Prineas throws hat into congressional ring

Finding jobs for people in Southern Illinois will be the No. 1 item on Peter Prineas' list if he is elected to Congress.

Prineas, an engineer who owns a Cordeanese engineering consulting firm is running with Ronald Ledford, Harrisburg, the Saline County circuit clerk, for the Republican nomination in the March primary — and a shot at Rep. Paul Simon in November.

He was defeated by Simon in 1976 by nearly 2 to 1. It's Prineas' belief that Simon nearly lost the last election — when John C. Anderson was within 1 percent of the vote of winning — because Simon neglected the district, the 35th District, now the 22nd.

Prineas said Simon took office in 1974, the district was prospering but that unemployment has since steadily increased.

Prineas said "construction work and coal mining have been declining for three years."

He said NOLTAC, the National Conservative Political Action Committee, is using the wrong issues in its opposition to Simon in Southern Illinois.

Expect more snow

By The Associated Press

Temperatures Friday night were expected to plunge from 15 to 20 degrees to around 10 above the balmy southern tip of the state.

The new storm approached, Southern Illinoisans still were digging out of a second major storm in less than a week, which blanketed the area with up to 12 inches of snow.

Somit says tuition hikes a reality next few years

By Mike Anthony

Students must "face the reality of tuition increases," at SIUC and other state universities for the next few years, President Albert Somit said Thursday at an open meeting.

"The state has reached the limits of its willingness and capacity to fund education," Somit said.

The hearing was sponsored by the Graduate Student Council to let students discuss the proposed fiscal year 1983 tuition increases.

Last year, tuition at SIUC was raised 13 percent, and Shaw said he agreed with Somit's estimate that students could expect successive tuition increases for the next few years. He said he couldn't estimate how much more students can expect to pay, saying that three factors would determine that.

The first is how much taxpayers are willing to put into higher education, Shaw said, "but considering the fact that in fact education will be $7 billion in 1983, I think we'll lose $500 million because of education, to put it in perspective.

The second factor is whether the state and federal economy improve. The third factor is "the federal government's attitude regarding higher education."

Until recently, Shaw said, "there was a very effective partnership between industry, education, the state and federal governments, but now one aspect of that partnership, the federal government, is pulling away."

Also, the Illinois Board of Higher Education has recommended tuition increases on the current rate of inflation, which has been "renamed" to 3 percent to 4 percent.

Somit said that "University's allocation from the state has not equalled inflation. This year we'll have to swallow 5 to 6 percent more in inflation."

Most of the law students' objections to the proposed increase were based in either limited access for students to the School of Law, limited financial aid, professional students or whether a tuition hike from 13 percent to 16 percent is justified.

But even though Shaw agreed that "we have the major problem, the biggest factor is not tuition, but the federal government," he cited a number crunch in federal aid of 60 percent per student for the proposed Direct Loan Student program, and a proposal that government would eliminate professional students from the Guaranteed Student Loan program.

Education shifts may be a 'disaster'

Editor's Note: This is the second in a five-part series of articles by The Associated Press examining President Reagan's "New Federalism" plan.

By Christopher Connell Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Educators are fond of citing the 1870s, the period when the federal government began taking on an important role in education policy, as the seed of the federal government's involvement in education now.

But the Constitution does not mention the word "education," and the history of the federal commitment has been marked by fits and starts, ebbs and flows. President Reagan's "new federalism" proposals would be only the latest turn.

If Reagan succeeds in his "new federalism" plan, announced in his State of the Union address last month, to turn control of more and more federal programs over to the states, the federal government would get out of the business of most education and training for its citizens.

The COMPREHENSIVE

The COMPETITIVE

The COMPREHENSIVE Employment Training Act and its legacy of direct federal involvement in job programs would end.

Moreover, Reagan would shift to the states virtually all education programs except compensatory education for the poor and the handicapped; the Work Incentive Program, vocational rehabilitation, and special education.

The federal government still would provide loans and grants to some college students, although Reagan is seeking to cut them. The Carter and Reagan administrations already have taken deep shocks at CETA, particularly its full-time public service jobs. Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan says CETA failed to train the poor for productive jobs in private business, despite a federal investment of $33 billion over the past seven years.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland has denounced the proposed transfer of job training responsibilities.

The federal government pays only a 2 percent of the nation's total school bills, but it should be a larger share in the major cities where public schools are filled with poor children.

When Reagan took office, the Department of Education was spending nearly $11 billion. It has since been cut to $12.9 billion and reportedly is targeted for only $14 billion for fiscal 1983. Reagan wants the department abolished.

On the campaign trail in 1980, Reagan blamed federal interference for higher education. Not for his generation, and many education critics — viewed as a determination of standards from the bottom up.

WILLARD McGUIRE, president of the 1.7 million-
Tough anti-busing bill passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening a season of battles over social issues, the Senate on Thursday approved, 36 to 6, spending $1 billion for the National Wildlife Federation to aid federal judges in desegregation cases from ordering busing for students who live more than five miles or 15 minutes from their schools. "It is a precedent," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., who voted against the measure. "The courts are going to be helped by this kind of approach." Further action on the overall bill was not expected until next week.

Levin said if judges are restricted in enforcing minority rights, there is nothing to prevent Congress from enacting "unnecessary" restrictions on other constitutional rights like free speech. Senate conservatives have been pushing proposals to strip federal judges of authority to rule in busing, school prayer and abortion cases.

A companion anti-busing amendment also approved Thursday by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would bar Department of Justice lawyers from participating in busing orders in federal courts. Opponents led by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., Jedediahized the amendment as an unconstitutional intrusion into the ability of federal judges to protect individual rights. Weicker conceded that busing is unpopular, but said the Senate was backing unwise public pressure to enact unconstitutional legislation.

