Area elite attend Brandt reception

By Joanne Reuter
Daily Egyptian Associate Editor

Faculty and staff attending President Warren W. Brandt's first formal reception at the Student Center Friday night did justice to allegations that SIU is a party school.

About 1,000 persons had arrived by 8:30. The reception was scheduled for 7 to 10 p.m. in Student Center Ballrooms. A crowd of more than 1,500 was expected to attend, and Mary Backus of Student Center Banquet Catering Service who organized the affair said the party would probably continue past 10 p.m.

Board of Trustees members and their wives took turns introducing the President and his wife to the receiving line. The line, during the evening, extended from the ballrooms, down the stairs to the Student Center's front door.

Brandt chatted with new acquaintances, seemingly enjoying the opportunity to meet members of the university community.

Taking time out between introductions, Brandt commented "It's a real treat."

At the evening's start, Board of Trustees Chairman Ivan Elliott and his wife accompanied the Brandts in the reception line. Also helping with introductions, was Matthew Rich, student Board of Trustee member, and Libby Moore represented her husband Willis Moore, professor emeritus, who was absent due to illness.

Later in the evening, Board Members Don Norwood and Margaret Blackshere took Elliott's and Moore's place.

In the ballrooms, couples danced to the music of John Birchler's Orchestra. Birchler is State Representative Vincent Birchler's son and an SIU alumnus. The band of three saxophones, trumpet, electric guitar, drums and piano was prepared to play any kind of music the dancers wanted, Birchler said.

Other SIU officials attending the reception included T. Richard Mager, vice president for development and services; Hiram H. Lesar, Dean of the Law School; J. Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs and Chief of Board Staff James M. Brown.

Student Body Vice President Robert Seely also attended. Only about ten students were at the reception.

Citizen's assistance office opened

By Jerie Jayne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Citizens with state government problems can now seek help in solving them by contacting the newly opened Carbondale outpost of the Governor's Action Office, a regional office in Marion designed to help "cut red tape."

The outpost station, opened in early December at St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church, 303 S. Poplar, is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every Tuesday.

Bailey Williams, assistant director of the Governor's Office of Southern Illinois, said the office is donated space and will not have a phone for incoming calls. The governor's office representative will have access to a phone for outgoing calls on a limited basis.

Williams said the Carbondale office was established to make the service more accessible to the people.

"Documents may have to be looked at or some people may prefer to talk face to face," he said.

"If persons have a problem with something other than state government, we try to trace down a solution. We can offer resources for many kinds of problems, except universities. The governor feels they belong to the Board of Trustees," Williams said.

The office is one of 20 outposts established as a branch of the regional governor's office in Marion. The service is offered in a 32-county area in Southern Illinois.

Williams said if someone comes with a specific question, the office will either get the answer or tell them where to get it, perhaps saving persons from making needless long distance phone calls to Springfield.

Thus far, the Carbondale office has handled between one to 10 cases each week, said Williams. Jackson County averages 75 per month. The 32-county area solves about 700 cases a month, he said.

The governor's regional office in Marion opened in May 1973. Since that time, the office's caseload has steadily increased, said Williams.

"Between December 1973 and 1974 we had a 193 per cent increase in our caseload," he said.

During January, he said, the governor's office is expected to solve its 10,000th case since its opening.

Williams said Southern Illinois is more organized than the rest of the state.

"We have six regulatory planning and community development agencies, four agencies on aging, four community action agencies and a comprehensive health planning organization. We work with these agencies to help solve problems," Williams said.

"We're here to serve the people, regardless of political affiliation," he added.

In light of court ruling

CCHS to retain suspension policy

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The provisions of Wednesday's U.S. Supreme Court decision regarding due process for suspended high school students won't change the procedure at Carbondale Community High School (CCHS).

The court, in a 5-4 decision, said students suspended are entitled to a hearing to defend themselves before they are suspended from school.

Arthur Black, principal of CCHS, said Friday students are told beforehand they are in danger of suspension, and a conference is requested by the school with the students, parents, and school officials.

About the decision, Black said he would "rather see practitioners working together" to decide procedures for suspending students. He said while the Supreme Court justices may have had contact with those who work in schools before the decision, they don't understand the situation in which the school officials are placed.

"The voting itself indicates a non-agreement among the justices," Black said. He said while he agrees students "should be assured they're not being mistreated" the atmosphere has to be "conducive to a good educational setting."

Black said he dislikes the term hearing, saying he prefers to say the parents are involved. "The most effective discipline is a cooperative effort between the parents, students and us."

"The school isn't an island to itself," Black explained. "As a group we have to work together." He said the community tends to be crisis oriented when it comes to suggesting alternative methods of handling various school situations.

At CCHS, the trend has been to go from suspensions to detention and conferences in handling students with behavior problems. Detention consists of keeping the student after school in a location where they "come in and be quiet," Black said.

"It disrupts their day of social activities and it is more meaningful at this age," Black said, adding that it gives the student an opportunity to do some constructive work. He said during the one-hour period the students are required to do some sort of studying.

Black said the detention room population ranges from "three or four" to "as many as 15" of the more than 1,000 students attending CCHS.

"We've been blessed with a darn good group of young people here," Black said, adding that he feels good about the student body and its conduct.

As a result of the utilization of detention and individual conferences with students in his office, Black said the need for students to be suspended has decreased. He also credited members of the community who are becoming more involved in the day-to-day affairs of the school and who are offering suggestions to the school as a major factor in being able to work out problems.

Black cited persistent tardiness and unacceptable conduct as the major reasons for students being suspended.

Brandt voices junior college support

SIU-C President Warren W. Brandt voiced firm support for junior-senior college cooperation and the concept of lay leadership in higher education at a guest appearance before area community trustees and presidents.

Speaking to the Southeastern Regional Community College Trustees Association at Marion Thursday, Brandt said "I have become enamored of the concept of lay boards and consider it a very important aspect of higher education. We wouldn't be anywhere near as well off if we didn't have it."

The organization represents locally-elected trustees of four downstate community colleges—Rend Lake (Ina), John A. Logan (Carterville), Shawnee (Ullin) and Southeastern (Harrisburg).

Brandt described the relationship of SIU-C and other senior schools to community colleges as both complementary and competitive.

"We both offer the first two years of instruction, but you offer something special—a close, warm atmosphere that is particularly important for certain students. You perhaps get some students that wouldn't thrive in our more impersonal environment."

Brandt said some of SIU-C's most effective areas of cooperation with community colleges are those concerned with faculty development, cultural and entertainment attractions and two-year, high-cost technical programs.

"A good many faculty members are looking for jobs. The good, motivated teacher is still hard to find. We can work together to develop those teachers. We can complement each other's cultural offerings and we can share and benefit in certain technical programs that carry high equipment costs.

"We may always regard each other with a certain amount of wariness, but competition is healthy," Brandt said. "We all hope that the level of cooperation is such that the level of wariness becomes inconsequential."

Brandt offered some informal reflections on mid-70's trends in higher education:

Enrollments—"Things seem to be settling down, but there's no doubt that enrollments are calling the tune at colleges now. Births are fading off and the numbers of children going through schools will be declining. Some 'wild' phenomena have contributed to college enrollment decline—fewer males, for instance. But we're approaching a 'steady state' condition and that means a whole new ball game for internal operation of colleges and universities. These are facts of life that we must live with."

Students—"They seem to be more studious now than in the 60's and early 70's. Calls to do away with grading and evaluation are dying down." Brandt said there are some tendencies to award high grades as a way of keeping students in school—thus maintaining enrollments and funds based on enrollment levels. "It is strictly antithetical to the principle of grading on merit and attainment. It is a difficult, awkward situation."

Tenure—"I feel it's a good thing and can be highly beneficial to an institution. But it also requires an effective process for removing the person who is hurting the students, not helping them. That's the position of the AAUP (American Association of University Professors), but sometimes it isn't effective."

Brandt praised community colleges for reaching "large numbers of people that four-year institutions have not always been able to reach," and cited adult and continuing education enrollments.

News Roundup

Oil powers denounce West's policies

ALGIERS (AP)—Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika opened a special meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on Friday with a stinging denunciation of Western economic policies that he said were "raising the danger of a world catastrophe." But he added that "we have not abandoned hope for cooperation with the developed countries."

