Fed up with foreclosures

Farming coalition fights rising tide of bankruptcy

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

A grim-faced group of area farmers and other supporters queued up outside Congressman Ken Gray's Williamson County Regional Airport office Thursday for a press conference regarding legislation designed to halt the escalating number of farm foreclosures in the United States, the Save the Family Farm Act.

Conference spokesman P.L. Parr, a Union County dairy farmer and a member of Illinois' National Farmers Organization, said the farm act is "desperately needed" for the survival of America's farmers.

According to the National Save the Family Farm Coalition, the SFFA is designed to impede the rising number of farm foreclosures in the United States by eliminating target prices that encourage farmers to produce crops that are in surplus and by increasing the commodity prices farmers receive.

Four bushel baskets filled with corn, beans, milo and wheat were placed beside the speaking podium. Signs listing the cost to produce a bushel of the crop and the government price received by the farmers were placed in the baskets.

Collectively, the cost of producing the four bushels was $15.90. The government price given for them came to $10.39.

Parr said the bill will provide emergency loans for farmers while eliminating government subsidies. "As a rule, farmers do not like welfare from the government," he said. "We don't like to get paid for what we don't produce."

Organized by the Illinois South Project, a non-profit, public advocacy organization, the conference was designed to stress the necessity and importance of the bill to U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, who was not present, said Ralph Coolman, an Illinois South Project staff member.

He said Gray's support would considerably increase the bill's chances for approval by Congress.

The bill—introduced in the U.S. Senate Thursday by Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and in the House by Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.—entails many of the proposals found

Staff ignores council view on sign issue

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

City staff recommended to the Zoning Board of Appeals Wednesday not to allow a sign at American Gas and Wash to hang over city property, despite a decision by the City Council Monday to allow the sign to partially hang over a city right-of-way.

At a hearing before the zoning board Thursday, John Womick, attorney representing American Gas and Wash owner Kim Rasnick, said he was "shocked" by the recommendation.

The zoning board decided to continue discussion of the encroachment onto city property at the city council meeting Feb. 23.

"I think we have a crucial issue about the staff contradicting the decision of the City Council," Womick said after the hearing.

City planner Jim Rayfield said the partial encroachment is a violation of city code.

"We recommended to deny it because Womick's position is that it (the encroachment) waived that law," Rayfield said.

The zoning board and the council must agree on the encroachment before Rasnick is allowed to hang the sign over city property.

'State' speech lauded for 'Democratic' tone

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Vagueness and a Democratic flavor made up Gov. James Thompson's 11th State of the State address Wednesday, local state legislators said.

"I'm glad the governor chose to deal with the same issues the Democrats have been dealing with for so long," said 59th District State Sen. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville.

"Like Poshard said, I think he sounded like a Democrat governor," said 58th District State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin.

"I guess the governor realizes we have good programs," said 116th District State Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro.

"It was a more general State of the State address than I've ever heard before," said 117th District State Rep. Jim Rea, D-Christopher. "It was very upbeat but I want to know also how he proposes to pay for all this."

Thompson stressed four topics: broad education reform as well as reform of the welfare system, creation of a more stable economic climate for businesses and improving

Illinois citizens' quality of life.

Of the four, education predominated and formed the crux for the rest of the address. He made a plea for continued education reform, originally begun in 1985.

"We recognized that we needed to demand more from our parents, our teachers, our children, our schools—in short, from ourselves," Thompson said. "But ... we cannot stop now. We cannot pause, or reflect, but must, as our competitors in the world are doing, plunge ahead and pay the price while we do it."

Aside from reform,

Thompson's other emphasis on price and education came in reference to general education funding. He stressed that education's cost, both financial and psychological, is probably best shouldered by students and their parents.

"In my day parents, at least the parents that I knew, cared more than many do today about their children's education and welfare. They did not push the task off onto teachers and schools as surrogate parents."

Dunn said he agreed with See SPEECH, Page 6

Report: Waite shot, injured by captors

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A West German newspaper reported Thursday that missing Church of England envoy Terry Waite was shot and wounded trying to escape from Islamic fundamentalist kidnapers. Lebanese militia groups disputed the report.

The four-sentence story in West Germany's mass-circulation Bild newspaper could not be confirmed by the State Department, and a Beirut militia security source described it as "baseless." The Church of England also discounted the report.

The Bild report quoted "Beirut security circles" as reporting the 49-year-old Waite was shot by a guard with a machine pistol as he tried to flee his captors. Bild described Waite's wound as life-threatening.

Bild said the kidnapers of two U.S. hostages, whom Waite was trying to free through negotiations, had placed the church emissary on trial before a secret court.

In Beirut, the militia security source, dismissing the Bild report as "baseless," said, "I don't think that Terry Waite would try to escape. This report was fabricated as a pretext to launch a military attack on Lebanon."

Kabalan Kabalan, a senior security official in the powerful

Shiite Moslem Amal militia, said news reports that Waite was sighted laughing and smiling in the southern suburbs of Beirut are "absolutely unbelievable."

"How could kidnapers just take their hostage in public and let people see him? In the science of security, such a thing is out of the question. No militia would dare take its hostage in public and escort him in the streets."

Cosmonauts 'feeling well' at start of 5-month orbit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two cosmonauts aboard a new Soyuz TM-2 spacecraft rocketed into the night sky in Soviet Central Asia early Friday and headed for the new Mir space station and a stay in orbit expected to last at least five months. Cosmonaut Yuri Romanenko, a veteran of two previous space flights, and Alexander Laveikin, an engineer making his first trip to space, were "feeling well," the Soviet news agency Tass said.

Bomb explodes near Botha's residence; 1 hurt

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — A bomb exploded Thursday in a bus stop shelter near the official residences of President Pieter W. Botha and several Cabinet members, slightly injuring a woman, the government and witnesses said. A spokesman for Pretoria's Bureau for Information said the explosion outside the suburban estate where Botha and at least six Cabinet members have homes was caused by a limpet mine, an explosive designed to cling to the hulls of ships and used in previous terror bombings in South Africa.

Palestinian says Syria, terrorist group linked

ROME (UPI) — A Palestinian gunman, captured in the December 1985 attack that killed 16 people at the Rome airport, told police that Syrian intelligence agents acted as his contacts with the Abu Nidal terrorist organization, a magistrate's report said Thursday. The jailed terrorist confirmed Syrian support for Abu Nidal, head of a dissident Palestine Liberation Organization faction that has staged several terrorist attacks in Western Europe in recent years.

Printers union ends dispute at Murdoch plant

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's largest print union Thursday called off picketing at news baron Rupert Murdoch's hi-tech publishing plant after more than a year of one of the country's most violent industrial disputes. At a meeting described as "absolute chaos," the Society of Graphical and Allied Trades voted 23-9 to remove its pickets and end demonstrations at Wapping, in London's East End, where Murdoch's Times, Sunday Times and News of the World newspapers are printed.

400 protesters arrested for trespassing

MERCURY, Nev. (UPI) — More than 400 protesters, including entertainers and scientists, were arrested for trespassing onto the Nevada Test Site Thursday during an anti-nuclear demonstration by as many as 2,000 people, the largest in the facility's history. Entertainers Robert Blake, Kris Kristofferson and Martin Sheen were among those handcuffed and taken to nearby Beatty, Nev., where they were booked and released pending trials in March. Astronomer-author Carl Sagan, his wife, Ann Druyan, and peace activist Daniel Ellsberg also deliberately walked onto government property and were arrested.

Contra rift could end U.S. aid, lawmakers say

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Several congressmen said Thursday they told Contra leader Arturo Cruz privately that his expected resignation from the rebel leadership probably would spell the end of U.S. military aid to the anti-Sandinista forces. Cruz told the eight lawmakers who met with him Wednesday that he is preparing to quit the United Nicaraguan Opposition because the group has become a "clique" and is failing to attract broad support from Nicaraguans, some of the House members said.

Rule change viewed for nuclear evacuation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is considering a rule change that would enable nuclear plants to get operating licenses even if state and local officials refuse to participate in evacuation planning, officials said Thursday. At a congressional hearing, the NRC released a draft rule that would allow a plant to go into operation if the utility shows that, despite its best efforts, state and local noncooperation prevents full compliance with NRC emergency planning requirements.

Official denies mishandling Contra account

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senior State Department official said Thursday he did nothing wrong in arranging a secret bank account to receive $10 million from oil-rich Brunei, on the island of Borneo, for the Nicaraguan guerrillas—although the money is missing. Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin America, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that he ordered a "clean" account established for the money so it would not be mixed with any U.S. money for the rebels.

Mental exercises: Debaters prefer books to barbells

By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer

Jeff Bile is a busy man. Sitting at his desk surrounded by papers and folders, SIU-C's debate coach is preparing for the next tournament.

But he is not too busy to pull out a large red scrapbook and proudly pass it to visitors. The scrapbook, cluttered with clippings and papers that hang from the book's edges, is Bile's own attempt to keep a record of his debate team's many accomplishments.

Hanging on the wall nearby are plaques and other mementos from the team's first national championship in 1986.

SIU-C is ranked first of the 326 schools in the Cross-Examination Debate Association's most recent report. Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, and Wheaton College are ranked second and third, respectively.

The second half of the debating season has now begun. Bile calls it "the longest season of any organized sport."

"Sometimes people look at me funny when I call it a sport, but it really is because it involves the same sort of effort that is required in any other sport."

The amount of research that goes into a topic for debate is tremendous. Bile said as he thumbed through a thick folder filled with typed pages. He explained that the folder, called a block, is all the information needed for only one argument that an opponent might raise.

"Of the thousands of arguments that could be raised, it's not uncommon for us to spend hundreds of hours researching just one of them. For the most dedicated team members, it really does take all of their out-of-class time," he said.

This semester, the team will be debating whether an employer ordering drug testing is an invasion of privacy.

Nathan Dick, sophomore in speech communication and debate team member, agrees with Bile that the amount of research can sometimes be tiring and frustrating.

"Once last semester, my committee was scared that we weren't going to be prepared for the first tournament, so we went to the library and researched 10 books in five hours," Dick said.

Mary Keehner, senior in speech communication and debate team member, agrees with Bile's comparison of debate and sports.

