Firefighters sue Carbondale

ARE YOU LISTENING?

Workers claim city eavesdropped in personal phone calls.

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

Nineteen Carbondale firefighters are suing the City of Carbondale and Fire Chief Cliff Manis for allegations that Manis and the city violated their civil rights and Illinois' eavesdropping laws by recording and replaying personal phone calls. According to the lawsuit, several phone calls made on one of the two phone lines traditionally used for non-emergency and personal calls were allegedly tape-recorded and replayed.

Richard Frazier, the attorney representing the firefighters, said that more than one year ago, Fire Chief Cliff Manis allegedly was listening to private phone calls. Frazier said the reasons for listening were dependent on the conversations.

"One incident involves the fire chief listening in on firefighter Gib Gray in a conversation he was having with his attorney over a worker's compensations claim," Frazier said. "The fire chief apparently did not believe in the merit of the claim and was listening in to find weaknesses in the claim."

Frazier said there are other incidents of listening in on calls made by officers of the firefighters union on discussions over collective bargaining agreements.

City Attorney Paige Reed said it is difficult to determine exactly what the firefighters are alleging.

She said the claims are unsubstantiated.

"From the information that I have, they are alleging that the fire chief has listened in on personal phone calls," Reed said. "As of date from my information, no private conversations were listened to with the exception of only one instance."

Reed said that the fire chief reviewed a playback of a five-minute call to an employee to determine an overtime refusal.

Finance bill to begin Jan. 1

ETHICAL: New law to set ethic standards for political financing in State of Illinois.

MATT SMENOS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

As of Jan. 1, 1999 a new standard will be set for political campaign financing in Illinois.

A new bill passed in May, proposed by former Senator Paul Simon and Mike Lawrence, associate director of the Public Policy Institute, is designed to place new restrictions on campaign funding procedures and spending.

"We're trying to broaden and toughen the regulations regarding disclosure of campaign donations," Lawrence said. "Illinois has always been such an open state with so many loopholes in the legislation regarding campaign finance."

"Hopefully this bill will tighten up some of those loopholes and raise the ethical standard."

The last reform of campaign finance came in fall 1974 and was considered by many to be vague and incomplete.

"The problem with the old policy was that no one really knew where campaign funds were coming from exactly," Lawrence said, "and the candidates were able to use the money however they chose, including personal interests like sending their kids through school or buying a car."

Under the new plan, candidates will be far more limited in their spending of campaign funds. Contributors under the new disclosure rules are required to give their name and agency with their donations so voters get a better idea of the source of fund

Select 2000 entering final stages

SARA BEAN

Greek members of legal age can no longer drink in their chapter houses as SIUC enters the final phase of Select 2000 this fall.

Under the previous phase of Select 2000 implemented in fall 1997, fraternity houses could not sponsor or conduct social events that included alcohol. But members of legal age could drink in their own rooms.

The Select 2000 nine-part initiative requires Greeks to maintain higher grades, making chapter houses alcohol-free and substance-free and requiring hours of community service for Greek members. The program was designed by 26 national fraternities that want to implement the program completely by 2000.

SIUC was one of four universities contacted by the National Interfraternity Council to consider becoming a Select 2000 pilot school. The other three schools were Villanova University, Northern Colorado University and Southern Florida College.

The initiative was challenged by the SIUC Interfraternity Council, the Graduate and Professional Student Council and the Undergraduate Student Government.

Associate Director of Student Development Katie Sermersheim said that much of that opposition to Select 2000 left the University with the students who carried it.

"I think a lot of the people who were adamantly opposed to Select 2000 have graduated," Sermersheim said. "We have new members, new officers and a new outlook."

Sermersheim said she met with several fraternity presidents during the summer

One of 'Four Horsemen' dies

COMMITMENT:

Instructor's service to University, community fondly remembered.

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The death of one of the famed "Four Horsemen" of the SIUC Chemistry Department has left fond memories of a man devoted to success on campus and in the community.

Kenneth Van Lente, a retired faculty member and one of the most well-known professors on campus, died Aug. 19 at Holland Community Hospital in Holland, Mich. He was 95.

With Van Lente, James W. Neckers was another member of the group responsible for making the department nationally recognized in the early 1930s along with T.W. Abbott and R.A. Scott. He was Van Lente's longtime friend and co-worker.

"He was a special friend," Neckers said. "We went through Hope College (in Holland) together, taught 35-plus years at SIUC and both had cottages in Holland, Mich."

The two resided in their cottages during the summer and winter seasons. Neckers, whose cottage was on the lakeshore, lived three miles from Van Lente's on Lake Macatawa.

Neckers' relationship with Van Lente led to Van Lente's hiring in 1931. Neckers gave a personal recommendation to then SIU President Henry William Shryock, the University's fifth president, to bring Van Lente aboard. Neckers said Van Lente, who spent 42 years as an instructor at SIUC, was one of the school's best undergraduate instructors.

Van Lente was born on March 29, 1903, in Holland, Mich. He was preceded in death by his wife, Cynthia Melpolder Van Lente, in 1986.

Retired Justice Lewis Powell dead at 93

Retired Associate Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell died at his home in Richmond, Va., Tuesday, 11 years after retiring from the nation's highest court.

He was 90. Powell, who often cast the court's swing vote, played a central role in some of the most bitterly fought and sensitive cases before the high court in the 1970s and 80s. He often said he considered his controlling vote in the 1978 decision that upheld affirmative action his most important.

Powell also joined the 5-4 majority in 1986 that decided there is no constitutional right to consensual, homosexual conduct — a decision he later said was "probably... a mistake."

Powell, for whom flags throughout the capital flew at half-staff Tuesday, also was known for his soft-spoken and gentle manner.

Massive Evacuation as Bonnie heads for land

A massive evacuation was under way in North Carolina Tuesday as residents in other parts of the eastern coast braced for Hurricane Bonnie's landfall.

The powerful hurricane, packing maximum sustained winds near 115 mph, was speeding up and expected to hit land Wednesday afternoon.

A hurricane warning was issued for a long stretch of the Atlantic coastline, from Murrells Inlet, S.C., to Chincoteague, Va. Hurricane watches also remained in effect for portions of Georgia and Delaware.

The majority of counties along North Carolina's East Coast were evacuated and a limited state of emergency was declared in some spots. State authorities issued mandatory evacuation orders for the Outer Banks, a group of fragile, exposed barrier islands expected to bear the brunt of the storm early Wednesday. Still more evacuations were recommended farther south as meteorologists predicted Bonnie would hit land between the North Carolina cities of Morehead City and Jacksonville.

According to state authorities, the evacuations affect about 230,000 people.

Emergency shelters were being set up throughout the coastal counties, and all of the power companies were bringing extra personnel; a massive buildup conducted even as the weather remained sunny.

USG introduces online polling system

INTERNET: Students can electronically share views on USG issues this fall.

JACOB LIVENGOOD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Undergraduate SIUC students will get a chance to voice their opinions on various issues this fall by using the Internet, according to Undergraduate Student Government Vice President Jackie Smith.

USG is preparing an electronic referendum from their homepage (www.siu.edu/~usg) that will tabulate student input on various USG issues this fall.

"We want to put absolutely everything on the referendum," Smith said. "We can break down replies from certain geographic and demographic areas, which will help our senators know how their constituents feel on certain issues."

