Hardliner attacks Gorbachev's plan

MOSCOW (UPI) — Hardliner Yegor Ligachev led the counterattack Tuesday against Mikhail Gorbachev’s plan for multiparty democracy, saying he opposed “turning the party into an amorphous organization and a political club.”

Ligachev’s speech, constantly interrupted by applause, spearheaded conservative resistance to Gorbachev’s proposal to share power in a furious debate that forced extension of the Communist Party’s Central Committee full leadership meeting, or plenum, by one day, Soviet radio said.

In a brief speech, the much-criticized Ligachev rebutted charges that he ordered troops into Tbilisi to quell a popular demonstration last April. Ligachev said bluntly that Gorbachev was also responsible for the decision for the military crackdown on a peaceful rally in which 21 Georgians died.

Ligachev said he opposed “with his whole soul” introducing private property into the socialist Soviet state, saying, “It allows Lithuania’s Communist Party to remain an independent party.

“I am also against turning our party into an amateur political organization, a political club,” Ligachev said.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov, commenting on Gorbachev’s plan for political democracy, said, “If you can’t change them, join them.”

The vote to debate behind close doors in the Kremlin led to the extension of the meeting beyond its scheduled end on Tuesday.

The extension through Wednesday means the meeting will still be going on when Secretary of State James Baker arrives Wednesday afternoon for talks with his Soviet counterpart, Eduard

City agencies receive funding from Council

By Diana Mvilel Staff Writer

Funds requested by three city agencies were approved on varying terms to each agency at the Carbondale City Council meeting Tuesday night.

The council approved funding for the Carbonate Convention and Tourism Bureau—$378,400 for fiscal year 1991. The council specified that the remaining $0,002 from its original request be held in council contingency to be used only if the state cuts CCTB funding for fiscal year 1991.

Councilman John Own said he did not see how CCTB could lose because if the state can cut its funding, Carbonate would still provide $0,002.

The council approved $143,000 for Carbonate Industrial Corporation for fiscal year 1991. This was the same amount funded to CIC in fiscal year 1990. Councilman John Own requested $3,863. The council approved $2,000 for the Make It Your Home Celebration 1990, $2,000 for the Uptown Festival '90, $1,300 for a flower border expansion project. The council agreed to discuss the remaining funds requested after the Downers Consultant plan is approved by the council.

The council approved funding the Carbonate Club $1,000 for the annual fireworks display. The Partnership for Progressive Approaches to Disability Issues has requested the council change city law that allows citizens 48 hours to clear their sidewalks following a snowfall to 24 hours as a safety concern for all citizens, especially for those with disabilities.

House passes legislation for voter registration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Turning aside objections from President Bush, the House overwhelmingly passed legislation Tuesday to streamline voter registration across the country and make it easier for more Americans to cast ballots.

The measure, approved 289-132, would allow citizens to register to vote when they renew or apply for a driver’s license and to register by mail and at numerous new voter registration locations.

The White House, however, has objected to much of the new procedure which costs the states and has questioned whether the potential for voter fraud will increase. The measure also faces an uncertain future in the Senate.

But House Speaker Thomas Fole, D-Wash., said despite those objections, he would be surprised if Bush vetoed the bill, which he said addressed “the heart of American democracy.”

“If he chooses to veto it, then he also should give an explanation to the country why he believes this reform and opportunity for people to vote in not in the interests of democracy,” she said.

As the measure, popularly known as the “motor voter bill,” moved quickly through the House, Democrats inside and outside of Congress took the opportunity to attack the Republican White House for standing in the way of a more open election process.

Worse, that seems to be easier to vote, but it won’t be easier to choose.

Gus says it may be easier to vote, but it won’t be easier to choose.
Saluki men's basketball attendance is on the rise and it seems the upward trend will continue as the Missouri Valley Conference race hits full stride.

Average attendance through the Salukis' first eight home games this season stands at 6,014 — up from 5,762 last season and 4,497 during the 1987-88 season. The Dawgs are 7-1 with the home crowd behind them and 18-5 overall after having a six-game winning streak snapped by Bradley Saturday.

As the conference race hits full stride, more fans should be attracted to the arena. Big games draw the most fans and all of the Salukis' remaining games are conference matchups. With five of the Salukis' remaining seven games at the arena, the per-game attendance figures stand a chance of rising.

If the numbers stay above the 6,000 mark, it will be the first time in 11 years the Salukis have averaged more than 6,000 per home contest. The 1978-79 Salukis averaged 6,195 on their way to a 15-13 record.

Head coach Rich Herrin's philosophy of "exciting offense puts people in the stands and defense wins halftime" is paying big dividends for the program's revenue.

Herrin has increased the University's revenue through ticket sales in each of his five years at SIU-C. Last year's total revenue of $284,331, by far the most in school history, should be easily surpassed at the current rate this season.

Herrin divides the credit between a winning team, good public relations and an enthusiastic fan base.

"Attendance is going to be up," Herrin said. "We make this and so does public relations. Promotions throughout Carbondale and Southern Illinois create interest and excitement.

"Just you mention Saluki fans out there," Herrin said. "They're very knowledgeable and very supportive."

