GTE asks for increase

Proposal would raise pay phone, assistance costs

By Jeff McIntire
Business Writer

A new GTE proposal could change the amount Carbondale residents would be charged for pay phone calls and use of the directory assistance service, a company official said.

The proposal, submitted on Aug. 2, would raise the pay phone charge from 20 or 25 cents to 35 cents and directory assistance from 30 cents to 50 cents, but would reduce long distance charges by about 10 percent, James Blanchard, GTE regional vice president, said.

If the proposal is approved, SIUC students feel the plan would be more harmful than helpful.

Kieran Baehr, a second-year graduate student in telecommunications from Carbondale, said the rate plan would not affect him greatly, but would create a minor irritation.

"It would hurt a little bit to pay the extra money for a pay phone call, but I don't think it would stop me from making the call," he said.

Mike Spiwak, Undergraduate Student Government president, said he still does not know all proposed changes, but he does not expect students to gain many significant benefits.

"It seems like this plan will not vastly increase services for the students," he said.

Susan Hall, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said the pay phone increases and directory assistance changes would hurt students.

"One of the problems here is that Carbondale has such a transient population, students often need to use directory assistance," she said.

The move would complete the merger of GTE and Contel Cellular, uniting GTE subscribers and former Contel customers under the same rate plan, Blanchard said.

GTE also recommended eliminating the suburban additive charge and no longer charging monthly local rates based on the number of phones that can be reached with a local call, Blanchard said.

The suburban additive charge is an extra monthly charge on residents of small towns surrounding larger communities, such as the charge to DeSoto residents of about $22, whereas Carbondale residents are charged from about $15, Charles Travelstead, local GTE spokesman, said.

Proposed GTE Rate Structure

GTE's proposed rate structure will increase pay phone charges from 20 or 25¢ to 35¢ and directory assistance charges from 30¢ to 50¢ per call.

Also, GTE will stop billing suburban communities for an additive charge.*

Strikers, officials to meet

By Christian Kennerly

Central Illinois Public Service Company workers and officials will meet today to try to bring an end to the four-month lockout, but without a new contract an agreement is unlikely, a union spokesperson said.

Bill Spiller, a union steward for the Carbondale area, said workers are unhappy paying higher medical insurance premiums that benefit non-union employees.

Spiller said workers want lower insurance premiums and the back pay they have missed since being locked out in May.

"They can end the lockout, but without a contract they won't go back to work," he said.

The 1,000 CIPS employees of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 702 and 500 employees from Local 148 were locked out May 20.

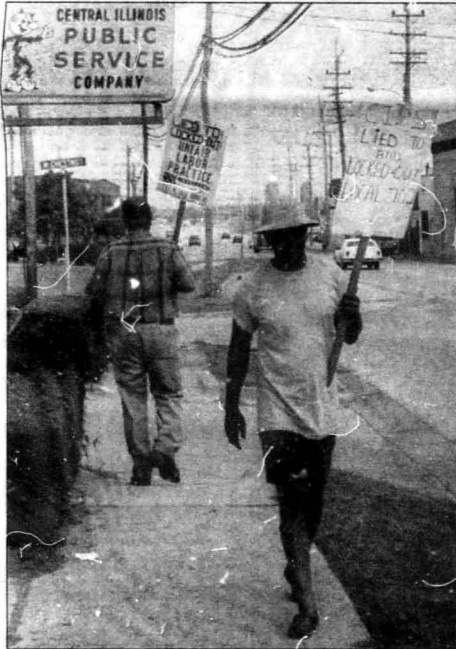

Lynne Galia, CIPS spokesperson, said workers were locked out for two reasons.

"Union employees engaged in a work slowdown and refused to answer call outs," she said. "Prior to April 24, union employees took approximately 300 calls per month. When the contract expired, they began refusing calls and by May 20 they were taking zero calls."

Galia said the workers of Local 702 currently are locked out because of a failure to reach an agreement.

"We signed a contract in June with Local 148, but they have chosen to remain on strike in sympathy for the Local 702," she said.

Program designed to soften transition

By Shawna Donovan
Administration Writer

Adjusting to college life can be one of the most stressful experiences students will go through, but they can get extra help from SIUC faculty and staff members to ease the transition.

The Early Warning System program is designed to help students stay involved with school while advising them on their academic and financial problems, said Harvey Welch, vice president of Student Affairs.

"The Early Warning System program is another opportunity for students to stay in school," Welch said. "Faculty and staff members get involved by furnishing support to students."

Last year, more than 1,500 students were referred to the Early Warning System, where they received help from different agencies, such as the Financial Aid Office and tutoring services.

Joyce Craven, SIUC health care management instructor, said she has helped students since 1990.

"My reward for helping students is seeing them get back on track and on the right channel for their college career," Craven said. "I just want to see students get their

SIUC Parking Division to ticket jaywalkers

A word of advice to pedestrians and bicyclists: Look both ways before you cross the street — the SIUC Parking Division is watching.

Beginning Sept. 1, pedestrians not crossing the street within a marked crosswalk or bicyclists not walking their bikes through a crosswalk will be fined $15 for each offense, an official said.

Merilyn Hogan, director of the SIUC Parking Division, said the new regulations were adopted to promote safety.

"The University is very concerned about student safety," Hogan said. "And when bikes zoom out of a crosswalk or people walk into the road from nowhere, you need some regulations to prevent and reduce accidents."

James Tweedy, vice president of administration, said the goal is to adopt the regulations without clear up traffic confusion.

Ex-Salukis' pro hopes remain alive

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

Former Saluki football standouts Yonel Jourdain and Tom Roth found out a little more about their NFL chances yesterday, when teams around the league made their mandatory cuts to the 60-man roster.

Roth, an anchor on the Salukis offensive line until 1991, made the cut with the Los Angeles Raiders.

SIUC offensive coordinator Phil Meyer said Jourdain is far from being out of the picture.

"He called and talked to coach Smith after the cut," Meyer said. "And he said the Bills are interested in keeping him on the developmental squad."

A developmental squad is a group of five players who are restricted to practice duty unless moved to the active roster. Pay ranges from $3,300 a week to $5,000 a week over the course of 18 weeks.

Laverne Roth, Tom Roth's mother, said it was an exciting day for the family.

"It was an anxious day, like draft day, but we're very excited for him," she said. "He's worked very hard and we feel he is deserving."

Gary Horton, Jourdain and Roth's agent, said the developmental squad benefits the players in a number of ways.

"A guy gets a year in a team's system, he gets to practice every day, he attends meetings and receives top-notch coaching," Horton said. "So I think it's an

Final Four Vanderbilt to highlight schedule for women hoopsters

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's basketball team could gain some recognition in the national spotlight this season when it takes on some of the top teams in the country.

The Salukis released 1993-94' women's basketball schedule highlights incoming teams Arizona State, Illinois and perennial women's basketball powerhouse Vanderbilt, at the SIUC Arena.

The strong non-conference matchups will go along with a Missouri Valley Conference schedule that ranks among the nations most difficult.

Head Coach Cindy Scott, who is going into her 16th season with the Salukis doesn't feel there's anything new about the tough schedule.

"This year's schedule is very typical of our schedules in the past, and we play some tough non-conference games," Scott said. "Tennessee Tech and Northern Illinois both may win their conferences this year, and Vanderbilt might be ranked No. 1 in the nation."

"We're also going to Virginia and they're another great program as well."

Vanderbilt head coach Jim Foster said SIUC ranks right up there with his team and the rest of the nations top programs.

