SUGGESTED that before demanding union concessions, the company first cut its managerial staff to save money. A company spokesman said 93 non-union employees — or more than 28 percent — already have been slashed from the payroll in a boneless economy effort, compared with a 15.4 percent reduction in the unionized editorial staff.

UPI Chairman Luis Nogales called the union suggestion, which the Guild said could save more than $500,000 this year, a "pernicious attempt to continue to put out propaganda that is divisive and harmful" to the company.

Mike Jacobs, vice president for academic affairs for the Graduate and Professional Student Council, is back on the job.

Jacobs resigned his position at the July 24 meeting of the GPSC and then withdrew his resignation the following day. President Mary Brown had asked Jacobs to submit his resignation "based on their assessment that he was not adequately performing the duties required of his position," according to an memo sent to the 70 representatives of the GPSC. Jacobs' commitment to the organization was also questioned.

However, during a re-evaluation of Jacobs' work done up to the time he resigned, Brown concluded that his performance had been satisfactory and Jacobs' commitment to the organization "was intact." Jacobs serves as a resource base for graduate students, Brown said. He handles financial aid and professional development funding as well as helping the students find campus work-study employment.

Brown said that Jacobs' resignation was not associated with the current funding restructuring amendment that was proposed at the July 24 meeting. Under the restructuring plan, the president of the GPSC would receive one-half time pay instead of the one-fourth presently in the council's constitution.

BUDGET: Increase given for materials

THE TOTAL 1986 library materials budget for SIU-C, which includes all library research facilities outside of Morris Library, will come to roughly $1.8 million after the 10 percent increase.

"My general feeling is that it (the increase) is the absolute minimum," said Peter Frederick, the Graduate and Professional Student Council in an interview earlier this summer. "It does nothing to help past low levels."

Frederick added that there would have to be "$300,000 initially, over the 10 percent increase" plus "more for periodical maintenance" to bring the library materials up to standard.

that the development of the land should harmonize with the surrounding properties and will not effect future development in the area. The proposed development of the property should leave ample room for the construction of additional parking in the future, should the church need such an expansion.

Both petitions were presented to the commission as new business and were approved unanimously. Both recommendations will be presented to their Sept 9 meeting, Rayfield said.

Orientation ’85 ended Sunday. Preparation for Orientation ’86 began Monday.

Members of the Student Orientation Programs staff are at it again, evaluating last year’s program to improve this year’s program.

Student Orientation Programs is part of the Office of Student Development. It is located on the first floor of the Student Center. It consists of the acting director, Michael Jackson, two graduate assistants, and the chairman and vice-chairman of the undergraduate Student Orientation Committee.

Grading,

Michael Jackson says the SOC steers the SOP staff, as it assists in recruiting Student Life Advisors, evaluating the program, and planning. The committee also acts on orientation and student development. For example, on Oct. 11 it will sponsor Sophomore Fest, any activity fair that will allow Registered Student Personnel to solicit members in the Free Forum area. Organizers are encouraging groups to be creative in their information presentations. Or so says Thurman Brooks, SOC chairman, who also manages the office and found a “Trivial Pursuit” theme.

The office is open at Orientation at open houses sponsored by the Office of Admissions and Records in the spring. When new students and their families arrive for early registration, SLAs are on hand to guide tours of the campus, direct traffic in the Student Center, and answer questions.

Orientation ’86 will start with evaluations of the ’85 program, Jackson said. Participants in the program are the primary evaluators. Forms will be sent to professors and other university officials that made presentations, such as study advice sessions, time management, and security precautions. They will tell the committees how their particular program was received and how it could be improved.

The SLAs were instructed to record their impressions and suggestions during their training sessions and the orientation program. The journals will be read by the orientation staff.

However, the new students will probably not be polled, Jackson said because “they see the fun programs as being useful.”

“Last year programs, like ‘Tips from the Pros’ didn’t receive a real high rating from the students (last year), but we know it is a real effective program ... there is just not a lot of excitement in it. We’re following the Dean’s lead,” he said. The new students believe that orientation, “the best part of college” and “the only way to get interested is to do it.”

Proctoring the orientation staff for several reasons. About 20 percent of them, Brooks said, joke because they appreciated the help they had received when they went through the program.

“They think, ‘I got something out of this and maybe I should give something back’,” he said.

The advisers aren’t in it for the money. The position is voluntary. They do receive a free T-shirt and a visor as a bonus. The staff, however, do receive a uniform.

Brooks was representative of some of the other students who become SLAs. When he began attending SIUC, he wasn’t assigned to an SLA. He knew around campus, and wanted to find out what they received when they went through the program.

“The SOC is responsible for one of the angles on orientation this year. The inclusion of commuter students. That was one of the ideas that the SOC came up with last year, and that our program didn’t spend enough time or address itself to the commuter population. This year was our first attempt,” Jackson said.

So far, he said the SIUC orientation program is “one of the finest in the country,” mentioning that the percentage retention of students is higher than other schools, a factor which some University officials attribute in part to the orientation program.

However, that is not the primary goal of the program, Jackson said. “Our goal is to make that transition, that is so difficult for so many, in a student’s life easier.”

“We have a lot of people (new students) are going away to school for the first time. It is a really difficult time in that, and orientation helps take their mind away from being away from home for the first time. They do a lot of fun activities and meet a lot of real people,” he said.

The committee, in addition to developing orientation programs, staffs another purpose. Participation in the largest University program can “develop people into better leaders,” Brooks said.

