RSOs to help plan activities

By Signe K. Skirion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although some student organizations have not been officially invited to be a part of a new SIUC entertainment planning committee, organization members say the committee is going to help reduce planning pitfalls.

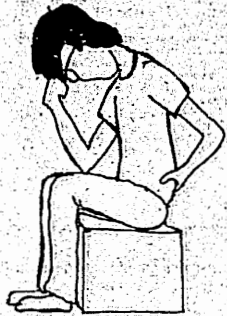

The discussion committee, created through Student Affairs and Student Development officials, will begin meeting in September with SIUC administrative offices specializing in student programming. The committee will then invite some student organizations, which have not been decided on yet, to join the committee.

Laura St. George, Inter Greek Council public relations chairwoman, said she has not been informed about attending the meeting yet. But she said she believes the administrators meeting first will save a lot of time for everyone involved.

"I know a lot of times when a big group of people get together, a lot

Hole in stomach helps study digestion

By William Hatfield
Daily Egyptian Reporter

People passing by the SIUC Dairy Center, off Chautauqua Road, may see cows in the pasture. These cows graze, sleep and produce milk like other cows, however, they do this while a scientist has a hand searching through their stomachs.

The SIUC College of Agriculture is using seven cows at the center to find ways to raise the amount of milk produced each year by a cow.

Richard Dado, assistant professor in animal science, said the process, called cannulation, involves surgically cutting a hole in a cow's 20-gallon stomach and placing a cannula, which is a plug, in the hole.

The hole is permanent. Dado said researchers observe digestion in cows through the hole. The contents of the stomach are taken to labs to examine the digestion process.

Dado said the surgery itself is a simple procedure and that the pain is minimized for the cow.

"The surgery consists of making a hole in the skin and the stomach with a scalpel and then sewing the two together," Dado said.

"A cannula is then placed into the hole allowing access to the cow's stomach."

The cows are given an anesthetic during the operation and a one-third pound of aspirin dosage daily following the operation, Dado said.

"You can work with the cow shortly after the surgery, and she does not flinch, kick or show any physical evidence of chronic pain," he said.

Dado said the cows are used mostly for research, although the cows also are used for demonstration in dairy cattle classes or in animal science labs.

"The primary use is to determine digestion of different feeds," Dado said.

Dennis Devore, the herder foreman of the center, said this allows researchers to study the process as the animal eats, to better understand the animal and to study ways to raise production.

Dado said viewing the cow's digested food also is beneficial in treating the cow for illness and creating the best feed for the cow.

"We can bring the contents of the stomach to the lab and measure how good the feed is in its use by animals," Dado said.

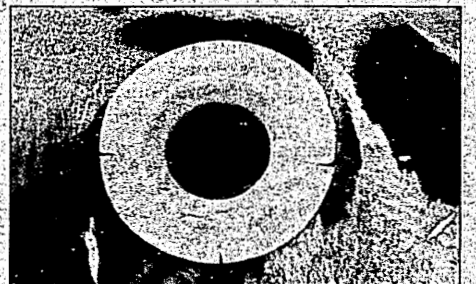

"It also tells us how the cow's stomach works and helps us to improve the animal's health."

However, Elliot Katz, founder of In Defense of Animals, an animal rights group in California, does not agree with Dado.

"Although it can be helpful to save the lives of cattle, it is used more as an oddity to intrigue and fascinate their students," Katz said.

Cleitus roams around the barn yard at the SIUC Dairy Center.

The cannula, or hole in the side of Cleitus, is used by animal science students to check her digested food.

Cops release autopsy results of Cole-Holmes

Results from an autopsy on a 34-year-old Carbondale murder victim were released Tuesday.

Connie Cole-Holmes, a mother of two, died June 16. Carbondale Police Lt. Bob Goro said the cause of death was severe trauma to the head, which caused multiple skull fractures. No arrests have been made, and Goro would not say what the murder weapon was.

Police said they are still waiting for evidence to be analyzed by the crime lab and that they still have leads to follow.

Cole-Holmes, 402 Walker St., was found dead in her home in June after a 911 call was made to police. The caller told police that the occupant was hurt inside the home. Police say Cole-Holmes most likely knew her killer.

CUBA
Embargo deteriorates U.S. - Cuba relations

HAVANA—Recent tit-for-tat diplomatic expulsions in Havana and Washington have highlighted anew a period of deteriorating relations between Cuba and the United States.

The soured atmosphere, replacing a period of hope for reduced tensions earlier in the Clinton administration, has arisen out of Cuban anger over Washington's efforts to tighten its economic embargo on the island, along with fears in Havana of a new mass emigration of Cubans in rafts and small boats. Added to these irritants is a determination by the United States to maintain contact with small groups of Cuban dissidents, whom the Havana government views as traitors, with the declared goal of inciting more dissent.

Relations between the two nations have been rocky since Fidel Castro's revolution triumphed in 1959, and the governments have viewed each other as enemies for decades.

Summer jobs give head start on professions

By Tracey Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Eager to make contacts and get experience in the film industry, Brian Ferdman grabbed hold of his dream of working on a major motion picture in Hollywood.

Applying his experience from classes and possessing the determination needed to make it in Hollywood, Ferdman landed a job this summer as a production assistant with Imagine/Universal pictures in Los Angeles.

Ferdman is among several SIUC undergraduate students who branched out of their majors, and attempted to make a name for themselves in their respective fields this summer.

"Whenever they needed me to do anything, I was there," Ferdman, a senior in cinema from Deerfield, said. "I volunteered to do everything just to be on the set and observe."

