Board seeks to limit abortion costs

By Katie Morrison
Health Writer

A Chicago doctor's $3,500 to $4,000 charge for a first-trimester abortion exploits students during the traumatic experience, which normally costs about $360, SIUC officials say.

"This unscrupulous health-care provider is taking advantage of people at a vulnerable time," Mark Temple, Graduate and Professional Student Council representative to the Student Health Advisory Board, said.

The health-care provider, who University officials declined to name, has a private practice in the Chicago suburbs and apparently is not doing any special procedures to warrant the high cost of the abortions, Temple said.

Because of the high fees, the board wants to put a cap on claims made for abortions, Temple said.

In November, the council proposed a $500 cap for first-trimester abortions and $700 for second-trimester to SIUC Health Service, Council President Susan Hall said.

The only other caps under SIUC's plan cover specialty care, Jake Baggott, SIUC's health center administrator, said.

The inflated cost of the Chicago practitioner, which spurred the debate for a cap, is much higher than area clinics, Hall said.

Clinics in Granite City and St. Louis charge the average rate for first-trimester abortions, Hall said.

Temple said he did not know why students choose the Chicago doctor over area clinics that charge less for the same procedure.

"The service may be incredible, but it is the same procedure," he said.

Without caps, there is a future risk that Acordia Collegiate Benefits, SIUC's insurance carrier, will increase premiums, Hall said.

Presently, increases are not a problem because there have not been many insurance claims for abortions, Baggott said.

"In the long run a cap will contribute to controlling premiums," Baggott said.

Three claims from this clinic have been submitted to Acordia this semester, Temple said.

"As of this year, SIUC students are covered for abortions up to 80 percent. The private practice in Chicago could increase the cost for the procedure because abortions are covered under the University's policy, Baggott said.

"This health-care provider probably looked at our brochure and became aware that there were no caps on it (abortion cost)," he said.

Baggott said it is not illegal for doctors to increase care cost because they act as a business in that they take advantage of insurance benefits.

Although the Chicago doctor charges 10 times the average rate, Fair Trade laws bar the SIUC Health Service from telling students which health-care providers to go to, Hall said.

Abuse case lands priest behind bars

The Washington Post

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. — James R. Porter, the former Roman Catholic priest who admitted sexually assaulting dozens of children while serving as a parish priest three decades ago, was sentenced Monday to 18 to 20 years in prison after an outpouring of emotion from his victims.

A tearful Porter, 58, was led from Bristol County Superior Court in handcuffs to begin serving a term that many victims complained was too lenient in light of his sexual rampage in clerical garb and the pain he caused so many trusting youngsters.

The sentencing ended an extraordinary case of pedophilia that became known only through the determination of the victims to press charges.

Porter's crimes are part of a wave of sexual abuse cases that have been brought against the U.S. Roman Catholic Church and have cost millions of dollars in legal settlements and even jeopardized some dioceses' insurance.

In court Monday, the issues became personal and specific as Porter's accusers, denied a trial because he pleaded guilty in October to 41 criminal counts, took advantage of a state law that allows crime victims to address judges just before sentencing.

Now in their late 30s and 40s, many victims described failing when they tried to raise families because of repressed memories of abuse and feelings of guilt, shame and rage.

Mourners gather for fire remembrance

Search for arsonist continues, students still grieve 5 deaths

By Sean L. N. Hao
International Writer

A tense moment of silence was broken Monday only by occasional quiet sobs as friends and relatives clung together for support.

About 70 people gathered in the Student Center Auditorium for a memorial service in remembrance of the five international students lost one year ago in the Pyramids apartments fire.

The Dec. 6 arson at 506 S. Rawlings St. left more than 30 international students homeless and three students seriously injured after flames forced some tenants to jump from third-story windows to the concrete below.

Harvey Welch, SIUC vice president of student affairs, told the audience of about 70 that the world suffered a great loss with the death of the five students.

"The Pyramids fire caused many of us to work very closely together," he said. "Let us take this opportunity to make a commitment to make this a better place to study, work and live."

The five students claimed in the fire were Cheek Teck Wong, 23 and Mazlina Ab Wahid, 28, both of Malaysia; Ronald A. Moy, 23, of Chicago; Kimoko Ajoka, 25, of Japan; and Lai Hung Tam, 23, of Hong Kong.

Wan Kamal Wan Napi, vice president for internal affairs for the International Student Council, was a friend of fellow Malaysian Ab Wahid, and spoke of her during the brief ceremony.

"Mazlina asked me how she could make friends when she got here and I told her to join ISC and become a member," he said. "Since then she was very happy, she helped ISC out with everything — let me this was very rewarding."

