Fees questioned

Funding hike may cause $300,000 surplus

By Emily Priddy
Administration Reporter

SIUC students will pay more than the necessary $1.2 million to compensate for proposed athletic funding cuts if a $40 activity-fee increase is approved in a referendum later this month, a University administrator says.

As part of its Priorities, Quality and Productivity plan, the Illinois Board of Higher Education asked state universities to eliminate its reliance on state funds for inter-collegiate athletic programs.

If SIUC accepts the recommendation, it will lose $1.2 million in athletic funding that must be replaced by increased student fees, he said. The surplus will go into the athletic fund, to be used at the department's discretion.

Mike Spiwak, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, said the athletic department originally suggested a $37 increase, but the amount was rounded up because $40 is a more workable number. "I know what the athletic department recommended at first was a $37 increase and it went to $40 for administrative purposes," he said. "That's just a nice, round number." Spiwak said he does not expect students to protest the extra $300,000.

Gimme shelter: Housing fee may increase 1.5 to 3 percent

By Katie Morrison
Administration Reporter

Along with other fee hikes at SIUC, campus housing rates could increase 1.5 to 3 percent this summer with SIU Board of Trustees' approval.

Increases include 1.8 percent for residence halls, 1.5 percent for family housing and 2.6 to 2.8 percent for other apartment rentals, according to the board's agenda.

In other areas, proposed increases include health insurance, tuition, athletic and activity fees.

SIUC Director of Housing Ed Jones said housing has proposed that Greek Row residents take a $7,800 cut in rent, but pay their electricity separately. Evergreen Terrace residents also would pay their own electricity and would conserve more energy, he said.

Greek Row residents could save money by conserving electricity, or break even with the $7,800 rent decrease if they do not, Jones said.

The increases are the result of inflation and deferred maintenance, such as repairing roofs.

Minor earthquake precursor to major temblor

Saturday's shake-up measures 4.2, rattles region south of Marion

By Dean Weaver
Special Assignment Reporter

Although the earthquake that shook Southern Illinois Saturday morning was small, an SIUC geology professor says the potential for a major earthquake still exists.

Willis Jacobs, a geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the earthquake occurred at 8:56 a.m. and registered a 4.2 on the Richter scale. Experts calculated the epicenter to be 15 miles south to southwest of Marion.

Jacobs said the epicenter was determined by gathering readings from area seismographs and using triangulation to determine the approximate location.

"There are 24 seismographs we use in Southern Illinois and three of them were not more than 70 miles from the epicenter," Jacobs said.

He said the aftershocks would be

Earthquake Zoning Leaves Southern Illinois in Ruins

The Mercalli Modified Intensity Scale is used to determine the probable damage caused by earthquakes of varying magnitudes throughout the New Madrid fault area.

SOURCE: United States Geological Survey

Earthquakes occur when rocks forming the earth's crust break—caused by the building of stresses greater than the strength of the rocks. Movement along the breaks is called slipping. When slipping takes place, the sudden release of energy produces vibrations or seismic (shock) waves that radiate from the main fault, often traveling long distances. These waves cause the shaking or "rattling" that lasts a few minutes to several hours. Where the faulting starts, at some depth below the earth's surface, is the focus of an earthquake. The point on the surface directly above the focus is the epicenter.

Instrumental	Detected only by seismography
Feeble	Noticed only by sensitive people
Slight	Like the vibrations due to a passing heavy truck; felt by people at rest, especially on upper floors
Moderate	Felt by people while walking; objects rock, including standing vehicles
Rather Strong	Felt generally; most sleepers are awakened
Strong	Trees sway; suspended objects swing; loose objects overturn or fall
Severe	General alarm; walls crack; plaster falls
Very Strong	Many cracks; chimneys fall; poorly constructed buildings damaged; water well levels may change
Extreme	Some houses collapse where ground begins to crack; pipes break open
Extreme	Ground cracks badly; many buildings destroyed and rail way lines bent; landslides on steep slopes
Catastrophic	Some buildings remain standing; bridge destroyed; all services (railway, pipes, and cables) out of action; great landslides and floods
Catastrophic	Total destruction; objects thrown into air; ground rises and falls in waves

AMERICAN TOURISTS VISIT VIETNAM — Among the growing stream of American visitors to Vietnam in recent years have been thousands for whom the trip is an emotional ordeal. Veterans of the war that claimed 58,000 American lives, they come to tour the scenes of old battles, remember fallen comrades and reflect on the trauma that made this country's very name a synonym for national division and pain. As Washington and Hanoi move toward diplomatic relations, "Vietnam" can finally become for Americans a country instead of a war, a place of real people with a history and a future instead of a U.S. national nightmare.

RISING BOMB ATTACKS TARGET ANC — The late-night bomb exploded without warning, shattering windows in five shops and offices and scattering shrapnel that cratered concrete, pierced metal frames and shattered wood furniture. Amid the broken glass and debris, the target was obvious: The bomb had been placed on the doormat of the recently opened office of the African National Congress. The black-led ANC is the largest political party and likely winner of the country's first democratic elections this April. Police have tallied at least 30 bombings since late December, but the wave of terror is suddenly surging, with nine bombings since Wednesday.

UNITED STATES CONSIDERS AIR STRIKES — The United States warned Saturday that it stands ready to support NATO air strikes in Bosnia-Herzegovina's civil war and branded the shelling of a crowded Sarajevo marketplace "a deliberate criminal attack. President Clinton ordered a stepped-up role for the U.S. military in evacuating the wounded. He asked that the United Nations "urgently investigate this incident and clearly identify those who are guilty."

CHINESE IMMIGRANT FEARS FOR FAMILY — It's not government persecution that the family of Wang Luanying fears. They're afraid of the money lenders who financed her illegal voyage to the United States. Luanying's family, one of the poorest in their village, is now being held responsible for what is for them an unimaginable sum of money—nearly $10,000 at an interest rate of 3 percent a month—an amount they guaranteed to buy her way to America. They arranged the loan from a syndicate of usurers to get her safely to the United States.

BECKWITH FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER — Thirty-one years after the assassination of black civil rights leader Medgar Evers, Byron De La Beckwith, the man arrested within two weeks of the murder, was found guilty and sentenced Saturday to life in prison for the crime. A cheer went up from the mostly black courtroom gallery as the verdict was read. Beckwith's wife, Thelma, broke into sobs, but the 73-year-old avowed white supremacist showed no emotion as Hinds County Circuit Judge L. Breland Hilburn handed down the mandatory sentence.

TEXAS SENATOR FACES FELONY CHARGES — It is a case of phone calls, computer records and talkative employees. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, the first female senator from Texas and potentially a rising national Republican star, begins trial Monday in an ethics case that could dictate not only her political career, but the future of party dominance in this fiercely partisan state. Hutchison, 50, faces four felony charges and one misdemeanor count for allegedly using her state employees for political and personal purposes, then destroying potential evidence to cover up the actions.

HARDING DECISION SET THIS WEEK — Tonya Harding moved one step closer to being thrown off the U.S. Olympic team Saturday when a U.S. Figure Skating Association panel unanimously called for a disciplinary hearing to determine her role in the Jan. 6 attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan. The move by the panel, coupled with a 30-day timetable during which it could not act, leaves the decision on Harding's participation in the hands of the U.S. Olympic Committee. The USOC can suspend her after its own hearing, and they will decide later this week whether to call a hearing of the 13-member Games Administrative Board to determine Harding's status.

Night vigil remembers SIUC student

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

In the dark Friday night, candles burned as symbols of a life that no longer exists: of a hope that remains for the future.

