SIUC vice chancellor charts a new course

Harvey Welch incorporates long-time passion for golf into retirement plans

DAILY EGYPTIAN

Harvey Welch, retiring after 24 years as SIUC's vice chancellor for Student Affairs, plans to spend much of his time like other retirees — on the golf course.

But he will split his time between playing and getting others involved in with the sport.

After he retires Dec. 31, Welch will work with The First Tee, a national organization that provides people with an opportunity to play golf by renovating run-down courses.

Welch, 67, has been a golf enthusiast since 1959 and wanted to work with an organization to help bring a greater awareness to the game he loves.

FAREWELLS

A retirement party for Harvey Welch will take place at 2 p.m. Dec. 15 in the Student Center Gallery Lounge.

The First Tee began in San Diego in 1995 and has expanded to include chapters across the United States. The organization is planning to have 100 golf courses for beginners in development by 2000.

Sponsors of the project include the Professional Golf Association, the United States Golf Association and the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

Welch is involved with an Illinois chapter that plans to build a course for beginners in Carbondale, one of 75 locations The First Tee has in mind.

The Carbondale course, presently under development, is expected to provide access to senior citizens and the handicapped. These courses will be "user friendly," Welch said, and will not be as rigorous as the professional courses.

"They are not as demanding physically," he said. "You'll play the game, and from there, you'll graduate to the bigger courses."

Welch said they plan on tying it to local schools as a recreational and learning project.

"We're trying to make it into a ground-level type of activity so that every kid will have the opportunity to play golf," Welch said.

Another reason Welch said he is committed to First Tee is because he, and many other African-Americans, were denied the opportunity to play golf for many years.

"When we were growing up you couldn't be a member of a Professional Golf Association," said Welch, who is working to break down any existing barriers for the next generation.

Parking an increasing problem for disabled

DAPHNE RETTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Brandy Glasser is regularly late for class, despite the 30 minutes she allows herself just for parking. Spaces meant for Glasser and other disabled students are being taken up by illegally parked cars, but Disabled Student Services and the Parking Division are out to put a stop to it.

Glasser, a senior in political science from Murphysboro, has been wheelchair-bound since an accident four years ago. Now dependent on handicapped parking spaces, she is trying to raise awareness and keep the spaces open for those who truly need them.

"It's always been a little bit of a problem, but this is the worst semester I remember," Glasser said.

Marilyn Hogan, coordinator of parking and traffic, said the magnitude of the problem varies, but this semester seems to be worse than the last few.

There are a few different kinds of violators using some of the 200 handicapped spaces on campus.

Some students are using disabled hangtags they have borrowed from a legitimately disabled friend or family member. Disabled students are required to buy a parking sticker in addition to a state-issued pass. Hogan personally investigates students who do not have the SIUC sticker.

By checking a state database, Hogan can find the name and home phone number of the person to whom the pass was issued. Often, when Hogan calls the person in the state database, she said the response is something like, "Oh, yes my daughter goes to school down there."

When Hogan determines people are using another person's hangtag, they are towed, fined $100 and unable to park on campus for a full year.

Hogan said physicians also are helping students get handicapped passes from the state. Students may be parking in the handicapped spaces for mild asthma, allergies or depression.

Kathleen Plesko, director of DSS, has revised the policy for issuing disabled parking privileges. The new policy, which will take effect in January, will require doctors to specify the disability is a mobility issue. The policy is an attempt to insure students with physical disabilities have accessible parking available to them.

Although she welcomes community awareness, Plesko cautions people in making judgments about whether someone should be parking in handicapped zones. She cited one example of a student with a lung transplant who could not walk very far.

Glasser said people illegally parking in handicapped spaces are not being malicious, they just need to consider the repercussions of their actions.

"Before I got hurt I think I might have said 'I'm just going to park [in a handicapped zone] and run in. I won't hurt anything,'" Glasser said. "If you're not disabled, you don't think much about it."

Glasser said the handicapped parking is not just closer, it is specialized. When Glasser parks her van, which is low to the ground to help meet her needs, the door has to open fully. Then, she needs room to let a ramp down, wheel down it and turn around at the bottom.

Residential task force to present to council

Recommendations include implementing educational program for landlords/tenants

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Three final recommendations of the Residential Leasing Task Force, including an educational program and quarterly meetings, will be presented to the City Council at tonight's meeting.

The first recommendation is that landlords, Undergraduate Student Government, Graduate and Professional Student Council and the city work together to develop, implement and maintain an educational program designed for prospective tenants. Secondly, landlords, USG, GPSC and tenants propose to meet on a quarterly basis with the primary focus being the tenant education program and will work autonomously from the city. The final recommendation is that previous ordinances proposed by GPSC will not be considered at this time.

The recommended action to the council by city staff is to accept the report and endorse the recommendations contained in the report.

MEETING

The City Council will meet tonight at 7 at the Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave. The Liquor Control Commission will precede the council meeting at 6:45.

GLENN SHUMAKER

Glenn Shumaker is a graduating senior in Agriculture and has chosen a career at Archer Daniels Midland Company in grain terminal operations management.

