When Halley's hides it's hard to seek, prof says

Astronomy buffs shouldn't be surprised if Halley's Comet has been hard to find

That's according to Frank Sanders, associate professor in Sanders, associate professor in the Physics Department, who said he was barely able to see it recently with good binoculars, a detailed star chart, and knowing what to

"It's very faint and you must know exactly where to look for it," Sanders explained. "You need a star chart. If you don't know where to look, you'll miss Sa said the comet is nearly impossible to see because of its angle to the sun In March, it will display a telltale stream of dust across 10 to 15 degrees of the morning sky, a striking phenomenon when compared with the moon's space of one-half degree.

Halley's Comet is named after Edmund Halley, who, in 1682, calculated that the comet he saw was the same one that appeared in 1531 and 1607.

Its elongated orbit around the sun stretches as far as Neptune, and at its closest point, sneaks inside the earth's orbit, Sanders said.

The white tail is actually dust released when gases are heated as it nears the sun. In 1910, the last time the comet appeared, it passed within one million miles of earth and thrilled those who saw it, Sanders said.

But the tail won't seem as long this time. "It's just as spectacular this time, but we're in the wrong place," he

The Japanese, Soviets and some European countries will launch spacecraft to record data, but Sanders said that he didn't know what the specific mission of the crafts would be.

For viewers who want to see comet this week, it w the comet tins week, it will look like a tiny fuzzy light half-way up in the southern sky entering the constellation Aquarius. From about 8 to 9 p.m. is best. It will be visible until mid-January, when it travels too close to the sun.

A better time, he said, will be from early March to early April, when it will reappear and be most visible to the naked eye.

"It will be there, just as plain as the nose on your face," Sanders said.

From 4 to 5 a.m. will be the best viewing time. Find a place away from lights before the first rays of dawn appear, look in the southeastern sky and "you can't miss it."

The next appearance will be in the year 2060, but the comet will look about the same, he will fook about the same, he said.

That's because it is preserved from "appreciable loss" until it reaches Mars' orbit, when its gases begin to evaporate from the sun's heat.

University developing plans to handle predicted quake

SIU-C intends to airlift doctors and nurses from Springfield to campus if a disastrous earthquake hits the Carbondale area.

'If we had a 7.6 (Richter scale) earthquake, SIU-C would have to fend for itself because everybody else would be in the same boat," said John Hicks, University safety officer. "We would have to depend on the different departments and take care of our own.

An FEMA report estimates that a quake occurring during the day and registering 7.6 on the Richter scale would result in 74 deaths and leave another 290 people injured. Some 6,000 would be homeless.

The report also says that the largest amount of daytime casualties would be among students. Included in this category are primary schools, secondary schools and SIU-C.

In the past, SIU-C has had no plans for how it would cope with the problems an earthquake would create.

Program says AIDS cases in state increasing quickly

CHICAGO (UPI) — The number of reported AIDS cases in Illinois are growing at a rapid rate, prompting state health officials to call for preparatory measures. More than 350 cases in the state have been reported so far with 92 percent of those in the Chicago area. However, the number of cases is doubling every 10 months, said Carl Langkop, coordinator of the health department's Communicable Disease Program. With that rate, the number of cases in Illinois is expected to reach 19,000 in the next five years, Langkop said.

Airline talks unsuccessful; commercial service to end

Negotiations between the Southern Illinois Airport Authority and officials of Authority and officials of Trans World Express have "met with no success" and the airline, the only commercial airline now serving the air-port, will cease operations there on Dec. 13, an airport official said Sunday.

Airline officials on Thur-sday, in an unexpected move that left hundreds of ticket holders and travel agents scrambling to change holiday travel plans, announced the decision to stop serving the airport, citing low ridership and lack of community support for the move

In an effort to persuade the airline to remain at the air-port, Gary Shafer, the manager of the airport, met manager of the airport, there with TWE officials in St. Louis Friday and presented them with what Michael Griffin, director of marketing and sales of TWE, called a "very pice proposal." nice proposal

BUT IN a phone interview Sunday, Shafer said the talks "met with no success."
"We negotiated to the extent that we could," Shafer said, "but when we left the table their decision stood." their decision stood.

Shafer would not comment on the proposal offered to TWE, because he said the airport will be seeking other airlines to serve the airport and he is not certain what might be offered to any other interested parties. He would not say if there are any airlines under consideration.