"A lot of times the senators don't know how their constituents feel. This will help narrow that gap."

Before all of this can happen efficiently, programmer Ben Gass said the initial use of the referendum during the fall semester will serve as a trial run to work out any potential bugs.

"The problem I'm worried about is how the database will hold so much data," said Gass, a junior in computer engineering and math from Monticello. "I don't think it will be a problem, but it will take longer to run the application."

Gass said the application also could take nearly an hour to run after verifying e-mail addresses, calculating passwords and tabulating results.

Concern about the number of users is also an issue for Gass. He said faults in the system need to be found this semester if the system is to work properly.

"The purpose is for this program to be used like it was meant to be used," he said. "It will only help USG and GPSC (Graduate and Professional Student Council) if people use it. If they do, it will help them decide the weight of legislation and what will pass. If no one uses it, it won't work."

Currently students can log onto the USG homepage and vote for two test bills, "Would you use the electronic referendum?" and "Do you

Select 2000 brings respect to greeks

Why do people join the Greek system? A few probably want to achieve their academic potential, make connections for a future in the workforce, and develop leadership skills. But let's face it, most people join to socialize, drink, party and meet members of the opposite sex.

Fraternities and sororities that once focused on academics and community service now serve mainly as a social outlet.

The perceptions of greeks have changed in recent years. Now, people look down on fraternities and sororities as social clubs where people get drunk on a regular basis. The party attitude of the current national greek system has been so prolific that it has even led to the alcohol-related deaths of fraternity members at Louisiana State University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology last year.

No matter what one's view of Select 2000 is, the University has set the standard. Whether the greek organizations like it or not, they have to obey it, or else they will suffer the same fate that our own Delta Chi did by losing their organization altogether.

Although the DAILY EGYPTIAN has emphatically disagreed with the way that Select 2000 was implemented, we believe that in the long run the program may finally allow students to look at the real reasons why they should consider joining a fraternity or sorority.

Under Select 2000 guidelines, alcohol is not allowed at any greek social function. The final phase of the plan is in effect, meaning that fraternity members — regardless of age — can no longer drink anywhere in their chapter house.

Greek organizations that do not meet Select 2000 regulations could face penalties including probation, loss of social privileges, loss of participation in University-sponsored activities, suspension, or revocation of recognition by the University as a Registered Student Organization.

With these restrictions imposed on them, greek organizations may want to emphasize the positive aspects of the Select 2000 program to their pledges.

Select 2000 has nine basic standards that were developed to make an overall improvement on the Greek system. Select 2000 chapters must do the following: achieve their academic potential, provide a safe and healthy environment, recruit and develop value-centered leaders, keep each other from harm, fulfill their duty to serve, make the campus and community a better place, prepare members for life, provide guidance and counsel and exemplify their values and standards.

These standards are built on scholarship, accountability, honesty, integrity, ethical leadership and responsibility to the University and community.

All students should strive for these standards. If the greek leaders are intelligent they would emphasize this to the new pledges during rush week.

Greek leaders will most likely blame Select 2000 if there is a decrease in the number of pledges, but they may need to look at themselves and at their priorities. Why would any self-respecting organization want to appeal to students whose only interest is drinking and partying? That has never been the intention, nor the basis for any greek organization. Both fraternities and sororities need to go back to the time where emphasis was placed on academics, community service, and leadership — not just socializing.

If greek organizations rely solely on drinking and partying to attract members, then the system will and should corrode — much like their image already has.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

There ain't no such thing as a free lunch

If there's one universal fact of life, it's this: there ain't no such thing as a free lunch. Most veteran students have already realized this, and so we've learned to live on Tang and ramen noodles; but TANSTAAFL does not merely apply to food, it means that everything has its price—even if it isn't immediately apparent.

That free T-shirt from the credit card folks isn't free, for if you get the card, the more credit you have in your name; the harder it is to get a future loan, and if your application is turned down, that too goes on your record, again making future loans harder to obtain.

TANSTAAFL means that you only get out of something what you put into it. Of course, we're sick of hearing that from parents and teachers and advisers, and it certainly is true in your personal life, but what you do with your personal life is nobody's business. It's certainly not the business of a soapbox-preacher like myself.

However, TANSTAAFL applies to things which are everybody's business, not the least of which being the system which tells you what you will and will not be allowed to do.

Many of us don't get a hoot in Hades about politics—why should we? The news has made national politics of late appear to be something of a "prime-time drama" (read "porno") more than anything else, yet there really are things going on in our government worth hearing about.

There are a lot of important decisions to be made. Do we allow public schools to hold organized prayer in class? Some politicians would like to amend the Constitution in order to do so. Should we make it easier for third-party candidates to get their name on the ballot? It is currently easier to get your name on the ballot for president in the former Soviet Union, South Africa and Bosnia than it is to get your name on the ballot for city clerk in Illinois—that is, unless you are a Republican or Democrat. Should we legalize drugs, or should we send troops into drug-producing nations? Should English be made our national language? Should we force President Clinton to wear cast-iron boxers?

There is no free lunch in politics.

Democracy lies in the streets as much as in votes. From the politics within a single floor of a dorm building, to international policy, change is the result when issues are brought into public context by individuals and groups who see a problem and speak out.

Our taxes do not buy us a ticket for the ride from public school through to a guaranteed arrival at Social Security, they buy us a part ownership in a joint enterprise, on a share-the-cost-and-share-the-driving plan.

Do not be afraid to bring up controversy, and don't be afraid of what the other guys have to say, for nothing will change unless we keep talking.

Hillary Clinton needs to share her views on Lewinsky scandal

Dear Editor,

Well it's over. President Clinton told us what many have already speculated.

So now what? I don't know. Should he be impeached, should he resign, or should he continue to run our government? I believe the laws of our nation will direct the next act of this drama.

However, there is one thing I believe that should happen (though I haven't heard it addressed in the media). Mrs. Clinton should make a statement to America: the world and beyond. I believe that she should leave the President. After all, he did not even apologize to his wife during his address. Make a statement to all people — most importantly women — that the vows of marriage should not and will not be taken lightly.

If society, America's and those abroad, are ever going to reconcile with the beast that destroys our values, it needs to start with holding a belief with ones family first.

Regardless of the genetics of ones structure, (married, heterosexual/homosexual, or common law), there are trusts that are bestowed onto those that enter.

If Mr. and Mrs. Clinton had an understanding prior to their entrance to this relationship, then these actions are not relevant. However, no such findings are present yet, so thereby I conclude that Mrs. Clinton must leave her husband.

Whether or not they reconcile, she owes herself, women of Earth and those of us men who are deserving of merit the respect of her self-worth, her dignity and her relationship with her husband.

Mrs. Clinton, please do yourself and us a favor. Leave Bill, regroup and then decide whether you can ever trust him again and if he desires another chance.

Law School to celebrate its silver anniversary

CELEBRATE

The SIU School of Law will begin its 25th anniversary celebration Sept. 11 at the Lesar Law Building.

BIG TWO-FIVE: SIU School of Law looks back on a quarter of a century.

JAMES FULLER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU School of Law has plenty of reasons to celebrate this fall with a landmark anniversary and a rising enrollment providing the motivation.