The committee is made up of subcommittees, which handle various aspects of the program as well as recruitment and selection of the SLAs and programming of orientation.

Youth program personnel, funds transfer service

Funding and administration for the Big Brother-Big Sister program in Carbondale has been transferred to the Jackson County Community Mental Health Center’s Alcohol and Substance Abuse Services department.

The reason for the transfer from Hill House is due to the Department of Alcohol and Substance Abuse Services of JCCMH to spearhead the efforts to prevent substance abuse among youth in this area.

The program, which will retain its emphasis and service, will continue to be offered at the Eureka A. Hayes Center at 441 E. Willow but will have a new phone number 528-7184. Office hours are 10-4 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.
Three winners of record lottery will share $41 million jackpot

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three people will share a record $41 million Lottery jackpot, state lottery officials said Thursday, leaving millions of other players to postpone their plans to buy fancy cars and palatial homes.

Among the three winners, who each will receive more than $13 million, appeared to be a factory worker who bought tickets for himself and 30 fellow employees.

New York State Lottery director John Quinn said the winning tickets were sold in Albany, N.Y., Mount Vernon, N.Y., and in the New York City borough of Brooklyn. Each winning ticket holder will get $13,666,667 paid out in annual checks over a 20-year period.

"There were three winners were flying about places like Lees Nixons, Iowa, and London, England, but that was incorrect," he said.

Quinn said 578 bettors picked a winning combination of 14-17-22-23-30. The three jackpots winners will be introduced Friday at a news conference, Quinn said.

Play auditioners express dramatic moments on stage

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

Usually, the more often a person practices or rehearses something, the easier it becomes.

Not so with play auditioners.

"If you don't get over it," said Christopher Catherine, theater student auditioning for "Grimaldi: A King of the Crows.

Hearing performed on stage for seven years, Catherine said, "It's supposed to be like a mock trial." The terrifying element in auditioning, she said, is doubting whether he is good enough.

STUDENTS AUDITIONING for "Threepenney Opera" were asked to bring a piece of music with them, so they could sing on stage. Professor Alfred Straumanis, director of the musical, then asked students to recite a few lines from a popular musical or play.

Straumanis surprised many students when he asked the pianist, who played the music given to him by students, to play a tune so the students could dance a Tango.

After that, Straumanis asked her, "Do you dance some step a Tango?"

WITH THAT, the pianist played a Tango tune, and Harris moved about gracefully on stage.

"How am I doing," Harris asked Straumanis, knowing the students looking on.

Yard sale benefit to help support Puka Preschool

Proceeds from a yard sale Saturday across the campus McDonald's will go to the Puka Preschool, a not-for-profit daycare.

The sale will be held 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at 816 S. Illinois Ave. Items for sale include toys, children's clothes, baby items, car seats, kitchen items, dishes and furniture.

Such items as a Harris Diller Sculpture, Fine print, meals, jacket, camera, VCR rental and movies will be auctioned at 10 a.m.

Afterwards, Harris said, "That was as scary as hell. I didn't know how to Tango, but you can never say no. You just have to give it your best.

Harris said she has acted in "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "The Diary of Anne Frank," among other shows, since she was 13 years old.

Eric McCluskey, graduate student in musical theater, said his acting career dates to his senior year in high school, but his heart was "going like a jackhammer" during his audition.

"IT'S SCARY because you never know what's going to happen," he said.

McCluskey sang out boldly and clearly verses from "Mama, Mama!" from "Most Happy Fellow," but was unprepared for a reading.

"I didn't know we needed a reading," he said.

Straumanis gave McCluskey the musical script and asked him to give a cold reading from a book.

Lisa King, vocal music performance major, commented on McCluskey's audition afterwards. "It's usually like this. You have to prepare in hours of music, it varies from director to director, and then you give cold readings, she said.

The hardest thing for me is to find monologues," McCluskey added. "Monologues are usually announced."

STRAUMANIS SURPRISED another student, freshman Greg Paul, when he asked him to dance around a chair on stage.

"The chair was supposed to be my partner," Paul said. "I just figured to move to the beat of my heart." Auditioning for the first time in college, Paul said he felt "a little dwarfed," because the people ahead of him were more experienced.

"The only reason I was nervous was because my voice was dry," said Kevin Rathunde. "I sang with a Live voice, but normally, Rathunde said he is calm during auditions, isn't until the first night of rehearsal when his nerves begin to jitter.

"THE FIRST night of rehearsals I'm nervous because I don't know who was in the cast. I'm a pressure overload person.

The audition setting for "Grimaldi: King of the Crows" eased tense nerves.

"With this kind of audition it's different," said Michael Hornsby, theater major. Grant Pettis, director created a relaxed atmosphere, more conducive to improvisation, he said.

Auditions for the play were held in the Laboratory Theater, where students sat in chairs on the stage floor while turning taking auditions as couples.

Lori Spilaw, theater major, said Pinney gave students synopses of what he wanted them to do, and they impressed from thereon.

Block’s free market’ policy risks farmer loss

CHICAGO (UPI) — Secretary of Agriculture John Block said Thursday it may be necessary for some farmers to perish so the entire troubled industry can survive.

“Whatever farm policy we adopt, we are going to lose some farmers,” Block said in endorsing cutting farm subsidies in a new “free market” approach to agriculture.