Griffin declined to comment on the specific provisions of Shafer's offer, but he did say that it entailed a "tremendous reduction" in TWE's overall operating costs at the airport. However, he called it a "too little, too late situation"

"EVEN WITH the reductions, we're still not sure that we would get the support that we need," Griffin said. He said low ridership was the deciding factor in the decision

"It was a very hard decision to make," he said. "But we are in the business of making money, and it's hard to fly empty airnlance." empty airplanes empty airplanes."

Shafer agreed that ridership, which he said has been averaging about 700 passengers per month, has been lower than experienced in the past, but he blamed the decrease, in part, on a lack of advertising by TWE.

He said that the situation may have been different had may have been different had TWE, which was a joint venture between Trans World venture between Irans world Airlines and Resort Air, ad-vertised more after starting service from the Southern Illinois Airport to TWA's hub at St. Louis' Lambert Field four months ago. Before that time the airline had operated for two years under the name Resort Air and prior to that time Air Illinois served the airport.

AS FOR timing, Shafer said that there is "no good time" for an airline to stop service however, he said that with the decision coming so close to the holidays the problem is worse because of a greater demand for airline accommodations.

Griffin said that Ozark Midwest Air Lines' decision to begin serving Williamson County Airport or Dec. 15 did not have any effect on TWE's decision. He said the decision was under consideration before Ozark Midwest's announcement of its plans Nov. 5.

Despite the claim that the TWE move was being considered for some time, the decision came as a surprise to most employees. One TWE most employees. employee said that he first learned of the move when he read about the company's decision in the newspaper.

LOCAL TRAVEL agents who report having hundreds of clients who will be affected by the move, also were taken by surprise and are busy trying to reschedule ticket holders with Ozark Midwest and Britt Airways, which also operates out of Williamson County Airport.

Ozark and Britt will honor the TWE tickets at the purchase price under the same rule that requires airlines to honor tickets from their competitors when a carrier is grounded by mechical problems or striking employees. However, neither airline has announced any increase in the number of flights that will be offered during the holiday season honor tickets from their during the holiday season.

Travel still stalled at the talking stage

THE RECENT DONATION TO the University of a twin-engine airplane is welcomed news. The six-seat plane will likely be made available to faculty, students and staff for charter flights. which will help somewhat in making SIU-C a bit less isloated. But a six-seat plane is not enough. Transportation problems— from getting to and from the area as well as traveling locally— persist, despite a great deal of talk about improving the situation situation.

First, there is the problem of getting to and from the area quickly and inexpensively. The Southern Illinois Airport, the closest to the University, will have no airline serving it after Tran World Express ends its operations there on Dec. 13. The Williamson County Airport is serviced by Britt Airways, which will be joined by Ozark Air Lines Dec. 15, but the costs are rather high—the least expensive roundtrip fare to Chicago, for example, is $118—especially for students.

What's particularly disturbing about the airline situation is that there is a viable solution, at least in terms of helping students get to and from Chicago.

RON KELLY. DIRECTOR OF the SIU Air Institute and Service, has said that it would be possible to operate weekend charter flights to Chicago for about $60 to $70 roundtrip. But in order to do so, a student group, such as the USO, would have to take care of advertising, scheduling and other management responsibilities responsibilities.

Considering that one third of the student population here is from Chicago or its nearby suburbs, the benefits of better transportation to and from there would seem obvious, yet so far the idea has not gotten past the talking stage.

Closer to home is the problem of transportation around town. A bus system is the solution to this problem. Dave Madlener, city affairs commissioner for the USO, has been working with city officials to decide just how feasible a bus system would be and how it might be set up and operated most efficiently, but again, there has been little more than talk.

THE MOST RECENT SETBACK was the failure to have a feasibility study conducted by a marketing class. According to city officials, the class simply didn't have enough time to complete the study. But USO officials say that the class was delayed as a result of inaction on the part of the city.

Regardless of who is at fault, many students and other town residents without cars continue to have to find other ways to get around town, and those who do have cars continue to have to fight to find a place to park them.

No one expects a bus system or a charter air flight operation to be planned and in operation overnight. There are many questions that must be answered and problems to be worked out. Especially in the case of the bus line, which would likely have to be a cooperative venture between the University and the city, caution must be taken to ensure that both parties are satisfied with the outcome

But talking about doing something is not enough. Sure, it's a good to see that the involved parties are talking; that's better than nothing. But without any subsequent action, talk is cheap.