Despite Pope's plea, fighting among Christians continues

BELFAST, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian forces vying for control of west Beirut clashed for the seventh day Tuesday, ignoring an impassioned appeal by Pope John Paul II and forcing President Elias Hrawi to ask world leaders for support to end the violence. Hrawi's appeal was addressed to the United States, the Soviet Union, France, Britain, the European Community, the United Nations and the Arab League.

Mandela calls de Klerk 'courageous, bold'

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Jailed black leader Nelson Mandela congratulated President Frans de Klerk Tuesday on his "courageous and bold" racial reforms, but said more needs to be done before the nation's black majority will agree to negotiations on power-sharing. Mandela's response was conveyed by the Rev. Allan Boesak, who said Mandela specifically wanted the government to lift a 43-month-old state of emergency and release all political prisoners.

World Bank makes first-ever loan to Poland

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World Bank President Barber Conable Tuesday announced the multilateral organization's first two loans to Poland totaling $360 million and said lending to the country could reach $2.5 billion in the next three years. The bank's lending program will focus on supporting further policy reforms in Poland, including measures aimed at promoting a greater reliance on market forces and the private sector, Conable said at a news conference.

Pentagon helps search for Peace Corps workers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon said Tuesday it was sending an Air Force C-5 transport plane carrying two UH-60 helicopters to Western Samoa to join in the search for five Peace Corps workers missing as a result of tropical storm Ofa. The storm struck Western Samoa Monday. Four of the Peace Corps volunteers were reported missing from the island of Savaii and one from the main island of Upolu.

North asks to have his conviction overturned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oliver North asked a federal appeals court to throw out his four Contra convictions Tuesday because his indictment and trial were improperly influenced by his nationally televised testimony to Congress. North's legal case was argued by Harry Simon, who prosecutors said repeatedly asked the "accredited, pervasive publicity" surrounding the fired White House aide's congressional testimony in July 1987.

Crewman tells of drinking with Valdez skipper

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — The chief engineer of the Exxon Valdez told a jury Tuesday that three tanker crewmen, including the captain, spent hours drinking in Valdez bars before their loaded tanker ran aground in 1989 and caused the worst oil spill in U.S. history. Jerry Glowacki, testifying at the trial of former tanker skipper Joseph Hazelwood, said, "We ordered two beers and four guns in Valdez establishments before sailing," said Hazelwood had three or four drinks prior to the March 24 grounding and spill of the Exxon Valdez.

Key West issues warning on Spring Break

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Officials of this island resort say they've learned from the mistakes of Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach and will try to control Spring Break before the annual collegiate influx begins. The city has been spreading the word with letters to universities east of the Mississippi River. "We're not saying don't come," said Assistant City Manager Ron Heron, who wrote the letter. "We're just saying there are things you should be aware of."

Festival focuses on features by Asian-Americans

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Vietnamese women and the roles they assume in Vietnam’s contemporary culture are the topics of the feature presentation at the 12th Big Muddy Film Festival, at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

"Surname Viet Given Name Nam," is an experimental documentary which combines staged interviews with authentic interviews to recount the post-war discrimination of Vietnamese women both in their homeland and in the United States.

Trith T. Minh-ha, an American filmmaker who was born in Vietnam, has met with both praise and criticism of her controversial documentary style in this film.

Minh-ha eschews conventional notions of the interview format. The film even refers to the interview as "an outdated tool of documentary."

The interview in "Surname Viet" often avoid confrontation with the speaker’s full face, instead panning downward from the lips to the hands. In one take, a speaker is half-in and half-out of the frame.

Interviews originally conducted in Vietnam in 1982 were translated into English by Trinh in 1987. The director gave these transcripts to her actresses to recite and perform in the film.

Other experimental techniques employed in the film include the use of a stop point process to give dreamlike rhythms to noncontingent black-and-white documentary footage culled from the U.S. National Archives and the Vietnamese government.

Home movie footage from the wedding of Minh-ha’s sister and glimpses of a Miss Vietnam pageant address the influence of American attitudes on Vietnamese women.

The lives of Vietnamese women are studied in tonight’s Big Muddy film.

Education agenda needs reality check

PRESIDENT BUSH announced some ambitious yet vague plans to set a decade-long challenge to make American schools the best in the world.

Bush and the leaders of the National Governor's Association have reached an agreement on six broad goals to be reached by the year 2000.

WITH THE announcement of these high aspirations, Bush has laid the groundwork for primary and secondary education, which is where the road of the long challenge begins. The basic foundation of reading, writing, and arithmetic, even the brightest young children cannot be expected to grasp the complexities of the modern world.

He is to be commended for focusing in on education so early in his tenure as president. In recognizing the serious educational dilemma we find ourselves in, he has done more to correct the problem than his predecessor, Ronald Reagan.

HOWEVER, the gap between these high ideals and our current quandary suggests Bush is long overdue for a reality check. There is nothing wrong with the desire to excel. We applaud Bush who is aiming high, but who is going to pay for all these educational reforms?

But where do we come from? Will we trim it off of other parts of the budget? Will we take money from the defense fund and build brains instead of bombs? Will we raise taxes? Will we play Robin Hood to rob from the rich and give to the poor?

THIS IS a question that must be answered for the price tag. Lovely idealism is often just as elevated. We must be willing to devote a sizable chunk of the budget to education if we are to achieve these goals.