"I don't think there is a difference," Keehner said. "One is challenging your body to its limits and the other challenges your mind. We may not be lifting weights, but we practice and refine our skills."

The tournament schedule doesn't leave team members with much free time. Bile said. "It is not uncommon for each of them to spend 20 hours researching from Monday through Thursday, then leave Carbondale and compete Friday, Saturday and Sunday," he said.

Fate of 2 local transportation projects uncertain

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Federal support for Carbondale's Railroad Relocation project and a Carbondale-to-East St. Louis four-lane highway rests with a joint U.S. Senate-House of Representatives conference committee, for the moment.

The committee, impaneled to iron out differences between similar pieces of House and Senate legislation, will come together as a result of the U.S. Senate's $65.4 billion transportation spending package, approved Wednesday.

Unlike a $91 billion U.S. House transportation bill, approved Jan. 21, the Senate version had no reference to either Carbondale-related project, said David Carle, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. Paul Simon.

Carle said the committee could begin "hammering out" a compromise piece of legislation—the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Act of 1987—that includes both projects as early as next week.

Regardless of committee accord, the bill must be re-examined by both houses of Congress after changes are made. Even then, Carle said, the projects could be excised.

Pam Huey, a Simon spokeswoman, said both Simon and U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon voted to support the transportation bill.

Carle added that Simon would go along with the final bill version from the committee "if they put the projects on the new rewritten version."

Of the two projects, both sponsored by U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, D-22nd, in the House version, only one would have money coming from Washington to Illinois.

The House bill contains about 90 regional projects from across the nation.

A requested $5 million portion of the $55 million local relocation project would go toward installation of a temporary trainway, Carle said. The $5 million would come out of a federal transportation trust fund for fiscal 1987.

The trainway would reroute traffic on the city's Illinois Central Gulf line while a 30-foot depression is dug. The depression, or "big ditch," as it has been called, is supposed to facilitate Carbondale's east-west highway traffic.

The four-lane highway, however, would get 95 percent funding from the federal government, as noted in the House's version, with just 5 percent of the funding coming from the state.

Richard Darby, press secretary for Gray, said the government normally funds only 75 percent of "primary" state highway projects, designated primary in each state by the governor. But the highway isn't on Gov. James Thompson's list of priority road plans, said David Fields, Thompson's press secretary.

Star Wars a costly drain on America

WHEN PRESIDENT REAGAN unveiled his idea for a space-based missile defense system in a speech in March of 1983, most experts—including those in the Reagan administration—predicted that it would be many decades before such a system was ready for deployment. Some critics doubted that the technology needed to realize Reagan's dream could ever be developed.

Now, however, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other top Pentagon officials are saying that an "initial" Star Wars system may be ready for deployment as early as 1994. This preliminary system differs greatly from Reagan's original vision of a total defense against Soviet missiles. Instead of lasers and beam weaponry, the "Phase 1" system would rely on ground-based missiles and rocket-armed satellites.

Whatever kind of weaponry the system consists of, it is apparent that the United States and the Soviet Union are on the brink of a new, more dangerous arms race. Pentagon officials have conceded the offensive capacities of Star Wars. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union is busy perfecting its own system.

A RECENT STUDY by the George C. Marshall Institute, conducted at the behest of Star Wars proponents, estimates that a system such as the one now being considered for deployment could at best destroy 90 percent of incoming Soviet missiles. The system also could be crippled by Soviet antisatellite weapons and clouds of floating space debris. With these loopholes in the system, is Star Wars really worth the cost and the effort being poured into it?

The Reagan administration already has spent nearly $9.4 billion on Star Wars. It has requested $5.9 billion more for 1988. The Pentagon price tag for the Phase 1 system is said to be $100 billion. But no one really knows the actual cost since the Pentagon has restricted details on how it is spending funds for the Star Wars project. Not even Congress can find out how the money is being spent. Given the history of past Pentagon abuses, this is indeed a foreboding development.

Further clouding the monetary picture is the fact that even this scaled-down model of Star Wars is based on technology that has yet to be developed. How can the Defense Department attach a price tag to something that doesn't exist yet?

WITH SO MANY QUESTIONS about Star Wars left unanswered, one wonders why the Pentagon is in such a hurry to deploy even a limited system. The answer is simple: The Pentagon wants to lock Star Wars on track before the end of Reagan's term in office. Weinberger fears the next administration may kill the project, or use it as a bargaining chip in future arms-reduction talks.

Right now, Star Wars is little more than a drain for America's tax dollars and scientific genius. As the development process is sped up, it will suck in ever-greater amounts of resources that could be better put to peaceful uses. Congress, we hope, will recognize Star Wars for what it is—a costly pipedream—and rein in the program.

The perils of parking lots

Studying by the window on the fifth of Morris Library, I noticed that one of SIU-C's "finest" had placed a parking ticket on at least 20 cars. At $5 to $10 a piece, these revenues must tally up fast! Are these guys working on a commission or what?

I am writing this in hope that someone will be able to tell me what is being done with all the money collected from these parking fines, let alone, that which is being collected from the sale of parking stickers.

And why does SIU-C sell more stickers than parking spaces available? We all know that even a blue sticker is no guarantee of a parking space.

The parking situation here has been a problem for a long time. I can't rightly complain because I don't have a feasible solution to offer, but a lot of money has been invested in both parking stickers and in parking fines, and I would like to know how it has been used to improve our situation.—Lynn Shields, business administration.

OUR AGE IN THE HOLE

I'm not a lazy American; I just want teachers who speak English

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

I AM NEITHER a Nuremberg-spawned neo-Nazi nor a lazy American who languishes stupidly within the framework of the evil, spoon-feeding media of the United States. I do, however, support legislation requiring foreign instructors to pass a language skills exam before they can teach in Illinois universities.

Racism is not the issue in this controversy, prompted by Illinois' recent legislation of English fluency testing. And I strongly resent it being intimated that I am a slurchucking, aspiring Himmler because I believe English-speaking students deserve a quality education for their money, rather than suffering educational impediment because of the instructors' inability to communicate in coherent English.

HOW CLEARLY I remember the frustration and humiliation endured my sophomore year as I struggled to wade through the confusing realm of Math 107, a required four-hour algebra class. Admittedly, mathematics has been a bewildering subject for me and one that I feebly attempted only because it was a requirement.

My algebraic battle was compounded by the poor English-speaking abilities of the teaching assistant assigned to my lab. The instructor spoke truly horrendous English. His inflection, intonation pronunciation and sentence structure made his speech practically unintelligible. Questions regarding problems usually were answered with a staccato blur.

Not only was I working with my own difficulty in understanding the basics of in-intermediate English, I also was forced to fight my instructor's pathetic English. I worked, I struggled and I worried constantly. A four-hour "F," while not only decimating my fledgling GPA, also would necessitate my retaking the course—a horror of considerable magnitude.

To his credit, my instructor tried to give me outside class help. But the effort was useless; I simply couldn't understand him. And I wouldn't blame this inability on good of American laziness or the superior intensity of the education he received in his homecountry—an education that mysteriously failed to provide him with an adequate background in speaking the English language. To my discredit, I speak and understand only one language—English.

After hiring a tutor and devoting a ridiculously large amount of homework time on the class (particularly when compared to my other classes) I managed to pull a sparkling 70 percent in the class.

ANYONE, FOREIGN, or American should be allowed to instruct in the United States, and those desiring this profession should be encouraged and aided in any way possible. However, if the person can't speak discernible English, he or she shouldn't be teaching English-speaking students. Is it presumptuous to assume that American students should be provided the "luxury" of an English-speaking instructor? To teach is to communicate, and if an individual cannot speak understandable English to English-speaking students, that individual is not qualified to teach. After the language skills exams have been taken, I'm sure this will prove to be an overwhelming exception, rather than the rule.

As a journalism student, I was required to pass the Language Skills Exam before advancing into the higher-level editorial classes. The LSE consisted of a variety of grammatical, spelling and English-usage problems designed—logically enough—to test the student's ability to use the language, the future tool of any journalist. It was a worrisome experience, but a necessary one, for if a journalist cannot spell, construct sentences or punctuate adequately, how could he or she be expected to work competently in the profession?

The language skills exam to be taken by our foreign instructors is neither a witch hunt nor an attempt to ostracize a particular race or ethnic background. It is a legitimate attempt to improve the quality of our educational system, just as the LSE is necessary to improve the education of SIU-C's budding journalists. And that is surely a commendable effort. I doubt if the Nazis would have thought of it.

Look for racism in your own backyard

A word of advice to People Living the Dream: Put your own nose in order before you criticize your neighbor's housekeeping. You traveled to Forsyth County, Ga., that hotbed of blatant racism, to demonstrate that you believed in the teachings of Martin Luther King Jr. One wonders, however, why Jackson County hasn't received your attention.

Look around you and count the number of blacks holding faculty or administrative positions on this campus. Look around you, and count the number of blacks that own businesses other than the one on the northeast side of Carbondale.

In the past two years, the University has gone in search of an athletics director, a chancellor, a director of broadcasting services, a development director for the same service, and countless faculty positions, and at no time did any black candidates make the final cut. There could be two reasons for this: Either blacks as a rule are not intelligent enough to hold these positions, or the University is not recruiting blacks for these positions.

Already SIU-C's reputation is such that local black athletes try to go anywhere but Carbondale. While SIU-C puts itself on the back for the fame and fortune of certain alumni, Dick Gregory, another famed SIU-C alumnus, goes practically unnoticed. So unnoticed in fact, that this record-setting track star, named SIU-C's Outstanding Athlete of 1953, and the first black athlete so honored, is not represented in the Saluki Hall of Fame. Was that an oversight, or did this quarter-century struggle for human rights frighten someone in the selection committee?

You claim that you are "People Living the Dream." Well that dream did not include removal of the black american studies department, the dismissal of one more black faculty member, or the University's evasion from civil rights laws by hiring white women instead of black people.