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said his government too was "strongly opposed to any confrontation" with the oil consuming nations. He said in an interview he expected the meeting to set the basis for "a solid and healthy type of cooperation" between producers and consumers, adding that "a confrontation is not in anyone's interest."

The four-day ministerial meeting was called to plan an oil summit and set the stage for a proposed dialogue between oil producers and consumers.

High oil prices here for awhile

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Ford Administration has given up hope of obtaining any significant reduction in world oil prices for several years at least, administration officials said Friday.

As a result, the high oil prices Americans have been paying since last year likely will become near-permanent, including the new price increases, proposed by President Ford.

An economic impact report Friday by the Library of Congress estimated that Ford's energy program, unless blocked by Congress, will increase energy costs by $50 billion in this year, much higher than the President's estimate of $30 billion.

Auto sales slump taking toll

DETROIT (AP)—More than a third of the nation's auto workers will be on layoff next week as the car manufacturers reshuffle production schedules because of falling sales.

Nearly 248,000 of the industry's 687,000 hourly employees will be off the job starting Monday, an increase of 20,000 from this week. Some 185,000 are on open-ended furlough.

Recently offered cash rebates on some new models helped push mid-January car sales over the low early-January levels. But deliveries in the latest 10-day period were down 15 per cent from the year before to their slowest pace in 14 years.

Walker workers on DOT payroll

CHICAGO (AP)—More than 50 persons are on Illinois Department of Transportation payrolls who do little or no work for the department and some of them work for the office of the governor, the Better Government Association said Friday.

J. Terrence Brunner, executive director of the watchdog group, said that DOT funds are paying for a speech writer for Gov. Daniel Walker, Illinois' new movie-making promoter, a state office in Washington D.C., advance men, and secretaries in the governor's Chicago office.

"The governor and his budget advisers would ask us to believe that no additional dollars can be wrung out of the budget for road purposes," said Brunner. "But hundreds of thousands of dollars already appropriated are being used in ways that the public might find amazing."

Fighting heavy near Saigon

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP)—North Vietnamese antiaircraft gunners drove back South Vietnamese helicopters trying to land reinforcements Friday on a strategic 3,300-foot mountain base controlling the northeastern approaches to the provincial capital of Tay Ninh City, 55 miles northeast of Saigon.

Associated Press photographer

Huynh Cong Ut reported from the scene that South Vietnamese jet bombers tried to soften up the North Vietnamese positions prior to the attempted helicopter assault on Nui Ba Den Mountain, but the choppers carrying the reinforcements were still unable to get through. There were no reports of any South Vietnamese aircraft being shot down.

Second Senator Goldwater?

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., says he may seek the Senate seat of John Tunney, a Democrat expected to run for a second term in 1976.

"It is something I'm seriously looking at," said the son of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

Robert Finch, a former Nixon Cabinet member and ex-California lieutenant governor, already has announced for the Republican nomination.

"Tunney will be a hard candidate to beat," Goldwater said Thursday night. "But I think he is vulnerable if we can get a good candidate."

"I'm not gearing up a staff. It's too early to make this kind of a decision."

The younger Goldwater represents the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles.

Court's school ruling won't affect CCHS

He said a student who becomes involved in a fight is automatically suspended.

Saying there's no such thing as a typical case, Black explained that when a student is suspended, a call is made to the parents to arrange a conference. "The main thing is to establish an immediate communication with the home situation."

Black could not estimate the number of students per year who are suspended from CCHS. He also would not say how CCHS compares to the results of a survey presented to the Supreme Court that showed 10 per cent of junior and senior high school students in a five-state area were suspended one or more times in the 1972-73 school year.

Black said many of the CCHS suspensions are repeats, and said some students just have a bad day, and are suspended only once during their high school years. Evaluations are made of the suspensions at different times during the year, Black said, and through these studies recommendations and changes are made in the manner in which the suspensions are handled. He added that he is "open to suggestions" from members of the community and from students on alternative methods of dealing with students who would otherwise be suspended.

Until then, Black said lack of adequate personnel in the form of counselors who can work with more individuals force the school to rely on detention, conferences, and, ultimately, suspension.

Monday deadline for registration

Fifty persons have registered to vote at the Student Center solicitation area, John Hardt, executive assistant to the student body president, said Friday.

Students wishing to register in time for the city primary Feb. 25, can do so from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday in the Student Center.

Persons registering must be 18, have lived in the precinct for 30 days, and not be registered to vote anywhere else.

Carbondale to receive rail funds

By Mary Whitler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale was named as one of several cities to receive funding to develop a railroad relocation pilot project, Mayor Neal Eckert said.

The project is designed to improve east-west traffic flow over the railroad tracks.

Eckert, chairing the first meeting of the Railroad Relocation Steering Committee, January 22, said the committee will seek public input on the project during the Feb. 10 city council meeting. Ninety-five per cent of the project will be federally funded through the 1973 Highway Act, said Bill R. Boyd, director of public works. He said the city will pay for the remaining five per cent, and that the railroads will incur no cost.

Seven plans for the relocation of the railroad have been developed by engineering consultants, Clark, Dietz, and Associates. The engineering firm recommended that the committee place prime emphasis on the plan to depress the railroad through town from approximately the SIU power plant on the south and the "Southern Illinoisian office on the north.

If the tracks are depressed it will be done in three phases. The first, consists of preliminary engineering and environmental impact statements. It is to be completed in July of 1976.

The second phase, to be completed in 1978, will consist of final engineering plans and specifications being made.

The final stage, to be completed in three years, is the actual construction. A temporary set of tracks will be laid to accommodate the trains during the construction period.

The new tracks will be laid in a trench below street surface. Bridges will then be constructed over the trains at the same grade level as the road. At least four crossings are planned. They are at: The Pleasant Hill Road, Mills Street, Walnut Street, and Main Street, according to Clark, Dietz, and Associates.

Committee member Cleveland Matthews of the Jackson County Board said he "would like to speak strongly" for some type of crossing on the north side of town. A crossing at either Willow or Rigdon-Fisher Streets would be acceptable to Matthews.

Other alternatives under consideration include: doing nothing, locating the road crossings under the railroad, vertically and horizontally relocating the tracks, and having the railroad tracks bypass Carbondale to the west or east.

Also under consideration in conjunction with all the proposals is relocation of the passenger station to a place south of the present site.

Committee members include representatives from the Carbondale, Amtrak, Illinois Central Gulf, the Department of Transportation, the County Board, the Greater Egypt Regional Planning & Development Commission and SIU.

Communicable disease prevention program in full swing in schools

By Ken Temkin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A communicable disease prevention program, which started Wednesday at all Carbondale elementary schools, is in full swing. Patsy Gilchrist, school nurse for the Carbondale Elementary School District, said Friday.

"We've completed two of the eight schools as of today and we've gotten a good response from all parents," she said.

Gilchrist explained that the immunization program is sponsored by the Jackson County Public Health Department (JCPHD), and is being offered free of charge to all school age children.

She said that medical records at the various schools are being studied to determine which students need the immunizations.

"When we discover a child's vaccination record to be deficient, we go through the JCPHD records to try and complete our records," Gilchrist said. "Letters are also being mailed to parents so that we can better determine the children's needs."

Parents are required to sign releases before their children can be vaccinated, and "once the parents are made aware that their children need vaccination, they are very cooperative," she said.

John Amadio, public health administrator for the JCPHD, said Friday that last year his department immunized 9,069 persons in Jackson County, 4,775 of which were vaccinated at school immunization programs.

"We have been able to attain a 70 to 80 per cent vaccination level among the elementary school children, but we still need to step up our program," he said.

Amadio recommended that all persons review their past record of vaccinations to make sure that they are protected against contagious diseases.

The JCPHD provides free immunizations for diphtheria, pertussis (Whooping Cough), tetanus, rubella, rubeola (measles) and polio.

The JCPHD maintains a main office at 342-A North St. in Murphysboro with an immunization clinic open from 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesdays and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

The Carbondale Clinic is open from 2 to 6 p.m. on Tuesdays, and is located at 606 1/2 East College St.

1,600 apply for clemency

CHICAGO (AP)—A member of the Presidential Clemency Board said Friday that the number of applications has doubled in the past two weeks thanks to the boards' publicity and clarification campaign about the President's clemency program.