S. African racism supported by University's investments

As students here at SIU-C, e can note that this institution has funds invested in racist South Africa. This can be viewed as a big slap in the face to all of its black students. On one hand, the University claims that its black students claims that its black students are treated fairly, just as any other students. By the way, this is required by federal law. But on the other hand, it prefers to profit at the expense of blacks from Africa, which is of blacks from Africa, which is not barred by law. Black people, just as all other humans, no matter where they live, deserve the basic human rights as defined by the United

One would think that because this is an institution of higher education, it would not choose profit over human profit over Why wou over human would this rights University knowingly invest in racism? It takes a strange breed to oppress other humans. If one were to refer to recent history, it could be noted that Nazi Germany knowingly oppressed humans, specifically the Jewish people. Will it take laws by the United States government to prohibit investment in human oppression in South Africa by U.S. firms and institutions, just as laws had to be passed to allow blacks their civil rights in America? Is this what it takes to stop investment in a country that kills defenseless name of civilization and Christianity?

Why invest in a nation that legally splits apart black men

A EDITOR B LETTER C YOU

from their families because from their families because their forced cheap labor is needed for profit? Would this University invest in U.S. firms that would exploit the labor of its black student population if there were no laws to prevent this? Does this University even care about blacks? One might place much thought in this question; after all, the Black American Studies courses were dropped from the General Education Program

Let us review the facts. SIU-C, through the SIU Foundation, has knowingly invested funds in corporations that do business in racist South Africa business in racist South Africa over a period of two semesters and has profited. We as black students will not sit back and allow our funds, which are collected through state taxes, and gifts to be used to exploit the lives, land and labor of blacks in Africa for the profit of SIU-C. For the blacks in South Africa, theirs is a South Africa, theirs is struggle for the right to live. Peter D. Jordan, junior, Biological Sciences.

Increase security in dorm parking lots

There is a need for better parking lot security. There are many residents of University Park who are forced to park their vehicles in places where they do not want to. One of these places is parking lot No. 62, which is located south of Wright III past the tennis courts in a secluded wooded area that has no lighting.

Over the past several weeks many unsavory incidents have occurred, such as broken windows, stolen radios and attempted battery thefts. Vandalism runs rampant in parking lot No. 62 and there seems to be no concern on the part of the SIU security office. It has been our observation that the only time this lot is ever checked is for the purpose of writing parking tickets or for the officer to catch up on the news. With the amount of money spent to live in University Park, we should be able to leave our cars parked in a safe place. our cars parked in a safe place.

One possible deterrent would be to erect one or two streetlights along the southern edge of the parking lot and increase patrols by SIU Police during the night.

It any case some action needs to be taken before more damage occurs in parking lot No. 62. — Tim Allard, Animal Industries; Larry McElheny, Electrical Engineering.

Earthquake safety tips offered

The Federal Emergency Management Agency offers a brochure that gives safety tips for earthquakes. During an earthquake the agency advises

- First and foremost, stay calm. Think through the consequence of any action you calm.

 If you are inside, stay inside; if you are outdoors, stay there. During earthquakes, most injuries occur as people are entering or leaving buildings.

— If indoors, take cover under a heavy desk, table, bench, in a supported door-way, or along an inside wall. Stay away from glass. Don't use candles, matches, or other open flame either during or after the tremor because of possible gas leaks. Douse all fires.

If in a high-rise building, get under a desk or similar heavy furniture. Do not dash for exits, since stairways may be broken and jammed with eople. Never use elevators people. Never use ele because power may fail.

Rainbow's End Preschool currently meeting in Lakeland School at 925 S. Giant City Rd. may be out in the cold if the Board of Trustees does not approve a $3.25 student fee for it, says Evie Mylan, director of the preschool.

Lakeland School will begin holding all-day kindergarten classes in September 1986 and the preschool will be forced to find a new building. "This is find a new building. "This is the third site for Rainbow's End," Mylan said. "We just don't have anywhere to go."

Women want more viable state candidacies

(UPI) SPRINGFIELD "You've come a long way baby" the cigarette ad says of the difference between women of the early 1900s and today's

But if the outcome of women's efforts to gain recognition from party leaders as viable candidates for statewide office are any in-dication of how far women have come — they still have a long way to go.