So now Forsyth County has been declared racist and medieval, and some have said that racism is returning to America. I live in Jackson County and in my experience here, racism never left to begin with.—Carlos Drazen, Carbondale

Honduras could be base for U.S. invasion

In 1980, the United States gave $4 million in military aid to Honduras. In 1986, the U.S. gave $60 million in military aid to Honduras. In 1980, the U.S. personnel presence in Honduras was 25 advisors. By 1986, over 40,000 U.S. troops had trained in Honduras. In 1983-84, U.S. and Honduran troops participated in a military operation called Big Pine II. During the exercise, more than 6,000 troops engaged in a simulated Central American War. Furthermore, I understand that in April 1986, 2,000 U.S. officers arrived in Honduras in order to organize another simulated conflict involving 30,000 troops. Finally, numerous National Guard units have been sent to Honduras to construct roads and undertake other projects.

My conclusion from reading about the steadily increasing U.S. military and economic presence in Honduras since the fall of the Somoza regime in Nicaragua, is that the U.S. plans to use Honduras as a base in Central America to maximize its control in the area and, most likely, to stage an invasion of Nicaragua. Honduras is in a unique geographical position in Central America. The country shares borders with El Salvador, Guatemala, and Nicaragua. Thousands of Contras operate along the border between Honduras and Nicaragua.

I would like to believe that the recent U.S. involvement in Honduras was motivated by compassion for the Honduran people. However, I perceive our government as using the Honduran people as a player in the U.S.-Soviet power struggle. Unfortunately, I see the Hondurans as paying for their role in the drama with their lives and their independence.

Two-percent plan boosts faculty morale

Ms. Sherry S. Strain wrote to question the wisdom of the two-percent plan in Monday's paper. In her letter she called attention to the fact that a faculty position was being surrendered by the theater department. She expressed concern that this decision was regrettable, a loss to the theater department, and detrimental to the maintenance of quality faculty. I do not know the particulars of this case and have no reason to doubt the sincerity of her convictions. I remain, however, an ardent supporter of the two percent concept and would want to argue that despite the specifics of this case that the plan has greatly enhanced faculty morale and has effectively worked to maintain faculty quality by persuading the faculty that the University cares about their salaries and wants to raise them.

The two-percent plan is a calculated effort to address the serious situation of low faculty pay. By systematically reducing collegiate personnel budgets by two percent annually for a period of five years, the money accumulated can be applied to salary increases beyond the amounts given by the state. All parties who endorsed the plan, and endorsement was nearly unanimous, understood that there would be programmatic impact. To minimize this undesirable effect, the deans and their advisory committees were given latitude to make adjustments. It provided an excellent opportunity for administrators, with faculty advice, to trim those programs deemed less productive or efficient and to see that successful programs were preserved. This would, of course, require true grit.

There has been some negative results from the two-percent plan but none that was not anticipated. Specific instances of position and program reduction can be pointed to. More difficult to demonstrate, though more persuasive I believe, are the number of new faculty members who have been attracted because of higher salary bases. The plan has also been favorably received by faculty of longer tenure who see it as the first real effort in years to actually do something about the eroded faculty salary benefits. I should hope that this aspect of the plan be considered as specific cases of reduction become known. William E. Eaton, chairman, Department of Educational Administration and Higher Education

Black studies take blindfolds off history

Well, the white European world strikes again. A recent editorial entitled "End Segregation of black history" (DE 2-3-87) is yet another blindman's idea of educating on a subject about which the editor knows nothing. Or perhaps the writer attempted to play "Blindman's Bluff" with the African American students taking black history courses.

No, Mr. Editor, the black studies classes are not designed to segregate and create two worlds, they are designed to educate African Americans, as well as all the other peoples of this land, of the key roles that many African Americans have played in the structure and development of America. These roles have been tossed in the hands of white Europeans. The African American past is but a guide that leads us all into the present days of oppression.

This separation of two worlds that our editor speaks of makes me laugh, for it seems that our editor has been asleep for about 400 years. White Europeans have had this separation and segregation established for so long, they not only believe that the white way is the only way, but they also believe that there is a more racist and separatist people than themselves. I raise a question, How can a group of black studies courses separate an already separated world?

Mr. Editor, you say that most black studies classes are taken by African Americans. You say if we have one minority course we should have others. I agree, because the European history that is full of lies and cover-ups is starting to bore me. American people need to get down to the core of their history, and many will be surprised when they remove the blindfolds, even you, Mr. Editor.—Vernell Hammons, African American.

control of surplus commodities instead of the government's desire to capture the foreign market. However, the federal government had a strong desire to capture the foreign market while increasing surplus, and the bill was defeated.

Coolman said strong lobbying on the part of SFFA supporters and a deficit of nearly $10 billion in the government's present agricultural plan have greatly enhanced the chances of the farm bill being passed by Congress.

Parr agreed with Coolman. "The bill has been a long struggle," he said. "This time we feel we have it. If we put in as much time on this bill as dairy farmers do milking, we'll get this bill through."

"It is aimed at keeping the family farm in business," said Susan Denzer, spokeswoman for the Illinois South Project.

"We hear about the pain they go through as they face losing their heritage. We are really learning about the injustices of these times."

Gene Adams, a Pulaski County farmer, said that because of the increasing number of farm foreclosures in that county, he is strongly supportive of the bill. "It's time for everyone to wise up," he said. "It's all politics. We need a fair price to make a fair profit."

Representing Gray was District Manager Clark Gyure. Gyure said Gray "cares very deeply" about the hard times experienced by farmers, and that he wants input from as many farmers as possible before he making an official stand on the farm bill. "He just wants to see in total what will happen," Gyure said.

Coolman said he did not know when the bill would be voted on.

this and Thompson's insistence that more and better education will help pare the state's welfare roles.

"If you don't have good education in the state, you won't have very many good people in the state," Dunn said.

Thompson refused to elaborate on his plans for state education following the address. When asked about funding for higher education, the governor said "wait until March 4," the date when he plans to present his 1988 fiscal year budget—his itinerary for state spending.

Illinois' 1988 fiscal year runs from July 1, 1987 to June 30, 1988.

Thompson acknowledged Southern Illinois' economic woes but his emphasis on improvement was placed north of Jackson County. He proposed to support the creation of a "Southwest Regional Development Authority" in the St. Louis area.

Keehner recounted her experiences of waking at 6 a.m. to begin a debate at 8 a.m. and not getting to bed until midnight. Eating becomes something that is done quickly when there is time. Sometimes there are only a few minutes during the day for some quick trips to the vending machines, she said.

The rewards of debating make the long hours of research worth the effort for Dick. Describing the feeling of winning the national championship, he said: "It was elation. We felt we were the best squad in the nation and we showed everyone that we were."

Bile said "the joy of competition" keeps the team going. "We have talented hard-working people. It's kind of infectious. When part of the squad is doing well, everyone wants to do well and work hard."

"What distinguishes us and makes us nationally competitive is that we do a lot of pre-tournament preparation by anticipating arguments that might be made and researching and brainstorming answers to these arguments," he said.

Keehner said that debating is "the best way to learn how to think and prepare yourself for further academic careers."

There is probably no better preparation for a law career or a political career."

The debate team is open to anyone on campus who is "willing to comply with the practice requirements," Bile said. There are no tryouts, but Bile advises that debate "involves long hours of practice, hard work, dedication and teamwork."

Elm Street sequel elicits nightmares

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Eeesh! Freddy Krueger is back, in "Nightmare on Elm Street, Part III."

Freddy is the most repulsive character in current screen villainy, worse even than old Leather Face in the "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" pictures or Jason from the "Friday the 13th" flicks.

Freddy is a horrifying spectre who appears only in nightmares, especially in the dreams of teenage girls who hang out around a certain house on Elm Street in the community of Westin Hills.

As the pretty young women sleep, Freddy, in his greasy hat and sweater with claw-like knives springing from his gloved fingers, stalks them to the brink of madness. Often his luckless victim is seen shredded by his glittering, razor-sharp claws.

FREDDY HAS been called a contemporary Frankenstein, a cult monster, a classic bogeyman. He promises to be around for many more sequels.

Young people in Europe tell Freddy jokes, in India he is seen as a contemporary manifestation of a traditional evil spirit. Some kids dress up in Freddy drag for midnight "Elm Street" showings. A heavy metal group has recorded a song titled "Freddy Krueger, Freddy Krueger."

In 1984, "A Nightmare on Elm Street" grossed $24 million. Last year the sequel brought in $30 million. Together, the films have sold more than 300,000 video cassettes—at $79.95 per copy.

THE ACTOR who plays Freddy is Robert Englund. Beneath the makeup, Englund bears no resemblance to the ugly, menacing character. He also looks 20 years younger than the bloodthirsty horror.

"As an actor, I think Freddy is in his own particular purgatory," Englund said. "He is evil personified and without a single redeeming trait. But you have to remember he was burned alive, a victim of vigilante justice. He was a convicted child-killer in his other life and was freed on a technicality."

ACCORDING TO Englund, Freddy doesn't pose any real threat because he exists only in the nightmares of his victims. But producer Robert Shaye manipulates and confuses audiences so cleverly that they are never certain what is reality and what is nightmare.

Whether Freddy is real or just a warped phantasm is of no moment to "Elm Street" fans, many of whom root for Freddy instead of the good guys.

"It's amazing," Englund said. "I get mail, mostly from girls, who love Freddy and want to meet him. Like Jason in the 'Friday the 13th' pictures, Freddy has his own group of fans. I don't understand it."

"SOME PEOPLE can recite the dialogue word-for-word. How can anyone admire a freak who picks on young people and hangs around adolescent bedrooms, violating their sacred private space?"

'Whiplash Smile' proves Idol still worthy of worshipers

By Debra Keen-Cooper
Staff Writer

Billy Idol, one of the original American charts with cuts from his third solo album since moving to the United States.

"Whiplash Smile," which is evidently a continuation of what Idol intends to be a series, may prove once and for all that he has the talent to produce high quality rock 'n' roll.

The album is basically a collaboration between Idol and Steve Stevens, a New York guitarist formerly of the "Fine Malibus." Stevens plays guitars, bass and keyboards, and provides programming for the synthesizers and computer tracks on the album. Idol does the vocals and also plays guitars and bass.

Stevens and Idol met in 1982 and have made albums together ever since. Idol's crazy lyrics are nicely accentuated by Steven's music writing talent. The com-ination makes a hard-punching, earthy sound that blends into hit records for the duo.