Unsuccessfully appealing to the Senate, to "show our face and not our butts to the world," the blunt-spoken Weicker said, "Maybe this is good for getting votes, but it sure as hell is not good for the rest of the country."

He vowed to continue his fight through a filibuster against the overall bill. But anti-busing senators successfully closed off debate on the issue last year, and appeared to have the votes to do it again.

EPA budget may be cut one third

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's 1983 budget will slash spending for the Environmental Protection Agency by about a third from what it was in 1981 levels and will strip away "the safety net" that protects Americans from polluted air and contaminated water, a conservative group said Thursday.

The administration will propose spending $1.8 billion for the EPA in its 1983 budget and a percent level of the EPA's role in the National Wildlife Federation said. That would be a 40 percent cut from the $1.35 billion 1981 budget and a loss of 2,762 employees.

The Reagan budget will not be released until Monday, but the federation said it had obtained details from inside the agency. "Instead of going to Congress and saying, "Look, we want to repeal all the environmental protection statutes," the administration is trying to kill those laws by cutting off the funds needed to administer and enforce them," said Jay Hair, president of the 5.5 million member organization.

Remapping costs ruling sought

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Illinois House Speaker George Ryan said Thursday he will ask a judge to overrule state Attorney General Tyranne Senate's conservative Republicans must repay the state treasury $75,000 in political remapping court costs. "If we were to be guided by that attorney general's opinion . . . I and all future speakers and presidents of the Senate would be required to seek the approval of the attorney general to all our actions relating to the expenditure of appropriated funds," Ryan told a Statehouse news conference.

Ryan said he had retained Chicago attorney Jeremiah Marsh to file a suit asking a judge to declare that Faehn, a fellow Republican, is wrong and that public money cannot be spent on the GOP legal efforts in the battle of a bipartisan congressional reapportionment.

U.S. arms draft treaty sent to Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Thursday the United States has submitted a draft treaty to the Soviet Union for mutual reduction of medium-range nuclear arsenals and "a major contribution to security, stability and peace."

The proposal, which embodies Reagan's Nov. 18 plan to reduce intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe, was placed on the negotiating table in Geneva on Tuesday, according to David R. Gergen, a senior White House spokesman. Gergen said it contained no new proposals.

Friend says Williams might confess

ATLANTA (AP) — A friend of Wayne B. Williams testified Thursday that he told her before his arrest that he would confess if authorities investigating the slayings of young blacks built a strong enough case against him.

The prosecution's key witness, testimony from Sharon Blakely, the 114th victim in five weeks of testimony so far at the sensational murder trial. The judge refused a defense request for a directed verdict of acquittal, and Williams lawyers were expected to begin their case Friday.

Former state treasurer Smith slain

CHICAGO (AP) — Donald R. Smith, a former state treasurer of Illinois, was found bound and slain Thursday in a downtown hotel room, police said.

Smith, 35, was found in his bed at the Radisson Hotel on North Michigan Avenue. He had been "either strangled or suffocated," said Chicago Police Lt. Joe Chausse.

Smith's hands were tied and a towel was stuffed in his mouth, according to Chausse. He was made and appeared to have been dead "a day, maybe a day and a half," Chausse said.
Avowed racist inmate stabbed in Marion federal penitentiary

MARION (AP) — Joseph Paul Franklin, convicted of racist murders in Salt Lake City, was stabbed about 15 times in the neck and abdomen with a homemade weapon in his cell block at the Marion federal prison, the FBI said Thursday.

Robert Davenport, special agent for the FBI in Springfield, said Franklin, 31, of Mobile, Ala., was stabbed Wednesday night, three days after he arrived at the maximum security prison. He was transferred to Marion from the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield, Mo.

Franklin was treated at the Springfield, Mo., hospital where he was in stable condition Thursday and under guard by three correctional officers, said Dean Leech, a prison spokesman.

"We really don't know if it (the stabbing) was racially motivated or not," Davenport said.

It's possible that more than one inmate was involved in the attack, he said, but he would not identify the inmates or give their races.

The weapon used was similar to an ice pick and obviously was made within the prison walls. Davenport said. It was found near the unlocked cell where Franklin was assaulted, he said.

Officials were alerted to the attack about 8:38 p.m. "He was able to walk back to a correctional officer, of course (he was) bleeding, and obviously he had been attacked," Davenport said.

Franklin was convicted in September of first-degree murder for the August 1980 sniper slayings of two black men who were stopped down as they jogged with white women in a Salt Lake City park. He was sentenced to two consecutive life terms.

Earlier, he had been convicted in federal court in Utah of violating the civil rights of the joggers by killing them. He was sentenced to two consecutive life terms in that case as well.

GSC passes budget resolution

By Doug Hettiger

Staff Writer

The Graduate Council passed a resolution Wednesday night recommending that any attempt to make budget reductions should come from sources and expenditures other than projected salary increases.

The council rejected a Budget Advisory Committee's proposal that salaries be increased by 9 percent in fiscal 1981, according to Dennis Leiter, associate dean of the Graduate School. However, this increase covers only 30 percent of the salary base, because 16 percent is in withheld income, the unprojected retirement and other reductions in faculty.

Leiter said the 9 percent is an overestimate.

The resolution will go back to the Budget Advisory Committee and to the university administration.

A request by Debbie Pown, president of the Graduate Students Council, to consider a differential increase in graduate student tuition that is higher than the increase being applied to undergraduate students was referred to the Educational Policies Committee.

A proposal from the Office of Computing Affairs to change the procedure of "first serve," first for computer services to a more regulated form was referred to the council's Research Committee for analysis.

"The demand for computer printouts is so high that they use up all of the resources," John Baker, special assistant to the president for planning and budgeting, said. Under the proposal, computer resources would be allocated to departments and other units.

"It is not just for academics, but for everybody using the computer," Leiter said.