BUSH and the governors want:

- All children who start school be ready to learn.
- Every school to be free of drugs and violence and offer a disciplined learning environment.
- All students leaving grades four, eight, and 12 to demonstrate "competency over a challenging curriculum" as measured by a national test.
- U.S. students to be first in the world in science and mathematics achievement. (American students usually rank in the bottom of comparative tests among industrialized nations.)
- Every adult American to be literate and possess the skills necessary to succeed and adapt to a competitive global economy. (An estimated 20 million Americans are illiterate.)
- The high school graduation rate to be about 90 percent. (Seventy-five percent of Americans currently graduate from high school.)

THE RHETORIC has a wonderful ring to it, but Bush may have bitten off more than he can chew. His administration would be hard pressed to solve some of these problems, such as the illiteracy rate alone, much less all six of them in a 10-year span.

THE YELLOW Brick Road which leads to the educational Oz is a long, steep and treacherous one but one we must traverse if we are going to survive as a nation. We must devise a way of educating our people thoroughly and feasibly. Until we accomplish this, all education plans will remain fairy tales.

There is much talk these days of a "peace dividend," meaning the money that will be freed for other purposes as the surprise changes on our balance sheet. That's a country to spend less on arms.

Will there really be a peace dividend? The six-on-satellite invasion? If you recall, we had similar expectations at the end of the Vietnam War, but the manufacturing continued.

Assuming that this time will be different, how should we use the money?

There is no shortage of applicants. Social workers want more for their clients. Educators want more money for their students. Environmentalists want more for the planet. The line stretches around the block, and most are worthy causes.

But I'm not sure that splitting the peace dividend among them is the best way to use it.

Instead of applying money-platers to individual weak spots, I believe we should continue to improve the general condition of the nation, Call it holistic economics.

A generous slice should go toward reducing the government deficit. The rest should be used to rebuild our industrial base.

Government borrowing has reached a point where we are no longer in control of our own destiny. Forgetting lessons learned from the 1970s, if we decided, for sound business reasons, to raise taxes, sell off government property, and cut spending, the nation would be thrown into a crisis that nobody has ever had to deal with.

That's an intolerable situation, and the peace dividend offers a chance to take corrective action, almost painlessly.

Now about the need for an economic rationale. This nation used to be one big humming work and play machine. We made it. Today needs grow in vacant lots where factories once stood, and we import products we once invented.

That's a sick situation made urgent by the impending military cutbacks. Soon thousands of ex-servicemen will be job-hunting. So will thousands of civilians now working on military bases or in defense plants.

Already there is talk of using some of the peace dividend to pay for job-retraining. But as things stand, the training will be for jobs that don't exist.

Clearly we should use the bulk of the peace dividend to build new factories that put people to work making things we need at a price and of a quality that will reverse our dependence on imports.

More proposals for using the dividend as a government dividend will collect and disperse it. I believe most of us should be left in charge of our own destinies.

To make certain it is used to build those factories, we need to think of our own self-reliance. It should reward invencment in enterprises that create jobs and turn out useful products. It should penalize those who play takeover games that pile up junk bond debt without increasing output.

Are these uses of the peace dividend likely to happen? I doubt it. Peace tactics in the national fiber by paying off its huge debt after the Franco-Prussian War, but it is more likely that the peace dividend will go to pet social projects and let the deficit grow.

My guess is that the money will be dribbled out to various do-good groups according to the strength of their lobbies.

A tax structure conducive to economic growth is politically impossible given the present make-up of Congress, and American industrialists aren't much interested in building after home anyway. Some of them, like riding Eastern Europe for factory sites to take advantage of cheap labor there.

The bottom line: Our peace dividend will be the biggest disappointment since Geraldo opened At Capone's vault.

The obvious way to mark Black History Month is by seeing "Glory."

This marvelous Civil War movie tells the story of the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, most celebrated of the 166 black units in the Union Army.

The film is the result of a heroic attack on Fort Wagner, outside Charleston, on July 18, 1863, took the lives of half its men, including its young commander.

It is the story of the courage of Fort Wagner, but it is seasoned for theANTA argument over whether Negro soldiers would fight.

"Through the cannon smoke of that dark night, the manhood of the colored race shines before many eyes that would not see," wrote the Atlantic Monthly when news of the battle came.

The New York Tribune predicted Fort Wagner would be "such a name to the colored race as Bunker Hill had been for 90 years to the white Yankees."

But "Glory" scarcely addresses the larger history of the war. It spotlights the human drama of Col. Robert Gould Shaw and his sons soldiers, and recounts Shaw's struggle to win for his men first shoes, then uniforms, then a chance to fight instead of being used as laborers behind the lines.

The different backgrounds and motivations of the four test-eees are beautifully portrayed.

The movie takes some liberties. It shows the black private trip, for example, instigating the protest that shamed Congress into granting Negro soldiers equal pay with whites; in fact, the 54th's refusal to like Shelby Foote, consulted throughout the film's production, and James M. McPherson to its essential accuracy.

For anyone who wants to know more about the role of blacks in the war, two readable and historically respected books are Eric Foner's "Reconstruction" and McPherson's "Cry of Freedom."

These books eloquently and precisely document the struggle that blacks have had to gain equality in rank as well as on the battlefield, with a truer understanding of the struggle for black men's dignity in America.That surely is what Black History Month is all about.