"Whiplash Smile" features 10 four- to six-minute cuts, which boast lyrics about world situations and love, two very classic rock 'n' roll subjects. The album cover is typical Idol, adorned with the man, the music and the signature—all with a flair of sarcasm.

The album sleeve lists the sides as "five" and "six"—in lieu of "one" and "two"—and sports what appears to be a new logo for Idol.

The logo is a sphere, divided into equal, but uneven halves: one holds a guitar, the other a cross. And circling the sphere is a record band with a record player arm riding on the rim.

To substantiate the series theorem, Idol has included the following as an epitaph under his new trademark: "This ain't no 'White Wedding' ... This ain't no 'Rebel Yell' ... This ain't no 'Midnight Hour' ... This is a 'Whiplash Smile'!"

All titles, of course, are from Idol's first two solo albums, "Billy Idol" and "Rebel Yell."

The songs on "Whiplash Smile" include a remake of "Got To Be A Lover," a song, originally performed by Gene Chandler, that hit 94 on the charts in 1967 and "Don't Need A Gun," from which the album title was extracted.

Idol has a versatile vocal range, sounding like a combination of Elvis Presley and Ozzie Osbourne. Several of the cuts are done in the style that has made Idol famous, that is ranting, screaming, guttural vocals and heart pumping rhythms.

But this album contains some slower, milder cuts like "Sweet Sixteen" and "Beyond Belief," which show off Idol's vocal talents.

Fox co-star as a brother and sister who try to use music to get out of Cleveland. Bruce Springsteen wrote the title song, and the Fabulous Thunderbirds perform in a bar scene.

The Mission—(University 4, PG) Jeremy Irons and Robert DeNiro star as two missionaries working together to free a tribe of 18th century South American Indians from injustice and prejudice. Directed by Roland Joffe ("The Killing Fields").

Outrageous Fortune—(Saluki, R) Bette Midler starred in two of the top-grossing films of 1986 ("Ruthless People" and "Down and Out in Beverly Hills"), and Shelley Long stars in one of the top-rated programs on television ("Cheers").

Platoon—(University 4, R) Vietnam veteran Oliver Stone wrote and directed this controversial film, considered by many to be the best film depiction of the Vietnam War to date. Actors Charlie Sheen, Willem Dafoe and Tom Berenger went through pseudo-combat training to prepare for the film, which was voted best dramatic film at the Golden Globe Awards.

Wanted: Dead or Alive—(University 4, R) Rutger Hauer, who has a knack for playing demented killers ("Blade Runner" and "The Hitcher"), stars as a bounty hunter fighting terrorism.

Is always FREE week!
I don't know how it happened, at first, I was going to SU, living at Thompson Point, and doing what SU students normally do on the weekends: going uptown to the strip and standing around with the rest of the people pretending to have fun. Then, one time I went to FRED'S. I couldn't believe it! Everybody was dancing, well maybe 75%, but when was the last time you've seen more than 10% of the crowd dancing uptown? Even my friends who said they didn't like country music were dancing up a storm. You know, all those other places say they are "THE place to party", well they don't even know the meaning of the word. Well anyway, now I'm hooked on FRED'S. I confess—FRED'S has really spoiled me! Diana Davidson

Haitian heterosexuals listed as leading carriers of AIDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Heterosexual contact appears to be a major route of AIDS virus transmission among Haitians in the Caribbean and the United States, contrary to earlier theories, scientists reported Thursday.

Although the virus is believed to have originated in Africa, one of the studies said the AIDS virus appeared in Haiti and central Africa at the same time and the patterns of transmission are similar.

WHETHER THE VIRUS was spread from Africa to Haiti among workers or tourists or whether the virus originated in Africa at all is still open to question, said Jay Levy, an AIDS researcher at the University of California at San Francisco and U.S.-based co-author of the Caribbean study.

However, he said, both studies could help document how the disease spread from country to country and what practices are involved in transmission.

AIDS IS EPIDEMIC in Africa among heterosexuals. In the United States, most victims are homosexual and bisexual men and a small but increasing percentage of victims are heterosexuals with no other risk factors.

The virus apparently did not appear in Africa before 1976, Levy said, although some have said it emerged even before that.

There is continued interest in what used to be called "the Haitian connection in AIDS" because researchers thought the virus may have been brought to the United States from the island by tourists.

BECAUSE OF HIGH infection rates, Haitians were for a time listed in the high-risk groups for AIDS, who include homosexual and bisexual men, hemophiliacs and drug users. Haitian government officials objected and said infection should be blamed on behavior, not nationality.

The study Levy participated in compared Haitians to residents of Santo Domingo, which shares the same island. Surprisingly, Santo Domingo has a low rate of AIDS virus infection except among male homosexuals.

THE RESEARCHERS

studied serum samples from 250 healthy Haitians who lived in the Dominican Republic and found 10 percent had been infected with the AIDS virus, a rate comparable to the general Haitian population, Levy said.

"None gave a history of homosexuality, blood transfusion or IV drugs," the researchers reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association. "However, treatment at health clinics with relatively unsterilized needles could be a factor, as well as heterosexual contact."

A SECOND STUDY reported in the journal found heterosexual intimacy, particularly with women prostitutes, is an important route of transmission among Haitians in the United States.

PROSTITUTES ALSO are believed to play a large role in transmission of the AIDS virus in Africa.

It was hard to pin down what the risk factors were for women because of the small number in the study. All denied accepting money for sex, but many said they had been offered money.

AIDS ranked as 11th cause of premature deaths in U.S.

ATLANTA (UPI) — AIDS has become the nation's 11th leading cause of premature death and is responsible for a small overall increase in premature mortality, federal health officials said Thursday.

The national Centers for Disease Control said death due to AIDS in 1985 rose from the 13th to the 11th leading cause of lost years of potential life, or YPLL.

The YPLL, the measure in total years of death before 65, increased from 11,788,125 in 1984 to 11,844,475 in 1985, a difference of one-half of 1 percent.

"A major reason for the increase in total YPLL is the greater number of deaths from the acquired immune deficiency syndrome," a CDC statement said.

"The YPLL due to AIDS increased from 82,885 in 1984 to 152,595 in 1985; this represented a rate increase of 82.4 percent," a bigger increase than for any of the other 13 leading causes of premature death, some of which registered declines.

The relative ranking of the other 12 leading causes of premature death did not change, with heart disease, cancer and accidental injuries continuing to be the three leading causes of YPLL in the United States.

As of Feb. 2, there have been 30,396 cases of AIDS reported to the CDC and 17,338 deaths, a fatality ratio of 57 percent.

AIDS is transmitted by a virus that destroys the immune system. Victims die of a variety of opportunistic infections, including a type of tissue cancer and parasitic pneumonia. High risk groups are homosexuals, intravenous drug abusers and hemophiliacs.

Doctor with AIDS allowed to keep job

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Cook County Hospital panel Thursday upheld the reinstatement of a doctor with AIDS in a case that is pitting medical experts against the county board.

The doctor, whose identity was not disclosed, was suspended by the Cook County Board earlier this week and reinstated Wednesday at the recommendation of the hospital's Peer Review Committee. The hospital's Joint Conference Committee Thursday approved the reinstatement.

HOSPITAL DIRECTOR Terrence M. Hansen said that while there is no evidence AIDS can be spread from a health-care worker to a patient during normal hospital

—Bernard Turnock, director of the Illinois Department of Health procedures, the hospital nonetheless will be damaged by negative public perception.

The full county board, which could overrule the hospital groups, will meet Monday to make a final decision. The board voted 12-4 this week to suspend the doctor and some board members were adamant that he not be reinstated.

BOARD MEMBER Harold Tyrell earlier called the reinstatement decision

"totally irresponsible." He said he fears legal action by patients and staff who might be infected by AIDS.

Board President George Dunne, who voted for the suspension this week, expressed similar concern.

"I have no quarrel with the man," Dunne said. "I'm concerned with the legal ramifications."

BOARD MEMBER Carl Hansen said a doctor who has

AIDS "does not belong in a hospital setting. This doctor should look at his own adherence to the Hippocratic oath, which requires him to cure people, not endanger them."

The director of the Illinois Department of Health Wednesday criticized the suspension of the doctor and denounced Cook County Board President George Dunne for demanding all hospital staff to be tested for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

'Diary' filmmakers allow subjects to tell own stories

By Ellen Cook
Entertainment Editor

Joel DeMott and Jeff Kreines don't like the term "documentary" used when their films are described.

The filmmakers, who are in Carbondale as guest jurors for the Big Muddy Film Festival, prefer to call their works "diary films."

Some documentary filmmakers narrate or provoke action in their works. DeMott and Kreines prefer to let their subjects speak for themselves.

Their films "Demon Lover Diary," which was shown Wednesday night, and "Seventeen," which will be shown tonight at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium, feature real people in real situations.

The films don't serve as propaganda for the filmmaker's views, this has proved successful in the audience's acceptance of their works.

"People came because they thought that they were going to have an interesting time," DeMott said. "They didn't come because they thought it was going to be good for them."

"Seventeen," their 1981 film about working-class teenagers in Muncie, Ind., shows audiences how teenagers really act and think.

Unlike most filmmakers, DeMott and Kreines don't work with a crew — they developed a system of recording sound and shooting footage in very low light, which enabled them to shoot solo. This one-on-one shooting helped the filmmakers gain the confidence of their subjects, who soon became friends of the filmmakers.

DeMott and Kreines spent a year in Muncie while shooting the two hour film. Although the filmmakers worked as a unit, DeMott, who is female, usually followed the girls, Kreines, the boys.

The filmmakers have encountered some resistance to "Seventeen" because of the manner in which the teenagers are portrayed.

"They talk big, they talk dirty, they talk sassy," DeMott said, "because that's how they really are."

PBS decided not to air the film without editing parts of it, Kreines said, and the Muncie School Board — among other organizations — didn't want it shown at all.

However, the filmmakers didn't yield to the censorship and screened their film underground and in Europe, where it was hailed by critics and filmgoers alike.

"The theory is that America is a class-free society," DeMott said. "This is absolutely insane."