"Cindy (Scott) does a great job and SIUC provides a high level of competition," Foster said. "We try to play a very difficult schedule and going to SIUC fits right in."

Foster led his Vanderbilt team to the Women's Final Four last season.

When Vanderbilt comes to Carbondale, fans will have more to look forward to than just an excellent team.

The Commodores boast the nations tallest player in 6.10' senior Heidi Gillingham.

The University of Illinois coming to the Arena should also spark the interest of fans as the Salukis have recently dominated the series with their neighbors to the north.

Saluki assistant coach Julie Beck said the Fighting Illini may come to Carbondale on the warpath.

"U of I is hot after us, there's no doubt about that," Beck said. "We've beat them the last two years now."

Despite the high profile non-conference schedule, Lady Saluki loyalists should not look past the difficulty of the MVC.

Teams predicted to be at the top of the conference include Creighton, Drake, Illinois State and as the past two seasons have proven-Southwest Missouri State. SMSU head coach Cheryl Burnett said there is definitely a rivalry between the Salukis and the Lady Bears.

"The rivalry is always exciting for both schools," Burnett said. "The national attention that the game has recently received is great for the MVC."

In the past few seasons, SIUC and SMSU have elevated themselves from the rest of the conference pack, but things are looking as if they're going to tighten up in 1993.

Scott said she expects the MVC race to be a tight one this season.

All the action begins on November 27 with an exhibition game at the Arena with the AAU Lady Hawks.

Murray State will kick off the regular season home schedule on December 8, followed by the matchup with U of I on December 11.

The awaited match-up with Vanderbilt is Feb. 2.

Volleyball Salukis invite test from stiff competition

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Writer

A young Saluki volleyball squad will be put to the test early and often, and its head coach wouldn't have it any other way.

"I like our schedule," third-year SIUC skipper Sonya Locke said. "We need to play the very best teams we can play, and the players are excited to play those teams because they can see for themselves and get a feel for where they are as a team if they are challenged."

The Salukis open the season Sept. 2-4 at the Penn State Invitational, where SIUC will do battle with the likes of West Virginia, Pittsburgh, and the host Nittany Lions.

Locke said she is excited to open up against stiff competition.

"We start the season off with a bang," Locke said. "We don't get that many opportunities to play outside of the conference, so when we do, it's important that we play regionally and nationally ranked teams, if we can."

SIUC will return home Sept. 7 to open Missouri Valley Conference play at Davies Gym against Indiana State.

The Salukis will stay home and play host to the Saluki Invitational Sept. 10-11, with Morehead State, Marquette and Valparaiso also participating.

Having four of their first seven matches at home will be a change of pace for the Salukis from last season, as SIUC opened up its 1992 campaign with 13 of its first 15 matches on the road.

Locke said the better balance of home and road contests will help her team in the classroom.

"The best part (of the schedule) is that we are at home at least every other weekend," Locke said. "We aren't on the road twice in a row, and that is good for our academic side of things."

SIUC will head out on a three-game road swing to face MVC foes Tulsa and Southwest Missouri State Sept. 17-18, before moving on to Louisville Sept. 22 for a match with the Cardinals, who beat the Salukis last season, 3-0.

The Salukis return to MVC action Sept. 24-25 when they play host to Northern Iowa and Drake.

SIUC then will head out on another three-match road trek, which will take them through central Illinois to face league favorite Illinois State Oct. 1 and Bradley Oct. 2.

BLACK S. AFRICAN TEACHERS ON STRIKE — Members of the South African Teachers Union have gone on strike and are asking for a 15 percent pay raise and a minimum wage of $500 a month, instead of the five percent raise offered by the government. Black schools, which get about one-quarter the money of white schools and answer to a completely separate state bureaucracy, had to struggle as best they could for a month or more until supplies arrived. At the beginning of the school year in January, there were no books or supplies.

'EUROTUNNEL' SLATED TO OPEN IN MAY 1994 — There's finally light at the end of the tunnel, now that the official opening of the Channel Tunnel, a.k.a. "Eurotunnel," has been set for May 6, 1994. According to the Eurotunnel company and BritRail, that's when auto shuttle trains between Folkestone, England, and Calais, France, will begin operating. High-speed passenger train service at each end of the tunnel will begin on a limited basis that summer—to and from London, Paris and Brussels—with a full schedule slated to start by year's end.

MAOIST WAR IN PERU WINDING DOWN — Nearly a year after the capture of Shining Path leader Abimael Guzman and several of his top lieutenants, Peruvians are beginning to believe that the 13-year war against the Maoist insurgency is finally winding down and may soon be over. The heavy military security once present at Ayacucho's airport and around the city has all but disappeared. Last year, there was only one scheduled commercial flight into Ayacucho a day; now there are three. Tourists are returning in large numbers, and for the traditional Holy Week festival last April, hotels and airlines were booked to capacity.

ANCIENT WATERS RISE ANEW IN THE ANDES — In a variety of projects, academic experts, field agents and peasant farmers are working to reclaim the Andean region of Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, by rehabilitating thousand-year-old canals and terraces. They are rediscovering methods of cultivation on raised and sunken fields and studying and experimenting with ancestral native crops. Such interest in "applied archeology" and "traditional technology" has burgeoned into an unprecedented movement.

WANG TO EMERGE FROM BANKRUPTCY — Wang Laboratories Inc., one of the nation's leading computer manufacturers in the early 1980s, hopes to survive the '90s by not making any more computers. The company, has been undergoing a radical transformation in preparation for its emergence from bankruptcy court protection, which it hopes will occur next month. It has shrunk a work force that totaled 31,000 at its peak a few years ago to 6,000. It has shed its core business of making minicomputers and has sold off its manufacturing facilities. And the influence of the family of its late founder, An Wang, has been whittled significantly.

NEW DIRECTOR OF CDC TO SHIFT FOCUS — David Satcher, newly appointed director of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, says he will intensify the focus of the agency toward the under-served and the inner cities. Satcher, president of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., expects to stress the CDC's mandate of prevention of violence and substance abuse, especially in inner cities. He said he will begin working at least part time at CDC in September and will make a complete transition by the first of the year. The appointment does not require Senate confirmation.

COLA adjusting to department cuts

By Kellie Huttes
General Assignment Writer

While the College of Liberal Arts is adjusting to cutbacks and mergers in its departments, the dean says he refuses to give up the doctoral programs the Illinois Board of Higher Education has mandated be cut from his college in October.

John Jackson said cuts are being made throughout SIUC and other public Illinois universities, and his college is not an exception.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended changes and has left it up to the universities to make the cuts internally, Jackson said.

Dean refuses to give up doctoral programs

"We've done all we should do," Jackson said, but the board suggested cutting doctoral programs in history, political science, sociology and geography that the University absolutely has refused, he said.

SIUC will know in October whether more classes, departments or programs will be cut when the board will release its suggestions again.

COLA, the largest college on campus, merged its community development program with the geography department in January and eliminated its religious studies department on July 1.

The School of Art and Design, the School of Music, the Department of Speech Communications, the Department of Theater and the University Museum voted to move to COLA last year because of restructuring that has been in the works for the past two years.

Restructuring also caused religious studies to be eliminated and the community development merger, Jackson said.

"We've been trying to realign and build on our strongest programs and the state has been pressuring us through the priority quality planning process to eliminate some programs," Jackson said.

Religious studies and community development were two of the smallest academic programs to be cut under COLA, having only three faculty members a piece and less than 50 students.

Although religious studies had only a small amount of majors, hundreds of students took the classes as part of the University's general education program, said David Werlich, chairman of the history department.