Block, speaking at the Department of Agriculture’s food safety and nutrition editor’s conference, predicted there would be more foreclosures against Midwestern farmers, but said it was necessary.

“The credit crunch is not over,” he said. “We’re going to have a tough winter. We must reduce subsidies that encourage production.”

Block said the belt-tightening must begin immediately, starting with the 1985 agricultural bill. President Reagan will take an active role in forming the bill, Block said.

“The 1985 agricultural bill must move away from supply management and regulation,” he said. “We must allow producers to make decisions based on market information, not government interference.

“We have to force the government out of this heavy-handed involvement,” he said.

Deregulation is likely to hurt farmers, decrease food supplies and increase prices, but Block said these are “small prices to pay” for saving the troubled U.S. farm industry.

“For the past 50 years government has been trying to protect farmers into prosperity and profitability,” he said. “What do we have to show for all this help? We have a weakened agricultural sector that lurches from crisis to crisis, from band-aid to band-aid.”

Block is scheduled to fly to the Soviet Union Friday, where he will bargain with the Russians over the purchase of American grain.

Martial Arts Club teaches wisdom, courage

By Mary Lung
Staff Writer

When you think of martial arts, does your mind conjure up images of Bruce Lee or Chuck Norris kicking and punching the air? Well, that’s not what the SIU-C Martial Arts Club is all about, says its members.

The University Martial Arts Club offers a discipline that combines wisdom, compassion and courage as well as lethal physical skills, they say. "The SIU Martial Arts Club does not teach you how to pull someone’s heart out and show it to them before they die," says fourth degree black belt and Tae Kwon Do teacher Elliot Freeman, "but focuses on dealing with confrontation, the kind everyone has to deal with every day in one situation or another.

The club, which is in its 13th semester, is intended to teach self-discipline, problem solving, moral and philosophical ethics, self-confidence, perseverance, humility and interpersonal and psychological self defense. It also helps students develop better balance, coordination, and flexibility.

The SIU-C Martial Arts Club offers a two-year curriculum with possible graduation to black belt. It has about 250 members and combines both the Moo Duk Kwan schools of Tae Kwan Do and Aikido.

The Moo Duk Kwan version of Tae Kwan Do combines Japanese Karate and Chinese Kung Fu. Here at SIU-C it is practiced in a more Americanized, modern sense. "We are not dealing with Zen and 16th century ethics, we’re dealing with what people are interested in now, which is Zen and computer programming," said Freeman.

The Aikido program at SIU is directed by Tod Kington, second degree black belt. Kington says that Aikido "teaches you how to get out of the way of a combat relationship." Aikido is designed to neutralize aggressive acts while doing the least harm to the attacker, using your feet to move so you don’t get hit, and using your body as a single, powerful unit, he says.

Both Moo Duk Kwan-Tae Kwan Do and Aikido have various degrees of belts, which are used to signify rank. The belt degrees are indicated by color, starting at white for beginners, and progressing through yellow, green, red, brown and black. The degrees before a black belt are called Kyu, and black belts are called Dan.

"Belts are a responsibility to a student," says Freeman, "to teach others and help them progress.

The University Martial Arts Club held an exhibition Wednesday night, with various members of the club demonstrating their skills in either Tae Kwan Do, Aikido, or both. Freeman and club member Guido Bernstein gave a freestyle exhibition of Moo Duk Kwan, and Kington demonstrated Aikido techniques with club member Scott Shaw. Vessem Raika gave a loudly applauded demonstration of Kala, during which one fights an imaginary opponent.

Almost 170 people came to the demonstrations, illustrating in part the popularity of martial arts at SIU-C. The SIU-C Martial Arts Club is the largest sports club on campus and the third largest of all campus organizations.

The Club tries to attend at least one tournament per month, whether its members compete or not.

"At tournaments, students can see the best martial artists, the newest techniques and the latest innovations," says Freeman.

"We’re grateful to Bill Bleyer and the rest of the Recreation Center staff for being so supportive of our programs," said Freeman. Classes are offered for every degree of skill, beginner through black belt, for juniors ages 10 through 16 and for people with disabilities.

The Martial Arts Club offers something for everyone. "For freshmen," says Freeman, "the Club offers friendly attitudes, parties, potluck dinners, even professors as fellow students. The SIU club teaches physical and mental coordination, which helps you to deal with your life problems.

The fee for both Moo Duk Kwan and Aikido together is $20 per semester, not including a Gi, the white uniform worn by martial artists. Registration information is available by calling 549-4479, or 536-5533.

Chili fund-raiser scheduled to aid leukemia victim

A benefit chili supper will be held Saturday in Herrin to raise money for leukemia victim Jeff Kerley.

Kerley, 7, is scheduled to undergo a bone marrow transplant in Barnes Hospital in St. Louis in three weeks. His family needs to raise $100,000 for the surgery.

The chili supper will be from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. at Machinists Union Hall, 618 N. Park. Tickets are $3.50 for adults and $2 for children under 12. They can be purchased at the door or in advance by calling 942-4209, 942-3285 or 926-1673.

In addition, a raffle is being sponsored by the Machinists Union and the United Food and Commercial Workers Union for the benefit of the Jeff Kerley Trust Fund. The grand prize is a washer and dryer donated by Norge. Other prizes include gift certificates from Herrin merchants.
Back in the big band era of the twenties, any dance band worth its salt had a distinctive theme song—a musical signature with which it signed on and signed off in engagements and radio broadcasts. For his orchestra, Glenn Miller chose a song he originally wrote as an exercise for a course in arranging. Today, it is considered a standard in the field of popular music with its popularity as an instrumental continuing undiminished through the years.