Napi, who helped Ab Wahid find a residence in Carbondale, said he still questions her move into the Pyramids apartments complex a few months later.

"I don't understand why did she have to move to the Pyramids apartments," he said.

Council president John Abolaji said parents and friends of the victims are still grieving over the deaths as though the fire happened yesterday.

"The only thing that can ease their pain is to uncover the culprit behind the fire," he said. "He or she lives among us in this community and at least one person should have some information about this."

Election makes SIUC center of attention

By Emily Priddy
Politics Writer

SIUC may play a significant role in the 1994 election as candidates for 115th district representative address education funding issues, State Rep. Gerald Hawkins, D-Du Quoin, said.

"With the (Illinois) Board of Higher Education making cuts, it's going to be a fight to maintain the current budget at SIUC, and I think I have the legislative skills to do that," Hawkins said.

Republican Mike Bost, who is seeking the Illinois House seat Hawkins currently occupies, said he commissioned a poll three months ago to learn voters' opinions on key issues.

Bost said the poll found that education, economic development and waste in government, which were major issues during the 1992 election, are still concerns in the district.

Recent incidents involving guns in schools and drug abuse have brought crime to the forefront as well, Bost said.

"Things like this have caused people's concern to really rise in these (crime-related) issues," he said.

Hawkins said because SIUC is the largest employer in Southern Illinois, funding for the University is significant both educationally and economically.

"We have to fight to maintain that employment level and increase it," he said.

Post said he decided to run against Hawkins again because the 1992 race was very close.

CULTURE MORE DURABLE THAN ESCOBAR — While the death of drug baron Pablo Escobar eliminates the spectacular symbol of Colombia's narco-terrorism, it is unlikely to diminish the tradition of wholesale homicide ingrained in this nation. Escobar was gunned down in a shootout with police last Thursday. Sociologists and politicians said his brand of narco-terrorism was only the latest manifestation of a subculture of violence that has long flourished here, especially in rural areas.

SEARCH FOR SCROLLS ANGERS SCHOLARS — Israeli archaeologists have launched a controversial search for antiquities in the cliffs of the Judean wilderness near Jericho on the eve of Israel's military withdrawal from the area. Archaeologists have been scouring the mountain recesses where the Dead Sea Scrolls were first discovered. Palestinians charge that the excavations are a last-minute effort to seize ancient artifacts before the region is turned over to Palestinian self-rule.

DEAL SETS TERMS FOR ASBESTOS CLAIMS — A 30-second commercial announced that a class action settlement is pending in federal court involving people exposed at work to asbestos. Manufacturers and lawyers have agreed to a $1 billion settlement to pay off about 100,000 asbestos claims over the next decade. The agreement sets up an out-of-court system that ensures awards to many victims, but caps those awards and sets out strict medical standards on who will qualify.

ABUSES BY STOCKBROKERS DRAW SCRUTINY — The stock market's long upward climb through most of the 1980s, and again since the 1987 crash, has been very good to a lot of investors. But amid their gains have come a growing number of complaints about stockbrokers. It is a longtime problem that has provoked complaints in the past and has led the Securities and Exchange Commission to levy more than $1 billion in penalties against major firms in the past five years.

CONSTRUCTION DRAWS EQUALITY CRITICISM — Come and take a tour of two courthouses. Both are being built by the federal government in the Washington suburbs, less than 20 miles apart. Both are dedicated to the principles of justice and equality. But these courthouses are anything but equal. One, in Greenbelt, Md., will have seven judges and one courtroom for each. The other, in Alexandria, Va. also will have seven judges, but will have twice as many courtrooms.

ACTIVISTS CHARGED WITH RACKETEERING — On Wednesday, justices will hear arguments in a case brought by NOW against antiabortion activists. It was filed on behalf of clinics nationwide. NOW has tried to invoke the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) as part of ongoing efforts to find avenues of redress against abortion protesters. Last term, the justices ruled that a post-Civil War era law could not be used against people who blockade clinics.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT REPAIR DELAYED — It was to be one of the most extensive face lifts of the Washington Monument grounds since the marble obelisk was completed in 1884. But the National Park Service's ambitious plan is languishing because Congress has not appropriated the initial $3.1 million needed to get the project going. Park Service spokeswoman Sandra Alley said agency officials have asked a House subcommittee for permission to proceed with the project but have so far been turned down each time.

WILLIAMSON COUNTY CRIME RATE RISES — Although the crime rate in Illinois decreased in 1992 from the previous year, crime in Williamson County did not, according to figures released by the U.S. Bureau of the Census. The Total Crime Index for the county increased in 1992 from 1,988 in 1991 to 2,075, an increase of 4.4 percent per a population of 100,000, the bureau report says, which was released Sunday. Murders reported in the county increased by 50 percent.