ADM is one of the largest grain and food processing companies in the world. Based in Decatur, Illinois, ADM is continually expanding throughout the United States as well as in China, Europe, Mexico and South America.

Glenn found out about ADM's career opportunities from career services on campus and scheduled an interview with ADM. After completing a two-stage interview process, Glenn was offered a position as a grain terminal operations management trainee. In December, he will begin a 12-month hands-on training program that will expose him to all aspects of ADM and grain terminal operations management.

ADM is looking forward to having Glenn join our team.

Legal battle may be uphill

Merchants forced to pull drug paraphernalia may have difficult case if they decide to fight

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Merchants who sold what Illinois statute considers drug paraphernalia may have little legal recourse regarding the Carbondale Police Department's order to clear these items from their shelves according to an SIU law professor, though similar stores continue to operate around the state.

Area stores selling smoking accessories received notice the afternoon of Nov. 19 from Carbondale Police Chief R.T. Finney that they had 48 hours to remove all items that could be considered drug paraphernalia by the Illinois Drug Paraphernalia Control Act. Stores were told that failure to comply could result in felony charges, which carry a minimum $1,000 fine and possible jail time.

The act states that items "marketed for and peculiar to" use with illegal substances such as marijuana and hashish are illegal to sell, including water pipes, bongs and carburetor pipes.

The action by Finney stems from events at the Nov. 16 Liquor Control Commission meeting. The owner of Discount Den, 819 S. Illinois Ave., was being considered for a package liquor license, and when asked about the sale of smoking accessories at his store during discussion, he responded that he did not think his pipes were used for legal purposes.

Finney, who began as police chief in April, said last week that he was not aware of the sale of these items until the Nov. 16 meeting.

William Schroeder, SIU law professor, said that while he thought the Illinois statute was vague at best, anyone wanting to fight the city's action would have a difficult time. He said selective prosecution would be about the only way to fight in this situation, and this would work only if an issue like racial discrimination came into play.

"The law is about as clear as it can be," Schroeder said. "The only answer here is that life is hard."

Schroeder compared the statewide enforcement of this statute to traffic violations. For example, a person may be pulled over and ticketed for speeding, even though other vehicles

Local playwright orchestrates Holocaust play

ERIN FAFOLIA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A year of intense research helped visiting lecturer Brian Silberman construct a "vaudeville" play that is currently at New York's Stella Adler Conservatory Theatre in New York.

Silberman, who teaches three screen writing classes at SIUC, said his play, "Manifest," focuses on the Holocaust and the forms of resistance used by the concentration camp inmates of Auschwitz and Birkenau, weaving together 36 scenes, four story lines and 50 years of Jewish history.

Silberman began to question the high level of victimization represented in the Holocaust when he went to Washington D.C.'s Holocaust Museum in 1994. He wondered why there was an absence of resistance. After watching "Schindler's List," Silberman said he felt uncertain that a film depicting a non-Jew who acted as a savior to the Jews was embraced by the Jewish community. While Silberman researched for the play, he discovered that concentration camps had forms of concealed entertainment.

"I always thought of concentration camps as dreary places, but I found out plays, skits and satirical comedy were performed by the inmates," he said. "Some were forced by the Germans to do so as a form of public relations. Even some of the things they made the inmates do were satirical about the Nazis, and they did not even know they were having these people perform satires about themselves."

This discovery led Silberman to format the production as a vaudeville — a performance that mixes acting, music and several story lines.

The form of "professional practitioner" at the University — several professors that have their works produced locally or nationally — gives the University an excellent reputation and the students a broad understanding, said David Rush, SIUC Theater Department's playwright director.

Rush recently won an After Dark award for his play produced in Chicago, "The Prophet of Bishop Hill."

Guitarists perform classical pieces at Old Baptist Foundation

NATHANIEL PARK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Six-string virtuoso Chris Allen and other selected music guitar performance students are preparing for an end of the semester concert featuring pieces from an array of classical composers.

The School of Music is sponsoring the classical guitar performance, beginning at 8 tonight in the Old Baptist Foundation. The program will feature selected works by such composers as Chopin, Mendelson and Hayden among others.

Allen, a graduate student in music guitar performance, said the duet he will perform with John Sullivan, a senior in the School of Music, is one of the more difficult pieces being performed tonight.

"The duets mostly include more advanced students because of the technique involved," Allen said. "Usually the duets that we have consist of people that are performance majors and have been in the program for a couple of years."

Although Allen finds the duet format more challenging, he said the trio and quartet performances give the opportunity to further explore the range of music.

"We're doing a transcription of a piano piece by Chopin, arranged for only two guitars," Allen said. "But many of the pieces in the performance, such as the Mendelson and the Hayden, are arrangements for a number of guitars and are more in depth." Attempting to perform works on guitar that are written for the piano, a more aggressive medium, is a technical obstacle Allen finds challenging. He said the single piano performer has an advantage over a guitar duet by being able to explore the depth of a piece as a whole.