Ferdman said he was able to see how things work in Hollywood and got to work with well-known people, including Jim Carrey.

"I escorted actors back to their trailers and worked with Tom Shadyack, who wrote and directed 'Ace Ventura Pet Detective' and 'The Nutty Professor,'" he said.

Students are not the only ones who feel professional experience is good for the future.

Mike Starr, a director for the SIUC Hollywood Studies Program, said more than half of the companies in the U.S. hire former interns as employees.

"Companies like to see something on resumes other than education which they assume you have," he said. "It's good hands-on employment."

program, students are able to participate in all aspects of the entertainment field, including tapings, reviewing scripts and casting.

Starr said.

"They have the opportunity to see how the theory of the classroom becomes the reality of the workplace," he said.

Some students were able to not only participate, but to have creative control in their fields.

Mark Linderman, a senior in cinema and photography from Greenstock, Ind., participated in the Hollywood Studies Program as a script reader with Atlas Entertainment film production company.

Linderman said he read scripts, wrote synopses and comments, and decided whether or not to give scripts to a producer.

"It's an important job," he said. "I probably read seven to nine scripts this summer, and there was only one I passed on. Most of them I turned down."

Linderman said script writing and production classes helped him make decisions about the scripts.

"The most important thing I learned was the mental attitudes," he said. "The film business is tough to get into. If you're not tough, you're out."

Instead of reading scripts on the West Coast, another SIUC student was acting them out in the Midwest this summer.

Richard Marincic, a sophomore in theater from Otisawa, landed a major role in a production of the musical "Oklahoma" in Streeter this summer.

"The audition was during finals week," he said. "I called the director and asked if I could audition after school got out, and I got the part."

Marincic said his experiences last year with character development at SIUC are what landed him the role.

"I learned through classes and performances about being a

Bar owners take notice: Underage event was a success

A UNIQUE MIDDLE-GROUND WAS REACHED between the city and underage drinkers last Friday night as Hangar 9 had its first non-alcoholic evening of the year. The reason for doing so was to offer underage students the opportunity to listen to live music they would not normally get to hear because of bar-entry restrictions.

Since the announcement last year that the bar-entry age would rise to 20, and then finally to 21 by the end of summer 1996, arguments about the issue have been commonplace.

Hangar 9, however, has presented underage students the opportunity to listen to live music without having to worry about getting in. By not serving alcohol at the event, it has given some students exactly what they want. Students can now be with friends and listen to music at an event designed around that specific purpose.

Other bar owners in the area should take this as an important example and learn from it. Underage nights can be a success, and students can be responsible in this type of environment if given the chance.

THE MAIN POINT OF CONCERN FROM SOME students' viewpoints in the past was that there were no other alternatives to the bar scene within the city of Carbondale. There was the common argument that not all people go to the bars to drink, but some go simply to be with friends and listen to music.

The city, however, wanted to cut down on underage drinking, and one of the only apparent ways to do that was to raise the minimum bar-entry age.

Whether or not people put any credibility into both of these arguments is in the past. A probable solution cannot be ignored any longer because of what has happened. The underage night at Hangar 9 was a very good indication that people do like to listen to music, even if there is no alcohol being served on the premises. It serves as a reminder to the city that some students can be together and have a good time without the presence of alcohol.

ANOTHER MAJOR POINT OF CONCERN came from musicians. Certain bands argued an increased age would lower attendance to their shows. This would make some bands reconsider about whether or not they should play in Carbondale. But again, students did go to the Hangar to listen to the performance of St. Stephen's Blues, which should send a message to other bands that an increased entry age may not necessarily mean decreased profits or playing time.

The turnout of approximately 100 people was a larger crowd than is usually present between the hours of 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. This shows that a program such as this can draw an audience without decreasing band attendance.

In order for these types of programs to continue, the students have to take advantage of them to ensure they will be offered in the future.

The city and students have not always seen eye to eye when it comes to getting into local bars, but at least a small bridge was crossed between the two. Underage drinking may continue, but at least these types of programs will not punish everyone for the crimes of others. By taking into account that this type of program can work, the city and students should be able to reach a better understanding in the future.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Greek life full of opportunity

On behalf of the Inter-Greek Council, I would like to welcome all students, new and returning, to SIUC. There are many ways to become more involved here at SIUC and I would like to take this opportunity to tell you a little more about one. The Inter-Greek Council represents 26 chapters, both fraternities and sororities. We are one of the five largest organizations on campus with more than 1,000 members.

Being in a Greek organization offers many opportunities to get involved, but also holds many responsibilities as well.

All IGC chapters strive to achieve and maintain a high academic standard. This is done through study programs, study files, tutors, etc. Each chapter also has various philanthropies that they have fund-raisers for throughout the year. All chapters work together on such events as the Red Cross Blood Drive, Multiple Sclerosis Walk-A-Thon and Carbondale Clean and Green functions to name just a few.

For those members interested in holding offices, many opportunities are available within the chapters, subcouncils, and IGC. Through all of this, you will meet some of the most interesting and caring people, some of which you will stay in contact with your entire life.

Joining a Greek organization is easy. Just come up to the IGC office on the third floor of the Student Center and pick up an application for rush. During this rush period you will get a chance to visit the chapter houses and meet their member. Interfraternity Council Rush will start this Saturday on August 24 with a free concert at the Brush Tower Fields and will last until August 30th. Panhellenic Council Rush will be held Sept. 3-7. The National Panhellenic Smoker and Rush will be held continuously throughout the semester.