Imagine if you will, it's opening night of the 20th Season of the Shryock Auditorium Celebrity Series. The lights dim, the mirror ball spins, the orchestra opens with Moonlight Serenade. Of course, this is just one of many standards you'll hear on this special night. Others include "American Patrol," "Tuxedo Junction," and "In The Mood" to name a few. Join us on September 24th at 8:00 p.m. back, relax, and reminisce with the Glenn Miller Orchestra in Shryock Auditorium. Oh—and dancing will be limited to the outside rails.

Chivalry isn't dead; it's a Broadway hit! Its knightly zeal undiminished. Don Quixote de la Mancha will ride into Carbondale, bringing with him his "Dulcinea" and his "Impossible Dream."

One of Broadway's greatest musicals, Man of La Mancha's central theme is the conflict between ideal and reality, between seeing life as it should be as opposed to life as it is. The world should be as Don Quixote sees it. And, even though his delusions are foolish, he is innocent at heart. And he holds onto his dreams till the final climax when Quixote asserts one final time his desire to seek the impossible dream.

Momix, the toast of Europe, now brings its diverse and entertaining program to American audiences. Created by Moses Pendleton and Anne Chane, two of the founding members of the internationally renowned Pilobolus, Momix has scored triumph after triumph in its European capitals, from Rome to Madrid to Paris where the audience at an outdoor Picasso centenary concert numbered more than 100,000.

Pendleton and Chane combine extraordinary athleticism, a variety of movement styles, an extravagant sense of humor, and a unique knack of blending all the best of art forms to present an unforgettable performance. As Winston Delacruz of the Chicago Sun-Times says, "Momix makes magic!"

SYNONYMOUS

SYNONYMOUS WITH THE WORD "DANCE." Elise Feld is one of the most talented choreographers in the world today. Reaction to the Feld Ballet resounds with enthusiasm. Linda Winer of the Chicago Tribune said. "I'm prepared to sign petitions to get this troupe back to Chicago next year for at least a week. Or a few more days at the close of the current tour. Or a couple of minutes at the airport."

The Hollywood Entertainment Radio said, "Just as we are now living in the Balanchine era, some day in the future we will be living in the Feld era... if this company comes to your neighborhood or within 200 miles, go go go."

THE SOONER YOU ORDER AND THE LARGER YOUR SERIES, THE BETTER YOUR SEATS!

Mail and phone orders (Mastercard/Visa) are being accepted NOW for all Grand, Choice, and Sampler Series. The deadline for Series sales is Friday, September 6, 1985. Any remaining individual show tickets will go on sale Monday, September 9th. Individual show tickets may not be ordered prior to that date unless ordered as an addition to a Series order. Such additional tickets will probably not be adjacent to your Series tickets. For more information call (800) 453-3378.

SERIES DEFERRED PAYMENT PLAN

SDPP LETS YOU BUDGET YOUR PURCHASE!

By using the Series Deferred Payment Plan (SDPP), you can pay for your Series purchase in three installments. For an initial down payment of 1/3 of your total order, you will receive the tickets to your first show; the remaining tickets will be sent as you make additional payments. There are three simple rules:

1. The SDPP is for Series orders only — Grand, Choice, Sampler — or for individual tickets ordered at the same time as your Series tickets.

2. Payment for the value of tickets must precede issuance of the tickets (even if this unbalances the 1/3 payment schedule).

3. Failure to adhere to the installment schedule will discontinue the plan and any amount already paid will be forfeited. All payments are due by Friday at 6:00 p.m. on: Sept. 6, Oct. 4, and Oct. 18.

To use the SDPP, just check the box on the order form, sign your name, and enclose 1/3 of your total order as your down payment. SDPP has no interest, no carrying charge, and no service charge. We even pay the postage both ways!

KAYE BALLARD IN "HEY MA." Kaye Ballard became a household name via her success in the hit television series, "The Mothers-In-Law," but she is a veteran singer, actress and comedienne. Hey Ma! is a chronological account of her career, dating back to her first big-break booking at a novelty in her hometown of Cleveland. In this two-hour autobiography, Kaye Ballard does an ingratiating job on imitations of well-known and superstars performers she's been associated with over the years and sings 15 songs, including favorite classics, as well as several new tunes.

Kaye Ballard also succeeds with an excellent topical routine and a detailed report of her seven-day audition for Golden Apple. Borrowing fur coats from several different friends as proof that she didn't need the part (which she got and in which she signed in 1954). Rex Reed called this show, "A one woman celebration of show business at its best! Kaye Ballard is the funniest woman in New York!" Variety calls it, "A splendid solid entertainment. "Don't miss it!"

Reagan says Central America one of his ‘accomplishments’

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan, returning to politics-as-usual for the first time since his cancer surgery, said Thursday his administration has quietly turned around the turmoil in Central America as one of its “proudest accomplishments.”

“When we first got to Washington, the question on everyone’s lips was: Will El Salvador or Nicaragua fall? Today, the question is: Will democracy win in Nicaragua? And tomorrow, the question will be: How soon?”

In a pep talk for an estimated 1,000 party loyalists at a $1,000-a-plate dinner, Reagan declared the GOP the “major political force for change in America” and invited disillusioned Democrats to join its ranks.