Riazuddin Zobairi, adjunct associate professor, still will be teaching a general education religion in history course and several Islamic history courses under the history department.

"We're able to fit their courses in with very little change in our own department," Werlich said.

He also said having the religious courses in his department was "good, we can use the help."

David Sharpe, chairman of the geography department, said he feels good about the merge of community development into the geography department.

He said the department will phase out the community development master's program.

Sharpe said though changes were always difficult, they would try to make it productive.

Liability insurance law finally enforced

By Emily Priddy
Politics Writer

After a four-year trial period, a law requiring Illinois motorists to carry liability insurance has been made permanent.

By signing new legislation, Gov. Jim Edgar cemented the mandatory insurance law he championed during his term as secretary of state. Without renewal, the law would expire at the end of this year.

Despite initial fears that the measure would cause insurance premiums to rise without reducing the number of uninsured drivers on the road, officials say the law has succeeded in fulfilling its original purpose.

John Torre, a spokesman for Secretary of State George Ryan, said the number of uninsured motorists has decreased from 17 percent of all Illinois drivers to 7 percent since the law was implemented in 1990.

"The bottom line is, we feel the law has worked, and that's why we pushed...to have this law made permanent," Torre said.

"When I was fighting for the mandatory insurance legislation in 1988, there were dire predictions that it would drive up insurance premiums and not reduce the number of uninsured Illinois motorists. They have proven to be unfounded. Premiums have remained relatively stable and the number of uninsured motorists has been cut in half," Edgar said.

Local insurance agents said that premiums have been unaffected by the law.

State Farm agent Loreen Mason said although the number of policies she sold rose briefly after the law was implemented, the cost of premiums remained static.

"If they'd carry the punishment out to the way that they say they would, you'd probably see a drop in the rates," Shelter Insurance agent Jim Rains said.

Rains explained that, as part of their liability package, drivers are required to buy uninsured motorists insurance. This insurance covers the company's costs when a client is hit by an uninsured driver.

If the law is enforced properly, Rains said, the overall cost of liability coverage will decrease with the number of uninsured motorists.

Since the law went into effect, the number of accidents involving uninsured motorists has dropped 27 percent from 70,284 in 1990 to 51,150 in 1992.

"Far fewer people are paying the price for somebody else's failure to carry insurance," Ryan said. "At the same time, our state has created one of the least burdensome and most effective systems in the nation for administering a mandatory insurance law."

Besides being permanent, House Bill 1798 differs from the original law in that it is more streamlined and friendlier to people who have insurance but do not have proof with them when they are stopped by the police.

Under the old policy, first-time offenders' license plates were suspended for two months. After that time, drivers were required to show proof of insurance and pay a $50 fine before the plates were returned.

With the new law, motorists' license plates will be reinstated as soon as they can show proof of insurance, but the fine has been doubled to $100.

Additionally, the new law allows chief circuit judges to assign a court officer to determine whether a vehicle was properly insured at the time the citation was issued, rather than clogging the courts with unnecessary hearings and wasting the driver's time.

SIUC graduate receives state level award

By Fernando Feliu-Moggi
Special Assignment Writer

SIUC graduate Chris Ogren has learned that hard work and dedication pays off.

Ogren received the Student Employee of the Year award at the University last spring and has gone on to win the same title at the state level.

The title made her the third SIUC student employee to earn the Illinois award since its creation four years ago.

Ogren, former student advertising manager for the Daily Egyptian, received the state award in May.

Sherri Allen, Daily Egyptian advertising manager and Ogren's supervisor, said Ogren's level of responsibility and commitment to her work made her the ideal candidate for the title.

"Chris was the kind of person you could rely on to get the job done," Allen said. "She seemed to know what needed to be done and when."

Allen said it was the first time she had nominated one of her students for the student employee award.

"I have been here for four and-a-half years and in that time I had never nominated anyone for the award," she said. "I nominated Chris because she was one of the brightest and best students who ever worked here."

Dianna King, coordinator of public relations for the Financial Aid Office, said there were 40 applicants for the award, but the uniqueness of Ogren's position and the responsibility it carried with it made her the winner.

"Chris managed thousands of dollars worth of advertising, coordinating a group of students without help," King said. "It was the magnitude of the responsibility, plus the uniqueness of the position that made her ideal for the award."

Some of the qualities sought in student employee candidates at the university and state levels are reliability, initiative, quality of work and professionalism, King said.

She said that because of the size of the student workforce and the wide array of student work positions available at SIUC, the University always has done well a student employee contests.

"We have one of the largest student employee programs in the country," King said. "Students have work opportunities that prepare them for professional fields and that are not available anywhere else."

Ogren, who is now looking for employment in the Chicago area said the award has helped her career and given her more confidence in her work.

"I was surprised to receive the SIUC student employee award. Ogren said. "After that, I automatically qualified for the state level, and was glad to win that."

Ogren said she got much more than a title from her work at the Daily Egyptian.

"The job taught me a lot about the advertising industry and prepared me for future work," Ogren said. "I also got to make many decisions on my own. My job as DE student advertising manager was the only place where I could get such valuable experience."

Coroner's initial suspicions proven accurate

Inquest confirms deceased victim of gunshot wounds

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
Police Writer

Williamson County Coroner Monte Blue suspected foul play in the death of a Buckner man since his remains were found in June, and an inquest Monday night confirmed his beliefs.

The inquest determined that Keith L. Brown died of multiple gunshot wounds.

The skeletal remains of Brown, 34, a licensed nurse from Buckner, were found in southwest Williamson County on June 29 but were not identified until July 21.

A farmer who had been laying south of Crab Orchard Lake found Brown's skeletal remains.

Blue said a jury at the inquest brought a verdict which said that Brown died of multiple gunshot wounds with a homicidal intent.

Blue said Brown's remains had been run over by farming machinery and scattered over a football field-sized area.

Police and forensic officials searched an area of 80 feet by 280 feet to look for the rest of Brown's remains and other personal artifacts.

In addition to other remains, searchers found a watch, eyeglasses and a jacket that fit the description of what Brown was wearing when he was last seen.

Car keys in the jacket also were found to match a car owned by Brown at a junkyard in Freeman Spur.

"Because the remains were spread out it made it harder to gather them," Blue said.

He said the identifying process included an initial study of the skeleton by a forensic pathologist, a positive identification by a forensic odontologist and the determination of the cause of death by a forensic anthropologist.

"My job as coroner is to make sure it was him," Blue said. "I was 95 percent sure it was him but in order for me to be 100 percent sure I needed to go through dental records."

Blue sent the dental remains to Indiana dentist David Dennis, who used standard X-ray comparison procedures to identify Brown.

"We compared X-rays before and after death until we found a match," Dennis said. "It's a routine procedure."

Capt. Don Jones of the Buckner Police Department said people in the area did not know Brown perhaps because he lived in the county for a short period of time.

Jones said even with a population of about 500, Buckner officials did not know anything about Brown until he was reported missing.

Brown was last seen alive about 8:30 a.m. on the morning of Feb. 3 after dropping his wife off at work in Carbondale.

Shooting contradicts anti-abortion cause

EARLIER THIS MONTH, A CATHOLIC priest in Mobile, Ala., tried to place an advertisement in a Mobile newspaper that suggested the killing of people who perform abortions is justifiable homicide. He failed in his attempt, and church authorities ordered him to retract his opinion or resign.

Regretfully, this priest is not alone in his belief. Peaceful, anti-abortion protests slowly are becoming a thing of the past—replaced by brutal, physical violence. Last week brought the second time this year that an abortion doctor was shot, with one of the cases resulting in death. Oddly enough, the people who are taking or trying to take the lives of pro-choice advocates are the same people who are protesting the loss of life.