"It's difficult to do a piano transcription for two guitars because of the limited sound," Allen said. "The piano is much louder, and it's a lot easier for a pianist to express themselves because it's just them, rather than two people trying to emulate what one person is doing on the piano."

The School of Music guitar performance attempts to diversify each semester's show with a variety of classical composers. Allen said

Man dies in stairway fall

A 19-year-old Carbondale man died Thursday in what police called a "freak accident" when he tumbled from the top of a 19-foot stairway leading to an apartment on South Illinois Avenue.

Carbondale Police Sgt. Paul Echols said no foul play is suspected in the incident that occurred late Wednesday night, but alcohol may have been a factor.

Zachary Smith was taken to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale where he remained unconscious until his death about at 11:30 a.m. Thursday.

Smith apparently fell as he was leaving the apartment, Echols said. A Jackson County Coroner's inquest into the death will be convened Dec. 16, and an official cause of death will be determined.

There were no eye witnesses to the accident, but Echols said one witness heard the fall.

"That's a big stairway," Echols said. "He fell all the way down from top to bottom."

The lighted stairway has 24 steps, each rising 9 and 1/2 inches without landings; and a firm railing is attached to the wall.

Smith had been visiting friends who have an apartment above Shoes 'N' Stuff, 106 S. Illinois Ave., and the Pacific Rim Cafe, 100 S. Illinois Ave.

Smith is a former John A. Logan College student. He was employed at Long John Silvers Seafood Shop, 1230 E. Main St., and Steak 'N' Shake, 1365 E. Main St.

A memorial service is planned for 3 p.m. Saturday at the Unitarian Fellowship, 301 W. Elm Street. Visitation will be from 11 to 3 p.m.

NEW YORK

Queens College president under fire for comments

The president of Queens College of the City University of New York is taking some heat for comments about remedial students that were attributed to him in a recent report. Allen Lee Semmons denies making the remark during an interview in September for a report on the future of the City University that was released by the city's bar association. The report, issued last month, analyzes CUNY's new policy to eliminate remedial courses for students on 11 of the system's campuses, including Queens. ("Expletive" in, ("expletive" out), Semmons is quoted as saying, "If you take an (expletive) and turn out (expletive) that is slightly more literate, you're still left with (expletive)." The report didn't state the expletive Semmons supposedly used. In a written statement issued Tuesday, Semmons called the quote "a complete falsification" and said the remarks "were taken out of context and included many misstatements of fact." Semmons added that the college's lawyer, who was present during the interview, had requested a "full retraction" by the bar association. But in an October letter to the bar, the attorney acknowledged that Semmons had used a "somewhat 'salty' term as a synonym for 'academically unprepared.'" Semmons has been president of the 17,000-student campus since 1995 and has been a strong supporter of tougher academic standards at CUNY.

OUR WORD

Bungle of the Jungle

Overrun with choking weeds and enough vine species to make Tarzan jealous, the current condition of Thompson Woods is solid evidence of our campus' ever-blackening green thumb. If SIUC wants to maintain the campus its students advertise as "beautiful" on its homepage, then Thompson Woods needs a face lift Joan Rivers would be proud of.

The problems, both environmentally and aesthetically, are obvious. The once vibrantly green Thompson Woods has become a haven of neglect. Black oak trees, the dominant tree species in the woods, are at or near death, and wildlife interrupts the cycle of plant growth by eating acorns almost as fast as trash takes their place.

Seriously, Thompson Woods, being disconnected from any adjacent wooded areas renders it incapable of sustaining itself. This means if SIUC wants to keep the woods from certain death, action must be taken now to stem the onslaught of exotic weeds and vines that is choking the life out of the current ecosystem.

The dearth of funds to rejuvenate Thompson Woods is now the biggest part of the problem.

The Thompson Woods Management Committee and Adopt-A-Patch can only do so much to breathe life into the woods without a financial commitment by the University, to keep our campus beautiful.

Thompson Woods is a unique student attraction and retention aspect our University cannot afford to lose in its current state of rebuilding. While it may be entertaining to watch mice puff on Mariboro butts and squirrels club each other with french fries, Thompson Woods was meant to be a naturally attractive aspect of Southern Illinois oriented campus rather than the mutant weed and animal aberration it has become.

We understand there is a lack of grounds maintenance employees, but why not utilize SIUC's greatest manpower — its students and faculty. Such assets are already being used to construct a campus bridge, why not use forestry classes and professors to help draw a plan of action to cure the wood's problems.

These same classes could be used to actually help implement these plans in a better learning experience than taking students to Thompson Woods to show them what not to do with a woods. Not that rejuvenating our campus should be a punishment, but maybe Student Judicial Affairs could find a way to use some sort of Thompson Woods community service hours as reprimands.

Of course, none of this will matter without money so Glenn Poshard, vice chancellor for Administration, in his dealings with the 12-member group of faculty and staff that are formulating a land use plan, should consider utilizing his star power and persuasive ability to spearhead a drive to raise such funds. With enough alumni assistance, Thompson Woods may still have a chance at the meaningful existence it is intended to have, rather than the cesspool of exotic foliage and regeneration-inhibiting animals it has become.