Vernon E. Jordan told newsmen that so far 1,600 men have applied for clemency in the program that ends Jan. 31.

The board has unanimously recommended that this deadline be extended and its members are making a last ditch effort to inform the public about the program.

Jordan said there are two reasons why only 1,600 of the 100,000 men eligible for clemency under this program have applied:—"It's a problem of basic information, a problem of communication," Jordan said. He said he believes that many men simply do not know they are eligible for the program and that many who do have information, don't have the complete story.

"—There is a lack of confidence on the part of the men that they would be justly treated," Jordan said. But after 20 of the 65 cases reviewed by the board were given an outright pardon, Jordan said he concluded, "There is some evidence that the process is reasonably fair and equitable."

Merchants hoping for sales boost

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Three University Mall merchants said Friday that although after-Christmas sales were slow this year, they are hopeful that business will pick up with SIU students returning to classes.

Larry Conway, manager of the Record Bar, said his shop was "very busy" during the Christmas season, but that purchases have decreased since.

"There has been a lot of slack because of the money situation," Conway said. "Money is just real tight right now."

He said that between 60 and 75 per cent of his record store's business comes from students and that sales have improved "considerably" since students have returned from break.

Eloise Koch, a salesclerk in The Fly, a pants and jeans store, agreed with Conway.

"Christmas was real busy. Stores do about 40 per cent of their yearly business during the holiday season," she noted.

"After Christmas it's just dead because everybody spent all their money," Koch said. Most of the post-Christmas business occurs when persons exchange undesired Christmas gifts, she added.

Koch commented that the mall is doing as predicted and expects business to improve when three additional stores are completed soon.

There are currently 25 stores in the University Mall complex, which opened Oct. 30.

The manager of the J.C. Penney department store, Eldon Ray, said the Christmas rush was "real busy" and that he expects business in the University Mall to get "steadily better."

"The Christmas season proved to be very good, surpassing last year's sales," Ray said.

The reason for the good sales in his store, he said, is because Southern Illinois is not as badly affected by the "national problems," such as unemployment, as urban areas are.

Ray said that traditionally January and February are slow months for retail stores. "This year, for the first three weeks of January," he added, "it was a little more so because of the students being gone."

Because of the adoption of the semester system at SIU this year, students returned to classes three weeks later. When SIU was on the quarter system, winter classes began early in January.

Carbondale offers many other stores, in addition to the Mall, that are "quite good and quite substantial," Ray commented.

60,000 jobs

Gov. Walker has taken an ambitious step forward toward easing the burden of the economic crisis in Illinois with his proposal for a massive public works program which would pump $4.5 billion into the state's faltering economy and create a possible 60,000 new jobs within the next two years. Walker has taken an initiative that, as yet, the federal government, under President Ford's lethargic leadership, has avoided. As the governor said in his message to the legislature, Illinois cannot afford to "stand idly by" and rely on the federal government for economic remedies.

Many of Walker's past actions have been designed merely to enhance his political image. But it is hard to knock a program such as this one, especially since the additional bonding authority the program seeks—Walker already has $2.9 billion approved—will not come from increased taxes, but from general revenue and obligation bonds. Illinois taxpayers will, however, eventually be assessed the interest on $1 billion of the bonding revenue—a total of about $700,000, with the remaining interest to be paid by the bond beneficiaries.

There are many benefits inherent in the Walker plan. With over 265,000 unemployed in the state, 60,000 additional jobs, coming mainly in the severely depressed housing and construction areas, would be a tremendous boost to the state's economy. In addition, most of the capital improvement projects outlined by the governor would need to be undertaken sooner or later. New and improved roads, stepped-up rail and air service and more parks and schools will be permanent advantages, serving the public for years to come. Also, the program's acceleration effect, designed to be controlled as the state of the economic condition fluctuates, is a practical idea, with foresight enough to leave room for adjustments which may later be necessary.

There are, however, some weaknesses in the proposal. Will it insure against out-of-state workers coming in to fill the newly created jobs, a possibility since some of the lowest construction bids could conceivably come from states other than Illinois? The governor is stimulating the depressed housing and construction industries without asking for reciprocal price lowering. Both are infamous for their burdensome regulations which have added greatly to the problems of inflation. We hope he uses his leverage to the benefit of all Illinois consumers.

Lastly, Walker has recently rejected proposals from the legislature for many of the capital improvements he now calls for. But, Illinois citizens should tolerate this opportunism from their ambitious governor in favor of some severely needed economic relief.

The General Assembly should abandon its petty partisanship which has hindered its effectiveness in the past and quickly adopt the governor's proposal.

A better way to buy used books

Students returning to school this semester are immediately confronted with at least one healthy financial expenditure—textbooks.

A few hearty soles still collect their old used texts and hang signs all over campus advertising the sale of once necessary merchandise—now useless collections of words. But most experience little, if any, response, because everyone is waiting in line at Wallace's or 710 or the Student Center.

The fact is that the average textbook's usefulness lasts a semester, and then the unwitting owner falls victim to the "buy-back" people at one of the above establishments.

What is needed is students to get together at textbook buying time. Students who have completed a course rarely keep the required text, and those who need to take it would be more than willing to buy the used book—at a considerable savings.

During textbook time in spring, 1973, a group of students got together and formed a non-profit organization called the Southern Illinois Students Association Textbook Exchange. This organization was run completely by volunteers, and was the perfect solution to the textbook syndrome.

Students brought in their used textbooks and received a receipt. They were instructed that if other students bought the books, a check would be ready for them when they returned. If not, they would get their textbooks back, at absolutely no charge.

The average savings a student utilizing this service enjoyed was 12 per cent. This savings, combined with the joy one experiences by beating the establishment, was reason enough to induce all students to flock to the student-run textbook exchange.

Considering the genius and value of such an idea, what was the overall student response? Failure.

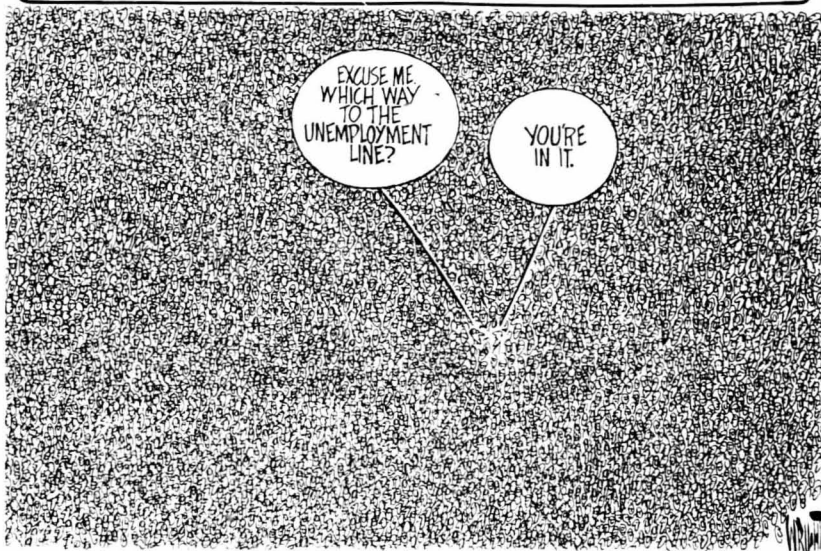

The student-run exchange didn't work because it was not utilized by enough students. Many who had

One man's meat is another's poison

By Gary Delsohn

The music industry is a strange and complex phenomena. Idolizing pubescents, mad for "heavy rock music," have catapulted it into a multi-million dollar business, leaving little room for acceptance of the artist that chooses to stick to his own sound, rather than sell-out to the masses. It doesn't take a genius to figure out that the best music is not always that which sells the most.

Anyone interested in listening to music which comes from the deepest reaches of a musician's soul, instead of the shallow surface of some gigantic company's pocket book, should have been at Kilo's Wednesday or Thursday night to hear the magnificent Luther Allison.

Allison doesn't merely play the guitar, he causes it to moan, evoking his innermost emotions far better than any words could. One sits in awe at the sounds the 35-year-old Arkansas born musician can pull out of his old, beat up guitar. He plays with his audience, tossing it from one high pitched riff to another. A man of constant motion on the stage, Allison has enough energy to supply a small city with light. His albums get rave reviews. His latest, "Luther's Blues," on the Motown label was rated five-star by "Downbeat" magazine, one of the top music publications in the country. Yet, with all the acclaim, Allison's commercial success remains moderate.