This type of guerrilla warfare against pro-choice advocates contradicts the message pro-life supporters are trying to send, but it is aiding in the deterioration of society as a whole. People have the right to express their beliefs, but not to harm others in the process.

DR. GEORGE TILLER FREQUENTLY IS targeted by abortion protesters because he performs late-term abortions. In fact, his clinic—the Women's Health Care Services Clinic in Wichita, Kan.—is one of only seven clinics in the nation where third-trimester abortions are performed.

In 1991, six weeks of abortion protests at Tiller's clinic and two others led to the arrest of 2,700 people for breaching the peace. The violence displayed toward Tiller made him start wearing full-body armor that covered his chest, pelvic area and upper legs, as well as travel with a trained guard dog.

Last Thursday, the violence culminated with an anti-abortionist approaching him as he left the clinic and firing several shots at him. Tiller was not seriously injured and returned to work the next day. Unfortunately, Dr. David Gunn, an Alabama physician, was not so lucky when he was shot dead outside a clinic in Florida, where he performed abortions.

THE DAMAGE ABORTION PROTESTERS create in instances such as these—as well as those in which dead fetuses are slung around—are irreparable. Anti-abortionists build their case around a right to life, but their actions promote death.

Pro-life advocates' cause has much merit, as does that of pro-choice advocates, but the cause gets lost when their expression is bringing harm upon others. Word of abortion advocates terrorizing anti-abortionists is rare, but would be equally reprehensible.

When a doctor is forced to wear body armor for fear of his life, or killed for performing a legal job, something is wrong. Freedom of expression is a basic human right, but so is the freedom to go to work each day.

Violence in the nation already is surging, and violence over an issue better pursued in the political arena only makes matters worse. Regardless of whether one is pro-life or pro-choice, the recent acts of terrorism by anti-abortionists has only hurt both sides.

Campus parking brings woes upon thousands behind wheel

Perhaps many of my fellow students read the front page of the first edition of the DE, and then put it down much the same way I did, and said to yourself, "Who the hell is Marilyn Hogan!"

There were complaints about cars being parked in the same place "day and night" in the Communication Lot. We live here Merilyn! This is our home! Why wouldn't our cars be parked here day and night?

Quigley Hall happens to be on the opposite side of the campus and about a mile walk from my dorm, Merilyn. I walk there five times a week.

All the parking on the west side of SIU is within a thousand yards of the Communication building. Student commuters have not now, and have never had, any larger a walking burden than those of us who live here.

The new changes in parking are an obvious act of incompetence.

There is a parking problem at the Communication Lot. Instead of the first three lanes being assigned to Thompson Point, it should be the first four lanes.

However, if we ever get serious about the parking at SIU, we'll put an end to the requirement for parking permits all together. It works well out at University Mall and it will work just as well here. First come First serve and everyone else walks, just like me!

Students, HRA's, Teachers, Deans, Presidents of the University; everyone wall's including student commuters.

There exists (except for those individuals who are handicapped and emergency vehicles) no legitimate reasons why anyone should have any special parking privileges. Except of course, for the extremely important needs of security.

The new changes in parking are an obvious act of incompetence and needs to be corrected quickly! Lets do so before someone gets hurt!

—Andrew J. Ensor, senior, College of Liberal Arts

Concern arises over campus liberals

This letter is a warning to new students about ideas they might learn on campus.

You ask, "What's this guy talking about?"

Well, I'm talking about radical liberalism. Yes, it's hard to believe, but it's true. This campus is full of liberals, and they're waiting to brainwash you.

While at SIUC, your ears will be assaulted with the following lies:

First, all which is wrong with the world is the fault of white European males.

Second, everything which is wrong with the U.S. has happened since 1980.

Third, government is the solution to every problem.

Fourth, our planet is dying, and we are dying with it.

Fifth, prosperity can only be had by redistributing wealth.

Sixth, no one is responsible for anything they do.

Seventh, competition is a bad thing.

Eighth, you should feel guilty because someone else is less fortunate than you.

Ninth, life is a free lunch.

Tenth, everyone should be made equal by bringing down those who have succeeded.

Finally, saying you care about a problem is the same as fixing it.

These are some liberal ideas you will be exposed to around campus. You should also know that when listening to the mass media, ABC, CBS, CNN, NBC, newspapers, and news magazines, they will only reinforce what you have seen and heard on campus. However, you can save yourself.

If you have the courage to face the truth, then I suggest you try reading and listening to authors and commentators such as Rush Limbaugh, George Will, and Dixie Lee Ray.

Their philosophy is as mine. I believe in the individual, in self responsibility, in hard work, and in prosperity through expansion of opportunity.

Listen and decide for yourself. —Michael D. Caldwell, student, geography

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

"There seemed to be a general confusion as to who has the right-of-way," Tweedy said. "This way the pedestrians and motorists know that crosswalks give pedestrians the right-of-way."

Hogan said students should be prepared to follow the new regulations, because enforcement will not be taken lightly.

But some students say they feel the high cost of jaywalking would prevent them from violating the new regulations.

Travelstead said the plan calls for communities regardless of size to be charged about $18.

Also proposed in the plan are a 10 percent reduction in GTE-provided long distance rates and expansions of consumer discount calling plans, Blanchard said.

Blanchard said GTE would make no additional revenue under the new rate structure.

"Over a period of years, GTE has been moving rates for individual services closer to the costs of providing those services," he said. "This filing will continue that effort and help us provide the services customers want at an affordable price."

D.C., and a decision in the union's favor could have several implications, he said.

"That would mean that this company was unlawful in locking us out," he said.

Fred Krump, a retired CIPS employee, said in his 42 years with the company, he never experienced a situation like the current lock out.

"The big companies now are trying to get rid of the unions," he said.

"There's been a change within the last 15-20 years. They have taken things away little by little by little."

Krump said the negotiation process has remained the same over the years, but he is encouraged by the meeting of the two sides.

"It's always been a slow process. It was never settled by the time the contract expired," he said. "It could go on forever, but I really think something could happen (today)."

"There has been so much talk that it's hard to get your hopes up, but we're hopeful."

Galia said the meeting has potential but she remains cautious.

"We'd certainly like an agreement to be reached, but there are several outstanding issues still to work out," she said.

The two parties will meet today at 10 a.m. in Effingham.

Weaver said the fines are excessive compared to the seriousness of the violation.

"If it were $2, I could understand," Weaver said. "But $15 seems a little greedy and a smaller fine would probably accomplish the same goal. Besides, I've never seen too much of a problem with jaywalkers — most people cross in the crosswalks."

Hogan said motorists and pedestrians need to be aware that although some crosswalks clearly are marked with students to the program where facilitator, will contact the students about their dilemmas.

Welch said faculty and staff members refer students to the program if they notice a drastic change in behavior at work or in the workplace.

"If student workers were to start signaling they have a problem or dilemma, a staff or faculty member can talk to those students or refer them to the program," Welch said. "Early detection of a problem will help that student in the long run."

Danielle Schneider, a Student Affairs graduate assistant from Highland, said students and facilitators are confidential.

"Most of the contact made between the student and facilitator is at home over the phone," Schneider said. "Students can get input from the facilitators without having to know who they are."

"The program is designed to give the little bit of help the students need to get adjusted to collegiate life," she said.

Program participation has increased gradually since it was established in 1985. More than 50 faculty and staff members have signed up for the 1993-94 academic year.