The proposal will be discussed further at the next Graduate Council meeting.

The council discussed, but took no action on a proposal from the Graduate Studies Committee to add an explicit policy statement in the "Graduate Catalog" recognizing that instructors of 400-level courses may require graduate work for graduate credit.

Plan to teach values threatens minorities

The right of minorities to hold their own views, even in the face of hostility from the majority, is a cornerstone of American democracy. Our country has been built on majority rule, coupled with respect for the views of minorities.

The plan to teach morals and values in Illinois public schools, advanced by Illinois Superintendent of Public Schools Donald Gill, is a direct threat to this vital American tradition. It is an invitation to domination, even tyranny, by majorities, allowing them to force their beliefs on the children of those who may not share their opinions.

As critics of the plan have pointed out, it will be nearly impossible to reach a consensus on what morals and values to teach. In a pluralistic society, in which nearly every school district has diverse racial, ethnic and religious groups, there are bound to be wide differences in opinion.

Carbondale is a perfect example of the cultural diversity this plan would impose. Local students come from white, black, Hispanic and other ethnic backgrounds. They hold Roman Catholic, Jewish, and other religious beliefs. Some may have no faith. Who would decide, in the satisfaction of all, what values to teach all the members of such a heterogeneous group?

The six "fundamental moral principles" advanced by advocates are not necessarily, basically to American life and the mainstream cultural tradition. They are embodied in our most revered cultural symbols, such as the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

But it is un-necessary to set these moral assumptions apart in a separate list. You don't have to be ready-made to: in government, history and other courses. Children learn these values naturally; by implication, in American history courses at all levels.

Asking local school districts to formulate their own packages of values would bring the risk that this will happen to be a powerful — the Moral Majority, the Roman Catholic or Southern Baptists — will stamp their religious and cultural values upon schools, and overwhelm the majority of voters in their school district.

The plan to teach morals and values in public schools and other advocates of the plan to teach a so-called secular code of morals is unrealistic. Codes of values, by their nature, include religious values. It is naive to suppose that schools can be a moral vacuum.

The contention that schools must teach values because families don't is false because it belittles the role of the home. The main thrust of the Student Council is to set these principles. That is the key issue at stake. The other values are subject to debate. Regardless of that, it is not the place of students to set a specific plan to teach specific values, with the objective that all who are taught will accept and believe in those values forever more. That should be left to churches, families and homes.

We are a nation of diverse peoples and beliefs. Any attempt to make one set of beliefs the official doctrine would be a harmful, backward step.

WTAO's attitude burts radio

I rarely listened to WTAO in the past, and as a result, another FM station, it wouldn't be polite to do so. However, I recently heard it piped into restaurants and other public places in Carbondale and enjoyed the diversity.

Now that the format has changed, new comments are in order.

I don't know the station's history, but I do know that its yin-yang symbol is tied into its choice of words in the station name. The word "two" roughly means "pass" and "outer" roughly means "inside". Thus, WTAO brings the metaphysical definition of the natural order of the universe. Someone who wants to be a Tanzan to listen to WTAO, and this choice symbolizes their early commitment to the unconventional.

I have no idea that the new management of WTAO hasn't been citing research about urban radio formats. No one uses them merely as a smoke-screen in to the radio business. Old hipsters don't spend money. It's a great way to build a bank account. As a result, unless one can pick up signals from St. Louis, there is no real radio focus in that area for lesser-interest popular music.

Whether that be reggae or punk.

Working for a radio station, I am aware of the relationship that exists between radio and the record business. But, here's what I think that modern music is: the way it ought to be. No radio station should limit itself to a select few artists, thus becoming in effect subsidiaries of record labels. By the same token, they should not throw their format totally on the mercy of listener requests. If all the listeners know are Beatles, Led Zeppelin and Elvis, then respect, radio ought to be able to become a listener's forum, playing something for no other reason than "this sounds pretty good and I think you might dig it, too what you think."

Some music formats are abandoning radio altogether. Some are abandoning radio altogether. We are the only format that isn't. It's like a radio station isn't. It's a radio station that isn't. It's a radio station that isn't. It's a radio station that isn't.

When I moved to Carbondale four years ago, I discovered that there were the two of the really excellent radio stations that Southern Illinois offered were WSIU and WTAO. I enjoyed both of these stations and their wide variety of music.

A few months ago WSIU changed their directorship (possibly for a disinterested) as well as their format. WTAO now plays off the air at midnight because they claim, of funding problems. They play carly music 30 to 60 hours a week and have cut their jazz programming to about 16 hours a week. (It's not that I don't enjoy the classical music, but I enjoy the blues and jazz variety more). They have generally shuffled programs among the people within their staff, not their music. WSIU is not that different from WTAO. They both have a few hours of jazz each day. WSIU and WTAO both have a few hours of jazz each day.

WHAT DOES 1982 hold for students? The picture is a dismal one at best. In all likelihood, these are among the things to which SIUC students will be exposed during the coming academic year: fraternities and sororities will lose all rights to doff their stoles; degradergraduate students, a 13 percent across the board increase in tuition for the School of Medicine, an incredible 43 percent increase in tuition for the School of Law; and National Direct Student Loans (that's right — hopping the programs) and (5) cutting ap-

Communities may decide school courses

Plan calls for morals classes

By John Ambrosla  Staff Writer

ROBERT LOUIE Stevenson wrote in "Lay Morals" that "morals are a percentage of righteousness every man fights his own hand.

If a plan being formulated by the Illinois Superintendent of Public Schools is implemented, however, morals may become a public affair, with the "hands" of educators, community members and students fighting for them - even though the plan calls for the teaching of basic democratic principles.

'Some communities may deem sexism, racism or communism as their moral belief."

The problems result not from an inability to convince people that morals and values are important to elementary and secondary school students, but from the failure to reach a consensus on which morals and values to teach.