Black History Month educates people

As we enter the last decade of the century, it seems appropriate that — in the final time frame where this Black History Month should be somewhat different from prior celebrations.

One of the main functions of Black History Month is to educate all Americans about the many contributions that Blacks have made to our society. Another is to give Black Americans the sense of pride and self-worth that is absolutely necessary to any race or ethnic group.

Black History Month is also a natural time for taking an objective inventory of our progress as we prepare for a new century.

Of course, Black Americans have a right to be proud of the progress that has been made over the past and certainly should not take it for granted. History shows us that much of their progress has been lost much more quickly than it was gained. Black History Month must always remind us of the constant vigilance our freedoms can certainly never be taken for granted.

Blacks have experienced a number of social, economic and political changes during 1989. A brief look at some of the most revealing categories, such as: life expectancy, education, employ- eries, family income and politics will show that we have achieved and what we have to achieve.

Panama invasion weak foreign policy decision

There seems to be some unanimity on a number of actions taken by the United States in Panama. Yet, Noriega was a strong dictator that used strong arms and given the time and the place, the action or actions might have been far better.

As college students we cannot help but be disheartened by what we have experienced. Instead, let us build on the life expectancy of Black Americans showed much greater gains than males whose median income was almost twice that of white males. One recent study showed the life expectancy of a black male was lower in Harlem than that of a male in Bangladesh. In 1988, the number of black young adults between the ages of 25 and 34 who had completed four years of high school had risen to 10%, an all time high, but only 13% of black high school graduates completed college and it is well-known what great are we have made to

Black History Month looks for collegiate role models

As African-Americans, we enter a decade with a renaissance of hope in South Africa, our first Black president, and a $100 billion economy. These are all key positions within the entire political and educational structure. Yet, we should ask ourselves if this has really been a real change.

I am writing in response to Tom McCarthy's and others letters to the Daily Egyptian letters column. I believe an important issue of the word "co-ed" is our dictionary. Of course people are not yet fired up about controversy issues such as abortion, gun control, the death penalty or other important issues this early in the semester. Yet, my response to Tom and his concern about the abolition of the word "co-ed" for our dictionaries because it is so derogatory towards women: Co does mean "with" so those other writers are right. Here are some of my examples of the use of "Co" co-consultant, co-ambassador, co-organizer, co-author, co-defendant, co-cole, co-chief, co-owner, co-worker, co-inventor, co-producer, co-author, co-editor, co-director, co-actor, co-producer. I believe it is important to use this word correctly in the dictionary. Co-ed simply means "a woman student at a co-educational institution." — Bob Howe's, sophmore, marketing.

Shevardnadze. Gerashimov said Baker might also meet with Gorbachev, who was embroiled in debate Tuesday with conservatives opposing him to drive to hasten democratisation in the Soviet Union.

The crews brought into sharp relief the rivalry between Gorbachev, Ligachev, and Shevardnadze, 69, who command great support among conservative communists for its resistance to free market economics and political pluralism.

Pleumt participants told reporters waiting outside the Kremlin gate that Ligachev's speech was constantly interrupted by applause. A powerful speaker, Ligachev speaks a pungent, crisp Russian branch of English.

In one of their public clashes two years ago, Ligachev told Shevardnadze: "You don't go into the forest without knowing how to get out of it."

Despite widespread reports of a genuine purge of Politburo hardliners, a Soviet journalist with close ties to the party leadership said the housecleaning might be delayed.

"There were plans to get a half dozen (conservatives) or so, but I don't think they are going to rock the boat now because of the unstable situation in the country and in the party," the journalist said.

The Central Committee met at 17,000 Soviet troops patrolled Tukum more than two weeks after they stormed the Azerbaijani capitol to put down a nationalist insurrection against Soviet rule and to end ethnic fighting between Christian Armenians and Muslim Azerbaijanis.

The military crackdown followed weeks of virtual civil war on the Soviet Union's southern rim, where more than 100 people died in the worst ethnic violence of Gorbachev's five-year rule.

The Soviet Communist Party is also beset by internal turmoil sparked by Lithuanian communists' vote Dec. 20 to break from Moscow and form the first independent republic party in Soviet history.

The Central Committee meeting that opened Monday was a resumption of a Christmas Day session called to deal with the defiant Lithuanians, but the party's status in the Baltic republic was overshadowed by larger questions on the future of Gorbachev's perestroika drive.

Greenlee stresses political, economic strength of blacks

By Aaron Nauth
Staff Writer

Spike Lee isn't the only African-American around who can write a controversial script around the issues of racism and rebellion.

Sam Greenlee has already done it. But he wasn't as lucky to reach a mainstream audience with such open arms as Lee.

Greenlee said he was under surveillance by the CIA for years because he dared to challenge the white authority with his messages of revolution.

"The Spook Who Sat By The Door" is an intense movie about an attempted overthrow of the oppressive white power structure in the late 1960s because of a violent uprising by inner-city blacks trained in urban guerilla warfare.

About 200 people at the Student Center witnessed the only circulating copy of this rare movie Monday and listened to Greenlee, author of the book and movie, speak about his experience with writing it and dealing with the wake of controversy after its release.

Greenlee said he wrote the book in 1966 in anticipation of the civil rights movement. It was finally published in London after being rejected 40 times by American publishers.