"Seventeen" is a small effort at saying, "No, this is a class society, and instead of taking as the norm, middle-class kids—upper-middle-class kids—we are going to take working-class kids," DeMott said.

Filmmaker digs for social truth

By Mary Caudle
Staff Writer

Barb Margolis creates films to present history as it affects people.

Feeling that the media often presents a radically distorted picture of historical periods and events, she wants her films to dig beneath media portrayal to the truth underneath.

Margolis, a filmmaker and one of the judges at the Big Muddy Film Festival taking place at SIU-C this week, is known for the insightful films she has made on Latin America as director of Latin American Film Project, Inc. as well as films about the United States.

Her film about the Cold War entitled "Are We Winning, Mommy? America and the Cold War" will be screened at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is $2.

Margolis' interest in the Cold War began almost accidentally. While working on a film in 1975 about the economic system in the United States entitled "On The Line," Margolis said she looked through archives of footage shot by the media during the last several decades, some of them covered the Cold War.

She found that the Cold War footage created a far different picture than she remembered from her own experiences of the Cold War during her childhood.

This led to more extensive research and the making of "Are We Winning, Mommy?" Margolis said. She talked to everyone she could find who remembered the period—from government officials and people in the media who had done the actual reporting to those who learned of the Cold War from their television sets.

Margolis also talked to people in the Soviet Union and Europe who study the United States to see how the Cold War had looked from other perspectives. What she found sometimes surprised her.

Margolis said she found traces of anti-Soviet sentiment in the film archives going as far back as 1920, with an animated cartoon entitled "Little Billy Bolshevik."

"Billy Bolshevik" is portrayed as a greedy little boy," Margolis said. "He eats everything in sight, even the bowls." Little Billy then goes on in his greed to consume and destroy everything in sight.

In the 1940s the Soviet Union was seen by the United States as a "big octopus," Margolis said, an insatiable creature with eight arms who would consume anything and anyone it could. Then came the communism scare of the 50s, when blatant anti-communist propaganda was produced by the media.

"You look at these clips now, and you don't believe it could have happened," Margolis said. "But it did happen. It

"Are We Winning, Mommy?" is Margolis' attempt to correct America's vision of the Cold War. It is not a history as such, according to Margolis, but looks at the impact the Cold War had on America, and the impact it still has today.

Author says meter errors at root of costly utility bills

By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer

That incredibly large utility, water or phone bill you received last month could be an example of the meter errors and frauds that may be robbing American consumers of billions of dollars each year, says Brandon Greene, coordinator of the behavior analysis and therapy program in SIU-C's Rehabilitation Institute.

Greene, who researched the meter error and fraud issue for consumer advocate Ralph Nader, is co-author of "Meters and Misfeasance: What You Should Know About Utility Metering and Billing Errors."

DURING AN INTERVIEW. Greene explained that a large bill may be caused by deteriorating meters and lines, which utility companies do not service because of the time and money involved in the maintenance process.

He said standards that exist in law for testing and maintaining equipment are "sometimes neglected, sometimes corrupted and sometimes ignored." Ultimately, the regulatory commission is responsible to make sure the utility companies adhere to the law.

"IF MOST PEOPLE get a large bill, they think the meters are speeding up, but that is usually too easy an explanation. It's usually something a little more complicated or a little more serious than just the meter speeding. There are so many other things that could be going on."

Neighbors tapping into utility lines and leasing companies that roll back odometers on cars and then sell them are two more ways consumers can be deceived, Greene said.

WHEN BUYING a car from a used car dealer, the consumer should request the name of the former owner to confirm the mileage on the odometer, Greene explained. He said that if the dealer is reluctant to give out the former owner's name, the consumer should not purchase the car. "In one study by the Department of Transportation where cars had been previously owned by rental companies, by the time the cars reached the lot, the odometers probably had been rolled back several thousand miles," Greene said.

THE VARIETY of billing systems by phone companies also can cause confusion for the American consumer, Greene said.

One way of billing consumers for local calls in the same way they are billed for long distance calls is known as local measured service.

"You may make dozens of local calls, and if you're being billed on how long the call lasts, how far away the

Student loan defaulters face crackdown

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The state is notifying hundreds of student loan defaulters holding Illinois professional and occupational licenses that those licenses will be restricted until they repay their loans, state officials said Wednesday.

The Registration and Education Department is targeting individuals by professional group as their two-year licenses come up for renewal. So far, letters have been sent to nurses, cosmetology teachers, psychologists, public accountants, dentists, dental hygienists, architects, engineers, land surveyors and physical therapists.

More than 400 defaulters in those professions have been notified their licenses will not be renewed unless they set up a repayment schedule.

Nader proposes ending lawmakers' self-raises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Thursday he has the support of legislators in 21 states for the ratification of a constitutional amendment that would prohibit members of Congress from raising their own pay.

Nader's announcement followed the apparent authorization Wednesday of a substantial pay increase for Congress and other top federal officials.

The House joined the Senate in passing a bill containing an amendment disapproving the increase, but the House vote came the day after a deadline for congressional action.

Most members say the pay increase will go into effect with March paychecks, although the issue may be decided in the courts.

The amendment disapproving the pay increase was added by the Senate last week to an emergency aid bill for the homeless. Opponents of the pay raise say they will offer similar amendments in the future.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters Thursday it probably will not be possible to keep all such amendments off various bills the Senate will consider in the future. "I can't say there won't be amendments offered. I can't say there won't be amendments passed."

No matter what the outcome on congressional pay, federal judges apparently will be able to keep their raises because of a constitutional provision that bars any reduction in judicial pay once a new level has taken effect.

The figures Reagan endorsed would boost salaries for members of Congress from $77,400 to $89,500 a year. The vice president would move from $100,800 to $115,000; Supreme Court justices, from $107,000 to $110,000; Cabinet officers, from $88,800 to $95,900.

The amendment urged by Nader was drafted 198 years ago by James Madison. It would prohibit a pay increase from taking effect until after a congressional election takes place.

He said 18 states have ratified the pay amendment, leaving 20 more needed for adoption.

destination of your call is, and the time of day you call, you have no way of checking whether you were billed appropriately because that information isn't given in the bill," Greene said.

LOCAL MEASURED service, sometimes called usage sensitive service, is being considered in many areas of the country, but "fortunately in many areas it's being defeated," he said.

Consumers who are unhappy about the services they are receiving from utility companies can go to a regulatory commission and complain, Greene said.

A regulatory commission is usually a public utility commission that oversees and monitors all aspects of operation by private utility companies. In Illinois it is the Illinois Commerce Commission.

CONSUMERS MIGHT have to be present at a hearing where they and the utility company would explain their cases. Greene said that after listening to the two sides, a hearing officer can make some judgment as to what regulations and what laws pertain to that case.

Greene also advised consumers to unite and support Citizens Utility Boards. "They are consumer-funded action groups concerned with utility issues of all types. In supporting such groups, the consumer enjoys the advantage of an organization consisting of many other consumers like him."

University defends arms dealer's gift

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American University officials are defending the use of millions of dollars donated to build a campus sports arena by controversial Saudi Arabian arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi, who bankrolled the ill-fated U.S. arms deal with Iran.

Although public opinion polls indicate widespread opposition to the U.S. sale of arms to Iran and subsequent funneling of money to the Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, there has been little opposition among American University students and faculty to the school's use of Khashoggi's millions.

The arena, under construction on the Washington campus of the 11,000-student liberal arts college, will be called the Adnan Khashoggi Sports and Convocation Center when it is dedicated this December.

Khashoggi, a friend of university President Richard Berendzen and a member of the school's board of trustees since 1983, donated $5 million toward the construction of the $14 million multi-use facility.

"The students want it regardless of whose name is on it," said Alan Fleischmann, the president of the student government.

"Mr. Khashoggi, as far as I know, has not violated any law, nor been accused of doing so," said Berendzen. "The university needed the resources and he provided them. And that's where we are now."

American University has never had an on-campus basketball arena. For the past 25 years, the school has played its basketball games at rickety 3,000-seat Fort Myer Ceremonial Hall, a field house located on an Army base in Arlington, Va.

Limited protest against Khashoggi's financing of the new center has come in the form of editorials in the student newspaper and a column by a former university professor in The Washington Post.

The Saudi billionaire has been experiencing a financial decline since the arms sale was made public. His Salt Lake City holding corporation, Triad America, is declaring bankruptcy. A New York judge ordered his $30 million New York apartment seized, and his $40 million luxury jetliner was seized in Paris against debts.

Iran power struggle possible factor in reporter's release

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The seizure and reported release of American reporter Gerald Seib by Iran reflects a bid to conceal the deep and continuing power struggle in Tehran's leadership. U.S. officials and Iran experts said Thursday.

Some experts believe Seib, a reporter for The Wall Street Journal invited with dozens of other Western journalists to Tehran two weeks ago, was arrested by police Saturday on the order of the more radical, or "purist," faction led by Ayatollah Hussein-Ali Montazeri.

The experts theorize Montazeri resented the campaign by a "pragmatist" group led by Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian Parliament, to open relations with the rest of the world—including the United States.

The announcement Wednesday by the Iranian government that Seib would be "expelled"—which means released to Swiss custody—was seen as the latest evidence of a high-level decision to paper over the factional split.

"It is the same argument that comes in every revolution: How do you defend the revolution?" said Robin Wright, senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment in Washington.

"In Iran, the purist faction wants to create a 'House of

Senator calls McFarlane's Iran story 'strange'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Senate Intelligence Committee, whose panel conducted the most in-depth look of the Iran-Contra affair to date, said Thursday parts of Robert McFarlane's testimony "strike me as strange."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who stressed he has reached no conclusions about McFarlane's testimony, also did not completely rule out further congressional testimony from William Casey, who is recovering from surgery for a brain tumor and resigned Monday as CIA director.

Coverage of the report has focused much attention on the discrepancy between testimony given by McFarlane, a former national security adviser, and White House chief of staff Donald Regan over whether Regan approved the first shipment of arms to Iran in August 1985 before it was sent.

McFarlane says he did; Regan says he did not.

Also Thursday, the special panel investigating the National Security Council's role in the scandal arranged a second interview with President Regan.

"He invited us to come back and the board accepted," spokesman Herbert Hetu said of the three-member panel headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. "There is additional information that they wanted to talk to him about."