Positive attitude, becoming involved at SIUC benefits students suffering from home sickness

Perhaps the greatest psychological problem that international students face in a foreign country is home sickness. The problem takes its toll in both perceivable and unperceivable ways. The symptoms range from feeling distance from fellow countrymen, being skeptical of host country citizens and values, experiencing less than optimal performance in academics, isolating oneself and perhaps, returning home without reaching the planned educational goal.

While home sickness is a common problem affecting many students in various forms at SIUC, ways of addressing the negative results are available. The following are some possible solutions for coping with home sickness:

- Keep busy with studies and extracurricular activities. If one is busy, there is less time to think about missing home.

- Use the library for obtaining the latest information on one's country, thereby keeping in touch with developments back home.

To Your Health

- Write home frequently. Communication can make one feel closer to the family. The fastest and most economical means of postal communication is an aerogram which is delivered faster than postcards and envelopes. Attractive postcards may not ever reach the intended destination.

- Call home when possible and send a recorded cassette (not the Top 40 musical hits) with friends who are traveling home during breaks. Cassettes may not reach certain destinations by mail.

- Find host country friends with common interests and learn more from them about the U.S. Share information about home countries, cultures and values with them. Some of these friends may become friends for life.

- Join the home country's registered student organization or an international student organization on campus. These organizations offer cultural and social events which enables one to feel at home

- Think positive. When one thinks positive, attitude and performance improve.

- Visit home whenever possible. Students who don't work during the summer may find it cheaper to visit home rather than paying apartment rent, utilities and buying groceries.

- Get help from the Student Health Programs Wellness Center. The Wellness Center has specially tailored programs and workshops for dealing with stress. The programs are short and are held on campus at times convenient for students to attend.

Although the suggestions above do not claim to be a cure for home sickness, following some or all of them can help a student. Call 536-4441 for more information.

Clinton's wetlands policy designed to end conflicts

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The Clinton administration Tuesday announced a new wetlands policy that attempts to reconcile conflicting interests in the nation's wetlands by offering environmentalists preservation of Alaska's coastline, farmers an exemption for existing cropland and developers the prospect of a speedy appeals process.

The administration also designated the Soil Conservation Service as the lead federal agency for identifying wetlands on agricultural acreage under the terms of the Clean Water Act and other laws.

The conservation service, part of the Agriculture Department, has traditionally been more oriented toward helping farmers rather than serving as a regulatory enforcer or environmental advocate.

The new policy, which generally tightens restrictions on development of wetlands, reverses a Bush administration proposal that would have allowed construction or development in 1.7 million acres of Alaska wetlands—including 345,000 acres of coastal area. Environmentalists praised that decision as well as the administration's plan to issue an executive order embracing the goal of "no overall net loss" of wetlands.

Farr: groups were pleased that the administration agreed to exempt from new regulations about 53 million acres—mostly in the Midwest—of wetlands that were drained and converted to agricultural use prior to 1985.

Exhibit recognizes women's contribution to TV

By Bill Kugelberg
Entertainment Editor

SIUC graduate has display at Museum of Broadcast Communications, Chicago

SIUC graduate Cary O'Dell loves Lucy, admires Murphy Brown and laughs at Roseanne.

So to show women's contributions to television have been more than most people realize, O'Dell is displaying an exhibit at the Museum of Broadcast Communications in Chicago this fall.

O'Dell, who received his master's degree from SIUC in August 1992, along with Mary Ann Watson, a communications professor from Eastern Michigan University, has organized an exhibit which examines the role women have had on television.

O'Dell said the exhibit, titled "From 'My Little Margie' to 'Murphy Brown': Images of Women on Television," looks at how women's roles have changed and how they have stayed the same throughout television history.

O'Dell said he became interested in the idea after women started to be recognized for their accomplishments recently.

"We have had so many 'Years of the Woman' that I think it started an influx of women on television," O'Dell said. "It seemed like it was the right time to look at women on television from the late '50s to current day.

"We slowly became aware that the way women were being portrayed was not totally accurate," O'Dell said.

The exhibit shows clips of women on television, discussions by panels of famous actresses and a booklet about women or television.

He thinks the exhibit will make people realize how women have been portrayed on television, a portrayal he said sometimes was accurate and sometimes incorrect.

"It seemed women were constantly being victimized in some roles," O'Dell said. "I think the exhibit will make people see the contributions women have given to us."

The exhibit is not limited to women in front of the camera, but also those who worked behind the scenes to bring the shows to the United States.

Joe S. Foote, chairperson of SIUC's radio-television department, said he is not surprised by O'Dell's success. He said O'Dell was on the path to studying women in television when he first met television history class and the class basically dealt with how men had made television what it was," Foote said. "But Cary wondered where the women were in television's history."

O'Dell's curiosity led him to examine 12 female TV pioneers in his thesis paper, something he said has brought him to where he is now.

"My master's thesis dealt with women behind the scenes," O'Dell said. "That led me into the area of gender issues, which got me hooked up with the museum."

O'Dell's exhibit will be on display Sept. 11 to Dec. 17 in the Chicago Cultural Center. Celebrity discussions also will be featured while the exhibit is running.

Streetwise kid made target for FBI, Mafia by stumbling upon secrets

By Stephanie Moletti
Entertainment Writer

Most eleven year olds spend their time worrying about friends, games to play outside on nice days and their favorite television shows.

But in John Grisham's novel "The Client," Mark Sway's top priority is escaping Mafia hitmen.

What may sound like a "Home Alone" spinoff, Grisham's young main character, Mark Sway, is a long way away from the likes of MacCaulay Culkin.

Sway is a lower class street-smart kid who has seen too many movies for his own good.

The book opens as Sway witnesses the suicide of a New Orleans Mafia attorney, Jerome Clifford. Just before his death, Clifford reveals a deadly secret to Sway about the murder of a Louisiana senator.

In the case, Clifford represents Barry Muldanno, a Mafia thug accused of murdering the senator.

As the story unravels, Sway finds himself being pressured by the police, the federal prosecutor and the FBI for information about Clifford's last words; just like in the movies.

Sway hires an attorney, Reggie

Book Review

Love, a 52-year-old divorcee, whose rough past has made her a feisty lawyer with a cause. She has a soft heart and a weakness for helping kids who have been overlooked or abused by the system.

Sway is threatened by the mob and knows they are hiding behind every corner. He is certain that revealing his secret will get him killed.

Love discovers her office has been bugged, and the two are in deeper than they ever had imagined.

To make things worse, even the juvenile court judge says Sway must talk. But the youngster devises a plan that could get him and Love killed, a plan they both believe is their only hope.

"The Client" is another of Grisham's novels that readers simply cannot put down.

Grisham sparks interest in an educational way. A reader not only reads his novels for enjoyment but acquires knowledge on various topics; it is not just reading fiction.

The suspense and background details that made his first three novels so irresistible, come through once again. Grisham has made an art of carefully constructing legal thrillers.

And the main character gives this book a warm twist -- Sway's humor and age captivate the reader. He is just an average kid with a huge problem and killers watching his every move.

With three consecutive number one bestsellers, Grisham has become one of the most popular authors around. Grisham, author of "A Time to Kill," "The Firm" and "Pelican Brief," is an attorney turned author from Oxford, Miss.

His attorney background gives much credibility to his novels. His novels read quickly and he describes baffling legal terms so plainly that anyone can understand it.

Grisham places facts in his novels about Louisiana and its environmental problems, which make them all the more believable.

He also gives an insight to those who are not familiar with the area. Grisham uses this technique in all of his books, making them more believable and real to the reader.