Greenlee said the book is a study in the subservient nature of racial integration in the U.S.

"It is the story of one black ghetto man's reaction to the hypocrisy of the bourgeoisie. It is autobiographical, in that it is a tale of man's reaction to oppression," Greenlee said.

Greenlee said the movie was worth making despite all the negative criticisms from the white mainstream community.

The book's setting is based around the culturally turmoiled times of the late 60s with the Black Panthers and other similar groups were active. The book and movie depict what could have happened if a violent revolution was orchestrat-

The plot revolves around an African-American ex-CIA agent and social worker who turned neighborhood Chicago junkies into an urban-guerrilla-warfare militia.

Greenlee said he wrote the book because his revolutionary role was more effective as a propagandist than as a warrior. "I decided to write it, rather than actually do it," Greenlee said.

This movie speaks from Greenlee's experience of growing up in Chicago and rubbing shoulders with the CIA when he was in the foreign service.

"You can't live apart from the people and speak for them," Greenlee said. "My job is to reflect the attitudes, wants, needs and desires of my people and offer a way to carry them out."

The plot revolves around an African-American ex-CIA agent and social worker who turned neighborhood Chicago junkies into an urban-guerrilla-warfare militia.

The ex-CIA agent transformed the junkies by training them with the knowledge he acquired from a training program the CIA was using to recruit "the finest of the black males."

In the story, the revolution eventually spread from Chicago, and the battles of warriors infiltrated into all major American cities.

The movie ended abruptly with the revolution only beginning to take full-force against "whity."

The book and movie raise questions about how the white power structure has resisted African-Americans any opportunity to take control of their lives. The white power structure now has reinforcements to suppress a violent revolution like the one depicted in the movie, Greenlee said.

"If this happened today, it would be an excuse for an armed holocaust by the American government," Greenlee said.

Greenlee surmised that political and economic self-determination is a viable avenue for African-Americans trying to achieve freedom in a society that constantly oppresses them.

"We should try to do as much as possible to achieve our freedom as they try to suppress it," Greenlee said.

Greenlee criticized the black leadership for becoming fat, comfortable and wealthy. He said many people lack initiative and have lost a sense of feeling within the black community.

"It's time to pass the torch," Greenlee said. "I'm just here planting the seeds. No one knows who will receive the torch, it could be the militant as well as the timid."

Greenlee predicted that the picture of a depression will hit soon and we will then find out who is prepared to take action for what they believe.

Greenlee has been working on material in Spain for the past few years and now has "a trunkload of said."

"If I make more films, it will be in the motherland — Africa," Greenlee said. "I will never make another film in the U.S."

Greenlee is working on an play called "Blues For Little Prez," which revolves around an anti-drug theme. Greenlee said that drugs are responsible for much apathy and loss of hope within the black community.

Lecturer to test political knowledge in campaign for committee chair

By Jackie Spinner
Features Editor

University lecturer Barbara Brown does more than teach her political science students about campaigns and elections. She practices it.

The Southern Illinois native is campaigning for State Central Committee woman in the Democratic Party, while teaching two political science classes and a University Honors course this semester.

But Brown says being educated about campaigns and actually running one is a mixed-blessing.

"I know a lot from an academic perspective but long-time party activists are sometimes skeptical about educators," she said. "Nothing can take the place of good hands-on-gut-feeling campaigning."

Brown, the Randolph County party chairwoman since 1978, faces Bernice Covilli, party chairwoman for Franklin County, on the Democratic ballot in the March 20 primary election.

The winner of the Brown-Covilli race will join State Central Committee candidate Les McGollum, who is running unopposed, as the State Central Committee-female representative team for the 22nd Congressional District.

The State Central Committee oversees the Democratic Party organizations in each Illinois county by endorsing statewide candidates, organizing fund-raisers and getting voters to the polls.

Brown says she is busy traveling the district's 20 counties, attending party organization meetings and giving speeches to campaign for the position.

“My theme is ‘Strength is in our Unity,”’ Brown said. “We need to pool resources and do a better job of educating our party leaders on the grassroots level.”

Another goal of the committee, she said, should be to create more opportunities for young people to get involved with the political party.

Brown was “initiated by fire” into the political scene as an undergraduate at SIU-C in 1972. She participated in a campaign as an assignment for the political science class she now teaches.

"Young women were especially rare in Southern Illinois politics at that time,” Brown said. “For me, though, there was never any question about which party I would choose. In my gut, I’m a Democrat.”

Brown graduated from SIU-C with a bachelor’s, master’s and doctorate degrees in political science.

She served as an alternate delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1976 and has worked on campaigns for U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda.

Brown lives in Chester with her husband, Richard, an attorney, and their three sons.

Whitehead lecture set for today

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

As part of the visiting artist series, Frances Whitehead will be lecturing at 4:30 p.m. today at the University Museum. Whitehead earned her Master of Fine Arts degree at Northern Illinois University; and now teaches at the Art Institute of Chicago. Her art work ranges from ceramics to metal working.

"I am interested with things that are connected to elemental materials, iron, copper," Whitehead said. "I like to work with materials that have resistant properties to work against."

Whitehead said her interest in art started early in life.