Hetu said the commission, established by Regan on Dec. 1, expects to meet with the president "sometime next week." The panel faces a Feb. 19 deadline to complete its probe.

Islam," a new power bloc of 74 nations to be led by Iran, the redeemer state," he said. "The pragmatists want a modern Islamic government, playing an influential role in world affairs."

None of the experts interviewed used the word "moderate" to describe the pragmatists, who differ with the purists only on how best to defend and spread the Islamic revolution.

R.K. Ramazani, of the University of Virginia and author of the recent book "Revolutionary Iran," said, "Rafsanjani believes that the revolutionary goals can be better achieved if Iran is not isolated."

One U.S. official noted there has been a "frenetic" round of diplomatic contacts by those who support Rafsanjani

Your home equity credit here is still tax deductible!

One of homeownership's biggest rewards is bigger than ever!

Under the 1986 Tax Act, deductibility of the interest you pay on consumer credit, such as credit card charges and auto financing, will be phased out. But you'll still be able to deduct home equity credit interest.

This makes your equity credit an even bigger, more useful, and more valuable reward for homeownership. In fact, it's a tax advantage meant only for homeowners—the strong, solid base of our American way of life.

It means you can build on the equity you've built up, by turning a substantial portion of it into dollars you can use as you see fit. And deducting the interest on your federal tax return.

Home improvements of all kinds

- Medical, educational, and other expenses
- Financing a vacation — or a vacation home
- Buying a car — or almost anything else
- Business and investment opportunities

Here's how it works.

Under the 1986 Tax Act, interest on a home equity loan is fully tax deductible up to the fair market value of your principal or second home, if the loan was completed before August 16, 1986.

If you initiate your loan after that date, interest on a loan amount up to the purchase price of the home plus improvements is deductible. Interest on equity loans over that amount is fully deductible up to the home's market value if the loan is used for qualified educational or medical expenses.

We're your equity credit specialists.

We're ready to serve you now — even if you obtained your home mortgage elsewhere. As specialists in mortgage lending, we're uniquely qualified to help you make the most of your equity.

So for straight, complete answers to your questions, talk to any of our loan counselors today. They'll fully explain our home equity terms, conditions, and benefits.

Home equity credit... one of homeownership's biggest rewards!

HOME EQUITY CREDIT

Figure the equity available to you.

This simple formula will help you estimate your home equity.

1. Your home's estimated market value $ _____
2. Multiply by 75%* x .75
- Total $ _____
3. Subtract the amount of principal you owe on your current home mortgage — $ _____
4. The estimated home equity available to you $ _____

*75% is used for illustrative purposes. The actual amount of equity that could be tapped depends on applicant's credit standing, ability to pay, and current home appraisal.

Despite staff of six, agency decides for 300

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Six workers covering 21 counties means a lot of work for the Carbondale office of the Guardianship and Advocacy Commission.

The GAC is a state agency appointed by a state probate court to make decisions for people who can't make their own and helps other people make complicated decisions.

At a meeting to acquaint people with the program, GAC Director Sandra Klubeck said the GAC makes sure the well-being of the people they serve is good.

The Carbondale office's guardian program, one of the three programs in the office, uses two staff workers and a regional administrator to serve 306 people, in addition to 15 people whose property it manages.

FIGURES WERE not available for the advocacy program, which has one staff member to help people who call for protection of their rights; or the human rights division, which also has one staff member.

The commission has one

"My personal experience has been that they have an excellent staff of people that is dedicated and well-trained. They have made quite a bit of headway, particularly over the past few years, in getting known and with the program."

— State Rep. Jim Rea, D-Christopher lawyer.

People served by the advocacy program are able to request help themselves, while those served by the guardian program cannot.

The size of the staff, six people in the Carbondale office, has imposed some restrictions on the commission.

"WE DON'T SERVICE the counties equally because of the distance factor," said Perry Patterson, Regional Administrator for GAC. He said it could take as long as two hours to drive to the farthest parts of their region.

Patterson said that the guardianship program ideally should have five staff members but the state has not provided sufficient funds for a staff of that size.

Statewide, the program receives $3.5 million for 112 staff members serving 4,000 people.

DESPITE THE limited number of staff many people feel the commission does a good job.

State Rep. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said: "My personal experience has been that they have an excellent staff of people that is dedicated and well-trained."

"They have made quite a bit of headway, particularly over the past few years, in getting known and with the program," he said.

Business frat No. 1 for 5th time

By JoDe Rimar
Staff Writer

Tradition is a big part of fraternal orders, and Alpha Kappa Psi has started a tradition of its own.

This year marks the fifth year in a row the business fraternity has won No. 1 ranking out of the 220 orders nationwide.

"It's an honor and a lot of hard work," Alpha Kappa Psi President David Ore said.

The fraternity competed in five categories with other orders across the nation. The categories included professional service, scholarship, finance, general administration and membership. Alpha Kappa Psi won all of the possible 100,000 points, or 20,000 in each category.

The fraternity spends a lot of time working on community service projects, Ore said. Such projects, which include a walk-a-thon that brought the March of Dimes over $2,500 last year, help the members gain experience in business, Ore said.

Alpha Kappa Psi is the oldest national business fraternity as well as the oldest in Carbondale. Founded locally in 1958, one of the first pledges to the fraternity was Delyte Morris, Ore said. Honorary members include Ronald Reagan and Barry Goldwater, he said.

The fraternity, which is coed, has 47 members.

Business majors who would like to pledge to Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity can do so at 11 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 7, at the Student Center's Ohio Room.

Former chief quits NASA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former shuttle chief Jesse Moore, responsible for clearing Challenger for its ill-fated launch, resigned from NASA Thursday in one of the last major personnel changes expected to result from last year's disaster.

"The agency and the nation have been served well and faithfully by Jesse Moore," said NASA Administrator James Fletcher. "We will miss him and we wish him all the best in his new endeavors."

Moore, 46, has accepted a job with Ball Aerospace Systems of Boulder, Colo., as director of program development, NASA said. His resignation becomes effective Feb. 8. He could not be reached for comment.

Moore stepped down as associate administrator of space flight in late February last year to become director of the Johnson Space Center in Houston, a job to which he had been assigned five days before Challenger's launch.

But he was still the chief of the shuttle program when Challenger took off Jan. 28, 1986, and as such Moore had final operational authority for clearing the ship for blastoff.

Challenger was destroyed 73 seconds after launch when its right-side booster ruptured. Seven astronauts were killed.

"Absolutely, I feel a personal responsibility," Moore said in an interview a month after the launch. "I've said on several occasions that I grieved a lot over the loss of Challenger, and I took every one of those launches very personally."

Moore initially headed up

NASA's internal investigation into the accident but William Rogers, chairman of the presidential disaster commission, banned Moore and other top managers from participating in the probe.

Moore later testified that he was never informed of a crucial launch-eve debate in which booster-maker Morton Thiokol Inc. recommended a launch delay because of concern about the possible effects of record cold weather on sensitive O-ring seals in booster fuel segment joints.

NASA nixes weapons on next space station

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency has reached agreement with the Defense Department that permits military research aboard the planned space station but prohibits installation of weapons systems, NASA's director said Thursday.

James Fletcher said the Pentagon has no plans to use the big orbital base planned for the 1990s but said, "They wanted to be sure we weren't acing them out of the picture."

He told the House Science, Space and Technology Committee that the administration's senior interagency group on space settled the issue at 11 p.m. Wednesday, concluding weeks of discussions between NASA, the Pentagon and other government agencies.

"They have not indicated any requirement for the space station," he said. "They just wanted to be sure that in the future if they had some requirement, they would not be excluded from use of that space station, provided it was for peaceful purposes."

The issue clears the way for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to meet next Wednesday with officials from the European Space Agency, Japan and Canada to discuss their participation in the big space station.

The question of military use aboard the space station came up at the end of the three hour hearing on NASA's budget problems.

Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., asked if it would be possible under the agreement to do weapons research aboard the space station.

"I think weapons research in the sense of laser beams or something of that sort, no. But in terms of, let's say, research on semiconductors, which they use as well as we, that would be fair game."

"My question was, would it be possible to do weapons research aboard the station?" Walker pressed.

"Weapons research covers a lot of territory," Fletcher replied. "If we're talking about components of weapons, the answer is yes."

Walker asked, "Is it specifically excluded from putting weapons aboard the space station under your agreement?"

"The international space station is for peaceful purposes," said Fletcher.

"Weapons, the kind I think you're really talking about, would be excluded. We could not put a major Defense Department weapon on the space station and have it acceptable to our foreign partners."

Consumer group targets check holds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A consumer advocate for retired Americans, waving a handful of complaints from elderly people, Thursday said Congress must limit the time banks are allowed to hold checks before cashing them.

"It goes beyond the inconvenience and indignity" of a bank not cashing a check, said Dr. Gayle Lawrence of the American Association of Retired Persons.

"Holds are placed on all types of checks—government, local and out-of-state," he said.

Lawrence made the remarks in testimony before a Senate consumer banking subcommittee. Chairman Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., has sponsored a bill that would place a five-day limit on check holding by banks and other lending institutions.

An independent survey conducted last year shows most banks hold local checks for up to five business days and out-of-state checks for at least six business days. Twenty percent of banks hold out-of-state checks for more than two weeks.

Other testimony was heard from representatives of the banking industry, which opposes mandatory check-holding restrictions, and from Wayne Angell, a Federal Reserve Board governor, who testified that "We believe we can make check returns faster, but we don't have the authority."

Angell said Congress must provide that authority. He added the Fed should be given the flexibility it needs to set check-holding standards and exceptions based on such circumstances as the handling of foreign checks, disruptions caused by weather and the technology used by banks.

Cocaine suspect smuggled to U.S. under tight security

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — A swarthy, barrel-chested Colombian said to be a ringleader of the notorious Medellin cocaine cartel was slipped into the United States under heavy security Thursday to face charges that include putting a price on the head of the United States' top narcotics agent.

Carlos Enrique Lehder Rivas, 37, arrested by Colombian police Wednesday after a gunbattle at a remote ranch near Medellin, was turned over to U.S. Drug Enforcement Agents and immediately flown to Tampa aboard a twin-engine plane.