For those of you who have already decided to rush, good luck! For those of you who are still undecided, come out and see what we have to offer. Give Greek life a chance — it might be the best choice you'll ever make.

Reader supports abstinence

Recent discussions about the abortion pill prove that many view abortion as just another form of birth control. No one, however, has pointed out the proven negative impact of abortion on society. The frequency of abortion is correlated with the frequency of many social ills such as rape, child abuse and violent crime. Multivariate analyses reveal interactions among these factors that cannot, by the laws of statistics, result from chance.

But since we now base all of our policies on affect rather than knowledge, I'll use my own life to show the negative impact of our casual sex/abortion ethic.

When I became obsessed with the opposite sex in my early teens, my parents, upon the counsel of experts, forced me to undergo a pelvic exam to be put on birth control pills. When I said I didn't need the exam or the pills, they said "We have to be sure" (in other words "We don't believe you" and "The only risk for you in having sex before marriage is pregnancy"). They also made me see a counselor whose recurrent topic was her fantasy about masturbating on a stranded island.

Within six months, I became sexually active primarily because I was on the pill. For two years I lived a nightmare, until, facing juvenile placement, I forced myself to wake up. I spent the next fifteen years over-achieving at everything to compensate for the pain I had caused myself and my family during me so-called "rebellious years."

I wish somebody had told me sex was important because I was important. I wish somebody had just taken a stand for abstinence until marriage and put their faith in my ability to do what I knew in my heart was right. Instead, I was told by family and "professionals" alike that "we don't care what you do, just so long as you don't get pregnant." Twenty-five years later, we are sending the same horrible message, with the newly added government approval of homosexuality, louder and more clearly than ever.

Abortion, and it's primary cause, the total devaluation of sexual intimacy, are at the root of every serious problem facing our nation today.

The connection is so obvious we are fools to deny it: We are the results of sex, so if sex is a passing fancy, as meaningless as a game of cards or a night on the town, then so are we.

Freshmen receives poor welcome

I've got to laugh when I hear about people who don't appreciate their dorm rooms. I lived in the basement of Smith Hall until Wednesday when I was released on "good behavior."

As you may have already figured out, I just dropped the label of "over-assigned housing," which is a new term for "homeless" or "concentration camp." Perhaps I should elaborate on my experience.

Two weeks before orientation was scheduled to start, I applied to SIUC, hoping to get a decent room just about anywhere short of the doorway of a Chinese restaurant. What I got was worse.

As I remember it, a hand came out of the sky with a big rubber stamp. It dripped red ink the color of blood, and slammed "OVER-ASSIGNED" onto my housing assignment sheet. It might as well have said "PAROLE DENIED."

So I lumbered across campus with all my belongings, doomed to stay in the basement for at least three days by myself until the rest of the freshmen showed up. Needless to say, I ate a lot of rice and drank Pepsi from vending machines.

The best part of the day was when I got my first phone call — even though it was at one in the morning. It was a wrong number, but I was so excited to hear a voice that I talked to this stranger for 15 minutes. They even were able to tell me what my phone number was; this person was much more helpful than anyone in campus administration.

When entering the basement, it does not seem too bad. If you do your laundry and leave, you can notice that the curtains open up to a lovely view of concrete. And you don't even hit your head on water pipes all that often.

Of course, the bunk bed was a trip as well. Every morning, the alarm would go off. Reaching for it in a sleepy daze, I'd smack the back of my hand into the cold iron pole holding the rest of the bed above me. Then I'd be surprised and sit up too fast, causing my forehead to come into contact with the underside of the upper bunk. After a few days of this, I was pretty certain I could smash a beer can on my forehead and not even feel it.

Of course, my collage of roommates were wild, too. I had five roommates, including one whose mother did not leave for four days. I avoided the room altogether. It didn't take me long to figure out how to push six comfy chairs together and make a couch. Sure, I met a lot of people all at once, but I don't think that I would've missed snoring reminiscence of the Seven Dwarves.

We also had what we referred to as the outdoor bathroom. This meant that we had to leave our room to go to the john. Just when you think you can make it to the bathroom by yourself, people come down to do laundry and try to talk to you. As an added insult, the door was marked "women."

The scary part of over-assigned housing was the lock situation. Out of all the roommates, there were six keys to any of the two doors. This meant that there were about 1,000 chances a day to leave the door unlocked and have everything stolen by evil dorm-dwellers. Perhaps these goods would then be sold back to you at a higher price by campus bookstores.

Then I got the call informing me that I was being moved into a regular room. I stood up and danced all over the room. Then I asked my roommates for some help moving my stuff. They were as eager as I was, mainly because that meant more room for them.

Now that I have my room and a nice roommate, I can sit back and finally unpack my clothes. I look around the room and out my window at the trees. I reflect on the calm of having one roommate, and then I wonder why they haven't brought me a bed yet.

Life's too short for stoplights

by James Lyon

Something has been bothering me about the city for a while now, so I think I should address the situation before it gets any worse.

Like many students, I often get a ride to class, and occasionally I will drive to and from the destination myself. And, like all the other people who drive, I have had to deal with this problem.

What I speak of is this: Does this town have the longest freakin' stop lights in the world, or what? I mean, these things last forever, and my gripe is especially aimed at that little piece of mechanical garbage at the intersection of Wall Street and Grand Avenue.

I can honestly say that I have never made that light when going down Grand Avenue, and I don't know anyone who has. I always seem to hit it, and then I am stuck at that light for what seems like four or five minutes. And I swear, that little brother of Hal can see me coming from a mile away and adjusts itself so I get maximum sitting time under the hot Southern Illinois sun. Some of you newer residents to SIUC won't appreciate this right now. But trust me, you will.