"My parents are artists. I grew up around art," Whitehead said. "They didn't discourage me to work with the art. Rather they encouraged me to look at other ways to make a living."

Whitehead said she chose to teach, rather than to work in a studio.

"I didn't want make work that was considered commercially viable," Whitehead said. "I wanted to be able to make work that is just be what it is."

Whitehead has exhibited her work all over the United States and Europe. She said her best body of work was shown in September of 1989 at the Dark Gallery in Chicago.

"The work was well received," Whitehead said. "I worked on it for a year and a half."

Whitehead said her work has moved from a drawing stage to a hands-on stage of working with materials.
Strategic planning to be discussed by GPSC

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will discuss resolutions on a strategic planning forum for future planning problems within the Human Subjects Committee in a meeting at 7 p.m. tonight.

Charles Ramsey, GPSC president, said the council will form a resolution about issues to be discussed Thursday in a 3rd strategic planning meeting with Chancellor Lawrence K. Pottt. Ramsey said his biggest concern lies with the SUC Committee toward a more-matched oriented school, which is said the planning does most imply.

"There should be more space for the social sciences and humanities," Ramsey said.

GPSC will also recommend that the Human Subjects Committee, which reviews all research projects involving human subjects, hire a full- or part-time staff member to assist in spending up review procedures.

Ramsey said the processing procedures, which ideally should take less than two weeks, are often "too long and cumbersome."

"Much of the research is routine and wouldn't take long to process," Ramsey said. Some students researching dissertations or theses on time schedules can be affected by the backlog of reviews the committee has received.

The meeting will take place in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

Juggling joker jostles way into Heartland comedy scene

By Stephanie Steiger

Funny Bone comedian, Dan Markwell, will display his quick wit and comical juggling at 9:30 p.m. tonight in the Student Center's IgM Muddy Room.

Markwell, native of St. Louis, started in the entertainment business seven years ago, juggling on the street in front of the West Port Plaza in St. Louis.

But soon Markwell's focus turned to stand-up comedy and he started doing regular performances at The Funny Bone Comedy Club's "Open Microphone Night" in St. Louis.

Markwell's style is upbeat and fast moving. Much of his material comes from personal observations and experiences.

Markwell, who has attended different colleges, likes to use his scholastic experiences to relate to his student audiences.

Since his recent move to Chicago and since his marriage in December, Markwell has broadened his repertoire to include these topics, as well as family life, into his routine.

Markwell is forever faithful to his first love, juggling, which he uses to enhance his comedy.

From bowling balls to rubber chickens to fire, Markwell juggles it all with ease and puts on a show to remember.

While on tour for 40 weeks a year, Markwell makes appearances at comedy clubs across the United States including Deja Vu in Columbus, Mo., Off The Wall in WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officials and lawmakers Tuesday urged quick passage of legislation to elevate the EPA to Cabinet-level status, saying it would symbolize the government's commitment to solving pollution problems.

With President Bush already on record as supporting the politically popular bill, disparaging words were seldom heard at the Senate hearing on the measure, which would change the Environmental Protection Agency's name to the Department of the Environment.

Sponsors of the bill acknowledged it would do little to change the day-to-day operations of the EPA, but said it would enable the EPA administrator — the lead advocate for the environment in government — to regularly attend Cabinet meetings, thus ensuring his views are heard first-hand by the president.

The measure appeared to take on added relevance in the wake of controversy over the Bush administration's stance on global warming, particularly allegations that White House officials overruled suggestions from EPA Administrator William Reilly that the president take a stronger position on reducing industrial emissions linked with the problem.

Bush was widely criticized by environmentalists and members of Congress after giving a speech Monday calling for more research — not action — on global warming. Reilly and other Cabinet officials reportedly wanted Bush to voice greater support for emission controls but were rebuffed by White House chief of staff John Sununu, who has expressed skepticism about whether the scientific evidence on global warming warrants costly pollution reduction.

Asked about the controversy at the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee hearing, Reilly denied he was unhappy with Bush's speech, calling it "first-rate." Reilly also said that, in general, he sees a close relationship with President Bush, attended most Cabinet meetings and played a key role in the development of the administration's environmental policies.

"My (phone) calls do get returned in this administration," he said. However, Reilly said the situation could be different in future administrations.

"Cabinet status will codify what is already the practice in the Bush administration, but there is no assurance, without Cabinet status, that the administrator will still be in the (Cabinet) room in the future," he said.

Reilly said the bill also was needed to put the EPA on an equal footing with other federal departments now facing major pollution problems requiring EPA oversight. For example, he said the EPA would be a key watchdog over cleanup efforts at the Energy Department's nuclear weapons plants and the Defense Department's military bases.

In the international arena, Reilly said Cabinet status for the EPA is necessary to assure foreign governments that the United States took environmental issues seriously, particularly in view of increasing world cooperation on global warming, ozone depletion and ocean pollution.

The EPA administrator said his lack of Cabinet status was particularly noticeable when he represented the United States at two major international environmental conferences last year.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, prime sponsor of the legislation, echoed Reilly's remarks and said he was especially enthusiastic about provisions of the bill that would establish a Bureau of Environmental Statistics within the EPA to collect and analyze data about environmental trends.