Mere recognition of a problem isn't enough when nothing is done to remedy the situation. Such is the case of Thompson Woods and its ever-evident need for a plan of action. Simple grounds keeping isn't nearly enough and neither is a No. 1 priority status. A commitment to Thompson Woods must be made with no further delay and then followed with measurable action.

Plant a seed and watch what you could grow

Okay, so it's December, and many people have suddenly developed an eccentric overwhelming urge to go out to a tree farm and chop down an evergreen and place it in the living room of their humble abodes — for a month.

As if that isn't odd enough, they then place shiny, sharp objects and twinkling lights on the tree and place gifts hidden in shimmering wrapping paper, only to be opened around the 25th.

Strange? Perhaps, but not as strange as the present many SIUC students gave us to enjoy a few years back.

Imagine this for a present: thousands of SIUC students paying fees for 10 years for the benefit of other students who would come later.

Thousands of dollars out-of-pocket for a facility they would never use. It happened here at SIUC when the new Student Recreation Center was built.

After talking with one reader, I was told a very interesting quote that has stuck with me for the past few weeks, especially as I decorated the tree at my fiancée's during Thanksgiving break.

So as this is my swan song piece for this semester, I decided the following might be a good idea to leave you with.

Former Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce R. Swinburne, when speaking about the Student Recreation Center, said something to the effect that everyone should plant a tree under which someone else will enjoy the shade. After all, isn't that what we are here for?

So often I find that we, as collegiately-affiliated peoples, tap our knowledge, suck up funds and take as much as we can.

Greedy. Greedy. Greedy.

We're worse than the Grinch and good ol' Uncle Scrooge combined. We are in the game for money, for number one, for prestige, for honor, or some other narcissistic reward.

Angels Among Us

ANNA BETH TRAYNOR

TRAYNOR@SIU.EDU

Angels Among Us appears Tuesdays. Anna is a senior in English education. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

Maybe. Perhaps. Keeping this in mind, I think it is particularly appropriate as we draw near the end of a semester, the end of college (for some), the end of a decade, the end of a century and the end of the millennium to just stop — breathe — and reflect.

Reflection is an idea I have found as an educator and writer to be most effective. If you do not stop and look at what you have done, how will you even attempt to try and map out where you are headed?

Next semester, I will be student-teaching with high school students back home near St. Louis. Although I am an English teacher, I like to think of myself as more of a gardener than anything else.

You see, as a teacher, I get this amazing opportunity to plant the seeds of knowledge, of love, of respect, into a young person that may not become a full tree I will be able to draw from.

I think we all could be great gardeners, if we only take the time to plant a seed: After all, we were once seeds. As I prepare to leave to teach, I cannot help but leave you as I would leave my English students.

If there is one thing I hope you get from this column it would be to be aware of the good things and people happening around you. Don't ever, ever take those people and incidents for granted.

Oh, and for all of you who had office pools on when I would run out of good things on campus or would turn bitterly against SIUC — I win.

My Christmas wish for you, my readers, is to always look through the eyes of a child, and, occasionally, plant a tree from under which you will receive no shade.

Thank you for blessing my life with your stories, comments, and encouragement. This has truly been an experience I will never forget. God bless you in this holy holiday season and always.

MAILBOX

DEAR EDITOR: (Iowa City, Iowa) After a 15 year association with Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Chad Ruback today announced his resignation as alumnus.

"It has been a great run as a student and graduate of what was truly a wonderful institution," Ruback said in a press conference attended by only his two pre-school aged children.

"I have great respect for my former institution, my alumni peers and our current students and faculty, but I'm not certain that I can remain effective as an alumnus considering the current state of affairs at my alma mater."

No SIUC official, nor interim, nor candidate finalist could be identified to comment on this story. One student walking through Thompson Woods did remark, as he discarded his cigarette, "What?" Would that last administrator out of SIUC please turn off the lights at McAndrew?

CHAD RUBACK alumnus BS '83, MSed '94

DEAR EDITOR: Some students at this school never cease to amaze me, and judging from his letter on Dec. 1, Allan Williams is no exception.

The last time I checked, most students here are relieved that SIUC is finally starting to lose its reputation as a party school. Hopefully, Mr. Williams, you will mature enough to realize that there is more to college than just the parties. Should we be made to feel sorry for you because you feel that you don't get out enough? If you honestly have that much free time, perhaps you should try getting a job, or (gasp) go to class.

Seeing as that you are a freshman, Mr. Williams, I am going to assume that you live in the Combs. You state there are not enough "partying locations" near the dorms, but speaking from experience, virtually everything is within walking distance. You also say that you have to be 21 to go anywhere, but unless I am missing something, the bar entry age is 19 in Carbondale.

This is my third year here, and I have never had trouble finding something to do on the weekends or somewhere to go. I also don't sympathize with the fact that you feel you are "wasting your money" at these house parties. You are obviously not 21, so legally you shouldn't even be allowed to buy this alcohol.