Application for aid made faster, easier

By Troy Schultz
General Assignment Writer

More than 21,000 SIUC financial-aid recipients will find a nice surprise in the mail this month to make applying for assistance easier, faster, and less error-prone next year.

The U.S. Department of Education is offering a financial aid renewal application that will replace the former process that required students to complete a blank application form every year.

The new form is a pre-printed application based on financial aid information from the 1993-94 school year. Students apply for financial aid simply by updating any information that has changed from the previous year.

Information on the form is used to determine eligibility for the various financial aid available, such as the Federal Pell Grant, the largest program providing assistance to needy undergraduates; the Monetary Award Program, offered by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission; and the largest need-based student loan program, the Federal Stafford loan.

The renewal form resembles the Student Aid Report, but will be printed on white paper.

Pamela Britton, director of SIUC's Financial Aid Office, said students should not confuse the two forms.

"The form you receive might relate to this year's aid," she said.

The department will mail renewal forms to students' addresses listed on 1993-94 financial aid applications.

Britton said students who do not receive the form by mail can pick up the regular Free Application for Federal Student Aid in the financial aid office.

Restaurant with political orientation to open soon

By Jeff McIntire
Business Writer

While many people are preparing to make new year's resolutions, a local businessman's goal is to open a politically-oriented restaurant to offer more fine dining in the area.

Politics Restaurant and Night Club, 1325 E. Main near the University Mall, is scheduled to open Jan. 3, bringing a unique atmosphere to Southern Illinois.

The establishment will be decorated with autographed pictures of U.S. senators, representatives and former vice presidents, and also will include election memorabilia, assistant manager Elizabeth Krueger said.

The upscale restaurant will feature a variety of entrees, including steak and seafood, poultry, veal and pork, Krueger said.

The restaurant, which is the only one of its kind, originally was based in Washington, D.C. and run by president Zane Wilson.

Krueger said Wilson sold the Washington establishment and moved to Southern Illinois this year to be closer to his family.

The restaurant will feature piano music daily except Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. to give a lounge-type atmosphere, and will bring in bands from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. for a nightclub atmosphere, she said.

She said some of the bands will be local, and some will be from other areas. They will feature a variety of music, such as country, blues and jazz.

"We're just going to be providing a fine-dining atmosphere that I feel is desperately needed in the area," she said.

SIUC microbiology professor John Martinko agreed that there are few full-service restaurants in the area.

"I would go there, because it's reasonably priced and has a lot of variety for a Southern Illinois restaurant," he said. "It has probably the most complete menu I've seen down here."

Men face prison after guilty plea

By Dean Weaver
Police Writer

Two Jackson County men face prison terms after pleading guilty to sexual-assault charges Friday.

Eugene Booker, 24, of Murphysboro, pleaded guilty to aggravated criminal sexual assault and was sentenced to nine years in the Illinois Department of Corrections.

Booker was accused of robbing and raping a Murphysboro woman at knifepoint Aug. 20. Amanda Robertson, assistant Jackson County state's attorney, said.

Robertson said Booker fled from the crime but was apprehended by the Carbondale Police Department Sept. 5 in Carbondale.

In a separate case, Ralf Thomas, 36, pleaded guilty to criminal sexual assault and was sentenced to four years in the Illinois Department of Corrections. He was charged with having sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old female in June.

Thomas was charged on Sept. 1 after he confessed to the Jackson County Sheriff's Department, Robertson said.

Both men entered negotiated pleas to avoid a jury trial this week. The nego. ad. pleas were agreed upon by the state and defense attorneys, she said.

Robertson said some of the charges against both men were dropped in the negotiated pleas, but they still were substantial convictions.

University study making progress in diagnosing learning disabilities

By Colleen Oller
Student Writer

The SIUC Psychology Department has made headway in developing a technique to identify learning disabilities at birth.

Dennis Molfese, SIUC professor of psychology, leads a study that measures infants' brain waves to determine children's future IQ score, and identify learning problems.

"If we can identify the problem, we will be able to intervene and maybe save the child from problems early on in school — and from being labeled 'learning disabled,'" Molfese said.

The study involves 250 Southern Illinois children. The tests were performed at birth and every year thereafter.

The lab in the Life Science II building gives the feeling of a pediatrician's office, with stuffed animals and various mobiles to entertain the children.

The child sits in a recliner with monitors attached to their heads. The monitors help determine the children's ability to discriminate speech sounds.

The monitors are plugged into an amplifier that converts brainwaves into numbers, which are logged into a computer and form an early studied graph, Molfese said.

The older children are involved in behavioral testing which studies their ability to identify misspelled and nonsense words.