A 31-person procession of student leaders and friends of SIUC student Jose Waight traveled from Allen Hall in University Park to Detours at 706 E. Grand Ave.

Waight, 24, died of asphyxiation Feb. 5, 1993 after a scuffle with Checkers employees. Six employees were indicted last spring on charges of manslaughter, but charges were dropped eventually.

As tears swelled in the eyes of many, participants hugged and comforted each other in the Detours parking lot when Waight's best friend and SIUC student Glen Solick spoke of his memories of Waight.

"At first I didn't think I'd come (to the vigil) tonight because Jose always told us if he died he would want us to party," Solick said. "But then I realized I just had to come here."

After a tearful pause, Solick added that students need to be careful of becoming overly intoxicated at the bars in Carbondale.

"I guess this is a lesson to all students," Solick said.

The march, led by Mike Spiwak, Undergraduate Student Government president, vice president Lorenzo Henderson and Susan Hall, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, marked a time to remember the circumstances of Waight's death, Henderson said.

"His (Waight's) mother spoke to me and asked that we (USG) do something so that his (Waight's) death was not in vain," Henderson said. "We (USG) want to remind people of what happened."

Waight's death last year brought issues of nightclub employees' use of unnecessary force to restrain patrons.

Beach Bumz bouncer Andy Maisonneuve said Checkers employees use excessive force with Waight.

"I believe that, sure, they should have restrained him (Waight) while he was inside," Maisonneuve said. "But when they (the bouncers) got

Glen Solick, second from left, is surrounded by friends as he remembers his best friend Jose Waight, at a vigil held Friday night. Solick, a sophomore in Aviation Maintenance from Park Forest, participated in the vigil which began at Allen Hall and ended at Detours, formally Checkers, where Jose Waight died a year ago.

Domestic car, truck sales rise

By John McCadd
Business Reporter

National domestic car and truck sales increased 13.7 percent throughout January, and Carbondale automobile dealers say purchases will continue to rise with the arrival of spring.

Sales grew by 1,022,543 units last month, compared to January a year earlier, according to domestic car manufacturers.

Despite cold weather and a recent recession, car dealers say the increase was quite surprising, but it also suggests a forthcoming end to a slow economy.

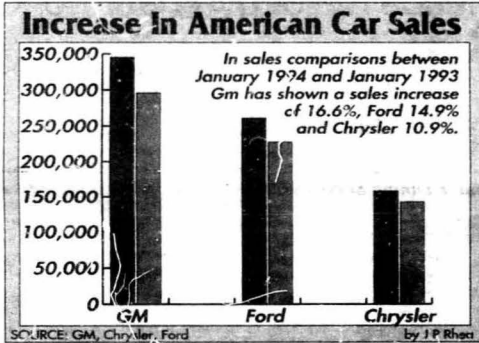

David Stull, sales manager of Jim Pearl Inc. at 1015 E. Walnut, said the recession forced many would-be customers to postpone spending on cars.

He said in January, however, customers began seeking high-priced luxury cars, such as Cadillacs and Oldsmobiles.

Jim Pearl Inc. sells mostly General Motors cars, including Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Cadillac and GMC vehicles, as well as Isuzu autos.

Nationally, General Motors led the domestic market in January, boasting a 16.6-percent increase in sales, according to GM figures.

Stull said the most popular GM models were the GMC Sonoma and Sierra, and the Cadillac Seville Touring Sedan, which helped Jim Pearl's Cadillac sales triple from January, 1993.

Ford Motor Company came in second with a 14.9-percent national increase since last January.

Frank Black, owner of Vogler Ford, at 1170 East Main, said the most popular local models are the new Mustangs, Ranger pick-up trucks, Taurus family sedans and F-series pick-up trucks.

The Taurus remains the top-selling car nationwide, which it has been for the past two years, Ford Motors statistics showed.

Although Ford's sales increased in January, Black said they expected to continue climbing when spring arrives.

Chrysler came in third with a 10.9-percent increase, selling 158,278 units in January.

Chrysler's strongest-selling vehicle, new Ram pickup, registered 14,777 sales nationally, compared with 5,720 in January 1993, according to Chrysler Corp. sales totals.

Realty owners go to court over Pyramid fire victims

By Tre Roberts
Police Reporter

A pending court case may leave Bonnie Owen Realty, Inc., of Carbondale, without much of its original insurance coverage in lawsuits relating to the 1992 Pyramids apartment fire.

Cincinnati Insurance Corp., a company with which Bonnie Owen had two insurance policies, denies the policies' grant coverage in the negligence suits brought against her by families of students who died or were injured in the fire.

To date, only two parties have brought negligence suits against Owen. The first suit was filed in 1992 by two survivors of the fire, Gergana Zlateva and Simona D. Dimitrova, who were seriously injured after they jumped from the building's third floor.

The second suit was filed in December by Masako Shin of Herrin, acting on behalf of the family of Kimiko Ajioka, who died in the fire.

Owen filed a suit last October at the Jackson County Courthouse requesting a declaratory judgment against Cincinnati Insurance. The insurance company also has requested a declaratory judgment stating it is not obligated to cover Owen in the lawsuits.

Attorney John Clemons, legal council for Owen, said a judgment in Owen's favor would require Cincinnati Insurance to pay for any settlements or judgments against her which may be made in the future.

Clemons said a declaratory judgment is sought when two parties have a dispute over the meaning of a contract.

"This is a matter of interpretation," Clemons said. "It is now up to the court to decide whether the insurance contracts cover Owen in this situation."

Attorney Evan Johnston, representing Cincinnati Insurance, said this is not a case of his client attempting to deny coverage to Owen.

Cooking festival celebrates international dishes, people

By Jeff McIntire
International Reporter

International student Sa-ngiam Torut will demonstrate cooking from her home country today so others can eat a real Thai dish without traveling abroad.

Torut is one of many international students and families who will participate in the International Cooking Demonstration, the first program of the 1994 International Festival.

The festival, themed "Building Bridges for a Better World," will begin with the demonstration from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

Torut, a graduate student in curriculum instruction and education from Thailand, said she will make a dish called Kaitom Kha.

The dish will consist of chicken in a soup made of coconut milk, and is served over steamed rice, Torut said.

She said she also might make Thai salad, with carrots, cabbage,

Feminist stereotypes different

Women speak out on discrimination

By Angela Hyland
Minorities Reporter

SIUC student Mara Loeb remembers sitting in her third-grade classroom listening to her teacher tell her to write "he" when a person's gender was unstated.

"I felt cheated already," she said.

Loeb said although she followed her teacher's instructions, she did not accept the idea that women should be secondary to men.

The bumper sticker Loeb currently displays on her car reads "Uppity Women Unite," and it reflects the same desire for equal treatment, she said.

"I get very strange, very interesting responses (to the sticker)," Loeb, a graduate student in speech communication from Carbondale, said. "I get people following me five inches away and flipping me off."

Loeb said the reactions she receives reminds her of the way some African Americans were treated during the civil rights movement.

"During civil rights, uppity blacks were those who didn't know their place," she said.

Loeb said her sticker means the same thing to her — that women who are not willing to accept a lower status in society as "their place" should join to fight for equal treatment.

Michelle Malkin, Feminist Action Coalition member, said negative images toward feminists are the result of stereotypes.

"(Students who believe the stereotype believe) it means you are a lesbian, it means you hate men, it means you are white, it means you are radical, it means you want a matriarchy, with women on top of men," Malkin, a senior in sociology from Buffalo Grove, said.

Although there are individuals within the women's movement who are lesbians and who hate men, that is not what makes one a feminist, Malkin said.