Although State Superintendent of Public Schools Donald Gill has put together a general catalogue of democratic morals and principles, the plan calls for individual school districts to develop a set of "community morals" which would be taught in a values class or incorporated into existing curricula.

IN ITS ORIGINAL form, Gill said the plan was to encompass both "moral and spiritual" values. Instructors of the word "spiritual" was dropped from the plan when he received criticism.

"It's impossible to consider democratic values based upon the democratic ideal and ignore the moral assumptions that they're built upon," Gill said an Illinois State Board of Education committee last week.

"We're not talking about teaching somebody a special kind of morality, but that which is reflected in the democratic ideal, and is substantial." Gill told the board committee that a series of public hearings would be held statewide to determine a consensus on the underlying moral standards, although no date for meetings have been set.

The elements of the plan concern that American society needs It for a lot of reasons, including "sweeping" apparent breakdowns of the family unit and the growth of moral "values in high divorce rates, an influx of mothers into the workforce, a sarcastic attitude of many young parents and a general "value apathy" in American society, students come into schools with virtually no concept of democratic and humanitarian values.

CRITICS of the plan cite a multitude of possible dangers of such teaching:

- Non-democratic values may be taught in communities where ideas that are racist, sexist, or fascist, for example, hold sway among people who control the schools.

- The teaching of religion will intrude into the classroom.

- The teaching of one denomination's religious beliefs will occur in communities where denominations are dominant.

- Individual teacher bias will dictate which values will be taught at "right." Gill's PROPOSAL is a self-proclaimed attempt to plug a hole in society through the use of public education. A "curse" that educators say isn't unusual in the history of American education.

The plan sets forth six moral guidelines based upon principles "hammered out over the centuries" through implementation and interpretation of the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, the Constitution and subsequent laws. The six "fundamental moral assumptions" are:

- A recognition of the worth and supreme dignity of the individual.

- A belief that men and women have the capacity and intelligence to rule themselves.

- The belief that liberty is a fundamental value of human life and the freedom of thought and inquiry are inherent in the concept of liberty.

- An understanding that society is best when there is a separation of church and state.

- A belief in community and public good, and in a personal obligation to the public purpose.

- A commitment to equality for all citizens.

GILL'S PROPOSAL occupied the December newsletter of the Illinois State Superintendents of Public Schools. Gill said the newsletter has received more responses than any other since it was sent to the state Board of Education for a decision on whether the project will be implemented. That decision will most likely come around December 1983 or January 1984. Lyndon Wharton, a projects director in the superintendent's office and a former principal at Carbondale East High School, said the key to the project lies in the plan to have each school district's community decide which morals will be taught.

"To a certain extent, this has been an emotionally laden issue since we announced it," Wharton, who received a Ph.D. from SIU-C in 1979, said. "Some have taken it's computations differently than we intended it. People are afraid of having the same course be used in local schools when we teach.

"ACTUALLY, THE PROPOSAL relies heavily on the idea of giving curriculum control to the local school districts. We've received responses both pro and con on this, and a lot of the letters we've gotten reflect this fear of state interference in local education."

The plan drew fire from educators and citizens statewide when it was first discussed at a state board meeting in December. Wharton said the plan has been about six months in preparation and stressed that participation in it...
BAC busy during month for blacks

By Ken Propis. Staff Writer

February's month-long celebration of black history will be the 12th such commemoration on campus and the 26th for the nation's blacks. And for the BAC Affairs Committee, February will be a month of seminars, plays, movies and other activities geared toward raising the historical consciousness of the black community.

"Our objective is to involve the campus and community in a united effort to raise the level of black awareness," said BAC Coordinator David Pompey. "This year we will be announcing more programs that are not just social. Our scope is getting better every year," he said.

The programs begin Friday with "Soul in Motion," a dramatization of Bible excerpts, which will be presented at 7 p.m. in Pulliam Hall. It is a free and open-sponsored by the Black Ministrial Alliance of Carbondale.

Pompey said that, although a few of the planned programs had to be canceled, including the concert with the Pointer Sisters, there would still be a lot to do.

Two movies are part of the activities. "Brothers and Sisters," which has been shown Feb. 11 and "Lady Sings the Blues," will be shown Feb. 16 both in the Student Center Auditorium.

The Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority also will add entertainment to the events with the annual "Mr. Kappa Alpha Ball" at the Brown Bag in Carbondale on Feb. 13. Tickets cost $3.50 in advance or $5.50 at the door.

On Feb. 17, the Emma C. Hayes Center will be the site of a program designed for children between the ages of four and six. BAC Programming Chairperson Donna Ward said the program would feature games, clowns and fun.

"The children's program is one of our best yet," said Pompey, "It gives us a chance to meet the community and break the barrier we have between ourselves."

A black history musical will be presented at Gillespie Temple on Feb. 19. Also, a career awareness opportunities seminar is to be held beginning at 1 p.m. Feb. 19 in Student Center Hallrooms F and G. It is designed for high-school and college students. Buses will be provided for interested students at Carbondale High School.

There also is a black church tribute planned for Feb. 21, which will be held in all four ballrooms from 2 to 5 p.m.

Pompey said he is expecting a large turnout at most of the events and hopes to keep BAC on the programming schedule for the remainder of the semester.

"We've got everything this year," Pompey said. "Even though the concert was canceled, we may still get a concert sometime in April."

In March, a soul food banquet, featuring Temple College President Dr. Larry C. Richardson, will be held at Carbondale East Junior High School.

Career center has new programs

By Charles Victor
"Mud Writes","' 1/9, 1/9

Is there life after graduation? How to choose a major? Will I ever get my dissertation done? These are questions that students are always asking, and the career center is always ready to help answer.