The testing takes about two hours, and the results are analyzed for 15-20 hours with the help of 18 graduate and undergraduate students.

The results are divided into three categories, according to IQ level. An IQ of 116 and higher is considered above average, 98-116 is considered average, and 98 and lower is considered below average. Of the last 79 children tested, only four wrongly were classified.

Molfese received a 10-year grant from the National Institute of Health and is now in his eighth year of studying children to detect learning disabilities.

"If all goes well I would like to see this become a national screen-test for all newborn babies," Molfese said.

With only two more years of grant money left, Molfese hopes to receive a grant from the KeJogg Foundation to help develop intervention techniques once a learning disability is found.

City should be proud of support for victims

ONE YEAR HAS PASSED SINCE THE TRAGIC event that claimed the lives of five SIUC students, but the memories of the Pyramid Apartment's fire have not vanished. The occurrence brought together the community and the University, and encouraged them to reach out to the students who were away from their homes and families. Although the basements of local churches, once filled with donated clothes and supplies for the victims, are stocked with toys for needy children this year, citizens have continued to lend their support.

In the time since the fire Carbondale has taken steps to prevent a similar disaster from happening again. Students have been given more detail instruction from fire and police officials on safety devices to look for when renting. Landlords have been encouraged to step up the installation of fire alarms and extinguishers and to keep them up-to-date. The city also has adopted a mandatory licensing policy that will enable inspectors to make certain rental dwellings are maintained and safe.

It is unfortunate that it took such a tragedy to prompt the community to be more aware of the importance of fire prevention. Still those who have given their time and energy to helping the students who suffered severe emotional and physical injuries get back on their feet should be commended. Donations and fund-raising activities have not gone unnoticed.

AS THE STUDENTS OF SIUC GATHERED Monday to remember those who were lost, they undoubtedly were thankful for each other and the progress they have made since the event. The search for the arsonist responsible for the fire goes on, and police have proven their dedication to bringing the guilty party to justice through their endless investigation. However, the one thing the police cannot put and end to is the feeling by many students that the crime was racially motivated.

Numerous students have expressed their fears about racial hate crimes in recent months, both on SIUC's campus and on a national level. The loss of life because of a tremendous embodiment of hate is not only inexcusable, but also is a sign of how far society has to go to end prejudice. Proving the fire was started because of racial hatred is not possible until the responsible party is located. Until that time the international student population will continue to wonder why someone engages in such a heinous crime.

THE IMPORTANCE OF UNDERSTANDING THE fears embraced by those students who still feel threatened because of a possible connection between the fire and racial tension cannot be stressed enough. Once society begins to understand the distress caused by angry words, some progress can be made toward stopping the hate. The dedication demonstrated by the citizens of Carbondale is a step in the right direction.

The assistance given to the students involved in the fire allowed the victims to feel they were not alone in their time of need. Society on a national level could learn a lot from these concerned citizens. Anyone can step back and say how terrible it was that five students lost their lives, but it takes more than just a detached observation to make a difference.

The willingness to become involved in a situation not directly affecting one's family members is no longer as common in the United States as it was at one time. The steps taken by the churches, student organizations, members of the community and volunteers from elsewhere to make Carbondale a safer place to live have helped the Pyramid fire victims get on with their lives. As time goes on school and work routines will return to normal for most touched by the fire, but those whose lives were lost will never be forgotten.

Conservative defends views on homeless

According to SIUC's Liberal Elite, contemporary Conservatism hung the homeless out to dry, despite increases in shelter beds from 78,000 in 1980 to 275,000 in 1990.

And the number of homeless in about 600,000; vice 3 million previously claimed. (Urban Institute/Time Magazine, April 6, 1992).

I can see why this is a touchy subject for some people.

They must either admit they're inventing a crisis, or that the number of homeless decreased by 2.5 million during the 80's.

We've read that Conservatives carry a cold-hearted "I've got mine, screw them" attitude.

Surprisingly, they forgot to mention that we're all wife-beating, child-abusing, cross burning, "Boys from Brazil" who walk up to homeless and ask "Got change for a hundred?" before putting a boot through his eye. Then we all laugh.

No one is saying "Don't help these people."

We're pointing out that simply shotgunning cash around never solved anything.

Just because I won't give you cash to burn in your fireplace does not mean I hop you freeze.

The idea that Conservatives don't care only exists in little minds with stereotypical views.

If saying "Here's how to eat from dumpsters, you'll never amount to anything unless government does

Caldwell apologizes to those he offended

I would like to apologize to anyone that I may have offended by my letter on the homeless. However, this doesn't change my views on the subject.