Take for instance the recent stating essions by Democratic slating sessions by Democratic Party officials.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN insisted a member of their sex should be on the statewide ticket. But only one opening, for the position of secretary of state, existed.

News Analysis

When party leaders suggested the women get together behind one of their own for that post, the women cried foul and claimed the offer was being made as a taken greature because the men. token gesture because the men knew it would be impossible to beat incumbent Republican

"I think it is time that once in a while a male candidate of a while a male candidate defers to the presence of a powerful, knowledgeable, experienced woman candidate instead of always the other way around," Stern said.

BUT THE idea met with strong opposition from Don-newald, the main target of a switch, and many party of-ficials who are long-time friends of the treasurer. U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon said he would not back the slate if Don-newald wasn't on it. And an angry Senate President Philip Rock said dumping Donnewald Demonstratic Party bosses eventually shunned the efforts of some of the more vocal women and slated a woman who none of them had given much thought to for secretary of state. She is Aurelia Pucinski, daughter of well-known Chicago Alderman Roman Pucinski and a Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioner in Cook County.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN seem to have a little more luck, but still are having some problems gaining recognition from party leaders. State Sen. Adeline Geo-Karis Koehler, the only announced candidate, so far has received a luke-warm reception at best from party leaders who see her from party leaders who see her name at the top of the ticket spelling doom for all the Republican candidates. They seem bent on supporting anyone but Koehler and currently are counting on former U.S. Rep. Tom Cor-coran to bail them out of the

Donating toys can give kids 'magic,' coordinator says

By Mary Lung Staff Writer

"Every child has a right to be a child," says Edie Crane, co-chairperson of the annual "Christmas For Kids" toy

A belief that all children need to have fun and the desire to give needy children 'just a little bit of magic,'' Crane said, is what motivates her to participate in an annual drive that brings toys to children who might otherwise have none, even in this season of

"Christmas For Kids" is organized by the University Mall, The Southern Illinoisan Mall, The Southern Illinoisan, Harper Angel Flight and the Arnold Air Society in an effort to bring Christmas toys to needy Southern Illinois children. Area businesses and organizations such as the Golden Key Club from SIU-C, Carbondale Moose, Allen Industries, Norge, MCA, Tuck Tape, Ike Buick, Jim Pearl, Hardees and Walgreen's Restaurant are ail supporters of the drive, Crane said. Those groups along with private groups along with private individuals have donated time, toys and money to the drive, she said.

Both new and used toys are welcome, Crane said, and can be brought to the Christmas For Kids toy booth in the JC Penney corridor of University Mall before Dec. 15, the cut-off date for the drive. The donated toys are sorted into age concerning categories and then, if necessary, cleaned a mended before bei distributed at the Mall being Mall to needy families on December 18 and 19.

The drive tries to provide two or three toys per child, Crane says. Donations of toys for children in some age groups may be scarce, such as those in the 10-12 age group, but Crane said the donation booth can tell donors for which age group toys are needed.

In a letter to the city staff from project financial con-sultant Dan Harris, the project developers inform the city that developers inform the city that due to restrictions inherent to the use of revenue bonds and recent downward trends in conventional financing, the developers will seek alternate financing for the project.

The council will also consider the transference of $1.5 million in unused industrial revenue bonds to the Illinois revenue bonds to the Illinois Development Finance Authority. This move would allow other Illinois com-munities to take advantage of the unused Carbondale revenue bonds, which would expire after the first of the year.

The council will be requested by city staff to approve specifications for a revamped health insurance plan for city employees. Rising health insurance costs have forced

December 4, 1985

To All Graduate Assistants:

The provision of the U.S. Tax Code which currently allows the tax exempt status of tuition waivers granted to graduate assistants is scheduled to expire on December 31, 1985. If Congress does no enact new legislation, effective January 1, 1986, such tuition waivers will become liable to federal income tax.

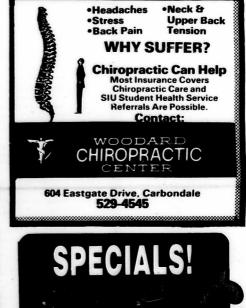

Various pieces of tax legislation are currently under consideration which, if passed, would extend the tax exclusion provision. However, predicting the course of such proposed legislation is impossible. Further, it seems unlikely that at this late date, that the entire legislative process could be completed by December 31: however, the legislation could be enacted thereafter and be retroactive to January 1. Therefore, we may not know the final result of this process for sometime yet.