For years a place where students could get advice on issues related to their studies and career was the Office of Counseling and Career Development in Woody Hall. The center has expanded since last year into more extensive and comprehensive programs.

"Most of our work in the past has been one-time counseling of students," said Janet Coffman, coordinator of the center since last August. "Over the years, though, we found many of the same common needs could be handled through structured programs. Recently, therefore, we've started working out programs that provide a comprehensive answer to the more diverse needs.

These programs take the form of short workshops, or sessions spread over four or five weeks, with each tackling a particular need.

Deciding on a major, for example, occupies the minds of freshmen and sophomores while juniors and seniors are frequently buggered by questions of career choice. Freshmen have emerged with new friends in the American education scene. Dual and multiple couples and re-entry women for instance are raising questions that are unique to the present day.

Dual and multiple couples have problems of child-care, finance and household tasks that single students in previous years never concerned themselves with. Re-entry women, typically over 35, have problems of personal identity that come with their age and experience. They, too, are for lack of a better phrase, a generation out of the realm of the average student.

To help dual career couples, the Office of Counseling and Career Development has started a new program, a five-week program, and a workshop entitled "The Dual Career Marriage" that focuses on improving communication skills and marital role priorities.

Another five-week program, "Using Your Experiences", aims at helping students break through their college experience.

Comprehensive seems to be the hallmark of the career center's services. "We want to reach as many career opportunities as many as possible through a comprehensive service," said Coffman.

Apart from these new needs the center has started name and workshops that deal with personal development, time management, interview skills, job search, study techniques and even principles of writing a dissertation.

Another area of special focus is the career information library. Coffman said, "People often know what they want to do but do not have enough information on their career. We are therefore updating our library that students could use on their own as a resource center."

We know there are many needs and we have many possible answers to many of them but not much of a students or faculty, for that matter, are aware that we exist or know the programs that we run.

"We get about 900 students a year coming in for one-to-one counseling, but the programs are in the pilot stage and only about 200 registered for them last year. I hope there is a snowballing effect which will bring more students to participate in the future.

Student reaction is mixed. Some feel more free to throw the questions back at you. Though I got some useful information from the library.

Banking seminar to focus on regulations of the profession

Gerald Dunne, a professor in the St. Louis University Law School and the editor of Banking Law Journal, will be the speaker for a seminar Feb. 17, sponsored by the St. Louis Business School Finance Department.

The seminar is expected to draw 50 to 80 Southern Illinois bankers, according to Lewis Davids of the finance faculty.

The sessions begin at 9 a.m. in the Ohio Room. Davids will talk with prospective law students at 11 a.m. and is scheduled to speak at 1 p.m.

Davids said the seminar, which regimens until 3:30 p.m., will focus on banking regulations especially in the areas of equal opportunity and consumer credit.

discussion of the superintendent's proposal.

The Rev. K. Ranta, campus minister with University Christian Ministries, says that morals classes were not properly taught without discussion of the question of an American society background Gill says is intertwined with religious views.

"To understand our democratic morals, as outlined from the Bill of Rights, Constitution and Declaration of Independence, you have to understand the background of the pilgrims and the Puritans," Gill said. "You would also have to understand the period of the Revolution and the belief of the Deists.

"Of course our morals and values have evolved over the years, and much of that is religious in nature. For example, to teach morals religiously in public schools is considered by some as a religious movement founded by the Puritans. The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and what he stood for has its basis in religion. And I don't see how you can bring up the Puritans, the Deists, the Quakers and Dr. King without even understanding the role of religion on students."

GILL said he is opposed, in principal, to the state morals proposal for two reasons: the idea of allowing individual communities to determine their own set of moral standards, and the violation of separation of church and state he believes would occur under the plan.

"If I think allowing a majority to the moral issues against the basic idea of democracy," he said. "My definition of a democracy is listening to the majority and protecting the rights of the minority. Community control of the moral issue wouldn't allow that.

"I also think it is essential in this country for us to maintain a separation of church and state because of what we believe in and what we live by. That shouldn't hold true for the rest of the world, however. I lived in England for four years where they have a state church. Just because they have that, it doesn't make them less democratic than us."

GILL said he doesn't agree with the argument that America has become a nation void of moral strength, and for that reason doesn't think morals classes are necessary.

"I know of no data to show that the family unit has become less dependable, and certainly know of no evidence to support we are more morally degenerate than we used to be," Gill said. "It's just that with improved communication, we're more aware of some of our problems.

"For example, I think the rate of violent crimes is far below what it was, say, 100 years ago. But it's easy to perceive violent crime as in would be strictly voluntary. "Districts already have the power to go ahead and start something like this if they want to," Leming said. "We're just trying to give them some guidance and help in developing a curriculum if they want. But we are not attempting to mandate anything." James Leming, an assistant professor in SIU's Curriculum, Instruction and Media Department, said that Gill may be surprised by a negative public reaction to his plan.

"IT'S AN unusual situation," Leming said. "in some ways, doing something people say they want, and the schools should be doing more of, and people don't like it when it's proposed. Anything coming down from a state officer concerning school policy is going to make people worry because they think the state is going to start taking away their local control."

"I don't think it would work well on a state level. That's why this would work -- because Gill has adapted it to sit in with local control. If it the plan is to create specific cities in morals, I can't think it will get off the ground. The only way to do this effectively is to incorporate the instruction of morals and values into already existing classes."

Two Carbondale educators, Margaret Hollis, assistant superintendent of Community High School District 165, and George Edwards, superintendent of Elementary School District 95, agree that there are some dangers inherent in a plan for teaching morals.

"WE DON'T have an official position, as a district, on the plan, although a few of the administrators have discussed it among ourselves," Hollis said. "Although such are somewhat divided, we are, frankly, a little apprehensive. Whenever you get into teaching morals, you have to figure out potential dangers." Edwards agreed, saying, "The implementation could be extremely difficult. For the public schools to take on another family mission, the teaching of morals, does not guarantee we could do that. It's potentially dangerous for individual school districts and teachers to teach various order systems on what's right and wrong."