I applaud the efforts of organizations which are truly interested in helping the homeless.

It wasn't my intent to lump all homeless organizations into one category.

However I take issue with anyone who blames this problem on Ronald Reagan.

Homelessness was one of many social problems which Johnson's "Great Society" was supposed to cure.

For anyone who wishes to look it up, the nation has spent three times the tax money on social programs than on defense since 1965.

If you remember the riots in L.A., you know what we have to show for it.

Liberals want to make the homeless into wards of the state as they have done with welfare and other entitlement recipients.

To expand their power base, liberals must make as many people dependent on government as possible.

The solutions to our problems lie not in government but in ourselves and the traditions that have made this nation great such as family values, personal responsibility, individual freedom and hard work.

We must teach people to take responsibility for their own lives. What we must do is find a way to empower people to help themselves.

We mustn't give people handouts. People should earn their own livelihoods. Earning things gives people self-esteem and fosters independence.

Conservatives like Ronald Reagan, Jack Kemp, and William Bennett understand that compassion isn't giving someone a handout.

They know, just as I do that the greatest act of compassion which anyone can show for anyone else who is down is to help them help themselves.

—Michael Caldwell, senior, geography everything for you" is more compassionate than "Here's how to fish, now you have food and self-esteem," then I'm not cold, I'm the Ice Man.

Given the grading criteria, I claim that title with pride.

Years ago my parents would help me to do my homework, but they never did it for me.

Because having too much

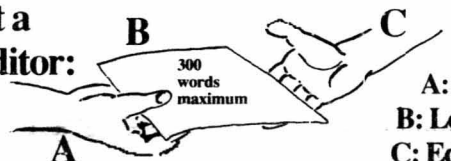

"help" zeroes motivation confidence, and eventually self-esteem.

If I take the concepts "teaching people how to fish" and "self dependence" to destitute Americans, I'm cold hearted.

If I take it to poor, Third World countries I'm in the Peace Corps. Go Figure.

Clinton Christmas is feline's dream

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The bounds of Christmases past would find this year's White House a real cat-astrophe.

Christmas Clinton style was unveiled Monday, and anybody who remembers when the White House went to the dogs during the holiday season can rest assured that times have changed.

This year it's the cat's meow, in original American crafts made by artisans from all over the country.

main concern is students are paying $700 of their own money to cover costs because of the astronomical increase, Temple said.

"Students are paying more out-of-pocket than what the average going rate is," Temple said.

"They could be paying only $60 to $70."

The dilemma Health Service

faces is providing quality care for students seeking abortions, but also keeping premiums low for the entire student population, Temple said.

"We don't want to take away students' opportunity to choose their health-care provider, but we have to have a plan that is fair to all of us," Temple said.

"Let's work together to solve this mystery and put this all behind us."

The Carbondale Police Department is continuing investigation of the matter and is offering a $25,000 reward for information leading to a conviction.

Innocent Mau, a friend of Wong from Malaysia, encouraged others not to forget about the past but to move forward with their lives.

"Check always said 'Don't look behind, but look forward to the future,'" he said.

"I ran last time and came within less than 4,000 votes. It came that close, and after looking things over — weighing things out — I felt it was necessary to give it a shot," he said.

Hawkins said he plans to improve Southern Illinois' job outlook if he is re-elected.

"We have to work to try to attract many jobs that are high-paying jobs to the region," he said.

"I want to expand on the (proposed) Kinkaid Lake (resort complex) project. Tourism in Southern Illinois is a growth area."

Bost said although he does not intend to bring it into his campaign against the incumbent, Hawkins' involvement in a traffic violation earlier this fall could affect the election.

"I think that's something Mr. Hawkins is going to have to deal with," Bost said. "I'm going to focus on the things he's voted for, hasn't voted for and his actions while being a state representative — I've never been a muddlinger."

Hawkins said the incident should have little impact on the election.

"I think that people are going to judge me on my total record, not just one incident," Hawkins said.

"I've only been in office 10 months, and I've got a long list of things I've accomplished in those 10 short months."

Williamson County defies decrease in Illinois crimes

American News Service

Although the crime rate in Illinois decreased in 1992 from the previous year, crime in Williamson County did not, according to figures released by the U.S. Bureau of the Census.

The Total Crime Index for the county increased in 1992 from 1,988 in 1991 to 2,075, an increase of 4.4 percent per a population of 100,000, the bureau report says, which was released Sunday.

Murders reported in the county increased by 50 percent, though the actual number of murders reported in 1992 totalled three. There were two murders reported in 1991.