Oh, I understand that it is all part of the traffic scenario, and that it is there to keep accidents from happening. Well, blah, blah, blah to that. Anyone who has ever sat waiting at that stop light will agree that something is up because that thing lasts way too long for an ordinary stop light. I sit there behind the wheel knowing that behind that calm, stop-light facade it laughs at my very existence. Yes, it knows who I am, and it knows that it is making me late for something.

Sometimes I just want to get out of the car and hit the thing with a baseball bat, getting my deeply-set, stop-light frustration out with every cleansing swing to its aluminum base, swearing all the while.

But then that feeling goes away because the light turns green just as I am about to open the door, hands clinging to the Louisville Slugger. "Clever," I say to myself. "Very clever. Yes, you've won this round Mr. Stoplight, but I'll be back."

So I say let's do something about it. Every time someone gets stuck behind that light, they should continually honk their horn until it turns green.

If everyone did this, the horn sound could be heard from miles around, and eventually the city would have to do something to remedy the situation.

But then again, people probably won't honk, and nothing will be changed. And that thing will still be standing there long after I am gone, sending its little blood light out into the night as a reminder of the pain it has caused over the years. Oh, the horror. The horror.

of information and ideas come out of the meeting.

And a lot of those ideas are impossible to do," she said. "Instead of spending hours talking about things that are not possible, I think it will be better for the administration to go ahead and make some of those decisions."

Inter Greek Council sponsors events mainly for the Greek system, but also cosponsors many events with other organizations.

Jean Paratore, associate vice chancellor for Student Affairs, said the initial administrative meeting will be a basic brainstorming time for the officials to decide what route they want to take with this year's programming events.

Kim Schmidt, Student Program ming Council executive director, said she believes the committee will benefit all campus organizations.

SPC sponsors various events throughout the school year including Homecoming, Family Weekend and weekly movies.

Paratore said administrative programming officials from offices including University Housing, the Recreation Center, Student Development and the Wellness Center will meet to discuss what on-campus programming efforts need to be accomplished this year.

After the initial administrative meeting, student organizations such as the Undergraduate Student Government, the Graduate and Professional Student Council and SPC will be invited to another formal discussion committee meeting to offer their opinions on necessary student programming for the year.

Student leaders from these organizations said they are waiting on the administration to decide what involvement and monetary support will be asked of their groups by the discussion committee.

Donald Castle, SPC adviser, said the discussion committee will take some time to implement because the idea is still in the working stages.

"This committee should bring a lot of different ideas for programming forward because of the diversity of the administrative and student organizations, and I think this will help most by showing ways we can all be efficient and effective for the students," he said.

USG President Troy Alim said he has not appointed a USG representative to be on the discussion committee yet, but he said he will have someone before the student organizations are invited.

Alim said he does not have a problem with waiting to be involved in the discussion committee.

GPSC President Mark Terry said GPSC representative Jan Jacobs will be on the discussion committee.

Jacobs could not be reached for comment.

Terry said it does not matter when the student organizations are brought into the discussion committee, as long as there is student input.

"Right now, I think the most important thing is to make sure the process starts and that students are involved," he said.

"After several meetings with Student Development, I feel all the student organizations will have maximum input into how programming should be done."

British have identity crisis

The Washington Post

LONDON — The British government Thursday resolved its latest national identity crisis by offering residents a variety of potential identities.

The solution to a year-old controversy over what sort of identity card to offer left many people unhappy, as a number of identities were sighted. Those people were given a fourth choice: carrying no card at all.

The disagreement stemmed from a conflict over what symbols the cards should bear, which sounds just that — symbolic — but isn't to those who care about them.

Those who care include, particularly, the Europhobes and the Europhiles, many Scots, many Welsh and many Northern Irish — the last group divided among the "definitely British" unionists and the "would rather be Irish" nationalists — not to mention the Tories who are four square behind the Union Jack, the British flag.

The whole identity card flap began about a year ago, when the government of Prime Minister John Major announced a plan to issue them as a way of preventing crime — or welfare cheating or illegal immigration. Initially the government talked of making them compulsory, but it then changed its mind, and now agrees, for the moment at least, that they should be voluntary.

The plan was complicated by the desire of the 15-nation European Union, which includes Britain, to issue a European Union driver's license bearing the EU symbol — 12 stars in a circle.

The government determined, sensibly, that rather than spend money on two different cards, it would combine the ID and the driver's license into one.

Then the grumbling started. Major's Conservative Party is deeply divided among those who want to be Europhiles or Europhobes. The Europhobes were deeply disturbed to learn that their national identity card would bear what they view as the loathsome symbol of the EU — the circle of stars.

Probably to make them happy, the government also proposed putting the Union Jack on the card.

This brought objections from the minister for Northern Ireland, who was afraid that no self-respecting nationalist would carry the Union Jack around in his or her wallet, and that adding it now — at an extremely sensitive moment in the Northern Ireland peace process — might set off a reaction.

The minister proposed, instead, using the royal crest, which already occupies a place on driving licenses in Northern Ireland and elsewhere in Britain.

Poor effects, dialogue ruin 'Escape from L.A.'

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Editor's note: Because of a layout error, this story did not run in its entirety in Thursday's Daily Egyptian. As a service to our readers, the DE has reprinted the complete story today. The paper regrets the inconvenience.