It is ridiculous to believe that the school should be held responsible for providing you with a place to party. What would you suggest, Mr. Williams, punch and cookies at the Recreation Center on a Friday night? Perhaps you could even get one of your professors to chaperone. I'd like to welcome you to reality, and hope that you realize we are no longer in high school here; there will be no more weekend dances.

What I suggest is that you focus a little more on what SIUC has to offer academically and worry a little less about your weekend plans: If that doesn't work, you could always head on over to CCHS and see if anyone needs a date to Prom. Perhaps then you will finally feel at home.

CANDACE STEELE junior, public relations

DEAR EDITOR: I am writing you concerning Thompson Woods. I am especially concerned with it at night. In the morning and afternoon, Thompson Woods is an easy place to get to class. At night, it is a scary place to go through or even walk by. It is so poorly lit that you can't see the path that you are walking on. Fortunately there are streetlights, but the problem is that there are not enough. The ones that are there are not bright enough to see if someone is coming close to you. This makes it easy for someone to get attacked.

A freshman couple says it is sometimes hard to spend time with each other at night because they are scared of the walk back home because he lives in Thompson Point and she lives in Mae Smith. He says that he often has to stay at Mae Smith because he doesn't want to walk home by himself, which sometimes causes problems when he has to go to class in the morning. I, too, have problems with Thompson Woods. Whenever I want to go to the library or type a paper, I worry that it might take all day, and I would have to stay there until dark with no one to walk home with.

I think the way to solve the lighting problem in Thompson Woods is to put in more streetlights and to replace the bulbs that we do have with bigger, brighter bulbs. Doing this allows students to go to the library or the computer lab without having to worry about to worry about their safety.

advantage of all the population and just limiting [opportunities] to the majority population.

In 1994, Welch became a member of the National Minority Golf Association and serves on its board. One of his wishes is to see more minorities involved in the business side of the sport and not just playing.

"Our goal is to get minorities involved in all aspects of golf — sales, marketing, construction, you name it," he said.

Welch said he enjoys the game because it takes a mental more than a physical approach in order to win, and he compares the sport to life.

"The rules basically say, 'You play the ball where you find it,'" Welch said, describing how the sport forces you to take the next shot, no matter how difficult.

"As a student, if I failed a course that I had to pass, I'd take it over. Just like if you hit the ball in the water, you can either take your penalty or go in there and try to hit it out."

Another of Welch's passions has been Rotary International, an organization of business and academic professionals. He became a member in 1977 and has served in a number of positions since joining the organization.

In July 2000, Welch will be named district governor, the highest position in the Southern Illinois region for the organization. He will oversee all of the Rotary Clubs located in the Southern third of Illinois.

A major reason for joining, he said, was the organization's commitment to humanitarian efforts.

"I see Rotary as trying to help people," he said.

"We attempt to help someone [and] make their life better with the feeling that, if their life is better, [then] my life is better."

Welch's commitment to social causes doesn't surprise the people who know him best.

"He enjoys life and knows how to take a job and get it done," said William Norwood, a member of the SIUC Board of Trustees who grew up with Welch in Centralia.

Norwood described Welch as a competitive man, though in "a good way," especially when it comes to golf and hunting, another of Welch's interests.

"We've gone deer hunting every year for the past 10 or 12 years," Norwood said. "If he doesn't have a deer and the rest of us have deer, he'll stay in the woods all day trying to get his."

Welch's competitiveness served him well as a student-athlete in 1951 playing basketball. He is noted as being the first African-American player to receive a varsity letter, but he has kept the honor in perspective over the years.

"I've never tried to claim any notoriety for being the first to letter because I think it was strictly based on racism in the Athletic Department that it hadn't happened before," he said.

Welch said many of his values came from his mother, Willie Bea, and two sisters, Vera May and Ora Lee, including his belief in helping people.

"They had a great influence on me that I didn't realize at the time," he said.

"Trying to extend a hand to someone if you could, with no expectation of any kind of reward, I think developed there."

Welch is one of eight children, including four cousins, raised by his mother after his father died when he was very young. He attended Lincoln Elementary School in Centralia. The teachers in the all-black school prepared Welch for the rough reality he would be going to face as he becomes older.

"They prepared us mechanically so that we knew what to do in the class," Welch said.

"But they prepared us emotionally and psychologically by saying, 'Harvey, you're a little black boy, and to get the proper credit and reward for what you do, you're going to have to do more than your white counterparts.'"

"Don't react to that with violence or withdrawing," Welch continued. "React to that by achieving in spite of the barriers."

He said because of those teachings he never developed a bitterness concerning racism.

"I don't hate as a result of that because I think that would be self-destructive to me. I recognized it and then moved on," he said.

Welch entered the Air Force after graduating from SIUC in 1954.

He returned to the University in 1975 after 24 years in the service to become dean of student life and later vice chancellor for Student Affairs.

Welch said he was ready to leave SIUC after 20 years and is looking forward to the next stage in his life.

"There's much that needs to be done in the world, and I'm ready to do some other things," he said.

As a student, if I failed a course that I had to pass, I'd take it over. Just like if you hit the ball in the water, you can either take your penalty or go in there and try to hit it out.