U.S. INSTALLATIONS around the world were put on security alert to guard against retaliation by the murderous drug cartel.

Lehder is believed to be one of a half-dozen leaders of the Medellin cartel, which U.S. authorities say processes, ships and distributes more than 80 percent of the cocaine consumed in the United States. Lehder arrived aboard a twin-engine plane at Tampa International Airport shortly after 1 a.m., escorted by two DEA agents. Other federal agents with automatic weapons surrounded the plane and in a scant 10 seconds whisked the 5-foot-9 suspect out of the plane and into a sedan that was convoyed at high speed to the federal courthouse.

NINE HOURS LATER, Lehder appeared at a half-hour hearing before U.S. Magistrate Elizabeth A. Jenkins. She denied bond and ordered Lehder to be "aken to Jacksonville for a detention hearing Monday before U.S. Magistrate Harvey Schlesinger, who may reconsider bond.

Lehder was taken to an undisclosed location in Jacksonville Thursday afternoon, DEA agent Jack Hook said. His trial is set for March 23.

"WE HAVE ADVISED all of our stations throughout the world to go into an advance state of readiness," said DEA chief John Lawn in Washington. "Medellin is a cartel known for violence, and based upon that history, we have taken that extra step of security" in the United States, Latin America and elsewhere overseas.

At the State Department, a spokesman said, "We have received threats, and we take them seriously."

LAWN HAILED Colombia's action in arresting Lehder but said it is "not a crippling blow" to the drug trade.

"Even if the cartel was shut down," he said, "others will merely pick up the trade routes." Lehder was arrested under an indictment filed in Jacksonville in 1981 and is expected to be tried there. He also faces charges stemming from a 1984 indictment in Miami.

LEHDER ALSO IS accused of offering a $350,000 contract for the murder of Francis Mullen, then chief of the DEA, and lesser amounts for other officials.

A wind gauge belonging to Britt Airlines, which recently canceled all flights to Williamson County Airport, awaits removal by airport maintenance worker Gib Smart. A new gauge will be installed by Ozark Midwest, a new air carrier at the airport.

Air traffic control co-op available

The Air Traffic Control Cooperative Education Program will be offering college study and practical work experience to students who plan to be air traffic control specialists with the Federal Aviation Administration.

Applicants must submit a typed letter of interest, a resume, the latest copy of their transcripts and grade reports to Terry S. Bowman, Advanced Technical Studies, School of Technical Careers at SIU. Application deadline is Feb. 18.

Bridge fans to meet in competition

The city of Carbondale will host a two-day Duplicate Bridge Tournament for players from the four state area Saturday and Sunday in the Student Center.

The Southern Illinois-Paducah Unit 223 is sponsoring this year's event, which is entitled "The Saluki Swiss." It will be open to teams of four or five players who will be competing for master points issued by the American Contract Bridge League.

Carol Emme, tournament chairman from Carbondale, said that teams planning to participate in the event need to register by noon at the Student Center.

The event is free and open to the public.

Expert: Think twice before mixing drugs, sex

By Tracy Bartoni
Staff Writer

"Remember that no drug can give you what you already have," says Barb Fijolek, coordinator of the alcohol and drug education program at the Wellness Center.

Fijolek lead the "Sex on the Rocks" workshop sponsored by the Wellness Center about the effects of alcohol and drugs on social and sexual behavior. The workshop was Wednesday in the Student Center.

"OUR POSITION at the Wellness Center is that if you drink, think about it and do it in a way that's not going to hurt yourself or others," said Fijolek.

Fijolek said that society doesn't really tell people how to use drugs and alcohol responsibly. Often, they are left on their own to discover how alcohol or drugs affect them.

"Every drug has its risks and benefits. Be informed about the risks you are taking."

—Barb Fijolek

She said alcohol and sex is a logical combination in our culture. People often think of alcohol as an aphrodisiac, but it is a depressant that decreases sexual performance even though it may reduce inhibitions.

WHEN ABUSED, other drugs such as barbiturates, hallucinogens, amphetamines and cocaine also ultimately reduce sexual performance, she said. They also may make a person nervous and reduce intimacy in a relationship.

Drugs such as amyl nitrate may increase sexual feelings temporarily but are hard on the immune system, she said. "Every drug has its risks and benefits. Be informed about the risks you are taking."

THE EFFECT THAT drugs have on a person depends upon body weight, the quantity of the drug taken, a person's mood and an individual's metabolism rate, she said.

A study done in 1984 by the Department of Psychology found that 87 percent of SIU-C students use alcohol, 44 percent use marijuana, 22 percent use stimulants, 14 percent have used cocaine, and five percent have used barbiturates.

She said studies show that while drinking, people talk more, listen less and interrupt frequently.

BEING IN A crowded, noisy bar may make people anxious, she said, causing them to drink more and drink faster. The alcohol industry relies on overindulgence, which causes sales to increase by 40 percent, Fijolek said.

"The first step in responsible drinking is knowing what alcohol does to you."

An alcohol level of 0.05 to 0.08 percent will give the person a mild "buzz." If a person is going to drink, Fijolek recommended having one to two drinks the first hour, then one drink per hour for the rest of the evening. She said it is important to pace drinks.

A KENT STATE University study about sex role behavior in the bars indicates that social interaction is less hectic than imagined. Men still approach women more often than women approach men, and the bar interaction lasts an average of seven seconds.

Thompson approves beefed-up drug law

CHICAGO (UPI) — A measure designed to crack down on drug abuse by increasing criminal penalties for the possession, sale, manufacture and delivery of controlled substances was signed into law Thursday by Gov. James R. Thompson.

Thompson signed the bill (S1565) during ceremonies at the Cook County Criminal Courts Building with Cook County State's Attorney Richard Daley.

Under the new law the amount of cocaine sold, delivered or manufactured to qualify for a Class X felony is cut in half from 30 grams to 15 grams and the amount to qualify for a Class 1 felony is reduced from 15 grams to one gram. The law also makes the sale or delivery of five grams or more of cocaine a non-probationable offense.

7 frat members receive charges after traffic death

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (UPI) — Seven members of a Ferris State College fraternity have been charged with illegal alcohol sales in connection with the traffic death of a student, which police say appears linked to a fraternity party.

The Tau Kappa Epsilon members were released on personal recognizance bonds after arraignment Wednesday in Mecosta County District Court on charges of selling alcohol without a license.

They face a preliminary hearing Feb. 12 on the charges, which carry a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Magistrate Gary Lough identified those charged as Kenneth Borgacz of Warren, David Boekeloo of Parchment, Scott Wolf of Detroit, David Snyder of St. Clair Shores, Gregory Faremouth of Woodhaven, Donald Rusas of Milford and Charles Gleeson II of Birmingham.

The charges stem from the Dec. 13 death of Ferris freshman Keith A. Colangelo, 18, of Round Lake Beach, Ill., who was struck by two cars after leaving a party at the TKE lodge, Mecosta County Sheriff's deputies said.

Colangelo and two other 18-year-old Ferris students were struck by a car driven by Shannon Hart, 20, of North Branch, as they walked along 15 Mile Road near the TKE lodge about 2:20 a.m., deputies said.

Hart apparently shut off the car and left no lights on as she and the other two students, who received only minor injuries, walked back to the lodge to get help, leaving Colangelo lying where he was struck, deputies said.

A second car, driven by Caitlin Bryant, 20, of Grand Rapids, subsequently hit Colangelo, who was pronounced dead at the scene, police said.

Men netters open season

Young squad will take on top Midwest teams

The SIU-C tennis team will open the 1987 season in round-robin play against Indiana University, Vanderbilt and Miami of Ohio at the IU Quadrangular in Bloomington, Ind., Saturday.

Veteran Coach Dick LeFevre is beginning his 29th season at SIU-C with a youthful squad, which includes five freshmen and sophomores in the seven-man crew.

"We're young," LeFevre said, "but this team has the best overall potential of any we've had in a number of years."

The team leaders are senior Lars Nilsson of Sweden, and Rollie Olliquino of the Philippines. Rounding out the squad are sophomores Jairo Aldana and Juan Martinez of Columbia and Fabiano Ramos of Brazil, and freshmen Micky Maule of Illinois and George Hime of Brazil.

"I want the kids to compete against the best competition possible because that is the only way they'll be ready for the conference championships," said LeFevre.

"Our record will be 500 or better by the end of the year, but the major goal is to win the league title."

The Salukis schedule includes 10 road games and nine at home.

"We'll get off to our usual slow start," said LeFevre in reference to the lack of indoor training facilities. However, seven outdoor matches lined up for spring break should put them in peak form, he said.

In 1964, LeFevre's team won the national championships at SIU-C.

Women tracksters slow healing; take hurting team to Champaign

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

Coach DeNoon's mission for the women's track team is to protect his squad's health this weekend when they venture to Orange and Blue Open in Champaign.

The coach said his approach this week is a reaction to the number of injuries sustained by the team in recent weeks.

In addition to muscle tears to long distance runners Amber Wiencek and Vivian Sinou, a number of athletes sustained minor injuries last week in meets at Louisville, Ky., and Charleston.

Sprinter Brenda Beatty, injured at Louisville, is back this week, along with Sinou, Christianna Philippou and Dora Kyriacou (both injured at Eastern).

Sprinter Angie Nunn, who pulled a hamstring at Charleston, will be out of action again this weekend. Wiencek will be back in time for the outdoor season in March.

DeNoon plans to run All-American Carlon Blackman for the first time in the 880-yard run. Lisa Judiseak and Lisa Ravetto will both compete in the 1,500 and 3,000-meter runs.

Gateway indoor track athlete of the week Sue Anderson will once again compete in the high jump, and hopes to push towards her personal best of 5-8 at Illinois this weekend.

Teams competing in the non-scoring meet are the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, Tennessee, Alabama-Huntsville, Bradley, DePaul, Lewis University, Miami of Ohio, Notre Dame and Parkland Community College.

Preparation for MVC meet starts as men tracksters race at U of I

By Wally Foreman
Staff Writer

Men's track coach Bill Cornell wants more qualifiers for the NCAA meet and continued improvement as the Salukis take part in the Illinois State Invitational in Normal at 7 p.m. tonight.