"The only thing that makes you a feminist is that you believe in equality," she said.

Malkin said there is a stigma associated not only with what feminists believe, but also with how they look.

"They think you have short hair or no hair at all — except on your see WOMEN, page 6

Gun buying frenzy ignores legal reality

RECENTLY, SOUTHERN ILLINOIS RESIDENTS have converged on gun shops to purchase firearms believing that the Brady Bill, a new gun control law, will deprive them of the right to bear arms. It will not. The bill will have little impact on gun buyers when it goes into effect on March 1. In many states, including Illinois and California, the bill, which touts a five-day waiting period, is superseded by stricter local gun control laws.

Currently, Illinois law requires gun buyers to have a Firearm Owners Identification card before purchasing a weapon, a process that can take several months. After a call to the Illinois State Police and a one to three-day waiting period, depending on whether the firearm is a rifle or hand gun, a buyer is allowed to take possession of a weapon.

According to local gun retailers, these buyers are becoming less discriminating in their choices and are willing to accept just about anything that shoots. This recent fervor is driven by fears of further gun-control regulations.

WHILE THERE IS A SECOND AMENDMENT AND a National Rifle Association, the rights of the majority of U.S. citizens to own firearms will not be revoked. James Madison's addition of these words to the Bill of Rights, "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to bear arms shall not be infringed," has been interpreted as giving individuals the right to own firearms.

Whether the Brady Bill, the first major gun-control legislation since the 1968 Federal Gun Control Act, signals the beginning of ever-increasing restrictions of those rights remains to be seen. It is true that the U.S. Senate is considering banning certain semi-automatic weapons. Gov. Jim Edgar also has proposed adopting legislation similar to the Senate Crime Bill. The types of weapons these bills are likely to restrict are currently being purchased at record rates.

THIS RECENT ATTEMPT TO CURB THE ownership of the more than 140 million firearms in the hands of Americans comes in response to an increasing crime rate in a society which is growing more violent by the day.

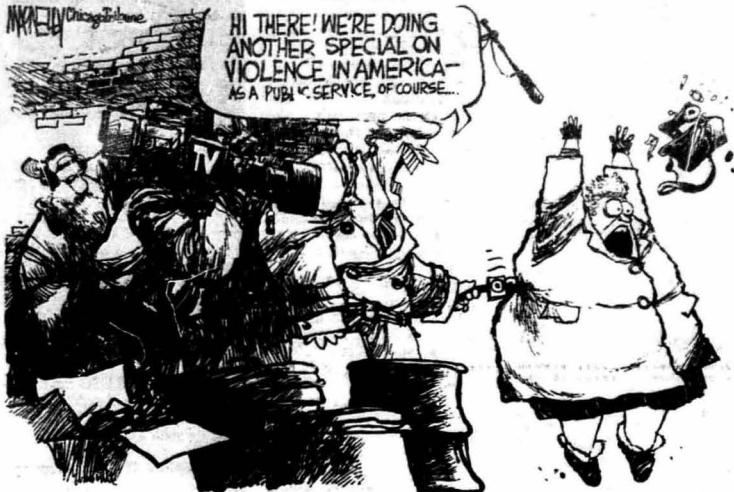

To most Americans, the Brady Bill waiting period is reasonable. It allows the time necessary for a background check and a "cooling off" period for those with spur of the moment gun-buying impulses. However, background checks will not prevent gun-related crimes. Neither Lee Harvey Oswald nor John Hinkley Jr. had criminal pasts.

WHAT DOES THE BRADY BILL DO AND HOW much further should it go towards controlling the weapons boom it has created? The Brady Bill is an acceptable hurdle to gun ownership which sets the stage for the intelligent debate over controlling the sale of certain weapons.

To be sure, modern technology allows weapons to eclipse the three to four round-per-minute firing rate the muzzle loaders of Madison's time could achieve. With one semi-automatic weapon and one 40-round clip just about anyone can become a militia.

In regulating this militia, lawmakers must remember that an overwhelmingly large number of Americans are responsible gun owners, protected by the privilege granted in the Second Amendment.

If society wants to stem gun-related violence, then in addition to more stringent gun-control measures, stiffer penalties for the misuse of firearms should be imposed. Criminals will have access to banned weapons regardless of federal or state laws. The Brady Bill, by itself, will do little to remove weapons from the hands of criminals.

Letters to the Editor

U.S. criminal justice system needs major overhaul work

A two-fold tragedy occurred on Dec. 8, 1993, when a mentally deranged Colin Ferguson mercilessly gunned down 19 people on a New York commuter train. We must all mourn the victims of this senseless crime.

But there's another tragedy here, one that hardly anyone's talking about. What we've seen illustrated in this awful incident are the tragic consequences that result when a city or state so effectively disarms its good citizens that they are left at the mercy of criminals and mentally unbalanced murderers. (New York city has had the strictest gun control laws in the nation for over twenty years.)

Imagine for a moment the frustration, the sheer terror the riders on the train must have felt as they watched innocent people, perhaps friends or family members, being ruthlessly slaughtered while they could only stand helplessly. I would submit to you that even the most committed gun control proponent, Sarah Brady herself, would have given her soul for one of those assault weapons with a mega-round magazine that she is trying so desperately to ban had she been on that train. One individual, legally armed, could have stopped the carnage in a heartbeat. Yes, some may still have died or been injured by this madman, but a mother or father, sister or brother might be at home with their family tonight instead of at the funeral home or a hospital.

Some will say that this idea is ridiculous — that every man be armed. I say to you that to live in a society that disarms its honest citizens while criminals are free to carry weapons is a far more ridiculous concept. We must accept this reality! The police cannot now, nor will they ever be able to, protect us every minute of the day! There are too few of them and too many of us! We must accept responsibility for the safety of ourselves and our loved ones!

Our political leaders are only fooling themselves, whistling in the dark as it were, if they think another 100,000 police on our cities streets or another "politically correct" gun law is going to solve our crime problem. Unfortunately, many Americans will buy into these ideas. But the truth is this, until we get serious about overhauling our broken criminal justice system (it's criminal and there isn't any justice), about TV violence, about our schools abdication of their responsibility to teach ethics to our youngsters, about our deteriorating family structure, about drugs and unemployment, we will continue to experience a crime wave the likes of which has never been.

Until these things are corrected, until America once again becomes the way I and millions of other people remember it from our youth, the honest, peace-loving citizens of this country need to be placed on an equal footing with the criminal. We need a national concealed carry law that would enable every good man or woman without a criminal records or a history of mental illness to legally carry a gun. Several states have enacted such legislation and their experience has proven beyond the shadow of a doubt there is nothing to fear from good people with guns. A government that enact restrictive gun laws that deny good people access to the means with which to defend themselves is acting irresponsibly and immorally. It deserves to be viewed with suspicion.

Abortion protesters retain legal rights under RICO ruling

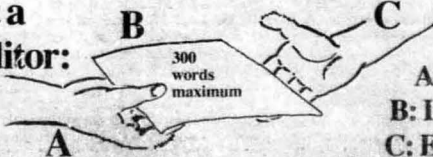

In Stanley Tucker's Feb. 3 letter in the DE, he stated the Supreme Court and our present administration has "outlawed abortion clinic protests." Maybe he should have defined what he meant by "protest." If protest includes any action taken or word spoken in opposition to the LEGALITY of abortion, including (1) the terrorism of health care providers, (2) the murder of health care professionals, (3) the destruction of private and public property, and (4) the actions and support of national anti-abortion groups whose involvement in such activities DOES constitute a violation of the RICO statute, if those actions are included in his definition of "protest," then the Supreme Court and our administration has outlawed abortion clinic protest.