Ending 13 days of isolation at the midpoint of a three-week vacation, the president and Mrs. Reagan served as hostesses for a gathering expected to raise more than $31 million to build new headquarters for the California Republican Party.

But more than an hour before the fund raiser, 50 demonstrators protesting apartheid and Reagan’s Central American policy gathered on the street from the Century Plaza Hotel. About 10 pro-Reagan supporters carried signs that read “God Bless R.R.” and “Abort the Court.”

“There’s a change happening in America,” Reagan said. “Realignment is real. What the American people see is that the other party just keeps going in circles. Of course, that’s what happens if every time there’s a decision to make, you keep leaning to the left.”

“In contrast, we’re going forward, with confidence and with gusto. And we’re not about to stop until we get the job done.”

With the audience filled with friends and acquaintances from his Hollywood days and years as governor, Reagan sought to boost the fortunes of Gov. George Deukmejian, a longtime political ally who could face a tough re-election battle next year.

Acknowledging the wide-open scramble to find a candidate to challenge Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston, Reagan also urged “a spirited primary” — one that could involve the likes of presidential pal Fess Parker, a fellow actor with political aspirations — but admonished the contenders to “campaign against the incumbent and then stand united.”

In brief remarks, Reagan hailed progress in reaching out to Asians, Hispanics and blacks and said, “More and more Democrats are realizing that they have more in common with our goals than those targeted by the leadership of their own party.”

Reagan attributed some of these Democratic defections to a firm foreign policy.

Taking aim at those who criticize his “Star Wars” missile-defense program as “unfeasible and a waste of money,” Reagan asked rhetorically: “If that’s true, why are the Soviets so upset about it? As a matter of fact, why are they investing so many rubles of their own in the same technologies?”

Buckner woman honored for 50-year mail service

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

According to Fletcher Acord, Central Regional Postmaster General, the arrival of the mail is the one event on a daily basis in a person’s life that has more impact than anything else. “I don’t mind working until we get on our feet,” she said.

Rolla was honored Thursday for her 50 years of service to the United States Postal Service. Since Aug. 19, 1935, she has been postmaster of the Buckner, Ill. office.

Acord presented Rolla with a service pin in front of an audience that included members of the local media and her two sons, her sister, a nephew, niece, grand-daughter, great-grand-daughter and several other relatives and friends.

Rolla has lived in Buckner, which is located in Franklin County near the city of Benton, all her life. She took the job after both her mother and her husband turned it down. Her reasons for doing so were simple. “Need. Real need, in the midst of the Depression,” she said. “I took it even though I didn’t know anything about it.”

The job paid, $800 a year then.

According to a U.S. Postal Service news release, Rolla said in 1935, “I don’t mind working until we get on our feet.” How did that turn into 50 years of service?

“DAY BY day,” year by year, “she answered.

The award was the first of its kind presented in Southern Illinois, and one of three to be presented this year in the Central Region. The region encompasses 13 midwestern states and serves over 66,000,000 people, handling about 33 percent of the Postal Service’s mail.

Rolla is one of the few employees who received commissions from President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. She was what today is called a “working mother,” having started when her youngest son was 18 months old. She credits her family with helping her.

“I had a wonderful mother and father, who were grandparents in the fullest sense of the word. It was just a family effort, everybody took care of whoever had to be taken care of,” she said.

While presenting the award, Acord said that the rural post office is “the nerve center of the community.” Rolla, however, said it is misconception that a postmaster in a small town knows everyone and everything going on. Acord attributes much of the stability of the postal service to such workers as Rolla, who have stayed in one community for all of their lives.

“It gives stability in our rural areas. If we can get one person like her, she is going to handle it all for us. Seldom do we get a complaint,” he said.

Women have been especially important to the Postal Service. Nationally, about 3 to 40 percent of postal workers are women.

“‘They have been a major asset in our work for us. Had we not had the stability of the women who came to us during World War II and afterward, we would have had monumental difficulties’ in dealing with the post-war increase in volume and services, Acord said.

Traditionally, women get involved with the post office because of family tradition. Acord said Rolla had “post office blood in her.” The postal agency was an office through which they could be employed very early in life, and paid well.

“I did as much as any man would have done in the same position,” she said, “including handling mailbags and such. It’s all in a day’s work. You did what you had to do. Male and female, you were a postmaster, and that was it.”

Los Angeles stalker linked to gun slaying

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The "extremely cunning" and dangerous Night Stalker who has terrorized Los Angeles suburbs for the past seven months was positively linked Thursday to the shotgun slaying of a man and wounding of his wife in their San Francisco home.

A county sheriff's spokesman made the announcement a day after the search for the serial killer moved to Northern California at the request of San Francisco police, who asked the Stalker task force to help them determine if the slayings were related.

"Sheriff Block has confirmed that homicide investigators have confirmed that the San Francisco homicide case is related to the cases currently under investigation in Los Angeles County," Deputy John Broussard said in a prepared statement.

San Francisco police also issued a statement saying investigators have "linked the suspect in that case to the suspect in two cases in the Los Angeles area."
Men's golf team plans tourney to pay expenses

Entries are still open for the First Saluki Men’s Golf Team Benefit to be played Friday Aug. 30 at Crab Orchard Golf Club in Carterville. The tournament will be scramble format with a Saluki golfer or local professional as captain of a five-man team. The shotgun tee off begins at 1 p.m.