"This meet will be another good opportunity for some of our athletes to qualify for the nationals," Cornell said. "Illinois State is setting up some good races with fast individuals in them and that is what we need to qualify."

The Salukis will also use the Invitational to prepare for the Missouri Valley Conference meet, which is three weeks away.

Some tracksters who Cornell feels have a good shot at qualifying are Andy Pettigrew in the mile, James Duhart in the 600-yard race and Bret Garrett in the 1,000-yard race.

"It is extremely tough to qualify anymore," Cornell said.

Pettigrew needs to run at least 4:03.58 and his best effort this season has been 4:08.63. Garrett will have to run the 1,000 in 2:08.70. In the 600-yard race Duhart will need to tie or break 1:08.70 to qualify.

"Our conditioning is starting to show, but we still have kids who aren't giving us that killer instinct," Cornell said. "I want an athlete who has a killer instinct. Someone who has that desire to win and wants it bad. They have to show some guts."

Cornell added that this is not something for the coach to do. "I can only make sure they are physically ready," Cornell said. "It is up to the kid to get himself mentally prepared."

Competing in the event will be Mike Michels and Shane Weber in the pole vault and Ron Harrer tossing the shot put and 35-pound weight.

Brian Bradley, David Wallace, Aaron Smith and Sheldon Knight are scheduled in the long jump, while Smith and Modiba Crawford will stretch for the triple jump.

Demetris Theocharous Clark Dixon and Doug Reed are entered in the high jump, and Pettigrew, David Lamont, Jobie Kelly and Kent Leek will run the mile.

Rounding out the field will be Kevin Steele in the 440-yard race.

Club to cook pregame meal

The SIU Women's Club will host a pregame supper before the SIU-Eastern Illinois women's basketball game Feb. 7.

The supper is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. in the Student Center Renaissance Room. Chili and sandwiches will be served.

Tickets for the meal are $4.25. Basketball tickets will be available at half price at the supper. For ticket information, call Mary Miller at 549-3786.

Gametime is 7:35 p.m. at Davies Gym.

shots from falling at the normal 50 percent rate. And when a player tires, jumping and rebounding ability decrease drastically.

The fault lies in scheduling too much in too short a time, and that can't really be a fault because ideal opponents are not available at ideal times.

The loss will definitely drop SIU-C from 14th in the polls, as will happen to 13th-ranked N.C. State, which suffered an upset Wednesday night. The question remains as to how many notches these teams will fall.

TTU coach Bill Worrell believed his squad's win will help the Salukis more than hurt for this reasoning:

"First, it's not a conference loss and it's a loss to a last year's meet, our small squad size was a factor, especially since some of our swimmers were out with the flu."

The Salukis have only one diver, freshman Michelle Robinson, and Weathers said he just wants her to dive a competitive meet. One of Illinois State's strong points is diving, and they bring four divers to the Rec.

"We'll be giving up a lot of points in diving that we'll have to make up elsewhere," Weathers said.

The Salukis, so far this season, have turned in the league's best times in all 13 individual swim events, while the Redbirds own the top diving marks. SIU-C has top times in three relays, but has not fielded a 200- or 800-meter relay team yet this season.

But the good times can only get better, according to Weathers.

"We are pointing toward the Gateway meet in terms of fast times more than we did last year," he said. "All of our swimmers will be entered in their best events, and since this is the best pool we've competed in since mid-January, I expect us to make several NCAA standards."

The Salukis have already qualified for the NCAAs in the 400 medley (Wendy Irick, Suella Miller, Lori Rea and Sue Wittry) in 3:52.70, while Irick qualified for the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:04.28.

Weathers looks for Irick to qualify for the NCAA meet in the 100 backstroke this weekend. Irick's best time in the 100 back is currently 58.50.

Lori Rea and Karen McIntyre could make NCAA standards in the 100 butterfly. Weathers said, Rea has a best time this year in the 100 fly of 56.10, while McIntyre has turned it in 56.50.

The meet is scheduled to run Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 4:30 p.m. in the Rec Center Pool.

Valley play and fifth-place Illinois State standing at 4-5, the Salukis desperately need Valley wins to seriously entertain thoughts of hosting a first-round game of the Valley post-season tournament.

Herrin said that center Tim Richardson's performance against the taller Shockers could be a factor. In the teams' last meeting Richardson fouled out and finished with four points and five rebounds. However, Richardson has pulled down 48 rebounds while scoring 67 points in his last four outings.

"The Bradley game may have been Tim's best game of the year, even though he didn't shoot very well," Herrin said. "When we play a team like Wichita, a team that has a definite height advantage, Tim can be a big plus."

Herrin was also impressed with Kai Nurnberger's 19 point showing against the Braves.

"Kai played his best game of the year Thursday night and he can be a factor, too," Herrin said. "He can take up the slack when others may not be shooting well."

After the Salukis return from the Wichita State trip, they'll have a full week off before entertaining the Drake Bulldogs Feb. 14.

In nonconference action this year, the Shockers have knocked off Kansas, split with Kansas State and lost to national powerhouses Purdue and Syracuse.

Gateway Conference swimmers invade the Rec Center Pool this weekend to challenge the Saluki women's swim team for the league title.

SIU-C has won four of the last five Gateway trophies, and is set to avenge last season's narrow championship loss to Illinois State. The Redbirds eked out a three-point decision over a flu-ridden Saluki squad.

But SIU-C coach Bailey Weathers says his team is healthy and ready to win another title, in a meet that should boil down to a dogfight between ISU and SIU-C.

"I expect another closely contested meet similar to last year's, which should be good for spectators," Weathers said.

But the small size of the Saluki swim team could be a problem under a new scoring format this season. Last year, only the top team scored in relay events, while the top three finishers scored in individual events.

The new format has the top five individuals scoring in each event, while the top three teams in relays score.

"We have the quality of athletes to win most of the events, but our small roster means that a good team with more swimmers could outscore us," Weathers said. "At

With four solid performances in a row, Rich Herrin's 3-6, 9-11 Salukis will travel to Wichita State Saturday night for a 7:35 p.m. matchup with the Shockers.

"We're walking into a buzz saw, that's for sure," Herrin said of the 5-2, 14-7 Shockers, who are 8-0 at home this season and 5-1 in their last six games.

The Shockers last loss came to league-leading Tulsa, 72-58, on Jan. 31 at the Golden Hurricane's home court.

Herrin, who was pleased with his squad's effort in a 97-86 loss to Bradley on Thursday night, pointed out that the Braves' only loss in the last six games was to Wichita State.

"We've got to be careful of teams that can beat Bradley," Herrin said. "Wichita State may not have as much talent, but they are bigger and maybe stronger, too."

"And they've not forgotten the two times we beat them last year, either."

Three weeks ago, the Shockers dismantled the Dogs by expanding what had been a comfortable 10-point lead to an 81-65 final margin via clutch freethrow shooting down the stretch. Four Shockers hit double figures that night, with Gus Santos (19 points, five rebounds) leading the way.

"It was a closer game than the score shows," Herrin said.

The Randy House-less Dogs pulled within seven points twice during the second half, but 30 fouls enabled the Shockers to score 29 points from the line. Three Saluki regulars fouled out trying to guard the bigger Shockers.

"We played a good game the first time, but I know we're playing better right now," Herrin said. "Hopefully, we can carry some of the positive things of the last week or so into the game and let it be a factor."

EIU visits women cagers; Gateway battles resume

Gateway Conference competition returns as the women's basketball Salukis contend against Eastern Illinois in Davies Gym at 7:35 p.m. Saturday.

With this contest, the Salukis enter the seven-game homestretch of the league slate, which concludes with a tournament March 4 and 6.

SIU-C sports an 18-2 overall record and leads the Gateway by three games with an 11-0 mark. Pending the result of a Thursday night non-conference contest with Illinois-Chicago, EIU holds fourth place with a 6-5 GCAC record and 9-10 overall.

Coming off a bitter loss to Tennessee Tech, the Salukis will try to boost team morale going into the Saturday matchup.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said the Salukis' attitudes were, "disappointed and mad at themselves. They know they let a great thing (14th ranking) get away."

However, the three senior leaders hate to lose and won't allow anyone else to think negatively, Scott said.

Second guessing

Fatigue overcame women cagers

It's easy to second-guess, but in the heat of the moment coaches only have one shot.

The SIU-C women's basketball team fell to a fired up Tennessee Tech, primarily in the first 15 minutes. As the deficit increased and the Eaglettes kept rolling, members of the Southern Illinois media watched in horror and restrained themselves from jumping on court to call timeout.

The rout continued 12 and a half minutes before coach Cindy Scott issued the timeout order. The score stood at 26-11.

Why did the head mentor hold off so long, and why not stop the game in the first six minutes to regroup or at least chastise the Salukis? As tired and flatfooted as they obviously were, they could have used the rest! too.

"I really felt like the kids were running the offense well. It was a question of a lack of intensity on the defensive end," Scott said. "I don't call time to yell at them. I call timeout to switch offenses, or switch whatever's needed, and I didn't feel like we needed to switch."

Fresh Salukis might have compensated for the lack of defense if not by stopping the Eaglettes but by at least scoring more. Only Cozette Wallace proved capable of stopping the All-America center Cheryl Taylor and countered with 10 points. But Wallace, who hails from the same hometown as Taylor in Lawrenceburg, Tenn., got in foul trouble.

Maybe 6-4 sophomore reserve Deb Koher deserved a chance. As the starting Salukis were fighting weariness more than the Eaglettes, perhaps Koher would have been as fresh and hustling as Wallace. Someday the Salukis might benefit from Koher getting experience in a tough game. If not Koher, then why not any of the youth? SIU-C will lose three seniors to graduation and someone must gain quality time in a pressure game.

Maybe even telling 6-2 center Mary Berghuis to play rough-house might have intimidated the Eaglettes' lane superiority. But SIU-C does not play dirty and Tennessee Tech did not deserve a dirty game because it played valiantly, even when the Salukis pulled within two points near the end.

In the long run, the coaches understand what went wrong more than anyone could possibly realize. A pair of bad practices preceded the contest. Fatigue prevented Saluki