However, I don't think many people include extreme violence and coercion as acceptable forms of social protest, or would even stretch their idea of protest to include the verbal abuse that health care providers and professionals endure for performing duties that our state and federal governments have deemed legal! By applying the RICO statute, the Supreme Court is not silencing protest, but stopping large-scale organized violent attacks funded or supported by anti-abortion groups.

It is obvious the DE is an inadequate forum to table the abortion issue, so instead of further polemic responses like Mr. Tucker's and my own, please don't write another letter. Spend your time finding out as much as possible about this issue and why it cuts our culture so deeply.

Clinton ready to unveil cuts

Newsday

WASHINGTON—President Clinton is giving most Americans exactly what they said they wanted in the budget he will unveil Monday: no new taxes and deep cuts in federal spending.

Clinton officials, seeking to blunt opposition to the cuts and to prove that the president will make the often-discussed "tough choices," last week gave a sneak peek of some of the reductions Clinton will ask for: elimination of 115 federal programs and reductions or freezes in 300 others. These include a 50 percent cut in home-heating assistance for low-income people and a 25 percent cut in operating subsidies for mass transit.

"We had to cut spending on yesterday's outmoded programs so we can bring down the deficit and still invest more in tomorrow's most urgent priorities," Clinton said Saturday in his weekly radio address.

or replacing carpeting, Jones said. Because of deferred maintenance, housing must prioritize what repairs need to be done, such as roofing and revamping the fire alarm systems, Jones said.

"We have to ask, 'Which needs work worse?' and then do it first," he said. Low freshman and overall student enrollment in general is part of the increasing cost of on-campus housing, Jones said. If buildings are not filled up, other students must compensate for the lost revenue.

To remedy the problem, University Housing has tried to increase the number of students who renew their contracts to stay on campus, Jones said.

Graduate and Professional Student Council president Susan Hall said council members expressed interest in having a dormitory for graduate students or an 21 and over dormitory, which could help fill vacancies.

"It's (on-campus residence halls) the only place to get a semester contract plus a meal plan," Hall said.

Another consideration for filling residence halls is to create an atmosphere that is less like a dorm and allows students to feel independent, Hall said.

Jones said he understands the students' financial situation — less financial aid and more increases.

"We recognize that students are angry about the increase and we're trying to be sensitive, but we have to maintain facilities," he said. "We're just trying to make the best out of a bad situation."

There must be a balance between keeping increases to a minimum and keeping facilities in "average or better" condition, Jones said.

Undergraduate Student Government President Mike Spiwak said the increases are conservative enough to get the job finished, without hurting the students financially.

Spiwak said no one likes to see increases, but choices are limited when it comes to maintaining the buildings.

However, he said USG can make sure the money is being put to good use and improvements are being made by getting feedback from the students.

The board will discuss housing increases at its March meeting.

"I really don't think (students) are very concerned," he said. "They're so apathetic right now it's hard to get them to know that there's a vote in the first place — let alone get them involved in the finer points."

SIUC administrators and student representatives have proposed a referendum asking students to approve a $40-a-semester increase in activity fees, to be phased in during the next three years.

Larry Juhlin, SIUC associate vice president for administration, said the increase will more than compensate for the loss of state funding.

Juhlin said enrollment projections for fiscal year 1995 suggest SIUC will take in $37,775 a year for every dollar increase in student fees. He said that figure translates to an annual income of more than $1.5 million from the $40 activity-fee hike.

Susan Hall, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said the recommendation is only a suggestion, not a board requirement.

Board chairman Arthur Quern said the recommendation probably could be changed if SIUC cannot find a feasible solution to the financial burden created by a loss of state money, Hall said.

"(Quern said) that as far as he was concerned that (the funding cut) was merely a recommendation from the board of higher education," she said.

"If the campuses felt that they could not meet that recommendation and they had good reason why they could not, he felt that the board of higher education would be willing to change that recommendation."

But Spiwak said he is concerned that if SIUC goes against the recommendation, the board simply will cut other program funding.

"They (the board) do have control of the budget," he said. "When you're dealing with a $170-million budget, it's easy to pull $100,000 from one department and $100,000 from another and pretty soon — boom — you've got $1.2 million."

After speaking with Quern, Hall said she does not think the state will double-cross universities that cannot afford the athletic funding cut.

Spiwak said although PQP currently is not a budget exercise, he is concerned it could become one because it encompasses many budgetary issues, including program cuts and reallocation of funds.

"I'm afraid that if it isn't a budget exercise now, it soon will be," he said.

"After we've prioritized, they (the board) can look at the budget and say, 'OK, these (programs) aren't the priority ones' and ax them ... you've got to read between the lines. That's the way the game's played — there's no way to verify (it), but you just know what's going to happen."

SIUC President John C. Guyon and Athletic Director Jim Hart could not be reached for comment.

Separatist Muslim leaders, critics seek to end 'firestorm'

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON—After two weeks in the eye of a firestorm over his efforts to build a relationship with the Nation of Islam, Congressional Black Caucus Chairman Kweisi Mfume is trying to put the controversy behind him and seek a truce between the separatist Black Muslim group and its critics.

Speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday, Mfume, D-Md., said that "too much has been said" and that it is now time to start judging Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan by their deeds, not their words.

"It's time to look at ways to bring people together and communities together to develop, for the first time in a very long time, a real effort to respect all people and all religions," he said after the talk show.

"I honestly hope the rhetoric on both sides ceases," Mfume said, "that we have a truce, that we try to find ways to deal with how we got to this point to begin with."

He added that, in light of the fireworks sparked by an anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic, anti-white speech by a Farrakhan aide last November, he hoped that the White House would consider convening a summit on race.

Since the speech by Farrakhan aide Khalid Abdul Muhammad, Mfume has been caught between his attempt to reach out to the Nation of Islam and increasing calls from fellow House members—especially black and Jewish members—to keep the controversial group at a distance.

"My client is not trying to withhold coverage from Owen," Johnson said. "According to the terms of the contract, she does not and never had coverage in negligence suits."

According to the case file, Cincinnati Insurance has requested the court rule it is not obligated to defend Owen, to pay for any judgment that may be entered against her, and that they not have to pay for any accompanying legal fees.

In addition to requests made by Owen and Cincinnati Insurance, cross suits were filed by two attorneys representing victims of the fire.

Attorney Patrick Murphy, representing Masako Shin, said the cross suits for declaratory judgment ask the court to rule Cincinnati Insurance must pay for any judgments made against Owen.

"If Owen's insurance is allowed to drop her, her remaining insurance will be woefully inadequate to cover the damages incurred by those affected by the fire."

Murphy said even if Owen's insurance drops her, she may be covered by insurance under the buildings out-of-state owners him (Waight) outside, he was already restrained — they shouldn't have kept beating him the way they did."

The first hearing for Owen v. Cincinnati Insurance is scheduled at 10 a.m. Feb. 14.

Bill Hall, assistant to the GPSC president, said the vigil forces students and leaders to plan for the future and prevent what happened to Waight from happening to someone else.

"We need to understand why Jose died and what we need to do tomorrow," Hall said. "We (all students) need to know that we can do a better job of taking care of each other."

USG Senator William Chatman said the vigil is just the beginning of major changes to promote student safety that need to take place at SIUC and in Carbondale.

"The passing of Jose Waight was a nucleus for change," Chatman said.

"I think we are all agents for change and we need to start today to make SIUC a safer place to be."