PARKING

This room is only available in the stripped-off area next to a handicapped parking space.

Glasser said it is common for her to return to her parked car to find that someone has parked in the striped-off area.

"I am stuck there until they move or they get towed," she said. "It is really horrible if it cold outside."

Hogan said the most serious problem is the people flagrantly disregarding the handicapped signs.

"They look around and they don't see an empty space and they see an open disabled space," she said. "Sometimes they win and sometimes they lose."

Glasser's boyfriend, Rick Johnson, said people will only learn to avoid parking illegally in handicapped zones when they see consequences of their actions. He encourages students to turn people in when they see the system is being abused.

"If I see someone parked illegally, I call the police and push to have them towed," said Johnson, a senior in mechanical engineering. "They're taking up spaces that are not theirs to take."

Hogan said the people who are parking illegally may not understand that they are taking space away from disabled people. If there was more awareness, Hogan said the situation would improve.

"Handicapped spaces are designated for a particular group that needs closer parking," she said. "It's not for the people who sleep late and need a place to park, because they can walk. We have people who can't walk."

the whole thing," she said. "I'm sorry it carried on like it did."

Owen said that she is not going to have to make any changes in the way she runs her business if the city approves the recommendations.

The Residential Leasing Task Force was created in March by the City Council after GPSC proposed six housing ordinances.

The topics covered by the ordinances that did not pass ranged from a landlord's right of access with 24 hour notice, identification of owners and agents in lease agreements and the display of fee and service charges in lease agreements.

The task force consists of student government leaders and local landlords, with support from city staff.

Alex Goodson, USG representative, said the task force opened lines of communication between tenants and landlords. She said the task force provided her a look at what it is like being a landlord and it gave landlords a look at what it is like to be a student tenant.

Goodson said the proposed educational program will be a great aid to students when they first move off-campus into apartments. "The education [program] will say what you need to do when moving off campus, which is very important," she said.

"A lot of the [problem] situations are a lot of not really knowing what to do."

Ed Ford, GPSC president, said opening the lines of communication was very important, but he is waiting to see what kind of action the council will take in regards to the original six points.

"It's coming back to the council now," he said.

"They are either going to look at the report and say thank you to the task force, or address the six specific issues."

The council will also discuss changing the ordinance about what time the public needs to be emptied from bars.

The revised hours of operation would allow bars 30 minutes to have the public out of the establishment, rather than the present 15 minutes.

The idea for the extended time came from previous discussion about crowds on South Illinois Avenue. The extra 15 minutes is intended to allow for more time to clear the bars to help alleviate late night crowding problems on the Strip.

Before the council meeting, the Liquor Control Commission will meet at 6:45 p.m. to discuss the expansion of Chicago Underground, 717 S. University Ave.

With his newly awarded bar license, Chicago Underground owner John Karayannis plans to open the upstairs floor as a bar and keep the downstairs a restaurant.

The Liquor Advisory Board recommended approval of the expansion on Dec. 2.

around may be speeding and not receiving tickets.

"Basically, [the police] can enforce the law against whoever they want to," Schroeder said.

Merchants selling similar items to those pulled from the shelves in Carbondale continue to operate around the state, including stores in Champaign, Bloomington and Springfield. Schroeder said nothing stops police departments in these cities from taking similar action.

The store most affected by the sudden enforcement of the Illinois statute in Carbondale is Puff 'n' Stuff, 811 S. Illinois Ave., because about 80 percent of its business came from the sale of items removed to comply with the police.

Lori Wahls, owner of Puff 'n' Stuff, said the store has removed all items in question and will continue to remain open. She said the store is going for a different, more upscale look with a variety of pipes, tobaccos, figurines and "non-intrusive" hand-blown glassware.

"We're trying to revamp the store to sell things they want us to sell," she said. "It's about all we can do."

Wahls said she was still somewhat confused and angered by the police's action, although she has been encouraged by the support she received from community members. She said that at first she was ready to leave town with her business, but because her roots are in Carbondale, she decided to stay.

She said she cooperated with police since opening her store on Illinois Avenue five years ago, and she could not understand why this action came so suddenly, since the police have known the store for years.

"It sounds like someone is trying to make a name for themselves to run for higher office," Wahls said. "I'm not going to tuck my tail between my legs and run away."

Wahls has been in contact with her lawyer since Nov. 19, but declined to comment on what action may be taken. She expects to hear from her lawyer by next week and may have a decision on legal action.

BRIEF

Gateway teams march on

Illinois State quarterback Dusty Burk completed 31 of 37 passes for 350 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Redbirds past America East Conference's Hofstra 37-20 Saturday in the NCAA Division I-AA quarterfinals in Hempstead, N.Y.

Hofstra opened the scoring with a four-yard run by Jimmy Jones in the first quarter, but the Redbirds responded with 24 unanswered points, taking a 24-7 lead into halftime.

Avion Cason led the rushing attack for the Redbirds, which ran the ball 37 for 166 yards. Cason ran for 59 yards on 10 carries, and Burk added 54 yards on the ground in eight rushing attempts.