The school will have a 25th anniversary celebration Sept. 11 to lead a series of events in honor of its silver anniversary. The school will be sponsoring a number of discussion panels featuring a number of distinguished guests. The Sept. 11 celebration also will feature a musical review as the school takes a look back at its first 25 years.

In 1972, Hiram Lesar was hired by the University with a mission to build a law school. By September 1973, the first law class was taught in the Blue Barracks. With space for only 87 people, more than 900 applications were received demonstrating a clear need for the creation of an affordable law school in the Southern Illinois region.

Of the seven law schools in the state at the time, only the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, was a public institution. Southern Illinois had one lawyer for every 1,534 residents.

In January 1974, the School of Law moved into two renovated buildings in small group housing. But it was obvious that the School of Law needed a home of its own.

With a strong push by Dean Lesar and Chancellor Delyte Morris, Illinois Governor James Thompson signed a bill providing $7.8 million toward the birth of a new law building on Aug. 24, 1978.

Twenty years later than Lesar planned, the

New AIDS treatment made public

RELIEF: Cost efficient treatment restores weakened muscles.

ELLYN PETERSON
IOWA STATE DAILY

(UWIRE) — An Iowa State professor's discovery of a treatment to help AIDS patients gain muscle mass was unveiled recently to 12,000 scientists and activists at the World AIDS Conference in Geneva, Steven Nissen, professor of animal science and founder of MTI BioTech Inc., located in Iowa State University's Research Park, invented Juven, a dietary supplement designed to slow muscle deterioration.

Muscle loss occurs when disease or trauma places additional nutritional demands on the body. These stresses can diminish appetite, causing the body to use protein stored within muscles. Over time, muscles become smaller, weaker and less flexible.

"In a few months, an AIDS victim can go from looking normal to wasting away," Nissen said. "We breathe through muscles, and if you can't cough you get pneumonia."

The results of the two-year study involving the non-prescription amino acid formula show dramatic results for AIDS patients that could have a far-reaching impact over the next few years.

The clinical study involved AIDS patients who had lost at least 5 percent of their body weight during the preceding two months and compared patients taking Juven to those taking a placebo in a double-blind test.

During the eight-week study, patients taking Juven gained an average of 6 1/2 pounds, 5 1/2 pounds of it muscle, while the placebo group continued to lose an average of 1 1/2 pounds of muscle over the eight-week period.

"We designed the product to protect these patients from further loss, so we assumed that as our body of data grew, the results would level out. Instead they just got stronger," Nissen said.

Nissen said they performed the study on AIDS patients because the changes are larger in AIDS patients.

"There are a hundred cancers and only one AIDS," he said. "[AIDS] is more homogenous than the specific types of cancer. Over the next two years we plan to take this further to cancer victims and others suffering from terminal diseases," Nissen said.

The main ingredient in Juven is HMB (beta-hydroxy-beta-methylbutyrate), which Nissen discovered after years of research at ISU.

HMB quickly became one of the best selling sports supplements on the market because it helps prevent muscle breakdown, Nissen said.

"We knew that all three ingredients in Juven, HMB, L-glutamine and L-arginine, were safe and independently supply key building blocks for the muscle cell," Nissen said.

UB Low Price Guarantee

Back By Popular Demand!

In response to strong student support, the University Bookstore is bringing back the UB Low Price Guarantee. As always, if any customer discovers that one of the University Bookstore's textbooks is priced higher than any of the other local bookstores, UB will match the lower price.

"As the official University bookstore, our goal is to give students the best deal possible", explains UB director, Jim Skiersch. "When we verify that there is a lower price on a particular textbook, we'll buy lunch for the first customer who brought it to our attention and we'll mark the rest of those textbooks with the lower price." Customers have five (5) days from the time they purchase a textbook to bring a price discrepancy to UB's attention.

The whole process is very simple and easy: Any customer who finds a lower price on a textbook that's in the same condition as UB's (new or used) will fill out a very brief form. If necessary, the University Bookstore will verify pricing of the book(s) in question within 24 hours. Once it's verified that a lower price is being offered, the customer may purchase the book at the lower price, or if he or she has already purchased the book from UB, they can pick up their refund at the UB refund desk. In either case, the University Bookstore will also treat the customer to lunch in the Student Center's new food court.

"our goal is to give students the best deal possible"

Freshman minorities at UC-Berkeley drop by half

DENNIS AKIZUM
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSFAPERS

SAN JOSE, Calif. — When the freshmen nervously walked through Sproul Plaza on their way to class early Monday, it marked the start of the post-affirmative-action era at UC-Berkeley.

The 3,500 freshmen entering Berkeley are the first admitted without racial preferences in place as an admissions criterion — not only for the flagship University of California campus but the entire UC system.

Although final enrollment information isn't expected for a while, the number of freshmen who are underrepresented minorities — African-Americans, Latinos and American Indians — expected to attend UC's most exclusive campus is down more than 50 percent, according to preliminary figures. Overall throughout the eight undergraduate UC campuses, the number of underrepresented minorities who said they intend to enroll for the first time this fall fell 9 percent from last year.

Meanwhile, Berkeley, the home of the Free Speech Movement and People's Park — famed as much for placard-waving, raucous student

Oct. 21-22.

Thus far, there are no other pro-affirmative-action activities scheduled at UC-Berkeley.

But the absence of protests does

"It doesn't trouble me as long as the (entrance) process is fairly administered."

— WARD CONNERLY
RACIAL RELATIONS ACTIVIST

demonstrations as its academic excellence — has been strangely quiet.

"There probably will be some protests, but at this point we don't see any major call for mobilization on this issue," said university spokesman Jesus Mena.

There are plans being made for a faculty-organized two-day walkout and teach-in throughout the UC system to protest the UC regents' decision to end affirmative action. But that event is two months away — on n't mean the debate over affirmative action is over.

One critic of the decision to end racial preferences said race-blind admissions will result in a campus where 9 out of 10 students are Asian-American or white, and only 1 out of 10 are Latino or African-American.

"How can Berkeley have a student body that is 90 percent Asian and white when California is nearly 40 percent black and Chicano?" said ethnic studies professor Ron Takaki, who has advised President Clinton on race issues. "Something is wrong with that picture."

But Ward Connerly, whose name is synonymous with the successful campaign to end UC's racial preferences, is unfazed by the drastic decline in the number of Latino, African-American and American Indian enrollees compared with last year's freshman class at Cal.

"It doesn't trouble me as long as the (entrance) process is fairly administered," Connerly said. "I don't preoccupy myself with the outcome, how many of one group is in and how many of another is not in. In a democracy, we should not try to engineer the outcome."

Takaki and Connerly are scheduled to debate Sept. 23 at Dominican College in San Rafael.

Maybe the relative quiet about the end of racial preferences is the lull before the storm. Perhaps, as Connerly says, the student body agrees with his stance, or maybe the students are more worried about taking notes in class rather than carrying a protest sign on Sproul Plaza.

ANNIVERSARY

the building was up and running by fall 1981.

"When Dean Lesar retired, he said the biggest accomplishment of his career had been to get this new building built," said Ann Ruger, who is currently doing research for the 25th anniversary of the Law School.

Ruger said the school's mission to "train ethical, competent practitioners," along with the school's affordability and low faculty-to-student ratio are what sets it apart from other law schools in the state.

"Another unique thing about this law school is its commitment to public service," Ruger said.