Contact lost with Mars Observer

Los Angeles Times

PASADENA, Calif.—The Mars Observer, at the crucial moment in its 480 million-mile journey to Mars, ignored NASA's furious commands Tuesday and may have missed its long-awaited appointment with the red planet.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration flight controllers had no way of knowing whether the planetary probe had safely reached a planned Martian orbit on its own or had vanished in the void between planets. Indeed they had nothing except a faith in their own human engineering skill to sustain the belief that the spacecraft still existed at all.

Engineers here at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is running the mission, listened in vain through the antennas of the agency's Deep Space Network for any sign of the lost spacecraft. There was only an ominous silence.

At about 5:40 p.m. EDT—the critical moment of the scheduled rendezvous with Mars—a silence fell over the tree-lined Pasadena space center. Attention centered on a simple computerized graph projected on television monitors throughout the JPL campus.

Any movement on the red, white and blue graph would have signaled the resumption of transmissions from the lost probe. After seven minutes of silence, the voice of the NASA flight controller crackled on the intercom: "We have come up negative in our search for a signal."

"We will continue the search." The flight controllers maintained their vigil throughout the evening Tuesday, like a coven of 19th-century whaling widows refusing to relinquish hope for a husband lost at sea. But they could not stem growing suspicions that the probe might have been destroyed Saturday when it lost contact with Earth, where its journey began last September.

"I'd like to believe the spacecraft is in orbit around Mars. We will continue to try and re-establish communications with the spacecraft, assuming it is in orbit," said NASA Project Manager Glenn E. Cunningham. "We will continue to do that as long as we have the resources.

"We are not giving up. I need to emphasize that very strongly," he said.

The nearly $1 billion Mars Observer project was the first U.S. mission to the solar system's mysterious fourth planet in 17 years, designed to pave the way for a new generation of international planetary exploration centered on Mars. After its insertion into orbit, it was to have conducted a comprehensive study of Mars, including transmitting daily weather reports, which scientists hoped would tell them something about why the planet no longer has water.

As the television monitors at JPL played prerecorded video tapes of lectures on the spacecraft's science goals, NASA officials held out the faint hope late Tuesday that the Observer might have automatically performed the delicate series of rocket firings that would place it in the proper orbit.

"NASA engineers said contact could still be made.

Allergies: seasonal misery

By Katie Morrison
Health Writer

"Each person reacts differently," James said. "The symptoms may feel like a cold, so it helps for people to know their history and have a knowledge about what bothers them."

SIUC student Lori DeChausse sits in class and feels miserable — but it is not because she hates her professor, or her class, or even the assignment she must complete.

Her problems are her trouble breathing, her watering eyes and her sneezing fits.

DeChausse is just one of the many students who will be miserable this fall as hay fever season starts.

"I get all stuffed up," DeChausse, a junior in exercise physiology from Morris said.

Early fall brings misery to those who are allergic to ragweed, said Elizabeth James, a Health Service registered nurse.

There are two groups of allergies — seasonal and perennial, James said.

Common symptoms of allergies are sneezing, itching, runny nose, congestion, sinus headaches and burning in the throat, James said.

Perennial allergies are a little easier to avoid, though. They are caused by house dust and animal allergens, such as animal hair, James said.

According to a report by National Allergy Supply, Inc., environmental controls can help reduce perennial allergies such as using vent filters, air cleaners and washing sheets and blankets.

But people who suffer seasonal allergies are not so lucky, since Southern Illinois has an abundance of ragweed, James said.

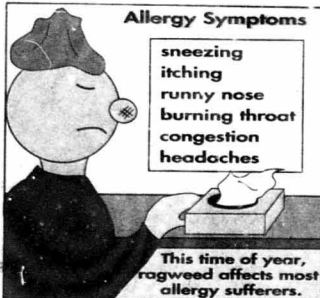

"It's usually two weeks out of the year that ragweed is at its height," James said. "It's difficult to avoid unless you go on vacation to a place that doesn't have much ragweed."

Allergies can strike at any time and they can be inherited or attack a person without warning, James said.

People can alleviate allergic reactions by taking over-the-counter or prescribed medication.

The most common are antihistamines or decongestants, James said.

Antihistamines alleviate itching while decongestants reduce swelling of the nasal passages, James said.

Support group provides activities for married international students

By Sean L. N. Haco
General Assignment Writer

For many SIUC students, Carbondale provides fun and friendship, but some foreign students suffer from boredom and loneliness.

But an SIUC support group helps foreign students and their spouses feel at home in a different environment.

A language barrier often prevents them from establishing community ties. Julia Monteiro, a doctorate student from Fortaleza, Brazil said.

"They often do not speak fluent English and tend to become isolated from the community, feeling like they don't belong," she said. "Because of the language barrier, they are unable to access the services of the University."

The spouses of foreign students face isolation and feelings of being forgotten in a different place, and they often spend their days waiting for a loved one to come home, she said.

Monteiro, a educational psychology major, said the International Spouses Group is a resource for foreign members of the community.

"This is the only way for those feeling isolated to get together and support each other," she said.

The self-help group encourages it's members to become more independent through activities aimed at making spouses more autonomous.

Mariela Herrera, a doctorate student in higher education, said many of the spouses do not go out because they cannot drive.

"We can help them receive driving lessons and we also take them on a tour of local grocery stores and shopping centers," she said.

Group members also will have access to English conversation classes and workshops on health issues.

The group functions as one of nine programs sponsored by the International Friends Club, a volunteer service started in 1981, which sees to the adjustment needs of international students.

"These programs can make life in Southern Illinois more comfortable and fulfilling," she said.

Mochnick said both Americans and foreign students are welcome to participate in the club's programs.

"The International Friends Club is open to anyone willing to share and learn about different cultures," she said.

The group is accepting new members and anyone interested in more information should call Beth Mochnick at 453-5774. The International Spouses Group is supported by a $2 membership fee.

SIUC fans forced to say 'good-bye' to mascot

By John McCadd
Special Assignment Writer

1982, was the last of the University-owned Salukis, which now are supplied by John and Linda Saunders' kennel in Chester.

In addition to football games, the mascots attended basketball games and local parades frequently, which because of their unique appearance, they attracted plenty attention, Saunders said.

In fact, although Thunder was ill during the past year, it was not evident until the final three weeks of his life.

"We didn't use him for much of last year's football season, but we took him to the (opening) game and the homecoming game last year, and he had a good time as usual," Saunders said. "He was in bad health over a lot of the past year, but you couldn't tell because he couldn't come up to you and say, 'I don't feel too good.'"

Although Salukis are the oldest known breed of dog, they are not as rare as people may think. Saunders said they are ranked 74th out of 134 registered breeds, but are so unique that they are handled carefully by owners.

SIUC, located in "Little Egypt" adopted the breed as a mascot in the 1950s, and in 1952, the University owned 12 salukis, Saunders said.

Salukis were hunting dogs in ancient Egypt noted for their speed and acute senses, and by many the dogs were considered sacred.

The Saunders family kennel plans to lend another Saluki to the University in November; they presently own four. After graduating from SIUC in 1964, Saunders chose to open their kennel and breed salukis.

Thunder's predecessors and deceased contemporaries are buried in a private farm in Randolph County. Beside Thunder's memorial lies Khalid, a Saluki mascot and Thunder's associate until 1986, when Khalid died of similar causes.

Saunders said Thunder not only will be missed greatly around the Saunders household, but will remain a treasured University attraction.

Thunder, one of SIUC's beloved Saluki mascots, died of Cancer and kidney failure a month before the '93 fall season.