In 1981, movie goers were introduced to a black-clad viper named Snake Plissken (Kurt Russell) in John Carpenter's sci-fi futuro film "Escape From New York."

Now, 15 years later, Carpenter has reintroduced Snake to a new generation of escapees, and has rekindled apocalyptic visions from the memory of those who saw the first film with his new film "Escape From L.A."

But the sequel is too similar to "N.Y." in all the wrong places and not similar enough when a common thread is needed. It seems the films were made for different reasons, and the two worlds which Plissken enters are much different.

"L.A." seems to want to be a slick Gulp Fiction-like film with great special effects and many humorous situations, which is very different from "N.Y."

What we get instead is a film with poor special effects, dull dialogue, miscast characters and one-liners that viewers will forget soon after seeing the film.

The first film, "Escape From New York," takes place in 1997. The entire city of New York has become a maximum security prison for the most-wretched prisoners. A plane, carrying the president, has been sabotaged and has crashed in the city. The President was enroute to a peace conference with an important cassette that would save the world from nuclear disaster.

Plissken is a decorated war hero turned criminal. The police commissioner has offered Plissken a pardon; if he goes in amongst the criminals and saves the President.

In "L.A." the president's daughter has stolen a black box that controls the world's energy satellites. She makes a beeline to L.A., which has become a maximum security prison, after it has been hit by an earthquake and has been separated from the mainland.

There she meets up with the ring leader, Cuervo Jones, and becomes one of his disciples. The police commissioner and the president have offered Plissken another deal. If he goes in and gets the black box, he will be pardoned of the crimes he has committed since his last mission.

Sequels can be risky. The "Star Wars" and "Mad Max" trilogies pulled it off; Each kept to a certain genre but changed the stories. The two "Escape" films mirror each other too much in their story line, but "L.A." fails to pay homage to the way the first film creates apocalyptic imagery.

In "N.Y." the serious tone was complemented by its dark dreary scenery and strange characters who walked with shaded faces through dim lights and ruins of what once was a city.

The characters in "N.Y." were actually frightening: Rape gangs, subway people and The Duke of New York (Isaac Hayes), who runs the city, actually represent the worst in human behavior.

In "L.A." the cast seems like party, guys with bad attitudes, but they are far from threatening. They don't hide in the shadows. They are obvious — maybe too obvious — and hold no mystique like those in "N.Y."

One of the few bright spots in the film is the acting by Russell. The part of Snake is not a hard one, but is a fun one to watch: Though 15 years have past, Russell's appearance has not changed much, and he plays the gritty part as well as he did in the first film. But in "L.A." Russell does not have as good a film to complement his part like he did in "N.Y."

Steve Buscemi plays the part of "Map to the Stars Eddie" in great fashion. He effectively creates the slimy personae he is so used to playing! But aside from these two characters; there are no others worth mentioning.

The true test of a sequel is whether or not it can stand on its own. On those grounds, "L.A." fails. It is a disappointing thought that this film will always be considered an extension of the first film. This fact is both unfair and unfortunate to its brilliant predecessor.

"Escape From L.A." is playing at the Varsity theater.

College political groups gear up for fall elections

By Shawna Donovan and Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Erik Woehrmann experienced the beginning of the 1996 campaign season when several Republican candidates urged more than 40 College Republicans, double the usual number of members, to rock the vote.

Woehrmann, a junior in political science from Carbondale, is like many students who enjoy campaigning for candidates. "I'm thrilled," he said at a College Republicans' meeting at the student center Wednesday. "Compared to last year [the attendance] is just amazing."

More students will attend political meetings because it is an election year, Andy Volpert, College Republicans president, said.

And, he said, the group is banking on it.

"We just want to get membership as high as possible," said Volpert, a senior in history education from Danville. "We want to make it more than politics and a little more fun than just working, shaking hands and stuffing envelopes."

Hamilton Arendsen, College Democrats president, said his group has been campaigning by going door to door for candidates. This election they are campaigning for Barbara Brown, an SIUC lecturer in political science, who is running for the 58th state Senate seat; and John Rendleman, who is running against State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, in the 115th legislative district.

"It's here (election year)," Arendsen said. "We are ready to go."

Rendleman said he already has been on and off campus campaigning with students. He also said he will hand out literature with students on campus.

Arendsen said the College Democrats will also campaign for incumbent President Bill Clinton, U.S. Senate candidate Dick Durbin and other local Democratic candidates.

Arendsen said he is not sure if the SIUC College Democrats will have a formal meeting with the local candidates the group supports.

Mike Starr, SIUC Radio and Television Department chairman, said students participating in a campaign will influence the election outcome.

"You have the opportunities to take control of your lives and your destinies now as never before," he told members at the College Republicans meeting. "If you don't get out and participate in the process, in [the year] 2020, remember tonight how you could have intervened on your own behalf."

Bost spoke at the meeting and told club members he has knocked on doors this week and said direct involvement was the way to help his campaign.

Volpert said club members will work for Bost, State Sen. Dave Luechtfeld, R-Okawville, and county candidates this fall, as well as presidential candidate Bob Dole and U.S. Senate candidate Al Salvi.

Other speakers at the meeting were Luechtfeld; Jim Persels, state's attorney candidate; Carl Hausler, county board candidate; Joe Alexander, state College Republicans president; and Chris Grissom, Jackson County Republican Party chairman.

Bands to rock Murphysboro

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Five bands will take over the band shell at Riverside Park in Murphysboro for the first ever Back to School Bash this evening.