Allison admits to being disappointed, mostly because he expected bigger things when he signed with the highly successful Motown several years ago. "Why can't I hear a cut from me on the radio everyday?" Allison wonders, alluding to the success that has made blues artists B.B. King and Muddy Waters household names. The question is hard to answer because Allison has become a big name on the college circuit, playing one-nighters all over the nation.

It is ironic, but it took people like Eric Clapton and Duane Allman, two white blues guitarists, to bring blues up to the level of respectability with the young white music audience.—the ones with all the money. Without Black blues artists there would be no Clapton. There would be no Rolling Stones or Beatles. They were all influenced greatly by the early black artists; Robert Johnson, Blind Lemon Jefferson and other often forgotten names.

Analyzing all of this is like looking into a mirror located in the brightest of rooms. White America needed white musicians to popularize the black man's music. And there can be no mistaking it: if the blacks were not carried here to this country by early white settlers, American music—not to mention American society—would be drastically different. Gospel, blues and jazz all came from the fields, evolving from the workers toiling on the white man's plantations in the hot sun. Everything else came from that.

Maybe people suffer so much already that they don't want to be reminded of it in the music they listen to. It took years of dues paying before B.B. King became a commercial success and even then, his blues had been toned down over the years. He had to go after the white audience.

Allison has paid his dues, as he pays them now, playing to white middle class audiences in an attempt to make it to the top. Hoping he doesn't compromise his blues too much to get there, Allison is one blues guitarist that needs only to be heard to be appreciated.

Due to a confusion in the head of this page's editor, Friday's "Parlor palsey" editorial was erroneously ascribed to Bruce Hackel, one of our staff writers. The editorial was written by Jon Kartman, also a staffer. Sorry, fellas, for the confusion.

enough sense to try the service were disappointed to find the exchange did not have the books they needed. Thus, they had to go to one of the established bookstores to purchase the required texts.

The simple solution to the outrageous cost of textbooks is this. The next time a group of students tries such a project, use it. If everyone on this campus brought their books to a student-run service, it would be a resounding success.

In this way, textbook sales from established bookstores would be limited to new books.

Otherwise, it's back to the old "textbook blues."

Breast self-examination clinic set

By Mary Gardner
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Breast self-examination seminars will be held at Doctor's Memorial Hospital at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., Feb. 8, the Hospital Auxilliary has announced.

Dr. Wilson Scott, radiologist, and Dr. David Rendleman, surgeon, will give instruction on the techniques of self-examination with the help of a "Betsi model," which is a life-like female dummy, said Phyllis Conger, seminar organizer.

After the group instruction, any women wanting private instruction can be taught the techniques by a registered nurse in a private examining room, said Conger.

The seminar will also feature a film on breast cancer, and Scott and Rendleman will answer questions. Literature on self-examination will also be available.

Breast cancer is the leading cause of death in women between the ages of 30 and 35, according to the American Cancer Society.

"Statistics on a five-year survival rate for breast cancer show that 85 to 90 per cent of the patients survive when diagnosis and treatment are achieved at an early stage," Scott said, adding that, "the majority of breast cancers are discovered by the women themselves.

Women who wish to attend the seminar should register by phoning Kathy Orescanin at 549-6161, Al Peterson at 457-5090 or Phyllis Conger at 549-2385. Conger said 40 to 50 women can be instructed at each session.

The seminar is part of a statewide program to teach breast self-examination for cancer. A majority of 300 hospitals in Illinois are taking part in the campaign.

Mobile speech, hearing van slated for dedication Jan. 28

A mobile speech and hearing van will be dedicated Jan. 28 in Marion, the Department of Mental Health has announced.

The van will provide services of speech, language, hearing or hearing-aid evaluations; short term speech, language therapy or aural habilitation; consultation and program development; and education and training of staff of long term care facilities.

The mobile unit will travel through Southern Illinois to nursing homes, shelter care homes, community workshops and day care centers.

The dedication will be at the State Regional Office Building at 1 p.m. The unit will be open for tours.

The unit will be operated by Hearing and Speech Services of Region 5 of the Illinois Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities.

The program is directed by Lee Ann Vicars, coordinator of the Region 5 speech and hearing program.

Developmental Disabilities Services Act grant funds were used to purchase the mobile unit.

Dr. Richard Blanton, deputy director for Developmental Disabilities at the Department will speak during the dedication program.

Arson suspected in blaze at restaurant

Robert Biggs, acting captain of the Carbondale Fire Department, said arson may have been the cause of a fire resulting in an estimated $3,500 to $4,000 damage to the Chick-N-Quik restaurant at 623 E. Main St. in Carbondale Thursday.

The state fire marshal has been called in to investigate the fire at the vacant building, Biggs said.

Two trucks answered the call about 2 p.m. One stayed about 55 minutes, and the other remained until about 3 p.m. to make sure the fire was under control.

The fire appeared to have started in the rear of the building, Biggs said there was little damage on the outside of the building, but there was smoke, water and fire damage on the inside.

Andy Warhol's latest movie lacks beauty, blood and gore

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Judging from the merits of "Andy Warhol's Dracula" the best thing that could happen to director Paul Morrissey and his entourage would be to quit making horror films in Europe and return to the good old United States.

This new film, while continuing to explore new territories uncovered by "Andy Warhol's Frankenstein," provides enough evidence that the bizarreness and stark beauty of his earlier epics like "Flesh," "Trash" and "Heat," has almost disappeared.

Even in terms of blood and gore, elements which Morrissey turned to after leaving the sex and drugs of his American films behind, such scenes are no longer as interesting or as frequent. One would have expected "Dracula" to have been quieter than "Frankenstein," but this is not the case.

Both the funniest and the grossest scene in "Andy Warhol's Dracula" occurs when the count strenuously pukes what seems like a quart of blood into a bath tub. There is not much more of any entertainment value offered than this.

The film ends with Dracula having most of his extremities lopped off with an axe. The blood spurts wildly and realistically, but this is a thrill we grew accustomed to seeing in the Frankenstein film. After the first arm is severed from the count's body, the rest is tiresome repetition.

The latest version of the Dracula story concerns a Rumanian count (Lido Kier) who needs to suck the blood of young virgins to survive. With only a scarce supply of virgins available in Rumania, the Count and a companion (Arno Juerging) travel to Italy, where they believe the influence of Catholicism keeps young women virgins until marriage.

They come upon an Italian aristocratic family with four marriageable daughters, of Raphaelite beauty. Two are virgins and two are not-so-virgin. Unfortunately for the count, he samples and is poisoned by the blood of the latter, and one of the former loses her virginity in the nick of time to house helper Mario (Joe Dallesandro). What happens to the fourth girl is the film's "surprise" ending.

Acting, which was once the most important asset of the Warhol

Morrissey films, has become painfully normal. Nothing in this film, with the exception of Kier's contorted and hilarious performance as Dracula, can match the days when unique crazies would crawl out of New York City gutters and plead to star in an "Andy Warhol" film.

Now the actors learn from scripts, rather than improvise. Any charm or peculiarities derived from the performances in these European horror films result from foreign tongues. Even Joe Dallesandro's superstud bit, has grown tired after eight pictures.

Even sex of all kinds and nudity, which once added a significant amount of kinkiness to Morrissey's films, has been reduced to an exposed breast here and there, and sex which is so fake it doesn't even look simulated. "Dracula" doesn't even live up to its X-rating.

But for the time being, I suppose a bad Paul Morrissey is better than no Paul Morrissey. "Andy Warhol's Dracula" remains an interesting film with a definite style, even though to continue in this direction will move him no further, artistically.

"Andy Warhol's Dracula" is now playing at the Saluki Cinema.

Americans are 'shock proof' criticizes visiting professor

By Stewart Cohen
Student Writer

"I should worry, or I just can't be bothered" are phrases heard often in our lifetime, but few people really understand what the phrases mean. Paul Schlipp, visiting professor of philosophy at SIU, said in an interview recently, "There is a terrible danger where people have become insensitive to what's going on and aren't willing to face up to realities."

Schlipp was recently selected by the Phi Beta Kappa Association of Chicago chapters to receive the Distinguished Service Medal for 1974. The award honors an outstanding individual for distinguished service to his fellow man.