Ruger cited the numerous clinics and free services that the school has provided to the Southern Illinois community throughout its history as examples of the humanitarian mentality within the school. The latest model of that commitment is the new self-help center in the Lesar Law Library where anyone can come in and find helpful materials dealing with common legal problems.

The future of the Law School continues to look bright. This year's incoming class is the largest in the school's history and up 8 percent over last year's enrollment. Nationally, law school enrollment is up only 1 percent as interest is returning to legal professions after a downturn during the 1980s.

School of Law Dean Thomas Guernsey said the way the school is set up to serve the Southern Illinois region is one of the remarkable factors that makes the school stand out.

"When you look at the history of the Law School, it's amazing how far we've come," Guernsey said. "That's a pretty amazing accomplishment in only 25 years."

Airport gets quicker connection to network

SAVING TIME: New technology grants SIUC airport instant access to SIUC files and Internet.

KATIE KLEMAUER
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

John D. Cotter finally saw a goal that he has been working toward for about six years achieved this summer: a faster, more adequate connection between the SIUC airport facilities' computers and the campus computer network.

SIUC's airport facilities gained easier access to the SIUC computer network with new Spread Spectrum Radio Transmission (SSRT). This technology allows the airport instant access to SIUC's student information systems and the Internet, making it easier to help student walk-ins who need academic advisement and more convenient to bill students for flight time.

Cotter, an assistant professor in the Department of Aviation Technologies, said the biggest benefit of SSRT is band-width. Bandwidth is the amount of electronic information that can be moved instantaneously. The system used to take four to five minutes to connect. Now, it only takes two seconds.

Before this development, the two large aviation departments, located four-and-a-half miles northwest of Carbondale, had to connect to campus through a modem. The departments have more than 30 computers, said David L. Jaynes, an academic adviser for the aviation management and flight department. This can make connection difficult.

"It allows us to be a part of the computer network," Jaynes said.

A common problem before the implementation of the new system was downloading the new regulation manual, Jaynes said. The file was 15 megabytes and took seven hours to download from the airport facilities. To solve the problem, an employee would drive to campus and go to the Faner Computer Lab and get the manual within an hour. The new system can transfer files at the rate of one megabyte every eight seconds.

Jaynes said the SIUC airport facilities have experienced trouble getting reliable, high-speed connection out at the airport for about 10 years.

But other alternatives were too expensive. Running a fiber optic system from campus would have cost close to $1 million. Frame relay, another option, would have cost thousands of dollars in addition to a $600 monthly phone bill.

The SSRT link costs about $10,000 with no monthly charges.

The technology works when two transceivers (radio transmitters and receivers combined in a single unit) no more than 15 miles apart and with no barriers between them exchange information along a high-speed wireless link.

SIUC's transceivers are located on the roof of Morris Library and on top of a 100-ft. tower at the Southern Illinois Airport.

Cotter said the processing power of microprocessors is doubling every 18 months. In three to five years, improved technology will be available. He sees students having greater connections in the future.

"I expect a higher level of interaction between students in aviation and airlines, aircraft manufacturers, FAA, and NASA," Cotter said.

Webster's keep up with the hip

ANNE HAMILTON
 HARTFORD COURANT

Noah Webster's linguistic heirs are celebrating the 100th anniversary of Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary this year by adding 100 words.

As you might expect, many of them relate to computers: "netiquette," "bit-map," "chat room," "HTML."

Others have to do with food:

"mescalun," "ramen," "buffalo wings" and "farfalle."

You may know "charter school," "day job," "domestic partner" and "gazillion."

(Find their definitions in Merriam-Webster Online at www.m-w.com).

With more than 160,000 entries, how is there enough space for new words? Every decade, when there's a new edition, editors weed out words no longer seen in print.

Dropped from the 10th edition were "lavee"—to sail against the wind; "ronnel," an insecticide; and "tattle-tale gray," a 1940s synonym for dingy laundry.

"It was part of an advertising campaign for Fels Naptha laundry soap," said Merriam-Webster President and Publisher John Morse. "The shirts that didn't use the soap would come out gray, and that would be some awful reflection on your housekeeping."

who were very receptive to Select 2000.

"They were very interested in the program and wanted to know how they could better accommodate the guidelines of Select 2000," Sermersheim said.

Theta Xi President Christian Schoonover has a different perspective.

"Everyone is complying out of fear," Schoonover said. "The Delta Chi's were an example and now everyone is complying because they don't want the same thing happening to them."

The Delta Chi fraternity lost its Registered Student Organization status earlier this year as a result of probation and alcohol violations in February 1998. The fraternity is not eligible for RSO status again until the end of Spring 2002 semester.

Sermersheim said that the University already has seen improvements within the Greek community. She said the grade point average of the Panhellenic Council Greek sororities is above the all-women's average on campus. Last year SIUC fraternities and sororities put in more than 7,000 hours of community service.

"It is like night and day with this year compared to last year," Sermersheim said. "Great things are happening in the Greek community and everyone needs to keep an eye out as things keep getting better."

Inter-Greek Council President Tony Blood could not be reached for comment.

"All other allegations have no merits," Reed said.

There are seven phone lines in the station. Five of those are reserved for emergency calls only. The other two are non-emergency lines that can be used for personal calls. One of those two lines is subject to recording, but firefighters were told that tapes would not be listened to for any reason unless they were emergency related, according to the lawsuit.

Frazier said no date has been set for trial, but he said Carbondale has an obligation to file a response in 30 to 60 days.

"We should know more then," Frazier said.

Reed said the claim goes to the city's insurance company, and the city will act on the company's recommendation.

The eight-count lawsuit seeks general damages of at least $190,000, and punitive damages of at least $1.9 million plus attorney's fees.

BILL

appropriations.

The new bill also covers new regulations barring state officials from accepting gifts from interest groups seeking to do business with the state.

It prohibits fund-raisers within a 50-mile radius of Springfield within the final 90 days of the scheduled adjournment of the regular fall legislative session. It also bars face-to-face solicitation and acceptance of funds on state property unless facilities have been appropriated for that express purpose.

The bill will help assure that any donations greater than $500 received in the closing weeks of an election are disclosed to the public before Election Day. It also establishes a due date for electric filing of disclosure reports regarding the use or accumulation totaling $25,000 or more. The bill increases the penalties for all violations of the policy.

Many believe that the bill is a good start and an eye-opener to heightened awareness in the future.

"This new legislation is a step in the right direction, a modest step, but a good one," John Jackson, vice chancellor for academic affairs and Provost, said.

"Overall this bill takes care of the more egregious problems. I think that they're (Simon and Lawrence) to be congratulated."

Kent Redfield, an expert on campaign finance from the University of Illinois at Springfield, said that while the bill does not address all of the ethical concerns regarding campaign finance, it is a good beginning.

"This is historic legislation in Illinois," Redfield said. "However, there are still loopholes and gray areas in the legislation."

The personal use of funds has been regulated; but there is a grandfather clause in effect for those accustomed to the old system, Redfield said. The grandfather clause allows some legislators to continue campaign funds for personal use.

"While this new bill does restrict certain spending, is the spending of campaign funds on personal needs wrong?" Redfield asked. "Well, the bill skirts that issue and just regulates it."

Redfield said it was nearly impossible to violate the finance regulations before this bill because they were so vague. This legislation lays a groundwork from which to begin an increased awareness of the ethical issues on the subject.