Headlining the bash is Lil' Ed and the Imperial Flames from Chicago. People may remember the band and their own rockin' style of blues music from the Murphysboro Blues Festival in July.

Joe C., owner of Soundcore Music, said this is the first ever back-to-school concert. He said the purpose of the concert is to promote the park district as well as the talented bands in the area.

"In show business, we always have a hard time having things outside," he said. "But hopefully, with the right kind of weather, everything will turn out. This is a great promotion for local bands and a way for people to see what kind of music is offered in the area."

C. compared the concert to Carbondale's Sunset Concerts during the summer.

"People can bring their coolers, grill, food and suntan lotion," he said. "I mean, five bands for five bucks. That's a pretty good deal."

The Jokers kick off the bash concert at 6 p.m. followed by the Waxdolls, The Natives, Nighthawk and then Lil' Ed and the Imperials.

Soundcore Music will be sponsoring a shuttle to and from the park. It will begin picking up people at the SIUC Student Center at 4:30 p.m. and run every half hour.

The gates to Riverside Park (Commercial Avenue) open at 5 p.m. Admission is $5. No bottles or pets will be allowed, and the concert will continue rain or shine.

Short films spotlight for SIUC talent

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For one of his class projects, Brian Jones spent between 300 to 350 hours planning and producing a tightly-knit product. But when completed, his long hours of work came down to a small product spanning only nine minutes.

Jones, a senior in cinema and photography from Naperville, said that although his product, a film for Cinema and Photography 356, is short, films such as his can accomplish a lot in a short period of time.

"You can really display quite a bit visually in 10 minutes," Jones said. "Ten-minute films can be compared to short stories in literature." Jones' short film, along with those of 15 other SIUC students, will be shown this weekend at the "In the Can" film screening. The films were made as the students' semester projects for the class last spring.

Cinema and Photography 356, known as "Film Production II," teaches students techniques of 16-millimeter film production.

The screening is being coordinated by the cinema group Film Alternatives. Throughout the year, the group produces the Big Muddy Film Festival, brings visiting filmmakers to SIUC and programs other events. Proceeds raised from the screening will go towards a fund to finance the Big Muddy Film Festival.

Jones' film, a documentary titled "Envisage," tells the story of three blind people in Carbondale. He said his film was made during one semester.

"Short films can accomplish many of the things feature films accomplish," he said. "The difference is that short films have to create a statement or effect in a more tight fashion."

Jones said the films not only take a lot of time to make — they also may cost anywhere from $1,200 to $2,000 to create. This money goes toward sending film off to be developed and buying film stock and other supplies.

Jones said the ratio of how much film is shot and how much is actually used is around 3-to-1. Many times there are shots that cannot be used because they do not work well with other shots; therefore they are not used in the film.

Teiji Ozawa, a senior in cinema from Japan, said screenings of student films such as these are important because student filmmakers do not always have outlets to show their films.

Ozawa's film is an 8-minute comedy titled "Reality." The story follows a character who is always being pushed around by a group of bullies.

Jones said these projects serve as an important part in the beginning of a filmmaker's career.

"This is somewhat of a stepping stone into a graduating class of film production," he said.

Loren Cocking, assistant professor in cinema and photography, said he started the "In the Can" screenings about 10 years ago. Cocking said there was a growing public interest in these film screenings, so he decided to transform it into a public event.

"These films are not slick commercial products," he said. "But there are some films that are potential award winners."

In the Can starts at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center. Admission is $1.

New magazine devoted to divorce

Los Angeles Times

Who else would be behind the nation's first mainstream glossy devoted to divorce but two top execs who once worked at a bridal magazine?

The duo — Publisher Dan Couvrette and Editor Diana Shepherd — split from Wedding Bells to enter into holy matrimony with Divorce magazine, a quarterly, launched last week in Chicago.

A light went on in Couvrette's head during the summer of '94 when he and his wife were going through a divorce. He searched for literature on the subject to help him cope and saw magazines dealing with everything from cryonics to Celtic culture — but nothing on divorce, something that has happened to one out of five married Americans.

But when he shopped the idea of a magazine to inedia moguls, "everybody thought I was crazy." So he did what any good divorced person would do: He did it himself — with the help of Shepherd, who happens to be single.

The first issue and those to follow will feature articles on legal matters, money management, children and, of course, relationships ("Haven't Been on a Date in 15 Years? We'll Show You Some Great New Ways of Meeting People in the '90s" reads a headline in this first issue).

In fact, there will be no end of issues for the magazine to cover. The breakup of the family is at the root of some of the most pressing phenomena facing the country today — from single parenthood to adolescent crime, Shepherd says. "Everyone in North America is touched by divorce."

And she lays out the statistics to prove it: More than 1 million divorces are granted each year in the United States. These days, the average marriage lasts just seven years. And more than one-third of Americans in their 20s have divorced parents.

Couvrette says divorce is a way of life because of the way we live our lives. Women have more power, freedom and choice. Men and women spend more time at work. Religion has a looser grip on cul-

Most women take husband's last name

The Hanford Courant

NEW YORK—As sociologists convene to report their newest studies—on intergenerational conflict, criminality, illness and the family, long-term effects of child abuse and so on—there are also some fun finds in the field.

One involves the scientific study of which women are likely to keep their own last names after marriage. The findings, from David R. Johnson of the University of Nebraska and Laurie K. Scheuble of Doane College in Nebraska: These women are few in number, and they much fit the stereotype. Women who chose a "nonconventional" last name are more likely to be from the Northeast, have cohabited with their spouse, be older, have more years of education, have not been married previously, and hold "more liberal gender role attitudes."