He is best known internationally for his series in contemporary philosophy, "The Library of Living Philosophers."

Schlipp warned that an insensitive society would be in a dangerous position in a time of major human crisis. "Americans have become so shock proof that nothing troubles us anymore."

The 20th century should be called a century of present shocks. "Beginning as early as 1914, World War I came as a shock to the whole world. Never before had there been a world war," Schlipp said.

"The shock of the Great Depression followed the War. "We never really got out of the Depression, except for the recourse to another war," Schlipp added that it was only when we started to prepare seriously for World War II, as a result of the Hitler threat, that we began to get out of the Great Depression. The shock of the Depression was so intense, that the country hasn't had anything like it since, he said.

Not long after World War II, people were again shocked. This time the shock was Korea, but as Schlipp explained, involvement in Korea might not have happened if it hadn't been for the cold war and McCarthy. "We were starting to plant American bases around the world. Our military expansion also meant that if any communists showed a force of arms in other countries, we had to come to such countries' defense.

"Americans were accused of having the slogan, 'Is this a private fight or may anybody butt in?'" Americans had been in two world wars. In both times, he said, we went halfway around the world to find someone to fight. We also went halfway around the world to fight in Korea and later in Vietnam. "Anytime a war broke out, the Americans had to be in it," he said.

"Americans didn't start to become shock proof until after World War II. We were first sold a bill of goods on the cold war," Schlipp said the U.S. was constantly warned how far behind the Russians it was in space technology and military arms.

The McCarthy period, Schlipp said, warned Americans about the threat of communist infiltrators in the White House and in the Congress. "McCarthy was a prophet of doom who created the phantoms of the imagination," Schlipp added that the American people woke up to the fact that they had been taken this way. He said they began to take other shocks less and less seriously. "We were fooled a few times, we aren't going to continue to be taken in," he said.

According to Schlipp, one of the worst proofs of the shock proof condition occurred after survey polls showed that the great majority of Americans believed Nixon was involved in the Watergate affair. Many people still didn't want him impeached. Schlipp said their respect for the office of President was greater than any regard for morality.

"I can understand President Ford pardoning Nixon from the standpoint of mercy. I can't understand it from the standpoint of what the American people had a right to know," Schlipp insisted.

"It seems to me that Ford and everybody else owed it to the entire nation to let all the facts finally come out. With the pardon granted, I question if all the facts ever will come out," Schlipp said.

"I think the last six months have seen a reawakening of America," Schlipp said. "But, however interested Americans had been in the Watergate affair, Schlipp said that only 38 percent of the people eligible to vote in the November elections, voted in this country.

"Two years ago, in the latest national election in West Germany, 91 percent of the people eligible voted," Schlipp said. Yet Americans are the ones who brag about being the democracy. "We say that Germans don't even know what democracy is. To what extent have we reawakened?" he said.

In another sense, it's probably true that no nation at anytime ever is sufficiently awake. He said living life as you have always lived it is a very natural human tendency. You don't like to be disturbed, shocked, or bothered.

"I remember when the Atomic Age broke, people began to realize that the whole human race could be annihilated in an instant," he said.

That led to a considerable awakening, but he added, when the country wasn't destroyed, the tendency was to settle down.

"How long will the people of America be awake, your guess is as good as mine."

TV network gets funds for program

The Southern Illinois instructional television network has received a $650 donation for purchase of broadcast rights to a new elementary school program about physical science.

The donation came from Thomas and Hugh McHugh who promised to donate a share of one week's sales of french fries in their McDonald's franchises in Mt. Vernon and Centralia, to the SIITA.

sibility of the committee would include making a recommendation to the Council on whether or not to require local origination of programming by the city's only franchised operation, Carbondale Cablevision. The FCC recently dropped its requirements on local origination.

Also to be considered at the Monday night meeting is the selling of a half acre lot at the corner of south Mills and west Rawlings to the SIU Credit Union.

City Council to consider raising ordinance fines

The Carbondale City Council will consider raising the maximum fines for violation of any city ordinance from $500 to $1,000 at its Monday meeting.

City Attorney John Womick said the proposed ordinance is designed to increase city revenue and to provide more punishment when the situation warrants.

The council will also consider a proposal to establish a cable television committee. City Manager Carroll J. Fry said the respon-

Friend of lovers

LONDON (AP) Dennis Flanders is 45 and a member of the Camelford, Cornwall, Council, but he remembers his early days.

He wants a special board put up in a local park so that young lovers can carve messages on it.

He put the idea forward when the Camelford Council was considering putting wire mesh over a park shelter to protect it from carvers.

"We were all young once and we probably all did a bit of carving of our initials," Flanders said. "We should not go out of our way to stop something which is virtually a tradition."

Bifocal or single vision contact lenses can be fitted now with the aid of a computer. Bifocal lens has no segment or line to distort the vision and looks like a single vision lens.

With the use of a PhotoElectric Keratometer called PEK Mark III a photograph of the eye is made. The photo, along with the prescription is sent to the Visual Data Center in Chicago where they are put into a computer. The computer calculates the structure, size, tear layer and the RX required.

The advantage of the lens is usually more comfort and longer initial wearing time.

Health Service reports flu epidemic starting

By Ken Temkin and Mary Gardner
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

The seasonal flu epidemic siege of the SIU Health Service is only just beginning, Dr. Donald Knapp, Health Service medical director believes.

Students started "coming into the Health Service with flu symptoms this past week," and Knapp suggested that the annual migration might last another two months.

Although it is too early for figures, the flu epidemic has not beset the SIU campus to as great an extent as it has in past years.

Knapp estimated that the current epidemic will last another three weeks, followed by a two week quiet spell which will be disturbed by another epidemic lasting up to another month.

Knapp explained that there "is usually an increase in infectious diseases after a break period" because of the imposed congregation of so many people with so many newly acquired diseases.

He said that flu, or influenza, is a virus and, that since there is "no effective medication against viral diseases, the Health Service can only give symptomatic treatment.

Knapp said that any person with a fever of more than 101 degrees would be a very likely candidate for the flu.

If students have non-emergency complaints, Knapp also recommended they stay away from the health service.

"If I had a wart, I would wait until a later date, when I wouldn't be exposed to the flu in the Health Service waiting room."

He recommended plenty of rest, fluids, and aspirin to anyone who thinks they might have the flu.

Countywide, the Jackson County Public Health Department reported "a 10 to 12 per cent absence rate at most Jackson County public schools which is about normal for this time of year."

John Amadio, administrator for the Jackson County Public Health Department, said Thursday that "although it is not really over with yet, the flu epidemic is past its most besetting period."

Amadio, like Knapp, recommended rest and fluids, but was reluctant to prescribe aspirin. "Many doctors are getting away from the prescription of aspirin, so the best thing to do would be to see your doctor."

Deadline for appeals nears for campus parking tickets

Persons wishing to appeal campus parking tickets dating back as far as last spring, must do so by Jan. 31, Maxine Bryant, SIU parking ticket appeals officer, said Friday.

Beginning Feb. 1, only current tickets will be considered for appeal. All appeals must then be made within two weeks of the date the tickets were given.

Bryant estimated that between Nov. 18, when she began hearing appeals, and Dec. 31, more than 428 tickets were appealed. "A little under half of them successfully," she added.

Although an "occasional ticket has been written up and then not signed, most of the appeals are made on tickets that are legal," she said.

"I try to look at each ticket individually, though, and the circumstances involved—whether there is any hardship to the student, whether the violation was bothersome to anyone else and how well the student complied with the rules," she said.

All students receive a copy of the campus parking regulations when they buy a parking decal. "but most students who receive the tickets haven't ever read them," according to Bryant.

Any student wishing to appeal a parking ticket, must first complete a form from the Parking Division, and write on it the reason for the appeal.

Gas useless?

CHICAGO (AP)—If waiting in line for gasoline makes you lose your sense of humor, try to remember that the precious fuel was once considered useless.

In fact, until the automobile came along kerosene was the major product of oil refineries, according to World Book Encyclopedia. Because it burned slowly, it was used to light lamps, heat homes and cook food. Gasoline, too, was a refinery by-product. Because it exploded when ignited, it was often dumped into rivers and creeks for disposal.