Cabinet-level EPA future under Senate scrutiny

Kingdom tenth recipient of Jesse Owens Trophy Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — When he was 17 years old, ready to graduate from Case Western Reserve, Kingdom first became aware of Jesse Owens and the significance of his struggle. "I had to hear many great things about him," Kingdom said. "My high school film club showed me clips of him, read books about him. I was getting to know him this year, and he would have been incredible to meet such a person."

It was therefore with a sense of awe and humility that Kingdom accepted the news he was the 10th recipient of the Jesse Owens International Trophy Award, presented annually to the athlete who best personifies perseverance in performance and promotes sincere cooperation among people of all nations.

Speaking in a room alongside Owens' widow, Wilma, and the three daughters, Gloria Hemphill, Beverly Frank and Marlene Rankin, as well as his own mother, Christine Kingdom, and his former wife, Winnie, Kingdom said his own life has been inspired by the legend of Jesse Owens, the same way his parents' lives were because of what it stands for, not only for being the best athlete in the world but for the fact it has Jesse's name," Kingdom said of the Owens family. "It's so important to have something that represents him helps keep his name alive, and I'm glad I'm a part of the Owens family by winning this award.

"No matter what field you're in, or what kind of sport, you're always going to have adversity, and to see how he fought through it can help anyone. It helped me to have a long, uphill battle to get to the top."

"You have to look at the time and the unrest in the world (when Owens was active). It was just the beginning of World War II. It wasn't just the racism in our country but the racism in Europe and the Nazis. He had to contend with all that. The guy was incredible the way he handled his role and managed his progress through all those obstacles, which made him the inspiration he is today.

The announcement of Kingdom's selection was made by Atlanta Falcons' president and CEO Rich McKay, president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation and founder of the award and an Olympic bronze medalist in the long jump in the 1984 Olympics. Kingdom, chosen by a worldwide panel of judges from among two other finalists, Saidia of Morocco and Javier Soromany of Cuba. Also introduced Tuesday was a postage stamp honoring Owens, who won four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics Berlin. The stamp will be issued this summer.

Kingdom, 27, won the 110-meter hurdles in both the 1984 and 1988 Olympics, and last August he set the world record for that event at 12.92 in Zurich, Switzerland. Only four times has the 13-second barrier been cracked. Kingdom has done it three times and Renaldo Nehemiah once.

Kingdom is hoping to become the first man ever to sweep the 110-meter hurdles at three consecutive Olympics, and his ambition is to be the first to try for the decathlon in 1996. He already has done some strength work to prepare for the decathlon, but was advised not to proceed with it for fear of injury. "I'd think about it," he added.

"It's not doable in the next couple of years. It definitely pick it up after '92," he said. "We've got to do it before I retire. I've got to do it for self-satisfaction. I know I can do it. You high jump 7-1 3/4, you throw the discuss 175 feet, my sprints speak for themselves, so you have to at least try.

Previous winners of the Owens award, starting in 1981, were Eric Heiden, Sebastian Coe, Mary Susan, Edwin Moses, Carl Lewis, Anna, Greg Louganis, Ben Johnson and Florence Griffith-Joyner.

Although the Owens award is ostensibly for men, Kingdom estimated he earned about $600,000 in 1989.

Cincinnati offensive coordinator becomes N.Y. Jets new head coach

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Jets ended a six-week search for a head coach Tuesday by selecting Pete Coler, the offensive coordinator of the Cincinnati Bengals and one of the more innovative coaches in pro football.

Coles, 43, becomes the NFL's second-youngest head coach. He was brought in behind the "attack offense" that the Bengals used to reach the Super Bowl in 1986. He has two years of experience as an NFL head coach. The Bengals, once regarded as a team with a lot of talent and no direction, barely missed the 1989 Super Bowl.

"We're looking for a strong motivator, a teacher and a disciplinarian," Steinberg said. "A guy who can bring the most out of every player every out. We feel there's that guy.

The Jets' coaching position was left limbo during Super Bowl Only two ACC squads in top 25 rankings

What gives with the Atlantic Coast Conference? Just 16 teams, or less than one-third of the league's total, have been known to place three or four teams in the top 25. According to coaches, there is nothing wrong and there is something wrong with the conference quality as high as ever, the coaches also say the ACC's rule against accepting athletes who don't meet requirements of Prop 48 might be starting to work like the Big Ten, which produced two Final Four teams last year, also.

"It's a factor," said Maryland's Gary Williams. "Obviously there are some great players that are not as good as you would think. You see some pretty good academic schools with some players that are not on the same league like they used to be.

"I don't think it's necessary that the ACC is in better shape than ACC this year. It's still to be seen who has the best teams right now. The ACC will be out in the NCAA Tournament which teams are led.

Georgia Tech coach Bobo Crenshaw talks the league's success, saying, "I was disappointed when Georgia Tech would not take a Prop 48." Crenshaw said there are several reasons when a kid is short by 10 or 20 points. "That kid deserves a chance. Since some (schools) are allowed to and some aren't, I don't like it. Every school should be allowed to take one or two or something like that. I would like the opportunity to fight for a kid, but I don't want to do that."

"We do it for the same reason that we do it in college football," he added. "We don't give certain teams an edge. It definitely hurt teams like Michigan.