WHILE A plan for local control of implementation of the program has drawn a more favorable response than the idea of state control, it has also been criticized as leaving too much room for interpretation of what democratic morals are. One of the biggest fears expressed on this issue -- based primarily on the recent conservative trend nationwide and the notoriety of the name Moral Majority -- is that a morals class would provide a way for religion to seep into public education. "I suppose that you can't separate some democratic morals from religious morals," Wharton said. "If you teach someone the 'do unto others rule you can't distinguish it from religion. Most of our values are based upon a religious foundation." Leming said the constitutional separation of church and state should virtually guarantee that religion won't be taught in morals courses. But he was quick to suggest that there are situations where religious instruction could go unnoticed.

"LET'S SAY you have a community that is 100 percent Jewish, and that community decides that Jewish morals and faith are what they want their children to learn," Leming said. "Unless one of the parents objects, which would be unlikely, religion will be taught at that school."

"But if one child or one parent objects to the program, then it would be safe to say that the court system would act as a guard against forcing religion on unwilling students."

S. Morris Eames, a professor in the Philosophy Department, said that it may be possible to develop a "secular morals system" to offer students. "Moral may be held by a person or an absorb of religion by children without being grounded in religion. There has been a movement to separate morals and -- even if they also are religious -- can be omitted without any religious interference."

WHILE EAMES said the courts should provide enough protection against religious intrusion into public schools, he warned that this problem could arise in separating secular and religious instruction, especially in a homogeneous community. While Edwards said one of the problems in administering a Carbondale public school system is that the community is not homogeneous.

will cause problems in trying to set up a standard of community morals.

"It could be especially hard for us in Carbondale to create a set of standardized morals to teach because of different groups and the diversity of viewpoints," Hollis said. "It could also be dangerous in other school districts as well, but with a homogeneous district, it could also be dangerous.

Edwards said his elementary school district would have a difficult time setting up a morals curriculum.

"WE'VE GOT such a wide spectrum of beliefs in the district, it would be impossible to pin down any specific morals and values the community would like to see taught," he said.

Leming said the diversity which exists in Carbondale may be unique when compared to other, more homogeneous, Illinois school districts. And he said that could lead to a perditionversion of the basic democratic values being forwarded by Gill.

"Some communities may have a simple, American, Non-violent, Non-militarism or communism as their moral belief," Leming said. "Would those then be taught to students? There are still probably better but in other the Supreme Court is a communist plot. I'm offering a careers in the school districts, but there are places where these beliefs are held.

But Leming said if a minority of students and parents disagree with standards decided upon by the community, they may well have to learn to live with those ideals.

"I didn't vote for Ronald Reagan, but I admire him to be my president," Leming said. "If a majority decides what is a democratic moral, then the minority must accept that. Isn't that the premise of democracy? That's what happens in a democracy.

In contrast to the controversy about what comprises democratic morals, a recent Gallup poll showed that more than 80 percent of Americans believe that the public education system has become morally corrupt, and that classes are needed to rectify the problem.

"EVERY TIME something goes wrong in society, parents expect schools to pick up the problem and take care of it," Edwards said. "Parents have been lax in their dealing with the problem. I'm not sure if education can help them out on this one."

Hollis said a combination of parental problems and liberalism in the past 20 years of education have led to, among other things, a moral problem in the schools.

"The liberal movement in education reformed and took away a great deal of control from local educators," Hollis said. "A good example of this is the discipline issue. A lot of flexibility has been taken out of the hands of educators."

Wharton, one of the original planners of Gill's proposal, said that public opinion almost dictates that morals be incorporated into education.

"People have shown a desire and need for values instruction," Wharton said. "I think that a plan like this is completely voluntary as the part of schools — with our assurance in materials and curriculum planning can help fill a void in society through an already existing institution.

LEMIN BLAMED the "moral void" in America on parents and their lack of expa­ cm for the well-being of their children.

"Parents will let their children pick up values anywhere," Leming said. "They get them from teachers, parents, friends, even movies and television. So right now the moral code of kids seems to be sex and drugs and rock 'n' roll. Teachers don't represent those things, so kids might not listen to them.

"What I'm saying is that until we can get students to respect the people they're learning their morals from. It doesn't matter if we teach a course or offer a whole year of moral training. It won't work."

Leming summed up the dilemma inherent in the teaching of values in public schools:

"Take a school district in an inner city ghetto," he said. "The morals that community wants its children to learn are unique from any other setting. They would concern life in the ghetto, and survival. And chances are those values might just reflect what the rest of America sees as basic democratic values. What do you do then?"

Jazz trumpeter ‘Doctor Jam’ experiments with dance music

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

“Some people call me the Mick Jagger of jazz,” he said. “And some just call me Doctor Jam.”

His name is Bryant Young, 19, a sophomore in music. Four things are evident about him: he loves jazz, he enjoys playing his trumpet and flugelhorn (preferably in front of an audience), he is exuberantly confident and he is visually impaired.

But the fact that he is extremely nearsighted (his vision is 20/50) has not seemed to slow him down much. “I think it’s a message from God,” Young said of his weak sight. “I wanted to be an L-train conductor when I was little, but my eyes got worse.” That didn’t stop him, though, from involving himself in music as well as a number of other activities.

Young said he was homecoming king in high school and voted most talented in the yearbook. He admits he never went to his junior or senior prom, but he shrugs it off, saying, “I could go to a hotel anytime.”

He has played trumpet since he was 3 years old, and he formed his first group, Dr. Jam and the Awesome Blossom, in high school. He now plays in the SIU Small Jazz Ensemble and with his own group, Sportin’ Life, which he said includes Chris Simecox on drums, U.Overton on rhythm guitar, Craig Cunningham on lead guitar and Grayling Martin on bass.