Health Council slates elections for Monday

Elections for the Greater Egypt Health Council will be held Jan. 27 at the Franklin County Court House in Benton at 7:30 p.m., Patrick Gannon, assistant planner, announced. The elections will be for voting members of the council. Anyone attending the meeting may place his name in nomination for election, said Gannon.

The general membership of the council is open to persons from Franklin, Jackson, Jefferson, Perry and Williams counties.

For more information, phone Gannon at 549-3306.

Uninformed house plant horticulturists can harm plants with too much fertilizer

Keeping potted house plants healthy and vigorous during the winter is a challenge to many persons, especially if they aren't knowledgeable about their plants.

SIU will offer children art and dance classes

SIU has an alternative to Saturday morning cartoon shows. Starting Feb. 1, SIU will offer three Saturday morning art classes for 8 to 13-year-olds and a Saturday morning dance class for 5 to 10-year-olds.

The art classes include a ceramics class, a course in weaving and a class covering drawing, painting and printmaking.

The dance class, called "Discovering Creative Movement," is designed to introduce children to the joys of dance movement for its own sake, rather than for performance value. The art classes are scheduled to run from 9 a.m. to noon for six Saturdays.

The dance class will meet from 10 to 11 a.m. for 10 Saturdays. Arrangements for registering by phone may be made by calling the SIU-C Division of Continuing Education at 453-2201.

Enrollment and supply charges for the art classes total $17 and the enrollment charge for the dance class is $5.

Just because information suggests occasionally adding a small amount of soluble fertilizer to water for the plants, it doesn't mean a double dose will be better, Coorts said.

The minerals that are in the fertilizer are needed by the plants for normal growth, he said.

But when the concentrations get too high, the plant roots are injured and the plant can't absorb enough water for normal growth, Coorts said.

Symptoms of too much fertilizer in the soil may be plant wilting, stunting, leaf yellowing, or burning, poor seed germination or poor root development.

In addition an accumulation of white substances on the soil surface and around the rim of the pot usually indicates an excess of fertilizer, though a soil test may be necessary to verify this, he said.

To get rid of the excess fertilizer, Coorts said to heavily water the plant, and allow the water to drain out of the hole-in the bottom of the pot.

This heavy watering leaches the fertilizer downward below the plant roots, Coorts said.

The excess water that drains through the soil should be collected in a pan or saucer, and then discarded, Coorts said this water should not be reused.

This process will get rid of some of the fertilizer that accumulates in the soil and will keep the plants looking healthier and growing better, Coorts said.

Students' International Meditation Society Presents a free Introductory Lecture on

Transcendental Meditation
Transcendental Meditation is a simple mental technique which provides profound rest and relaxation and allows the system to rid itself of deeply-rooted stress, tension, and fatigue which otherwise accumulate and obstruct the effective functioning of mind and body. After meditation, the individual re-enters activity, refreshed, relaxed and revitalized.

The lecture will be given by a special guest speaker at 8:00 p.m. Tuesday, January 28 at Morris Library Auditorium.

FREE and Open to the Public!

WSIU-FM-TV

Programs scheduled on WSIU-TV channel 8 are:

Saturday
8:00 a.m.—Sesame Street (c); 9:00 a.m.—Big Blue Marble (c); 9:30 a.m.—Zec Cooking School (c); 10 a.m.—Wildlife Theater (c); 10:30 a.m.—Zoom (c); 11:00 a.m.—Misterogers' Neighborhood (c); 11:30—Villa Allegre (c).

Sunday
4:30 p.m.—Outdoors with Art Reid (c)—Steve Frick is the host at the Crab Orchard Wildlife Center.
5:00 p.m.—The Big Blue Marble (c) The program is designed to heighten the awareness of the young about different cultures. The Big Blue Marble represents the earth and colorfully presents the lifestyle of children from other lands.
5:30 p.m.—Woman (c) "Wives of Alcoholics" Two women married to abstaining alcoholics tell how they came to recognize and deal with their husbands' drinking problems. Program originally broadcast January 21.
6:00 p.m.—Romagnolis' Table (c)—"Sicilian Treats". The Romagnolis turn their attention to Sicily tonight and cook "zuppa di pesche siciliana" (Sicilian fish soup) and "cannoli" (sweet ricotta pastries). Franco and Margaret demonstrate how to prepare different kinds of fish for the "zuppa di pesche"—an Italian version of bouillabaisse, served with slices of toasted Italian bread.
6:30 p.m.—Nova (c) "First Signs of Washoe" Washoe is a chimp who talks—with her hands. Her teachers taught her American Sign language, the language of the deaf.
7:30 p.m.—Masterpiece Theater "Upstairs, Downstairs" (c)—"A Sudden Storm" It is June, 1914 and Edward and Daisy are falling in love. Mrs. Bridges is being courted by a local tradesman, and Georgina finds a handsome young man. However, the British have been asked to join the war against the Germans and Richard Bellamy dreads what the future will bring to Eaton Place.
8:30 p.m.—Firing Line (c) William F. Buckley, Jr., mixes aphorism, cynicism, chauvinism and a dash of "show-biz" as he encourages his guests to express their opinions in an hour of candid and revealing comment.
9:30 p.m.—Behind the Lines (c) Journalist-historian Harrison Salisbury hosts this media review, designed to analyze and evaluate the process of news reporting.
10:00 p.m.—Comedy Classics "The Last Gentleman" (1934). Rare comedy for George Arliss, who usually played historical characters such as Disraeli or Voltaire. Fine support from Edna Oliver, Ralph Morgan and Donald Meek.

Monday
3:30 p.m.—Wildlife Theater (c); 4:00 p.m.—Sesame Street (c); 5:00 p.m.—The Evening Report (c); 5:30 p.m.—Misterogers' Neighborhood (c); 6:00 p.m.—Zoom (c).
6:00 p.m.—Washington Straight Talk (c) A topical program focusing on both national and international events. A national figure is matched with a veteran Washington Correspondent for an in-depth look at a single issue.
7:00 p.m.—Special of the Week (c) "World Hunger: Who Will Survive?" Bill Moyers hosts this 90-minute special on the world hunger crisis. Filmed in India, Niger, Colombia, Mexico and the World Food Conference in Rome, the program questions whether nations are equipped to deal with the problem of rocketing population combined with static and even faltering world food production.
8:30 p.m.—The Romantic Rebellion (c) "Piranesi and Fuselli" Kenneth Clark explores the frightening visions of the 18th century Italian artist Piranesi, whose art spoke directly to the Romantic Movement and still speaks directly to contemporary society. Lord Clark also presents Fuselli, whose fashionable paintings of the bizarre fulfilled an undiscovered need of the late 18th century.
9:00 p.m.—Inquiry (c) "Is Gold a Good Hedge Against Inflation?" The host is Charles T. Lynch who stimulates the discussion among leading area economists. Questions are solicited from the studio and television audience.
10:00 p.m.—Sherlock Holmes Theater "The Spider Woman" (1944). Gale Sondergard is that woman and Sherlock Holmes is after her for her numerous hideous crimes. Holmes uses his ability as a master of disguise. Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce star.

Student recalls Greece's return to democracy

By Jeff Blume
Student Writer

Seven years of frustration came out in one night, on July 24 when democracy returned to Greece, according to Constantine (Dino) Karahalios, a Greek-American student in Greece at the time.

However, for Karahalios becoming really caught up in the enthusiasm of the Greek people was difficult with the distractions of Nixon's resignation and his purpose having a good time. Karahalios, 22, an SIU journalism major, spent last summer in Greece, traveling in June and July, and going to school in August.

He said he was in Tripoli on Wednesday, July 24, when Col. Demetrios Ioannides, head of the Secret Service and string puller of the puppet government, returned power to civilian authorities. Exiled ex-Premier Constantine X Caramanlis was asked to take over leadership until elections could be held.

It marked the end of the seven-year-old military regime in Greece. The regime had been characterized by extreme repression and many reports of the torturing of dissidents. Karahalios said critics were tortured not to obtain retractions, but to make examples of them. "They just did it to show their power," Karahalios said.

Rumors of unrest in the government had circulated since the embarrassment and international criticism Greece received for engineering the coup on Cyprus that ousted Archbishop Makarios. Karahalios said. The coup resulted in the Turkish invasion of Cyprus on July 20 and almost caused a war between Greece and Turkey.