Almost a month before college football season begins, Saluki athletics fans are forced to say good-bye to a widely-revered gridiron attraction — the Salukis' 17-year old mascot, Thunder.

One of two pure-bred Saluki mascots, Thunder was put to sleep Aug. 11 after suffering from cancer and kidney failure.

Thunder, and fellow mascot Tut, would pile into the family van weekly to boost the morale of McAndrew Stadium fans, which caretaker John Saunders said was the dog's most preferable pastime.

"On weekends, he'd always come running to get in the van because he knew he'd get all those hot dogs at the stadium," Saunders said. "He was good with kids, who'd be coming around and hanging on him and pulling his ears, getting their pictures taken."

"He really enjoyed the attention," he said.

USG to debate student issues at first meeting

By Tina Davis
General Assignment Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government will discuss bars, landlords, money and sports — all favorite topics of students — at its first meeting tonight.

Mike Spiwak, USG president, said he is against raising the bar-entry age to 21 because it leads to a higher crime level.

"Students are going to drink no matter what," Spiwak said. "If they can't drink legally in the bars, then they will go to house parties where anyone is served and drink to the point of alcohol poisoning. Not only that, but alcohol leads to date rape," Spiwak said.

Students should also be aware of the landlord licensing safety violation, another issue to be discussed, Spiwak said.

Spiwak said he is in favor of landlord licensing as long as the inspectors do not walk in and report students for having more than the number on the lease inhabiting a house.

"We need someone to get on the landlords and make sure the apartments and houses are decent enough to live in; but at the same time, students cannot afford to be kicked out of the home just for trying to make their rent cheaper," Spiwak said. The campus hotel also will be discussed at the meeting.

"I don't think half the students even know about the hotel," Spiwak said. "The students didn't have a say in the situation and it's our money that's going into it."

USG also is considering a booklet listing all the good and bad landlords, the nice and not so nice apartments; and how to protect yourself from a tricky lease.

"If the student government could get to the students in the dorms before the landlord gets to them, that would prevent a lot of problems," Spiwak said.

USG also will discuss how it was suppose to receive $344,277 in funds for the school year and ended up with $19,000.

Spiwak said this year's senate needs to review the funding and actually see what money went where.

"The students have a right to know these kinds of things," Spiwak said. "We're also trying to find ways to allocate more money to the smaller registered student organizations."

The closing of the 92/93 school year left many items in the Undergraduate Student Council open for referendum. While no voting will take place at tonight's meeting, things will pick up where they left off.

Spiwak said this year's senate will try to find ways to keep students involved as well as discussing particular items on an agenda and trying to come up with some solutions.

"I really want USG to do more with the students this year," Spiwak said. "If we can come up with more ways to keep the students updated with what's going on around campus and the city; then students would be able to voice their opinion before a decision is final instead of after."

With each major item discussed, Spiwak plans to let the students know what is going on by holding open forums in the ballrooms, sending letters and having information tables in the student center. Other items on the agenda include mass transit, recycling, tuition and fees and Division I sports.

"If we don't have the input of the students, then the administration has no way of finding out how the students feel," Spiwak said.

The meeting is at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Renaissance Room.

Exhibit displays local work

By Thomas Gibson
Entertainment Writer

In an attempt to display more local artists' works, SIUC's University Museum has joined with Carbondale's Porcelain Art Guild to present Art of China paintings, a collection of select painted porcelain plates.

The exhibit consists of work from artists from the Southern Illinois community, museum director John Whitlock said.

Whitlock said this exhibit will not only feature the work of Carbondale's guild members, but will focus on artist's biographies and a visually-detailed record of the porcelain painting processes.

The museum exhibits works from the community annually, Whitlock said.

"The museum has a mission to serve the entire community in the area of arts, science, and the humanities," Whitlock said. "The museum also tries to enhance the student in current events and trends."

The museum's commitment to showing local artists' work is something Carbondale painters relish.

Carbondale artist Jane Eicher said she is excited about having her work displayed in the museum.

"Making art is a hobby I have had for a long time," Eicher said.

"The entire guild is honored to have their work appearing for the first time in the museum," She added.

Other guild members agree with Eicher.

Carbondale artist Ruby Kerley said she is happy the University Museum is displaying the guild's work.

"It is a generous gesture on the part of the museum to have the works displayed," Kerley said. "Perhaps the students will enjoy it. There are a lot of beautiful pieces the guild is showing in the museum."

Whitlock said he hopes that by bringing the exhibit to SIUC students will realize what is happening in South Africa.

"Bringing the exhibit to SIUC lets people see how conditions are in South Africa," he said.

Warring factions in Bosnia agree on plan to allow aid

The Washington Post

MOSTAR, Bosnia—Warring Muslim and Croat factions agreed Tuesday night to a plan that would allow shipment of 200 tons of food to Mostar's Muslim-held old city, which has been cut off from humanitarian aid for several weeks.

The talks were conducted by short wave radio as Croat forces bombarded Muslim troop positions and civilian areas with tanks, howitzers and rocket launchers for 12 hours, starting at 5:45 a.m.

At least three mortar shells hit the old town's jury-rigged hospital in the basement and ground floor of a turn-of-the-century laboratory. No one was injured in that attack but the shells plowed into a storage room upstairs, destroying the small amount of U.N. medicine brought to Mostar on Saturday.

The Croats and Muslims have been united against the better-armed Serbs through most of Bosnia's 17-month civil war, but have been battling each other since May, when Muslim-led forces in central Bosnia seized Croat villages. Tuesday, Croat forces north of Mostar advanced in an apparent effort to cut the only supply route to the Muslim enclave here—a perilous mountain track that winds 30 miles north.

The Croats also are targeting Muslim positions around a dam north of the city, from which they could flood the Neretva River and destroy makeshift bridges that the Muslims have built to connect their positions in the city, said Suleiman Budakovic, a senior officer of the Bosnian Army force in this region.

Under Tuesday's agreement, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees will move 19 trucks carrying 200 tons of food to the Muslim side Wednesday afternoon—and will send an undisclosed amount to the Croat side, even though there is no lack of food there. The accord provides for a simultaneous exchange of war dead, with 15 Muslim bodies to be handed over for nine Croat bodies.

Pentagon officials support sending troops to Somalia

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Pentagon officials Tuesday sought to depersonalize a decision to send 400 U.S. Army Rangers to the Somali capital of Mogadishu, saying the elite combat troops would not specifically target fugitive warlord Mohamed Farah Aideded.

Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski confirmed reports that the Rangers would arrive in Mogadishu in the next several days to reinforce 1,200 U.S. combat soldiers assigned to a "quick-reaction force" there.

DeLaski described the task force as a "beefed-up company" drawn from the Army's 75th Ranger Regiment based at Fort Benning, Ga. The task force will consist of combat soldiers as well as support troops such as logistical, communication and transportation specialists, she said.

Several administration officials have said that the Rangers would be tasked with capturing Aideded, who has been blamed for a series of attacks on U.S. and other foreign troops serving in a United Nations peace-keeping force.

DeLaski, however, played down that possibility, asserting that the principal mission of the Ranger task force would be to assist the quick-reaction force in restoring calm to south Mogadishu.

"The U.N. has called for his arrest, but it's important to remember that ... capturing Aideded is not the only way to improve security," deLaski said at the Pentagon's regular briefing Tuesday. "We are not trying to personalize this. This is not an effort to go after one man; it's an effort to improve the overall situation in Mogadishu."