Crimes of criminal sexual assault dropped by 4.8 percent, from 21 in 1991 to 20 in 1992; robberies increased by 57.1 percent from 21 in 1991 to 33 in 1992; aggravated assaults and batteries showed the largest decrease in crimes committed with 90 in 1991 and 78 in 1992, a difference of 13.3 percent.

Other increases included burglaries with a 4.3 percent climb from 491 in 1991 to 512 in 1992; thefts increased by 3.8 percent from 1,255 in 1991 to 1,303 in 1992; motor vehicle thefts increased by 16.5 percent from 97 in 1991 to 113 in 1992, and arsons increased by 18.2 from 11 in 1991 to 13 in 1992.

According to the report's figures, crimes in the unincorporated areas of the county dropped overall, as the sheriff's department handled fewer crimes in 1992 than it did in 1991 by 4.4 percent, from 540 to 516.

Showing declines were criminal sexual assaults by 15.4 percent from 13 to 11; aggravated assault and battery by 25 percent from 44 to 33; burglaries by 9.6 percent from 157 to 142, and motor vehicle thefts by 2.5 percent from 40 to 39.

Murder increased by 100 percent from one to two; arson by 40 percent from five to seven, and theft by 0.7 percent from 274 to 276. There was no change in robberies reported, six each year.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Alan Ozment attributes a neighborhood watch program initiated by the sheriff's department which has grown to include over 2,000 family household participants in the rural section of the county.

The Marion Police Department grew busier in 1992 with a crime rate increase of 21 percent from 821 to 993, figures also based on a population per 100,000.

Ensemble to perform songs written specifically for guitar

By Bill Kugelberg
Entertainment Editor

Fifteen SIUC music students will perform in a guitar ensemble tonight at the Old Baptist Foundation auditorium, playing songs one music school professor says were written specifically for this type of concert.

"This concert will allow the students to play music which was transcribed or written specifically for guitar ensembles," Joseph Breznikar, the director of the ensemble, said.

Breznikar, who has been an SIUC music professor for 13 years, said the guitar ensembles always are well-performed.

"The students play very well," he said.

"They spend a lot of time rehearsing, this is a culmination of a semester of rehearsal," he said.

Students have progressed over the years, Breznikar said.

"I have been here a lot of years," he said.

"The standards have gotten better — the levels of technical proficiency have grown. Students take on more challenging pieces now," he said.

Tonight's ensemble will play pieces by Bach, Debussy, Soler, Granados, Puccini and Pachelbel.

Students who comprise the ensemble include freshmen and graduate students, Breznikar said.

Throwing Missses for six years and five albums. However, in summer 1991, she decided to start a band of her own.

Joining Tom and Chris Gorman, childhood friends from Newport, Rhode Island, the group began rehearsals that winter and soon set to work in the studio in spring and summer 1992. "Star," on Sire Records, was the finished product.

Bassist Gail Greenwood recently joined the group, making it complete, and the quartet received fame on the college scene with its debut single and video, "Feed The Tree."

Carolyn Hansen, consorts chairperson for Student Programming Council, said Belly is a unique "college alternative pop/rock" band and expects the concert to be a success.

Majesty Crush, whose sound is a combination of dreamy pop and vivid rock, was booked as the opener separately after Hansen saw them perform in St. Louis, she said.

Tripmaster Monkey, the recent addition to the program slated for tonight's performance, is a four-member band from the Quad Cities. It released its Sire Records debut, "Faster Than Dwight" in early 1993.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. tonight at Shryock Auditorium and doors open at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $12 for students and $14 for the general public and can be purchased at the Student Center Central Ticket Office or at the door.

"The men are off the streets and are convicted felons, and the victims do not have to go through a trial," Robertson said.

Aggravated criminal sexual assault is a Class X felony, punishable by six to 30 years, and criminal sexual assault is a Class 1 felony, punishable by four to 15 years. Robertson said aggravated sexual assault carries a more serious sentence because a weapon is involved.

Robbery is a Class 2 felony punishable by three to seven years.

The men were transported Monday to Menard Correctional Facility in Chester, and Robertson said she does not know when the men will be up for parole.

of Commerce, said the restaurant is located in Prime Time's former location.

Prowell said the old restaurant folded about a year and a half ago because of a lack of attention by its final ownership.

"(Prime Time) was purchased by a group of individuals that did not give it the attention it needed to succeed," he said.

Prowell said he does not know who owned Prime Time when it closed.

The new restaurant is owned by a group of local investors, but Krueger declined to disclose their identities.

Krueger said there is no single majority owner, and there are too many investors to list them all.

Prowell said the new restaurant may be more successful than Prime Time because there is a need for a dining establishment that nature in Carbondale.