On the day of the invasion, Karahalios said he went to the Greek Air Force Base at Tripoli to get more news. An English-speaking officer told him that the Third Army, the only Greek army at combat strength, had occupied Thessalonika, the chief northern city.

Nursing workshop scheduled

New ways to diagnose, treat, and predict emotional illnesses will be discussed at a nursing workshop, Friday, at the Student Center. Professional consultants will tell workshopers about safeguarding patient rights and how to relate therapeutic approaches to patients' emotional needs. Small group sessions will provide opportunities for practical experience with equipment such as an electrosleep machine.

Consultants are Dr. Marshall F. Giulla, consulting psychiatrist from Coconut Grove, Fla.; Tom Kennedy, Land of Lincoln Legal Assistance Foundation, Carbondale, and Pat Craig, Ella Brown and Alice Will, registered nurses from the Marion Veterans Administration Hospital. Participants will receive continuing education credit. Registration fee is $4. To register, interested persons should contact Andrew Marcec, director of the Southern Illinois Health Manpower Consortium at the Division of Continuing Education, Woody Hall C-200.

Rehab group to confer on job placement guide

The SIU-C Rehabilitation Institute will sponsor a working conference Monday through Wednesday at the Ramada Inn to put together a manual for counselors who work with job placement for blind persons.

The conference is part of an in-depth study of the employment possibilities for blind persons, funded by an $18,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare Social and Rehabilitation Service. It will review papers dealing with placement of blind persons as information service workers.

Contributed by 30 experts across the country, the papers will be published as a manual which will be titled: "Guidelines for the Selection, Training and Placement of Blind Persons as Information Service Expeditors."

Thomas W. Dickey, assistant professor in the Rehabilitation Institute and one of the conference coordinators, said the 30 conference participants will be divided into five "task forces" which will review the contributed papers and begin combining them into the proposed manual.

Dickey said about 275 blind persons are presently employed as information service expeditors in government agencies and large private organizations across the country.

Guy A. Renzaglia, Rehabilitation Institute director, will introduce SIU-C President Warren W. Brandt, who will welcome the conference participants Monday morning.

Director of the project studying information service expediting is Louis Viececi, assistant professor in the Rehabilitation Institute.

The Third Army was supposedly on alert against a possible Turkish invasion, but its commander, Col. Andreas Galatsanos ordered it into Thessalonika and informed the military leaders in Athens that if the civilian government was not restored, the Third Army would move on Athens.

The Greeks expected civil war. Many radicals wanted it rather than war against Turkey, Karahalios said.

"People only talked in whispers in English on Tuesday."

Then Wednesday he heard reports that Caramanlis had been on the radio, but the first official news that he heard was at 4:30 p.m. when Vradyni (the Athens Evening News) hit the streets of Tripoli. Vradyni had been shut down for several months for criticizing the government.

"To the Greeks," Karahalios said, "The Athens Evening News coming out symbolized that freedom of speech was back."

For the first time in seven years, Greeks could openly criticize government, and to celebrate, Karahalios said, "Everybody would go around arguing."

Large crowds were in the streets, but according to Karahalios that in itself was not unusual because night life in Greece is centered around the numerous outside cafes. The big difference in the Greeks was in what was said. They criticize the old government and argued about who should be in the new one. Before, they were afraid to talk like that. "They had a good time doing it," he said.

However, not all criticism was reserved for the Greek government, Karahalios said. They were also very outspoken against the U.S. and particularly Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Karahalios said that for years the Greeks had felt like pawns of the U.S. They considered the U.S. imperialistic and accused it of supporting the military regime.

They were angry at Kissinger because he had suggested splitting Cyprus into Greek and Turkish sectors to end the crisis. The military regime wanted (first) enosis (the union of Cyprus with Greece) and the Greek populus wanted the return of Archbishop Makarios and the status quo before the coup on Cyprus, he said.

Karahalios and his friends were frequently called "American Pigs," he said. When he spoke to Greek, they told him that they didn't hate him and his friends as individuals. The Greeks hated what the Americans stood for, which Karahalios said was "hard for us because we hated what we stood for too."

He said that Europeans in general seemed to have a low opinion of Americans. He said that the small European countries feel they were being manipulated by the U.S. and Russia. They feared Russia and resented the U.S.

As an example Karahalios told of a German he had met in Greece who had asked him, "Why doesn't America give West Germany its independence?"

"It seems," Karahalios said, "if you're an American in Europe you're at the bottom of the barrel."

Chet the Jet records 1,000th game

CHICAGO (AP)—"I feel real good about it, because it shows I worked hard and earned my pay."

That's still slick Chet Walker of the Chicago Bulls talking about the rare National Basketball Association feat of playing his 1000th game here Saturday night against the Detroit Pistons.

Only seven other players have played 1,000 or more games in the NBA's 29-year history.

Although Walker, 34, has been talking retirement for the past several seasons, he never has been sharper than in the current campaign, carrying a 20.6-point average into a killing weekend of three straight Bull games starting Friday night against the Seattle Super-sonics.

In the 13th season of an NBA career started when the former Bradley University star signed a $12,000 contract with Syracuse, Walker is earning an estimated $200,000 for what he insists will be his final playing season.

He says he was lured into playing this season by the Bulls' acquisition of Nate Thurmond from the Golden State Warriors.

"The Bull people have really worked hard trying to put a championship team into Chicago," said Walker who played on Philadelphia 1966-67 NBA title club.

"They got Thurmond and they convinced me we could go all the way."

Walker, who has missed only 21 games because of illness or injury, has scored more than 18,000 points and should end up with a career average of more than 18 points per game.

"I doubt very much whether I'll play after this season," said Walker whose easy moves and shots from across the middle he says he copied from Elgin Baylor.

"I'm waiting for the year to end to make an announcement. At this time, it doesn't look like I'll come

Horse monopolies

LONDON (AP)—More than 100 of the horses now racing in Britain are owned by syndicates. An example is Today, which won a purse of 500 pounds ($1,200) at Epsom in April. The horse is owned by 12 employes of the British Broadcasting Corp. who each paid 100 pounds ($240) for a share in the horse six months ago. Each pays another 10 pounds ($24) a month for feeding and training costs.

back. When I quit, I just want to take a year off and decide in my mind what I want to do with the rest of my life."

The list of players with 1,000 or more games includes Hal Greer 1,122, Dolph Schayes 1,059, Johnny Green 1,057, Wilt Chamberlain 1,045, Walt Bellamy 1,040, Oscar Robertson 1,012, and Lenny Wilkens, the only other still active player.

"I really had no idea about the 1,000 games," said Walker. I'm not that aware of records and statistics. I've put in a lot of hours, though, and worked hard. I'm fortunate I haven't been hurt seriously."

When Walker earlier this season scored his 18,000th point, he moved into a select circle also including Chamberlain, Robertson, Baylor, Greer, Schayes, Bellamy, Jerry West, Bob Pettit and still-active John Havlicek of Boston.

Halftime ceremonies Saturday night will bring Walker a scroll from Mayor Richard Daley, a plaque commemorating the occasion, and a scrapbook containing letters from President Gerald Ford, NBA commissioner Walt Kennedy and others who coached or played during his years.

Spikers journeying to St. Louis tourney

The SIU Volleyball Club will travel to St. Louis Saturday to participate in an invitational volleyball tournament.

The tournament, sponsored by the St. Louis Volleyball Association, will include 15 other teams. Player-coach Gene Korienek said. Some of the teams will come from as far away as Dallas, Tex., and Battle Creek, Mich., for the tournament.

The round robin tournament will be played in the St. Louis Armory, beginning at 9 a.m.

The tournament will be the first competition of the new year for the SIU spikers. The SIU squad's last competition was in the Michigan State Invitational Volleyball Tournament in East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 14.

The volleyball Salukis finished the day of tournament play with a 5-6 record and a third place finish in their division.

Soccer next

A meeting for team managers for the men's intramural indoor mini-soccer tournament will be held in Room 121 of the Arena Saturday, Feb. 1, at 10 a.m.

All team rosters must be submitted at the manager's meeting for a team to be officially entered. Blank rosters are available in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals, Room 128, The Arena.

For additional information, contact the office at 536-5521.