Scheuble said: They are well-educated, liberal, married later in life, when they're already established as adults.

It may seem as if some big change is under way, but "data indicates a vast majority of women plan to take their husband's last name as their own at the time of marriages." Johnson and Scheuble write in a paper presented at the annual meeting of the American Sociological Association.

These choices were defined by the researchers as nontraditional: women keeping a birth name, adopting a hyphenated last name or using the birth name as a middle name.

character instead of a caricature," he said.

Nina Garza, a sophomore in theater from Matteson, gained professional experience teaching drama at a summer camp. She said she learned that she has a knack for teaching.

"I learned that I didn't want to just act, but to teach, direct and maybe start my own acting company," she said.

In another part of the world, Robin Davis-Newcomb, a senior in art and design from Harrisburg, worked with professionals in her field this summer: in Scotland.

Davis-Newcomb said she traveled to Scotland to learn about fibers, sketching and different landscapes.

"The beautiful landscapes gave me a lot of creative ideas to use in work this fall," she said. "This trip will help my course work evolve into the final project I want to come up with."

Davis-Newcomb said: "I feel like I've been somewhere and got to do something."

"It will enrich the way I can teach when I finally get a job," she said.

Welcome Back Students!

WHY GO TO FRED'S

You've come all the way from Kane, Cook & DuPage Counties, and every weekend you do the Strip Stumble and meet Park Ridge Cowboys & Homewood Cowgirls. Like people who order only hamburgers & fries at the best ethnic restaurants, you're missing the opportunity to try something different.

You know about Giant City and Little Crassy - those are easy But what about Pomona General Store and their famous homemade shakes and deli sandwiches - The Goreville Horse Auction with 300 real cowboys bidding on horses from four states - the Anna Library built in 1906, an architectural design breakthrough that was precursor to good ol' Frank Lloyd - the Jonesboro Park Square where Lincoln & Douglas debated 125 years ago. And then there's FRED'S - only 4 1/2 miles east of C'dale. From Harrisburg, Herrin, Carterville, Creal Springs, Galatia & Grand Tower coal miners, truckers, farmers & factory workers come to dance to country music that has its foot in the Appalachians.

You've come a long way baby - now leave your cultural snobbery behind & come a little bit further. Come to Fred's and become a part of the real Southern Illinois ethnic.

LIVE MUSIC Every Saturday Night!

No progress in baseball negotiations

Los Angeles Times

Major league baseball owners Wednesday offered to restore service time lost because of the strike to all players except the 20 who would become free agents at the end of this year if the time were restored.

The union is certain to reject the offer Thursday.

Owners had insisted that their reluctance to credit players with service time for the 75 regular-season days they were on strike was based on principal.

But as labor negotiations resumed after about a 10-day break, to allow acting Commissioner Bud Selig to negotiate with fellow owners by phone, principal seemed to give way to basic economics and a degree of self-interest by clubs that could lose free agents if service time is restored.

Management negotiator Randy Levine and union leader Donald Fehr met for about 90 minutes in New York. Levine made two proposals seemingly designed to placate hard-line owners who oppose the granting of service time and inclusion of a second tax-free year at the end of the proposed agreement.

In reaction to the service time proposal, Fehr said:

"We're not going to leave 20 players high and dry. The other players wouldn't permit that. All the concessions and trade-offs that have been made have been made against the background of service time being part of the deal."

pressure put on the ball this season. "He wants a lot of pressure," he said. "He wants a lot of pressure up front — just breaking up passes."

Watson said he hopes the player he recruited as a wide receiver will play a key role as a defensive back again this season.

"C.J. is a very good defensive player, and he loves to play," he said. "I'm hoping he will be a big impact this season."

Watson said one of the biggest strengths about McDavid is his reaction time. "C.J. can react well to the run," he said. "When he goes down and plays strong safety, he's a real force off the edge."

As far as team goals go, a winning season is by far the first one on the agenda, and McDavid believes it will be accomplished in 1996.

Notre Dame ready for action

Newsday

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — College football, beware. Lou Holtz is relaxed and smiling.

The Notre Dame head coach is usually a bundle of nervous energy, a walking wisecrack stoked on diet Coke and worry. Not so during this preseason. He has his Fighting Irish positioned in his favorite slot in the national championship race. They are ready to win and no one expects them to.

"We don't have any stars," Holtz said, "but this is going to be a solid football team, I think."

There are other reasons for Holtz's reverie. After the spinal surgery that interrupted last season, Holtz doesn't grip the wheel of his life as tightly as he once did. After years of constant upheaval on his coaching staff, he has two coordinators who begin their third season at Notre Dame and only one new assistant.

Perhaps Holtz smells history. Close your eyes and you may get a whiff of 1988, a season that began with modest expectations (a No. 13 ranking) and finished with a national championship ring. That team, like this one, came out of a mediocre season (5-6 in 1986, 6-5-1 in 1994) followed by a successful one (8-4 in 1987, 9-3 in 1995). That team, like this one, began the season with 70 preseason All-Americans. It finished with three.

And this Notre Dame team has an asset Holtz didn't have in 1988 — a veteran quarterback. Senior Ron Powlus, still carrying the heightened expectations that met him when he arrived on campus three years ago, is healthy after missing the last two games of last season with a broken left arm.

"I'm as good as I've ever been," Powlus said, referring to his health, as practice opened. Powlus has remained resolute under the sort of attention that scares grown men from running for president. He hasn't won the two Heisman Trophies predicted for him but with 31 touchdown passes, he only needs 11 to surpass Rick Mirer for the school record.