'The Good Doctor' opens to near capacity crowd

By Charlotte Rivers
Entertainment Writer

"The Good Doctor" has traveled from 19th Century Russia to Broadway to Carbondale with its comedic appeal intact, and thanks to a strong cast, the play promises to be a success for the Stage Company.

The production, which playwright Neil Simon based on short stories by Russian writer Anton Chekhov, has a universal, timeless appeal that reaches across cultural and time barriers.

The play opened Dec. 3 to a nearly sold-out house at the Stage Company, located at 101 N. Washington, and continues through Dec. 19.

One of the most entertaining vignettes is "The Sneeze," about Cherdyakov, a hapless man who has the misfortune to sneeze on General Brasillhov. Cherdyakov, played by Bruce DeVantier, who is an SIUC civil engineer and mechanics associate professor, appears at the general's office to apologize and only makes matters worse.

"Too Late for Happiness" is a poignant, musical piece that vocalizes the thoughts of two lonely people in the park, played and sung by real-life husband and wife Lewis and Margaret Payne, who each give an impressive performance.

SIUC theater student Brenda Bender appears solo in "The Audition," a story about a young girl who has traveled a long distance to try out for a part with a six-month waiting list for auditions.

She is believable as the aspiring actress who convinces the producer, who is only seen, not heard, to listen even though he thinks she is too old for the 23-year-old part.

The writer/narrator, played by Bruce Welker, appears throughout the play to introduce each segment. Welker, who has appeared in more than 200 productions, is humorous and genuine as a composite of Chekhov and Simon.

Because the theater must make effective use of a small stage area, the stage was lighted as needed, spotlighting only the areas in use so the audience knew where to focus attention even before actors took their places.

Director Stan Hale said it was a great opening weekend.

The Stage Company, with a seating capacity of 100, traditionally has a final dress rehearsal attended by those who are invited by cast members, Hale said.

"Usually there are 15, 20 or 30 people for the last rehearsal," he said. "On Thursday, 108 people came."

Although there are areas that are not perfect, there will not be much fine-tuning, Hale said.

"It was a pretty solid performance," he said.

Students who were filling out Financial-aid applications only need to fill out one of the forms he said.

"The renewal form is the preferred application, but if one is not available, then file the FAFSA," Britton said.

"Don't file the form before Jan. 1 or it will be rejected," Britton continued.

Students who have questions about the renewal form or the financial aid application process are encouraged to contact the financial aid office on the third floor of Woody Hall B, or call 453-4334.

Salukis dog paddle way to invite win

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

After last weekend, the only aquatic life feared more than the great white shark may be a Saluki.

The SIUC swimming/diving teams mauled the competition at the Saluki Invitational with the men's squad capturing first place and the women securing a second place finish.

Tyler Cadham paced the Saluki men past a seven team field that included powerhouses Missouri, Cincinnati and Ball State.

Cadham, a freshman from Sherwood, Ore. compiled 71 points during the three day event to edge out Matt Dixon (66pts.) of Western Illinois. His 2:03.02 in the 200-meter breaststroke is what keyed his victory and helped SIUC to its overwhelming win.

SIUC received plenty of help, though, as Randy Roberts, Ward Bracken and Greg Bever all turned strong performances in front of the hometown crowd.

Roberts and Bracken were stellar for the Dawgs in the 200-meter backstroke while Bever dominated the 200-meter butterfly.

The final men's results gave SIUC (1007) a decisive 243-point margin of victory over second place Ball State (764). Southwest Missouri racked up 662 points to place third, with Missouri and Western Illinois rounding off the top five.

SIUC was equally impressive on the women's blocks as Melanie Davis and Kelly Krough each had exceptional meets.

The Saluki tandem finished one-two in the individual standings with Davis edging Krough 73.5-65 to capture the meet crown.

Laura Humphrey also continued her mid-season surge by placing sixth overall in the individual ranks tallying 55 points.

Davis shined in the 200-meter breaststroke clocking in at 2:25.97 while Krough used the 100-meter freestyle as her means of glory, taking fourth in the finals with a time of 53:27.

Humphrey displayed her usual versatility by grabbing eighth in the 200-meter butterfly finals and fourth in the 1, 650-meter freestyle. Donianzu Murgiondo came on strong in the Salukis' championship effort too, along with teammates Jennifer Bobanic and Jennifer Baus. The three were all among the meets top 25 finishers in the 74-swimmer field.

Ball State turned out to be the only team able to top the host Salukis as SIUC fell to the Cardinals 955-816.

Missouri was a distant third with a 711 total, while Illinois State and Western Illinois occupied the fourth and fifth spots in the eight team field.

While record may not show it, Saluki women hooping it up

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Writer

Before the season began, SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said her young squad would play hard and compete in every game.