Spiwak said the vigil was effective because it brought students together, but added that it should not take the death of a student to create student unity.

"It's good to see all the different people here (at the vigil)," Spiwak said. "But we need to keep this unity in our day to day life on campus."

shrimp, chicken breast and pork topped with a special Thai dressing.

Last year, Torut made a Thai dessert called Kham Moa Keng, which is like a green bean cake, she said.

Dishes from many countries will be showcased in the demonstration as a way for those who attend to understand other cultures, an international student leader said.

John Abolaji, president of the International Student Council, said the cooking demonstration will be more authentic than the international menu and the buffet offered this week.

"The food will be cooked by people from the countries that have been cooking that kind of food for years," he said.

The International Buffet next weekend and the International Menu offered by the Student Center will be prepared by Student Center Catering, he said.

Spouses of international students will cook most of the dishes, but some students themselves are involved, Abolaji said.

He said five samples of Oriental, Caribbean, Latin American, African and Mediterranean food will also be given at the demonstration.

"Students can appreciate the types of foods people in other countries eat and how it is prepared," he said.

"People can taste authentic food from other countries without having to travel there."

The food people eat, the way it is prepared and the utensils they use are a part of their culture, Abolaji said.

He said if students want to "build bridges for a better world," as the theme of the festival suggests, it is necessary to experience other kinds of food and ways of eating it.

"In some cultures, if you eat their food with them, it's a sign of trust and acceptance — you're 'one of them,'" he said.

Abolaji said he expects a good turnout for this year's demonstration because it was successful in its debut last year.

Torut said she expects more than 10 countries to have food at the demonstration, including well-known countries such as Greece and China.

The turnout was good last year, and no people made complaints about the food, he said.

legs and arms — you've got to have hairy legs and armpits," she said.

Feminists also are perceived as people who wear earthy colors, hold pagan beliefs and do not wear bras, Malkin said.

"They think you're constantly fighting against everything, that you don't fit into society at all, that you look a certain way (because you are a feminist)," Malkin said.

People who think these ideas are true believe a stereotype, Malkin said.

"If you look up the text book definition of feminism, you are going to see equality, you are going to see all those other things," she said.

Even people who believe in the concept of feminism, which the dictionary defines as a person who wants political, economic and social equality for men and women, often do not call themselves feminists, Malkin said.

"I'll hear people say, 'I believe in equality for women... but I am not a feminist,'" she said.

When people say this, it shows they do not understand the term's meaning, Malkin said.

Once you believe in equality, you are a feminist," she said.

Beverly Stitt, coordinator of SIUC's Women's Studies, said she believes the term feminism has become so stigmatized it never will receive wide-spread acceptance and it will never be used in society by its correct definition.

Stitt said she believes it is more important, however, to focus on gaining acceptance for the feminist concept of equality rather than on the term itself.

"If we stay working on the labels... we are going to waste a lot of valuable time," she said.

Throughout history, words which refer to less valued people in society have taken on negative images, Stitt said.

At one time, the term governor and governess were equal, both referring to people who governed, she said. Over time, however, the meaning of the words changed. Although people still associate the term governor with a political leader, governess has come to mean someone who cares for children, Stitt said.

Loeb said she also has noticed this trend.

"Language is stacked against us," she said. "Even when we come up with a new word it doesn't take long for it to become shopworn and damaged."

Loeb said she would like to see the term regain its positive connotations. "The word has been taken away from the movement," she said. "I would like to recover it."

VIENNA—As North Korea's decision to spurn key nuclear inspections marks a one-year anniversary this month, the time for negotiating with the hard-line communist state by most accounts has nearly run out.

Officials in Washington desperately have sought to keep the prospect of a diplomatic solution to the inspection dispute alive, even to the point of seeking private assurances from the International Atomic Energy Agency last December that the

Graduate recital to be held

By Bob Chiarito
Entertainment Reporter

When speaking to pianist Lee Khin Wee, one gets the impression that she is quiet and reserved, but to hear her play one would say she is a master of expression.

Classical music buffs will have a chance to hear selections from classical masters such as Beethoven, Ravel, Griffes and Rameau when Wee gives her graduate piano recital at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Old Baptist Foundation. There is no admission fee.

Wee, who has played many recitals in the past, pre-show jitters still are a problem.

"You just have to do it because the show is going to happen anyway," Wee said. "You have to overcome it."

Wee has studied the piano for 20 years and said she is anxious to display all that she knows.

"I am very excited because I will be graduating once I finish," she said.

Wee has done her graduate work with music professor Sook Ryeon Park.

"Lee Khin Wee is one of the best graduate students in the music department," Park said. "She's very intelligent and plays very extraordinary with powerful technique."

All the hard work finally will pay off for Wee. The graduate recital will be the climax to an excellent college career.

"Lee Khin Wee was a student of mine for three years," SIUC music professor Wilfred Delphin said. "She plays very well and is extremely conscientious."

Wee said she plans to return to her native Singapore and teach music after she graduates.

"She will certainly be a very fine teacher. Her future is hers to determine," Delphin said.

Environmental group rejoins

Public education, coordinating recycling efforts top goals

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

The Citizens Recycling Coalition of Southern Illinois is making a comeback after being inactive for more than a year in an effort to educate the public on environmental issues.

Randy Tindall, former coalition president, said the group fizzled out in late 1992, but a group met before Christmas to get the coalition on its feet again.

An organizational meeting Jan. 26 helped get the ball rolling — board members and officers were nominated and should be voted in before the March 2 meeting, Tindall said.

Tindall said the coalition has several goals this time around.

"We are going to be working on educating the public on how to reduce the amount of waste they generate. In environmental jargon, it's called source reduction," Tindall said. "We need to consider the things we're buying and throwing away — like excess packaging."

"We have been living in a fool's paradise in Southern Illinois because we have had plenty of landfill space until recently," he said. "Our garbage pick up has been relatively inexpensive. Those days are gone."

Other goals include working with environmental groups and SIUC administration, coordinating recycling at the University, supporting local recycling businesses such as Southern Recycling and Carco Recycling and buying recycled products.

The coalition originally began in 1989 when the Solid Waste Committee of the Jackson County League of Women's Voters wanted to get a separate organization started to deal with public education on recycling issues, Tindall said.

The group now is a tax exempt, not-for-profit organization and on its own, he said.

The coalition will send out a newsletter periodically — Tindall said he was not sure how often.

Those interested in receiving the newsletter can write to Citizens Recycling Coalition of Southern Illinois, P.O. Box 6, Carbondale, Illinois 62903 or call Randy Tindall at 549-4380.

Many avoid using justice system

The Washington Post

At least 40 percent of low- and moderate-income households newly confront a legal problem each year, but most do not turn to the court system to solve it, according to an American Bar Association survey released Saturday.

Many say a primary reason they avoid the courts is that they believe the justice system "would not have helped," according to the survey. Some turned to third parties such as accountants or government agencies or handled the problem themselves, but 38 percent of the low-income households did nothing to resolve the problem. The survey did not include criminal problems.

"A serious crisis for a family" often results when the legal problem involves "an apartment without heat that is riddled with rats and roaches, or the refusal of an insurer to pay for desperately needed medical treatment," ABA President R. William Ide said.

The survey found, however, that at least half of low-income families and nearly two-thirds of moderate-income families that did turn to the judicial system were satisfied.

The households were asked about 67 legal problems, including evictions, divorce, real estate transactions and the cutoff of public benefits, as well as problems involving civil liberties, consumer credit, health care and employment.

The survey, the first in 20 years to look at the nation's legal needs, also found that only half of the low-income households knew that free legal services were available, although all the low-income households surveyed would be qualified for such assistance.