Burk capped the scoring for the day in the third quarter with a 34-yard touchdown pass to Steve Kostro. The Redbirds (11-2), the 1999 Gateway Football Conference Champions, travel to Georgia Southern (11-2) Saturday for a semi-final game.

Georgia Southern is ranked second in the nation by Sports Network.

Youngstown State utilized a well balanced rushing attack, whipping North Carolina A&T 41-3 Saturday in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs in Youngstown, Ohio.

YSU racked up 214 yards on the ground and 245 via the pass. The Penguins had five rushers run for more than 32 yards, with Adrian Brown leading the pack with 46 yards. Quarterback Jeff Ryan completed 15 of his 17 pass attempts for 245 yards and had one touchdown pass.

The Penguins (11-2), runner-up to Illinois State in the Gateway, welcome Florida A&M University (10-3) next Saturday in Youngstown in the semi-final round.

"It's great that we get our work out," he said. "Teachers and creators need to practice what we preach and keep the art alive."

Professors are talking about plans to integrate Television, Film and Theater departments together for cross-writing programs.

Playwright Silberman included seven actors to portray 40 characters in four revolving plots in "Manifest." Silberman said the actors must adapt to the ever-changing scenes, changing in moments from happy to sad.

One story line that is based on history is a group of dead children who exist in limbo. In life, they were cruelly experimented on by the infamous Joseph Mengele.

He becomes embodied in the form of a mad Dadaist artist and is discovered by the children to meet his fate of trial and justice.

"[Mengele] felt like the children would have died anyway, and he made them into works of art with his experiments," Silberman said. "He did not feel guilty."

Another historical plot in "Manifest" concentrates on the smuggling of gunpowder and attempt to construct explosives by inmates.

A mass exodus was staged by the inmates, parallel to Silberman's admiration of the mass resistance. The women were forced to work at the German munitions factories and would smuggle gunpowder to the camps in the hems of their skirts.

Silberman approached another historic event of the concentration camp for a romantic level in the play. A plot follows the romance of Mala Zimetbaum and Adek Galinski, a young Polish couple who met and fell in love at Auschwitz.

"They escaped together and made it to the border," he said. "But they were captured and publicly executed as an example."

Silberman relates the impact of the Holocaust to modern-day Jewish-American life with a plot line centered in New York.

A student named Levi Stein is helping to put on a play about the Holocaust. After visiting the Holocaust Museum in Washington D.C., he begins to doubt the purpose and function of the drama he is part of.

A traditional Yiddish folk band, or klezmer, adds an accessory to the revolving plots. Although blues is meant to express a form of hope and happiness, there is still a hint of sadness.

Silberman said he hopes his work will allow the audience to better understand the idea of resistant alliances in the Holocaust.

"I wanted to engage the whole idea of cultural identity and investigate that dynamic."

man Danielle Lawary (back problems).

With her team's health improving, Beck would like to see the Salukis confidence level rise, especially at home.

"Everyone's spirits are up, but we want to win our games," Beck said. "We would love to get a crowd to come watch us. Hopefully the home court advantage will come through for us so we can pull a victory out this time."

TRACK AND FIELD

Men's team signs three transfers

The SIU men's track and field team added three junior college transfers for the spring semester Friday, signing Michael Richardson, Neehall Philosene and Bashar Ibrahim. Richardson joins the Salukis from Aurora Community College in Colorado where he was an NJCAA All-American in the triple jump. A native of Waukegan, Richardson was a two-time Illinois class AA state champion in the triple jump and was named a high school All-American.

"Mike is a great addition to our team in both the long and triple jump," assistant coach Cameron Wright said. "Richardson is a tremendous talent who has the potential to be an NCAA and Olympic trials qualifier."

Philosene and Ibrahim are both transfers from Lindenwood University in St. Charles, Mo. Philosene, who is from the country of Dominica, was a former national "athlete of the year." While at Lindenwood, he was a two-time NAIA All-American as a member of the two-mile relay. Ibrahim was one of the country's top freshman runners last year holding the nation's third fastest time among first-year students in both the 1,500 meter run (3:43.67) and the 3,000 meter steeplechase (8:49.31). A native of Kuwait, Ibrahim also represented his country at the World Championships in Seville, Spain, last August.

"All three of these athletes add a lot of strength to our team," Wright said. "I believe they give us an even greater chance to win the conference championship this year, which is our ultimate goal. They also give us more opportunity to qualify more athletes for nationals and give the University national exposure."

All three will be eligible to begin competition in January.

Smith, who averaged 6.0 points and 4.1 rebounds in 18 starts last season, is currently averaging 12.6 minutes and 2.8 points per game.

Returning from an ankle injury right before the start of the season, her frustration involves trying to get back into the starting line-up.

"I have always been a starter," Smith said.

"I would like to get my starting position back, but I am going to do what is best for the team, and whatever may be best for me. Practice [has] prepared [me], but it is not the same as being in the game."

The only remaining Saluki players still out with injuries are sophomore forward Geshla Woodard (stress fracture to her foot) and fresh-

Trying to leap over the Tigers

Women's basketball team takes on University of Missouri in hopes of breaking a two-game losing skid

CHRISTINE BOLIN
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

With the SIU women's basketball team currently on a two-game losing streak, junior forward Courtney Smith knows this isn't the time to get too worried.