The Salukis have done just that three games into their 1993-94 slate. And though it has only one win to show for its first three outings, SIUC has been in every game so far.

In their opener at Tennessee Tech, the Salukis (1-2) lost on a basket with nine seconds left. In game two against Toledo, SIUC pushed the Rockets to overtime before bowing.

"It is encouraging that we are playing good teams tough, but it is disappointing that we are 1-2 when we could be 3-0 if we make a few free throws and better decisions late in those games," Scott said.

Free throws are one area of concern in the early going, as the Salukis are hitting just 60 percent of their tosses from the charity stripe.

That number was bolstered by a 72-percent outing in the Salukis' win over Marshall Saturday.

Sophomore point guard Nikki Gilmore was a key in that stat, as her 10-for-10 performance from the line sealed the win.

Throw in her career-high 23 points against Toledo and 15-point scoring average, and Gilmore is off to a strong start as the Salukis' floor general.

"I am really pleased with Nikki; really pleased," Scott said. "She is so much further along than I thought she would be at this point. Between her and (freshman) Kasia McClendon, we are in real good shape at the point."

Two players contributing as expected are junior forwards Raquae Ransom and Angenette Sumrall.

Teammates in high school, Ransom and Sumrall have reunited and are 1-2 on the team in scoring and rebounding.

Ransom is the team's leading scorer at 17.7 points per game and is second in rebounding (7.3 ppg), while Sumrall leads the squad in rebounding (9.3 ppg) and is second in scoring (15.7 ppg).

"I think they are emerging as go-to players, and that is what I really expected from them," Scott said.

"Those two have to be really good for us, because they are both big-time players." Ransom's 43-point tournament earned her a slot on the Coca Cola/Holiday Inn Classic all-tournament team last weekend.

One player earning time off the bench is sophomore Christel Jefferson.

Jefferson, who is averaging 8.7 points per game, leads the team in field-goal percentage (61 percent) and is third in rebounding (5.3 ppg).

"Christel is a real key for us coming off the bench," Scott said. "Leading the team in field-goal shooting and averaging eight points off the bench is a great stat."

One stat which has two too many numbers in it for Scott is the loss column. Scott and her squad should never settle for just coming close.

"Bottom line is you have to win," Scott said. "We don't ever want our team to be satisfied with losing. Our program is too proud."

The Salukis will get the chance to even their record Wednesday when they play host to Murray State in SIUC's home opener.

The game, part of a doubleheader with the men, is set for an early 5 p.m. tip-off at the Arena.

Last warm-up before Valley goes head-to-head

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

With the Missouri Valley Conference portion of the schedule just around the corner, it is an appropriate time to see how the so-called MVC "contenders" are playing.

In the pre-season coaches poll, which has been pretty accurate the past four years, Illinois State and SIUC tied for first. Bradley was voted third, Southwest Missouri fourth, Tulsa fifth and Wichita State sixth. To illustrate the recent accuracy of the poll, consider that the favorites for the past four years have never finished lower than second.

So, SIUC is off to a good start in its non-conference play, but how about the other top five squads?

Bradley has gotten off to the best start by posting a 3-0 mark.

The Braves have had a weak schedule so far, but will get a stiff test tonight when they play DePaul at the Rosemont Horizon.

Illinois State dropped an 8-point decision to the North western Wildcats in their only game so far.

The Redbirds probably have the toughest non-conference of the season, as they face Dayton at home, and then goes on the road to face Butler and DePaul.

Butler recently knocked off Indiana, while DePaul let one get away against Kansas.

Southwest Missouri State has jumped out to a 3-1 record and posted one of the most impressive MVC victories of the season by knocking off Houston on the road.

Junior guard Johnny Murdock is averaging 17.5 points a game and the Bears have the second best scoring defense in the league so far.

Tulsa has fashioned a 2-0 record, but also falls into the category of teams that have played no one.

That will change, however, when the Golden Hurricane lock up with Southwest Missouri State on December 11th in the first MVC action of the year.

Tulsa freshman Shea Seals, Oklahoma Player of the Year out of McLain High School, has lived up to his billing so far by averaging 26 points a game and hitting 10 of 12 three-point attempts.

Wichita State is 1-1 after losing to Southern Methodist University.

The Shockers will try to avoid being husked this weekend when they play at Big Eight powerhouse Nebraska. The Cornhuskers went 20-11 last year to tie for second-place honors in the Big Eight, and they should be more than a test for WSU.

Among the rest of the pack in the MVC, Drake and Northern Iowa could surprise.

Drake is 2-1 after being nipped by four points by the University of Iowa Hawkeyes. Northern Iowa is 1-1 and has a chance at proving themselves with a game against the Hawkeyes tonight.