The $100 entry fee is tax deductible and includes electric car, various prizes and a $22 retail value shirt with the Saluki logo. All proceeds will go directly to the men’s golf team for travel and expenses.

For more information or entry forms, contact Darren Vaughn, coach, at Crab Orchard Golf Club, 985-2221.

Bears’ Singletary ends holdout

LAKE FOREST (UPI) – Mike Singletary, the NFC defensive player of the year in 1984, formally ended his holdout when he came to terms with the Chicago Bears.

Singletary, who had sought a renegotiation of his contract, got the final two years of his six-year contract removed. The Bears will then restructure a new contract, beginning with Singletary’s 1988 season.

‘Boom Boom’ Mancini quits ring

NEW YORK (UPI) — To use a boxing term, “Boom Boom” Mancini’s retirement announcement Thursday was a unanimous decision.

Mancini said the decision was his alone, but his agent, manager and lawyer all were elated by the announcement.

Mancini, the 35-year-old former World Boxing Association lightweight champion from Youngstown, Ohio, leaves the ring with a 29-3 record.

“No one has persuaded me,” an admittedly nervous Mancini said at a news conference. “This decision is my own. My heart has been the biggest part of my career and I let my heart make my decision.

“The question is, am I willing to pay the dues, go to the gym every day? There’s no doubt in my mind I can come back and win a world title again, but if I don’t have the same enthusiasm, drive and hunger as the first time, then I’m just kidding myself.”

Mancini held his title from 1982 until June 1984, when he was stopped in 14 rounds by Livingston Bramble. In his last fight, April 16, he lost an 18-round decision against Bramble. Mancini said he felt he won the rematch with Bramble, but there was no longer a point to fighting.

He has moved to Los Angeles and intends to pursue an acting career. He is auditioning for a “Rambo-type” role in a television series. “The Birds of Prey.”

“I ALWAYS said early in my career when I win the world title for my father and gained some security, I’m going to take care of my family and walk away,” he said. “That’s what it’s come to.”

Mancini began fighting to win the world title that his father Lenny never got a chance to earn. Lenny Mancini was a ranking lightweight whose career was interrupted when he went into the Army during World War II.

Mancini’s parents attended Thursday’s news conference.

“He’s brought me a lot of happiness and he put Youngstown on the map,” Lenny Mancini said. “I’m glad he’s retiring because I don’t have to go through all that worrying.”

“I’VE BEEN good for boxing.” Mancini’s mother Ellen said. “Boxing is better, thanks to him. He’s kept it clean. He’s got a new life he’s going into.”

Mancini’s manager Dave Wolf said he didn’t know what Mancini would decide until the official announcement came sometime Thursday. Wolf, who supported Mancini’s decision to retire, said he received lucrative offers for Mancini up until Wednesday night.

“Last night I got an offer for $3 million to fight Aaron Pryor, and Hector Camacho’s people said ‘we’ll top it by a lot,’” Wolf said. “That gives you an idea of what’s walking away from him. He won’t come back. If he were going to, he would have taken the money last night.

“HE’S WALKING out a healthy kid, in one piece and a multi-millionaire.”

Wolf said Mancini’s career purses totaled over $6 million. His biggest payday was just under $2.3 million for a 1984 title defense against Bobby Chacon.

Edward Flask, Mancini’s lawyer, said the ex-fighter is set for life even if he never works again.

“Once we put these investments to work, he knew he was set,” Flask said. “He doesn’t have to be an (Alexis) Arguello, a (Willfred) Benitez or a (Roberto) Duran,” he added, alluding to former champions who are now believed to be broke.

“HE’LL NEVER have to fight because he needs the money, and if he decides to come back it won’t be because he needs the money.”

Mancini won’t miss the punishment he took either, even in fights he won. A cut left eye in the second Bramble fight was the worst of his bloody career.

“I intend to keep busy enough so that he won’t miss boxing.”

NFL uses instant replays to augment officials’ calls

DALLAS (UPI) -- The test use of instant replays as an officiating aide has proved so successful during exhibition games that the chairman of the NFL’s competition committee would like to see the system implemented for this year’s playoffs.

At the very least, said Dallas Cowboys president and general manager Tex Schramm, the use of replays should be given full consideration for next year’s regular season schedule.

"If it has success during the preseason, I think there is a very good chance we will see it next year," said Schramm. "We might even see it for this year’s playoffs."

"THAT IS just my own thinking. But everybody wants to eliminate mistakes."

The experiment involving replays was approved last March only for use this year in nationally televised exhibition games. Another league vote would be necessary for the process to be used in the playoffs.

The apparatus involved was tested during the Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio, and then put into working order last Saturday night in San Diego for a Chargers-Cowboys game. It again was used Monday night in a San Francisco-Denver contest at Candlestick Park.

SCHRAMM WATCHED from the press box in San Diego and watched the Denver-San Francisco game on television from the Cowboys’ training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif. While in San Diego he discussed the procedure with NFL head of officials Art McNally, who during the test period was in charge of viewing the replays in the press box and making whatever decisions are necessary.

"I think they all are kind of enthusiastic about it," said Schramm. "Nobody likes mistakes. If we can improve our game by giving the officials help — not correcting them, but helping them — then I think we are all for it."

THE CREDIBILITY of the experiment was enhanced last weekend when, in each game, a potentially controversial call was quickly cleared up by the use of replays. One call was upheld and another overturned with little delay in the flow of the game.