Young may know jazz intimately, but communicating that knowledge seems hard to him. “Jazz,” he said, “is difficult to define. I think it’s playing what you feel, it’s listening.”

Presently, Young is getting into writing and performing dance music, specifically a mixture of jazz and punk-funk. He said he likes the type of music that Rick James, Tom Brown, Earth Wind & Fire and, to an extent, Prince, are playing. But Young wants his music to be more instrumental. “When you use a trumpet or a sax,” he said, “people think jazz. When you do punk-funk, people think you can’t do it instrumentally. I did one tune, ‘Dance to the Jam,’ without lyrics. That tune people can dance to or just listen to, it isn’t lyrics being limiting.”

When asked if he has plans for fame, Young responds: “I’m trying to get into the money. Nat’s about it, it’s bound to happen.”

WIDB is going to make that Florida spring-break vacation very easy for two people.

The station is giving away an eight-day vacation to Daytona Beach in a drawing Feb. 23. People can register for the vacation at WIDB shows in local clubs or by listening to the station, at 104 cable FM or AM in the dorms, to find out when to call in and register.

The eight-day, seven-night trip includes, among other things, transportation, room, a trip to Disney World and park.

Also set to begin in February is a featured artists presentation, in which the station will spotlight one or two major acts each week, each time mixing a selection of their songs into the usual format.

Special features to be continued include The BBC Rock Floor (6 p.m. Fridays), The King Biscuit Flower Hour (10 p.m. Sundays), free lunches from Booby’s, The Plaza Platter (15 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays), Backtrax, a classic LP show (9 p.m. Thursdays), and The Jazz Message Sundays from 4 to 8 p.m.

New shows planned include bookkeeping will be turned over to WIDB's end his assistants at the Carbondale office.

Dyer stressed that mail delivery service will not be affected by the shift in responsibility.

The move, which is part of a major consolidation effort in the Midwest region, will save the postal service $1.8 million nationwide, Dyer said. It will reduce the work loads of some current sectional centers, allowing them to function more efficiently as mail processing centers, while increasing the work load of the larger centers, he added.

Dyer said the consolidation effort involves five states – Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska – and 148 workers. He said the workers affected will only be from the administrative level, and that none of the workers will lose their job or take a cut in pay, but that some may be asked to assume a lower-ranked position or relocate to another office.

The workers who opt for the lower ranking will not face a pay reduction or loss of seniority.

SIU-C hosting tourney for top debate teams

SIU-C's Second Annual Sahiti Forensics Tournament will bring top college teams from the Midwest and across the nation to campus.

Some 18 teams are scheduled to compete in eight rounds of debate and 10 individual speaking events.

SIU-C's team, host of the tournament and presently ranked fifth in the nation, will not compete. However, David Buckley, director of the tournament and the forensic department, hopes as many as eight teams of SIU-C players, who will not be eligible for awards, involved in the events.

Strong teams scheduled to compete include Tennessee and Alabama, both ranked among the top 10 teams.

Wharton College, which finished in the top five last year, and Illinois State.

Events are scheduled throughout the three-day period in 25 rooms in Faner Hall, the Agriculture Building and other buildings. Specific schedules may be picked up at centrally-located areas in either the Agriculture Building or Faner Hall at any time over the weekend.

The public is invited to attend free.

The Cross-Examination Debate Association-sanctioned event is sponsored by the Department of Speech Communication and the forensic department.

White re-elected to sheriff's board

Jackson County Sheriff Don White was re-elected to a three-year term on the Executive Board of the Illinois Sheriffs' Association at a mid-winter training conference last week in Chicago.

White, who is secretary-treasurer of the 42-county Southern Division of the association, also was reappointed chairman of the goals and policy committee.

Simon campaign needs volunteers

Marvin L. Riedle
Student Volunteer

...a great opportunity to... students who want a "great extracurricular activity." If you would try working on a political campaign, says Bill Ward, field coordinator for the Paul Simon Congress Campaign...

A field coordinator Ward's responsibilities include organizing activities at the grassroots level. Ward, a Robinson, was a senior in public relations before taking a semester off to join the Simon re-election campaign. Ward said that student volunteers are needed.

"You don't have to have any political experience, as long as you can put forth the effort," he said. Ward said that student volunteers are "an integral part of every political campaign."

Twelve SIU-C students are working the campaign and their responsibilities are numerous, Ward said.

A new volunteer usually "starts with the basics, then once the volunteer shows initiative, the responsibilities become larger, including the chance to assist in the coordination of the campaign," Ward said.

Program on weight in Woody Hall

The Office of Women's Services will sponsor a weekly program on "Women and Weight" beginning Feb. 18. Based on Susie Orbach's bestselling book "Fat Is a Feminist Issue," the program is aimed at women who consider their weight a problem, according to Mary McGhee of the Office of Women's Services.

The program, which is free and open to the public, will be from 3:30 to 5 p.m. on Thursdays in Woody Hall 142, Wing B.

member National Education Association, says Reagan's plan is "a blueprint for disaster."

Reagan sought cuts of more than 15 percent in virtually all federal school aid last year. He left both the $1 billion handicapped aid and $3.9 billion Title I program of compensatory education for needy children untouched.

The Reagan administration already has trimmed funds for vocational education, which Congress first endorsed in 1917, to $403 million from a peak of $784 million in Carter's final year.

Gene Bottom, executive director of the American Vocational Association, expects Reagan to try to slash those funds in half next year.

State and local governments invested $9 for each $1 spent by Washington on vocational education, but Bottom says "a federal presence is crucial, not only to have a skilled work force but for a strong national defense."