Parkinson to join SIUC Hall of Fame
SIUC Athletics Director Jim Hart announced Thursday that the late Mitchell Parkinson will be inducted into the SIUC Sports Hall of Fame Saturday, Aug. 31.

Parkinson, who was the women's sports information director for more than 18 years, died at his residence Tuesday morning at the age of 46. Parkinson was heavily involved in the Hall of Fame and had chaired its Selection Committee since 1990.

"Mitch was the leader in the Hall of Fame festivities," Hart said. "It's only fitting for him to be included with the names that grace the walls of the Hall of Fame. Mitch would be honored and touched to have been a part of being inducted with such a successful group."

Butler to return to Dodgers Monday

Brett Butler is set to return to the Dodgers on Monday. Butler underwent tonsil cancer surgery May 21 after being diagnosed with cancer after a routine tonsillectomy May 1. During his rehabilitation, Butler lost 16 pounds but is now holding his weight at 160 pounds — his normal playing weight.

Prisoner may be released to play soccer

Dario Zearo, president of the Tolmezzo Soccer Club in Italy, wants to sign Abdul Hajim, a Moroccan mid-fielder. The only problem is that Hajim is serving time in prison and is not due for release until December 1997. Tolmezzo officials first noticed Hajim in a recent soccer match involving two prison teams where he scored four goals. Zearo is asking prison authorities to grant Hajim day releases for games. If the request is granted, Hajim will be the first prisoner to get released based on sporting grounds.

Majerle to ditch Heat to play for Suns

Dan Majerle is expected to sign a three-year, $8 million deal with the Miami Heat. Majerle, whose contract rights were renounced by Cleveland at the close of last season, originally intended to play for the Phoenix Suns next season because of his loyalty to the city where he resides and owns a restaurant. Instead, Majerle and his agent decided to ditch the league-minimum salary of $247,500 offered by the Suns to play for Pat Riley and the Heat. Majerle played his first seven seasons with the Suns before being traded to Cleveland.

Dealership suing Irvin for coke rap

Michael Irvin, star receiver of the Dallas Cowboys who pleaded no contest to a felony cocaine charge, is looking to lose more money than just lost salary for his five-game suspension. The North Dallas Toyota Dealership feels Irvin's actions portray an "immoral lifestyle" and tarnishes its reputation. The association is seeking $1.2 million in damages and the $60,000 it paid him for being in the dealership's commercials.

McDavid sets sights on 150 tackles this season

By Michael DeFord,
DE Sports Editor

Saluki defensive back C.J. McDavid wants to leave behind one thing at every football game this season — a lasting impression on a receiver.

The 6-foot-4-inch, 218-pound senior said he looks forward to delivering that one punishing blow that leaves a receiver wondering what hit him.

"I'm always looking for that really big bone-jarring hit," he said. "I really don't care about interceptions — I just like to hit."

"I'll take the pick — but I'd rather take somebody's head off."

McDavid is now in his second season with the Salukis, and SIUC's coaching staff is expecting the one-time wide receiver/linebacker to post some impressive numbers this year.

McDavid was recruited as a wide receiver by then Miami of Ohio Assistant Coach Shawn Watson. After Watson came to SIUC as head coach, McDavid was turned into a linebacker at Miami of Ohio.

McDavid transferred to SIUC just before the start of the 1995 season (Watson's second season as SIUC head coach) and was thrust into the defensive back position — a position he wasn't quite used to playing.

However, McDavid did record 74 tackles as a defensive back in 1995 — the fourth highest on the team.

But 74 tackles isn't a very impressive statistic for McDavid, who said, "I wasn't as focused last season as I should have been."

This year, he said, things are different, and fans can expect to see him at his best.

CURTIS K. BIASI — The Daily Egyptian

Defensive back No. 28 C.J. McDavid goes up for a pass during a practice drill at Arena Field.

"You haven't seen me at my best yet," McDavid said. "I was adjusting to the safety spot. I stayed here over the summer and worked out. Now I'm strictly focused, and I'm ready to play."

McDavid has set high standards for himself. His sights are set on recording 150 tackles this season.

Former Saluki Kevin Kilgallon was the last one to break the 150 mark when he recorded 155 tackles in 1988.

McDavid said he has moved up on the ball this season, which will help to increase his number of tackles.

"I was playing off the hash a lot, but I'm at a lower level this year," he said. "I'm just an extra head to the ball. I should get a lot of chances to get up on some tackles."

As far as the entire defensive squad goes, McDavid said he sees a far different unit than the one that took the field last year.

He said this season's defense is much more in tune with what needs to be done in order to accomplish a winning season — and establish a positive reputation for SIUC in the Gateway Conference.

"Last season, the defense wasn't totally focused," he said. "We were focused on having a winning season, but this year we are focused on the big thing."

The "big thing" McDavid speaks of is the very item that has eluded the Salukis for 11 years — a Gateway Conference championship ring.

"We all want a ring bad, and we're just getting each other pumped up to play hard," he said. "We're more committed this season. We're just going to have to get it done."

Senior defensive tackle Daryl Holland, who is nursing an injury but is expected to be ready in time for the season opener, said the talent on defense is there.

"I feel we're really good on defense this year," he said. "We just need to get off the ball every play. We all know how to use our hands very well."

"If we can just get off the ball and stay flat, we should win every battle."

Holland said SIUC will also be strong in terms of the pass rush.

"The main key is pass rushing the center," he said. "The guys have good technique."

McDavid said Watson wants a lot of