In the San Diego-Dallas game, a Cowboys receiver fumbled the ball after catching a pass and a Chargers defender picked it up and ran for a score. Although the Cowboys instantly claimed the play should have been declared an incomplete pass, the replay showed the call had been made properly and the Chargers were awarded the score.

THERE WAS a similar play in the Denver-San Francisco game in which a Cowboys receiver bobbed a pass that turned into an apparent Denver recovery. But the replay showed the receiver did not have possession of the ball, and it was quickly judged to have been an incomplete pass.

"When I first talked to them (McNally and his staff) Saturday night they were just feeling their way," said Schramm. "But I think we are getting a little bit interested in the potential of it."

"THIS GIVES you an opportunity that might not have been available to a man on the field. It gives us the opportunity to correct things that might have been bad errors without going into the hijinks of coaching challenges or having delaying controversies."

"If they can see quickly without destroying the flow of the game, then that will help," said the instant replay experiment has been helped by the use of in-bouze television systems which allow McNally to punch up his own replays on a set in front of him instead of waiting for those which are run by the network broadcasting the game.

"I’VE ALREADY been an opponent of instant replay, if you want to call it an opponent, because I didn’t feel you had the technical wherewithal to do it on a fair basis," Schramm said.

"I wasn’t particularly crazy about relying on what a television director wanted to show you. Now you have the capability of creating your own replay without the network within seconds after a play has been whistled dead. It changes the whole thing."

Arlington Million to be run, despite track fire damage

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS (UPI) — They’re billing Sunday’s running of the Arlington Million “The Miracle Million” and, for a change, the hype is justified.

Arlington Park, the home of the “Million,” burned down virtually to the ground — July 31. The balance of Arlington’s meet was shifted quickly to Hawthorne Park in Cicero.

But the Hawthorne turf track was judged inadequate for the Million so Arlington President Joseph Joyce and officials from Budweiser, who sponsors the race, began looking for an alternate site.

TRACKS IN Kentucky and Canada volunteered to take over the Million but Joyce wasn’t interested in losing the international classic, even temporarily. So he and his fellow board members decided to keep the event at Arlington.

Since then, demolition crews have cut up the massive, twisted, twisted network of grandstand and hauled it away and construction workers have erected a complex of tents, bleachers and other temporary facilities to handle the race-day crowd.

“We are not moving heaven, we have to move a hell of a lot of earth,” Joyce said in announcing the race would be held as scheduled.

“We wanted to have the race here because we felt it belonged here,” he said.

IT TOOK two weeks of 20-hour days by a 100-man crew to clear the rubble, which included an estimated 5,000 tons of twisted structural steel. Tents, food service equipment and betting facilities were built both on the infield and on the apron in front of the grandstand area.

While the frantic site preparations were going on, the race itself changed significantly.

The Million preparations started without the horse most closely identified with the race — the 10-year-old gelding John Henry. John Henry won a dramatic nose victory in the inaugural Million and repeated last year after a close second in 1983. He retired earlier this year with sore leg.

EVEN WITHOUT John Henry, the original field retained its international class, with some of Europe’s brightest grass-running stars entered. But a week before the race, five of the Continent’s stars begged off for a variety of reasons, leaving a California contingent with the best shot at the winner’s share of the $1 million purse.

Still, the favored entry of Dahar and Greinton retains a foreign flavor. While currently based in the United States, Greinton was foaled in Great Britain and raced five times in France before moving to California. Dahar raced in France, England and Ireland before being shipped to this country, where his first race was the 1984 Million.

IN ALL, 16 of the 14 horses schooled at midweek to start the classic had foreign races to their credit.

One of the few all-American entries is Tsunami Slew, son of the 1977 Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew. Also in the field is Gate Dancer, winner of the 1984 Preakness, making only his second start on the grass.

Among the foreign horses withdrawn before the race were the English-bred entry of Bairn and Pebbles, owned by Sheik Mohammed Maktoum; Strawberry Road, an Australian horse currently campaigning from England, and Damister and Rosillon, also representing Britain.

Hunter: Netters looking good

stiff competition for playing time from top newcomers and seasoned veterans Tracy Jutunen, Joan Wallenberg and Linda Walker.

Tindall played most of last season after an early injury to senior Linda Schoeber, At 5'11, Tremblay may be shifted to the right side to take advantage of her blocking ability. Leading the list of freshmen newcomers is Dorothy Buchanan, whom Hunter refers to as "the most physically-skilled volleyball player to ever emerge from Carbondale Community High School." Hunter also expects to use freshman Teri Noble, Beth Winsett and Angie Wolfer, which combined with Buchanan and freshmen walk-ons Loretta Taylor and Dawn Thompson, are the products of what Hunter calls her "best recruiting season ever."

"Having a good season would also be a boost to our recruiting program," Hunter added. "According to pencil and paper, everyone seems to think SIU-C has all the tools to have a good chance of winning," she said.

Bass tournament will aid Special Olympics

The Fourth Annual Special Olympics Bass Tournament is scheduled for Sept. 15 at Cedar Lake, south of Carbondale. The event is open to 80 two-person teams, and all entrants are required to be 18 years old. Entry fees are $90 for each team. Thirty percent of all proceeds will be donated to Southern Illinois Special Olympics.

"The idea of casting for cash is a great way for anglers to compete with their peers," said John Earls, sales manager of co-sponsor Southern Illinois Wholesale. Other co-sponsors are the City of Carbondale and the Little Egypt Bass Club.