Beg your pardon

The Rehabilitation and Social Runs, hosted by the Southern Illinois Road Runners, will be run Sunday at 2 p.m. at the SIU Arena.

Yesterday's paper showed the run scheduled for Saturday. We apologize for our error.

Practices set

Basketball practice for the SIU Squids wheelchair team is held four nights a week on campus.

Workouts are conducted from 4 to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at Pulliam Gym, and from 7 to 10 p.m. Sunday at the Arena.

Wheelchair track begins later this semester.

For further information, stop at practice or call Ray Clark at 463-5782. Wheelchair sports are open for both men and women.

Salukis set to 'prey' on Oral Roberts

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Perhaps the old cliché, "a Titan defensive struggle," would be appropriate.

Probably not. While the Titans of Oral Roberts are guarding their men better than their points-per-game average this year, the Tulsa, Okla.-based team remains offensive-minded.

In the past, that has spelled B-A-D-N-E-W-S for the Salukis in the Sooner state, but it's a whole new ballgame this year against first-year Titan coach Jerry Hale.

"We like to think we do the job defensively," he remarked in a telephone interview Friday. "We're probably not the run-and-gun team we used to be, but we move up and down the floor pretty good."

The Titans have dropped their scoring average about 10 points to the mid-80s, but their defensive average has also dipped to the mid-70s. The result is a 12-3 record, pending Friday night's home encounter with McNeese State.

"They have about the same kind of team as last year," Saluki coach Paul Lambert observed, recalling a 102-88 defeat last February. "A lot of the kids played a lot last year with all those big Roberts will stick with its usual lineup and predominantly man-to-man defense, while the Salukis will do likewise, with Shag Nixon sitting out the opening minutes of the contest.

"When you have things going pretty well, you don't like to change," Lambert explained. "Shag can look things over for the first few minutes and get the feel of the game."

The Salukis, then, will start senior Perry Hines and sophomore Mike Glenn at the guards positions. Senior Tim Ricci and sophomore Corky Abrams will man the forward posts, and senior Joe C. Meriweather will open at center.

The Titans will counter with 6-foot-8 junior Willis Collins at center. However, 6-foot-9 Harold Johnson will alternate covering Meriweather and Abrams with Collins. Anthony Roberts, a 6-foot-4 senior, will cover Ricci, and 6-foot-3 sophomore Arnold Dugger and 6-foot-4 senior Vincent Banks will guard Hines and Glenn, respectively.

"We change off our man-to-man occasionally," Hale explained. "We go to a 2-1-2 or 1-2-2, but it won't be because of Meriweather. There's a lot of problems on Southern besides Meriweather."

The 6-foot-11 center has moved into second place, however, in national shooting statistics. Meriweather is Fox left the lineup with a torn ligament in his finger. He'll be out about 10 more days.

Lambert is concerned primarily with the Titans' outside shooting and offensive rebounding.

"One of the things that hurt us most last year was the offensive boards," he said. "They really do a good job. They have great outside shooting in Roberts and Dugger, too."

"The importance of this game," he surmised, "is that it's another ballgame against another good team on the road."

We've really come around on the road doing the little things that win ballgames.

"It will sure be nice to get back home after eight weeks on the road," he concluded.

The Salukis return home for a Wednesday night battle with Illinois State, the first in a six-game homestand. Game time is 7:35 p.m.

For the remainder of the season, students can purchase tickets two days in advance of a game. Tickets are 50 cents without a season pass.

Joe C. Meriweather (left) and Mike Glenn (right) rank second and seventh nationally in shooting percentage, according to the latest figures released Friday.

leads they used to build up. They seem to be running a few more offensive patterns than last year, but they still run as much as they can."

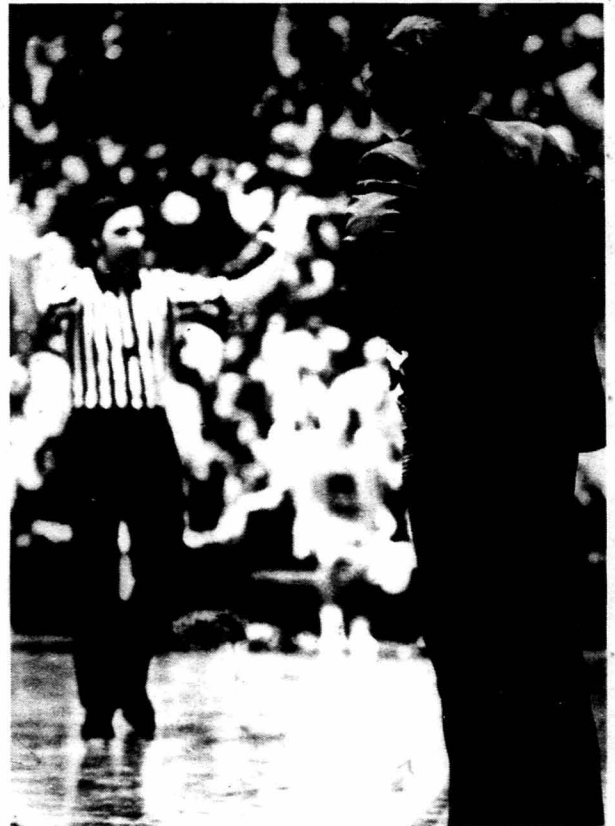

Both coaches plan to stick to their guns, using the same lineups and alignments as they have been. Oral shooting at a .649 clip, while Glenn is seventh at .617.

As a team, SIU ranks sixth in the country with a .517 accuracy rate.

Roberts and Dugger are the offensive keys for Oral Roberts, although four men are averaging in double figures. Roberts' 22-point average includes a 48-point outing against Illinois State. Dugger is contributing 18 per game, with Johnson and Collins adding about 11 a piece.

"We think we have a good all around ballclub," Hale said. "We've had to use a couple of different lineups since Duane

Hit the road

It's time for the Salukis to hit the road once again Monday, although, in this picture, Coach Paul Lambert apparently has other ideas about who should hit the road. Lambert's charges face Oral Roberts at 7:30 p.m. (Staff photo by Bob Ringham)

Wrestler not calorie conscious

Food no problem for 'light-heavy'

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

It must be nice knowing a fella can eat all he wants and not have to worry about being overweight.

This is not the thought that most calorie-conscious wrestlers can gloat over, but for freshman Tim Swoboda, cream pies and milk shakes are not just delicacies that are dreamt of.

"Because I don't have to make a certain weight, I can usually eat whatever I want, especially protein and things like that," Swoboda said with a hungry look.

Swoboda actually weighs in at about 184 and should wrestle in the 190-pound class. However, up to this point in the season, he has been shifting back and forth between the two classes.

There is a difference between competing in the one and the other. Swoboda explains, "The first two periods are the toughest for me, because the bigger guys will try to use their weight and muscle me. So the last period is best for me if the other guy tires out some."

When David slew Goliath, he didn't go after him like he was his equal. Swoboda must do the same thing and work out a strategy.

"I have to be more cautious when I go against the big guys," he related. "I can't expose myself to them."

There's not much in the way of physical work or different drills to do when preparing for a heavyweight match, but mental preparation is different.

"The week before a match I'm always thinking of ways to improve my style against heavier competition," Swoboda said. "Mainly I have to remember to use quickness instead of weight, which I don't have."

Although Swoboda has had some degree of success this season tussling with the "heavies," Saturday he will drop down to the 190 class and put his 4-7 record up for show.

Another freshman, Ken Karwowski will take over the heavyweight spot.

Karwowski has had limited success this year with one pin to his credit and two pins against him. He carries a 1-3-0 mark into the contest against Indiana University.

The rest of the lineup for the 7:30 p.m. encounter shapes up this way:

In the 118 class, junior Joe Goldsmith puts his 9-3-0 record, second best on the team, on the line.

Libertyville freshman Dale Eggert holds down the 126 spot. Still another first year man, Dennis Lewis, will be out to beat his opponent in the 134 category.

Clyde Ruffin, with a 12-4-1 mark will be at 142, and Fred Hoef and Jim Horvath will wrestle in the 150 and 158 classes, respectively.

The 167-pound class still is not settled. Either Jay Friedrich or Tim Maday will handle that spot.

The best record on the team belongs to Mark Wiesen, 13-4-0. Wiesen will wrestle at 177.

Tim Swoboda