OTHER EDUCATORS echo the refrain that Reagan, in seeking cuts in education aid, is undermining his own goal of rebuilding the nation's industrial and military might. They see Reagan abandoning President Eisenhower's post-World War II commitment to "the highest possible excellence in our education."

The Reagan administration phased out the last $360,000 of federal service job four months ago. Once, 700,000 people had CETA jobs.

CETA was signed into law by President Nixon in 1973 to replace the Great Society manpower programs of the 1960s. At its height in the late 1970s, CETA distributed more than $1 billion a year to 475 cities, counties and states. Now its budget stands at $3.8 billion.

THE ADMINISTRATION is poised to seek congressional approval for a transfer of job training responsibilities to the states in fiscal 1983, starting next Oct. 1, possibly through block grants to the states to disburse to labor-management councils.

Somit said that although he was "not comfortable defending tuition increases," he pointed out that the proposed law School tuition increase would generate $600,000.

However, Somit said if the law were enacted "it would mean an increase in the number of students and an expansion of faculty." Next year, he said, "New staffing will cost in excess of $100,000. The money is going right back into the law school.

Shaw said the $60,000 "would have to come from somewhere, and one way it would be increased undergraduate tuition by more than 15 percent. That's not the only alternative because there is no assurance that the governor will accept the UIEHE's budget recommendations."

The law students also objected to the administration's rationale for the proposed tuition increases for the professional schools. According to Shaw, one of those factors is "that professional programs are more expensive."

The other swimmers ranked were Conrado Porta, third in the 200 breaststroke, and John Haggins, tenth in both the 100 and 200 freestyle. The Saluki relay teams also rank highly. The 400 medley relay is second, and the 400 and 800 free relay times are both refundable.

The Saluki meet was presented to SIU-C students and diving affiliates since January 1981 are not eligible to compete.

"I've been trying to impress on the kids that if we get the mile out of Conrado Porta, third in the 200 breaststroke, we will get the other guys from everyone else on the team," he said. "We're not going to devastate anyone, but we're going to go in there and try to qualify vsv a team. I've noticed a better attitude in the team since Sunday, which was a good turning point."

Vogel feels if Painton, Turner and Erickson all break 36 points at Louisville, they will be more assured about their chances to qualify for the nationals this season.

The Salukis are all healthy. Vogel said Painton has a back injury, but "I'm not sure he will compete in Louisville.

Gymnasts to meet two Top 20 teams

By Steve Metach Sports Editor

Coach Herb Vogel thinks the women's gymnastics team will produce a strong showing when they meet against two of the nation's top teams this weekend. The #4 Salukis will battle Louisville's Cardinals and Louisville State's Tigers, both sporting 2-0 slates, at Louisville Sunday. The Tigers are ranked 16th in the nation.

Vogel calls SIU-C can "run adequately with Louisville" but don't have the depth to beat the Cardinals. "I haven't seen Louisville State this year," said the coach, "but reports I've heard, they sound like a good, solid team." said the coach.

Facing the Tiger attack is Saluki sophomore Sue Toti. "Sue is one of the best gymnasts in the United States," said the coach. Amassing 36.65 points per meet and has recorded the highest individual all-around score in the nation this year - 37.75. Vogel feels toti is a "very creditable and powerful" gymnast which has added that she is "also a human being," and can be had. He said Saluki all-arounder Cindy Scott isn't even close. Turner and Lori Erickson can "run with" Totti. "Val has bested her in the beam," said the coach. "I believe that Pat and Cindy and even her the uneven bars, and that Val and Pam are equal in the balance beam." According to Vogel, the Saluki's "big three" can't be beat on floor exercise.

Scott is the only tough gymnast challenging the Saluki Sunday. Louisville's highest score this season was a 14.3 on the bars. Scott's leading average, 42.5 points a game, was after averaging 14.3 points a game - while shooting 4.8 percent of the floor and 90 percent from the line. Saluki's second is on the team in rebounding - behind Sue Faber - with an 8.2 average, and has been the team's leading scorer in eight games and the top rebounder in nine. "Connie's progress has been a crucial factor in our recent success," Scott said. "She has become a dominant force on offense, and on defense with her defensive rebounding. The players like her mix, they can use her, because we need a mix.

Vogel feels the team has improved over the years as collegiate teams become more competitive. "Since I've been here I've seen things improve over a good period of time," LeFevre said, "The players are more talented now and play the 'toughest tennis schedule' we've had in years.

An examination of the schedule bears out LeFevre's observations. Saluki's slate is Big Eight Conference and Missouri Valley champion Wichita State, Mid-American champion Western Michigan, Ohio Valley champion Murray State, and SIU-C's third-place finisher Georgia. Add to that schedule talented Big Ten and nationally ranked tennis squads and it comes up three against five stiff competition.

"We always schedule the toughest teams we can get," LeFevre said, "because it's our best recruiter. Recruits are impressed with a schedule like ours when they see the level of competition it contains. It couldn't be much tougher." Illinois State, fifth in MVC competition last year, notch below the Salukis, return No.1 seed Darrell Smith. The Redbird star, seeded fourth in the Illinois Intercollegiate Championships held at SIU-C in October, lost in three sets to Saluki freshman David Dail in this national championship. Senior Brian Stanley, seeded No.4 in the Saluki slate, lost to Ill. State'sregistered at MVC tournament and will probably see sophomore Cris Granger and Smith. Late Ammon, senior from Manil, is seeded second for SIU-C this weekend. LeFevre is not certain where the other players will be seeded as yet, including Deniales, who has a cold.

"These positions aren't permanent right now," LeFevre said. "We don't make the final decision on who will be permanently seeded until after spring break. In order to compete in the Valley championship, they must be permanently seeded on his team for over half his matches played throughout the season, he added.

Judging from the practices the team has had, LeFevre said the players look pretty good so far.