Book chronicles first-timers, women speak about virginity

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

Book Review

"Bodice busters," romance novels in which docile virgins fall in love with strapping young men, often give the message that one's first sexual encounter is splendid and fulfilling.

One woman sought to shatter these and other myths by allowing women from across the country to tell their stories about the first time they had sex.

"The First Time: Women Speak Out About Losing Their Virginity," by Karen Bouris, tells these stories from the point of view of 150 different women.

Ranging in age from 13 to 74, the women responded to Bouris' questionnaire with honesty and frankness.

She presents their answers in a simple manner, which reflects each woman's personality.

Stories are divided into chapters which show the uniqueness of each woman's first experience.

They range from those whose first experience was as close to ideal as possible to those who were abused or raped; from those whose first experience was with another woman to those who "saved themselves" until their wedding night.

Many women relate stories about being under the influence of alcohol or other drugs which lead them to experiences they later regretted.

"My friend had a party... and we all proceeded to get horribly drunk. I was 16, weighed about 120, and did 20 shots of rum," she said.

"My next memory is of lying on the floor in the dark, on my back, with this guy rolling over on top of me saying 'Let's have sex again.'"

"To this day I have no recollection of the actual experience," one 25-year-old woman said.

Women also describe feeling pressured into having sex by boyfriends or society.

"I wasn't ready to have sex when I did, but I was afraid to tell my partner for fear of rejection or lack of acceptance. I knew he would be safe and delicate, but neither my body nor my heart was in it," one 24-year-old said.

The most horrifying stories come from women who suffered abuse at the hands of authority figures.

"The term 'losing your virginity' seems like a joke to me, probably because mine was rudely interrupted at age three... it continued until age seven, but I'm not sure if that's when it stopped because my memory has failed me from that point on," one woman in her late 40's said.

Bouris decided to write the book because there were very few books about women's first sexual experiences.

"Studies exist, but little is done on the emotional experience — the circumstances, the significance," she said.

Following these women's stories, sexologist Luanne Cole writes about what lessons can be learned from these shared stories.

"When little or no information is available, too many women resort to soap opera or romance novel sexual depictions," she wrote. "Depending on what she looks at, a woman can have unrealistic expectations of earthshaking rapture (much like winning Wimbledon when you've never picked up a tennis racket.)"

Each story in this collection has a different message, one that every woman can learn from.

"If 'The First Time' opens up a dialogue about sexual initiation, I would feel that it had served its purpose," Bouris said.

"The First Time," published by Conari Press, is available at Waldenbooks for $18.95.

Immigrant felons countries' refusing to take them back

Los Angeles Times

NEW ORLEANS—For a growing number of illegal immigrants convicted of committing crimes in the United States, their native countries have refused to take them back after they have served their time here, leaving them in legal limbo.

In the first U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service operation of its kind, the agency chartered a plane last December to return 74 male and nine female prisoners to Nigeria, a cheaper alternative than flying them commercially.

The detainees were held in jails throughout Louisiana and in Miami. The Nigerian government finally issued travel documents for them. The operation took months to plan.

But when the Royal West 727 landed to refuel in Cape Verde, Nigerian authorities ordered the pilot to fly into the Nigerian capital of Lagos—where the U.S. government refuses to allow American aircraft to land for security reasons—instead of the city of Ibadan, the negotiated destination.

While negotiations between officials in Washington and Lagos continued, the refueling stop stretched past five hours and the prisoners, who were shackled, staged a revolt.

minimal, if any.
Jacobs said it is too soon to tell if the earthquake was part of the New Madrid Fault Zone.

Jay Zimmerman, chairman of the SIUC geology department, said that Southern Illinois has four fault zones that the earthquake could have come from.

Just south of Illinois lies the New Madrid seismic zone, the most active earthquake area in the central United States.

Zimmerman said the New Madrid Fault Zone and its northern extension the Wabash Valley Fault Zone run north and south.

He said the Cottage Grove and Rough Creek Fault Zone run east and west and intersect the north and south zones in the Carbondale-Marion area so it is hard to tell the source.

According to a document prepared by the Illinois State Geological Survey and the Emergency Services and Disaster Agency, in the winter of 1811-12, three major earthquakes struck the area of New Madrid, Mo., along the Mississippi River.

No earthquake centered in Illinois during historic time has been as great. Between December and February, tremors were felt as far away as Washington, D.C.

The document states that during that winter, nearly 2,000 more shocks occurred — all strong enough to be felt up to 200 miles away in Louisville, Ken.

The three strongest earthquakes were rated as "very disastrous" (ranging from 7.4 to 8.1 on the Richter scale).

Both Jacobs and Zimmerman said there is a definite potential for a devastating earthquake measuring 8 on the Richter scale to occur in this area in the future.

Zimmerman said as time passes, the probability of a high magnitude quake in this area increases.

Jacobs said the Richter scale measures the magnitude of an earthquake by the amount of ground motion.

The Richter scale is logarithmic meaning that the magnitude increases ten times with an increase of one whole number.

"An earthquake measuring an 8 on the scale would be 10,000 times the magnitude of one measuring a 4," he said.

Zimmerman said the New Madrid Fault Zone has a 50-percent chance of a major earthquake measuring above a 6 on the Richter scale before the turn of the century.

By contrast, the documented study establishes that earthquakes centered in Illinois have been infrequent, and relatively mild to small shocks causing little or no damage.

Zimmerman said this zone is unlike the San Andreas Fault because it is not a plate boundary but an interplate boundary.

Zimmerman said SIUC has a precision seismograph that showed the quake on a pen recorder.

"The seismograph in the basement of Parkinson Laboratory detected the earthquake, but because there is only one, we are not able to determine the epicenter or magnitude," Zimmerman said. Student can see the pen recorder readout Monday from the seismo-graph on the first floor of Parkinson near the entrance, he said.

Worshippers, guru develop organization

Los Angeles Times

PUNE, India—Twilight is falling. More than 3,000 barefoot, mostly Western and 30-something followers of Osho Rajneesh have padded into a lofty tent christened "Buddha Hall" to again hear the master's words.

The guru's white armchair, complete with a cushion to ease his chronic back pain, is everently borne in and placed on a marble platform. A screen lowers to the amplified twang of a sitar.

Ten feet high, there reappears the wispy-bearded countenance of the iconoclast who once called himself the Baghwan (God), shocked much of the world by owning no fewer than 93 Rolls-Royces and lashed out at organized religion.

"The worshiper is the worshiped, you don't have to worship anyone else," Rajneesh proclaims from the screen. "Existence is irrational. The moment you ask why, you have missed the point."

The outrageously provocative, Zen-inspired thinker—born Mohan Chandra Rajneesh and dubbed the "sex guru" by a scandalized press—seems to be enjoying the last laugh in death.

Nine years ago, with the commune his followers founded in Oregon convulsed by a power struggle, he was arrested on immigration fraud charges in the United States and deported.

On Jan. 19, 1990, at age 58, the man known to his latter-day followers as Osho died here of massive coronary thrombosis, or "left the body," as disciples say.

But thanks to magnetic tape, inspired marketing, and the spiritual hunger and curiosity of thousands of Westerners, the guru lives on—through another power struggle may be on, this time for mastery of his legacy.

Still, the ashram, Osho Commune International, has become, in its own words, "the biggest spiritual health club in the world," doubling in size in three years and attracting more pilgrims and enlightenment- and sun-starved holiday makers than ever.