Earls said the event features a purse of over $9,000 and could raise about $7,500 for special Olympic athletes. "In the past three years, we've raised close to $20,000 to help special athletes compete in various local, regional and national events," said Don Vagner, tournament chairman of the Little Egypt Bass Club. "All of the funds we raise stay within the local organization."

In addition to the monetary prizes, several local merchants will donate cash or raffle items. One of the top prizes is a new General Motors pickup truck for catching a specially tagged bass. A video cassette recorder is also among the prizes.

Entry deadline is Sept. 6.
Women's cross-country team returns 3, adds 9 newcomers

By Rich Heaton

Fielding the largest and the youngest team in three years, women's cross country coach Don DeNoon has high hopes for this year's squad.

DeNoon says the main goal for this season is to maintain what they accomplished last year, a fourth place finish in the conference. With only three returning athletes, DeNoon says this may be a bit high, but he has complete confidence that the team can obtain this goal.

Of the three returning athletes, sophomore Amy Marker is expected to be the number one runner, with sophomore Santha Gore and senior Chris Hangren as the number two and three runners.

The remainder of the team is made up of two transfer students, sophomore Pam Harcker from Southeast Missouri State and junior Vivian Leathy, and freshmen Lisa Judesek, Robin Martin, Michelle Noel, Pam Querenghi, Yonni Rahana, and Colleen Wright.

DeNoon says the team looks good in training. The team is running 50 to 60 miles a week, building the mileage base that is needed to race 5,000 meters, about 3 miles, the distance run at the intercollegiate level.

As the season progresses the distance of the training will decrease, but the intensity level of the runs will increase. The women are training seven days a week, with two workouts on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

This season the team will compete in eleven meets, with two of those being at home. The home meets are a triangular meet with SEMO and Murray State on September 7, and the Danver's Invitational on October 5.

An Invitation to Graduate and Professional Students

Please join us for an evening of entertainment and a chance to find out more about what SIUC has to offer at a reception for all graduate and professional students at 6:30 p.m., August 29, 1985. Netters' pre-season play impresses Hunter

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

After three weeks of practice, the United States pro-obstacle, Hunter is very optimistic.

"This is the best pre-season group I've ever had," said Hunter, who is in her 11th year as coach of Saluki volleyball teams.

"They've really maintained many of the things we've done in some tough workouts," Hunter said. "It's as close to ideal as we could be.

"There are an infinite number of possibilities for this team. We can go as far as we want to go."

Another thing that pleases Hunter is the lack of injury during preseason training. Hunter said that an athlete often undergoes or overuses some part of the body when training hard. But practice sessions a day can often bring out the weaknesses of summer.

"Physically, we're holding up very well," said Hunter, who added that the squad had returned from the summer break in shape mentally and physically.

"The girls really came back with a feeling of confidence, even those here for the first time. We've had no major injuries and everyone seems to be ready."

Looking to her roster, Hunter sees nothing but good volleyball players.

All-Conference Lisa Cummins, a 5-9 senior, will lead a pack of five returning starters and six experienced freshmen.

"Lisa will be the catalyst to the team's success," Hunter said. "Last year she really demonstrated what she could accomplish -- it marked the beginning of her arrival as a true All-America candidate."

Week into small group drills in practice, volunteer volleyball coach Debbie Dorf said the punters will "The punter is going to have a toughest job of the bunch."

Dorf said the punters will have to get used to the defense. The secondary people have to come up and turn the ball back into the pursuit.

"We run this play during every practice. The kick is going to be ball back inside," Dorf said.

Dorf also has been working on his four-man defensive line.

"I feel we need some alignment problems, and the coaches came in early in the morning to watch films and evaluate those alignments. These are things we're trying to slow down for the players and make improvements on," Dorf said.

Though the coaches are more demanding this week, Dorf is still trying to have them keep a positive attitude.

"A lot of times, we tend to get negative in what we do. There's ways to approach an individual in a positive manner when he's making a mistake. I think the coaches are doing a better job at that," Dorf said.

Dorf was particularly impressed this week by the development of Martin Billups, a freshman fullback who is playing on the "scout team," a group of players from other teams that runs plays against the Saluki defense.

"I could like to see the students get out and see what we're doing. But the time I'm really concerned about in fan appreciation is Aug. 31 when we play Lincoln University," Dorf said.

Any student who wishes to be on the 1985 football Saluki team must be registered by the football office in room 106 by 4:30 p.m. Students must report by Friday.

Dorr institutes drills to guard against mistakes

By Ron Warnick
Staff Writer

To cut down on the mistakes made in last Saturday's scrimmage, head coach Ray Dorr's football Salukis have broken down their errors this week into small group drills in an effort to prevent mistakes in the future.

One of the sore spots at Saturday's scrimmage was punt protection, as two punts were blocked.

"We've taken 15 minutes before practice and slowed down to a teaching speed of punt protection that we want. Then we take it in practice at full speed to see if we are improving. And I think some improvement," Dorr said.

Dorr said the punters will also have to get used to the challenge of defenders.

"It's not something that you have to punt the ball with some difficulty. We want to have people crossing their line of vision to give them something to be interested," he said.

Dorr said his quarterbacks are performing better, but not up to the level he would like.

"Several of them are still a little lacklative in the block, not throwing the ball on the break. One of the things we're seeing is coverage on two different occasions. The only way they can get better is to be put into situations where they have to..."