"We are not getting pessimistic," Smith said about SIU's 2-4 record. "We are staying optimistic because we know we are improving."

Smith and her teammates want to improve their 1-1 home record tonight against the University of Missouri at the SIU Arena. Tip-off is 7 p.m.

The Tigers (5-1) bring an undefeated road record to Carbondale including their most recent win in the Unilever Missouri Lady Tiger Classic, where Missouri finished first for the 15th consecutive year over Western Kentucky University.

"It is not a factor," head coach Julie Beck said about the Tigers' 3-0 road record. "We are dealing with a veteran team who starts two seniors, two juniors and a sophomore. They are loaded with players inside that can handle the ball well."

Junior forward Marlena Williams leads the Tigers in scoring with 13.8 points per game. Senior forward/guard Amy Monsees is also a threat averaging 12.3 points per outing.

Now that forwards Courtney Smith and Maria Niebrugge returning to action from injuries, Beck would like to see her junior veterans contribute to the depth of the bench, especially on offense.

"We are just struggling to score right now," Beck said. "We are looking for Courtney to contribute because she can do a lot for the team. Maria only had one day of practice [since her return], so she has some time to go."

Niebrugge, who started in all 27 games last season averaging 8.7 points and 5.4 rebounds, missed the first five games of the season recovering from knee surgery. She played just four minutes in Saturday night's 60-52 loss against DePaul University.

"I would like to get back into the starting line-up," Niebrugge said. "My knee isn't 100 percent strong, but I ar

Last but not least for men's swimming team

Despite bringing up the rear at Hoosier Holiday Invitation, Salukis show strong impressive performance

PAUL WLEKLIŃSKI
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

If Rick Walker were the SIU golf coach, he would be happy with his team's 756 points in the Hoosier Holiday Invitation — the lowest score among the three teams in the meet.

But he's not. Walker is the SIU's men's swimming and diving coach — a sport in which the team with highest score wins — and yet he is just as delighted with his team's performance in the three-day meet.

The Salukis' 756 points were not good enough to place the team above either the host school University of Indiana (1,100) or the University of Missouri (996) Sunday in Bloomington, Ind.

Finishing dead last is not disappointing? "No, not at all," Walker said. "I knew that that was a distinct possibility. We're going in with 17 swimmers and [Indiana and Missouri] are going in with 24."

The Salukis swam only in the events that the Missouri Valley Conference schools compete in, giving the other two schools the advantage to earn more points. In addition, the Hoosiers' and the Tigers' scores also benefited from having more swimmers that had three weeks to rest. SIU had only three days of rest before the event.

With the limitation of competing with only 17 swimmers, the Salukis took advantage of every swimmer they had, particularly senior Herman Louw.

Louw's time in the 200 freestyle in the finals on the first day was not only good enough for first place in the event, but it was also an NCAA provisional qualifying time.

"He's way ahead of where he was this time last year when he was at the U.S. Open — fully rested and fully shaved — where he was finalist," Walker said. "He's doing times that are better than what he did last year at that meet."

Louw earned another first-place finish in the finals of the 200 individual medley on day three of the meet. The only other first-place finishes for the Salukis included the 400 freestyle relay team of Matt Munz, Jason Corrigan, David Parkins and Louw (3:23.06) and the 200 freestyle relay team of Chrysanthous Papachryssanthou, Parkins, Corrigan and Louw (1:43.13).

Sophomore Matt Munz supported Louw's performances with second-place finishes in the 200 backstroke (2:01.71) and the 100 backstroke (55.80).

Sophomore Corne Prozesky turned in a third- and fourth-place finish in the finals of the 200 (2:17.88) and 100 (1:04.30) breaststroke events, respectively.

"I can't help if somebody looks at the score and says, 'oh they got creamed,'" Walker said. "They just don't understand swimming. If they were there, they would see that Missouri and Indiana had swimmers in each and every event. Each of our swimmers were swimming in one event per day."

"For me, the points scored is such a minor factor in performance. Take a look at their times they were doing compared to what they were doing going into it, you'll see just exactly how good they swam."

Women's swimming team takes fifth

PAUL WLEKLIŃSKI
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU women's swimming and diving team finished fifth out of five teams in the Hoosier Holiday Invitational last weekend in the Bloomington, Ind.

The University of Missouri (1,095) outscored host school, Indiana University (810.5) for first place.

The University of Tennessee claimed third with 760 points and the University of Arkansas took fourth with 449.5 points.

Sophomore Brooke Radostits led the Saluki cause with fifth-place finish in the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:05.57.

She also turned in a seventh-place finish for the Salukis in the 200 Backstroke with a time of 2:22.56.

Other Saluki top finishers included junior Lee Frye who finished sixth in the 200 breaststroke (2:41.64) and 10th in the 100 breaststroke (1:14.98). Sophomore Dana Morrel earned a seventh-place finish in the 400 individual medley.