"Overall," Lawrence said, "we hope that this raises the ethical standard."

SIUC from 1931 until his retirement at age 70 in 1973. Among Van Lente's many accomplishments at SIUC was receiving the Great Teacher Award from the SIUC Alumni Association in 1967. He received $1,000 upon receiving the honor.

Van Lente was the first member of the University's chemistry faculty to present a paper to a national Society.

He authored a textbook, "Experimental General Chemistry," in which he assisted Neckers and Abbott.

The book was used by 200 universities and junior colleges, and it served as SIUC's standard text until 1970.

In 1970, Van Lente was one of the 16 SIUC educators whose name appeared in the book "Outstanding Educators of America."

He was given this recognition because of his talents in the class-administrative abilities, and professional and civic qualities.

But Van Lente's accomplishments are not limited solely to SIUC. Van Lente was a member of the American Chemistry Society, the First Presbyterian Church, the Chemical Who's Who, the Honorary and Professional Societies and the Illinois State Academy of Science.

New life in Thompson Point

ACTING: Thompson Point introduced to new area coordinator.

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Teri Schaefer began working with students as a resident assistant in 1989 during her undergraduate career at SIUC.

She found helping her fellow students was something that she enjoyed doing.

Now, Schaefer is the new acting coordinator of residence life at Thompson Point. Steve Kirk, assistant director for residence life, appointed her to the temporary position.

Schaefer replaced C. Anthony Earls, who now is the coordinator for residence life at University Park.

Earls has known Schaefer for 11 years since she was a freshman living in the undergraduate housing.

Cindy Perkins, coordinator for residence life at Brush Towers, says Schaefer would be a good candidate for the permanent job as Thompson Point's residence coordinator, as a search for the position is still ongoing. Schaefer will be putting in her resume for the job as Thompson Point's residence coordinator.

Schaefer became very active in resident life and got her master's degree in higher education.

She enjoys working with the faculty and students, and she enjoys observing residence life.

"I like watching the students as freshmen because they go through a lot of changes," she said.

"And when their parents pick them up at the end of the year, the students have become a totally different person."

Calcium may alleviate premenstrual stress

WASHINGTON POST

Calcium supplements can help soothe the annoying symptoms of premenstrual syndrome, according to a new study by Columbia University researchers.

Women who took 1,200 milligrams of calcium a day reduced PMS symptoms by more than 50 percent, found the study of more than 500 women, which is scheduled to be published this week in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Peter Schmidt, head of the behavioral endocrinology branch at the National Institute of Mental Health, said the findings add to a small but growing body of scientific studies that link calcium deficiency with PMS symptoms.

PMS afflicts as many as 40 percent of women of childbearing age. It is often characterized by migraines, bloating, sleep disturbances, food cravings and malaise. Irritability is another hallmark of PMS, as are extreme mood swings.

The exact cause of PMS remains elusive. But researchers have found some treatment options. In recent years, for example, antidepressants have been used successfully for the most severe cases of PMS.

Calcium supplements may provide an option for milder cases of the disorder, based on results of the latest study.

Abercrombie & Fitch to sue look-alike clothier

WASHINGTON POST

When is imitation not the sincerest form of flattery, but a rip-off?

In the retail industry, copying the hot concept or design of the day is an age-old tradition. Knockoffs of Princess Diana's wedding dress, for example, appeared in London shops within a week of her nuptials.

Retailers and manufacturers have tolerated the practice for decades, but now one retail superstar has decided to put its foot down.

Abercrombie & Fitch, the super-hot collegiate retailer, claimed in a lawsuit in June that its arch rival, American Eagle Outfitters, has illegally copied its clothes, its look, its image and its marketing, confusing customers and hurting Abercrombie's profits. It has hired among the best-known intellectual-property lawyers in the country, requested a jury trial and asked for triple damages.

"Subsequent to the Abercrombie Brand and (look) becoming favorably known to the public and trade, American Eagle Outfitters, has intentionally developed a (look) for the American Brand ... which is substantially and confusingly similar to the Abercrombie (look)," the company wrote in its complaint.

Abercrombie attached to the complaint numerous examples of clothes and logos from the two chains that look strikingly similar. It also included an internal American Eagle document in which the chain's store managers are asked to "Tell Us What Abercrombie & Fitch is Marketing!!!" The form tells store managers to go to the nearest Abercrombie store each week and describe it in detail, including what's displayed in the windows, what's on the main display table and what its signs say.

American Eagle said it will "vigorously defend" the lawsuit, which it called "meritless, frivolous and bordering on ridiculous."

But if Abercrombie prevails in court, its argument could have a lasting effect on the ability of retail chains to do what they've always done — imitate one another.

Fashion retailers in particular are like lemmings, with dozens of chains rushing to replicate a look or style as soon as it becomes popular, ultimately saturating the marketplace and killing the trend. If the court finds that American Eagle deliberately co-opted Abercrombie's look and violated trademark law in doing so, retailers would have to think hard before imitating anyone in the future, and that could lead to greater innovation and creativity in the industry.

But the question facing the court in this case is murky: Even if American Eagle did copy Abercrombie's styles, is that illegal? Or was the company just exercising its own fashion judgment based on what it saw succeeding in the marketplace?

"To the extent that retailing is a totally public business, whatever a retailer does is immediately visible and adaptable by everybody else," said Kurt Barnard, president of Barnard's Retail Trend Report and a longtime industry consultant. "This is what the world of competition basically is all about."

think Michael Jordan should retire?"

Gass said only eight students are currently in his database, but he said more will register as USG issues arise.

USG planned to have online election voting available in spring 1997, but the University had concerns about student privacy, as faults in the writing of the program were evident.

Gass said if someone knew how the system worked, they could vote with any e-mail address. He said those quirks have since been worked out.

"Now you have to have an siu.edu e-mail address," he said.

The program then checks the e-mail address to make sure it's valid and sends a password back to that account to use while voting."

In the meantime, Gass is trying to iron-out other "bugs" in the PC he uses to write the program.

"Right now I have a memory leak from the application running too many times without shutting it down," Gass, who has been programming since the seventh grade, said. "It's not an issue with the program or tabulation."

The globe, put to the test

HOWARD KURTZ
WASHINGTON POST

BOSTON — The racial repercussions at the Boston Globe began as soon as columnist Patricia Smith was told to resign.

Even after the fakeries of 1995, Storn had submitted her work for a Pulitzer Prize. But in June, as evidence surfaced, Smith admitted fabricating four columns; the Globe believes another 52 involve made-up characters. One of the four bogus columns featured an imaginary cancer victim named Claire, "a slightly chubby 142 pounds" who "still has her hair."

Smith's farewell column was a mixture of apology and defiance, which invited further recriminations. "Her fall had nothing to do with race; her rise had everything to do with it," wrote metro columnist Eileen McNamara.

Black reporters, too, felt tarred by Smith's disgrace.

"They didn't want to confront her because she was black," she says. "Part of her success was built on the ignorance of those around her, who'd never been in those neighborhoods."

Some black activists, citing past allegations against columnist Mike Barnicle, quickly demanded his scalp. The Globe began examining 2 1/2 years of Barnicle's writing. He felt singled by Smith's flamewout. "The Globe chose to put me on the rack to appear even-handed within the politically correct, agenda-driven journalism of the age," Barnicle declared.