DeLaski, who described the level of violence in the capital as "unacceptable," said the Rangers would add a new layer of muscle and expertise to the 1,200 U.S. light infantry troops already in Mogadishu.

"The Rangers are seen as being skillful in sort of quick-reaction, small-scale operations," deLaski said. "They're trained for use in close-quarter urban environments. ... It's felt that they can add a dimension and more options to the group that's already there."

The effort to shift the spotlight from Aideded appeared to have as much to do with public relations as it does with military strategy. Administration officials fear that the continuing effort to capture Aideded has become a distraction; they are eager to recast the mission in terms of its original goal, which was to restore a semblance of stability and help distribute food supplies.

At the same time, however, administration officials say that capturing Aideded remains an important goal, one they hope will be accomplished with the addition of the Ranger task force. A senior Army officer described the deployment of Rangers as anything but routine and said the troops would not have been selected if their mission was limited to "garden-variety" weapons sweeps and neighborhood patrols.

Ex-Redskin coach to be analyst

The Washington Post

After a dozen years as one of the game's premier head coaches, there's not much Joe Gibbs doesn't know about pro football. Nevertheless, the people at NBC Sports have gone back to basics to prepare their latest neophyte high-profile analyst for the 1993 National Football League season.

Gibbs' formal education began in mid-July. He traveled to New York and joined Terry O'Neil, the executive producer of NBC Sports until he resigned two weeks ago, for a full day of reviewing game tapes and a frank discussion of what his new employers expect this fall.

Tom Roy replaced O'Neil as executive producer, and though O'Neil was responsible for hiring Gibbs and other celebrity coaches, Roy has said he has plans to change Gibbs' job.

O'Neil always has been convinced Gibbs would be a nature's in the booth.

In a darkened hotel room, using a sheet as a makeshift screen, Gibbs showed O'Neil the intricacies of Don Coryell's offense.

"It was complicated," O'Neil recalled, "but Joe was able to explain it so anyone could really understand it. We've had a great relationship ever since."

And so it was recently when the roles were reversed.

At one point, O'Neil was explaining the importance of preparation. Critical in the process, he explained, are the two days before the game when the announcers visit both teams.

O'Neil then launched into an example, the Redskins-Raiders in Super Bowl XVIII in Tampa.

On the Saturday before the game, O'Neil, director Sandy Grossman and announcers Pat Summerall and John Madden were sitting around the Redskins' hotel waiting to see Gibbs when John Riggins walked through the lobby "just looking like death," O'Neil recalled.

"He said he had the flu, but no one knew it. He was missing practice that last day. He told us he'd woken up all congested in the middle of the night. It was so late, he said he didn't want to wake up a trainer."

"So instead, he went downstairs and sat in a hot tub they had out by the pool. Then he tells us about 3 or 4 in the morning, a couple of girls appeared to wander by. They recognized John and they asked him if there was anything they could make him feel better. He says to them 'How about a couple of beers?' So they got him the beer and they all said goodbye at about 6 o'clock in the morning."

"Now I'm telling Joe this story and his eyes are just getting wider and wider as I'm going on. He'd never heard it before. Whatever story his trainers had told him about Riggins before that game, what I was telling him was not the version he'd been given."

"Then I played a clip for him to show him how we used the information. We didn't go into minute detail about Riggins and the hot tub. ... We told viewers not to expect John Riggins to be a factor."

"In the game, he was never really a factor."

The Raiders overwhelmed the Redskins, 35-9.

"No, I'd never heard that before," Gibbs said, laughing.

"Then again, you could probably say there's a lot of things I didn't know about John Riggins."

In O'Neil's briefing of Gibbs, "we went over a lot of things I hadn't really thought about," Gibbs said.

"One of the biggest surprises is that no one is telling me I don't have to be anyone but myself or that I have to be critical," he said.

"That was always my biggest fear, that I couldn't be myself or that I'd have to be overly critical of players or coaches. ..."

Gibbs will make his debut on Sept. 5 in a game between Seattle and San Diego, and follow that with a Sep. 12 contest between the L.A. Rams and New England.

He'll do nine to 11 games during the regular season, then work the playoffs and Super Bowl for NBC.

Alabama talent to bring tide high

The Sporting News

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—So how good will this 1993 Alabama football team be? Good enough to challenge the school's record winning streak of 28, set from 1978 to '80.

The Crimson Tide have won 23 consecutive games and their schedule could allow them to make a decent run at another undefeated season.

"This is the year we've been talking about," says Gene Stallings, who is entering his fourth season as coach. "We've got a chance to be as good as last year, but we have to stay healthy and we have to fill in some holes."

"We were lucky last year; we didn't lose anyone (to injuries)."

The Tide won the national title last season, surprising even Stallings with their development.

Three defensive players—John Copeland, Eric Curry and George Teague—were first-round picks in the NFL draft last April. But seven offensive and six defensive starters as well as punter Brvne Diehl and kicker Michael Proctor are back among 50 lettermen.

Defense carried the 1992 quad, but Stallings is hoping his offense will make a greater impact in 1993.

"We should be a better offensive team," he says. "Going into last season, we didn't have any experience at quarterback or with the kickers. That's why I thought we were a year away, but we have experience at those spots now."

"And (receiver/returner) David Palmer, he didn't have near the year we expected. He's as good a player as I have coached. For us to be really, really good, he has to be really good."

Besides Palmer, a key player is quarterback Jay Barker, who is 17-0 as a starter—best in school history—but has been an average passer.

To best utilize Palmer's skills, Barker must improve, although some critics of Stallings wonder if he will ever really present a balanced offense.

"Everyone wants to repeat," Stallings says. "The real mark of a champion is to defend his championship."

"The problem is, this isn't the NFL. We don't have everyone back. If we did, I'd be a little bolder with my predictions."

SIUC will get another break in the league grind Oct. 5 when it travels to Evansville. The Salukis topped the Aces last season in Carbondale, 3-1.

A slate of home cooking welcomes the Salukis back in the second half of October, when they will play five of seven MVC matches at Davies Gym, sandwiched around a pair of road tilts Oct. 22-23 at Drake and Northern Iowa.

During that stretch, SIUC will play host to Wichita State Oct. 9, and Southwest Missouri State and Tulsa Oct. 15-16.

The Salukis will close out the home portion of their league schedule when Bradley and Illinois State make visits to Davies Gym Oct. 29-30.

The Salukis will close out league play with a pair of road matches, Nov. 5 at Wichita State and Nov. 10 at Indiana State.

SIUC will close out regular-season competition by playing host to the Saluki Quad Nov. 12-13. Loyola, Southeast Missouri and Arkansas State complete the four-team tournament.

If the Salukis finish in the top four in the MVC, Locke said the Quad will be a good tune-up for the league tournament, slated for Nov. 19-20.

"It's going to be an extremely competitive tournament (the Quad)," Locke said.

"Should we be fortunate enough to get into the conference tournament, I think it will be a great opportunity to gear us up for the (MVC) tournament."

excellent situation for a player."

Horton said Jourdain's chances of being re-signed by the Bills are very good.

"They were extremely pleased with Yonel," Horton said. "They see a guy who has the potential to be a player and SIUC should be proud of him."

Horton said Roth will most likely stick with the Raiders, whether it is on their active roster or the developmental squad.

"He has established a strong bond with Mike White and they are pleased with his play," Horton said.

White formerly was a head coach at the University of Illinois at Champaign and currently is an offensive line coach for the Raiders.

Jourdain left SIUC after an outstanding career. Jourdain ranks fifth on the most attempts in a career list (412), sixth on the all-time rushing leaders list (1,862).