In the meantime, the Graduate School and other involved offices on campus will be closely monitoring the situation and the Graduate School will do everything in its power to continue the tax exempt status of graduate assistant tuition waivers. However, since we cannot guarantee the continued tax exempt status of graduate assistant tuition waivers, graduate assistants should be alert to the possibility that these waivers may be tax libible as of January 1 1086.

Graduate assistants and others concerned about the potential negative impact if this tax exempt provision is allowed to expire, may want to communicate their concerns to their U.S. Representative and senators.

Foundation tops goal of telefund

By Alan Richter

The SIU Foundation's Fall Telefund collected a record amount of $103,526, which makes everybody at the foundation "really happy," says Thomas A. Bila, director of the annual telefund.

This year's total showed a 50.8 percent increase over last year's and topped the foun-dation's goal by $3,526, Bila said. The College of Business and Administration pulled in the most money — $28,973 — during the 48-night coast-to-coast effort The School of Law raised the most in one night with a $7,255 total. Both are telefund records.

Rila credits the success to the 853 student and faculty volunteers, fewer technical problems with the telephones and better alumni data.

U.S., Soviets may join forces against terrorism

United States and the Soviet Union are expected to ex-change letters pledging joint action against international terrorism, the Sunday Times

"Secret talks have been going on between the two countries for the past month and an exchange of letters pledging action against kid-napping and hijacking is ex-pected before Christmas, the newspaper said.

QUOTING SOURCES close to the negotiations, the Sunday Times said a superpower agreement on cooperation crises would be followed by a U.N. resolution condemning international terrorism, which Moscow is likely to support.

"The agreement will mark a significant advance in the fight against terrorism," the newspaper said. "In the past, the Soviet Union has refused to cooperate in combating terrorism, in part because the Eastern bloc suffered less from terrorism and in part because the Russians see such groups as legitimate revolutionaries."

DIPLOMATS RECALLED cooperation increased when four Soviet diplomats were kidnapped recommendations. kidnapped recently in Beirut.

One of the envoys was killed and the three others were released after weeks of captivity

"While the exchange of letters and a U.N. vote will not seriously undermine the ability of the terrorists to operate, it is hoped that the agreement will provide a basis on which to discuss more concrete matters such as sharing intelligence and depriving terrorists of arms supplies and training facilities," the newspaper

IN WASHINGTON, a State Department spokeswoman said she was unaware of the reported agreement.

spokesman for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Sunday that Britain would welcome such an initiative prime minister has gone on the record a number of times as saying better in-ternational cooperation is needed to combat in-ternational terrorism. This sort of thing falls well into that kind of thinking," the spokesman said

THE SUNDAY Times also reported that Britain was considering easing its ex-tradition laws to prevent the country from becoming a country from becoming a haven for terrorists. In a television interview

Sunday, Home Douglas Hurd said Britain must be tougher on people entering the country after a serious crime at

"THERE IS a real problem "THERE IS a real problem here ... it's difficult for friendly foreign democratic governments to get back into their own jurisdiction people who have really committed quite serious crimes, including even crimes approaching terrorism," Hurd said. "And because of that it is very difficult for us to get back people we want. There is a serious case for this," he said, adding any changes must be approved by Parliament.

secretary pushes for tax reform Treasury

Treasury Secretary James Baker said Sunday that tax reform is at a now-or-never crossroads and called for the House to send a tax code overhaul to the Senate where Republican forces can "fix it

But House GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois said he is not so sure the Republican-controlled Senate republican-controlled senate could avoid using the bill to boost taxes, and asserted President Reagan still has three years to reach his goal of substantially rewriting the nation's tax laws.

MICHEL ALSO suggested Reagan and his top aides erred by biting off more than they could chew rather than focusing on key areas of the tax code for reform.

Puzzle answers

Baker, Michel and House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., appeared separately on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" to preview the House debate set this week on the tax overhaul plan approved by Rostenkowski's panel and a GOP alternative.

Reagan, who has promoted tax reform as his top domestic priority, has avoided taking a firm stand on either proposal, making only a simple declaration he wants to keep reform "process moving.