With a bull's-eye on his back, Barnicle handed his critics a pistol just six weeks later. His Aug. 2 column contained a series of one-liners lifted from a book by comedian George Carlin; Barnicle said he had gotten them from a bartender. Storn, vacationing in Italy, suspended the columnist. Hours later, after learning that Barnicle had recommended the Carlin book on television earlier in the summer, Storn demanded his resignation.

What followed was six days of national humiliation. Barnicle campaigned for his job, backed by prominent media buddies like Don Imus and Tim Russert. As advertisers balked and readers threatened to walk, management seemed paralyzed. Finally, Storn agreed to let Barnicle off with a two-month suspension. Many Globe staffers were livid, feeling their boss had caved under pressure. Dozens of them, white and black, signed a protest petition.

At a staff meeting, even some mild-mannered reporters challenged Storn's flip-flop, saying he had hurt the paper's ethical image. Storn seemed stunned, and his legendary temper flared: "What do you want me to do? You want me to take it back? You want me to fire him?"

The controversial compromise held for one week. Last Wednesday afternoon, Storn told the newsroom that the Globe had accepted Barnicle's resignation. As in Smith's case, a column about cancer victims had proved to be his downfall. Ironically, it was an uplifting racial parable of a wealthy white family and a struggling black one forging a friendship as their young sons fought for survival.

SPC-TV continues to entertain residence halls after five years

MEETING

•Students interested in becoming a member of SPC-TV can call Jeremy Corray at 453-6550 or 536-3393 or go to the meeting at 6 p.m. on Mondays on the fourth floor of the Student Center.

HIGH RATINGS: Original programs, first-run movies hit sweet spot with SIUC.

JEROME-PAUL ROCHON
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Holly Jones, a sophomore in mechanical engineering from Murphysboro, used to watch SPC-TV when she lived on-campus. Now that she lives off-campus she misses it.

"When I lived in the dorm, I used to watch SPC-TV for the first-run movies, and it was better than regular TV," Jones said. "I like the viewer request option, where you could pick what you wanted to see."

SPC-TV is Southern Illinois' only student-run and produced television station, making it one of fewer than 80 in the country that are operated in such a format.

"Half of those are controlled by the schools' faculty," said Jeremy Corray, director of SPC-TV.

SPC-TV is funded from the student activity fees, which is about $40 per student. It works out to be a penny a video according to Corray, a senior in cinema and photography from Highland. To keep costs low, the station depends on student volunteers to create the bulk of its programming and to operate the station. There are more than 110 students who volunteer at SPC-TV.

Yolanda Shelton, a junior in workforce education and development from Paducah, Ky., likes watching SPC-TV because of the student production because.

"You get to see people as their true selves," Shelton said. "They (SPC-TV) have a good selection of movies, and you can't beat the price for a dollar."

SPC-TV was started more than five years ago to give students experience in the broadcast fields and to film commercials for resident student organizations. The station broadcasts: first-run movies, music videos, Saluki football home games, Undergraduate Student Government meetings and cartoons to more than 5,000 students in SIUC's residence halls on channel 24.

According to Mike Hackette, a junior in cinema and photography from Carverville, the most popular show at SPC-TV is "Wut!" and the most loved character is the show's host, Screechy the Rabbit.

"Wut!" is a comedy variety show, created by Hackette, that highlights student productions and animated shows. Screechy the Rabbit comments and provides outlooks on life keep the viewers glued to their television sets, Hackette said.

"Screechy fever is high on campus as the phone rings off the hook when he is on," Corray said.

A new show called "Supernight," hosted by Janitor Bob, will air on SPC-TV this semester. Students may recognize Janitor Bob from other SPC-TV programs like "Zink Dudstar." Corray classifies his character, Janitor Bob, as the station patsy.

"Supernight" is a way to group our student productions and have students call in," Corray said.

Corray said SPC-TV will show "Titanic" in October before it is aired by HBO. SPC-TV schedules should be in mailboxes soon. Students also can watch SPC-TV before noon for programming schedules.

According to charter member Morgan T. Grammer, an alumnus from Champaign, students should come over and join SPC-TV because it is fun and a good experience.

"SPC-TV is a life-long experience that you will use no matter where you go," he said.

It's almost last call for ABC's Jackson

BARRY JACKSON
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

MIAMI — For 27 autumns, he has entertained us with his homespun humor, amused us with his often-initiated Whoa Nellie!

When you flip on ABC and hear Keith Jackson calling a game this season, take a moment to appreciate the work of a legend. It could be your last chance:

Jackson, who has announced college football for 46 of the past 47 years, will retire after the Jan. 4 Fiesta Bowl, which likely will determine the national championship.

"It just seems like the right time," Jackson said recently from his summer home in British Columbia. "I'll be 70 in October. It's the next generation's turn."

Other sportscasters have won more awards. Others have received more prime-time exposure. But no current network play-by-play announcer — is associated — more strongly with a particular sport than Jackson is with college football.

Jackson has been the sport's signature voice for nearly three decades. And he hasn't liked everything he has seen, especially lately.

"The indecisiveness of the leadership of the collegiate community has been the worst part," Jackson said. "They could have served their playoff idea in a better way. Even with the new system, what are you going to do when there are three undefeated teams? The best way to do it would be picking four teams after the bowl games. But the college presidents have kept that from happening."

"The other thing that bothers me is that student-athletes should be paid. Anyone who generates revenue should share in the pot."

Still, Jackson won't leave the game bitter.

"It just seems like the right time."

— KEITH JACKSON
ABC BROADCASTER

"I'm going to miss being at the stadium," he says. "I'll miss the ambience, the gathering, the band, the special feeling. People come back to campus to watch the games, and that maintains a link between generations. That's why I prefer college football to the NFL. But I won't miss the traveling or the airline food or the limo drivers who don't show up."

Jackson shakes his head when he hears announcers like Roy Firestone impersonate his Southern accent. "I don't know what that serves," Jackson says. "And the expression, Whoa Nellie! is not really mine. I don't even remember the first time I used it. It actually came from an old fellow in Los Angeles named Dick Lane, who used it all the time back in the 1950s when he was doing roller derby for several television stations."

Jackson doesn't want to be remembered for any particular expression. But he takes immense pride in his ability to express himself with analogies and historical references — a talent rare among contemporary sportscasters.

Jackson began his career as a news anchor in Seattle, where he honed his writing skills. He joined ABC as a news correspondent in 1964, became the play-by-play announcer for the first year of Monday Night Football (1970), then moved permanently to ABC's college-football package in 1971 while juggling NBA games and other assignments.

"If you are going to have success in the business, you have to never be afraid to turn a phrase," Jackson says. "If you can say something that people will understand and enjoy, then do it. Don't say it just to be cute. And don't confuse your listener. Sometimes, clarity comes easily if you use different phrases. That's the only mechanical thing I've come to be a little different."

Adversity makes Singh golf's hottest player

LEONARD SHAPIRO
WASHINGTON POST

Vijay Singh's 25-foot eagle putt at the 17th green at Castle Pines in Colorado Sunday clinched his victory in the International, seven days after winning his first major championship at the PGA in Redmond, Wash. Still, that putt might not have been the toughest shot the 35-year-old native of Fiji, now the game's hottest player, ever hit under pressure.