According to Clemson's Cliff Ellis, the league expects something else. "I don't think it's down at all," he said. "If you look at the ACC Big East thing (4-4 split), I think that with is like it. So I don't think it's down at all. I think the league is in the six years. I've been here is just as solid as it has been.

URBANA (UPI) — Illinois, still waiting for an Official Inquiry letter from the NCAA, has not had trouble recruiting despite the shadow hanging over its program, Coach Lou Henson said Tuesday.

The NCAA has been conducting a preliminary inquiry since last summer following allegations Illinois improperly recruited Chicago's Deon Thomas. His recruiter, Assistant Coach Jimmy Collins, has been grounded and Thomas declined indefinitely this season.

"We're just observing (prospects) now. We haven't attempted to sign players," Henson said. "I would think it's not going to hurt us a lot." Henson said most of his top prospects are in Illinois.

The state players — I think they understand things much better than out of state," Henson said.

Manual defeating odds

Not only doesn't Peoria Manual High's basketball team have a starter over 6-foot-2 1/2 — there isn't a senior in the bunch.

"I can't recall when I didn't have one or two seniors starting, though. I don't carry them just to have them around," said Manual Coach Dick Van Scyoc, who is in his 41st season as a coach and his 24th at Manual. Van Scyoc is 717-375 in those 41 seasons.

Being young and small hasn't stymied the Rams, who are 20-2 and ranked No. 6 in this week's Class AA schools by the United Press International Board of Coaches.

"I thought we would be very competitive, but I didn't think we would come along as fast as we have," Van Scyoc said. "I don't want to get too talking here, it can all blow up in your face. I'm not one to throw a lot of flowers around." Manual is 3-0 this season against Peoria's other two very strong teams — Peoria Central and Peoria Richwoods. Central is ranked No. 12 by UPI and Richwoods is No. 13. Manual defeated Richwoods 57-48 and 63-58 and owns a 67-64 win over Central, which finished second in last season's Class AA tournament behind East St. Louis Lincoln.

Manual will face Central Feb. 14 before another near-upset crowd of between 6,000 and 7,000 at Bradley University's Robertson Field House, which is 7,300. It should be a sweetheart of a Valentine's Day game and be the 11th straight regular season game at Bradley between the two schools.

"The demand for tickets was so strong we found we had to play them," Van Scyoc said. The Rams' top scorer is 5-foot-10 junior Howard Nathan, averaging 21 points. Mike Girms, a 5-foot-10 junior, is averaging 14, and 6-foot-2 1/2 junior Sam Davis adds 11. The other two starters are 6-foot-2 sophomore Clint Ford and 5-foot-10 sophomore Kevin Deal.

"If you were recruiting thousands of miles from home, I would think it would be devastating," said Henson said the school is waiting for the NCAA to tell it where it has found fault with the program.

"Anytime you get in a situation like this, it's going to take time," Henson said during his bi-weekly lunch with sports writers. "There's certainly not anything we can do to rush it.

"Hopefully, we will get the allegations and that will mean a lot to all of us," Henson added.

The initial NCAA inquiry surrounded the recruiting of Thomas, regarded as one of the nation's top prep players while he was a senior at Chicago's Simeon High School. Thomas initially said he planned to attend Iowa but switched to fellow Big Ten School Illinois.

The switch prompted assistant Iowa coach Bruce Pearl to secrecyly tape a telephone conversation he had with Thomas. During the conversation, Thomas allegedly admitted being offered $80,000 and a Chevy Blazer from Collins to choose Illinois over Iowa. Collins has denied he violated NCAA rules.

There also were reports that the NCAA investigation had been expanded to Illinois' unsuccessful recruitment of LaPhonso Ellis, who signed with Notre Dame out of East St. Louis Lincoln. Collins also tried to recruit Ellis two years ago.

Illinois could be forced to suspend its basketball program for at least a year if found guilty of major violations. The university's football program was placed on probation by the NCAA in 1988 for transgressions that occurred in 1985, and the so-called death penalty provision applies to schools that have a second major violation in any sport within a five-year period. The death penalty, if it were applied, would affect only the basketball program.

Illinois, No. 13 in the latest poll, is 16-4 overall and 6-4 in the Big Ten going into a Thursday night home game against Minnesota.

the team plays." Trueblood said.

"When you play with the motion offense: Southern plays and get the type of fast-breaking, slam-dunking exhibitions that you can with the Salukis, it gets the crowd enthused. It's that type of team that brings more and more people out to see then."

The Creighton Bluejays are in first place in the Valley with a 5-2 record. Tulsa, Illinois State and Bradley are tied at 5-3, SUU-C is 4-3.

Although the Bluejays own the best record in the Valley, one of their losses was handed to them by the Salukis. 82-73 on Creighton's home floor Thursday.

With Creighton coming to the Arena on Saturday, the Dawgs have a shot at surpassing their best draw of the season. The season-high was set during the Dec. 15 game against St. Louis when more than 8,600 fans packed the Arena in the Dawgs 75-72 loss. Trueblood expects between 8,000 and 9,000 fans for the 11 a.m.

Fehr said the owners seem to be shifting their position.

"The basis of the clubs' proposal really don't have anything to do with potential competitive imbalances or small market, large market problems," Fehr said.

"That is no longer the asserted basis for the proposal. We found that our when we asked if they could define what a large market is and what a small market is and they said no, they couldn't do that."