BAKER SAID, "The president feels it would be fine if the Republican alternative But if it doesn't I think he would like to see Republicans vote for the Ways and Means Committee

The GOP plan is given no chance of passing the House, where Democrats have a strong majority.

"There is no alternative to "Inere is no alternative to moving something through the House if we're going to get tax reform during the Reagan presidency," Baker said. "And we can either fix it up in the Senate or the president doesn't have to sign it" have to sign it

ROSTENKOWSKI ACKN-OWLEDGED his committee's measure involves compromises, but explained, "I'm a negotiator," and said the GOP version is "a very political document," tailored to pick up votes.

Key among objections to the committee bill is its treatment of business, which supply-side conomic advocates say development. Its threatens basic tax rates are close to what Reagan proposed, but it retains the full deduction for state and local taxes, which the president wanted to wipe MICHEL, WHO said he could not support the Democrats' bill, said failure to send the issue to the Senate this year "doesn't mean that it's killed forever. The president's still got ... a good three years in his administration. ... In my view, initially it was taking too big a bite out of the apple to get bite out of the apple to get where we wanted to be.

"I didn't know that we needed to make it that comprehensive prehensive ... trying to do everything, which set up the situation where we had all this bargaining and giving and

BAKER DISAGREED, saying the Ways and Means panel had done monumental work that left "an awful lot of blood on the floor."

"It's a non-starter to think you're going to visit tax reform again. ... To walk away from it now would be a major, major mistake. And the president simply isn't going to do that."

Asked if it were now or never for tax reform, Baker replied, "I think that's correct as far as the Reagan presidency is concerned."

But Michel cautioned, "We ought not to be so sure that the Senate is going to give president what he wants."

For the Rams, 9-4, to win running back Eric Dickerson will have to chase away his season-long blues and return to the form that made him the NFL's all-time single season rushing leader in 1984.

rushing leader in 1984.
Dickerson, an early-season holdout, has rushed for just 915 yards on 231 carries this year.
Last year, he had already accumulated 1,643 yards after 13 games.

However, despite his slow start, the 49ers' defense knows it has to stop Dickerson if San Francisco is to win.

"Eric Dickerson is the man," said safety Carlton Williamson. "He's always a challenge. We can't afford to let him bust through to our

The game boils down to the championship of the NFC Western Division, a title owned by San Francisco the last two years. The Rams currently have a one-game lead over the 49ers and with a victory would go two games up with two games remaining in the

If San Francisco wins, the 49ers would be tied with the Rams at 10-5 but own the advantage in the tiebreaker with two victories over Los Angeles this year. Of greater importance, the loss would likely deal a fatal blow to the Rams' confidence. Los Angeles has lost four of its last six games.

Although the Saluki men Although the Saluki men cagers will be huge underdogs when they battle the Purdue Boilermakers at 7:35 p.m. Monday at the Arena, they have a few things in their favor.

One, the 5-2 Boilermakers, ranked 25th in the nation by The Sporting News, are a bit ruffled after their last two games. Shooting only 35 percent from the field, they were drubbed in Saturday's 77-58 loss to 16th-ranked Louisville.

Purdue even had their troubles in an 81-71 victory over lowly Morehead State, who prevailed by a field goal over the Salukis Wednesday.

Two, the Boilermakers may be fatigued, as SIU-C's game

Third, the Salukis are undefeated at home in three games against Big Ten teams, 4-11 overall. The statistic may be a little misleading, as those victories came in the basketball program's more prosperous years in the early 1970s. But it does indicate the Dogs' strong home court advantage.

Even with those strikes against them, Purdue remains an explosive and enormously talented team, and Saluki

Women cagers fall to WK, rebound against Ball State

After the game, junior floor general Clemette Haskins said Toppers' coach Paul San-derford tells them to set sights on the opening five minutes of the final period.

"We felt we had to put them away early, so we came out with a lot of intensity," Haskins said.

They often made it look easy: Haskins to Mason, Mason score. An awesome 12 of 14 from the field and 4 of 5 from the free-throw line gave Mason game-high honors with 28, and she played in just half the game. Long bomber Kami Thomas silenced the crowd many times, as she tallied 14 points. Haskins added 12, and while there were no other Toppers in double figures, every single one of them scored.

Perhaps the only consolation for the Salukis' first stomping in three years, came from Sanderford after the game.