In the mid-1980s, Singh was a club professional at a remote golf course in Boracay, playing a match against a wealthy visitor. With only $10 in his pocket, and $700 riding on the outcome, Singh hit his tee shot on the last hole out of bounds, and had to tee off again.

Singh somehow collected himself and made a par 5 on the hole. Meanwhile, his opponent dunked a shot into the water and finished with a double bogey. Singh won the 18th, the match and the $700 and can laugh about it now, telling Sports Illustrated, "Whenever I'm in contention in a tournament, I think about that. I never told my wife, either."

Singh, of Indian descent whose name Vijay means victory in Hindi, insists he and his wife, Ardena Seth, look back on the two years they spent in Borneo with fond memories, even if he was there because of a well-documented cheating incident at the Indonnesia Open in 1985. Singh was suspended from the Asian Tour for allegedly signing a scorecard a shot lower than he had posted.

Singh has always denied any wrongdoing and bristles when the subject is brought up by members of the media, with whom he's had a strained relationship. Clarke Jones, his agent at Cleveland based IMG, said this week:

"The guy is cautious and he's quiet. He hasn't had the greatest relationship with the press, but we're trying to work our way through it. It's not just the media. If he doesn't know someone, it takes him a while to warm up... He's a little shy at times."

MALCOLM MORAN
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPER

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Ages removed from the blue-gray October sky that helped a university achieve a national identity in a simpler time, Bob Davie stood on a practice field recently and watched another Notre Dame football season begin. For one brief series of moments on a sunny, breezy August morning, hope and possibility replaced the embarrassment and defensiveness that has characterized Notre Dame's long, hot summer.

The approaching season brings a set of questions that go beyond the response to a 7-6 year. How far can the effort of the Davie regime advance a program that remains a work in progress? How much will the fallout from the unfinished and unflattering business interfere with that push?

A dollar figure will establish the extent of the university's financial setback in the age-discrimination trial won by former assistant coach

Joe Moore. As unrelated as the two episodes may be to the challenging schedule that begins Sept. 5 against Michigan, administrators are prepared for a clear emotional link in the minds of the team's believers.

But as Davie paced to different parts of the practice field, examining a strong freshman class as upperclassmen strolling by to take a look, and remembered the apprehension of their first days here all those years ago.

"If we knew then what we know now," said Mike Rosenthal, a captain and senior offensive tackle, "we'd be a lot better off."

The expanded foundation of Davie's program consisted of children of the 1980s, many of whom had cried the night before when they said goodbye to their parents. Their names had not yet appeared on a depth chart. Their collective outlook toward the school reflected no disillusionment. Their reputations as Notre Dame athletes were untarnished. They had not lost a game. And their gold helmets were spotless.

This was something new. The freshman helmets last summer had a black stripe down the middle, a rite of passage that extended back to Lou Holtz's tenure and beyond. The thinking then was that the gold helmet had to be earned. Davie decided against issuing stripes after learning that they had created one more level of anxiety for his first recruiting class, with no clear criteria for removal.

"I've still got mine," Davie said as he sat on a golf cart on a nearly empty field after the first practice had ended.

He smiled, for the coach of the Fighting Irish, as much as anyone, understands that the criteria for a Notre Dame coach to gain acceptance are far more specific.

The standards that have made Notre Dame's enterprise so distinctive may never have faced a challenge as imposing as the current, cumulative damage to its image. Once university leadership determined that a proposed $1.3 million settlement in the Moore case was an untenable invitation to charges of a coverup, an institutional humiliation began to take shape.

"It's not like the Notre Dame football program is radically different than it was five, 10, 15, 20 years ago," said Rev. E. William Beauchamp, a university executive vice president who oversees the athletic department. "The policies that govern athletics at Notre Dame really haven't changed. ... I don't happen to think that anything that came up in the trial is a dramatic reflection on the integrity of the athletic program. There are some issues that needed to be addressed, and they have been addressed."

Michael Wadsworth, the athletic director and a former Irish player, was asked if the coaching staff faces a greater urgency to win in order to obscure the unfavorable publicity.

"I think it would be unfortunate if our staff felt a heightened pressure because of these events," he said. "This football staff did not cause any of what are the really unfortunate aspects of what is being talked about. These are stories that have a long tail on them, and predate this staff. The unfortunate part of this is they have walked into a situation that they have to contend with, but it was not their doing in any respect."

Wadsworth acknowledged a perception that separates this summer from previous controversies, the fact that many of the current issues were created not from external forces such as critical books or investigations at other schools, but from within.

"The matters that were internal don't exist anymore," Wadsworth said.

What appears from the outside as a protective little world, one that has provided comfort in times of crisis, can seem to some on the inside as a harsh place where young people must cope with overwhelming demands.

The strength of those ties could determine the future of the team and its coach.

Skillman and Smith will be tough for the Salukis, but she has confidence with Zimmerman and Starkweather's leadership ability.

"They're (Skillman and Smith) obviously irreplaceable, Daugherty said. "We can't replace them, but every team has a new personality, and every team has a different style of leadership."

"I expect that Jane Starkweather and Jamie Zimmerman are our two seniors, and so they're our captains. And I expect them to offer a different style of leadership than Jamie and Stacy. But nonetheless, I expect good positive leadership, and I'm not worried about that at all. I think they'll be good captains."

On the men's side, expectations aren't as high, but head coach Leroy Newton also returns a solid squad losing only one senior, John Raskie.

Newton is gearing toward a finish in the top half of the conference, but is not taking anything for granted because of the tough conference competition.

"I'd like to finish at least fourth," Newton said. "But that would be high expectations because (the MVC) is loaded this year with Wichita State, Drake, Northern Iowa and Southwest Missouri are all returning kids, and they beat us last year. But we're making strides toward catching them."

Newton is optimistic about the return of seniors Ryan Browning, Craig Castrale and Kory Neisen who all competed in the Illinois State Amateur golf match this summer.

Neisen was in the top 10 after the first two days of competition but had a poor outing the third day of competition and finished 23rd.

Newton has also been pleased by the improvement of junior Ryan Pickett.

"Ryan is starting to play a little better, he's starting to hit the ball," Newton said. "He didn't play very well at the end of last year, but he's starting to play."

"He played a lot this summer, and we're expecting a lot from him this year."

With a large group of returnees battling for top positions Newton is looking for a few golfers to step up and take charge.

"We have about eight or nine kids that can all shoot pretty close," Newton said.

"We hope that three or four of them step up and say that they want to be one, two, three and four, and nobody can take my place."

Golf team thinks repeat

BACK FOR MORE:

Head coach Diane Daugherty has high hopes for '98 season.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC women's golf team sets its seasonal goals at the beginning of every year.

Last year the goal was to win the Missouri Valley Conference Championships — a mission accomplished. This season they have yet to set a goal, but it appears head coach Diane Daugherty is assuming the same goal will be set come that first team meeting.

"We're coming off a very successful year because we won our conference championship, which was a goal we set from the first day of practice," Daugherty said. "We haven't set our goals this year, but I would say that my goal is to definitely repeat that."

Daugherty looks to the season with great hopes, considering the team lost only Stacy Skillman and Jamie Smith to graduation. However, Skillman did not travel far, as she will return as Daugherty's graduate assistant this season.

Daugherty expects a strong competitiveness among the team this season because of the solid depth.