Skirmish looming for health plan, Congress beginning to pick sides

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—When President Clinton's aides heard the results of the Business Roundtable's vote on Wednesday to endorse the principles of a rival health care plan, the reaction at the White House was disappointment and anger.

The effort to have the Clinton health care plan dominate all rivals from the start had failed.

The endorsement of the principles of the rival health plan offered by Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., by the major executives on the Business Roundtable, combined with past statements about the Clinton plan from other business groups and a mixed response from the National Governors' Association, is only the earliest skirmish in the battle to overhaul health care.

But what it signifies to the White House, Congress and the myriad interests involved is that after a State of the Union address that strengthened his hand, the president saw it weakened in the past week of skirmishing and debate over the competing big themes that define health care reform. Clinton is about where he was when he began the year: watching and sometimes joining in the Washington ritual of political positioning and momentum-building that serves until real legislative work begins.

"If everything had come together as they wanted, it (the Clinton plan) would have been dominant" by now, Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., said at week's end. "But that is not how it turned out. Instead, everything is in flux. It's more open than it was before."

Sen. Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., one of the strongest supporters of the Clinton plan, conceded, as many in the administration did last week, that the efforts by Cooper to bolster his alternative plan—what he calls Clinton Lite—were successful. But Daschle echoed virtually everyone involved in the issue in saying that Washington and the nation are just beginning a debate that will go on for months.

Since Congress returned from recess Jan. 25, the days have "been like the opening moves of a chess game," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, a supporter of the Clinton plan. "People are trying to position themselves to get a reaction from the public so you can tell if you're moving in the right direction ...

while not getting so far out you can't change direction if you need to."

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., sponsor of the Cooper plan in the Senate, said, "This is jockeying, this is the first part of sausage-making." Legislators, he said, "are trying to find out if they can do what they want without compromising. And they can't."

Thomas Mann of the Brookings Institution said last week that the mobilization of campaign techniques by critics and supporters of Clinton's plan has caused the White House and Congress to engage in public skirmishing much earlier than normal in the legislative process.

U.S. hockey team set to go

The Baltimore Sun

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The post-game celebration became part of a movie and history.

U.S. players tossed their sticks in the air, as chants of "U-S-A, U-S-A" reached a deafening crescendo. Captain Mikeruzione collapsed in tears. Goalie Jim Craig, wrapped in a U.S. flag, looked into the crowd and asked, "Where's my father?"

Tim Taylor remembers America's "Miracle on Ice" in the 1980 Winter Olympics.

He still feels the pressure. He wants his own magic moment.

"Down the line, it's probably going to happen that we have all NHL stars," said Taylor, the coach of the U.S. 1994 Winter Olympic hockey team. "Philosophically and romantically, I believe in the traditional Olympic ideal. I feel a player has to make a sacrifice to be an Olympian, especially in a team sport. These kids have been bleeding together, crying together, laughing together."

"These kids were 10 or 11 years old when the 1980 miracle happened. They were all affected by it. We talk about it all the time," he said. "Personally, I think it's time we had a new miracle."

This will be the United States' last chance, one more college try. The players, several of them National Hockey League rookies, come from the university hockey havens—Maine, Harvard, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The average age is 22.

They have a charismatic coach, an excellent goalie and veteran defenseman Peter Laviolette, who knows every good back-road diner on the minor-league circuit.

Great stuff for a sequel?

"The beauty of what we're trying to do here is have six months to take some young hockey players as far as they can go, and this sort of romantic image is one thing we use to motivate our players," said Taylor.

Added Laviolette, the U.S. team captain, "I think we've got the players, the system, the weapons and, no doubt, we have a great coach."

Taylor, 51, has coached the national team for five years, and was an assistant on the 1984 Olympic team. He has spent the past 17 years coaching at Yale, where he could be one of the university's professors.

Taylor was an English major at Harvard, with modern literature his specialty. He comes from a wealthy newspaper family; at one time, his father was president of the Boston Globe. He has a thin, neat gray hair and a scowl that can be intimidating, especially to 22-year-olds.

"He's an extremely intense individual," Laviolette said of Taylor, who was one of two final cuts for the 1964 Olympic team. "If it were up to him, we'd practice 10 hours every day. But he's not a ranter or a raver. He doesn't come into the locker room and lose it and start throwing chairs around. He believes the best way to correct something is to fix it."

Taylor is a teacher. "He knows every system in the world, and he makes adjustments very well," said U.S. goalie Mike Dunham. "He can call a timeout early and change his entire game plan in 30 seconds. He seems to have this knack for developing players, and I think everybody has responded well."

Taylor also seems to have learned from his experience. Soon after he was named head coach, he met with Dave Peterson, the Olympic coach in 1988 and 1992.

Oakley, Payton left out of contest

The Hartford Courant

A number of fouls were called last week when the reserves for the All-Star Game, which is next Sunday in Minneapolis, were announced.

A handful of players must have been disappointed, but none more than Seattle SuperSonics guard Gary Payton and New York Knicks forward Charles Oakley.

It was good to see Atlanta Hawks guard Mookie Blaylock make the Eastern Conference team, despite his 40 percent shooting and 13.9-point scoring average. Coaches—who choose the reserves after the fans pick the starters—recognized that Blaylock has been integral to the Hawks' stunning turnaround. That Blaylock is third in the league in assists also helped.

Payton and Oakley are in a position similar to Blaylock's. Each has been a major—and we're talking major—factor in putting their teams on a 60-victory pace.

Although each ranks highly in pertinent statistical categories, it is their value in other ways that merits All-Star status.

"It's disappointing," Sonics Coach George Karl said. "I'm bringing Houston into this, too. The two teams who have been snowballing this year don't have the (All-Star) recognition they deserve. Guys like Vernon Maxwell, Otis Thorpe, Jary Payton, Detlef Schrempf. ... They're having terrific seasons and they've all been snubbed. I'm offended, so I'm sure the players are, too."

"I wish Oak was going (to Minneapolis)," Knicks center Patrick Ewing said. "He's been an All-Star for us all season."

Oakley has continued to average more than 12 points and 12 rebounds. He has entrenched himself among the league's top five rebounders. He does every job Coach Pat Riley asks. Outside of Ewing, Oakley has been the one player Riley has been able to count on every night.

Publicly, Oakley, 30, professed no disappointment over missing out on the All-Star team.

MIA were Chris Lowery (two of 10 from the field), Chris Carr (two of 10 from the field) and Mirko Pavlovic (three of nine from the field).

Saturday's game marked the first time this season the Salukis only had two starters reach double figures.

The Dawgs will try to get back on track against Indiana State Wednesday night. The action at the SIUC Arena tips-off at 7:05.

Around the MVC:

Bradley rallied from a 32-19 first-half deficit to beat Tulsa 69-64. Deon Jackson scored 18 points for the Braves as they swept the season series with the Hurricane.

Northern Iowa bounced back from a weak effort against SIUC to beat Illinois State 82-79. Randy Blocker had 26 and Cam Johnson 23 as the Panthers stole the game with some late free-throws.

Drake snapped a four-game losing streak and extended Indiana State's losing streak to six with a 74-70 win.

Clayton Allen led all scorers with 21 points to help the Bulldogs overcome the hot-shooting Sycamores (56 percent).

Center Nate King scored 18 points and snagged eight rebounds

Skater goes for more gold medals, plans to join U.S. women with four

The Baltimore Sun

MILWAUKEE—So here are the Winter Olympics, and here is its quest.

Watch her closely, when she hurtles through the turns, keeping low, body level, left foot slicing straight ahead on the rock-hard ice. Watch her glide on the straightaways.

Watch her fend off the pressure of being the favorite to win the 500- and 1,000-meter races. Those would earn her fourth and fifth Olympic gold medals, surpassing swimmer Janet Evans, diver Pat McCormick and sprinter Evelyn Ashford, who are the only American women with four.

History again waits for Bonnie Blair.

"Her chances of winning two events are excellent, her chances of winning one are great," said U.S. Olympic speed skater Chantal Bailey, who will compete in the 5,000 meters. "We're not talking about another speed skater; we're talking about Bonnie Blair."

The Bonnie Blair. Winner of the women's 500- and 1,000-meter speed skating events in the 1992 Albertville Games. Winner of the gold in the 500- and a bronze in the 1,000-meter races in the 1988 Games in Calgary. The only woman to win the 500 in consecutive Olympics. Recipient of the 1992 Sullivan Award, presented annually to the nation's top amateur athlete by the Amateur Athletic Association.

America may be sending its best team ever to face Winter Games, but it's Blair, 29, who is the star attraction. Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding will draw the headlines, but the Olympics are bigger than that. They're about competition, spirit and medals.

And athletes such as Bonnie Blair.

"Neither age nor time has slowed her down," said Bailey. "In some areas of Europe, she could rate as high as Michael Jordan."

In Milwaukee or her native Champaign, Ill., a quick trip by Blair to the grocery store can become an unplanned autograph session. Blair spent the first four months after the 1992 Games keeping a hectic pace with speaking engagements, autograph sessions and commercial work.

She represents half a dozen companies, including McDonald's and Oakley sunglasses.

But once the two-year Olympic cycle was established, Blair decided to go for more gold.

"At the time, I looked at athletes like Jimmy Connors and Carl Lewis, who were at the top of their sports and still loved what they were doing," Blair said. "I'm the same. I really don't have anything to gain. I've received gold medals, and that's the top. But I love the sport and the people in it, and the training isn't so bad."

"I've probably struggled more with that this year than anything else," Blair said. "Put everything aside, go to the rink, come back, eat lunch, lay on the couch, go back to the rink again or do whatever your next workout is, come back home, eat dinner, watch TV, go to bed."

Nick Thometz, Blair's coach, said: "She's been doing the same thing for so long that motivation can be a problem."

But that's what separates Blair from other speed skaters. She has the ability to focus on what is directly in front of her without being distracted by what lies ahead.

Look back at the U.S. Olympic trials last month. Blair v easily the best of a mediocre in the 500, 1,000 and 1,500, she pushed herself to track records in eight of her nine races.

Family torn by sons' Olympic dreams

Newsday

Having a son on the Olympic team ought to be positively exhilarating for any family. And it is, if the Ferraros of Sound Beach, N.Y. And it isn't. Having another son cut from the squad was like feeling a dagger dice the excitement in half, a close family friend said.

It is a best of times/worst of times week for the parents, siblings and the twin hockey players — Peter, who is one of the top scorers for Team USA, and Chris, who was cut from the preliminary roster after a game on his native Long Island Saturday.

"This has cut through the whole family. They're a big family and a close family," the friend said.

The 21-year-old forward — tied with his brother and Todd Marchant for the team lead with 34 assists — is expected to accompany the squad to Norway. He still could make the final roster — due Feb. 22 — if he is injured or plays his way off the team. The brothers have been teammates since they took up hockey at 6

Dawgs lose in rematch with Missouri State, 66-64

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

The scenario was the same and so was the result. In a game that mirrored last year's match-up, Southwest Missouri State handed the Dawgs a 66-64 loss on Saturday afternoon.

The loss to the Bears (9-9, 4-6) kept the Salukis (14-5, 9-3) from moving into sole possession of first-place in the Missouri Valley Conference, because Tulsa had lost to Bradley early in the day.

The Salukis must not have heard the cliché about history repeating itself, as Saturday's loss was a lesson in recent history.

Last year, SMS was near the bottom of the MVC when they dumped first-place SIUC 68-55.

This year SMS was second-to-last in the conference coming into the game.

The Salukis were the Valley's best-shooting team last year, but shot a season-low 30 percent from the field. The Dawgs were the league's best-shooting team again this year, but managed a miserable 34 percent effort in the loss.

Add those stats to the fact that the Salukis are now 0-4 in the Hammons Center in MVC play, and the Bears are 28-5 in the month of February this decade.

SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said his troops were unprepared.

"We probably weren't mentally ready to play," Herrin said. "We gave ourselves an opportunity to win it, but it was too late."

The Dawgs were down big early, as Johnny Murdock fired away from three-point range to stake the Bears, 16-6. The Salukis failed to chip away at the lead and still trailed by 10 (38-28) at halftime.

Even though Murdock came through with a 22-point effort for the Bears, it was center Clint

Thomas who most effectively hurt the Dawgs. Thomas shot seven of nine from the field and four of five from the line to score 18 points. Thomas also had a game-high 14 rebounds, including 10 offensive (five tip-ins), to help the Bears keep the Salukis off the boards.

Freshman forward Shawn Latimer also rose to the occasion by scoring 10 points and grabbing eight boards.

Still, the Salukis would not quit. Down 61-50 with just over two minutes to play, the Dawgs took advantage of some SMS missed free-throws to crawl back into the game.

SIUC finally had a chance when Murdock missed a pair of free-throws with 1.7 seconds left. The Dawgs quickly worked the ball near mid-court, where Ian Stewart's heave caught the backboard and rim before bouncing off.

Paul Lusk and Marcus Timmons were the only SIUC starters to show up offensively. Lusk had 20 points and Timmons 15. Stewart came off the bench to score nine.

Salukis aim to break losing streak against Birds

Coach tries to get team back on track in fight for victories

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

There's an old saying that 'bad things happen in threes.'

The Saluki women's basketball team is hoping the saying holds true after their last three performances.

SIUC (10-7, 4-3) has been throttled by Southwest Missouri State, Wichita State and Vanderbilt by an average of 39 points in their last three contests.

Illinois State (7-10, 2-5) will visit the Arena tonight as Saluki head coach Cindy Scott tries to get her team back on track to make a run at the Missouri Valley Conference crown.

Currently, the Saluki women are in third place in the MVC, behind Creighton (8-0) and SMSU (7-1). Indiana State and WSU are both 4-4 and a game behind SIUC.

The Redbirds are led by 6-foot-2 senior Lisa Abry, who averages a team-high 11 points per game. Her front-court mates, forwards Melody Ward and Sherri McNamara, combine for a 17-point, 10-rebound average.

Michele Vickery runs the Redbird offense from the point guard position, averaging five points and three rebounds. Junior Amy Brauman rounds off the ISU starting five with a five-point, four-boards per game total.

SIUC will once again be without the services of forward Rocky Ransom, who suffered a knee strain in the first half of the SMSU game on Jan. 27. Ransom was averaging over 22 points and ten rebounds in MVC play before the injury.

Christel Jefferson has stepped in to fill Rocky's spot in the starting line-up, averaging nearly eight points and six rebounds.

Nikki Gilmore is now the Salukis' leading scorer at 14 points a game, while forward Angenette Sumrall is one of the Valley's leading rebounders at nearly eight boards per contest.

ISU is one of the few schools that hold a series advantage over the Salukis.

In their 58 match-ups since 1962, the Redbirds have a 32-26 lead, but have lost the last seven meetings with SIUC.

If the Saluki women pull off their eighth straight triumph over ISU tonight, it would mark the most consecutive losses in a series for any Redbird team in history.

Following the ISU showdown, the Saluki women will travel to Creighton for a rematch with the Lady Bluejays.

Tipoff tonight is slated for 7:05.