Led by senior co-captains Jami

Zimmerman and Jane Starkweather, along with sophomores Elizabeth Uthoff and Jamie Schmidt, the Salukis should have a well-balanced nucleus to contend with.

"I'm very, very, very optimistic about this year's team because we have a good core group of returning letterman," Daugherty said.

"We have a lot more depth. I have 11 people on my roster, which is the largest team I've ever had, so I think qualifying is going to be very interesting. I'm as curious as anybody to see who's going to qualify (for meets)."

Daugherty said the loss of left for football. He quit the team last week because he simply didn't want to play anymore. Since the Jeff Skornia injury, Quarless has asked Lovelace to reconsider but got nothing in return.

Aside from Lovelace, Quarless has talked to two Division I-A transfers, but they too have been failed attempts. Under NCAA rules, a Division I-A college player can transfer to any Division I-AA, II or III school and compete during the season, as long as he hasn't attended classes.

"One couldn't make it into school because of the transfer rule, and the other one wants stay in the South, so we're keeping our eyes open," Quarless said.

Well, the football season opens Sept. 5, and regardless of the quarterback situation, Murray State University will be on the field.

The Salukis finished up the final day of three-a-day practices Saturday, and had their first season scrimmage Sunday.

During the scrimmage, Davis, a junior transfer from Kansas State University, solidified his starting position as tailback. Junior Karlton Carpenter had entered the year as the favorite after rushing for a team-high 676 yard last season.

The change marks the second consecutive year that Quarless has went with the No. 2 back. Last season, it was Carpenter leapfrogging over Coe Bonner, who ran for over 1,200 yards in 1996.

Quarless tried splitting time with Bonner and Carpenter last season, but he vows not to have the same problem in 1998.

"If (the season) started right now, No. 33 (Carpenter) would be running No. 2 and Paul Davis would be No. 1," Quarless said. "I told those two guys last year ... I'm not a 60-40 guy. If I'm No. 1, I've earned it, and I'm going to play 60 minutes."

Defensively, Quarless said senior Jean Baptiste has emerged as the vocal leader on the team. He said the unit held its own against the starting offense Sunday, but with nine new starters he is still optimistic.

"I think we saw maybe a little bit more aggressive defense," Quarless said. "We got some people going to the football. We pressured the offense ... so, I think we saw a step forward defensively."

"Again, I don't know what that's going to equate to when we play a real ball game because it's a bunch of new faces."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Martin replaces Manning as the Volunteers QB

If the weight of the world of No. 10 Tennessee has fallen on Tee Martin, it doesn't show. Martin succeeds former Volunteers' quarterback, Peyton Manning, and will step from the wings into the national spotlight against No. 17 Syracuse on Sept. 5.

So far, the expectations are sitting lightly on his sturdy shoulders. Replacing Manning, the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft and among the most popular and successful players in Volunteers history, is a tall order. Manning left the school as the leading passer in Southeastern Conference history with 11,201 yards.

Martin has played in only 10 games, completing 8 of 16 passes for 111 yards. Manning threw for 89 touchdowns. Martin has thrown for one. But his coaches and teammates say Martin, a third-year junior from Mobile, Ala., whose full first name is Tamaurica, has stepped confidently into the starting role since it became his in spring practice.

NFL

Agent says Levens and the Packers are closer to deal

Dorsey Levens' agent said the Green Bay Packers have upped their offer to an average of $5 million over five years, and he's optimistic the halfback's holdout could end soon.

Asked if the offer had opened the door to end the contentious stalemate, Hadley Engelhard said: "I hope so. We're definitely closer. I'm always confident."

Packers chief negotiator Mike Reinfeldt acknowledged Monday that the two sides had talked extensively last week, but declined to comment on whether the Packers had increased their offer or to characterize the progress of negotiations.

But Reinfeldt said at the team's exhibition game in Denver that both sides were put in a bad position because salaries skyrocketed this offseason when the team made Laven the franchise designation.

Levens was guaranteed a one-year, $2.742 million deal, the average of the five highest-paid running backs last year.

But Levens chose to sit out all of the team's offseason drills and training camp while seeking a deal averaging $5.5 million a year, about $1 million more than the Packers were offering.

Reinfeldt told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel that for the first time since the negotiations began in earnest the two sides had begun work on the structure of the contract.

Asked if he was optimistic like Engelhard that a deal could be completed, Reinfeldt said, "I'm optimistic if he's optimistic."

Backfield concerns coach

DEVIN MILLER/Daily Egyptian

THE MAN IN CHARGE: Saluki Football Coach Jan Quarless directs his players during practice Thursday at the practice fields near SIU Arena.

SIUC football finalizes coaching staff

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC football program will begin the 1998 season with three new additions to the coaching staff with intentions of improving on last year's 5-8 record.

Head coach Jan Quarless completed the staff by adding defensive line coach Craig Naivar, offensive line coach David Paffenroth and tight ends/assistant offensive line coach Jim Zebrowski. The additions increase the number of coaches from seven to 10 this year.

Naivar is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University. There, he played quarterback his freshman year, (1990) before switching over to the defensive backfield for his remaining three.

He was special teams captain in 1992 and defensive team captain in 1993. He earned academic all-conference status three years and played on conference championship teams in 1992 and 1993.

After graduation, Naivar became a graduate assistant at Hardin-Simmons for one season prior to being promoted to special teams coordinator in 1995. He then had a stint at the University of New Mexico in 1996 and 1997.

Paffenroth split time as a running back, along with playing on the defensive line and as a linebacker at Penn State University, in the early 1980s. He played on the 1982 national championship team, before moving on to a three-year career in the NFL as a linebacker with the Kansas City Chiefs (1983-85).

Paffenroth began coaching in 1992 as defensive line coach at William Jewell College and served his next four seasons as offensive coordinator at Missouri Western State College. Last season, he was in the same position (offensive coordinator) at West Texas A&M.

Zebrowski returns after serving as graduate assistant for the Salukis last season. He takes on the tight ends/assistant offensive line coach task this year.

He is a graduate of Mount Union College in Alliance, Ohio, where he lettered in football.

WORRYING: Quarless looks to come up with a backup plan in case of injury to starters.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
SPORTS EDITOR

The record for most carries in a season by a Saluki running back is 287. It was set in 1976.

Record holder Andre Herrera's mark might be in jeopardy in the unlikely event of an injury to starting senior quarterback Kent Skornia this season. And running backs Paul Davis and Bryan Nobertowicz could be in for an exhausting season.

SIUC football coach Jan Quarless has lost two backups: signal callers (freshmen Brock Lovelace and Jeff Skornia) in the last week, and is down to his last hopes. Only true freshmen Kevin Kobe and Tyler Paopao remain on the roster.

Quarless said in a press conference Tuesday in Room 125 of Lingle Hall that the quarterback loss could be a serious problem.

"It'll be hand-off, hand-off, hand-off," Quarless said if Skornia should go down. "We've got to develop a game plan that's going to protect (starting senior quarterback Kent) Skornia."

Kent's younger brother, Jeff, who has had four knee surgeries over the years, injured his left knee in a recent practice and his career is likely to be over. Quarless said Jeff Skornia has had injuries ranging from torn cartilage to a dislocated knee cap and torn ligaments.

"It's pretty much a bum knee," Quarless said. "That knee just doesn't have too much left to it."

Lovelace didn't have much love
